Lenox, July 26—The Berkshire Festival really got under way last week with concerts starting in the big Shed. These first week-end concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra served to introduce regular conducter Dr. Charles Munch and the ever popular guest conductor Pierre Monteux.

The week-end concerts devoted to the music of Bach and Mozart, and the weekly chamber music concerts, bring to Tanglewood a distinguished audience of musicians However, it is those concerts in the Shed which draw to Tanglewood people from far and near. Indeed, the parking space here would be a mecca for collectors of license plates were they not well guarded, for there are plates from every state in the union and many from Canadian provinces.

Brahms and Copland

Johannes Brahms and Aaron Copland were the composers represented on the first Friday night program. Dr. Munch conducted a finely proportioned, rich-voiced performance of the "Serenade No. 1 in D major, Op. 11" by Brahms. The texture was opalescent and the phrasing rich in musicality. Brahms was also served well as Dr. Munch conducted his fourth symphony. This is a spacious work, capable of many interpretations, but Dr. Munch was wise in letting the music speak for itself. It was a less hurried performance than some which Dr. Munch has given us this season.

Aaron Copland wrote his "Variations for Orchestra" on commission from the Louisville Symphony Orchestra. He took his piano variations and orchestrated them. This is a massive piece of music without a moment of letup in its volume. It must be a percussionist's delight. The opening theme is enunciated in heroic style and is plainly heard throughout the piece. It is the sort of piece that the Boston Symphony men play magnificently.

Koussevitzky Memorial

Each year the orchestra plays a concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, its long-time conductor and founder of the Berkshire Festival. This year, the work chosen was the "German" Requiem by Brahms. It was an entirely appropriate work, and, as performed, a worthy memorial. The soloists were Hilda Gueden, making her first festival appearance, and Donald Gramm, bass. The Festival Chorus had been prepared by Hugh Ross.

The choruses are the glory of this work and the Festival Chorus sang them with enthusiasm and plentitude of tone. There have been better choruses in the past, but Mr. Ross can work miracles with any material. Miss Gueden sang beautifully and Mr. Gramm displayed his fine musicianship and knowledge of style, even though the music alloted him was not wholly congenial to his voice. More than 8000 people were on hand.

Last Sunday, Pierre Monteux took on his first conducting assignment. He is a prime favorite with the orchestra and audience and the reasons for this popularity are clear. At the age of 83, he conducts with the enthusiasm of a man much younger. The years have deepened his knowledge of his scores. One listended to a vigorous highly styled performance of the "Academic Festival Overture" by Brahms, one rich in detail and contrasts.

Fleisher's Debut

Leon Fleisher, one of the best of the young American pianists, made his first appearance at this festival playing Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 1 in D minor. He had played the work with Mr. Monteux before and a beautiful collaboration was the result. Fleisher has ample technique and a piano tone which never fails to sing. His playing has been more immaculate in the past, particularly in rapid passages, but the performance, on the whole, was one of understanding and brilliance.

The final work was one which Mr. Monteux has been associated with for many years. Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" received its debut performance in Paris in 1911 under his baton. We seldom hear the entire work in concert presentation, but Mr. Monteux chose to give it in its entirety. It was a wonderful vital and detailed performance, one which might well be called difinitive. Mr. Monteux conducts easily these days, but the climaxes are always there and one hears the orchestra at its best.

The New York Pro Musica

There was a distinguished audience on hand last Wednesday night to hear the New York Pro Musica musicians perform a program of the music of Flanders and Spain. Under the direction of Noah Greenberg one listened to performances which rang with authority. The 10 performers are both singers and instrumentalists, doubling in such instruments as recorders, treble viol, Portative organ and harpsicord. There was some fine singing, particularly by counter-tenor Russe Oberin, a true artist.

The Student Orchestra

Eleazar de Carvalho, the Brazilian coductor in charge of the student orchestra, has fine material this season. There are also some very clever student conductors as was revealed Tuesday night. Monsik Lim from Seoul, Korea, led the orchestra through a stimulating performance of Von Weber's overture to "Der Freischutz." Zubin Kehta provided excellent collaboration with Olga Kwasniak from Toronto, Can. during her performance of the Concerto in D minor for Violincello and Orchestra by Lalo. Miss Kwasniak revealed a large tone and ample technique.

A movement from Bruckner's Symphony No. 9 in D minor was conducted by Thomas Griswold of Williamstown. It was evident that Mr. Griswold is a profound student. He knew just what he was doing all the time and was able to communicate his wishes to the players. It would have been interesting to hear him conduct less demanding work at this time.

Music Review

B. Eagle - July 21

Brahms at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

Pierre Monteux

THE LAST two concerts of the weekend at Tanglewood marked the completion of the season's half-way mark. This was the third week of concerts and the first in which the complete Boston Symphony Orchestra took part. The programs were devoted mainly to Brahms, and Charles Munch led the first two, relinquishing the baton yesterday afternoon to his colleague Pierre Monteux.

Forty-seven years ago in Paris it was this same Monteux who conducted the first performance of Stravinsky's ballet burlesque, "Petrouchka." At rehearsals he admitted that even after all these years he could not see why people still laughed at certain grotesque sounds such as an isolated and unadorned snort in its lowest register by the contrabassoon. This was what Monteux played for the final half of his program yesterday, and the triumph he realized must have been heartwarming to the 83-year-old veteran to whom triumphs can hardly be a novelty any more.

* * *

MONTEUX controls his orchesta. It never "breaks." He immediately made it apparent at the outset of the concert when he played the Brahms "Academic Festival Overture." The tempo, the mood, the tone gradations, all were premeditated; but instead of being pedantic, they were natural, which is the secret of Monteux's domination.

"Petrouchka" without visual aids of dancers and scenery may well still be an enigma to many in any audience. It isn't polite nor salon music. It is gross and vulgar by design most of the time. Its humor is the result of original means of tone-producing combinations. Monteux called to the front of the stage to share the applause the pianist Bernard Zighera and the trumpeter (a pistons) Armando Ghitalla.

* * *

THE SOLOIST of the afternoon in the Brahms D minor concerto was the young pianist Leon Fleisher. This was Fleisher's Tanglewood debut. He is one of the six of the most promising young American pianists who are appearing on this season's programs, and he fulfilled much of the extravagant reports which had preceded him.

When a youthful musical prodigy appears on the horizon, the public (read the press) is wont to measure him and allow for his "immaturity." Then as he grows older and more experienced, he is analyzed and at some vague point is allowed to have arrived at musical "maturity," a very definite level where youthful flamboyance is discarded for disciplined insight and sagacity. Fleisher has truly remarkable hands to execute the great demands this Brahms makes on him. Monteux gave him exceptional support and the orchestra here is far from a mere accompaniment. Fleisher rode the waves with exuberance and dynamic vigor and his tone, even in the most turbulent and intricate passages, was always firm and round. His rhythmic sense propelled him with driving force and his sense of inflections was eloquent.

* * *

IT WAS only in his more contemplative moments that we were not satisfied. A searching introspection, and, in the manner of many of the younger school of pianists, a planned avoidance of show made the initial statement in the first movement and the following adagio the work of a scholar and sage, and not one of an artist whose prime object, we would assume, is to project the music to his listeners.

* * *

ON SATURDAY night Munch led the Brahms "Requiem" obviously as a labor of love. We cannot recall a performance at Tanglewood in which Munch seemed to us to have caught the exact spirit of the music more faithfully. It had serenity and sublimity to match the character of Brahms' intentions, and at the same time, to recall the character of the man, Serge Koussevitzky, to whose memory the performance was dedicated.

Koussevitzky came to the Berkshire Festivals in their third year, in 1936, and transformed what was a laudable venture without design into an institution with direction and a goal. As time goes on the stature of the man becomes more apparent, for he was a builder, a man with ideas, and the inner pertinacity and perspicacity to achieve them. The tangible evidence of Tanglewood today is patent, but the Berkshire Music Center, the school which he founded and which runs parallel to the Festivals is the greater monument to his memory. Koussevitzky's record and abilities as a conductor are in the memories of many. But that he was a peerless musical educator at the same time makes him unique. His encouragement of every field of music still goes on in the channels he set up in his lifetime.

* * *

MUNCH PLAYED this touching work with unsurpassed devotion, and he was aided by the orchestra at its most responsive, the Festival chorus trained by Hugh Ross with exceptional attention to details and by two soloists who were entirely of the calibre such music and such an evening required. Munch held command with relaxed grasp, and the performance was sung with transparent conviction.

The "Requiem" might well be called a viola requiem, so much of importance is assigned to that section of the orchestra in the first place and so much of the music is in that register and voice texture. The initial chorus "Blessed are they that mourn" is announced in the violas with a lovely plaintive melody which Munch allowed the Boston viola section to play with long sustained bow strokes which carried with remarkable fidelity.

* * *

THE SOLOISTS were most happy choices. Hilde Gueden, soprano, had but one aria "Ye now are sorrowful"; the baritone, Donald Gramm, had two opportunities — "Lord, make me to know" and "Lo, I unfold unto you a mystery." Miss Gueden tended to scoop at the outset, but once arrived at her habitual security she displayed a purity and ample ease which was extremely pleasing and effective. Gramm infused more warmth and sense of drama into his solos and the power of his voice was projected with ease.

Munch held his hand aloft at the completion of the first half of the "Requiem" to inhibit applause, in view of the reverent nature of the occasion, but, at the final chorus, the audience would not be denied. They broke out into enthusiastic appreciation. Munch bowed with his usual modesty but did not return to acknowledge the continued acclaim the audience was eager to show him.

Springfield Union - July

LEON FLEISHER, MONTEUX DRAW 9154 TO LENOX

Young Pianist, French Conductor Win Plaudits at Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 20—The venerable French conductor Pierre Monteux, pianist Leon Fleisher and the Boston Symphony Orchestra drew 9154 persons to Tanglewood this afternoon. They heard a commanding performance of the "Piano Concerto No. 1 in D Minor" by Brahms, a performance which resulted in a series of recalls and shouts of bravo.

Maturity, Depth

It was good to have Pierre Monteux back again. The orchestra rose when he came on stage and they played their very best for him. His 83 years do not show in his conducting except in the maturity and depth of his interpretations. He conducts easily and with a minimum of gestures, but the results are marvelous.

The program opened with a stunning performance of Brahms' "Academic Festival Overture," that work which Brahms wrote in appreciation of having a doctor of philosophy degree conferred upon him by the University of Breslau. He wove a series of student songs into the overture and ended with a triumphant arrangement of "Gaudeamus Igitur."

Tremendous sonorities rolled through the vast spaces of the shed.

Massive Work

Brahms' First Piano Concerto is a massive work of symphonic proportions, a work which is a challenge to each participant in its performance. Leon Fleisher, one of the best of the younger pianists, and Pierre Monteux have played it together at various times and so today the collaboration was almost flawless. Mr. Fleisher has the technique and strength to meet the exacting passages. However, he never forces his tones and they always seem to have warmth and beauty. It is possible that some of the rapid passages have been played more immaculately by him on other occasions, but the sum total of the performance was one of strength and dignity. The exquisite second movement was beautifully sung and the finale was an exciting listening experience, as was the massive opening movement.

Few conductors understand so well the music of Stravinsky as Pierre Monteux. Indeed, it was he who conducted many of the first performances as he did the ballet "Petrouchka" which we heard this afternoon in its entirety. Today, this music sounds far more reasonable than it must have in 1911. It is descriptive music, profuse with melodies, some sweet, some cacaphonic, but always understandable and in the spirit.

Played Magnificently

This is music made to order for the virtuosi of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and under such leadership they played magnificently. Surely a very special credit should go to Bernard Zighera for his expert pianism.

One hears too seldom the entire ballet and because it is often abridged, one misses some of the most delectable portions, as for example, the third scene, (The Domain of the Moor) and the final tragedy of Petrouchka.

Mr. Monteux provided a crystal clear reading of the work. Every detail was exact and the total picture, although a bit overwhelming in spots, emerged with miraculous clarity.

Perfect Afternoon

This was a perfect afternoon, although on the chilly side. The lawn in front of the shed was crowded with people, more than 3000 of them. No one seemed in a hurry to go home and only a half dozen or so left the shed during the performance.

Opera scenes commence in the theater-concert hall tomorrow night under the direction of Boris Goldovsky. A complete "Don Pasquale" is slated and also excerpts from "Romeo and Juliette." This will mark the first opera department show of the season.

[121]

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 113,886

JUL 27 1958

Second Thoughts On Music

Boston Symphony Performs Major Works by Brahms

Fourth Symphony, First Piano Concerto, 'German' Reguiem Heard in Music Shed at Tanglewood; 'Petrouchka' Presented in Entirety

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 26—The Berkshire Festival really got under way last week with concerts starting in the big Shed. These first weekend concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra served to introduce regular conducter Dr. Charles Munch and the ever popular guest conductor Pierre Monteux.

The week-end concerts devoted to the music of Bach and Mozart, and the weekly chamber music concerts, bring to Tanglewood a distinguished audience of musicians However, it is those concerts in the Shed which draw to Tanglewood people from far and near. Indeed, the parking space here would be a mecca for collectors of license plates were they not well guarded, for there are plates from every state in the union and many from Canadian provinces.

Brahms and Copland

Johannes Brahms and Aaron Copland were the composers represented on the first Friday night program. Dr. Munch conducted a finely proportioned, rich-voiced performance of the "Serenade No. 1 in D major, Op. 11" by Brahms. The texture was opalescent and the phrasing rich in musicality. Brahms was also served well as Dr. Munch conducted his fourth symphony. This is a spacious work, capable of many interpretations, but Dr. Munch was wise in letting the music speak for itself. It was a less hurried performance than some which Dr. Munch has given us this season.

Aaron Copland wrote his "Variations for Orchestra" on commission from the Louisville Symphony Orchestra. He took his piano variations and orchestrated them. This is a massive piece of music without a moment of letup in its volume. It must be a percussionist's delight. The opening theme is enunciated in heroic style and is plainly heard throughout the piece. It is the sort of piece that the Boston Symphony men play magnificently.

Koussevitzky Memorial

Each year the orchestra plays a concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, its long-time conductor and founder of the Berkshire Festival. This year, the work chosen was the "German" Requiem by Brahms. It was an entirely appropriate work, and, as performed, a worthy memorial. The soloists were Hilda Gueden, making her first festival appearance, and Donald Gramm, bass. The Festival Chorus had been prepared by Hugh Ross.

The choruses are the glory of this work and the Festival Chorus sang them with enthusiasm and plentitude of tone. There have been better choruses in the past, but Mr. Ross can work miracles with any material. Miss Gueden sang beautifully and Mr. Gramm displayed his fine musicianship and knowledge of style, even though the music alloted him was not wholly congenial to his voice. More than 8000 people were on hand.

Last Sunday, Pierre Monteux took on his first conducting assignment. He is a prime favorite with the orchestra and audience and the reasons for this popularity are clear. At the age of 83, he conducts with the enthusiasm of a man much younger. The years have deepened his knowledge of his scores. One listended to a vigorous highly styled performance of the "Academic Festival Overture" by Brahms, one rich in detail and contrasts.

Fleisher's Debut

Leon Fleisher, one of the best of the young American pianists, made his first appearance at this festival playing Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 1 in D minor. He had played the work with Mr. Monteux before and a beautiful collaboration was the result. Fleisher has ample technique and a piano tone which never fails to sing. His playing has been more immaculate in the past, particularly in rapid passages, but the performance, on the whole, was one of understanding and brilliance.

The final work was one which Mr. Monteux has been associated with for many years. Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" received its debut performance in Paris in 1911 under his baton. We seldom hear the entire work in concert presentation, but Mr. Monteux chose to give it in its entirety. It was a wonderful vital and detailed performance, one which might well be called difinitive. Mr. Monteux conducts easily these days, but the climaxes are always there and one hears the orchestra at its best.

The New York Pro Musica

There was a distinguished audience on hand last Wednesday night to hear the New York Pro Musica musicians perform a program of the music of Flanders and Spain. Under the direction of Noah Greenberg one listened to performances which rang with authority. The 10 performers are both singers and instrumentalists, doubling in such instruments as recorders, treble viol, Portative organ and harpsicord. There was some fine singing, particularly by counter-tenor Russel Oberin, a true artist.

The Student Orchestra

Eleazar de Carvalho, the Brazilian coductor in charge of the student orchestra, has fine material this season. There are also some very clever student conductors as was revealed Tuesday night. Monsik Lim from Seoul, Korea, led the orchestra through a stimulating performance of Von Weber's overture to "Der Freischutz." Zubin Kehta provided excellent collaboration with Olga Kwasniak from Toronto, Can. during her performance of the Concerto in D minor for Violincello and Orchestra by Lalo. Miss Kwasniak revealed a large tone and ample technique.

A movement from Bruckner's Symphony No. 9 in D minor was conducted by Thomas Griswold of Williamstown. It was evident that Mr. Griswold is a profound student. He knew just what he was doing all the time and was able to communicate his wishes to the players. It would have been interesting to hear him conduct less demanding work at this time.

Music Review

B. Eagle - July 21

Brahms at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE LAST two concerts of the weekend at Tanglewood marked the completion of the season's half-way mark. This was the third week of concerts and the first in which the complete Boston Symphony Orchestra took part. The programs were devoted mainly to Brahms, and Charles Munch led the first two, relinquishing the baton yesterday afternoon to his colleague Pierre Monteux.

Forty-seven years ago in Paris it was this same Monteux who conducted the first performance of Stravinsky's ballet burlesque, "Petrouchka." At rehearsals he admitted that even after all these years he could not see why people still laughed at certain grotesque sounds such as an isolated and unadorned snort in its lowest register by the contrabassoon. This was what Monteux played for the final half of his program yesterday, and the triumph he realized must have been heartwarming to the 83-year-old veteran to whom triumphs can hardly be a novelty any more.

* * *

MONTEUX controls his orchesta. It never "breaks." He immediately made it apparent at the outset of the concert when he played the Brahms "Academic Festival Overture." The tempo, the mood, the tone gradations, all were premeditated; but instead of being pedantic, they were natural, which is the secret of Monteux's domination.

"Petrouchka" without visual aids of dancers and scenery may well still be an enigma to many in any audience. It isn't polite nor salon music. It is gross and vulgar by design most of the time. Its humor is the result of original means of tone-producing combinations. Monteux called to the front of the stage to share the applause the pianist Bernard Zighera and the trumpeter (a pistons) Armando Ghitalla.

* * *

THE SOLOIST of the afternoon in the Brahms D minor concerto was the young pianist Leon Fleisher. This was Fleisher's Tanglewood debut. He is one of the six of the most promising young American pianists who are appearing on this season's programs, and he fulfilled much of the extravagant reports which had preceded him.

When a youthful musical prodigy appears on the horizon, the public (read the press) is wont to measure him and allow for his "immaturity." Then as he grows older and more experienced, he is analyzed and at some vague point is allowed to have arrived at musical "maturity," a very definite level where youthful flamboyance is discarded for disciplined insight and sagacity. Fleisher has truly remarkable hands to execute the great demands this Brahms makes on him. Monteux gave him exceptional support and the orchestra here is far from a mere accompaniment. Fleisher rode the waves with exuberance and dynamic vigor and his tone, even in the most turbulent and intricate passages, was always firm and round. His rhythmic sense propelled him with driving force and his sense of inflections was eloquent.

* * *

IT WAS only in his more contemplative moments that we were not satisfied. A searching introspection, and, in the manner of many of the younger school of pianists, a planned avoidance of show made the initial statement in the first movement and the following adagio the work of a scholar and sage, and not one of an artist whose prime object, we would assume, is to project the music to his listeners.

Pierre Monteux

* * *

ON SATURDAY night Munch led the Brahms "Requiem" obviously as a labor of love. We cannot recall a performance at Tanglewood in which Munch seemed to us to have caught the exact spirit of the music more faithfully. It had serenity and sublimity to match the character of Brahms' intentions, and at the same time, to recall the character of the man, Serge Koussevitzky, to whose memory the performance was dedicated.

Koussevitzky came to the Berkshire Festivals in their third year, in 1936, and transformed what was a laudable venture without design into an institution with direction and a goal. As time goes on the stature of the man becomes more apparent, for he was a builder, a man with ideas, and the inner pertinacity and perspicacity to achieve them. The tangible evidence of Tanglewood today is patent, but the Berkshire Music Center, the school which he founded and which runs parallel to the Festivals is the greater monument to his memory. Koussevitzky's record and abilities as a conductor are in the memories of many. But that he was a peerless musical educator at the same time makes him unique. His encouragement of every field of music still goes on in the channels he set up in his lifetime.

* * *

MUNCH PLAYED this touching work with unsurpassed devotion, and he was aided by the orchestra at its most responsive, the Festival chorus trained by Hugh Ross with exceptional attention to details and by two soloists who were entirely of the calibre such music and such an evening required. Munch held command with relaxed grasp, and the performance was sung with transparent conviction.

The "Requiem" might well be called a viola requiem, so much of importance is assigned to that section of the orchestra in the first place and so much of the music is in that register and voice texture. The initial chorus "Blessed are they that mourn" is announced in the violas with a lovely plaintive melody which Munch allowed the Boston viola section to play with long sustained bow strokes which carried with remarkable fidelity.

* * *

THE SOLOISTS were most happy choices. Hilde Gueden, soprano, had but one aria "Ye now are sorrowful"; the baritone, Donald Gramm, had two opportunities — "Lord, make me to know" and "Lo, I unfold unto you a mystery." Miss Gueden tended to scoop at the outset, but once arrived at her habitual security she displayed a purity and ample ease which was extremely pleasing and effective. Gramm infused more warmth and sense of drama into his solos and the power of his voice was projected with ease.

Munch held his hand aloft at the completion of the first half of the "Requiem" to inhibit applause, in view of the reverent nature of the occasion, but, at the final chorus, the audience would not be denied. They broke out into enthusiastic appreciation. Munch bowed with his usual modesty but did not return to acknowledge the continued acclaim the audience was eager to show him.

Springfield Union - Ju[illegible]

LEON FLEISHER, MONTEUX DRAW 9154 TO LENOX

Young Pianist, French Conductor Win Plaudits at Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 20—The venerable French conductor Pierre Monteux, pianist Leon Fleisher and the Boston Symphony Orc

Gifford's
SINCE 1872
KEYS

day. Increasing cloudiness and not so cool tonight. Tuesday considerable cloudiness and little change in temperature with showers possible north portion.

Leon Fleisher

Continued From Page 1

through the vast spaces of the shed.

Massive Work

Brahms' First Piano Concerto is a massive work of symphonic proportions, a work which is a challenge to each participant in its performance. Leon Fleisher, one of the best of the younger pianists, and Pierre Monteux have played it together at various times and so today the collaboration was almost flawless. Mr. Fleisher has the technique and strength to meet the exacting passages. However, he never forces his tones and they always seem to have warmth and beauty. It is possible that some of the rapid passages have been played more immaculately by him on other occasions, but the sum total of the performance was one of strength and dignity. The exquisite second movement was beautifully sung and the finale was an exciting listening experience, as was the massive opening movement.

Few conductors understand so well the music of Stravinsky as Pierre Monteux. Indeed, it was he who conducted many of the first performances as he did the ballet "Petrouchka" which we heard this afternoon in its entirety. Today, this music sounds far more reasonable than it must have in 1911. It is descriptive music, profuse with melodies, some sweet, some cacaphonic, but always understandable and in the spirit.

Played Magnificently

This is music made to order for the virtuosi of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and under such leadership they played magnificently. Surely a very special credit should go to Bernard Zighera for his expert pianism.

One hears too seldom the entire ballet and because it is often abridged, one misses some of the most delectable portions, as for example, the third scene, (The Domain of the Moor) and the final tragedy of Petrouchka.

Mr. Monteux provided a crystal clear reading of the work. Every detail was exact and the total picture, although a bit overwhelming in spots, emerged with miraculous clarity.

Perfect Afternoon

This was a perfect afternoon, although on the chilly side. The lawn in front of the shed was crowded with people, more than 3000 of them. No one seemed in a hurry to go home and only a half dozen or so left the shed during the performance.

Opera scenes commence in the theater-concert hall tomorrow night under the direction of Boris Goldovsky. A complete "Don Pasquale" is slated and also excerpts from "Romeo and Juliette." This will mark the first opera department show of the season.

[122]

NY Tribune - July 21

Boston Symphony Plays Tribute to Koussevitzky

By Francis D. Perkins

LENOX MASS., July 20—For its annual Berkshire Festival memorial tribute to its former conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, the Boston Symphony Orchestra presented Brahms "'A German Requiem' last night in Tanglewood's music shed under Charles Munch's direction. More works of Brahms, the 'Academic Festival Overture' and the 'Piano Concerto in D Minor,' shared this afternoon's program under the leadership of Pierre Monteux with the complete score of Stravinsky's Petrouchka.

Leon Fleisher was the concerto's soloist, and Hilde Gueden and Donald Gramm were the soloists in the 'Requiem' with the festival chorus trained by Hugh Ross and his associates in the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, Lorna Cooke De Varon and Alfred Nash Patterson.

Except for the fact that it did not draw attention to Dr. Koussevitzky's notable efforts in behalf of contemporary music, the Brahms 'requiem' was an appropriate choice for a concert in memory of the musician who founded the Berkshire Music Center and brought this festival to its present primary position among summer events in the Eastern States.

The performance itself was also appropriate from a tributary and an artistic point of view. It revealed the style and atmosphere of the music, and its emotional scope and essential humanity.

It reflected the tenderness of much of the music, its transitions from mourning and awe to serenity and triumphal confidence. Mr. Munch evidently understood the score in all its aspects and this understanding was shared by the performers. Miss Gueden's singing was delectable in tone and also laudable for the discerning musicianship of its phrasing and its expressive persuasion.

Mr. Gramm's singing also was emotionally convincing, with an appealing tone generally marked by clarity and consistent in its artistry of style. The large chorus includes students in all departments of the center and thus does not entirely consist of choral specialists. It sang with admirable responsiveness and understanding of mood along with a command of fine points of shading. The quality of the combined tone was as a rule highly commendable, although some of the inner musical lines were not always made apparent. Still, even if entire clarity was not achieved, the performance was a praiseworthy achievement, considering the limited time at hand for preparation.

The orchestra was in good form, and the vocal and instrumental balance was well preserved. At one or two points the tympanists' contribution, while impressive, seemed slightly overemphasized. This impression may have resulted from the music shed's acoustics. Mr. Monteux celebrated his eighty-third birthday last April, but there was no hint of elderliness in his interpretation of this afternoon's music including the zest and momentum which marked the playing of the Brahms 'overture.'

Mr. Fleisher exhibited a thorough and objective mastery of the 'D Minor Concerto's' technical demands, and his tone was musical throughout its dynamic compass; vigor was not accompanied by percussiveness. The most impressive feature of the thirty-year-old pianist's playing was its interpretative maturity and understanding. it had requisite largeness of scale, while it was unusually revealing in the meditative and intimate measures of the score, set forth with sensitiveness and a realization of fine points of mood and volume; the adagia a remarkable reflective depth. A slightly greater touch of forthright ruggedness might not have been amiss in the finale, but here there was no lack of spirit.

Mr. Monteux who conducted the Paris premiere of Stravinsky's petrouchka forty-seven years ago, remains a master interpreter of this unfading score, which is often heard in part in a concert suite but seldom in full away from the ballet stage. Many New Yorkers will fondly remember the Bostonian's complete performance of the entire score under his direction at Carnegie Hall last season.

Today's performance had similar memorable characteristics in disclosing the full range of color and dramatic scope of the music in a manner which again found this orchestra at its admirable best.

NY Times - July 21

Music: Monteux at Lenox

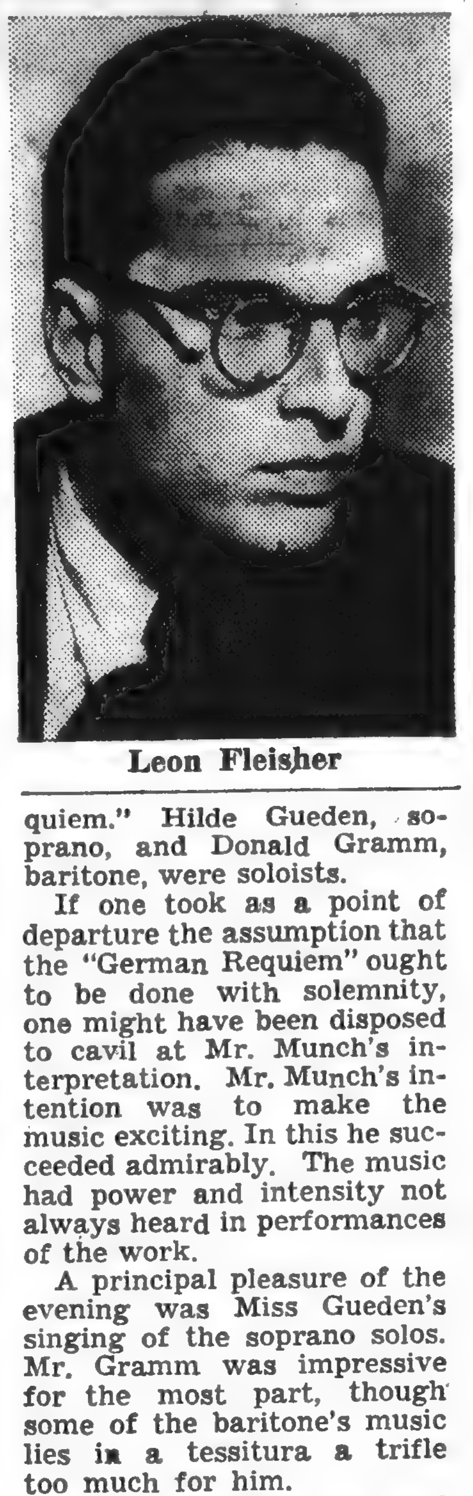
Brahms and Stravinsky Scores on Program

By JOHN BRIGGS

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 20—An audience of 9,154, including 250 members of an excursion organized by the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences, gathered at Tanglewood for this afternoon's concert by Pierre Monteux and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. This brought total attendance for the three week-end concerts to 23,776.

Today's concert, at which Mr. Monteux was making his first Tanglewood appearance of the season, had for its principal work the Brahms D minor Piano Concerto, with Leon Fleisher as soloist.



Leon Fleisher

This big-scale, romantic early work makes strenuous technical demands on the soloist. Mr. Fleisher, however, proved well able to cope with its difficulties. He is a fluent performer with well-disciplined fingers. A captious listener, it is true, might have wished at times, especially in the slow movement, for less steely assurance and more imaginativeness in the soloist's playing. But Mr. Fleisher, if a somewhat impersonal performer, is also a dexterous one, and his playing of the final Rondo earned a hearty demonstration from this afternoon's audience.

Stravinsky's "Petruchka," which Mr. Monteux conducted at its Parisian prmière forty-seven years ago, added a sprightly note to the concert. It was clear that in the intervening time work and interpreter have not lost their jauntiness.

The concert began with a lively performance of the Brahms "Academic Festival" Overture.

Last night Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony and the Berkshire Festival Chorus in Brahms' "German Requiem." Hilde Gueden, soprano, and Donald Gramm, baritone, were soloists.

If one took as a point of departure the assumption that the "German Requiem" ought to be done with solemnity, one might have been disposed to cavil at Mr. Munch's interpretation. Mr. Munch's intention was to make the music exciting. In this he succeeded admirably. The music had power and intensity not always heard in performances of the work.

A principal pleasure of the evening was Miss Gueden's singing of the soprano solos. Mr. Gramm was impressive for the most part, though some of the baritone's music lies in a tessitura a trifle too much for him.

Finally should be mentioned the fine ensemble singing of the Festival Chorus, the student body of the Berkshire Music Center. Unlike many choruses, which are inclined to be weak in the tenor section, the festival group was well-balanced in tone throughout. They were trained for this performance by Hugh Ross.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 60,734

JUL 19 1958

Music: Boston Symphony At Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN

Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — The Boston Symphony, conducted by Charles Munch, played the opening concert of series "A", Berkshire Music Festival, last night in the huge shed before an audience of 6,350.

This weekend concentrates on the music of Johannes Brahms. The method is again being used this year of combining the old with the new. Last night, it was a question of the tried and proven with a modern work of highly debatable species — Aaron Copland's Orchestral Variations.

The Brahms works were "Serenade No. 1 in D Major, Opus 11," and Symphony No. 4 in E

A number of changes have 11," and Symphony No. 4 in E Minor, Opus 98.

A nubmer of changes have been made in the Tanglewood setting. In the first place, the grounds have never looked greener. The stage and sides of the shed have been freshly painted—brilliant white reflectors have been placed over the stage, apparently of a plastic material, that improve the remarkably fine acoustics and soften the light.

Last night's program was a lively debate of pros and cons.

The Brahms serenade is a youthful work, but well contrived replete with euphonious sound and extremely lively in its general effectiveness.

Copland's orchestral variations are typical Copland, only more so. They specialize in two main features brash dissonance and shocking instrumental effect.

They are a transcription of Piano Variations", composed in 1930. It may have been just as well to let well enough alone. The orchestral version opens harshly, with flagrant tones whammed by percussion.

It then digresses in wheezing, complaining, menagerial sounds that are much too disturbing to ignore. In spots, the work fights for legitimate attention and interest through the expedient agencies of murky sound and the unexpected.

Among the latter effects are chords of full force and moments of pseudo-penitential quiet.

Munch did a glorious job of keeping this frenzied material within bar lines, and the orchestra was no less noteworthy in following directives.

Manna from heaven was the Brahms Fourth Symphony that was played after the rest period known as intermission.

The Brahms Serenade received a performance that raised it actually above its stature as a modestly representative work by the composer.

The folkish start in horns was beautifully voiced. it is highly exuberant music-broad themes in the first movement that are heavily supported by timpani.

It also has romantic moments. The opening movement was superb technical performance, notably in strings that produced a perfectly-molded, ingratiating tone. Nothing more bucolic has been heard that the brief flute solo, leading to the close of the movement.

The scherzo was played in "floating" rhythm, as if tugging to get loose. However, it was spotted with interludes of desultory interest, partly due to a thin orchestration, and to a mite of lethargy in the playing.

The woodwinds did distinguished work in the minuet, particularly bassoon and flute.

The finale, a rondo, was rough in effect, thoroughly bravur and unrestrained in enthusiasm.

Tonight's concert is "in memory of Serge Koussevitzky." The program is the Brahms "Requiem" with the Boston Symphony, Festival Chorus—and soloists, Hilde Gueden, soprano, and Donald Gramm, baritone. Munch will conduct.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 - S. 1,189,293

JUL 20 1958

Music: Brahmsian Mood

Week-End at Lenox Devoted Chiefly to His Work Opens With Serenade in D

By JOHN BRIGGS

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass, July 18—A week-end of music devoted chiefly to works of Brahms opened Friday at Tanglewood with the Serenade No. 1 in D, Op. 11, played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Charles Munch conducted.

The infrequently performed serenade is an interesting bit of early Brahms. Like the Serenade in A, in which the composer dispensed with violins, the Serenade in D shows Brahms in an experimental mood. For one thing, he had access to an orchestra with adequate woodwinds, in writing for which he had had little previous experience: and he made the most of his opportunity.

•

Equally interesting, however, is the extent to which the Brahmsian style is present and fully developed in this early work.

The orchestral texture is full almost to the point of thickness. Ternary rhythms abound, including the two-against-three that fascinated Brahms throughout his life. The score is full of sad Slavic-sounding tunes in the minor mode. It is a very Brahmsian work and very effective, especially by Mr. Munch and the Boston forces.

The major work on the program was the Fourth Symphony. When performed by almost any first-rate orchestra, it has immense power and grandeur. The Boston Symphony, for its part, exhibits these qualities in nearly everything it plays.

The combination was at times almost overpowering, especially since Mr. Munch approached the Brahms with the fierce, tigerish intensity that makes his performance of the Berlioz "Fantastic" symphony unforgettable. Even the Allegro Giocoso, often treated as a breathing-spell between the heroics past and the strenuous final movement to come, was on a titanic scale. In sum, it was a stirring and memorable performance of the symphony, even if the performers did not at all points do what the book says.

•

The program was rounded out by Aaron Copland's "Orchestral Variations." The work, an orchestral transcription of Mr. Copland's "Piano Variations" of 1930, was commissioned by the Louisville Symphony and first performed by that orchestra last March 5.

The "Variations" were received cordially by the audience, and Mr. Copland was present to share the applause.

Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,290

JUL 24 1958

"German Requiem" Is Featured Work At Festival Event

Tanglewood Concert Goers were treated to a performance which was a gem of perfection in the presentation last Saturday night of Brahms' "A German Requiem, for solo voices, chorus and orchestra, Op. 45."

In a performance presented in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, Charles Munch, the orchestra, the Festival Chorus, and soloists Hilde Gueden, soprano and Donald Gramm, baritone turned out a superb rendition of the magnificent work.

The stellar musicians of the Boston Symphony Orchestra were never better than in their fine presentation of the moving Brahms work. Dr. Munch, conducting with his usual professional brilliance, welded the orchestra, chorus and soloists into a whole which reached sublime heights of musical emotion before a large crowd in the huge Music Shed at Tanglewood.

Miss Gueden Highlight

A highlight of the evening was Miss Gueden's brief appearance in the fifth section of the lengthy work, as soprano soloist with the Chorus. The appearance was brief, but certainly worth waiting for, as the charming artist who has performed in the great centers of musical culture from Vienna to the Metropolitan raised her exquisite voice in the emotionally charged verses of the Brahms German Requiem.

Baritone Donald Gramm, a regular performer at the Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood, presented his usually fine performance in solo measures of the work.

Before we run out of adjectives, a word must be said about the excellent work of the Festival Chorus, who certainly received some excellent preparation from Hugh Ross, judging by Saturday evening's performance.

Excellent Choral Work

Beautiful and precise tones poured forth from the assembled chorus as plentifully as wildflowers on a mountain hillside, and with an effect no less esthetic. The excellence of their training paid off handsomely in the great Brahms work as the various sections of the choir poured forth the beauty of the devout music and words of the work. Voices sang the verses, toned the responses, blended, increased and diminished with a high degree of vocal artistry and feeling.

We feel that it was the best concert to date this season at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood.

Hilde Gueden was born in the extremely music - conscious city of Vienna, where she received most of her musical education. She appeared in her first operatic role as Cherubino in "Le Nozza di Figaro." She has appeared in Munich, the Vienna Opera, La Scala, and the Salzburg Festivals. She came to this country for the first time in 1951, and made her debut with Metropolitan Opera as Gilda in "Rigoletto." Saturday marked her first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and fine one it was.

Donald Gramm was born in Milwaukee and began his musical training there at an early age. He became a scholarship student at Chicago Musical College. He has appeared with the New York City Opera Company and has appeared as soloist with numerous orchestras, as well as making radio and TV appearances. He is a frequent and dependable performer at Boston Symphony Orchestra Berkshire Festival concerts.

FADED TEXT

[123]

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 60,734

JUL 21 1958

Music: Monteux Excels At Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — By far the most satisfying program of the Brahms cycle at Tanglewwod over the weekend was given yesterday afternoon by the Boston Symphony conducted by Pierre Monteux.

It isn't all to Brahms' credit. "Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" suite received as thrilling a performance as we have ever heard.

The afternoon's soloist was Leon Fleisher, a tall clean-cut young pianist, absolutely devoid of mannerisms, who has a heart for melodic beauty and a first-class technique.

Fleisher was heard in Brahms Concerto No. 1 in D minor, Opus 15. The program also included Brahms' "Academic Festival" overtüre, Opus 80.

Final Lesson

The final lesson in efficient, attractive, uncomplicated, and absorbing conducting is taught by Monteux. It was a revelation to watch his handling of the rampant meters in the Stravinsky. Everything was explained to the orchestra without the slightest fuss or bother. Yet, no amount of gymnastics could have made each point clearer.

It was a virtuoso performance of "Petrouchka." The sly phrases and choppy material of the "People's Fair at Shrovetide" was bound with strong threads. Bernard Zighera did a first-class job of the more than incidental piano part.

Sparkling shades of tonal color were splashed through the "At Petrouchka's" and "At the Moor's" episodes—most conspicuously the incident described by a trio in trumpet, bassoon, and flute.

Mighty Cacaphony

The mighty cacophony of the "People's Fair" was under complete control.

But most significant was the fragile close of the movement, in which the leading motives are paraded for the last time.

This is a vehicle that allows for uninhibited demonstration by conductor and orchestra. In this instance, its potency and vigor—not to exclude passages of intense poetry—were projected with the most discipline.

Exciting

Fleisher is one of our most exciting young pianists. The Brahms concerto is not a standard "humdinger." It requires insight and absolute coordination between orchestra and solo instrument.

It might be well to dispose of the fact, at once, that all did not go well in the third or rondo movement. Rhythms jarred somewhat and were hastily rectified, if not successfully concealed.

Elsewhere, the performance vas rousing and engaging in onal beauty. Monteux not only ave the soloist the advantage of very decision in matters of mpo and nuances, but he provided him with an inspiring and firm background.

In this concerto, much difficulty of the Paino score is partly obliterated by the orchestration, and must be seen rather than heard.

Vibrant Technique

The first and final movements were bravura playing by the soloists. They were pedalled a little heavily in spots, but the technique was vibrant, secure and interpretation was of transparent clarity.

Fleisher gave a fiery delivery of the hammered trills and stampeded through the dazzling octave passages.

Incidentally, special credit is due the horns in the first movement. Their passages are mercilessly treacherous.

In the slow movement (assigned mainly to the soloist) Fleisher produced a liquid tone, making great import of every tone and harmonic combination. The phrasing was pliant and personal.

The pianist stormed his way through the finale, negotiating difficulties with consummate ease. The fugue toward the end of the movement was beautifully initiated by the orchestra. One could detect slight tardiness in voice enterances, but matters reached a brilliant climax in piano.

Brahms' "Academic" overture was not played as a showcase sample, but with a spirit of refinement that brought a special kind of glamour to the familar tunes as each entered the text. The concludng "Gaudeamus Igitur" was dramatically played nd brought on an avalanche of applause.

Attendance

Yesterday's attendance was 9,154, making a total of 23,776 for the weekend.

Series "B" of the shed concerts will resume Friday night with Glinka's "Russian and Ludmilla" overture, Tcahikovsky's Fourth Symphony, Milhaud's overture to "Les Eumenides", three nocturnes by Debussy, and Racel's "La Valse."

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 103,521

JUL 19 1958

Concerts Open At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass. (Special) — With Charles Munch conducting the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, the main concerts of the twenty-first Berkshire Music Festival opened here riday night.

The weather, almost as much s the music, was a major topic f conversation. In contrast with ne deluges which had greeted udiences here earlier in the estival, during the Bach and Mozart programs, the evening vas extraordinarily fine, clear nd crisp. Those who came in heir minks had practical use or them, and were much envied.

The concert itself was brilliant. The weekend will be devoted mainly to music of Brahms, and Friday night, Mr. Munch and the orchestra presented the first serenade and the Fourth Symphony. In between these works, however, was Aaron Copland's Orchestral Variations, a sensational piece in a sensational performance. Mr. Munch was in top fettle, skipping on the podium like the high hills, more calisthenic than one could ever remember him before. The composition, developed from a four-note nucleus, is striking in its invention and remarkable in its orchestration. It is almost totally dramatic, opening like a series of whiplashes and coming to a shattering, brazen conclusion like the Last Trump. There is little here of the lyrical copland of, say "Appalachian Spring."

Instead the orchestral variations are intensely mechanistic in temper and device. The sounds are dense and massed, the harmonies in especially close interval, strident and astringent. It is far from a soothing business. But in its impact and imagination it is stunning.

Although almost unbelievably different from the Brahms Serenade, the Orchestral Variations did not come as a surprise in performance because the Brahms oo had been given a fine presentation by both conductor and layers. Friday was Mr. Munch's night to make music on the great scale. He filled the Brahms Serenade with a wonderful measure of bombast and ironic humors. This was a serenade that went back to the Commedia Dell' arte in spirit, in the reading and the performance. Much has been said about the work as essentially a symphony in composition, and so it may be. But as Mr. Munch read it Friday, it was deep dyed in the mood of serenade, too, movement by movement.

As much as I could hear of the Brahms Fourth Symphony was rich and warm, and in a way comforting in view of mordant quality of the preceding Copland score.

Incidentally, the proscenium of the Music Shed has a new acoustical treatment mainly engineered by Dr. Elemer Nagy of Hartford, o project the string sounds more ully. A series of plastic shutters, xtend from the top of the arch ut into the house. Outside the hed especially the string section f the orchestra is heard to new dvantage.

T. H. P.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,286

JUL 19 1958

Tanglewood Weekend Devoted To Brahms

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch, acquitted itself nobly in the first Music Shed concert at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood.

This weekend is being devoted to Brahms, and two of that late nineteenth century composer's works were featured on the program—and a relatively new Copland composition was rather sandwiched in between.

The evening, truly a satisfying one in very many respects, began with a spirited and graceful performance of the Serenade No. 1,i in D major. This is a lovely work, abounding in soaring melodies, intricate harmonics, characteristically swift modulations, vigor and strength.

Written in the composer's pre-symphony days, it is a serenade in the Mozart tradition. Scored at first for flute, two clarinets, bassoon and horn, with strings, it was later revised for entire symphony.

The first movement is especially memorable, though Brahms' way with a melody can sometimes be a little frustrating. Here he invents a particularly beautiful one, which somehow becomes lost in a modulating maze. Even so, it is delightful.

The orchestra, of course, played it with devotion, care and great beauty, except for some careless intonation and blatant horns in the first and fourth movements.

The Copland is "interesting," but, as one listener remarked, "I can leave it here!" Cacophonous, loud, dissonant, peculiar, it was played with all seriousness by the Boston musicians, who probably find much more of a challenge in working their way through something relatively new; many listeners perhaps found it exciting. Rhythmic and percussive, it combines brute musical strength with melodic invention.

About his own work, Mr. Copland says, "My purpose was not to create orchestral sounds reminiscent of the quality of a piano, but rather to re-think the sonorous possibilities of the composition in terms of musical color. (The work is an orchestral transcription of my 'Piano Variations,' composed in 1930.)

"The over-all plan of the work remains as it was: an eleven measure theme, dramatic in character, followed by a series of twenty variations and a coda. The intention was to make each variation cumulative in effect, with the coda as a kind of summation of the emotional content of the work."

The variations glory in imaginative and colorful force, but there is little repose or quiet. Mr. Munch conducted with vigor, and the orchestra resounded noisily. At any rate, it makes one wonder!

A smooth and rich reading of the eloquent Brahms Fourth Symphony closed the program. What a towering work, even if a little over-familiar to Tanglewood audiences. It was a finely detailed performance, subtle, yet massive; strong, yet pliant. Mr. Munch drew beautiful sounds and beautiful phrases from the orchestra, especially in the magnificent Andante.

A crowd of 6,352 was on hand (and on the lawns) to hear the evening's music—and even a cold switch in the weather seemed not to chill their enthusiasm for the Boston Symphony and for its eminent conductor.

This evening's work is the Brahms' "Requiem," starting at 8:30 in the Shed.

M.deB.B.

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 102,839

JUL 21 1958

Brahms' Music Draws Throng To Tanglewood

By JOHN F. KYES

LENOX — The first "major" weekend at Tanglewood's Berkshire Festival, emphasizing the music of Brahms, drew more hearers each time, until there were 9,154 yesterday afternoon, enough to fill the immense music shed and leave at least 3,000 enjoying the concert from blankets or chairs on the lawn. This brought the weekend total to 23,776.

Pierre Monteux, beloved by Boston players and audiences, was recalled to the stage many times at the conclusion of the concert. At intermission, he shared the overwhelming applause with pianist Leon Fleisher, who in 1943 at the age of 15 had made his public debut with Monteux and the San Francisco Symphony. There was every evidence of keen sympathy between the two in yesterday's performance of the Brahms Concerto No. 1 in D minor, Op. 15.

In Finest Fettle

This was one of those fabulous occasions when everyone seemed to be in the finest fettle. The Academic Festival Overture, Op. 80, bubbled with well-loved student songs but never became coltist. It quickly revealed the economy of motion and the complete efficiency of Monteux in handling the 105 players without making the result stiff or stereotyped. The choirs of the orchestra sang nobly and with the warmth Brahms intended when he penned this material so dear to his heart.

It is easy to see why audiences in 1858 felt the Brahms First Piano Concerto was more like a symphony but it is hard to understand why they were so cold to it. These three movements contain mighty ideas, the piano assisting in the first two parts without being submerged, and then asserting more conventional forms of concerto artistry in the final "Rondo."

The "Maestoso" opened with an orchestral movement of such length and challenging ideas that when Fleisher did enter, it was easy to take his art for granted, as part of the splendid picture. Nevertheless, only the size of the orchestral canvas diverted full attention from richly varied pianism, ranging from lacy obligatos and rich accompaniments to thunderous two-hand passages and thoughtfully phrased cadenzas.

Mystic Beauty

'The opening notes of the "Adagio" voiced a theme as sweet and searching as if drawn from the "Requiem" heard Saturday night. The developments of this movement brought the highest type of cooperation between the soloist and the orchestra, and one could enjoy time after time the sort of mystic beauty inherent in later works of this master. Brahms was only 21 when he began to compose this work.

After intermission came complete change of sounds and approach. Stravinsky's music for the ballet, "Petrouchka," is modernism without loss of feeling. It is tender even in its dissonances, and full of a childlike capacity for fantasy in telling of the three puppets which came to life.

Here Monteud splashed color on color, and the players tossed off with ease episodes bristling with technical details. The complete score was played yesterday, rather than the suite heard at the 1955 Worcester Festival.

Bernard Zighera's piano headed several choice solo assignments in this work.

The coming weekend will contain, in each concert, music of Ravel or Debussy.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,286

JUL 21 1958

Large Audience As Monteux Conducts At Tanglewood

[illegible] third week [illegible] Festival at Tanglewood [illegible] At his first [illegible] this season, the orchestra [illegible] a small part of the audience [illegible] tribute to Mr. Monteux.

Leon Fleisher [illegible] pianist, and [illegible] Queen Elisabeth of Belgium International Musical Competition, was featured in the Brahms D Minor concerto Op. [illegible] A formidable work, Mr. Fleisher was eminently capable of the challenge. His technique conquered with ease the octave trills [illegible] runs, the [illegible] this [illegible] concerto [illegible] Although his tone seems to lack a deeply resonant quality, nevertheless he has a [illegible] control of the various [illegible] so vital to the enjoyment of Brahms' much maligned composition. Mr. Monteux [illegible] orchestra and pianist [illegible] subtle and fine [illegible] performance. Unfortunately some of the pianist's most [illegible] from such a large [illegible] have been lost [illegible] listeners [illegible] Brahms [illegible] it is a pity to miss [illegible]

His lightsome Academic Festival Overture [illegible] the afternoon's program with Mr. Monteux giving it his usual [illegible] and well-regulated interpretation. The orchestra [illegible] of the overture [illegible] the [illegible] the [illegible]

[illegible] the [illegible] instruments, and the [illegible] orchestration [illegible] exaggerated [illegible] wizard [illegible] delicate [illegible] have [illegible] afternoon's performance [illegible] satisfied.

An unusually large [illegible] numbering [illegible] after Mr. Monteux [illegible] times to show their appreciation and enjoyment.

Next week's [illegible] concerts will be given [illegible] by nineteenth [illegible] twentieth century composers.

MdeB B.

---

nday Telegram
RCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 104,590

L 20 1958

usic:

RAYMOND MORIN
legram Music Critic

OX — Brahms' " AGerman n" was preformed at Tan- last night in memory of Koussevitzky, who was for conductor of the Boston ny Orchestra and founder Berkshire Music Center. was an audience of 8,272 es Much conducted the Symphony and a chorus students from the Berk- usic Center who had been d by Hugh Ross with the ce of Alfred Nash Patter- d Lorna Cooke Devaron. were Hilde Gueden, so- and Donald Gramm, bari-bly because of the memo- sacred nature of the work, Munch discouraged ap- and refrained from return- the stage for a bow.

Second Event

was the second event in st of four weekends of re Festival concerts by orchestra in the music opening series was devoted to the music of Brahms. German Requiem received ulating but not a memor- performance. Little more was to be desired of tech- schooling, and clarity of This might be expected orchestra.

Out of Balance

chorus was not an aggre- of trained singers. Many are instrumentalists from ter.

s therefore not faulty pian- hat the chorus is out of The soprano section was in solo fragments. The os and basses were quite ly suffocated in tone the time.

ms' "requiem" requires han finesse and mechan- rfection. There is no point iniscing that he wrote it outpouring of grief over th of his mother and that rt Schumann.

ought for and attained a al depth of expression that mately reflected in the text upon which it is based in Wo sourc organ came fervo

Bri ded i of se half first s u f mour huma

In is tr consc ends

BI CINCIN
Circ. W

JUL 2

CONCERT

Brahm

At the T July 19-20 c and rain clou concerts of th it was Brahm perfect symm chorus achieve baton of Ch drew a preva

[124]

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 104,590

JUL 20 1958

Music: Brahms' 'A German Requiem' Performed at Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — Brahms' "AGerman Requiem" was preformed at Tanglewood last night in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, who was for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and founder of the Berkshire Music Center. There was an audience of 8,272 persons.

Charles Much conducted the Boston Symphony and a chorus of 150 students from the Berkshire Music Center who had been prepared by Hugh Ross with the assistance of Alfred Nash Patterson and Lorna Cooke Devaron. Soloists were Hilde Gueden, soprano, and Donald Gramm, baritone.

Possibly because of the memorial or sacred nature of the work, or both, Munch discouraged applause and refrained from returning to the stage for a bow.

Second Event

This was the second event in the first of four weekends of Berkshire Festival concerts by the full orchestra in the music shed.

This opening series was devoted mainly to the music of Brahms.

The German Requiem received a stimulating but not a memorable performance. Little more more was to be desired of technique, schooling, and clarity of concept. This might be expected of the orchestra.

Out of Balance

The chorus was not an aggregation of trained singers. Many of them are instrumentalists from the Center.

It was therefore not faulty planning that the chorus is out of balance. The soprano section was eminent. The tenors were best-heard in solo fragments. The contraltos and basses were quite throughly suffocated in tone most of the time.

Brahms' "requiem" requires more than finesse. and mechanical perfection. There is no point to reminiscing that he wrote it as an outpouring of grief over the death of his mother and that of Robert Schumann.

He sought for and attained a personal depth of expression that is intimately reflected in the Bibical text upon which it is based. We have had performances in Worcester that were not as resourcefully exciting (mostly with organ accompaniment) but they came close to the core of religious fervor.

Two Sections

Briefly, the "requiem" is divided into two sections with a total of seven selections. The second half begins with part four. The first half is devoted to earthly suffering, lamentations, and mourning over the nothingness of human life.

In the second half, mourning is transformed into pious faith, consolation, and celestial bliss. It ends in triumphant resurrection.

Except for what we heard at the rehearsal yesterday morning and the first half of last night's performance, we cannot comment. This eliminates the last three sections, including Miss Gueden's solos.

The main criticisms of last night's performance, which invited less severe comment than the rehearsal, are based on the incomplete success with which the religious significance was transmitted.

Technical Aspects

One was ever aware of fine technical aspects. Certainly, Munch accomplished a coup in suppressing the violin tone-color in part one to accentuate the work's underlying sobriety.

Gramm conveyed unrest and anguish with the short broken phrases of "Lord, make me to know the measure of my days."

He sang with rich quality, but endings were sometimes weak and intonation was not always of the purest.

By and large, the chorus was remiss in that absolute essential—pure enunciation. It would not have required poor hearing or lack of knowledge not to discover until the middle of the second part that they were singing the text in German.

Brahms intended the words to dominate the music, orchestral and vocal. He did not seek a symphonic effect or a contrived recital of instrumental colors. As we said, the general color is somber.

Philosophy

The text contained Brahms' accepted philosophy. It states that the mourned shall be comforted. Flesh is as grass and the glory of man is like the flower of grass. Every man must die. Death is not an eternal annihilation. It leads to a better life on earth.

These are the main issues in any performance that isn't devoted purely and simply to the skills of technical performance.

In last night's performance, the skills were there—finely sculptured phrasing, prompt and decisive changes of volume.

There were moments in the first section in which a fervent religious quality permeated the mechanics. Rich hues and fierce serimusness were in full force during "Behold, all flesh is as the grass." The final stanza of that section, "The redeemed of the Lord shall return again" was brilliantly martial and resplendent in powerful sound.

But one felt that one had witnessed a concert-hall performance of a religious work, and not experienced worship that could take place in such environs.

This afternoon's concert will feature pianist Leon Fleisher in Brahms' first piano concerto. The balance of the program will be Brahms' "Academic Festival Overture," and Stravinsky's "Petrouchka." Pierre Monteux will conduct the Boston Symphony.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292

JUL 24 1958

Grace Notes

TANGLEWOOD
July 18 and 19
By A. C. S.

Charles Munch was on the podium for the first two concerts of the weekend featuring music by Johannes Brahms. The Serenade in D Major, which opened the series, is an early and somewhat experimental work which is rarely performed. It gives ample indication of Brahms' later compositional techniques and is fully satisfying in its own right, especially as presented Friday evening. Equally satisfying was the interpretation of the Fourth Symphony.

Sandwiched between these works was Aaron Copland's Orchestral Variations. Commissioned by the Louisville Orchestra and first performed by them last March, the piece is a colorful transcription of his Piano Variations of 1930. Even with a face lifting they show their age, and are hardly indicative of Copland's present writing.

Saturday evening brought the yearly concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, for which Dr. Munch gave a very personal reading of Brahms' German Requiem. His concept had the ardent impetuousness of a convert rather than the quiet certainty of long-standing faith. Hilde Gueden and Donald Gramm gave excellent account of the solo parts, and the Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross, was most sensitive to the conductor and capable to meet his every demand. While one might disagree with the concept, none could doubt the sincerity of the tribute.

TANGLEWOOD
July 20
By C. D.

Pierre Monteux, now in his 83rd year, took over the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Sunday afternoon and although he looked his years they were immediately forgotten in the assurance and authority of his conducting. He opened with the Brahms Academic Festival Overture, which Brahms wrote as a handsome present to the University of Breslau after it had given him an honorary Degree. The great D minor Piano Concerto of Brahms followed with Leon Fleisher playing the solo part. Mr. Fleisher played all the notes but the great climaxes in the first movement seemed frantic rather than surging and the mystery of the second movement was never apparent. His playing of the last movement, however, was brilliant.

The second half of the program was given over to a miraculously witty and sparkling performance of the entire Petrouchka Suite of Stravinsky which Mr. Monteux had been the first to conduct nearly fifty years ago.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 113,886

JUL 20 1958

KOUSSEVITZKY'S MEMORY HAILED AT TANGLEWOOD

Brahms' 'Requiem' Performance Is Tribute to Festival's Founder

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 19—The memory of the late Serge Koussevitzky burns brightly in the hearts of all who came in contact with him either personally or through his music.

Each year the Boston Symphony Orchestra gives a concert in his memory and tonight 8287 people joined the orchestra, Festival Chorus and soloists in paying this annual tribute to the founder of the Berkshire Festival.

No more appropriate work could have been chosen then "The German Requiem," by Johannes Brahms, for it is a work of singularly personal faith and affirmation of eternal hope.

The solists were Hilda Gueden, soprano, making her first appearance at Tanglewood, and Donald Gramm, basso. Dr. Charles Munch was the conductor. One listened to a powerful presentation of this work; one which ran the gamut of emotions from the calm of contemplation to the extasy of personal affirmation.

There were great moments in the second chorus, "Behold, All Flesh is as the Grass," and some magnificent playing by the orchestra. The work was sung in German, but as far as clarity of enunciation was concerned it might have been sung in any language.

Mr. Gramm, always a dependable singer, enunciated clearly and although the music was not entirely congenial to his voice, he sang with impressive sense of style.

There are few more lovely arias than "Ye Now Are Sorrowful" which Brahms wrote for the soprano. Miss Gueden sang it beautifully, the pure top notes were sung with exceptional beauty and admirable projection. The accompanying chorus was finely modulated.

Chorus of 150

The glory of the work is in its chorus numbers and the festival Chorus of about 150 voices sang them with usually well-balanced tones and awareness of the texts. The tenor section was exceptional and the top sopranos sang freely, even when the tessitura was high. The chorus had been trained by Hugh Ross and his assistants, and Tanglewood audiences have learned to expect only the best from Mr. Ross.

Dr. Munch conducted carefully, phrasing deftly, and never forcing his orchestra or chorus. Beauty of tone and a sensitivity to every nuance were the details most regarded. Thus, a performance of warmth and admirable co-ordination resulted.

Sunday Program

Tomorrow afternoon, Pierre Monteux will direct his first concert of the season. The eminent and venerable French conductor will open the program with Brahms' "Academic Festival overture."

Leon Fleisher, pianist, wil lbe the soloist in the "Piano Concerto No. 1 in D minor" by Brahms. The concluding work will be Stravinsky's ballet "Petrouchka."

Schenectady Gazette - July 21

2 Boston Conductors Give Rehearsal Crowd a Treat

By D. E. RITZ
Gazette Music Editor

Visitors to the first of the Saturday morning rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the huge Shed at Tanglewood had an unusual opportunity last weekend. Pierre Monteux and Charles Munch conducted and Leon Fleisher was piano soloist.

* * *

REHEARSALS start promptly at 10 a.m. and we arrived a full quarter hour before that time, yet the Shed was almost filled back to the boxes. We hastily seated ourselves where we could watch the organ, the performing pianist and have a good profile view of the conductors.

The orchestra was on stage and tuned, and promptly at 10 o'clock Monteux and Fleisher entered from the opposite wing. Without more ado the rehearsal of Brahm's "Concerto number 1" was on.

Fleisher plays with a clean technique and a most business-like approach to the problem in hand and the orchestra was superb. — Yet there were spots where the conductor was not satisfied — and over it they went.

* * *

FOLLOWING the mid rehearsal rest Dr. Munch arrived to conduct the orchestra, organ and Berkshire Festival Chorus in preparation for the evening performance of the Brahms "Requiem." This was given in memory of the late Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, founder of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood and 25-year director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The huge chorus had been prepared by Hugh Ross and was a fine, responsive instrument. Soloists were Hilde Guedon, soprano; and Donald Gramm, baritone.

* * *

WE FOUND the contrasting manners of conducting of Monteux and Munch most interesting. The chorus opened so softly one was not quite sure just when it started and each of the movements of the "Requiem" brought its own beauties. We have heard the choral portion of the requiem on several occassions, but never with such a large chorus and never before with orchestral accompaniment. It is a magnificent work.

The rehearsal closed shortly after noon and we joined many of the rehearsal audience in an impromptu picnic luncheon on the grounds. A short but intense rain drove all to the shelter of the tented picnic spot and later we made a dive for the car through the storm.

* * *

MOUNTAIN AIR can be cool and invigorating and that of last Saturday morning seemed to come direct from the north pole, yet the sun was warm.

The open Saturday morning rehearsals are a favorite with the public at Tanglewood and each year grow in popularity. A moderate fee is charged and proceeds go to the orchestra's pension fund.

Other Shed rehearsals open to the public this year will be held next Saturday morning and on the mornings of Aug. 2 and 9.

BILLBOARD
CINCINNATI, OHIO
Circ. W. 49,359

JUL 28 1958

CONCERT

Brahms Blooms Over Rainy Weekend

At the Tanglewood Festival July 19-20 crowds braved wind and rain clouds to hear the finest concerts of the season. Saturday it was Brahms' "Requiem," with perfect symmetry of ork and chorus achieved under the skilled baton of Charles Munch. He drew a prevailing elegaic mood and a feeling of affirmation of faith from the personal score which exudes ritual and sect. Hilde Gueden and Donald Gramm gave outstanding performances as the soloists in a highly satisfactory evening.

Sunday, the Boston Symphony Ork was under the direction of Pierre Monteux, who led a fresh and unfaded reading of the Academic Festival Overture. Le Fleisher gave a vivid, dextrous performance of the Piano Concerto in D Minor, tho he rushed the Rondo a little, accenting the integrated feeling and form of the work. Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" found Monteux in top form, bringing refinements and subtleties to the charming score as well as clarity of rhythm and a great sureness.

Niki Kalish.

[124]

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 104,590

JUL 20 1958

Music: Brahms' 'A German Requiem' Performed at Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — Brahms' " AGerman Requiem" was preformed at Tanglewood last night in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, who was for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and founder of the Berkshire Music Center. There was an audience of 8,272 persons.

Charles Much conducted the Boston Symphony and a chorus of 150 students from the Berkshire Music Center who had been prepared by Hugh Ross with the assistance of Alfred Nash Patterson and Lorna Cooke Devaron. Soloists were Hilde Gueden, soprano, and Donald Gramm, baritone.

Possibly because of the memorial or sacred nature of the work, or both, Munch discouraged applause and refrained from returning to the stage for a bow.

Second Event

This was the second event in the first of four weekends of Berkshire Festival concerts by the full orchestra in the music shed.

This opening series was devoted mainly to the music of Brahms.

The German Requiem received a stimulating but not a memorable performance. Little more more was to be desired of technique, schooling, and clarity of concept. This might be expected of the orchestra.

Out of Balance

The chorus was not an aggregation of trained singers. Many of them are instrumentalists from the Center.

It was therefore not faulty planning that the chorus is out of balance. The soprano section was eminent. The tenors were best-heard in solo fragments. The contraltos and basses were quite throughly suffocated in tone most of the time.

Brahms' "requiem" requires more than finesse and mechanical perfection. There is no point to reminiscing that he wrote it as an outpouring of grief over the death of his mother and that of Robert Schumann.

He sought for and attained a personal depth of expression that is intimately reflected in the Bibical text upon which it is based. We have had performances in Worcester that were not as resourcefully exciting (mostly with organ accompaniment) but they came close to the core of religious fervor.

Two Sections

Briefly, the "requiem" is divided into two sections with a total of seven selections. The second half begins with part four. The first half is devoted to earthly suffering, lamentations, and mourning over the nothingness of human life.

In the second half, mourning is transformed into pious faith, consolation, and celestial bliss. It ends in triumphant resurrection.

Except for what we heard at the rehearsal yesterday morning and the first half of last night's performance, we cannont comment. This eliminates the last three sections, including Miss Gueden's solos.

The main criticisms of last night's performance, which invited less severe comment than the rehearsal, are based on the incomplete success with which the religious significance was transmitted.

Technical Aspects

One was ever aware of fine technical aspects. Certainly, Munch accomplished a coup in suppressing the violin tone-color in part one to accentuate the work's underlying sobriety. Gramm conveyed unrest and anguish with the short broken phrases of "Lord, make me to know the measure of my days."

He sang with rich quality, but endings were sometimes weak and intonation was not always of the purest.

By and large, the chorus was remiss in that absolute essential—pure enunciation. It would not have required poor hearing or lack of knowledge not to discover until the middle of the second part that they were singing the text in German.

Brahms intended the words to dominate the music, orchestral and vocal. He did not seek a symphonic effect or a contrived recital of instrumental colors. As we said, the general color is somber.

Philosophy

The text contained Brahms' accepted philosophy. It states that the mourned shall be comforted. Flesh is as grass and the glory of man is like the flower of grass. Every man must die. Death is not an eternal annihilation. It leads to a better life on earth.

These are the main issues in any performance that isn't devoted purely and simply to the skills of technical performance.

In last night's performance, the skills were there—finely sculptured phrasing, prompt and decisive changes of volume.

There were moments in the first section in which a fervent religious quality permeated the mechanics. Rich hues and fierce serimusness were in full force during "Behold, all flesh is as the grass." The final stanza of that section, "The redeemed of the Lord shall return again" was brilliantly martial and resplendent in powerful sound.

But one felt that one had witnessed a concert-hall performance of a religious work, and not experienced worship that could take place in such environs.

This afternoon's concert will feature pianist Leon Fleisher in Brahms' first piano concerto. The balance of the program will be Brahms' "Academic Festival Overture," and Stravinsky's "Petrouchka." Pierre Monteux will conduct the Boston Symphony.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292

JUL 24 1958

Grace Notes

TANGLEWOOD
July 18 and 19
By A. C. S.

Charles Munch was on the podium for the first two concerts of the weekend featuring music by Johannes Brahms. The Serenade in D Major, which opened the series, is an early and somewhat experimental work which is rarely performed. It gives ample indication of Brahms' later compositional techniques and is fully satisfying in its own right, especially as presented Friday evening. Equally satisfying was the interpretation of the Fourth Symphony.

Sandwiched between these works was Aaron Copland's Orchestral Variations. Commissioned by the Louisville Orchestra and first performed by them last March, the piece is a colorful transcription of his Piano Variations of 1930. Even with a face lifting they show their age, and are hardly indicative of Copland's present writing.

Saturday evening brought the yearly concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, for which Dr. Munch gave a very personal reading of Brahms' German Requiem. His concept had the ardent impetuousness of a convert rather than the quiet certainty of long-standing faith. Hilde Gueden and Donald Gramm gave excellent account of the solo parts, and the Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross, was most sensitive to the conductor and capable to meet his every demand. While one might disagree with the concept, none could doubt the sincerity of the tribute.

TANGLEWOOD
July 20
By C. D.

Pierre Monteux, now in his 83rd year, took over the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Sunday afternoon and although he looked his years they were immediately forgotten in the assurance and authority of his conducting. He opened with the Brahms Academic Festival Overture, which Brahms wrote as a handsome present to the University of Breslau after it had given him an honorary Degree. The great D minor Piano Concerto of Brahms followed with Leon Fleisher playing the solo part. Mr. Fleisher played all the notes but the great climaxes in the first movement seemed frantic rather than surging and the mystery of the second movement was never apparent. His playing of the last movement, however, was brilliant.

The second half of the program was given over to a miraculously witty and sparkling performance of the entire Petrouchka Suite of Stravinsky which Mr. Monteux had been the first to conduct nearly fifty years ago.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 113,886

JUL 20 1958

KOUSSEVITZKY'S MEMORY HAILED AT TANGLEWOOD

Brahms' 'Requiem' Performance Is Tribute to Festival's Founder

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 19—The memory of the late Serge Koussevitzky burns brightly in the hearts of all who came in contact with him either personally or through his music.

Each year the Boston Symphony Orchestra gives a concert in his memory and tonight 8287 people joined the orchestra, Festival Chorus and soloists in paying this annual tribute to the founder of the Berkshire Festival.

No more appropriate work could have been chosen then "The German Requiem" by Johannes Brahms, for it is a work of singularly personal faith and affirmation of eternal hope.

The solists were Hilda Gueden, soprano, making her first appearance at Tanglewood, and Donald Gramm, basso. Dr. Charles Munch was the conductor. One listened to a powerful presentation of this work; one which ran the gamut of emotions from the calm of contemplation to the extasy of personal affirmation.

There were great moments in the second chorus, "Behold, All Flesh is as the Grass," and some magnificent playing by the orchestra. The work was sung in German, but as far as clarity of enunciation was concerned it might have been sung in any language.

Mr. Gramm, always a dependable singer, enunciated clearly and although the music was not entirely congenial to his voice, he sang with impressive sense of style.

There are few more lovely arias than "Ye Now Are Sorrowful" which Brahms wrote for the soprano. Miss Gueden sang it beautifully, the pure top notes were sung with exceptional beauty and admirable projection. The accompanying chorus was finely modulated.

Chorus of 150

The glory of the work is in its chorus numbers and the festival Chorus of about 150 voices sang them with usually well-balanced tones and awareness of the texts. The tenor section was exceptional and the top sopranos sang freely, even when the tessitura was high. The chorus had been trained by Hugh Ross and his assistants, and Tanglewood audiences have learned to expect only the best from Mr. Ross.

Dr. Munch conducted carefully, phrasing deftly, and never forcing his orchestra or chorus. Beauty of tone and a sensitivity to every nuance were the details most regarded. Thus, a performance of warmth and admirable co-ordination resulted.

Sunday Program

Tomorrow afternoon, Pierre Monteux will direct his first concert of the season. The eminent and venerable French conductor will open the program with Brahms' "Academic Festival overture."

Leon Fleisher, pianist, wil lbe the soloist in the "Piano Concerto No. 1 in D minor" by Brahms. The concluding work will be Stravinsky's ballet "Petrouchka."

Schenectady Gazette - July 21

2 Boston Conductors Give Rehearsal Crowd a Treat

By D. E. KITZ
Gazette Music Editor

Visitors to the first of the Saturday morning rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the huge Shed at Tanglewood had an unusual opportunity last weekend. Pierre Monteux and Charles Munch conducted and Leon Fleisher was piano soloist.

* * *

REHEARSALS start promptly at 10 a.m. and we arrived a full quarter hour before that time, yet the Shed was almost filled back to the boxes. We hastily seated ourselves where we could watch the organ, the performing pianist and have a good profile view of the conductors.

The orchestra was on stage and tuned, and promptly at 10 o'clock Monteux and Fleisher entered from the opposite wing. Without more ado the rehearsal of Brahm's "Concerto number 1" was on.

Fleisher plays with a clean technique and a most business-like approach to the problem in hand and the orchestra was superb. — Yet there were spots where the conductor was not satisfied — and over it they went.

* * *

FOLLOWING the mid rehearsal rest Dr. Munch arrived to conduct the orchestra, organ and Berkshire Festival Chorus in preparation for the evening performance of the Brahms "Requiem." This was given in memory of the late Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, founder of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood and 25-year director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The huge chorus had been prepared by Hugh Ross and was a fine, responsive instrument. Soloists were Hilde Guedon, soprano; and Donald Gramm, baritone.

* * *

WE FOUND the contrasting manners of conducting of Monteux and Munch most interesting. The chorus opened so softly one was not quite sure just when it started and each of the movements of the "Requiem" brought its own beauties. We have heard the choral portion of the requiem on several occassions, but never with such a large chorus and never before with orchestral accompaniment. It is a magnificent work.

The rehearsal closed shortly after noon and we joined many of the rehearsal audience in an impromptu picnic luncheon on the grounds. A short but intense rain drove all to the shelter of the tented picnic spot and later we made a dive for the car through the storm.

* * *

MOUNTAIN AIR can be cool and invigorating and that of last Saturday morning seemed to come direct from the north pole, yet the sun was warm.

The open Saturday morning rehearsals are a favorite with the public at Tanglewood and each year grow in popularity. A moderate fee is charged and proceeds go to the orchestra's pension fund.

Other Shed rehearsals open to the public this year will be held next Saturday morning and on the mornings of Aug. 2 and 9.

BILLBOARD
CINCINNATI, OHIO
Circ. W. 49,359

JUL 28 1958

CONCERT

Brahms Blooms Over Rainy Weekend

At the Tanglewood Festival July 19-20 crowds braved wind and rain clouds to hear the finest concerts of the season. Saturday it was Brahms' "Requiem," with perfect symmetry of ork and chorus achieved under the skilled baton of Charles Munch. He drew a prevailing elegaic mood and a feeling of affirmation of faith from the personal score which exudes ritual and sect. Hilde Gueden and Donald Gramm gave outstanding performances as the soloists, in a highly satisfactory evening.

Sunday, the Boston Symphony Ork was under the direction of Pierre Monteux, who led a fresh and unfaded reading of the Academic Festival Overture. Leon Fleisher gave a vivid, dextrous performance of the Piano Concerto in D Minor, tho he rushed the Rondo a little, accenting the integrated feeling and form of the work. Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" found Monteux in top form, bringing refinements and subtleties to the charming score as well as clarity of rhythm and a great sureness.

Niki Kalish.

OBSCURED TEXT

[125

MILLERTON, N. Y.
NEWS-REPUBLICAN
Circ. W. 3,617

JUL 17 1958

Hilde Gueden, soprano, will sing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Musical Director, in the Brahms Requiem, July 19 at 8:30 in the Shed at Tanglewood. Miss Gueden, born in Vienna, is a leading soprano of the Metropolitan Opera as well as the Vienna State Opera and La Scala, Milan.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 703,449 - S. 882,925

JUL 19 1958

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

Munch Offers Inspirational Brahms Fare

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 19. — With the Boston Symphony Orchestra fully reassembled, the Berkshire Festival entered its Music Shed phase last night.

Following through the plan of great composer weekends, Charles Munch concentrated on Brahms. For variety, however, he included a contemporary work: Copland's "Orchestral Variations," new last March.

The Copland is his "Piano Variations" of 1930 in orchestral dress. On a first hearing, the music sounds like a new piece. It resolves itself [illegible] study of rhythms and [illegible] immersed in a splash of [illegible] orchestral colors.

Since the orchestration [illegible] the listener, the composition assumes a secondary position. Indeed, for the moment the original variations almost get lost amid the clash of instruments, led by the percussion and the brasses.

Stunning Effects

Interesting suggestions of Strauss and Stravinsky flash out of the present version, influences probably quite subconscious.

That the work held attention there was no doubt. Some may have dismissed it as an exercise for orchestral students; others must have found it fascinating just as sound.

The stunning effects, sometimes more literal than figurative, reflected brilliant [illegible] as well as [illegible]. A basic kind [illegible] emerged from [illegible] performance that calls for discussion at some later date.

The Brahms works fell into an alpha and omega pattern: the Serenade No. 1, Opus 11 and the Fourth Symphony, Opus 98.

The former had undergone revision and rescoring, but its essence remains the concept of a young man of 25. It is a gentle work with pastoral leanings and a recognizable quality that matured wonderfully.

Trip Worthwhile

A superb performance of the Symphony made the trip to Tanglewood worthwhile in itself. Called upon to play with extraordinary virtuosity, the orchestra came through superbly.

I always have felt that Munch finds special inspiration in this music. Certainly he was swept up in its greatness last night.

Apparently he has never regarded it as an austere work for he makes it a throbbing, [illegible] creation. He paces it fast, almost too much so to realize the giocoso quality of the third movement, but within his framework he let the music express its inherent magnificence.

The audience of 6,350 was moved to cheers.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,937

JUL 21 1958

Musical Tribute At Tanglewood To Koussevitzky

A sensitive and powerful musical tribute was given to the late Serge Koussevitzky, founder of the Berkshire Festival, Saturday night at Tanglewood.

Brahms' German Requiem for Solo Voices, Chorus, and Orches, Op. 45, which is a reaffirmation of faith in the Lord and man's transitory phase on earth, was chosen for the Boston Symphony's annual concert in memory of Koussevitzky. The text follows various parts of the Lutheran Bible.

A chilling Berkshire evening sent the audience on the lawn for the coyer of woolens, blankets, and in some cases sleeping bags. Combined with listeners in the Shed, the audience totaled 8,287.

They were rewarded with a performance which evoked quiet assurance of faith and grew to majestic proportions at times as the 150-member chorus and the orchestra joined together brilliantly under the direction of Charles Munch.

The success of the German sung work depends primarily upon the chorus which fulfilled its obligation with beautifully shaded tones, singing as one instrument. Backed by the magnificent playing of the orchestra, the chorus was also joined by two soloists, Hilde Gueden, soprano, and Donald Gramm, baritone.

Some of the finest singing in the concert was provided by Miss Gueden. Her flawless diction and sensitive shading combined with clearness of tone for an exceptional performance. To his solos, Mr. Gramm brought drama and strength.

The seven-part work opened with "blessed are they that mourn," which varied from somber to ecstatic passages, and the joining of the entire chorus in organ-like richness.

Another buildup to a great momentum by the chorus in the second part, "behold, all flesh is as grass," was answered by the orchestra's plaintive mood and another buildup, an affirmation of faith sung by orchestra and chorus.

The women's soprano voices were exceptionally sweet in the third section in which Mr. Gramm sang a dramatic solo. Following a reverberating fourth section, Miss Gueden colored the inspiring "ye now are sorrowful" aria with exceptional singing. A heraldic sixth section moved to repetition of the quiet and majestic phrasing in the final section.

The Sunday afternoon concert attracted 9,154 persons who listened to Pierre Monteux conct the orchestra in Brahm's Academic Festival Overture, Op 80, and Brahms Piano Concerto No. 1 in D minor, Op. 15, with Leon Fleisher at the piano. The concert closed with a performance of Stravinsky's "Petrouchka."

I. R. M.

[126]

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 408,150 - S. 281,019

JUL 21 1958

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Berkshire Concerts Draw 23,776

Lenox, Mass., July 21—The October temperatures, which have prevailed here, were scarcely sympathetic to swimming or outdoor concert going, but, nonetheless, the Brahms week-end at Tanglewood drew a total of 23,776 music lovers for three events.

The 83-year-old Pierre Monteux, whose mastery and inspiration continue unabated despite his years, conducted yesterday afternoon's concert which featured two Brahms works and the Suite from Stravinsky's "Petrouchka."

In tribute to the maestro, the orchestra spontaneously rose when he entered the Shed. A Berkshire Festival favorite, this was his first appearance of the season. He led the opening Brahms "Academic Overture" with such vitality and enthusiasm, besides exemplary discipline and balance among the orchestral choirs, that a portion of the audience caught by his contagion, broke its bounds seconds before the piece ended.

Their applause was of short duration, however, when they realized that he had a few more bars to go.

The composer's D Minor Concerto followed, with the 30-year old American pianist, Leon Fleischer, as soloist. Monteux, who officiated at his public debut in 1943 in San Francisco, accompanied him with the utmost sensitivity. Fleischer's accounting of the Concerto, however, though it showed evidence of concentrated study and devotion, did not come through with the same positive results.

While this music is a youthful work, completed by Brahms when he was 25 and sketched several years before, it is one of his most profound creations and among the most difficult, both to play and to interpret, in the pianist's concerto repertory.

Fleischer appeared to be under tension and often landed into the instrument with a percussive tone and a driven approach. His playing of the slow movement, nonetheless, had many beautiful moments and augured well for future performances, when the piece will have entered his thinking in a more seasoned form.

Monteux, who conducted the world premiere of "Petrouchka" with the Diaghilev Ballet in 1911, has long been celebrated for his performances of the "Suite" and the audience cheered him militantly at its conclusion.

Brahm's "Requiem" Saturday

Saturday night's performance of the Brahms "Requiem," with Charles Munch on the podium, and with baritone Donald Gramm and soprano Hilde Gueden as soloists, communicated a heat that was the antithesis of the chilly atmosphere.

By its nature, any Requiem is sombre music, but the Brahms version is more so than usual. Munch, however, rises magnificently to just such a challenge and he projected a rendition which alternated immense dramatic impact with profound tenderness of feeling for the several sections of melodic loveliness.

The Festival Chorus, that had been trained by Hugh Ross, not only performed with technical excellence, but responded to Munch's wishes with a variety of emotions which transmitted the different moods with strong conviction.

Gramm sang with impressive musicianship and interpreted well, but his voice missed something in smoothness and warmth. Miss Gueden's lyric-coloratura has not, by its nature, the mellow quality needed for the fifth section, an expression of sorrow and comfort, and it appeared difficult for her to control her breath at the deliberate tempo Munch indicated. Her superior artistry, however, was, as usual, most satisfying.

Among next week-end's highlights will be performances by violinist Zino Francescatti, of the Tchaikovsky Concerto, and by pianist Byron Janis, of the Rachmaninoff Third Concerto, with Munch conducting.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 408,150 - S. 281,019

JUL 20 1958

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Brahms Opens Lenox Shed Concerts

Lenox, Mass., July 19—A cool, clear Friday night abetted the naturally excellent acoustics of the Berkshire Festival's 6,000-seat Music Shed here at Tanglewood for the opening of the orchestral concerts by the full complement of the Boston Symphony. Though an ensemble of 35 men has played Bach and Mozart for the past fortnight, the personnel of 105 strong had its first official appearance on the current occasion.

The joyous serenade No. 1 in D Major plus the Fourth Symphony in E Minor by Brahms made up the opening and closing, respectively, of the event and thus comprised its major portion. In the middle were "orchestral variations," by Aaron Copland, head of the Berkshire Music Center's composition department.

Charles Munch on the podium made a happy choice by opening with a piece of relaxed music associated with being performed out-of-doors or at least intended for less than the most austere occasions. While the serenade's scherzo went its festive way with swinging rhythms, and the minuets enjoyed their pastoral melodies, Munch, more than anybody, appeared to be influenced by the delightful sounds.

He matched Brahm's effervescence by his own actions and reactions. He raised his heels, he beat with both arms, and he swayed a bit, all in time, of course, with the composer. Meanwhile, the Bostonians were sounding their most sumptuous, with the absence of humidity contributing to the brilliance and mellowness, especially of the strings.

Copland Takes Bow

During the Brahms Symphony, Munch was his most dynamic self. At times, he drove the orchestra to be more excitable than exciting but there was far more of the latter kind of electric tension. Remembering that he must transmit vibrations to the multitude on the grass outside as well as the thousands inside, he urged the timpani in the first and third movements to beat as if they were announcing the entrance of Jupiter himself.

He also inspired the cellos, for instance, in the Andante to play as if they were suffused with mellowness of mood while making resplendent [illegible]. The combination was enough to make this listener feel regret when the movement came to an end.

Copeland's "Variations" are an orchestration of his "Piano Variations," and as such they are scored imaginatively. They abound in effects which enhance the dramatic nature of the music itself. The composer was present and took a-bow at the work's conclusion.

The pleasant weather was, nonetheless, not warm enough to draw thousands to the grounds outside, therefore a relatively small total of 6,350 attended. They gave orchestra and maestro a tumultuous ovation at the conclusion of the program.

Sunday afternoon's concert will feature pianist Leon Fleischer in the D Minor Brahms Concerto under the direction of Pierre Monteux.

Music Sunday . . .

Guggenheim Memorial Concert by Goldman Band, Richard Franko Goldman conducting. On the Mall, Central Park, 8:30.

Seuffert Band, George F. Seuffert, conductor. Music Grove, Forest Park, Queens, 3.

Closing . . .

"OH CAPTAIN!" at the Alvin, after 192 performances.

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION
Circ. D. 61,009 - S. 119,412
JUL 8 1958

SHOWERS FAIL TO DAMPEN SPIRITS:

3,000 Hear Tanglewood Music

By EDGAR S. VAN OLINDA

In spite of area showers, Tanglewood finished its opening week in a blaze of glory. Some of the events scheduled for the small theatre were transfered to the big shed to accomodate the near 3,000 music lovers who braved the elements. The climax to the three weekend concerts was a magnificent performance of Bach's B Minor Mass, with the combined choruses of the Harvard Glee Club, the Radcliffe Choral Society and 35 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by G. Wallace Goodrich, who is retiring after 25 years as director of both groups.

BIG OVATION

Goodrich received a tremendous ovation by the audience, the orchestra and the chorus at the end of the work. The soloists were Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, mezzo-soprano; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass.

Friday night's concert, in the small theatre, directed by Charles Munch, consisted of the Bach Suites 1, 2, 3, and 4, featuring Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist and only woman member of the orchestra, whose artistry was acclaimed following her solos.

Saturday evening's concert in the big shed included the Bach Piano Concerto in D Minor, with Lukas Foss as soloist. The young virtuoso's immaculate technic and musical insight were never heard to better advantage. He was recalled to the podiom with Munch several times to acknowledge the applause.

MOZART FEATURE

The second series of weekend concerts in the small theatre will feature the music of Mozart. The Friday night program will include his Musical Joke and the Sinfonia Concertante, with Ruth Posselt, violinist, and Joseph De Pasquale, violist as soloists. The main work will be the "Lina" Symphony, conducted by Munch.

Friday night the program will include "Eine Kleine Nachtmusic," the two-piano concerto, with Seymous Lipkin and Lukas Foss as soloists; Serenade No. 10 and Symphony No. 40. Sunday afternoon's concert, also in the small theatre, conducted by Munch and Hugh Ross will include the Haffner Symphony, the Piano Concert in C-Major, with Seymour Lipkin as soloist.

[127]

7/19

Gazette

Program Given For Tanglewood Concert Monday

The program is announced for the concert of contemporary chamber music to be presented at Tanglewood on Monday at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Sponsored by the Fromm Foundation of Chicago, the concert will be performed by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and guest artists.

The program will open with the Sonata for Violin and Piano No. 2 by Charles Ives performed by Ruth Posselt and Luise Vosgerchian. The Quintet for Winds by Robert Lombardo which was commissioned by the Fromm Music Foundation will receive its first performance at this concert.

"Ragtime" by Igor Stravinsky and Ocho per Radio (Radio Octet by Silvestre Revueltas will be performed by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Richard Burgin. The first performance of Woodwind Quintet by David Diamond, commissioned by the Fromm Music Foundation will be followed by Chamber Music No. 2 (Piano Concert) Op. 36 No. 1 by Paul Hindemith conducted by Richard Burgin with Luise Vosgerchian as soloists.

Members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra who will take part in the program include: Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; Rosario Mazzeo, bass clarinet; Sherman Walt, bassoon; James Stagliano, horn; Roger Voisin, trumpet; William Gibson, trombone; Everett Firth, percussion; Bernard Zighera, piano; Alfred Krips and George Zazofsky, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello, and George Moleux, bass.

Paul Fromm of Chicago, president of the Fromm Foundation, will be at Tanglewood for the concert.

Music is Work at Tanglewood

By ARTHUR JACOBS

LENOX, MASS., U.S.A.

IMAGINE that the Hallé Orchestra had a regular summer festival site in the Malvern Hills, with audiences sometimes exceeding 10,000 people. Imagine, further, that the orchestra's leading players were instructors at a concurrently held summer school attracting 300 of the keenest young musicians.

Only by some such leap of fancy can the British music-lover appreciate the achievement of Tanglewood. This is the estate from which Hawthorne borrowed the name for his "Tanglewood Tales" a century ago. It lies in the New England village of Lenox in the Berkshire Mountains (Berkshire pronounced as spelt). Here, some 135 miles from Boston, the Boston Symphony Orchestra comes each summer.

Five thousand listeners can sit in the huge, open-ended "Music Shed," and thousands more on the grass beyond. Many drive from New York (about 145 miles) for the pleasure of a Tanglewood week-end.

◆ ◆ ◆

THE participation of one of the world's great orchestras in an event which is both festival and school makes Tanglewood unique. Its pull is almost world-wide. How astonishing for a British music critic to find, among the students here, both the winner and the runner-up in the recent conducting competition held by the Royal Liverpool Philharmonic Orchestra—respectively Mr. Zubin Mehta, an Indian trained in Vienna, and Mr. Wyn Morris of South Wales.

The students attend the Boston Symphony Orchestra's concerts—though it is to be hoped they do not base their ideas of Mozart on the heavy treatment accorded to him by Charles Munch's baton at a concert last week-end. The students' own orchestra, partly under student conductors, gives a public concert, not as an end-of-school fling, but once a week—thus working "under professional tensions," in the phrase of Tanglewood's administrator, Mr. Leonard Burkat. I heard a fair-to-good performance of Schubert, Shostakovich, William Schuman, and (a challenge) Anton Webern.

◆ ◆ ◆

EXCEPT for a few who follow a less active course, the students enrol for a full six-week term. This marks off Tanglewood from our English summer schools of music, with their less arduous and more holidayish atmosphere. Tanglewood knows not elevenses nor afternoon cricket. Time for undergraduate recreation is slight, though undergraduate humour surely dictates the office notices which read: "Psylentz."

Miss Thea Musgrave—a young Scottish composer, whose music has been heard at the Edinburgh Festival—for some years taught at Dartington (Devon), the most "intellectual" of England's own summer music courses. Here at Tanglewood she gladly reverts to pupil status. In Mr. Aaron Copland's composition classes which she attends, a group of young professional chamber music players is on hand to demonstrate unusual sonorities as no textbook could. Mr. Copland is, in effect, Tanglewood's academic director, though Mr. Munch is the titular head.

◆ ◆ ◆

A WALK round the green grounds and their buildings suggests new Tanglewood tales. On a blackboard, Mr. Milton Babbitt writes Si, J—> TSi, j+t: he is demonstrating the mathematics underlying twelve-note music.

Mr. Rosario Mazzeo, a clarinettist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, coaches a wind quintet which includes a young London clarinettist, Miss Patricia Lissack. Mr. Boris Goldovsky, in charge of opera, makes a sports-shirted youngster into an older Don Pasquale: "A little rheumatism? a little sclerosis?" And here is Hugh Ross, the choral conductor, who, in elbow-patched sports jacket, still looks very English: after all, he has lived in America only for twenty-nine years.

Sunday Times, July 20th, 1958.

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 53,178

JUL 19 1958

Spain Takes the Floor

HILDE GUEDEN—She'll solo in Brahms' Requiem next Saturday at Tanglewood.

The coming week's most colorful attraction promises to be a Spanish ballet company, which will occupy the entire program at the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival.

The Ximenez-Vargas Spanish Ballet consists of 17 dancers, Flamenco singers and guitarists. Roberto Ximenez and Manolo Vargas, its choreographers and artistic directors, organized the troupe in 1950, and it came to this country a few months ago.

The company will present a ballet, provincial suites (such as the rhythms of Catalonia and the lively fandango of Salamanca) and character vignettes. An extra performance has been scheduled for Thursday night.

The Berkshire Festival will be thoroughly installed in the Music Shed at Tanglewood after tonight's and tomorrow's performances of Mozart. Next weekend Brahms is the favorite, and there will also be touches of Copland and Stravinsky. Next Saturday night: Brahms' Requiem, with Hilde Gueden and Donald Gramm among the singers.

ROBERTO XIMENEZ—He'll do Spanish dances next week at Jacob's Pillow.

* * *

ADELE ADDISON (who must just be back from her honeymoon) will give a song recital Wednesday night at Tanglewood. And the festival students will be presenting symphonic, chamber music and operatic programs throughout the week.

Wilbur de Paris and his New Orleans Jazz Band (traditional flavored with modern) are due back at the Berkshire Music Barn, and also coming are Anita O'Day and her trio, on Thursday, and folk singers Marais and Miranda, next Saturday. (The presentation of Leonard Bernstein's "Trouble in Tahiti" this afternoon has been replaced by a program of Kansas City jazz.)

At Woodstock, the Turnau Opera Players will add Mozart's colorful "Abduction from the Seraglio" to the repertory next Friday and Saturday, and Tuesday's performance of "Hansel and Gretel" is already sold out.

* * *

THE MAVERICK HALL concert tomorrow will feature the Kraeuter Duo (brother and sister violin-cello team) in chamber works by Bach, Barber, Kodaly, Bartok and Frank Bridge. Next Saturday Ruth Conway, mezzo-soprano, will give a recital.

ADELE ADDISON—The soprano will present a song recital Wednesday night at Tanglewood.

At the Southern Vermont Art Center tonight an English version of Donizetti's "Don Pasquale" will be sung by the New England Opera Theater, a group led by Boris Goldovsky. Next Saturday the official state drama of Vermont, "Vermontiana '58," will be performed.

WILBUR DE PARIS — His new New Orleans jazz is coming back to the Music Barn.

TANGLEWOOD'S STUDENTS—The student orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center rehearses for one of its concerts in the Tanglewood shed. The summer school of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will also produce performances of chamber music, choral music and opera.

Week Ahead in Music and Dance

TONIGHT

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., 8:30, Music Shed. Serge Koussevitzky Memorial Concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch; Hilde Gueden and Donald Gramm, soloists; festival chorus.

Requiem .... Brahms

JACOB'S PILLOW DANCE FESTIVAL, Lee, Mass., 4, 9. Geoffrey Holder and company, in dances of Trinidad and the Caribbean; Ram Gopal, in dances of India; Sahomi Tachibana, in dances of Japan.

SOUTHERN VERMONT ART CENTER, Manchester, Vt., 8:30. Singers of the New England Opera Company, in an English version of Donizetti's "Don Pasquale."

TURNAU OPERA PLAYERS, Byrdcliffe Theater, Woodstock, 8:30. Rossini's "Cinderella."

TOMORROW

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL, 10, Chamber Music Hall. Chamber music by students of the Berkshire Music Center. 2:30, Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Pierre Monteux.

Academic Festival Overture; Piano Concerto No. 1 in D Minor (Léon Fleisher, soloist) .... Brahms
Petrouchka .... Stravinsky

BERKSHIRE MUSIC BARN, Lenox, Mass., 8:30. Wilbur De Paris and his New New Orleans Jazz Band.

JACOB'S PILLOW, 8:30. Special Events Series, with Carola Goya and Matteo in "Spain in Review" — a Dance Panorama."

MAVERICK CONCERTS, Maverick Hall, Woodstock, 4. Chamber music program with Karl Kreutner, violin; Phyllis Kreutner, cello; Joseph Wolman, piano.

MONDAY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL, 8:30, Theater-Concert Hall. Opera program by students of the Berkshire Music Center; excerpts from Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet" and the complete Donizetti's "Don Pasquale."

TUESDAY

JACOB'S PILLOW, 9. Ximenez-Vergas Spanish Ballet: 17 dancers, Flamenco singers and guitarists.

Sin Quererlo Ni Buscarlo, Petenera, Petenera (ballet in two scenes based on the legend of the Petenera).
Dos Canciones .... Falla
El Limpiabotas .... Albeniz
Impresiones Obericas .... Agama
Suite Aragonesa ...... Falla and Doura
De Querer Amores .... Agama
Danza del Chivato .... Pittaluga
Suite Americana (Peru, Argentina, Cuba, Mexico)
En Mi Jaca Voy a Cadiz ...... Doura
Zapateado del Estampio .... Ximenez
Cuadro Flamenco Doura and Valadez

WEDNESDAY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL, 8:30, Theater-Concert Hall. Recital by Adele Addison, soprano; James Payne, accompanist.

Four songs by Scarlatti, four songs by Schubert, Schumann's "Frauenliebe und Luben," three songs by Hindemith, Debussy's "Songs of Bilitis" and works by Sessions, Strilko, Copland and Ives.

JACOB'S PILLOW, 9. Same as Tuesday's program.

TURNAU OPERA PLAYERS, 8:30. Menotti's "The Telephone" and Honigman's "The Ticket."

THURSDAY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL, 8:30. Music Shed. Concert by the student orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center.

BERKSHIRE MUSIC BARN, 8:30. Anita O'Day and her trio.

JACOB'S PILLOW, 4, 9. Same as Tuesday's program.

FRIDAY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL, 3:15. Chamber Music Hall. Seminar on the music of Marc Blitzstein; introductory talk by Mr. Blitzstein; performance by the Fromm Fellowship Players.

Triple-Sec; Serenade for String Quartet (first movement); Piano Sonata; Nickel Under the Foot, from "The Cradle Will Rock"; aria from Act III of "Regina"; excerpts from "The Threepenny Opera" and "June"; Three Offenbach Songs .... Blitzstein

8:30, Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Pierre Monteux.

"Russian and Ludmilla" Overture .... Glinka
Symphony No. 4 .... Tchaikowsky
"Les Eumenides" Overture .. Milhaud
Three Nocturnes .... Debussy
"La Valse" .... Ravel

JACOB'S PILLOW, 4, 9. Same as Tuesday's program.

TURNAU OPERA PLAYERS, 8:30. Mozart's "Abduction From the Seraglio."

SATURDAY, JULY 26

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL, 10, Music Shed. Open rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

8:30, Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch.

Canticum Sacrum (Blake Stern, tenor; baritone .... Stravinsky
Piano Concerto No. 3 (Byron Janis, soloist) .... Rachmaninoff
"La Mer" .... Debussy

BERKSHIRE MUSIC BARN, 3:30. Marais and Miranda, folk singers.

JACOB'S PILLOW, 4, 9. Same as Tuesday's program.

MAVERICK CONCERTS, 8:15. Recital by Ruht Conway, soprano, assisted by Ilse Sass, piano, and the Woodstock Quartet.

SOUTHERN VERMONT ART CENTER, 8:30. "Vermontiana '58," a musical pageant telling the story of Vermont.

TURNAU OPERA PLAYERS, 8:30. Mozart's "Abduction From the Seraglio."

PIERRE MONTEUX — The old maestro will conduct two concerts at the Berkshire Festival next week.

BLANK PAGE

MILLERTON, N. Y.
NEWS-REPUBLICAN
Circ. W. 3,617

JUL 17 1958

RED HOOK, N. Y.
ADVERTISER
Circ. W. 925

JUL 17 1958

ADELE ADDISON, a former Berkshire Music Center student, will appear July 23 in a song recital in the fourth of the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music Concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The concert ~~will be held in the Theatre~~ at 8:30. Miss Addison has graciously donated her services to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,541

JUL 24 1958

ADELE ADDISON SONG RECITAL WELL RECEIVED

Former Tanglewood Student in Effective Performance

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 23—Adele Addison soprano, a former student at Tanglewood and now one of the finest ~~recitalists~~ in the country, sang tonight in the theater-concert hall before a most discriminating audience. She was accompanied by James Payne.

Audience Charmed

In a program of songs rainging from Scarlatti to Hindemith, Copland and Sessions, she completely charmed her audience, not only through her great personal charm but through the beauty of her voice and her supurb musicianship.

She was particularly effective in Schumann's wonderful cycle "Die Frauenliebe und Leben." With ease and naturalness, she traversed the many moods of these songs which range from supreme joy to dispair. Her innate sensitivity to text was apparent in everything she sang. Another splendid bit of interpretation was revealed in Schubert's "Erlafsee" and "Suleika No. 2."

The four Scarlotti songs were finely differentiated and sung with great skill. Another group of songs which gave pleasure and caused real excitement were the "Chansons de Belitis" by Debussy. Particularly effective was "Le Tombeau des Malades."

Hall Is Quiet

Paul Hindemith was well served as Miss Addison sang three songs, "On Hearing the Last Rose of Summer," "The Whistlin's Thief" and "La Belle Dame Sans Merci." One could only admire the singer's enunciation of the Italian, French and German texts. Each word was crystal clear. The same may be said of her singing in English.

Sessions' song "On the Beach of Fontana" and Copland's delightful "Dirge in the Woods" were sung with taste and polish. Also interesting was "Pandora," by Strilko, and "The See'r Talking," by Ives.

The audience which patently knew its way around singing, was completely enraptured by this recital. The hall was absolutely quiet during the singing and there was warm applause after each number. Miss Addison will be heard at the final concert of the festival when Beethoven's Symphony No. 9 will be performed.

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 102,839

JUL 15 1958

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 113,886

JUL 20 1958

B. Eagle - July 19

Whitestone

ADELE ADDISON, a former Berkshire Music Center student, and frequent Festival soloist, will appear Wednesday in a song recital in the fourth of the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts. The concert will be held in the theater concert hall at 8:30. Miss Addison has donated her services to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center.

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Cir. 2,498

JUN 26 1958

American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 176,318

JUN 26 1958

Adele Addison To Sing Tonight At Tanglewood

Adele Addison, soprano, will be heard in a song recital in the Chamber Music Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight at 8.30.

Miss Addison, a native of Springfield and for several years a student of opera at the Berkshire Music Center, has offered to donate her services for this concert to benefit the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund.

Miss Addison will be accompanied at the piano by James Payne and her program will include four songs by Alessandro Scarlatti, four songs by Schubert, the "Frauenliebe und Leben" of Robert Schumann, three songs by Paul Hindemith, Debussy's "Songs of Bilitis," and works by Sessions, Strilko, Copland and Ives.

The Kroll String Quartet, headed by William Kroll, Associate Head of the Chamber Music Department of the Berkshire Music Center, will be heard at the two final concerts in the Wednesday evening series on July 30 and Aug. 6.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,566

JUL 23 1958

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 204,395

JUL 23 1958

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,541

JUL 23 1958

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,138

JUL 23 1958

Adele Addison Recital Tonight At Tanglewood

Lenox, July 22—Adele Addison, soprano, will be heard in a song recital in the Chamber Music Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, tomorrow night at 8.30. Miss Addison, a native of Springfield for several years a student of opera at the Berkshire Music Center, is donating her services for this concert to benefit the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund. All proceeds of the Wednesday evening chamber music concerts are donated to this fund.

Miss Addison will be accompanied at the piano by James Payne and her program will include four songs by Alessandro Scarlatti, four songs by Schubert, the "Frauenliebe und Leben" of Robert Schumann, three songs by Paul Hindemith, Debussy's "Songs of Bilitis," and works by Sessions, Strilko, Copland, and Ives.

The Kroll String Quartet, headed by William Kroll, associate head of the chamber music department of the Berkshire Music Center, will be heard at the two final concerts in the Wednesday evening series on July 30 and Aug. 6.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

JUL 1 1958

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 50,969

JUN 29 1958

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159

JUL 4 - 1958

Adele Addison Will Give Concert At Tanglewood

Adele Addison

TANGLEWOOD—Adele Addison, soprano, will be heard in a song recital in the fourth of the Wednesday evening chamber music concerts at the theater-concert hall on July 23 at 8:30. Miss Addison, who will be accompanied by James Payne at the piano, will present a program including songs of Scarlatti, Schubert, Hindemith, Sessions, Strilko, Copland and Ives.

The program will also include Schumann's "Frauenliebe und Leben" and Debussy's "Chansons de Bilitis." Miss Addison, a former student of the Berkshire Music Center, has consented to donate her services for this concert, the proceeds of which will benefit the school's Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund.

Miss Addison will replace Miss Margaret Harshaw, who was previously announced for July 23. Tickets for the concert are now available at the Tanglewood box office.

DENVER, COLO.
POST
Circ. D. 248,890 - S. 347,768

29 1958

OBSCURED TEXT

THE SPECTATOR

By LARRY TAJIRI

Adele Addison, Spouse Tried Hard to Avoid Hullabaloo

THE phone rang and Adele Addison crossed the room to answer it. "I've been keeping myself very busy during the day," she assured the caller. "I'm still writing thank you notes for wedding gifts." Miss Addison and Norman Berger, assistant director of prosthetic education at New York University, were married in Springfield, Mass., on June 29. The wedding story was widely published, particularly because of its interracial aspects. "It must have been in every paper [illegible] the United States," she said. "We're still getting letters." Then, she added with dismay: "We did try so hard to avoid hullaballoo, but I guess there's nothing sacred any more."

ADELE ADDISON
"Creation's" angel Gabriel.

Miss Addison, one of Aspen's favorites these past two years, is a lyric soprano and will sing the role of the Angel Gabriel in the first staging ever of Haydn's "The Creation" at Red Rocks Tuesday and Thursday nights. The final event of the Red Rocks Music Festival will also have as soloists the Met's Mack Harrell and Denver's John Anglim and Jean Kostelic. More than 400 persons are involved in the production, including the University of Colorado choir and a large pantomime ballet which will depict the creation of the world.

●

"NORM wanted to come with me to Denver," Miss Addison said, "but he's in the midst of preparing his fall work." The soprano and the prosthetics expert met some years back when he was attending Springfield college. "We met at a gymnastics meet," she said.

"I WAS born in New York City but was brought up in Springfield by my aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. James Addison," Adele said. "They adopted me when my parents separated, so that I could keep attending school in Springfield."

Adele Addison has been singing ever since she can remember. "I guess I've never been able to do anything else." She recalls her first role in a junior high production. "I played a straw doll whose side was torn and the stuffing was coming out," she recalls. "I had a song ('I have a pain in my sawdust, something's the matter with me')."

Miss Addison's first starring role was in a junior high show called "The Riddle of Isis." "I was the Egyptian Isis and quite proud of myself. I was about [illegible] then, and when I think about it now, I imagine it must have been dreadful."

At Classical High School in Springfield Miss Addison met Hazel Clark, a teacher who took a deep interest in her voice. Miss Clark staged an annual oratorio and soloists from the Metropolitan came annually (Donald Dame, Eleanor Steber, Agnes Davis) to sing with the high school orchestra and chorus. Miss Addison sang the youth in "Elijah" and appeared in Verdi's "Requiem." Some years later she returned to Classical High as the guest artist, the soloist in Gounod's "Requiem." By that time she was singing summers at Tanglewood, and had appeared as soloist with the Boston Symphony.

●

AFTER finishing school (Westminster Choir College in Princeton, N.J.) Miss Addison got her first job, working in music education with Negro youngsters for a Baptist group in Birmingham, Ala. It was her first experience in the Deep South. "I found that the children knew nothing of music," she said. "They were no more or [illegible] than children anywhere else, and some of them didn't know the most elementary of nursery rhymes."

"The work was rewarding spiritually, but not financially," Miss Addison declared. "The church was poor and couldn't afford a salary, and finally I had to return to Massachusetts."

NOW ESTABLISHED as one of music's outstanding lyric sopranos, Miss Addison has found her Negro ancestry neither help nor hindrance in her career. "Perhaps it's because it hasn't been exploited," she said. "I have never been unaware of racial issues. I have decided how I feel about things, but I have not been militant about my views."

Miss Addison, with the New York City Center Opera for the past three years, has sung most of the lyric soprano roles in opera, from Mimi in "La Boheme" to Liu, the Tartar maid, in Puccini's "Turandot."

●

TWO music schools loom large in Miss Addison's background. There is Tanglewood in Massachusetts, where she studied three summers in the opera workshop, and Aspen, where she taught in 1956 and 1957.

"I have appeared at Tanglewood twice this summer and will be there again next week," Miss Addison said. "I had hoped to visit Aspen this trip, but probably won't be able to make it. Meanwhile, I'm looking forward to Red Rocks."

OBSCURED TEXT

MISS ADDISON walked to the window and tested the window pane. "I'd like to get some of this fresh mountain air, but I suppose the windows have to remain closed because of the air conditioning," she said. "After the east, this weather is wonderful."

Miss Addison is planning to fly Friday to New York, though she'd like to remain longer in Colorado. "Norm and I want to get down to the beach," she said.

EAGLE 7/24

Music Review

Soprano Adele Addison

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

A SONG RECITAL by soprano Adele Addison in the Theater-Concert Hall, at Tanglewood last night was the fourth in the Wednesday night series of what, in all other cases, has been chamber music. Miss Addison's remarkable vocal refinement and sense of good taste easily came close enough to that category of music to satisfy the select audience which gave her such enthusiastic approval.

Her program was chosen for a sophisticated audience, ranging from four astonishingly advanced songs of Alessandro Scarlatti through Schubert, Schumann, Hindemith, Debussy, and, to close, an American group. Her initial song "O pace del mio cor," from the founder of the Scarlatti dynasty, found Miss Addison yet a trifle hampered by a few vocal cobwebs which shaded the extremely demanding phrases a trifle. Once past that hurdle, however, she was not only in exceptional command of her resources but revealed also, so far as Tanglewood was concerned, a new and expanded perspective of herself as an artist. One was always aware that this was an interpreter, not the mere possessor of a facile and fervent vocal resonance. She shaped everything she sang with musical intelligence.

* * *

IN HER program making, Miss Addison alternated more or less regularly between sombre and lively moods. Thus immediately in her second Scarlatti, "Tornero con lingue d'odori," she showed why the old term "allegro" is still retained in music, for never did a singer express "allegresse" more vividly and briskly. Her voice had an alacrity, never forsaking a reassuring security, that carried us with her on flights of uninhibited happiness.

Her breath control in the third song, "Lontananza crudele,", revealed incredible resources. The crescendo she achieved as she maintained the long ascending meaningful line increased as her supply of breath diminished and was an example of the command she used all the evening.

* * *

MISS ADDISON did no better singing than in her German lieder. In the Schubert she used judicious restraint and charming grace to express the four deeply felt songs, but, for us, the peak of the evening was the "Frauenliebe und Leben," the short cycle of Schumann. Miss Addison sang all the eight songs and truly ran the gamut of vocal expression. She sang them without pause or interruption for applause and made the narrative lucid and vivid, contrasting dramatically the poignancy and the bliss of Schumann's simplicity. Then, at the end, when accompanist James Payne played the coda of "Thou hast given me my first grief" which consists of the initial song "Since I first saw him," the vocalist stood silent and the effect was awesome.

* * *

AFTER intermission, we still were too imbued with the spirit of Miss Addison's Schumann to enjoy the intrusion of the first two coarse attempts at humor contained in her Hindemith choices. We think she squandered her talents on these, and we were happy when she arrived at the Debussy "Chansons de Bilitis" where she was again in fertile territory.

The quality of her voice at its smallest issuance never varied from the rich power and attributes it contains at its complete release. The distant semi-parlando of "la flute de pan" found music that was practically instinctive to her artistry. Of all the aspiring young vocalists who have passed through the school of the Berkshire Music Center, Miss Addison is one of the most distinguished, and the tremendous progress she has made and the recognition she has received in the musical world leaves no doubt in the minds of any who have followed her career of why she truly has become "la demoiselle elue."

* * *

SHE CLOSED her program with an effectively bleak "On the beach at Fontana" of Roger Sessions, a virtuoso vocal exhibition in "Pandora" of Anthony Strilko, the "Dirge in the Woods" of Copland, which was remarkably suited to her voice, and two witty sketches of Charles Ives, "the See'r" and "Walking." Miss Addison graciously pointed out in the audience one of her former mentors, Aaron Copland, after she sang his song.

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

[133]

KINGSTON, N. Y.
FREEMAN
Circ. D. 15,969

JUL 14 1958

First Evening of Berkshire Music Center Opera at Tanglewood Monday, July 21

The fist of the Berkshire Music Center student events for Tanglewood's fourth week will be an evening of opera scenes Monday, July 21 at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Members of the Opera Department, under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, will present excerpts from Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet" and Donizetti's "Don Pasquale" complete. The Opera Department is this season maintained through the Leadership Training Program of the New England Opera Theatre and the program of opera is open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center. Another evening of opera scenes will be held on Monday, July 28, and the production of Rossini's "Count Ory" on August 4 and August 5 should be requested from the Friends Offce at Tanglewood.

The weekly concert of the student orchestra will be held on Thursday, July 24 at 8:30 in the Music Shed, and the student chamber music concert on Sunday at 10 a. m. in the Chamber Music Hall. A Composer's Forum will be held on Sunday evening at 8:30, also in the Chamber Music Hall.

Marc Blitzstein will speak on Friday afternoon, July 25 at 3:15 in the fourth Seminar in Contemporary Music at the Chamber Music Hall. Mr. Blitzstein will speak on his own music and musical illustrations following his talk will include a complete one-act opera "Triple Sec", the first movement of his Serenade for String Quartet, a Piano Sonata, songs from "The Cradle Will Rock" and "Regina", Three Offenbach Songs, performed by Fromm Fellowship students and students from other Berkshire Music Center Departments. Mr. Blitzstein himself will play and sing excerpts from "The Three Penny Opera" and "Juno."

The Seminar, under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation, and the other student events of the week are open to Friends of the school. Further information may be obtained from the Friends Office, Tanglewood.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 113,886

JUL 20 1958

HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE 7/19

First Evening Of Opera At Tanglewood Monday

The first of the Berkshire Music Center student events for Tanglewood's fourth week will be an evening of opera scenes Monday night at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Members of the opera department, under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, will prsent excerpts from Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet" and Donizetti's "Don Pasquale" complete.

The opera department is maintained this season through the leadership training program of the New England Opera Theatre and the program of opera is open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Another evening of opera scenes will be held on Monday, July 28, and the production of Rossini's "Count Ory" on Aug. 4 and 5 should be requested from the friends office at Tanglewood.

The weekly concert of the student orchestra will be held on Thursday, July 24 at 8:30 in the Music Shed, and the student chamber music concert on Sunday at 10 a.m. in the Chamber Music Hall. A Composer's Forum will be held on Sunday evening at 8:30, also in the Chamber Music Hall.

Marc Blitzstein will speak on Friday afternoon, July 25, at 3:15 in the fourth Seminar in Contemporary Music at the Chamber Music Hall. Mr. Blitzstein will speak on his own music and musical illustrations following his talk will include a complete one-act opera "Triple Sec," the first movement of his Serenade for String Quartet, a Piano Sonata, songs from "The Cradle Will Rock" and "Regina," Three Offenbach Songs, performed by Fromm Fellowship students and students from other Berkshire Music Center Departments. Mr. Blitzstein himself will play and sing excerpts from "The Three penny Opera" and "Juno."

The seminar, under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation, and the other student events of the week are open to friends of the school. Further information may be obtained from the Friends Office, Tanglewood.

For the final program of the weekend on Sunday afternoon, July 27, at 2:30, Dr. Munch will conduct Bartok's Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta, the second suite from Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" and Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto in D major with Zino Francescatti as soloist.

The orchestra's final rehearsal for the concerts of the weekend on Saturday morning, July 26, at 10 o'clock will be open to the public. Admission is $1 and proceeds are donated to the Boston Symphony Orchestra Pension Fund.

Adele Addison, popular young soprano, will be heard in a song recital on Wednesday evening, July 23, at 8:30 in the Chamber Music Hall. Miss Addison has appeared frequently at Tanglewood both as a Berkshire Festival soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and in opera performances during her years as student at the Berkshire Music Center and is donating her services for this concert, the proceeds of which benefit the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund.

Miss Addison's regular accompanist, James Payne, will be at the piano and her program includes four songs by Alessandro Scarlatti, four songs by Schubert, the "Frauenliebe und Leben" of Robert Schumann, three songs by Paul Hindemith, Debussy's "Songs of Bilitis," and works by Sessions, Strilko, Copland, and Ives.

Programs for next week are as follows:

Wednesday, July 23, 8:30. Chamber music, Adele Addison, soprano; James Payne, piano:

Scarlatti: "O pace del mio cor"; "Si, si, tornero con lingue d'odori"; "Lontananza crudele"; "Bramo che le ferite."

Schubert: "Lachen und weinen"; "Erlafsee"; "Suleika No. 1 and No. 2."

Schumann: "Frauenliebe and Leben."

Hindemith; "On Hearing the Last Rose of Summer"; "The Whistlin' Thief"; "La Belle Dame sans Merci."

Debussy: "Chansons de Bilitis."

Sessions: "On the Beach at Fontana."

Strilko: "Pandora."

Copland: "Dirge in the Woods."

Ives: "The See'r Walking."

Friday, July 25, 8:30, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux, conducting, Music Shed:

Glinka: Overture to "Russlan and Ludmilla."

Tchaikovsky: Symphony No. 4.

Milhaud: Overture to "Les Eumenides."

Debussy: Three Nocturnes.

Ravel: "La Valse."

Saturday, July 26, 8:30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting:

Stravinsky, Canticum Sacrum. (Solosist, Blake Stern, tenor; Donald Gramm, baritone).

Rachmaninoff: Piano Concerto No. 3. (Soloist: Byron Jamis).

Debussy: La Mer.

Sunday, July 27, 2:30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting.

Bartok: Music for Strings, Percussion & Celesta.

Ravel: "Daphnis & Chloe."

Tchaikovsky; Violin Concerto. (Soloist: Zino Francescatti).

Banner (e)
BENNINGTON, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 5,451

JUL 19 1958

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,138

JUL 19 1958

B. Herald – July 20

Opera in the Berkshires Starts at Center Tomorrow

The first of the Berkshire Music Center student events for Tanglewood's fourth week will be an evening of opera scenes tomorrow night at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Members of the Opera Department, under the direction of Brois Goldovsky, will present excerpts from Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet" and Donizetti's "Don Pasquale" complete. The Opera Department is this season maintained through the Leadership Training Program of the New England Opera Theatre and the program of opera is open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

The weekly concert of the student orchestra will be held on Thursday, at 8:30 in the Music Shed, and the student chamber music concert on Sunday at 10 A.M. in the Chamber Music Hall. A Composer's Forum will be held on Sunday evening at 8:30, also in the Chamber Music Hall.

Marc Blitzstein will speak on Friday afternoon, at 3:15 on Contemporary Music at the Chamber Music Hall. Mr. Blitzstein will speak on his own music and musical illustrations following his talk will include a complete one-act opera "Triple Sec", the first movement of his Serenade for String Quartet, a Piano Sonata songs from "The Cradle Will Rock" and "Regina," Three Offenbach Songs, performed by Fromm Fellowship students and students from other Berkshire Music Center Departments. Mr. Blitzstein himself will play and sing excerpts from "The Three penny Opera" and "Juno".

The Seminar, under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation, and the other student events of the week are open to Friends of the School. Further information may be obtained from the Friends Office, Tanglewood.

Springfield Union – July 21

BERKSHIRE CALENDAR

Varied Activities Are Scheduled For Summer Travelers

Activities in the Berkshires today include:

Lenox, Tanglewood, opera, friends, 8.30.

Stockbridge, The Berkshire Playhouse, "The Mousetrap," 8.45.

Pittsfield, Berkshire Museum, paintings by Thomas Blagden, sculpture by Elizabeth MacLean Smith and David Broudo, Tuesday-Saturday 10 to 5, Sunday 2 to 5. Closed Monday.

Stockbridge, Chesterwood Studios, half mile off Route 183 at Glendale. Casts and bronzes by Daniel Chester French. Daily 10 to 6. Nominal admission charge.

Williamstown, Clark Art Institute, paintings of six centuries. Also sculptures, ceramics and silver. Tuesday through Sunday 10 to 5; closed Monday.

Pittsfield, Little Cinema, unusual foreign and American feature films, nightly at 8.15; Saturdays continuous from 7.

Stockbridge, Peggy Best Studio, paintings and drawings by Berkshire artists and students, 2 to 6 daily.

Stockbridge, Tanglewood Gallery, modern American masters, Monday to Saturday 1 to 6.

Tyringham, Tyringham Galleries, art works by Berkshire and metropolitan artists, 10 to 5 and 6 to 8 daily. Nominal admission charge.

Ashley Falls, off Route 7, Bartholomew's Cobble, native ferns and flowers, guided tours; daily 9 to 5.

Berkshire Garden Center, at junction of Routes 183 and 102; Monday to Saturday 9 to 5; Sunday 10 to 12.30 and 2 to 5.30.

Stockbridge, Mission House Gardens, herbs, hedges, flowers and fruit trees. Trailside Museum, 10 to 5 daily, restaurant open weekdays 11 to 8, Sunday 12 to 5.30; closed Monday.

Dalton, Crane Museum, exhibits in fine papermaking. Monday to Friday 2 to 5.

ATLANTA, GA.
Journal & Constitution
Circ. S. 493,042

JUL 6 1958

Berkshire Slates American Music

An extensive program of study and performance of contemporary American music will be sponsored at the Berkshire Festival in Lenox, Mass., by the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago.

The course will include six lectures by composers John Kirkpatrick, Roger Sessions, Milton Babbitt, Marc Blitzstein, Lukas Foss and Aaron Copland.

A concert of the modern music will be given July 14.

NASHVILLE, TENN.
TENNESSEAN
Circ. D. 116,256 - S. 200,558

SEP 14 1958

Both the Aspen and Tanglewood Festivals had special lecture series on American music this summer, and Roger Sessions, Peabody college's 1957 guest for its Contemporary Music symposium, was a speaker at both festivals.

At Tanglewood, in addition to Sessions, who spoke about his own work, the lecturers included John Kirkpatrick, who gave a very stimulating piano recital at David Lipscomb college five years ago Marc Blitzstein who was guest at a Fisk Festival when one of his works was performed several years ago; and Aaron Copland, a 1953 Peabody Contemporary Music symposium guest.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,138

AUG 2 1958

4th Composers' Forum At Tanglewood Sunday

The fourth Composers' Forum of the 1958 Berkshire Music Center season will be held in the Chamber Music Hall tomorrow evening at 8:30. Lukas Foss of the Department of Composition will be the moderator. Six student composers will have work which has been done at least in part at Tanglewood performed by members of the Fromm Players and instrumentalists from the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,092,455 - S. 3,652,302

JUL 20 1958

Musical Talk

Composer Marc Blitzstein will discuss his own music Friday afternoon at the fourth seminar in contemporary music at Tanglewood's Chamber Music Hall. Among several musical illustrations following his talk, Blitzstein will play and sing excerpts from "The Threepenny Opera" and "Juno." Tomorrow, an evening of opera scenes will be staged in the Theatre-Concert Hall as the first of the Berkshire Music Center student events.

Dr. Nag

By TERE PASCONE

Lenox, Mass. — The
offered last night by Department under
tion of Dr. Boris Gold off to a fine start at 8
The theater-concert jammed as the curt the temperature was comfortable side; and scene of the condense of Gounod's "Rom Juliet" with Gertrude
Juliet and Howard J
Romeo, gave promi seemingly enjoyable
come.

AS MUCH could n at 12:30 a. m. or when the curtain after the presentation
zetti's "Don Pasquale entirety after by the five acts of "Romeo a had been performed in 125 minutes by fou
Romeos and Juliets, Pasquales sung by Pasquales, two Dr. M
four Zorinas and four the size of the aud dwindled to less tha
size. The reasons: T
"Arctic" cold that
ers literally shiverin seats despite coats
and the much too
As the "Romeo a progressed, it drag
formers lacked the ability to cope wit scenes, and the tom almost a fiasco—tur
be a bigger bite tha
Romeo and Juliet c touching off in the
wave of spontaneou
trolled titters from e
of the hall.

* * *

BUT THERE WA
be lauded in the p
of Dr. Goldovsky's
in the "Don Pasqua
the exciting, experim
sets created by Nagy, head of the Department of the
lege of Music, Un
Hartford.
The Donizetti
turned out to be a

Hartford Times - July 22

Dr. Nagy-Created Sets Used in Opera at Tanglewood

By TERE PASCONE

Lenox, Mass. — The program offered last night by the Opera Department under the direction of Dr. Boris Goldovsky got off to a fine start at 8:30 p. m.: The theater-concert hall was jammed as the curtain rose; the temperature was on the comfortable side; and the first scene of the condensed version of Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet" with Gertrude Pepin as Juliet and Howard Jarratt as Romeo, gave promise of a seemingly enjoyable evening to come.

* * *

AS MUCH could not be said at 12:30 a. m. or thereabouts when the curtain went down after the presentation of Donizetti's "Don Pasquale" in its entirety. For by the time the five acts of "Romeo and Juliet" had been performed in relays in 125 minutes by four different Romeos and Juliets, and "Don Pasquale" sung by two Don Pasquales, two Dr. Maletestas, four Zorinas and four Ernestos, the size of the audience had dwindled to less than half its size. The reasons: The wave of "Arctic" cold that had listeners literally shivering in their seats despite coats and wraps, and the much too much long As the "Romeo and Juliet" progressed, it dragged. Performers lacked the histrionic ability to cope with the love scenes, and the tomb scene — almost a fiasco—turned out to be a bigger bite than the final Romeo and Juliet could chew, touching off in the audience a wave of spontaneous, uncontrolled titters from every corner of the hall.

* * *

BUT THERE WAS much to be lauded in the performance of Dr. Goldovsky's 16 students in the "Don Pasquale" and in the exciting, experimental stage sets created by Dr. Elemer Nagy, head of the Hartt Opera Department of the Hartt College of Music, University of Hartford.

The Donizetti comic opera turned out to be a little gem of entertainment with the characters, both principal and minor, giving gay, delightful performances — particularly Ronald Holgate, David Smith and Annabelle Bernard as the first Don Pasquale, Doctor Malatesta and Norina, respectively.

The sets of fiberglas and aluminum, were a big advance over the experimental sets made by Dr. Nagy last Summer, also for the Tanglewood Opera presentations. Working under a grant of $40,000 from the Ford Foundation, Dr. Nagy has been striving to create scenery that would be artistic, colorful and lightweight, easy to dismantle and store and inexpensive to transport for use by traveling opera companies.

Last Summer he succeeded in creating sets at least 20 per cent lighter weight than the traditional canvas and wood used successfully by Dr. Goldovsky in his tour with the New England Opera Company which he directs.

* * *

THE ADVANCES made by Dr. Nagy as evidenced last night were in the attainment of warm vivid colors by the use of a paint to which sand had been added; the creation of a surface on the fiberglas that not only looks like the traditional canvas, but feels like it; the surprising "bonus" discovery that the new, rough surface made for better acoustics; and the reduction of footage for the sets of "Romeo and Juliet" to one fifth of that required by the old grand opera "lumber yard" traditional settings of the past 100 years.

This year, also, Dr. Nagy was able also to achieve:

Columns with a sturdy and third dimensional quality which could be dismantled in minutes; a paint that was not only weatherproof, but easily removed from the fiberglas by the simple process of just hosing off the plastic with water.

The program last night is one of three to be offered this Summer by Dr. Goldovsky and his students in which further advances made by Dr. Nagy will be tried.

* * *

ON MONDAY, July 28, excerpts from Verdi's "Aida," Verdi's "La Traviata," and Puccini's "La Rondine," will be presented. On Monday, Aug. 4, Rossini's "Le Comte D'Ory" in its America premiere will be performed. In the latter, Dr. Nagy will do something which has never been done before. The entire set will be projected —back drop, wings and ceiling —through the use of slides 12 inches by 15½ inches and at least 18 projectors with special filament bulbs, able to project from a short distance behind each of the set sections used.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

JUL 24 1958

Manos

STUDENT ORCHESTRA of the Berkshire Music Center rehearses with Dr. Charles Munch for tonight's concert by the students in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. Munch will conduct group in second half of the program which is open to Friends of the Music Center.

Munch To Lead Student Concert At Shed Tonight

TANGLEWOOD — Dr. Charles Munch, ~~director~~ of the Berkshire Music Center, will be one of the conductors tonight at 8:30 at the weekly concert by the student orchestra in the Music Shed.

Dr. Munch will conduct the students in Roussel's Suite in F, dedicated to the late Dr. Serge Koussevitzky. Dr. Munch will be preceded by two student conductors, Gustav Meier of Switzerland, who will conduct Mozart's Masonic Funeral Music, and Claudio Abbado of Milan, Italy, who will conduct Prokofieff's Violin Concerto No. 1 in D Major, Op. 19 with Ronald Knudsen of Baltimore, Md., as soloist.

The concluding work of the concert will be a performance of Brahms Symphony No. 3 in F major conducted by Seymour Lipkin. Mr. Lipkin, a former student at the Berkshire Music Center, is now on the faculty of the department of instrumental music and orchestral conducting.

Open to Friends

During its three previous concerts the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra has played before a combined audience of 4,144. This concert is under the auspices of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. Support of the Friends is maintained by voluntary contributions which may be sent to: Friends Office, Tanglewood, or made in person on the Tanglewood grounds.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

JUL 25 1958

Four Musicians Win Koussevitzky Awards at Center

TANGLEWOOD — The Koussevitzky Music Foundation has announced four awards to be made to students at the 1958 session of the Berkshire Music Center. The winners are E. Evans Moore, Camden, N.J.; Homer Lee, San Francisco, Calif.; Ronald Knudsen, Baltimore, Md.; Mario Davidovsky of Buenos Aires, Argentina.

Mr. Moore, a tuba player, Mr. Lee, a clarinetist, and Mr. Knudsen, a violinist are all members of the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra which is directed by Eleazar de Carvalho, the Brazilian conductor. This orchestra plays weekly concerts during the Tanglewood season. In addition to their orchestra work each of these musicians plays in one or more Sunday morning chamber music concerts.

Mr. Davidovsky is a composer working with Aaron Copland, head of the department of composition. At the opening Composers' Forum Mr. Davidovsky had a work played by the Fromm Fellowship players.

The awards made by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation are to supplement scholarships already awarded, and to aid in defraying living expenses. Dr. Serge Koussevitzky created this foundation while he was still actively engaged as director of the Berkshire Music Center.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

JUL 24 1958

Chamber Music Concert Sunday

TANGLEWOOD—The fifth in the series of Sunday morning chamber music concerts will take place at 10 a.m. Sunday in the Chamber Music Hall. The concert will be under the auspices of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

William Kroll, co-head of the department of chamber music, has prepared the Boccherini Quintet which will begin the program. The principal trumpet of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Roger Voisin, has directed the rehearsals of the Janacek Capriccio which is scored for two trumpets, three trombones, flute, tuba, and piano. This is one one of the larger ensembles to perform at these concerts this season. The concert will close with the Hindemith Quintet, which has been supervised by Rosario Mazzea, bass clarinet of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

TIGHT BINDING

THREE FROM WASHINGTON—James Deane, Star record critic, found three Washington musicians rehearsing at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood, Mass. They are Marie Kopulos, piano; Cecelia Hopkins, flute, and Rita Roudabush, oboe. Looking on is Ralph Gomberg, principal oboe of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Sunday Star - Wash. D.C.
July 27

NEWS OF MUSIC

Pattern Changing At Summer Centers

By JAMES G. DEANE
Star Staff Writer

New England's most flourishing summer music centers —Tanglewood and Marlboro —are showing gratifying vitality.

The established pattern of concerts of the great orchestral repertoire at the Boston Symphony's summer home in the Berkshires is being enlivened with a stimulating excursion into new music.

At the Rudolf Serkin-led Marlboro School of Music in Vermont's Green Mountains, promising young American musicians steadily gain richer experience in performing chamber music in company with veterans seasoned in the European tradition.

[illegible]

reasonably hospitable to modern music. But in the last year this cordial spirit has been solidified and extended.

This has been accomplished through a program of instruction and performances specifically centered on contemporary music. This program began in earnest last summer with the establishment of a special student-faculty group. It embraces seminars, lectures and concerts, which are open to the public. The student group is hand-picked, and participants include distinguished American composers.

Fromm is Backer

The sponsor of this enterprising activity is the Fromm Music Foundation. Paul Fromm, the foundation's president and financial backer, is a genial Chicago wine-importer in his 40s who brought his musical interest with him when he emigrated from Germany in 1938. Mr. Copland and Alexander Schneider, member of the Budapest Quartet who has been active on many musical fronts, also are playing important roles in its work.

Mr. Fromm's conviction is that the contemporary composer is entitled to a better deal, in terms of a market for his wares. Such a deal means having more performing musicians tackle new scores, and having more people listen.

Since its establishment six years ago, Mr. Fromm's foundation has commissioned more than 100 new compositions. It has also provided the funds to give them first and second performances and has financed some recordings. And now, with the Tanglewood project, it is seeking to push the cause of contemporary music forward still further.

New Music Lectures

The Fromm program at Tanglewood is a busy one. There are 11 student fellows, young musicians invited to attend on scholarships because of demonstrated ability and interest. (Two are from Buenos Aires.) They perform frequently. The foundation this summer is sponsoring six seminars on American composers and three lectures on new music of this country, Europe and Latin America. The fellows, augumented by other musicians when necessary, are heard on all these occasions.

Players from the Boston Symphony itself also are enlisted. A special all-modern concert by symphony members was given on July 14, featuring a Hindemith piano concerto, Ives' second sonata, Stravinsky's "Ragtime," a piece by Silvestre Revueltas, and two new wind quintets commissioned by the foundation, by David Diamond and Robert Lombardo, a 26-year-old composer who teaches in Hartford, Conn. Mr. Fromm, who attends all foundation premieres, was in the audience.

This season's list of lecturers includes Mr. Copland, Roger Sessions, Marc Blitzstein, John Kirkpatrick, Lukas Foss, Elliott Carter, Leon Kirchner and Milton Babbitt.

An Uphill Battle

Mr. Fromm is under no illusions about the task facing a campaigner for his chosen cause. Contemporary music has an uphill battle. The audiences at the Fromm concerts and lectures are no rivals numerically for the giant ones overflowing and also great enthusiasm. This century, he maintains, has already produced some master composers who will take their places in history alongside those of earlier eras. His own mission, as he sees it, is to help encourage still others.

[illegible]

"We have kept the composer on the fringe of the mainstream of musical life," he told me. He seemed unquenchably optimistic about changing this situation.

Mr. Fromm plans to sponsor a three-week institute for 10 invited young composers at Princeton next year, under the chairmanship of Mr. Sessions. He also is hopeful that foundations larger than his may be induced to take up the cudgels. Tanglewood, doubtless, will continue to play a major part in his crusade.

Classics Still Heard

Tanglewood is still rendering service to older composers. Bach and Mozart as usual started off the summer, the seldom heard "Musical Joke" and the "Coronation" mass and wonderful D minor Kyrie (K. 341) providing a strikingly contrasted start and finish to the Mozart weekend, and the B minor mass climaxing the three concerts devoted to Bach.

On August 4 and 5 the student singers will provide a special fillip with a production of the little known, delightful Rossini French opera, "Count Ory." Preceding this will be almost a whole week end of Wagner, and the season will wind up August 10 with Beethoven's Ninth.

Marlboro's activities are of different dimensions. Seventy-three students and faculty members—the former selected from some 500 who applied — are spending seven weeks on the campus of tiny Marlboro College, working together on weekdays and giving public concerts on week ends. The main focus is on quartets, trios and other pieces of intimate size. The music is primarily traditional.

Faculty Subdued

The Marlboro spirit is democratic. The stress is on the group, and on music-making more than concert-giving. This summer, a new rule has been adopted which bars faculty members from playing together without student participation. Elsewhere such a rule might be hazardous, but at Marlboro the level of student ability is so high that a difference is hardly noticeable.

Thus, last week end, Mr. Serkin played with Yuan Tung, young Chinese-born cellist from the New Orleans Symphony, in a Beethoven sonata, and Richard Goode, 14-year-old New Yorker, presided at the keyboard with considerably senior, but hardly more ebullient, colleagues (one was Herman Busch) in Dvorak's "Dumky" trio.

At Marlboro the "star system" is strictly taboo. Mr. Serkin seems to be the most ardent adherent of this rule. He works hard at keeping in the background. It is not much wonder that some of the summer school's Vermont neighbors find this viewpoint a bit mysterious, however, and voice desires for more Serkin public appearances. Between now and the season's end August 24 Mr. Serkin is scheduled to play some Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven's taxing "Hammerklavier" sonata. And it is possible he will appear with the school's orchestra, led by Alexander Schneider.

Not all the music at Marlboro is old. Last Sunday Harold Wright, the National Symphony's first clarinetist and a Marlboro veteran, and his flutist wife Ruth were

---

She Shall Have Music Wherever She Goes

B Eagle - July 25

Whitestone

SERENADING FAIR LADIES from other countries is clarinetist Patricia Lissack, England. Students sitting in front of Music Shed at Tanglewood are Maria Lopez-Vito and Marilyn Gatmaitan, the Philippines; Atipet Usmanbus, Turkey; Wadad Mouzannar, Lebanon; Liwanag Cruz, Philippines; Mrs. Asher Ben Yohanan, here from Tel Aviv, Israel.

The red-headed clarinetist pictured to the right has a problem that would buffalo Benny Goodman. It's a matter of clarinet etiquette. Should she use lipstick for a smear-proof performance, or should she sport the only Arpeggio Pink mouthpiece at Tanglewood?

Clarinetist Patricia Lissack, flown fresh from London to the Berkshire Music Center, compromises. Although she doesn't use stay-proof lipstick, she does sparingly apply the old-fashioned erasable type for short selections. For long practice sessions, war paint is out since it generally wears off anyway.

The only musician in her family, Pat decided to take up the clarinet after hearing an inspiring recording of a Mozart clarinet concerto. As a graduate of the Royal College of Music in London, she now teaches the instrument. When asked about her impressions of America this cautious clarinetist would venture only one opinion: "People over here seem to adore an English accent."

Damp Cantata

Pat's lipstick problem is unique among the several foreign women students at Tanglewood, but her adorable accent isn't. One of her compatriots is composer Thea Musgrave, who already has an opera, a ballet and a cantata, among other works, under her British belt. The "Cantata for a Summer's Day," which won the much-coveted Lilly Boulanger prize for Miss Musgrave, was originally written for the BBC in Scotland. It was also performed at the Edinburgh Festival, on a "horrible, wet, rainy summer day" which rated a dirge rather than a cantata. Her opera, "The Abbott of Dimrock," was performed by the Park Lane Opera Group in London just before her departure for Tanglewood.

Miss Musgrave bridles when asked whether women composers aren't a rarity. "If women can write books and paint pictures, why can't they compose?" she asks in the finest feminist fashion. She admits that women composers are in the minority, but points out that in England and France there are at present several outstanding ones.

What kind of music does Miss Musgrave write? "If I could describe music properly in words, I would write a book instead," she smiles. Now studying composition with Aaron Copland at the Music Center, she is adding to her long list of scores by finishing off an orchestral piece titled "Obliques." When asked a non-musical question about her splendid English complexion, Miss Musgrave turned absolutely ruddy and said, "Oh my complexion is not good at all — the girls from the west coast of Scotland, they're the ones to see, with all that fog."

Shy Islanders

No lassies from Scotland were available, but there were two beautifully complected girls from the Philippines sitting across the table. Both the girls, Maria Lopez-Vito and Marilyn Gatmaitan have been studying piano at the Mannes School in Manhattan, share similar views on Philippine mores: "We are more reserved and shy than American women. We don't go out with boys alone before 18; we have more of the Spanish influence in our lives." Like most students at the center, they spend several hours a day in class, while the rest of their time is blotted up by practice, eating and sleeping. When they do have a few spare minutes, they find themselves missing the "peaceful, slow" way of life they were used to in the Philippines. Similar as their thoughts are on these subjects, they have dissimilar taste in composers. Miss Lopez-Vita prefers Brahms; Miss Gatmaitan is a Mozart-Chopin buff.

Another pianist, this one from Lebanon, also endorses Mozart for women performers. Wadad Mouzannar teaches and performs as a concert pianist alternately in Beirut and Paris and prefers the clavichordists herself. Scarlatti is one of her special favorites, but the Mozart piano concerto in A major is her piece de resistance. She played it recently with L'Orchestre de la Conservatoire National de Musique in Beirut.

Comments From Lebanon

[illegible]

guages [illegible] lated for his [illegible] bumps, then [illegible] wife.

Miss Mouz[illegible] did not wish to discuss the crisis in Lebanon in any language. "I am a musician, not a politician," she said simply. When "hem lengths" was finally translated into French, she explained that Lebanese women are of course wearing them short since they always dress "tout a fait a la Parisienne, dans la dernier mode." This emphasis on the latest styles in Beirut is due chiefly to the Paris influence on the city's wealthy and elegantly dressed women. Veils and other traditional clothes are rarely worn by Lebanese women, since the majority of them work and would find them too much of a hindrance in their active jobs. When they plan a favorite family meal, it's generally a combination of kebbe (meat) and [illegible] which will probably be prepared by servants. Housekeeping in Lebanon is generally "plus facile" — eased by servants' presence.

Neither servants nor that American staple, the washing machine, are prevalent in Israel. Mrs. Asher Ben-Yohanan, a contralto studying with her husband at the Music Center, has even shouldered a gun in the Israeli Army. During the "independence war" in 1948 she served near the Jordan border, a hot spot even for a seasoned male soldier. "Israeli women are

FADED TEXT

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,138

JUL 22 1958

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

JUL 24 1958

ANTHONY TONEY'S PAINTINGS ON VIEW

Paintings by Anthony Toney, resident painter and director of the Art Workshop at Festival House, Lenox, are now on view in the Glass Exhibition Room at Tanglewood. Toney was born in Gloversville, N. Y., and studied in Paris. He is a member of the American Contemporary Art Gallery of New York and teaches painting at the New School for Social Research at Teachers College, Columbia University.

His paintings have been shown in previous years at Tanglewood. The paintings presently on view are: "Festival House Pool," "59th Street Bridge," "Figure and Landscape," "Festival House," "Festival House Through the Tree," "Bathers," "Study" and "Ships."

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 118,644

JUL 21 1958

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 103,521

JUL 18 1958

Will Visit Tanglewood

The West Hartford Summer Music Center will sponsor a trip to the Tanglewood Music Center in the Berkshires at Lenox, Mass., on Saturday, July 26. The boys and girls will have the privilege of seeing and hearing the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Dr. Charles Munch at a public rehearsal. This will begin at 10 a.m. rain or shine in the huge music shed.

Buses will leave the Webster Hill School at 7:45 a.m. and return at 4 p.m. Many of the Music Center students will go with their families by automobile. Parents and friends may also reserve a place on the bus by doing so at Webster Hill school before Tuesday, July 22.

The second public assembly will be presented at the Webster Hill School auditorium this morning at 10:40 a.m. The public is invited to attend at no charge.

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 103,521

JUL 18 1958

Tanglewood Trip

The proposed trip by 100 students in the local arts program to hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., originally scheduled for Monday, has been postponed to Saturday July 26, local summer arts program director Clarence Westcott said Thursday.

Westcott said a double - check of arrangements revealed that Monday rehearsals at Tanglewood are not open to the public.

He added two buses will leave from the high school at 8 a.m. Children should bring picnic lunches. Cost will be 25 cents for children under 12 and $1 for older children, plus $1.75 for transportation. After lunch, a brief tour of Tanglewood will be taken, and buses are expected to return by 4 p.m.

SU [illegible] 28

"Y" GROUP MAKES TANGLEWOOD TRIP

The annual YMCA trip to the Tanglewood music shed at Lenox took place today as 41 persons took advantage of the opportunity to hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch.

Conductor Charles Munch, assisted by Pierre Monteux, who made his seventh annual visit as guest conductor, led the orchestra in a program of Debussy and Ravel. Zino Francescatti, world famous violinist, was guest artist.

According to Mrs. Dorothy Mantozzi, program director, there will be an all-day trip to New

---

BROOKLYN, N. Y.
BROOKLYN RECORD
Circ. W. 9,200

JUN 27 1958

Academy Ready For Annual Trek To Tanglewood

The Brooklyn Academy of Music will sponsor its second annual "Sunday at Tanglewood," an all-day musical excursion to the world-famed Berkshire Festival, on Sunday, July 20. The Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform a Brahms-Stravinsky program, to be conducted by Pierre Monteux and with Leon Fleisher, brilliant young American pianist, as soloist.

The venerable Monteux, now in his eighties and more active than at any time in his long career, has selected a program of musical interest and significance. He will open the concert with Brahms' Academic Festival Oveture, followed by Brahms' Concerto for piano and orchestra in D minor with Fleisher, first American to win the important Queen Elizabeth International Music Competition, as soloist. Following the intermission, Monteux will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in his definitive interpretation of Igor Stravinsky's ballet, "Petrouchka," which Monteux directed in its history-making world premiere at Paris in 1911 and which has since become one of the great modern classics.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
D. 454,137 S. 190,726

JUL 22 1958

Patrons Cry Encore

Academy Scores Again With Berkshire Outing

Substitute Beethoven for Brahms and Stravinsky, replace a cream cheese sandwich with a plain roll and Sunday's outing to the Berkshire Music Festival was practically a carbon copy of last year's happy excursion.

The Brooklyn Academy of Music, sponsoring its second annual trip to Tanglewood, Mass., scored its second smash hit according to the folks who should know best—the 253 metropolitan area residents, a large number from Brooklyn, who made the trip.

"I thought it was a delightful, well-planned day," said Florence E. Doushkess of 941 Washington Ave. Her neighbors on the train ride back to Grand Central Terminal nodded vigorous agreement.

A Lucky Record.

Miss Doushkess was doubly happy. A moment before she had received an LP record by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the organization that performed at the festival. The academy presented records to five lucky ticket holders, including one other Brooklynite: Edith Schweisberg, of 5609 15th Ave.

Two couples from Forest Hills, Queens, chorused their approval of the journey. "The music, the lunch, everything was at least up to our expectations," said Mr. and Mrs. Dan Morris, of 64-11 99th St.

"It was so well-organized. We only wish they'd run a series of excursions to other cultural events," commented Mr. and Mrs. Jack Jacobs, of 98-25 65th Ave.

"Wonderful Idea."

"It's a wonderful promotion idea by the academy," noted Pearl Dubinsky, of 3088 Brighton 13th St. "I've always wanted to go to Tanglewood and this trip finally gave me the opportunity."

The academy, charging a total of $10 for the transportation, lunch and admission to the concert, didn't clear a penny—and probably lost a few—on the venture.

Ann Tromka, of 130 St. Edwards St., echoed the hopes of Academy officials when she remarked: "They certainly ought to get some membership subscriptions after this wonderful outing."

Ruth Patlove, of 646 Argyle Rd., didn't say a word. The young lady was too engrossed in mapping her 1958-59 schedule at the academy, checking off a piano recital by Van Cliburn, another by Jose Iturbi, concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. "It should be a wonderful year," she said with a smile.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Long
Island Daily Advocate
Circ. D. 17,032

JUN 27 1958

Frank Frazer's

The Brooklyn Academy of Music will sponsor its second annual "Sunday at Tanglewood," an all-day musical excursion to the world-famed Berkshire Festival, on Sunday, July 20. The Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform a Brahms-Stravinsky program, to be conducted by Pierre Monteux and with Leon Fleisher, brilliant young American pianist, as soloisto.

The venerable Monteux, now in his eighties and more active than at any time in his long carees, has selected a program of musical interest and significance. He will open the concert with Brahms' Academic Festival Overture, followed by Brahms' Concerto for piano and orchestra in D minor with Fleisher, first American to win the important Queen Elisabeth International Music Competition, as soloist, Following the intermission, Monteux will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in his definitive interpretation of Igor Stravinsky's ballet, "Petrouchka," which Manteux directed in its history-making world premiere at Paris in 1911 and which has since become one of the great modern classics.

The Academy's special "Sunday at Tanglewood" excursion costs only ten dollars ($10) and includes round trip fare on the New Haven Railroad, a picnic lunch on the Tanglewood grounds, and admission to the grass lawn around the Music Shed where the concert is performed. Should the concert-goer wish to obtain a seat, he may apply two dollars of the $10 package price toward reserved locations at $2.50, $3.00, $4.00 and $5.50. The Academy will arrange for purchase of the reserved seats as a free service to the excursionists.

The Academy "Sunday at Tanglewood" special excursion leaves Grand Central Terminal Sunday, July 20 at 8:20 A.M. (DST), returning at 10:12 P.M. Reservations may be made through the Brooklyn Academy of Music, 30 Lafayette Avenue, Brooklyn 17, N.Y. (STerling 8-6q00). Due to the limited capacity, reservation lists must be closed on Wednesday, July 16. Orders for reserved seats must be filed two days earlier, on July 14.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 569,290 - S. 172,502

JUL 19 1958

Trip to Tanglewood Planned Tomorrow

Nearly 250 music lovers will depart at 8:20 a.m. tomorrow on the Brooklyn Academy of Music's second annual trip to the music festival in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The group will leave Grand Central Terminal on the all-day jaunt which will include lunch, an individual tour of the Tanglewood grounds and a concert by the Boston Symphony.

Pierre Monteux will conduct the symphony in Brahms's "Academic Festival" Overture and "Concerto for Piano and Orchestra in D Minor" and Stravinsky's ballet, "Petrouchka." Leon Fleisher will be piano soloist.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Long
Island Daily Advocate
Circ. D. 17,032

JUN 30 1958

The Brooklyn Academy of Music will sponsor its second annual "Sunday at Tanglewood," an all day musical excursion to the world-famed Berkshire Festival, on Sunday July 20.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.
Reporter-Dispatch
Circ. D. 28,017

JUL 29 1958

Our Town

ONE OF OUR TOWN'S music lovers has a question. He spent last weekend driving 300 miles from here to Tanglewood at Lenox, Mass. and back, to attend the Berkshire Festival.

This particular crew-cut chap with a taste for long-hair music, drove up in three hours Sunday. He left at 10 a.m. to be in time for the 2:30 p.m Sunday afternoon concert. And after parking his car and paying the $2 admission charge to the grounds of Nathaniel Hawthorne's former estate, now used by the Boston Symphony for its summertime music school, he spread out a blanket upon the grass in the shade of a full maple, and promptly fell asleep.

He was awakened by the ovation of the crowd about him for the performance of a Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto. It was the final selection on the afternoon's program.

The next day, this lad read the reviews of the concert in the newspapers. The critics were almost boundless in their praise and termed the musical event a highly rewarding experience, well worth the effort of the concertgoers who made the effort to attend.

OUR TOWNER'S question: Was it?

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

Journal
WINDSOR LOCKS,
Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,650

JUL 24 1958

In The World of Music

In the world of Music Business, there seems to be a planned campaign for a constant stream of new "gimmicks"—i. e., methods or materials which one of course should purchase in order to be in style. The latest is the stereo bandwagon. It is true that after the old 78 r. p m. discs the invention of the 33's and 45's proved an improvement, and then the High Fidelity System of recording was a boon to those with keen ears. Now the system of recording on two channels to give the effect of personal and actual presence at a performance. To be truthful, one can get the same effect by having two radio sets tuned to the same wavelength; at opposite sides of the room. Or, by having a phonograph with two separate speakers at different positions. Some of my musical friends who have invested in expensive Hi-Fi equipment now have the heartache of converting, or buying the brand new stereo material. The major recording companies are all for the new style; but according to my best New York sources, the enthusiasm of the public is lagging behind along with the fervor of the record store owners who have to sell the new recordings. The latter is worried that his business will slip away while the public fears to buy the old L. P.'s and is not quite ready for the new.

Columbia and Victor have unveiled their new stereo machines and the line of records. All of the large phono makers are in the stereo business. At a recent meeting of Victor distributors in the midwest, the speaker stated that this newest "gimmick" could push the total annual sale of recorded music and players to a billion dollars, an increase of "200 %" over the last five years.

Decca has a line of stero type machines with $140 portable model, and a top standing model of $330. Columbia announces a series of twenty-five different models for September.

Th record buyer has proven himself to be a "sucker" for new equipment as evidenced by the millions spent on Hi-Fi material. The recording company executives guess that these buyers may go for all these new devices which will outmode the old sets and give companies a new business life. To recapitulate: Stereophonic sound is based upon dual recording and dual reproduction. The records do not look any different from your present L. P.'s, but they have been made with two sound tracks, microscopic in nature, and when these recordings are played the needle picks up two separate sound tracks. Sound signals reach the ear through separate amplifiers and loud speakers. All of the present phonograph material, with one speaker, would be outmoded. It is necessary that new equipment be added, if you desire to receive the second channel of amplification.

Regardless of several valid criticisms of the offerings at the annual Berkshire Music Festival concerts at Tanglewood, still these performances are mainly worth your while. The easiest road we have found is U. S. 44 to U. S. 7, then follow signs to Tanglewood. From Windsor Locks, we have also gone through the Massachusetts Turnpike, which of course involves a toll. Sometimes the people in the audience provide as great an attraction as the music, for in every such gathering which involves large numbers of people, you will inevitably have the eccentric, or the loud speaker. The programs include: Tschaikowsky, Debussy, and Ravel with Monteux conducting on Friday, July 25th; and Stravinsky, and Rachmaninoff on Saturday, July 26th, at 8.30 p. m. Sunday, July 27th offers Ravel, and the Tschaikowsky Violin concerto, with Francescatti playing.

[139]

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON,
Mass.
Weekly Independent
Cir. 2,498

JUL 24 1958

Zino Francescatti Tanglewood Soloist

Will Be Featured Sunday with Boston Symphony

Pierre Monteux Will Be Conductor Tomorrow Night In Program of Tchaikovsky and French Music.—Blake Stern, Donald Gramm, Byron Janis Soloists Saturday Evening.

The fourth week-end of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood in Lenox will open on Friday evening with Pierre Monteaux as guest conductor. The orchestra's music director, Charles Munch, will conduct the concerts of Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon. Works of Debussy, Ravel and Tchaikovsky will be featured.

Pierre Monteaux opens his program Friday at 8:30 with Glinka's Overture to "Russlan and Ludmilla," followed by Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony. The second half of the program is devoted to French music, the Overture to Act III of "Les Eumenides" by Darius Milhaud, Debussy's Nocturnes (including "Nuages," "Fetes" and "Sirenes") and Ravel's Choreographic Poem, "La Valse." The choral part in the "Sirenes" will be performed by the ladies of the Festival Chorus, prepared by Lorna Cooke DeVaron.

The Saturday evening concert at 8:30 in the Music Shed will be under the direction of Charles Munch. Dr. Munch will open with Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" which was presented last season for the first time at Tanglewood. The soloists in this work will be Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross.

Byron Janis will be soloist in Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3. This talented young American has appeared with the Boston Symphony on several previous occasions, including last season when he performed the same concerto and recorded it with the orchestra. This will be his first visit to Tanglewood. The concert will close with Debussy's "La Mer."

For the final program of the week-end on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 Dr. Munch will conduct Bartok's Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta, the second suite from Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" and Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto in D major with Zino Francescatti as soloist. Mr. Francescatti has a summer home in Monterey.

The orchestra's final rehearsal for the concerts of the week-end on Saturday morning at 10:00 o'clock will be open to the public. Proceeds are donated to the Boston Symphony Orchestra pension fund.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292

JUL 24 1958

Fourth Weekend Of Tanglewood Concerts

The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood will open on Friday evening, July 25, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor. The Orchestra's Music Director, Charles Munch, will conduct the concerts of Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon. Works of Debussy, Ravel and Tchaikovsky will be featured.

Pierre Monteux opens his program at 8:30 with Glinka's Overture to Russlan and Ludmilla, followed by Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony. The second half of the program is devoted to French music: the Overture to Act III of Les Eumenides by Darius Milhaud, Debussy's Nocturnes (including Nuages, Fetes and Sirenes) and Ravel's Choreographic Poem, La Valse. The choral part in the Sirenes will be performed by the ladies of the Festival Chorus, prepared by Lorna Cooke DeVaron.

The Saturday evening concert at 8:30 in the Music Shed will be under the direction of Charles Munch. Dr. Munch will open with Stravinsky's Canticum Sacrum which was presented last season for the first time at Tanglewood. The soloists in this work will be Blake Stern, tenor and Donald Gramm, baritone, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross. Byron Janis will be soloist in Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3. This talented young American has appeared with the Boston Symphony on several previous occasions, including last season when he performed the same concerto and recorded it with the Orchestra. This will be his first visit to Tanglewood. The concert will close with Debussy's La Mer.

For the final program of the weekend on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 Dr. Munch will conduct Bartok's Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta, the second suite from Ravel's Daphnis and Chloe and Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto in D Major with Zino Francescatti as soloist.

The Orc[illegible] rehearsal for the [illegible] weekend on [illegible], July 26, at 1[illegible]pen to the public.

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON,
Mass.
Weekly Independent
Cir. 2,498

JUL 24 1958

SOLOIST WITH BOSTON SYMPHONY SUNDAY

ZINO FRANCESCATTI

Mr. Francescatti, violinist extraordinary, plays with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, musical director, in the shed at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon at 2:30. Mr. Francescatti will be soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto. He makes his summer home in Monterey.

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 295,512

JUL 20 1958

Berkshire Festival 4th Week Schedule

The Fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchesta in the music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., opens with the Friday evening concert, Pierre Monteux, guest conductor. The orchestra's music director, Charles Munch will conduct the concerts of Sat. evening and Sun. afternoon.

The Orchestra's final rehearsal for the concerts of the weekend on Sat. morning, at 10 o'clock will be open to the public. Admission is $1 and proceeds are donated to the Boston Symphony Orchestra Pension Fund.

Adele Addison, the popular young soprano, will be heard in a song recital on Wed. evening, at 8:30 in the Chamber Music Hall. Miss Addison has appeared frequently at Tanglewood both as a Berkshire Festival soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and in opera performances during her years as student at the Berkshire Music Center and is generously donating her services for this concert, the proceeds of which benefit the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund. Miss Addison's regular accompanist, James Payne, will be at the piano and her program is as follows:

Scarlatti—"O pace del mio cor", "Si, si, tornero con lingue d'odori", "Lontananza crudele", "Bramo che le ferite."
Schubert—"Lachen und weinen", "Erlafseee", "Suleika No. 1 and No. 2".
Schumann—"Frauenliebe und Leben".
Hindemith—"On Hearing the Last Rose of Summer", "The Whistlin' Thief", "La Belle Dame sans Merci."
Debussy—"Chansons de Bilitis."
Sessions—"On the Beach at Fontana."
Striiko—"Pandora."
Copeland—"Dirge in the Woods".
Ives—"The See'r Walking."

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's Shed Concert programs follow:

Friday at 8:30
Pierre Monteux, Conducting
Glinka—Overture to "Russean and Ludmilla."
Tchaikovsky—Symphony No. 4.
Milhaud—Overture to "Les Eumenides"
Debussy—Three Nocturnes.
Ravel—"La Valse"

Saturday at 8:30
Charles Munch, Conducting
Stravinsky—Canticum Sacrum (Soloists Blake Stern, tenor; Donald Gramm, baritone).
Rachmaninoff—Piano Concerto No. 3 (Soloist: Byron Janis).
Debussy—La Mer.

Sunday at 2:30
Charles Munch, Conducting
Bartok—Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta.
Ravel—"Daphnis and Chloe."
Tchaikovsky—Violin Concerto (Soloist: Zino Francescatti).

RAVENA, N. Y.
NEWS HERALD
Circ. W. 980

JUL 25 1958

ATHENS, N. Y.
HERALD

JUL 24 1958

COXSACKIE, N. Y.
UNION-NEWS
Circ. W. 1,977

JUL 25 1958

CAIRO, N. Y.
HERALD
Circ. W. 415

JUL 24 1958

KINGSTON, N. Y.
PRESS

JUL 24 1958

N. Lebanon Echo - July 22

Tanglewood Festival Enters Fourth Week

The fourth week end of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood in Lenox will open this Friday evening, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor. The Orchestra's Music Director, Charles Munch, will conduct the concerts of Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon. Works of Debussy, Ravel and Tchaikovsky will be featured.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159

JUL 25 1958

Music

The Housatonic Regional Music Center's next concert will be held Friday, August 1, in the town hall, Cornwall, in the evening. Music by Bach, Praetorius, Palestrina and Handel will be featured.

The fourth week end at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. will feature the following programs: Friday, July 25, 8:30 p.m. "Russlan and Ludmilla Overture," Glinka; Tschaikovsky's Symphony No. 4; Overture to "Les Eumenides," Milhaud; "Three Nocturnes," Debussy; "La Valse", Ravel; conducted by Pierre Monteux; Saturday, July 26, 8:30 p.m. Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum;" Piano Concerto No. 3, Rachmaninoff, Byron Janis, solist; Debussy, "La Mer;" Charles Munch conducting; Sunday, July 27, 2:30 p.m. Music for Strings, Percussion and Celestia, Bartok; "Daphnis and Chloe" second suite, Ravel; Tschaikovsky's Violin Concerto, soloist, Zino Francescatti; Charles Munch conducting all concerts are in the Music Shed. Next Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. in the Theatre Concert Hall, The Kroll Quartet will be heard in music by Mozart, Blackwood, Brahms.

Sunday Repu
SPRINGFIELL
Independe
Circ. 113,8

JUL 27

Zino Fr
At Tang

Famed Violini Works by sic of Wa

Today's concert
Symphony Orches
Music Shed at Tang
p. m. will be cond orchestra's music
Charles Munch. Zin ti, the French viol pear as soloist in violin concerto. Dr.
his program with Ba for Strings, Percus esta" and the seco
"Daphnis and Chloe

Wagner Pr

The third week shire Festival con orchestra at Tangl on Friday and Satu
(Aug. 1-2) and Sun
(Aug. 3) will featu of Richard Wagner be conducted by D Pierre Monteux an include Margaret prano, who will sin selections from W
Joseph de Pasqual

LEONARD P

performance of viola concerto and nario, pianist, in Concerto No. 1.
For the conce
Dr. Munch will pr
Prelude to "Die
"Siegfried Idyll," and "Love-death"
and Isolde." Mar will sing the "L will close the pro formance of the Scene," the final
"Gotterdammerun
Joseph de Pasq list of the Boston be soloist in the fi performance of th to by Walter Pisto
the concerto for and dedicated it t latter gave the wo formance in Bos season just past.

Pennario

Dr. Munch will gram of Saturday Overture and from "Tannhau Pennario, pianist, in the Liszt first Following the in Munch wil conduc liams' Symphony will also be rec Tanglewood perf
concert will clos fried's Rhine J
"Gotterdammerun
Piere Monteux

Journal
WINDSOR LOCKS,
Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,650

JUL 24 1958

In The World of Music

In the world of Music Business, there seems to be a planned campaign for a constant stream of new "gimmicks"—i. e., methods or materials which one of course should purchase in order to be in style. The latest is the stereo bandwagon. It is true that after the old 78 r. p m. discs the invention of the 33's and 45's proved an improvement, and then the High Fidelity System of recording was a boon to those with keen ears. Now the system of recording on two channels to give the effect of personal and actual presence at a performance. To be truthful, one can get the same effect by having two radio sets tuned to the same wavelength; at opposite sides of the room. Or, by having a phonograph with two separate speakers at different positions. Some of my musical friends who have invested in expensive Hi-Fi equipment now have the heartache of converting, or buying the brand new stereo material. The major recording companies are all for the new style; but according to my best New York sources, the enthusiasm of the public is lagging behind along with the fervor of the record store owners who have to sell the new recordings. The latter is worried that his business will slip away while the public fears to buy the old L. P.'s and is not quite ready for the new.

Columbia and Victor have unveiled their new stereo machines and the line of records. All of the large phono makers are in the stereo business. At a recent meeting of Victor distributors in the midwest, the speaker stated that this newest "gimmick" could push the total annual sale of recorded music and players to a billion dollars, an increase of "200 %" over the last five years.

Decca has a line of stero type machines with $140 portable model, and a top standing model of $330. Columbia announces a series of twenty-five different models for September.

Th record buyer has proven himself to be a "sucker" for new equipment as evidenced by the millions spent on Hi-Fi material. The recording company executives guess that these buyers may go for all these new devices which will outmode the old sets and give companies a new business life. To recapitulate: Stereophonic sound is based upon dual recording and dual reproduction. The records do not look any different from your present L. P.'s, but they have been made with two sound tracks, microscopic in nature, and when these recordings are played the needle picks up two separate sound tracks. Sound signals reach the ear through separate amplifiers and loud speakers. All of the present phonograph material, with one speaker, would be outmoded. It is necessary that new equipment be added, if you desire to receive the second channel of amplification.

Regardless of several valid criticisms of the offerings at the annual Berkshire Music Festival concerts at Tanglewood, still these performances are mainly worth your while. The easiest road we have found is U. S. 44 to U. S. 7, then follow signs to Tanglewood. From Windsor Locks, we have also gone through the Massachusetts Turnpike, which of course involves a toll. Sometimes the people in the audience provide as great an attraction as the music, for in every such gathering which involves large numbers of people, you will inevitably have the eccentric, or the loud speaker. The programs include: Tschaikowsky, Debussy, and Ravel with Monteux conducting on Friday, July 25th; and Stravinsky, and Rachmaninoff on Saturday, July 26th, at 8.30 p. m. Sunday, July 27th offers Ravel, and the Tschaikowsky Violin concerto, with Francescatti playing.

[139]

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON,
Mass.
Weekly Independent
Cir. 2,498

JUL 24 1958

Zino Francescatti Tanglewood Soloist

Will Be Featured Sunday with Boston Symphony

Pierre Monteux Will Be Conductor Tomorrow Night In Program of Tchaikovsky and French Music.—Blake Stern, Donald Gramm, Byron Janis Soloists Saturday Evening.

The fourth week-end of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood in Lenox will open on Friday evening with Pierre Monteaux as guest conductor. The orchestra's music director, Charles Munch, will conduct the concerts of Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon. Works of Debussy, Ravel and Tchaikovsky will be featured.

Pierre Monteaux opens his program Friday at 8:30 with Glinka's Overture to "Russlan and Ludmilla," followed by Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony. The second half of the program is devoted to French music, the Overture to Act III of "Les Eumenides" by Darius Milhaud, Debussy's Nocturnes (including "Nuages," "Fetes" and "Sirenes") and Ravel's Choreographic Poem, "La Valse." The choral part in the "Sirenes" will be performed by the ladies of the Festival Chorus, prepared by Lorna Cooke DeVaron.

The Saturday evening concert at 8:30 in the Music Shed will be under the direction of Charles Munch. Dr. Munch will open with Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" which was presented last season for the first time at Tanglewood. The soloists in this work will be Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross.

Byron Janis will be soloist in Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3. This talented young American has appeared with the Boston Symphony on several previous occasions, including last season when he performed the same concerto and recorded it with the orchestra. This will be his first visit to Tanglewood. The concert will close with Debussy's "La Mer."

For the final program of the week-end on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 Dr. Munch will conduct Bartok's Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta, the second suite from Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" and Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto in D major with Zino Francescatti as soloist. Mr. Francescatti has a summer home in Monterey.

The orchestra's final rehearsal for the concerts of the week-end on Saturday morning at 10:00 o'clock will be open to the public. Proceeds are donated to the Boston Symphony Orchestra pension fund.

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON,
Mass.
Weekly Independent
Cir. 2,498

JUL 24 1958

SOLOIST WITH BOSTON SYMPHONY SUNDAY

ZINO FRANCESCATTI

Mr. Francescatti, violinist extraordinary, plays with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, musical director, in the shed at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon at 2:30. Mr. Francescatti will be soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto. He makes his summer home in Monterey.

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 295,512

JUL 20 1958

Berkshire Festival 4th Week Schedule

The Fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., opens with the Friday evening concert, Pierre Monteux, guest conductor. The orchestra's music director, Charles Munch will conduct the concerts of Sat. evening and Sun. afternoon.

The Orchestra's final rehearsal for the concerts of the weekend on Sat. morning, at 10 o'clock will be open to the public. Admission is $1 and proceeds are donated to the Boston Symphony Orchestra Pension Fund.

Adele Addison, the popular young soprano, will be heard in a song recital on Wed. evening, at 8:30 in the Chamber Music Hall. Miss Addison has appeared frequently at Tanglewood both as a Berkshire Festival soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and in opera performances during her years as student at the Berkshire Music Center and is generously donating her services for this concert, the proceeds of which benefit the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund. Miss Addison's regular accompanist, James Payne, will be at the piano and her program is as follows:

Scarlatti—"O pace del mio cor", "Si, si, tornero con lingue d'odori", "Lontananza crudele", "Bramo che le ferite."
Schubert—"Lachen und weinen", "Erlafsees", "Suleika No. 1 and No. 2".
Schumann—"Frauenliebe und Leben".
Hindemith—"On Hearing the Last Rose of Summer", "The Whistlin' Thief", "La Belle Dame sans Merci."
Debussy—"Chansons de Bilitis."
Sessions—"On the Beach at Fontana."
Strilko—"Pandora."
Copeland—"Dirge in the Woods".
Ives—"The Sea'r Walking."

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's Shed Concert programs follow:

Friday at 8:30

Pierre Monteux, Conducting
Glinka—Overture to "Russean and Ludmilla."
Tchaikovsky—Symphony No. 4.
Milhaud—Overture to "Les Eumenides"
Debussy—Three Nocturnes.
Ravel—"La Valse"

Saturday at 8:30

Charles Munch, Conducting
Stravinsky—Canticum Sacrum (Soloists Blake Stern, tenor; Donald Gramm, baritone).
Rachmaninoff—Piano Concerto No. 3 (Soloist: Byron Janis).
Debussy—La Mer.

Sunday at 2:30

Charles Munch, Conducting
Bartok—Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta.
Ravel—"Daphnis and Chloe."
Tchaikovsky—Violin Concerto (Soloist: Zino Francescatti).

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292

JUL 24 1958

Fourth Weekend Of Tanglewood Concerts

The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood will open on Friday evening, July 25, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor. The Orchestra's Music Director, Charles Munch, will conduct the concerts of Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon. Works of Debussy, Ravel and Tchaikovsky will be featured.

Pierre Monteux opens his program at 8:30 with Glinka's Overture to Russlan and Ludmilla, followed by Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony. The second half of the program is devoted to French music: the Overture to Act III of Les Eumenides by Darius Milhaud, Debussy's Nocturnes (including Nuages, Fetes and Sirenes) and Ravel's Choreographic Poem, La Valse. The choral part in the Sirenes will be performed by the ladies of the Festival Chorus, prepared by Lorna Cooke DeVaron.

The Saturday evening concert at 8:30 in the Music Shed will be under the direction of Charles Munch. Dr. Munch will open with Stravinsky's Canticum Sacrum which was presented last season for the first time at Tanglewood. The soloists in this work will be Blake Stern, tenor and Donald Gramm, baritone, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross. Byron Janis will be soloist in Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3. This talented young American has appeared with the Boston Symphony on several previous occasions, including last season when he performed the same concerto and recorded it with the Orchestra. This will be his first visit to Tanglewood. The concert will close with Debussy's La Mer.

For the final program of the weekend on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 Dr. Munch will conduct Bartok's Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta, the second suite from Ravel's Daphnis and Chloe and Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto in D Major with Zino Francescatti as soloist.

The Orchestra's final rehearsal for the concerts of the weekend on [illegible] July 26, at 10 [illegible] open to the public.

RAVENA, N. Y.
NEWS HERALD
Circ. W. 980

JUL 25 1958

ATHENS, N. Y.
HERALD

JUL 24 1958

COXSACKIE, N. Y.
UNION-NEWS
Circ. W. 1,977

JUL 25 1958

CAIRO, N. Y.
HERALD
Circ. W. 415

JUL 24 1958

KINGSTON, N. Y.
PRESS

JUL 24 1958

N. Lebanon Echo – July 22

Tanglewood Festival Enters Fourth Week

The fourth week end of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood in Lenox will open this Friday evening, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor. The Orchestra's Music Director, Charles Munch, will conduct the concerts of Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon. Works of Debussy, Ravel and Tchaikovsky will be featured.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159

JUL 25 1958

Music

The Housatonic Regional Music Center's next concert will be held Friday, August 1, in the town hall, Cornwall, in the evening. Music by Bach, Praetorius, Palestrina and Handel will be featured.

The fourth week end at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. will feature the following programs: Friday, July 25, 8:30 p.m. "Russian and Ludmilla Overture," Glinka; Tschaikovsky's Symphony No. 4; Overture to "Les Eumenides," Milhaud; "Three Nocturnes," Debussy; "La Valse", Ravel; conducted by Pierre Monteux; Saturday, July 26, 8:30 p.m. Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum;" Piano Concerto No. 3, Rachmanioff, Byron Janis, solist; Debussy, "La Mer;" Charles Munch conducting; Sunday, July 27, 2:30 p.m. Music for Strings, Percussion and Celestia, Bartok; "Daphnis and Chloe" second suite, Ravel; Tschaikovsky's Violin Concerto, soloist, Zino Francescatti; Charles Munch conducting all concerts are in the Music Shed. Next Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. in the Theatre Concert Hall, The Kroll Quartet will be heard in music by Mozart, Blackwood, Brahms.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 113,886

JUL 27 1958

Zino Francescatti Soloist At Tanglewood Shed Today

Famed Violinist to Play Tchaikowsky Concerto; Works by Bartok and Ravel On Program; Music of Wagner Featured This Week

Today's concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood at 2:30 p. m. will be conducted by the orchestra's music director, Charles Munch. Zino Francescatti, the French violinist, will appear as soloist in Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto. Dr. Munch opens his program with Bartok's "Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta" and the second suite from "Daphnis and Chloe" by Ravel.

Wagner Programs

The third week end of Berkshire Festival concerts by the orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, on Friday and Saturday evenings (Aug. 1-2) and Sunday afternoon (Aug. 3) will feature the music of Richard Wagner. Concerts will be conducted by Dr. Munch and Pierre Monteux and soloists will include Margaret Harshaw, soprano who will sing a number of selections from Wagner operas; Joseph de Pasquale, violist, in a performance of Walter Piston's viola concerto and Leonard Pennario, pianist, in Liszt's Piano Concerto No. 1.

LEONARD PENNARIO

For the concert on Friday, Dr. Munch will present Wagner's Prelude to "Die Meistersinger", "Siegfried Idyll," and Prelude and "Love-death" from "Tristan and Isolde." Margaret Harshaw will sing the "Love-death" and will close the program in a performance of the "Immolation Scene," the finale of the opera "Gotterdammerung."

Joseph de Pasquale, first violist of the Boston Symphony, will be soloist in the first Tanglewood performance of the viola concerto by Walter Piston. Piston wrote the concerto for De Pasquale and dedicated it to him, and the latter gave the work its first performance in Boston during the season just past.

Pennario Soloist

Dr. Munch will open the program o. Saturday with Wagner's Overture and "Bacchanale" from "Tannhauser." Leonard Pennario, pianist, will be heard in the Liszt first piano concerto. Following the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8, which will also be receiving its first Tanglewood performance. The concert will close with "Siegfried's Rhine Journey" from "Gotterdammerung."

Piere Monteux will conduct an all-Wagner concert on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 3 at 2.30 with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, as soloist. His complete program is as follows: Prulude to "Parsifal", "Air of Kundry" from "Parsifal" (Miss Harshaw), prelude to "Lohengrin", Elsa's Dream from "Lohengrin" (Miss Harshaw), Overture to "Rienzi." Overture to "The Flying Dutchman," "Senta's Ballad" from "The Flying Dutehman" (Miss Harshaw), "Forest Murmurs" from "Siegfried," "Dich, teure Halle" from "Tannhauser" and "The Ride of the Valkyries" from "Die Walkure."

The open rehearsal of Saturday morning will be devoted to the preparation of the Saturday and Sunday Berkshire Festival concertssss. Admission of $1 is donated to the Orchetra's Pension Fund.

Kroll Quartet

The fifth in the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts for the benefit of the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund will be held Wednesday at 8.30 p. m. in the Theater Concert Hall. The popular Kroll Quartet, headed by William Kroll, violinist, and member of the Chamber Music faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will be heard in a program including Mozart's Quartet in C major, K. 465, Easly Blaackwood's String Quartet No. 1 and Brahms' Quartet in C minor, Op. 51, No. 1.

Members of the Kroll Quartet in addition to William Kroll are Louis Graeler, violin, David Mankovitz, viola, and Avron Twerdowsky, cello.

Berkshire Music Center events open to Friends will take place each day of this month to last week of the Tanglewood season. Tomorrow evening (Monday) the scenes from Puccini's "La Rondine," Verdi's "Aida" and "La Traviata." Tuesday evening the Tanglewood Choir will be heard, at 8.30, both concerts to be presented in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Wednesday afternoon at 3.15 in the Chamber Music Hall Hugh Ross, head of the Department of Choral Music will give a lecture, and Thursday evening at 8.30 in the Music Shed the Student Orchestra presenting its weekly concert.

Friday afternoon at 3.15, the fifth program of the Seminar in Contemporary Music will feature Lukas Foss speaking on his own muic and that of Leon Kirchner. Work of both composers will be performed by Fromm Fellowship players. More detailed information may be obtained fromn the Friends Office at Tanglewood.

WEEK'S PROGRAMS AT TANGLEWOOD

Programs for the week at Tanglewood are as follows:—

TODAY, 2.30 P. M.
Boston Symphony Orchestra, Music Shed Charles Munch, conductor
Music for Strings, Percussion & Celesta	Bartok
"Daphnis and Chloe," second suite	Ravel
Violin Concerto	Tchaikowsky
Zino Francescatti, soloist
WEDNESDAY, JULY 30, 8.30 P. M.
Chamber Music by the Kroll Quartet
Quartet in C major, K. 465	Mozart
Quartet No. 1	Blakwood
Quartet No. 1 in C minor, Op. 51, No. 1	Brahms
FRIDAY, AUG. 1, 8.30 P. M.
Boston Symphony Orchestra, Music Shed Charles Munch, conductor
Prelude to "Die Meistersinger"	Wagner
"Siegfried" Idyll	Wagner
Prelude and "Love Death," "Tristan and Isolde"	Wagner
Violin Concerto	Piston
Immolation Scene, "Gotterdammerung"	Wagner
Margaret Henshaw, soprano Joseph De Pasquale, viola
SATURDAY, AUG. 2, 8.30 P. M.
Boston Symphony Orchestra, Music Shed Charles Munch, conductor
Overture and Bacchanale, "Tannhauser"	Wagner
Piano Concerto No. 1 in E flat	Liszt
Leonard Pennario, soloist
Symphony No. 8	Vaughan Williams
"Siegfried's Rhine Journey"	Wagner

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 399,044

JUL 20 1958

Francescatti Tanglewood Soloist

Zino Francescatti will be soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto next Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood in Lenox. He will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch. Another soloist of the weekend will be pianist Byron Janis, in the Rachmaninoff Concerto No. 3, Saturday night.

The first of the Berkshire Music Center student events for Tanglewood's fourth week will be an evening of opera scenes Monday at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall. Members of the opera department, under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, will present excerpts from Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet" and Donizetti's "Don Pasquale" complete. Another evening of opera scenes will be held on Monday, July 28, and a production of Rossini's "Count Ory" on Aug. 4 and 5 will be made.

Detailed programs for the second weekend of the full-scale Berkshire Festival are as follows:

This afternoon at 2:30, Music Shed. Pierre Monteux conducting. Brahms: "Academic Festival" Overture; Piano Concerto No. 1, in D Minor, soloist: Leon Fleisher; Stravinsky: "Petrouchka."

Wednesday at 8:30, Theater-Concert Hall. Adele Addison, soprano, accompanied by James Payne, in songs by Scarlatti, Schubert, Schumann's "Frauenliebe und Leben" cycle; Hindemith, Debussy, Sessions, Strilko, Copland and Ives.

Friday at 8:30, Music Shed. Pierre Monteux conducting. Glinka: Overture to "Russlan and Ludmilla"; Tchaikovsky: Symphony No. 4; Milhaud: Overture to "Les Eumenides"; Debussy: Three Nocturnes, "Clouds," "Festivals" and "Sirens"; Ravel: "La Valse."

Saturday at 8:30, Music Shed. Charles Munch conducting. Stravinsky: Canticum Sacrum, soloists: Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone; Rachmaninoff: Piano Concerto No. 3, soloist: Byron Janis; Debussy: "La Mer."

Sunday, July 27, at 2:30, Music Shed. Charles Munch conducting. Bartok: Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta; Ravel: "Daphnis and Chloe"; Tchaikovsky: Violin Concerto, soloist: Zino Francescatti.

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 103,521

JUL 2[illegible] 1958

Piano And Violin Soloists Slated At Tanglewood

Byron Janis, pianist, and Zino Francescatti, violinist, will be soloists at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this weekend.

Friday evening Piere Monteux, musical director of the San Francisco Symphony, will guest-conduct the Boston Symphony in Glinka's Overture to "Russlan and Ludmilla," Tschaikowsky's Fourth Symphony, the Overture to Act III of "Les Eumenides" by Milhaud, Debussy's Nocturnes and Ravel's "La Valse."

The Boston Symphony's own conductor will take over on Saturday night and Sunday afternoon. Saturday's program includes Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum," Rachmaninoff's Third Piano Concerto with Byron Janis and Debussy's "La Mer."

Sunday afternoon Mr. Munch will present Bartok's Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta, the second suite from Ravel's "Daphnis And Chloe" and Tschaikowsky's Violin Concerto with Mr. Francescatti as soloist.

Earlier in the week, on Wednesday evening, Adele Addison, soprano, will appear in a chamber music recital at Tanglewood. She will sing works by Scarlatti, Schubert, Schumann, Hindemith, Debussy, Sensions, Strilko, Copland and Ives.

All evening programs are at 8:30. The Sunday matinee is at 2:30.

Sunday Republican
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 45,854

JUL 20 1958

Berkshire Concerts Set This Week

The fourth week end of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will open Friday evening, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor. The orchestra's music director, Chadles Munch, will conduct the concerts of Saturday evening and next Sunday afternoon. Works of Debussy, Ravel and Tchaikovsky will be featured.

Mr. Monteux will open his program Friday at 8:30 p. m. with Glinka's Overture to "Ruslan and Ludmilla," followed by Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony. The second half of the program is devoted to French music. The Overture to Act III of "Les Eumenides" by Darius Milhaud, Debussey's Nocturnes (including "Nuages," "Fetes" and "Sirenes") and Ravel's Choreographic Poem, "La Valse." The choral part in the "Sirenes" will be performed by the ladies of the Festival Chorus prepared by Lorna Cooke DeVaron.

The Saturday evening concert at 8:30 in the Music Shed will be under the direction of Dr. Munch. It will open with Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum," which was presented last season for the first time at Tanglewood. The soloists in this work will be Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross. Byron Janis will be soloist in Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3.

RED HOOK, N. Y.
ADVERTISER
Circ. W. 925

JUL 17 1958

ZINO FRANCESCATTI, violinist extraordinary, plays with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Director, in the Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Sunday afternoon, July 27 at 2:30. Mr. Francescatti will be soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto.

CHATHAM, N. Y.
COURIER
Cir. W. 3,500

JUL 17 1958

MILLBROOK, N. Y.
ROUND TABLE
Cir. W. 673

JUL 24 1958

Weekend Concerts At Berkshire Festival

Byron Janis, Zino Francescatti Soloists Saturday and Sunday

The fourth week end of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will open on Friday evening, July 25th, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor. The Orchestra's Music Director, Charles Munch, will conduct the concerts of Saturday evening, July 26th and Sunday afternoon, July 27th. Works of Debussy, Ravel and Tchaikovsky will be featured.

Pierre Monteux opens his program on July 25 at 8:30 with Glinka's Overture to "Russlan and Ludmilla", followed by Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony. The second half of the program is devoted to French music; the Overture to Act III of "Les Eumenides" by Darius Milhaud, Debussy' Nocturnes (including "Nuages", "Fetes" and "sirenes") and Ravel's Choreographic Poem, "La Valse".

The Saturday evening (July 26) concert at 8:30 in the music Shed, under the direction of Charles Munch, will open with Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" which was presented last season for the first time at Tanglewood. The soloists in this work will be Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross. Byron Janis will be soloist in Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3. The concert will close with Debussy's "La Mer".

For the final program of the week end on Sunday afternoon (July 27) at 2:30 Dr. Munch will conduct Bartok's Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta, the second suite from Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" and Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto in D major with Zino Frances catti as soloist.

The Orchestra's final rehearsal for the concerts of the week end on Saturday morning, July 26, at 10 o'clock will be open to the public.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 113,886

JUL 20 1958

MUSIC FEATURES WEEK'S PROGRAM IN BERKSHIRES

Adele Addison Will Be at Tanglewood Wednesday

Pittsfield, July 19—Vacationers in the Berkshire Hills next week will find a full schedule of musical entertainment.

At the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood Wednesday evening, soprano Adele Addison will be heard in a song recital. She will be accompanied by James Payne at the piano and will present a program including songs of Scarlatti, Schubert, Hindemith, Sessions, Strilko, Copland and Ives.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will give performances at Tanglewood Friday and Saturday evening and next Sunday afternoon. Pierre Monteux will conduct the Friday evening concert, which will include Debussy's "Three Nocturnes" and Ravel's "La Valse." Dr. Charles Munch, the BSO's music director, will conduct Saturday and Sunday. Included in the Saturday evening program will be Rachmaninoff's "Piano Concerto No. 3" with Byron Janis as the soloist. The Sunday program will see Zino Francescatti as soloist for Tchaikovsky's "Violin Concerto."

BLANK PAGE

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,566

JUL 19 1958

Tanglewood Plans For Next Week

The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will open on Friday evening, July 25, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor. Charles Munch will conduct the concerts of Saturday evening, July 26, and Sunday afternoon, July 27. Works of Debussy, Ravel, and Tchaikovsky will be featured.

Pierre Monteux will open his program on July 25 with Glinka's Overture to "Russlan and Ludmilla," followed by Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony. The second half of the program will be devoted to French music: the Overture to Act III of "Les Eumenides" by Darius Milhaud, Debussy's Nocturnes (including "Nuages," "Fêtes," and "Sirènes"), and Ravel's Choreographic Poem, "La Valse." The choral part in the "Sirènes" will be performed by the ladies of the Festival Chorus, prepared by Lorna Cooke DeVaron.

* * *

Dr. Munch's Saturday evening concert, July 26, will open with Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum," presented last season for the first time at Tanglewood. The soloists in this work will be Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross.

Byron Janis will be soloist in Rachmaninov's Piano Concerto No. 3. This young American has appeared with the Boston Symphony on several previous occasions, including last season when he performed the same concerto and recorded it with the orchestra. This will be his first visit to Tanglewood. The concert will close with Debussy's "La Mer."

For the final program of the weekend at 2:30 on Sunday afternoon (July 27) Dr. Munch will conduct Bartók's Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta, the second suite from Ravel's "Daphnis et Chloé" and Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto in D major, with Zino Francescatti as soloist.

* * *

The orchestra's final rehearsal for the concerts of the weekend on Saturday morning, July 26 at 10 o'clock will be open to the public. Proceeds are donated to the Pension Fund.

Adele Addison, soprano, will be heard in a song recital on Wednesday evening, July 23, at 8:30 in the Chamber Music Hall. Miss Addison is generously donating her services for this concert, the proceeds of which benefit the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund.

Miss Addison's regular accompanist, James Payne, will be at the piano, and her program will include four songs by Alessandro Scarlatti, four songs by Schubert, the "Frauenliebe und Leben" of Robert Schumann, three songs by Paul Hindemith, Debussy's "Songs of Bilitis," and works by Sessions, Strilko, Copland, and Ives.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,092,455 - S. 3,652,302

JUL 21 1958

Janis Solo

Pianist Byron Janis, who opened the American festival week at the U. S. Pavilion in Brussels, will appear at Tanglewood, Saturday, with the Boston Symphony. He will perform Rachmaninoff's piano concerto No. 2 with Charles Munch conducting.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,937

JUL 19 1958

Monteux Conducts At Tanglewood Friday Night

The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, will open on Friday evenin, July 25th, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor. The orchestra's music director, Charles Munch, will conduct the concerts of Saturday evening, July 26 and Sunday afternoon, July 27. The works of Debussy, Ravel and Tchaikovsky will be featured.

Pierre Monteux opens his program with Glinka's Overture to "Russian and Ludmilla," followed by Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony. The second half of the program is devoted to French music: the Overture to Act III of "Les Eumenides," by Darius Milhaud, Debussy's Nocturnes (including "Nuages," "Fetes" and "Sirenes) and Ravel's Choreographic Poem, "La Valse." The choral part in the "Sirenes" will be performed by the ladies of the Festival Chorus, prepared by Lorna Cooke DeVaron.

The Saturday evening concert will be under the direction of Charles Munch, who will open with Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum." The soloists will be Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross. Byron Janis will be soloist in Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3. The concert will close with Debussy's "La Mer."

For the final program of the weekend on Sunday afternoon, Dr. Munch will conduct Bartok's Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta, the second suite from Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" and Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto in D major with Zino Francescatti as soloist.

The orchestra's final rehearsal for the concerts of the weekend on Saturday morning, July 26, will be open to the public. Admission is $1 and proceeds are donated to the Boston Symphony Orchestra Pension Fund.

Adele Addison will be heard in a song recital on Wednesday evening, July 23, in the Chamber Music Hall. Her program includes four songs by Alessandro Scarlatti, four songs by Schubert, the "Frauenliebe und Leben" of Robert Schumann, three songs by Paul Hindemith, Debussy's "Songs of Bilitis," and works by Sessions, Strilko, Copland and Ives.

News (e)
SOUTHBRIDGE, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 5,083

JUL 25 1958

Where to Go This Weekend

Lake Cochituate in Wayland, Mass., is the site of the National Canoe Racing Championships this Sunday. Members of the 1956 American Olympic team and past national canoe titlists will participate. Free and open to the public.

* * * *

The Boston Symphony orchestra will present three programs this weekend at the Berkshire Festival in Lenox, Mass. Tonight, the works of Tchaikovsky, Debussy and Ravel will be performed under the direction of Pierre Monteux. Charles Munch will conduct Saturday night at 8:30 featuring the works of Stravinsky, Debussy and Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto. Byron Janis, guest artist at the Strand Theater several years ago will be the soloist. Sunday afternoon at 2:30, Munch will conduct works by Ravel and Tchaikovsky's violin concerto with Zino Francescatt as soloist.

SCHENECTADY 7/22/58
GAZETTE PHONE FR 4-4141

Monteux Is Scheduled as Conductor at Tanglewood

Pierre Monteux will be the guest conductor for the Friday evening concert at the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., which will open the fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

* * *

CHARLES MUNCH, the orchestra's music director, will conduct the Saturday evening and the Sunday afternoon concerts. Works of Debussy, Ravel and Tchaikovky will be featured.

The orchestra's final rehearsal for the weekend concerts, on Saturday at 10 a.m., will be open to the public. A nominal admission fee is charged and proceeds are donated to the Boston Symphony Orchestra Pension Fund.

Adele Addison, soprano, will present a song recital tomorrow evening in the Chamber Music Hall, with James Payne at the piano. The program will include four songs by Alessandro Scarlatti, four songs by Schubert, the "Frauenliebe and Leben" of Robert Schumann, three songs by Paul Hindemith, Debussy" "Songs of Bilitis" and works by Sessions, Strilko, Copland and Ives.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 and afternoon programs at 2:30.

* * *

THE FRIDAY evening program will include Glinka's "Overture to Russlan and Ludmilla," followed by Tchaikovsky's "Fourth Symphony." The second half of the program will be devoted to French music and will include the "Overture to Act III of Les Eumenides" by Darius Milhaud; Debussy's nocturnes ("Nuages," "Fetes" and "Sirenes"); and Ravel's choreographic poem, "La Valse."

Dr. Munch will open the Saturday evening concert with Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum," with Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone, as soloists, assisted by the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross. Byron Janis will be soloist in the Rachmaninoff "Piano Concerto Number 3." The concert will close with Debussy's "La Mer."

* * *

DR. MUNCH will conduct the Sunday afternoon program, which will include the Bartok "Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta," the second suite from Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" and the Tchaikovsky "Violin Concerto in D major," with Zino Fancescatti as soloist.

The gala Tanglewood-on-Parade concert has been announced for the evening of Aug. 7 in the Music Shed. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center.

Three members of the music center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazer de Carvalho, head of the department of conducting, will direct a performance of deFalla's "El Amor Brujo." Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer as soloist.

* * *

THE SECOND half of the program will be presented by Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra. The program will include Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne," the "Dance of Wheat" and "Malambo" from "Estancia" by Ginastera; a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story"; an arrangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman; and "76 Trombones" from Meredith Wilson's "The Music Man."

Tickets for the Tanglewood on Parade program are now available at the Tanglewood box office.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

JUL 26 1958

Large Crowds Are Expected At Festival

Shed Concerts Scheduled Tonight, Tomorrow Afternoon

Tanglewood—Two soloists will be featured at th Berkshire Festival concerts in the Music Shed tonight and tomorrow afternoon when Dr. Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in both concerts. Last night 6,437 attended the concert, the second of the Berkshire Nights series.

Tanglewood officials reported this morning there has been a large advance sale for both performances but a few tickets are still available for seats in the Shed. If the weather continues on the bright side, the largest weekend crowd of the season is expected for the concerts.

Tonight's concert, starting at 8:30, will include the works of Stravinsky, Rachmaninoff and Debussy. Byron Janis will be the soloist in Rachmaninoff's piano concerto No. 3.

Tomorrow afternoon at 2:30, Zino Francescatti, summer resident of Monterey, will play Tchaikovsky's violin concerto with the BSO, Dr. Munch conducting in the last half of the program. Other works to be heard will be Bartok's music for strings, percussion and celesta and Ravel's "Daphnis & Chloe," second suite.

The third weekend concerts, Aug. 1, 2 and 3, will feature the music of Wagner, with Dr. Munch conducting two of the concerts and Pierre Monteux, the third on Sunday. Soloists for the weekend will include Margaret Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera soprano, Joseph de Pasquale, first violin of the BSO, and Leonard Pennario, piano.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
POST-STANDARD
Circ. D. 89,399 - S. 97,610

JUL 20 1958

Janis Will Play At Tanglewood

Byron Janis, Pianists, plays the piano concerto No. 3 of Rachmaninoff with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, at 8:30 p.m. Saturday, July 26, in the Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Zino Francescatti, violinist extraordinary, will be soloist in the Tchaikovsky violin concerto at 2:30 p.m. Sunday, July 27, with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood.

Banner (e)
BENNINGTON, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 5,451

JUL 26 1958

2 Concerts At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass. — The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, will feature concerts on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon. Works of Debussy, Ravel and Tchaikovsky will be featured.

The Saturday evening concert at 8:30 in the Music Shed will be under the direction of Charles Munch. Dr. Munch will open with Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" which was presented last season for the first time at Tanglewood.

Soloists in this work will be Blake Stern, tenor and Donald Gramm, baritone, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross.

Byron Janis will be soloist in Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3. This talented young American has appeared with Boston Symphony on several previous occasions, including last season when he performed the same concerto and recorded it with th Orchestra. The concert will close with Debussy's "LaMer."

For the final program of the weekend on Sunday afternoon at 2:30, Dr. Munch will conduct Bartok's Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta, the second suite from Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" and Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto in D major with Zino Francescatti as soloist.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 204,395

JUL 24 1958

American Pianist at Tanglewood Saturday

Byron Janis, celebrated young American pianist, appears at the Tanglewood festival on Saturday. He will be heard in a performance of Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3 with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 17,740

JUL 25 1958

Byron Janis to Perform At Tanglewood Saturday

Byron Janis, making his first Tanglewood appearance, in a performance of Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3, and Zino Francescatti as soloist in Tchaikowsky's Violin Concerto in D Major will be heard with the Boston Symphony Orchestra this weekend at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass.

The fourth weekend of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Music Shed will open tonight with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor. Dr. Charles Munch will conduct the concerts on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon. The works of Debussy, Ravel and Tchaikowsky will be featured.

Pierre Monteux' program will include Glinka's Overture to "Russian and Ludmilla," Tchaikowsky's Symphony No. 4, Overture to "Les Eumenides" by Milhaud, Three Noctures by Debussy and "La Valse" by Ravel.

Saturday night's program will open with Stavinsky's Canticum Sacrum, with Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone, as soloists; Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3 with Byron Janis and La Mer by Debussy.

For the final program of the weekend Sunday afternoon at 2:30 Dr. Munch will conduct Bartok's Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta, the second suite from Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" and Tchaikowsky's Violin Concerto in D Major with Zino Francescatti as soloist.

The evening concerts are scheduled for 8:30. The orchestra's final rehearsal for the concerts of the weekend on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock will as usual be open to the public, the proceeds from the nominal admission fee to be given to the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

JUL 25 1958

BYRON JANIS, pianist, will play the Piano Concerto No. 3 of Rachmaninoff with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, tomorrow night at 8:30 in the Music Shed. He is the fourth of the young American pianists to be featured at Tanglewood this season. He has had wide acclaim on American and European tours.

Monteux on Podium Tonight; Soloists a Weekend Feature

TANGLEWOOD—Pierre Monteux will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra tonight at 8:30 in his second appearance this season at the Music Shed. He will open the program with Glinka's overture to "Russlan and Ludmilla." Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 4 and Milhaud's overture to "Les Eumenides." For the second half of the program Mr. Monteux and the BSO will present Debussy's Three Nocturnes and Ravel's "La Valse."

Piano Concerto

Soloists will appear at the Saturday night and Sunday afternoon concerts with Dr. Charles Munch conducting the BSO at both concerts. Tomorrow night at 8:30 the program will open with Stravinsky's Canticum Sacrum, with Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone, as soloists.

Byron Janis will be heard in Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3 and the evening's program will close with Debussy's La Mer.

Mr. Janis comes to Tanglewood after appearing at the Brussels International Exposition where he opened American Festival Week with a recital at the U.S. Pavilion that won him a 10-minute standing ovation. He appeared as the only solo recitalist in the week-long celebration that included the Philadelphia Orchestra.

Still in his late twenties, Mr. Janis has just completed his 11th transcontinental tour of North America. His career began when his talent was recognized at the age of five. At nine he made his professional debut at Pittsburgh's Carnegie Hall and at the age of 15, a debut with NBC launched him into successive triumphs at Carnegie Hall in 1950, and Europe and South America in 1952.

Francescatti Sunday

Sunday afternoon at 2:30, the BSO program will open with Bartok's Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta and Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe," closing with Zino Francescatti as soloist in Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto.

Tomorrow morning at 10, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's rehearsal will be open to the public. The admission of $1 is donated to the orchestra's pension fund.

Next weekend the orchestra will present concerts featuring the music of Wagner with Dr. Munch conducting Friday and Saturday nights and Mr. Monteux on Sunday afternoon.

PRACTICING at his home, Fiddletop, in Monterey, with a boxer friend, Fiddlesticks, listening, is Zino Francescatti, who will be the Tanglewood soloist Sunday afternoon at 2:30 with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conducting. He will perform Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto.

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 183,539

JUL 20 1958

Berkshire Center's Music Programs

THE FIRST of the Berkshire Music Center student events for Tanglewood's fourth week will be an evening of opera scenes tomorrow night at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Members of the opera department, under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, will present excerpts from Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet" and Donizetti's "Don Pasquale" complete.

The weekly concert of the student orchestra will be held Thursday at 8:30 in the music shed, and the student chamber music concert on Sunday at 10 a.m. in the chamber music hall. A composer's forum will be held on Sunday evening at 8:30.

Marc Blitzstein will speak Friday afternoon at 3:15 in the fourth Seminar in Contemporary Music at the chamber music hall. Mr. Blitzstein will speak on his own music and musical illustrations following his talk will include a complete one-act opera "Triple Sec."

The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the music shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will open Friday evening, July 25, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor. The orchestra's music director, Charles Munch, will conduct the concerts on Saturday evening, and Sunday afternoon. Works of Debussy, Ravel and Tchaikovsky will be featured.

Pierre Monteux opens the program, Friday at 8:30, with Glinka's Overture to "Russlan and Ludmilla," followed by Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony. The second half of the program is devoted to French music.

The Saturday evening concert at 8:30 offers Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum." Soloists will be Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross. Byron Janis will be soloist in Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3. The concert will close with Debussy's "La Mer."

For the final program of the weekend Sunday afternoon at 2:30 Dr. Munch will conduct Bartok's Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta, the second suite from Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" and Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto in D major with Zino Francescatti as soloist.

The orchestra's final rehearsal for the concerts of the weekend on Saturday morning, July 26, at 10 o'clock will be open to the public.

Adele Addison, soprano, will be heard in a song recital on Wednesday evening, July 23 at 8:30 in the chamber music hall.

Byron Janis, pianist, plays at Tanglewood Saturday.

News
WEST HARTFORD,
Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,076

JUL 24 1958

Goings On

FRIDAY, JULY 25

Play. Edward Everett Horton is at the Canton Show Shop, Canton, appearing in "White Sheep of the Family." 8:45 p.m. Friday, and 9 p.m. Saturday. Tickets $2.90. Call Hartford operator and ask for Enterprise 1776.

Play. "Janus" at the Oval in the Grove, Farmington. With Bill Brown, Mary Burns, Bob Pease; Elizabeth Kimball directs. 8:30 Friday and Saturday. Tickets $2.00 Friday, $2.20 Saturday. For reservations, OR 7-9119.

Tanglewood. This weekend the music of Debussy, Ravel, and Tchaikovsky will be featured. Friday, Pierre Monteux will be conducting the Boston Symphony in the Shed. Charles Munch at 8:30 Saturday and 2:30 Sunday. Tickets run from $6.50 to $2.50. For information call Lenox (Mass.) 600.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 399,044

JUL 20 1958

Music, Dance, Theater, in the Berksire Hills

PITTSFIELD, Mass.—Vacationers in the Berkshire Hills this week will find a full schedule of musical entertainment.

At the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood Wednesday evening, soprano Adele Addison will give a song recital. Accompanied by James Payne at the piano, she will present a program including songs of Scarlatti, Schubert, Hindemith, Sessions, Strilko, Copland and Ives.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will give performances at Tanglewood Friday and Saturday evening and next Sunday afternoon. Pierre Monteaux will conduct the Friday evening concert, which will include Debussy's "Three Nocturnes" and Ravel's "La Valse." Dr. Charles Munch, the B.S.O.'s music director, will conduct Saturday and Sunday. Included in the Saturday evening program will be Rachmaninoff's "Piano Concerto No. 3" with Byron Janis as the soloist. The Sunday program will see Zino Francescatti as soloist for Tchaikovsky's "Violin Concerto."

REDUCTION

RATIO

18x

2.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

2.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

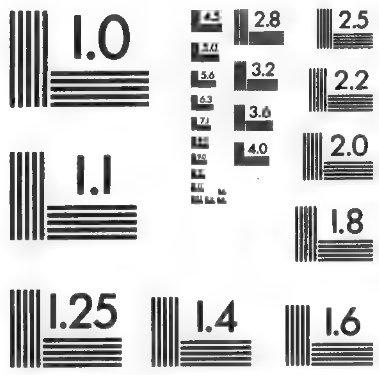
1.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

PM-MGP 13″x18″ METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET PHOTOGRAPHIC

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm



1.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

2.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

2.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

A5

A4

A3

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

4.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

3.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

L-5

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 104,169

JUL 20 1958

MUSIC

Improvisation Forgotten By Contemporary Musicians

By GORDON E. ARMSTRONG

Though improvisation is the essence of Oriental music as well as American jazz, it is a forgotten art among serious contemporary musicians. One of this country's brightest young musicians, Lukas Foss, has recently attempted to remedy this unfortunate state of affairs, as he sees it. In an article which he wrote for the last issue of the Juilliard Review, Foss relates the efforts of his workshop program at UCLA during the past year to restore what he calls "the missing element in our musical life."

Like his brilliant young confrere, Leonard Bernstein, Foss is a composer-conductor-pianist whose career was also given early impetus by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He appeared in Woolsey Hall in the first concert by that celebrated ensemble here during the 1951-52 season, when he was the soloist in a performance of his own second piano concerto. At that time, he was the official pianist of the Boston Orchestra and he filled many solo roles in the orchestra's regular concerts and also in its Berkshire Festival programs for several years.

Though he has been a faculty member at UCLA since 1953, Foss has continued his association with the Boston Orchestra in its summer activities. He is again a faculty member of the Berkshire Music Center this season and his pianistic abilities were called upon in the second concert of the current festival series when he was the soloist in a performance of the Bach D minor Concerto. The accomplished young musician will give the third and final lecture in the Music Center's Wednesday afternoon series on Aug. 6 when his subject will be, "New Music in the United States."

In his Juilliard Review article, Foss maintains that ensemble improvisation is one of the oldest forms of making music and that the revival of the art should be the concern of both composers and performers. However, he reports that his workshop efforts to date have not been too successful but he still believes that the problems involved are not insurmountable.

Foss has been working with a chamber group of six performers, some of whom are also composers, in his attempts to devise a technique that would make contemporary improvised chamber music possible. His basic problem is to set up rules and limitations for the players without stifling the freedom for spontaneous individual expression. Without rules and restrictions to keep the performers together, Foss says that attempts at ensemble improvisation would only result in chaos. Harmonic patterns, such as the blues structure used by jazz musicians, were tried out in the workshop program but these were discarded. According to Foss, the blues pattern is all right for jazz improvisations but the music he envisions must be "completely out of the realm of popular formulae."

Foss has obviously been inspired in this new undertaking by the increasing interest generally in jazz music and the improvising of small jazz combos. He hopes that the barriers between composer and performer may be broken down in chamber music as they have been in the field of jazz. Foss believes the time will come when trios, quartets, and quintets of classically-trained musicians will introduced improvised musical offerings into their regular concert programs. This practice would give the performers a brief opportunity to escape the slavery to the printed note and at the same time lend a spontaneity to their programs by their own creative efforts.

Personally, I see no harm in this new endeavor of the talented Mr. Foss, but I believe that its true validity would be perhaps as an academic pursuit rather than as a concert hall procedure. In truth, the harmonic and contrapuntal complexities of many contemporary chamber works frequently give the listener the impression that each performer is on his own—improvising rather than reading the printed notes. Some modern composers seem to be deliberately giving us the musical chaos which Foss is trying to avoid.

CONCERT AT YALE'S SUMMER SCHOOL

The fifth concert at Norfolk, in the current series of Yale's summer school there, will be given by students on Wednesday afternoon at 3:30. A number of this year's students are graduates of recognized music schools while others are attending leading musical colleges and universities during the regular school year. In view of this fact, listeners at Wednesday's concert in the Music Shed may expect to hear performances of a truly professional caliber.

This will be especially true of the opening work on the program which is to be Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 6 for violas, viola da gambas, violoncelli, and continuo. Four of the participating violists are members of professional symphony orchestras.

Other works to be heard include Debussy's String Quartet, two movements from a Brahms Trio (violin, horn, and piano), a Mozart Divertimento (two clarinets and bassoon) and a work for string orchestra by Yale's Quincy Porter.

BERKSHIRE MUSIC FESTIVAL CONCERTS

Charles Munch, regular conductor of the Boston Symphony, and guest conductor Pierre Monteux, will share podium honors in his fourth week of Berkshire Music Festival concerts by the orchestra. Monteux will conduct Friday evening's program while Dr. Munch will direct the concerts on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon.

The program for Friday's concert is as follows: Overture to Glinka's "Russian and Ludmilla"; Symphony No. 4, by Tchaikovsky; Overture to Act III of "Les Eumenides," by Milhaud; Debussy's Nocturnes; Ravel's "La Valse." The women singers of the Festival Chorus will assist in "Sirenes," the concluding portion of the Debussy work.

The young American pianist, Byron Janis, is to be the guest artist in Saturday's concert when he will make his first Tanglewood appearance. He will be heard in the Rachmaninoff Concerto No. 3, a work which he recorded with the Boston musicians last season. The other two works listed for this concert are Debussy's "La Mer" and Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum." The Festival Chorus will assist in the latter performance with Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone, as the soloists.

Next Sunday afternoon's concert, also under the Munch baton, will present the celebrated violinist, Zino Francescatti, as the guest artist. He will perform Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto in D major as the featured work in the program which also includes Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" (second suite), and Bartok's Music for Strings, Percussion, and Celesta.

Adele Addison, the highly talented young soprano, will give a song recital as this week's event in the Wednesday evening chamber music series at the festival. She is generously donating her services in this recital, the proceeds of which will go to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center where she was formerly a student.

The several student events scheduled for this week are, as usual, open free of charge to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. Anyone making a donation to the school may become a member of the Friends.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 361,379 - S. 576,176

JUL 27 1958

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

By PAUL HENRY LANG

Scholarly Gathering at Cologne

The triennial congress of the International Musicological Society, held at the end of June in Cologne was, as usual, a memorable affair. Hundreds of musical scholars from the "musical nations" of the West were present, but what distinguished this gathering from earlier ones was the diversity of the Society's present membership: there were delegates from Japan, Korea, the Philippines, Ghana and various other Eastern and Far Eastern countries, as well as representatives from behind the Iron Curtain.

Of particular interest to us, however, is the fact that, despite the distance, the United States was represented by a sizable group—close to forty. There were among them seasoned and internationally known musicologists, but also young Fulbright Fellows who, though dispersed all over Europe, somehow managed to attend the congress.

To those who have followed the growth of musicology in America, this impressive turnout was little short of the miraculous; they remember that the first chair of musicology at an American university was founded as recently as 1930. When Dr. Otto Kinkeldey, a distinguished American scholar, then little known in his native country but admired in Europe, was named to the post at Cornell, a new chapter was opened in American musical life. The forceful personality of the incumbent of this chair gave the movement direction and momentum. There is scarcely an American now engaged in the practice of musicology who is not indebted, directly or indirectly, to this great scholar, who at eighty is still doing yeoman work for the cause.

American Musicology

Now, twenty-eight years later, from Cambridge, Mass., to Berkeley, Cal., every major university has chairs of musicology, the American Musicological Society (founded in 1934) boasts a membership of over a thousand, the retiring president of the International Musicological Society, one of the vice-presidents, and another member of the present governing board are Americans.

Perhaps even more impressive is the list of valuable publications in the field of musical scholarship that have seen the light within these twenty-eight years, raising appreciably the musical literacy of the nation and gaining recognition abroad. The American Musicological Society puts out a fine "Journal," the Music Library Association's "Notes" is a reliable guide in musical bibliography, and there is, of course the old "Musical Quarterly," which since 1915 has carried the gospel.

That such a remarkable development could take place within such a short time endlessly puzzles our European colleagues, although Europe has, if unwittingly, made a powerful contribution to this phenomenal development. It is common knowledge that the political events in the thirties forced some of the greatest composers of the first half of our century to take refuge in this country. But Stravinsky, Bartok, Schoenberg, Hindemith, and others, were companioned by equally distinguished musicologists: Curt Sachs, Alfred Einstein, Otto Gombosi, Manfred Bukofzer, to mention a few from among the many. Yet American musicologists labor under handicaps that our foreign colleagues are unable to comprehend.

Old Bugaboo

Until very recently, musicology was looked upon by many musicians and laymen with undisguised hostility. "Why write about music instead of, doing it?" This was the same anti-intellectual point of view the fine arts had to suffer from at the turn of the century, but by the time of Dr. Kinkeldey's appointment American archaeologists and art historians were firmly established in our universities and museums, and many of them became world-famous authorities. In music the old bugaboo that art should be simply enjoyed, not elucidated and understood, is still holding sway, though the picture is rapidly changing.

The Guggenheim Foundation was among the first to recognize the importance of this field of learning, followed by the Humanities Division of the Rockefeller Foundation, and of course the old reliable American Council of Learned Societies is actively fostering American musical scholarship. But all this still amounts to a mere trickle compared to the support given to other fields of learning, and particularly in the area of international scholarly collaboration we are woefully handicapped by lack of funds.

How They Do It

At Cologne the German Federal Government, the State of Rhine-Westphalia, and the City of Cologne contributed substantial sums to make the congress a success. A cabinet minister from Bonn, the Prime Minister of the State, and the Lord Mayor of Cologne addressed the opening session and gave receptions for the participants.

A first class orchestra under the direction of Hermann Scherchen was placed at the disposal of the congress, as was the famous modern opera house of Cologne, the varied resources of the excellent Southwest German Radio (which has several able musicologists on its staff), the great Cathedral Choir, and a number of other institutions. And much of the music heard was fresh from the grill—commissioned for the occasion. A great musical nation, the Germans know the value of scholarship in music, but unlike our musicians they also know that musicologists are the most reliable friends of the living composer, for they know what it is all about.

Well, we still have a long way to go, but should not complain. No other nation can duplicate the tremendous development that has taken place in this country, and we have scholarly ability galore. Eventually adequate support will be forthcoming to back up this ability.

Charles Munch will [illegible] duct three concerts this week at Tanglewood.

HARTFORD, CONN.
COURANT
Circ. D. 97,224 - S. 143,181

JUL 27 1958

onteux raised At anglewood

NGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass.
ial)—This is the weekend
the Boston Symphony Orches-s supposed to be getting in cks on the music of Tschaiky.

Pierre Monteux, long dir of the San Francisco Sym-y and guest conductor here he Berkshire Music Festival lay night, gave the favorite t shrift. Except for Tschai-sky's Fourth Symphony, the ram was almost entirely ded to French compositions, the ude to Act III of "Les enides" by Milhaud, the three turnes of Debussy and "La e" by Ravel.

owever, the audience did not nind in the least. They have ome to love the August and evernore - grandfatherly Mr. Moneaux, with his walrus moustaches. His simple- four-square nd effective style of conducting
For him and the orchestra there was persistent applause even be ween movements of the sym phony. The customers dug the piz zicato section of the Tschaikow sky with a spoon. They, out raged custom be demanding tha
Mr. Monteux and the Bosto players take a bow immediatel after it was finished.

Mr. Monteux conceded. Every body was very happy. It wou have been a good evening for whole program of Tschaikovis romanticism. A haze hung ov the Tanglewood vista, and a lar moon glimmered high in the sk setting the neighboring farm do to barking in melancholy appr ciation.

What Tschaikowsky we were lowed, the Fourth Symphony, w staunchly though not passiona y performed by Mr. Munch.
read it with strongly contras dramatic and lyric sectio throwing the solo instruments to high relief and perking up tempi for extra verve.

It was a vigorous rather t a moving reading, somewhat tained in the French manner a far cry from the wrench emotions that the late, great Se Koussevitzky called up so m times at Tanglewood in the br ing setting of the ancient pi Still, it was elegant and sh in its own way and as has said, a considerable success the customers.

The "Eumenides" excerpt being heard here for the time and some would prob not mind if it were the last.
Milhaud's writing, though in a massive piece of wailing gnashing of teeth suitable to Aeschylus theme, is stan stuff, "Trauermus K" of a and without any special ima tion to commend it. It rece hardly more than a flutte applause and that it sca earned.

As for the rest of the eve however, it was given ov fine rading and playing o familiar Debussy Nocturne
"La Valse." As someone marked, "Monteux knows about this music than the posers did." It all sounded handsome and elegant and liant, and balanced up the cert on the credit side for cerned, on both sides of the lights.

T.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
Herald-American
Circ. S. 218,516

JUL 20 1958

Music

Central New Yorkers get a preview of a new English version of Bizet's "Carmen" at the Lyric Circus this week. The opera opens Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. in the Skaneateles tent.

The Lyric's musical director, Thomas Martin, and his wife Ruth, collaborated in producing the new version.

Starring in the title role will be Jean Sanders, who recently played in Leonard Bernstein's "Trouble in Tahiti" at New York's City Center. This fall Miss Sanders will sing opposite Licia Albanese in "Madame Butterfly" at the Philadelphia Grand Opera.

Back for another show this time singing Escamillo, is Ray Hyson. Tenor Robert Williams, a veteran of more than 30 musicals, will play Don Jose. Phyllis Arick will be seen as Micaela.

Both Martins hasten to make clear that translation is an inappropriate word for their work. They perfer the word version since they point out that a literal translation is not always possible to achieve.

The version is soon to be published by Schirmer's and the couple already has proofs on which they are working. But they plan to make further changes and polish it up before the final printing.

The Martins also believe that it is more important to know the language into which you are translating than the original one in which an opera has been written. They point out that it is always possible to have a literal translation made and from there work with the idiomatic expressions of English, as well as conveying the musical and word sense.

However, both are familiar with many languages. Martin was born in Germany and his wife has spent much time abroad.

Undoubtedly the foremost English translators of opera, Mr. and Mrs. Martin enjoy receiving word that their work is being performed in such a faraway country as Australia. Their versions of "Die Fledermaus," "Marriage of Figaro" and "Cosi Fan Tutte" are performed throughout this country, too, and have been seen at the Metropolitan Opera House and City Center in New York.

The current trend to casting singers who not only have beautiful voices but can act and look the part is particularly appreciated by the couple. Opera is so much more entertaining, they believe when the theatrical side is integrated with the musical portion.

This fall Martin will serve on the conducting staff at the San Francisco Opera and then the family returns to New York.

The Chautauqua Institute offers the opera "Susannah" by Syracuse University graduate Carlisle Floyd at 8:30 p.m. tomorrow. The performance, which will be in Norton Memorial Hall, is under the baton of Julius Rudel.

Also scheduled this week at Chautauqua are: the symphony orchestra conducted by Walter Hendl, Tuesday, 8:30 p.m.; pop concert with music from "Song of Norway," Wednesday, 8:30 p.m.; Gounod's "Faust," Henry Janiec conducting, 8:30 p.m. Friday, and symphony concert with pianist Henry Rauch, 8:30 p.m. Saturday.

The Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood features an opera performance tomorrow evening, a chamber music concert Wednesday evening, and the center orchestra Thursday evening.

The Boston Symphony with guest conductor Pierre Monteux performs music by Tchaikovsky, Debussy and Ravel at 8:30 p.m. Friday in the shed. The following evening Charles Munch wields the baton for a concert which will feature pianist Byron Janis as soloist.

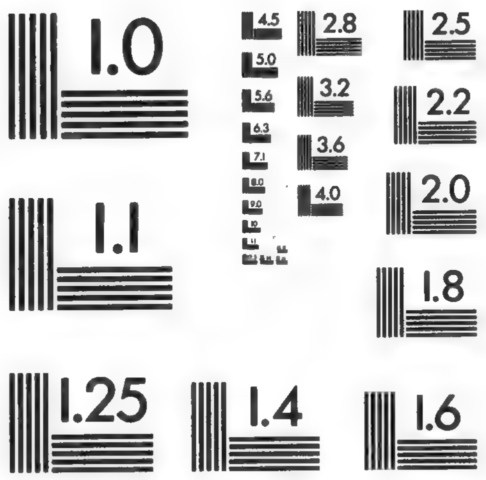
REDUCTION
RATIO
14x

PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm



ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

2.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

2.5 mm

A5

A4

A3

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

[145]

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 104,169

JUL 20 1958

MUSIC

Improvisation Forgotten By Contemporary Musicians

By GORDON E. ARMSTRONG

Though improvisation is the essence of Oriental music as well as American jazz, it is a forgotten art among serious contemporary musicians. One of this country's brightest young musicians, Lukas Foss, has recently attempted to remedy this unfortunate state of affairs, as he sees it. In an article which he wrote for the last issue of the Juilliard Review, Foss relates the efforts of his workshop program at UCLA during the past year to restore what he calls "the missing element in our musical life."

Like his brilliant young confrere, Leonard Bernstein, Foss is a composer-conductor-pianist whose career was also given early impetus by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He appeared in Woolsey Hall in the first concert by that celebrated ensemble here during the 1951-52 season, when he was the soloist in a performance of his own second piano concerto. At that time, he was the official pianist of the Boston Orchestra and he filled many solo roles in the orchestra's regular concerts and also in its Berkshire Festival programs for several years.

Though he has been a faculty member at UCLA since 1953, Foss has continued his association with the Boston Orchestra in its summer activities. He is again a faculty member of the Berkshire Music Center this season and his pianistic abilities were called upon in the second concert of the current festival series when he was the soloist in a performance of the Bach D minor Concerto. The accomplished young musician will give the third and final lecture in the Music Center's Wednesday afternoon series on Aug. 6 when his subject will be, "New Music in the United States."

In his Juilliard Review article, Foss maintains that ensemble improvisation is one of the oldest forms of making music and that the revival of the art should be the concern of both composers and performers. However, he reports that his workshop efforts to date have not been too successful but he still believes that the problems involved are not insurmountable.

Foss has been working with a chamber group of six performers, some of whom are also composers, in his attempts to devise a technique that would make contemporary improvised chamber music possible. His basic problem is to set up rules and limitations for the players without stifling the freedom for spontaneous individual expression. Without rules and restrictions to keep the performers together, Foss says that attempts at ensemble improvisation would only result in chaos. Harmonic patterns, such as the blues structure used by jazz musicians, were tried out in the workshop program but these were discarded. According to Foss, the blues pattern is all right for jazz improvisations but the music he envisions must be "completely out of the realm of popular formulae."

Foss has obviously been inspired in this new undertaking by the increasing interest generally in jazz music and the improvising of small jazz combos. He hopes that the barriers between composer and performer may be broken down in chamber music as they have been in the field of jazz. Foss believes the time will come when trios, quartets, and quintets of classically-trained musicians will introduced improvised musical offerings into their regular concert programs. This practice would give the performers a brief opportunity to escape the slavery to the printed note and at the same time lend a spontaneity to their programs by their own creative efforts.

Personally, I see no harm in this new endeavor of the talented Mr. Foss, but I believe that its true validity would be perhaps as an academic pursuit rather than as a concert hall procedure. In truth, the harmonic and contrapuntal complexities of many contemporary chamber works frequently give the listener the impression that each performer is on his own—improvising rather than reading the printed notes. Some modern composers seem to be deliberately giving us the musical chaos which Foss is trying to avoid.

CONCERT AT YALE'S SUMMER SCHOOL

The fifth concert at Norfolk, in the current series of Yale's summer school there, will be given by students on Wednesday afternoon at 3:30. A number of this year's students are graduates of recognized music schools while others are attending leading musical colleges and universities during the regular school year. In view of this fact, listeners at Wednesday's concert in the Music Shed may expect to hear performances of a truly professional caliber.

This will be especially true of the opening work on the program which is to be Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 6 for violas, viola da gambas, violoncelli, and continuo. Four of the participating violists are members of professional symphony orchestras.

Other works to be heard include Debussy's String Quartet, two movements from a Brahms Trio (violin, horn, and piano), a Mozart Divertimento (two clarinets and bassoon) and a work for string orchestra by Yale's Quincy Porter.

BERKSHIRE MUSIC FESTIVAL CONCERTS

Charles Munch, regular conductor of the Boston Symphony, and guest conductor Pierre Monteux, will share podium honors in his fourth week of Berkshire Music Festival concerts by the orchestra. Monteux will conduct Friday evening's program while Dr. Munch will direct the concerts on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon.

The program for Friday's concert is as follows: Overture to Glinka's "Russian and Ludmilla"; Symphony No. 4, by Tchaikovsky; Overture to Act III of "Les Eumenides," by Milhaud; Debussy's Nocturnes; Ravel's "La Valse." The women singers of the Festival Chorus will assist in "Sirenes," the concluding portion of the Debussy work.

The young American pianist, Byron Janis, is to be the guest artist in Saturday's concert when he will make his first Tanglewood appearance. He will be heard in the Rachmaninoff Concerto No. 3, a work which he recorded with the Boston musicians last season. The other two works listed for this concert are Debussy's "La Mer" and Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum." The Festival Chorus will assist in the latter performance with Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone, as the soloists.

Next Sunday afternoon's concert, also under the Munch baton, will present the celebrated violinist, Zino Francescatti, as the guest artist. He will perform Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto in D major as the featured work in the program which also includes Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" (second suite), and Bartok's Music for Strings, Percussion, and Celesta.

Adele Addison, the highly talented young soprano, will give a song recital as this week's event in the Wednesday evening chamber music series at the festival. She is generously donating her services in this recital, the proceeds of which will go to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center where she was formerly a student.

The several student events scheduled for this week are, as usual, open free of charge to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. Anyone making a donation to the school may become a member of the Friends.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 361,379 - S. 576,176

JUL 27 1958

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

By PAUL HENRY LANG

Scholarly Gathering at Cologne

The triennial congress of the International Musicological Society, held at the end of June in Cologne was, as usual, a memorable affair. Hundreds of musical scholars from the "musical nations" of the West were present, but what distinguished this gathering from earlier ones was the diversity of the Society's present membership: there were delegates from Japan, Korea, the Philippines, Ghana and various other Eastern and Far Eastern countries, as well as representatives from behind the Iron Curtain.

Of particular interest to us, however, is the fact that, despite the distance, the United States was represented by a sizable group—close to forty. There were among them seasoned and internationally known musicologists, but also young Fulbright Fellows who, though dispersed all over Europe, somehow managed to attend the congress.

To those who have followed the growth of musicology in America, this impressive turnout was little short of the miraculous; they remember that the first chair of musicology at an American university was founded as recently as 1930. When Dr. Otto Kinkeldey, a distinguished American scholar, then little known in his native country but admired in Europe, was named to the post at Cornell, a new chapter was opened in American musical life. The forceful personality of the incumbent of this chair gave the movement direction and momentum. There is scarcely an American now engaged in the practice of musicology who is not indebted, directly or indirectly, to this great scholar, who at eighty is still doing yeoman work for the cause.

American Musicology

Now, twenty-eight years later, from Cambridge, Mass., to Berkeley, Cal., every major university has chairs of musicology, the American Musicological Society (founded in 1934) boasts a membership of over a thousand, the retiring president of the International Musicological Society, one of the vice-presidents, and another member of the present governing board are Americans.

Perhaps even more impressive is the list of valuable publications in the field of musical scholarship that have seen the light within these twenty-eight years, raising appreciably the musical literacy of the nation and gaining recognition abroad. The American Musicological Society puts out a fine "Journal," the Music Library Association's "Notes" is a reliable guide in musical bibliography, and there is, of course the old "Musical Quarterly," which since 1915 has carried the gospel.

That such a remarkable development could take place within such a short time endlessly puzzles our European colleagues, although Europe has, if unwittingly, made a powerful contribution to this phenomenal development. It is common knowledge that the political events in the thirties forced some of the greatest composers of the first half of our century to take refuge in this country. But Stravinsky, Bartok, Schoenberg, Hindemith, and others, were companioned by equally distinguished musicologists: Curt Sachs, Alfred Einstein, Otto Gombosi, Manfred Bukofzer, to mention a few from among the many. Yet American musicologists labor under handicaps that our foreign colleagues are unable to comprehend.

Old Bugaboo

Until very recently, musicology was looked upon by many musicians and laymen with undisguised hostility. "Why write about music instead of, doing it?" This was the same anti-intellectual point of view the fine arts had to suffer from at the turn of the century, but by the time of Dr. Kinkeldey's appointment American archaeologists and art historians were firmly established in our universities and museums, and many of them became world-famous authorities. In music the old bugaboo that art should be simply enjoyed, not elucidated and understood, is still holding sway, though the picture is rapidly changing.

The Guggenheim Foundation was among the first to recognize the importance of this field of learning, followed by the Humanities Division of the Rockefeller Foundation, and of course the old reliable American Council of Learned Societies is actively fostering American musical scholarship. But all this still amounts to a mere trickle compared to the support given to other fields of learning, and particularly in the area of international scholarly collaboration we are woefully handicapped by lack of funds.

How They Do It

At Cologne the German Federal Government, the State of Rhine-Westphalia, and the City of Cologne contributed substantial sums to make the congress a success. A cabinet minister from Bonn, the Prime Minister of the State, and the Lord Mayor of Cologne addressed the opening session and gave receptions for the participants.

A first class orchestra under the direction of Hermann Scherchen was placed at the disposal of the congress, as was the famous modern opera house of Cologne, the varied resources of the excellent Southwest German Radio (which has several able musicologists on its staff), the great Cathedral Choir, and a number of other institutions. And much of the music heard was fresh from the grill—commissioned for the occasion. A great musical nation, the Germans know the value of scholarship in music, but unlike our musicians they also know that musicologists are the most reliable friends of the living composer, for they know what it is all about.

Well, we still have a long way to go, but should not complain. No other nation can duplicate the tremendous development that has taken place in this country, and we have scholarly ability galore. Eventually adequate support will be forthcoming to back up this ability.

Charles Munch wi duct three concerts th week at Tanglewood.

HARTFORD, CONN.
COURANT
Circ. D. 97,224 - S. 143,181

JUL 27 1958

nteux aised At nglewood

LEWOOD, LENOX, Mass.)—This is the weekend Boston Symphony Orches- supposed to be getting in s on the music of Tschai-

Pierre Monteux, long di- of the San Francisco Sym- and guest conductor here Berkshire Music Festival night, gave the favorite shrift. Except for Tschai- y's Fourth Symphony, the am was almost entirely de- to French compositions, the de to Act III of "Les nides" by Milhaud, the three rnes of Debussy and "La " by Ravel.

wever, the audience did not in the least. They have e to love the August and ever- e - grandfatherly Mr. Mon- x, with his walrus mousta- s. His simple- four-square effective style of conducting. him and the orchestra there persistent applause even be- en movements of the sym- ny. The customers dug the piz- to section of the Tschaikow- with a spoon. They out- ed custom be demanding that Monteux and the Boston yers take a bow immediately r it was finished.

Mr. Monteux conceded. Every- y was very happy. It would e been a good evening for a ole program of Tschaikovian anticism. A haze hung over Tanglewood vista, and a large on glimmered high in the sky, ing the neighboring farm dogs barking in melancholy appre- ion.

What Tschaikowsky we were al- ed, the Fourth Symphony, was unchly though not passionate- performed by Mr. Munch. He d it with strongly contrasted matic and lyric sections, owing the solo instruments in- high relief and perking up the pi for extra verve.

was a vigorous rather than moving reading, somewhat con- ed in the French manner and far cry from the wrenching otions that the late, great Serge ssevitzky called up so many es at Tanglewood in the brood setting of the ancient pines l, it was elegant and showy its own way and as has been d, a considerable success with customers.

The "Eumenides" excerpt wa ng heard here for the firs e and some would probabl mind if it were the last. haud's writing, though indee massive piece of wailing shing of teeth suitable to schylus theme, is standa ff, "Trauermus K" of a kin d without any special imagin n to commend it. It receiv rdly more than a flutter plause and that it scarc rned.

As for the rest of the even wever, it was given over e rading and playing of miliar Debussy Nocturnes La Valse." As someone arked, "Monteux knows out this music than the sers did." It all sounded ndsome and elegant and nt, and balanced up the rt on the credit side for all c rned, on both sides of the hts.

T.H.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
Herald-American
Circ. S. 218,516

JUL 20 1958

Music

Central New Yorkers get a preview of a new English version of Bizet's "Carmen" at the Lyric Circus this week. The opera opens Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. in the Skaneateles tent.

The Lyric's musical director, Thomas Martin, and his wife Ruth, collaborated in producing the new version.

Starring in the title role will be Jean Sanders, who recently played in Leonard Bernstein's "Trouble in Tahiti" at New York's City Center. This fall Miss Sanders will sing opposite Licia Albanese in "Madame Butterfly" at the Philadelphia Grand Opera.

Back for another show, this time singing Escamillo, is Ray Hyson. Tenor Robert Williams, a veteran of more than 30 musicals, will play Don Jose. Phyllis Arick will be seen as Micaela.

Both Martins hasten to make clear that translation is an inappropriate word for their work. They perfer the word version since they point out that a literal translation is not always possible to achieve.

The version is soon to be published by Schirmer's and the couple already has proofs on which they are working. But they plan to make further changes and polish it up before the final printing.

The Martins also believe that it is more important to know the language into which you are translating than the original one in which an opera has been written. They point out that it is always possible to have a literal translation made and from there work with the idiomatic expressions of English, as well as conveying the musical and word sense.

However, both are familiar with many languages. Martin was born in Germany and his wife has spent much time abroad.

Undoubtedly the foremost English translators of opera, Mr. and Mrs. Martin enjoy receiving word that their work is being performed in such a faraway country as Australia. Their version of "Die Fledermaus," "Marriage

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 361,379 - S. 576,176

JUL 27 1958

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

By PAUL HENRY LANG

Scholarly Gathering at Cologne

The triennial congress of the International Musicological Society, held at the end of June in Cologne was, as usual, a memorable affair. Hundreds of musical scholars from the "musical nations" of the West were present, but what distinguished this gathering from earlier ones was the diversity of the Society's present membership: there were delegates from Japan, Korea, the Philippines, Ghana and various other Eastern and Far Eastern countries, as well as representatives from behind the Iron Curtain.

Of particular interest to us, however, is the fact that, despite the distance, the United States was represented by a sizable group—close to forty. There were among them seasoned and internationally known musicologists, but also young Fulbright Fellows who, though dispersed all over Europe, somehow managed to attend the congress.

To those who have followed the growth of musicology in America, this impressive turnout was little short of the miraculous; they remember that the first chair of musicology at an American university was founded as recently as 1930. When Dr. Otto Kinkeldey, a distinguished American scholar, then little known in his native country but admired in Europe, was named to the post at Cornell, a new chapter was opened in American musical life. The forceful personality of the incumbent of this chair gave the movement direction and momentum. There is scarcely an American now engaged in the practice of musicology who is not indebted, directly or indirectly, to this great scholar, who at eighty is still doing yeoman work for the cause.

American Musicology

Now, twenty-eight years later, from Cambridge, Mass., to Berkeley, Cal., every major university has chairs of musicology, the American Musicological Society (founded in 1934) boasts a membership of over a thousand, the retiring president of the International Musicological Society, one of the vice-presidents, and another member of the present governing board are Americans.

Perhaps even more impressive is the list of valuable publications in the field of musical scholarship that have seen the light within these twenty-eight years, raising appreciably the musical literacy of the nation and gaining recognition abroad. The American Musicological Society puts out a fine "Journal," the Music Library Association's "Notes" is a reliable guide in musical bibliography, and there is, of course the old "Musical Quarterly," which since 1915 has carried the gospel.

That such a remarkable development could take place within such a short time endlessly puzzles our European colleagues, although Europe has, if unwittingly, made a powerful contribution to this phenomenal development. It is common knowledge that the political events in the thirties forced some of the greatest composers of the first half of our century to take refuge in this country. But Stravinsky, Bartok, Schoenberg, Hindemith, and others, were companioned by equally distinguished musicologists: Curt Sachs, Alfred Einstein, Otto Gombosi, Manfred Bukofzer, to mention a few from among the many. Yet American musicologists labor under handicaps that our foreign colleagues are unable to comprehend.

Old Bugaboo

Until very recently, musicology was looked upon by many musicians and laymen with undisguised hostility. "Why write about music instead of doing it?" This was the same anti-intellectual point of view the fine arts had to suffer from at the turn of the century, but by the time of Dr. Kinkeldey's appointment American archaeologists and art historians were firmly established in our universities and museums, and many of them became world-famous authorities. In music the old bugaboo that art should be simply enjoyed, not elucidated and understood, is still holding sway, though the picture is rapidly changing.

The Guggenheim Foundation was among the first to recognize the importance of this field of learning, followed by the Humanities Division of the Rockefeller Foundation, and of course the old reliable American Council of Learned Societies is actively fostering American musical scholarship. But all this still amounts to a mere trickle compared to the support given to other fields of learning, and particularly in the area of international scholarly collaboration we are woefully handicapped by lack of funds.

How They Do It

At Cologne the German Federal Government, the State of Rhine-Westphalia, and the City of Cologne contributed substantial sums to make the congress a success. A cabinet minister from Bonn, the Prime Minister of the State, and the Lord Mayor of Cologne addressed the opening session and gave receptions for the participants.

A first class orchestra under the direction of Hermann Scherchen was placed at the disposal of the congress, as was the famous modern opera house of Cologne, the varied resources of the excellent Southwest German Radio (which has several able musicologists on its staff), the great Cathedral Choir, and a number of other institutions. And much of the music heard was fresh from the grill—commissioned for the occasion. A great musical nation, the Germans know the value of scholarship in music, but unlike our musicians they also know that musicologists are the most reliable friends of the living composer, for they know what it is all about.

Well, we still have a long way to go, but should not complain. No other nation can duplicate the tremendous development that has taken place in this country, and we have scholarly ability galore. Eventually adequate support will be forthcoming to back up this ability.

Charles Munch will conduct three concerts this week at Tanglewood.

HARTFORD, CONN.
COURANT
C... D. 97,224 - S. 143,181

JUL 27 1958

nteux aised At nglewood

LEWOOD, LENOX, Mass. —This is the weekend Boston Symphony Orches- supposed to be getting in s on the music of Tschai-

Pierre Monteux, long di- of the San Francisco Sym- and guest conductor here Berkshire Music Festival night, gave the favorite shrift. Except for Tschai- y's Fourth Symphony, the am was almost entirely de- to French compositions, the de to Act III of "Les nides" by Milhaud, the three rnes of Debussy and "La " by Ravel.

wever, the audience did not ind in the least. They have me to love the August and ever- ore - grandfatherly Mr. Mon- aux, with his walrus mousta- es. His simple- four-square d effective style of conducting. or him and the orchestra there as persistent applause even be- ween movements of the sym- hony. The customers dug the piz- cato section of the Tschaikow- y with a spoon. They out- ged custom be demanding that r. Monteux and the Boston ayers take a bow immediately fter it was finished.

Mr. Monteux conceded. Every- ody was very happy. It would ave been a good evening for a hole program of Tschaikovian manticism. A haze hung over e Tanglewood vista, and a large oon glimmered high in the sky, etting the neighboring farm dogs barking in melancholy appre- iation.

What Tschaikowsky we were al- wed, the Fourth Symphony, was aunchly though not passionate- performed by Mr. Munch. He ead it with strongly contrasted amatic and lyric sections, rowing the solo instruments in- high relief and perking up the mpi for extra verve.

It was a vigorous rather than moving reading, somewhat con- ined in the French manner and far cry from the wrenching motions that the late, great Serge oussevitzky called up so many mes at Tanglewood in the brood- g setting of the ancient pines. ill, it was elegant and showy its own way and as has been id, a considerable success with e customers.

The "Eumenides" excerpt was eing heard here for the first me and some would probably ot mind if it were the last. For ilhaud's writing, though indeed massive piece of wailing and ashing of teeth suitable to the eschylus theme, is standard uff, "Trauermus K" of a kind, d without any special imagina- on to commend it. It received ardly more than a flutter of pplause and that it scarcely arned.

As for the rest of the evening, owever, it was given over to ne rading and playing of the amiliar Debussy Nocturnes and "La Valse." As someone re- arked, "Monteux knows more bout this music than the com- osers did." It all sounded very andsome and elegant and bril- ant, and balanced up the con- ert on the credit side for all con- erned, on both sides of the foot- ights.

T.H.P.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
Herald-American
Circ. S. 218,516

JUL 20 1958

Music

Central New Yorkers get a preview of a new English version of Bizet's "Carmen" at the Lyric Circus this week. The opera opens Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. in the Skaneateles tent.

The Lyric's musical director, Thomas Martin, and his wife Ruth, collaborated in producing the new version.

Starring in the title role will be Jean Sanders, who recently played in Leonard Bernstein's "Trouble in Tahiti" at New York's City Center. This fall Miss Sanders will sing opposite Licia Albanese in "Madame Butterfly" at the Philadelphia Grand Opera.

Back for another show, this time singing Escamillo, is Ray Hyson. Tenor Robert Williams, a veteran of more than 30 musicals, will play Don Jose. Phyllis Arick will be seen as Micaela.

Both Martins hasten to make clear that translation is an inappropriate word for their work. They perfer the word version since they point out that a literal translation is not always possible to achieve.

The version is soon to be published by Schirmer's and the couple already has proofs on which they are working. But they plan to make further changes and polish it up before the final printing.

The Martins also believe that it is more important to know the language into which you are translating than the original one in which an opera has been written. They point out that it is always possible to have a literal translation made and from there work with the idiomatic expressions of English, as well as conveying the musical and word sense.

However, both are familiar with many languages. Martin was born in Germany and his wife has spent much time abroad.

Undoubtedly the foremost English translators of opera, Mr. and Mrs. Martin enjoy receiving word that their work is being performed in such a faraway country as Australia. Their version of "Die Fledermaus," "Marriage of Figaro" and "Cosi Fan Tutte" are performed throughout this country, too, and have been seen at the Metropolitan Opera House and City Center in New York.

The current trend to casting singers who not only have beautiful voices but can act and look the part is particularly appreciated by the couple. Opera is so much more entertaining, they believe when the theatrical side is integrated with the musical portion.

This fall Martin will serve on the conducting staff at the San Francisco Opera and then the family returns to New York.

▼ ▼

The Chautauqua Institute offers the opera "Susannah" by Syracuse University graduate Carlisle Floyd at 8:30 p.m. tomorrow. The performance, which will be in Norton Memorial Hall, is under the baton of Julius Rudel.

Also scheduled this week at Chautauqua are: the symphony orchestra conducted by Walter Hendl, Tuesday, 8:30 p.m.; pop concert with music from "Song of Norway," Wednesday, 8:30 p.m.; Gounod's "Faust," Henry Janiec conducting, 8:30 p.m. Friday, and symphony concert with pianist Henry Rauch, 8:30 p.m. Saturday.

▼ ▼

The Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood features an opera performance tomorrow evening, a chamber music concert Wednesday evening, and the center orchestra Thursday evening.

The Boston Symphony with guest conductor Pierre Monteux performs music by Tchaikovsky, Debussy and Ravel at 8:30 p.m. Friday in the shed. The following evening Charles Munch wields the baton for a concert which will feature pianist Byron Janis as soloist.

HARTFORD, CONN.
COURANT
Circ. D. 97 224 - S. 143,181

JUL 27 1958

Monteux Praised At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass. (Special)—This is the weekend that the Boston Symphony Orchestra is supposed to be getting in its licks on the music of Tschaikowsky.

But Pierre Monteux, long director of the San Francisco Symphony and guest conductor here at the Berkshire Music Festival Friday night, gave the favorite short shrift. Except for Tschaikowsky's Fourth Symphony, the program was almost entirely devoted to French compositions, the Prelude to Act III of "Les Eumenides" by Milhaud, the three Nocturnes of Debussy and "La Valse" by Ravel.

However, the audience did not mind in the least. They have come to love the August and evermore - grandfatherly Mr. Monteaux, with his walrus moustaches. His simple- four-square and effective style of conducting. For him and the orchestra there was persistent applause even between movements of the symphony. The customers dug the pizzicato section of the Tschaikowsky with a spoon. They outraged custom be demanding that Mr. Monteux and the Boston players take a bow immediately after it was finished.

Mr. Monteux conceded. Everybody was very happy. It would have been a good evening for a whole program of Tschaikovian romanticism. A haze hung over the Tanglewood vista, and a large moon glimmered high in the sky, setting the neighboring farm dogs to barking in melancholy appreciation.

What Tschaikowsky we were allowed, the Fourth Symphony, was staunchly though not passionately performed by Mr. Munch. He read it with strongly contrasted dramatic and lyric sections, throwing the solo instruments into high relief and perking up the tempi for extra verve.

It was a vigorous rather than a moving reading, somewhat contained in the French manner and a far cry from the wrenching emotions that the late, great Serge Koussevitzky called up so many times at Tanglewood in the brooding setting of the ancient pines. Still, it was elegant and showy in its own way and as has been said, a considerable success with the customers.

The "Eumenides" excerpt was being heard here for the first time and some would probably not mind if it were the last. For Milhaud's writing, though indeed a massive piece of wailing and gnashing of teeth suitable to the Aeschylus theme, is standard stuff, "Traucrinus K" of a kind, and without any special imagination to commend it. It received hardly more than a flutter of applause and that it scarcely earned.

As for the rest of the evening, however, it was given over to fine rading and playing of the familiar Debussy Nocturnes and "La Valse." As someone remarked, "Monteux knows more about this music than the composers did." It all sounded very handsome and elegant and brilliant, and balanced up the concert on the credit side for all concerned, on both sides of the footlights.

T.H.P.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 - S. 1,189,293

JUL 27 1958

Music: Lenox Double Bill

Russian and French Works on Week-end Programs at Berkshire Festival

By ROSS PARMENTER
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 25—This fourth week-end of the Berkshire Music Festival is to be the Russian-French one. That is, its programs are to be about equally divided between the composers of those two nations. The first of three bi-national programs Friday was led by Pierre Monteux. It attracted an audience of 6,437.

The listeners were blessed with a cool, clear night, and those with blankets and folding chairs, who spread themselves on the lawns outside the Shed, had the spectacle of a moonrise to watch as they listened to the music. The moon was golden as it climbed into the Berkshire sky.

The program included the Prelude to Act III of Milhaud's "Les Eumenides." This was something of a novelty, but otherwise the program did not explore any unexpected byways of the chosen countries.

Russian works on the program were Glinka's Overture to "Russlan and Ludmilla" and Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 4. The French works, in addition to the Milhaud, were the three sections of Debussy's "Nocturnes" and Ravel's "La Valse." The wordless choral part of "Sirenes," the last Debussy Nocturne, was sung by the Festival Chorus, prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon.

The Milhaud Overture is an eight-minute work that builds slowly and relentlessly to a major climax, pauses dead and then builds to a second climax. In its grimness and power it suggested an effective piece for a Greek tragedy in the theatre, but it did not have a great deal of interest as an isolated concert piece.

As it turned out, however, it made an effective curtain-raiser for Debussy's "Nocturnes." Its pulverizing sonorities prepared the ear to receive the French master's subtle impressionism with especial gratitude. Mr. Monteux and the Boston Symphony took wonderful advantage of the stunned silence they had achieved.

The three pieces, "Nuages," "Fetes" and "Sirenes," were each played with a shimmering, atmospheric delicacy. And Mr. Monteux, as is his way with Debussy, managed to achieve remarkable clarity of texture without loss of the floating, gauzy mystery that holds these pieces together.

"La Valse," which followed, was also beautifully played. Mr. Monteux led it with less frenzy and more grace than is customary. Yet there was enough underlying feeling to suggest, and perhaps make even more poignant, the grief that is the core of this music.

The French wing of the program really had much the best of it. The French selections hung together as works on a carefully planned program should, whereas the two Russian works stood in isolation as if they were part of a different evening. And the Russian works were not played with such distinction. The Glinka Overture was jaunty, but fairly routine; while the Tchaikovsky Symphony was songful and pleasing in its second and third movements, but rather bombastic in the first and last ones.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 361,379 - S. 576,176

JUL 27 1958

4th Tanglewood Week Opens With Monteux Conducting

By Jay S. Harrison

Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducting. The program: Overture to "Russian and Ludmilla," Glinka; Symphony No. 4, Tchaikovsky; Overture to "Les Eumenides," Milhaud; Three Nocturnes, Debussy; "La Valse," Ravel.

Pierre Monteux

LENOX, Mass., July 26.—It has got to the point where every time Pierre Monteux conducts a concert it is reproof to youth. At eighty-three he is able to stand on his feet for a full two hours, direct a program of highly charged emotional music, and conclude the entire business by looking fresh as a lily at dawn. If he continues at his present rate, the whole field of geriatrics is likely to topple. And continue he did last night at Tanglewood as the Boston Symphony Orchestra began the fourth week of the current Berkshire Music Festival.

Excluding the Milhaud "Eumenides," there was nothing much in the way of novelty, nor can it be said in all honesty, were the repertory staples given in such a way as to cleanse the ear with their freshness. Still, a standard program sanely and solidly read is the core of concert life, and as a guide through the classics there are few more reliably expert than Maitre Monteux himself. Thus, after a somewhat dispiriting start by way of Glinka's "Russlan and Ludmilla" Overture, the conductor arrived at Tchaikowsky's Fourth Symphony, which the orchestra delivered with enormous thrust and vitality.

No Hysteria

It is to his lasting credit that Mr. Monteux does not ride the old warhorse—as though he were determined to make her win yet another battle; he plays the Symphony for what is inherently potent and powerful about it, and does not ever lay on the whip of hysteria that is so frequently applied to Tchaikovsky's masterwork. He moulds the piece, forms it, gives it pace and direction and allows it to speak on these levels alone. This treatment, too, seems to evoke considerable sympathy in the Boston men who, excepting a badly misplaced woodwind cue in the last movement, equaled their habitual standard in the execution of this particular number. Indeed, the pizzicato movement went so much like hail on a tin roof that Mr. Monteux had the entire string section rise to share in the audience's spontaneous applause.

For that matter, it was only just that the whole orchestra was called to its feet after each of the remaining works on the program. Milhaud's Third Act Prelude to "Les Eumenides," for example, though it found scant favor with the Music Shed listeners, is a searing and tormented excerpt, highly saturated in dissonance and comprising a marvelous array of howling sonorities. In contrast, as everyone knows, Debussy's "Nocturnes' are a muted landscape from the realities of a dreamless life are totally banished. And Ravel's "La Valse" is a churning windmill of a dance which collapses in the whirl of its own rhythm.

These things, at any rate, were among the thoughts that came across a reviewer's mind as he listened to the Boston Symphony spin its magic under Mr. Monteux's concentrated and controlled direction. The presence, as well of an all-female Festival Chorus to participate in the third Nocturne, "Sirenes," made the occasion that much more poetic. Lovely ladies, a royal orchestra and Pierre Monteux—many a mile will you go to find its likes.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,138

JUL 26 1958

Second Berkshire Weekend Concerts On At Tanglewood

The second weekend of shed concerts of the Berkshire Music Festival opened last night at Tanglewood before an audience of 6,347 persons. Pierre Monteux was on the podium.

The program opened with a performance of the overture to "Russian and Ludmilla" by Glinka. Also heard were Tschaikowsky's "Symphony No. 4," Milhaud's overture to "Lest Eumenides," three noctures by Debussy and "La Valse" by Ravel.

Tonight young American pianist Byron Janis will be heard for the first time at Tanglewood in a performance of Rachmaninnoff's "Piano Concerto No. 3." Other works on the program include Stravinsky's "Canticrum Sacrum" and "La Mer" by Debussy. Charles Munch will be the conductor.

The final weekend concert is scheduled at 2:30 tomorrow afternoon. Mr. Munch will again be on the podium and Zino Francescatti will be soloist for a performance of Tschaikowsky's "Violin Conecrto." Also on the program are the second suite from "Daphnis And Chloe" by Ravel, and "Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta" by Bartok.

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 40,029

JUL 28 1958

26,600 Hear Concerts At Tanglewood

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., July 28 — The second weekend of Tanglewood Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra and soloists brought richly varied programs and brilliant performances to 26,600 music lovers so enthusiastic in their appreciation that each of the three concerts had to be interrupted while conductor and orchestra took bows before selections were completed. This was something new at Tanglewood, and though appreciated, had a disturbing influence.

The audience heard Zino Francescatti give a brilliant performance yesterday afternoon in the Tchaikovsky "Violin Concerto in D major" which gave the 10,380 attending all the musicianship his previous performance here had led to expect. It was a rapt audience that listened to his playing of the canzonetta after it had burst into applause at the end of the first movement.

Saturday night's audience just short of 10,000 had been treated to as richly rewarding a performance in the brilliantly forceful playing of the young pianist, Byron Janis, whose playing of Rachmaninoff's "Piano Concerto No. 3 in D minor" received an ovation such as we have never seen in many years at Tanglewood. Janis, who performed recently at the Brussels Fair, played with vigor and delicacy and the audience did not move for minutes after he finished.

Munch Conducts

Charles Munch conducted Sunday and Saturday night in two performances that had the orchestra in top form. Their performances of Ravel's "Daphnis et Chloe" ballet yesterday afternoon was so perfect one might have thought the composer had written it here on the lawns of Tanglewood overlooking the lake with nymphs dancing about on the lawns. There was an ethereal quality about it and yet the orchestra ranged from tenuousness to vital sounds like the thunder and heavy rain of Saturday night's performance of Debussy's "La Mer." It was not the first time that the elements have joined with the orchestra to add sound effects to "La Mer" at Tanglewood. The same happened the last time we heard it here in the Berkshires.

Bartok's "Music for Strings, Percussion, and Celesta" opened the concert yesterday but the mood created by performance of the andante tranquillo was broken by the many late comers who had been delayed by the heavy traffic. Pierre Monteux, conducting the Friday night concert with 6,437 present, got the weekend off to its start with Glinka's overture to "Russian and Ludmilla" and such a fine performance of Tchaikovsky's "Symphony No. 4 in F minor" that conductor and string section had to stand and take a bow after the pizzicato third movement. His conducting of Debussy's "Nocturnes" was delicate and shimmering in marked contrast and in considerable relief from the weird back-room, locked doors effects of Milhaud's prelude to Act III from "The Furies," which made one think of an asylum.

Pension Fund Benefit

To keep the record straight one must add that an additional 4,038 paid admission on Saturday morning for the benefit of the orchestra pension fund to watch and listen to the Boston at its rehearsal.

It will be a Wagner week-end beginning Friday night when Mr. Munch will conduct as he will on Saturday. Pierre Monteux will conduct the Sunday afternoon concert which will be all-Wagner. Leonard Pennario, pianist, will be heard in the Liszt "First Piano Concerto" Saturday and Vaughn William's "Symphony No. [illegible]" will receive its first Tanglewood performance.

S. M.

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 103,521

JUL 26 1958

Monteux Praised At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass. (Special)—This is the weekend that the Boston Symphony Orchestra is supposed to be getting in its licks on the music of Tschaikowsky.

But Pierre Monteux, long director of the San Francisco Symphony and guest conductor here at the Berkshire Music Festival Friday night, gave the favorite short shrift. Except for Tschaikowsky's Fourth Symphony, the program was almost entirely devoted to French compositions, the Prelude to Act III of "Les Eumenides" by Milhaud, the three Nocturnes of Debussy and "La Valse" by Ravel.

No One Minded

However, the audience did not mind in the least. They have come to love the August and evermore - grandfatherly Mr. Monteaux, with his walrus moustaches. His simple- four-square and effective style of conducting. For him and the orchestra there was persistent applause even between movements of the symphony. The customers dug the pizzicato section of the Tschaikowsky with a spoon. They outraged custom be demanding that Mr., Monteux and the Boston players take a bow immediately after it was finished.

Mr. Monteux conceded. Everybody was very happy. It would have been a good evening for a whole program of Tschaikovian romanticism. A haze hung over the Tanglewood vista, and a large moon glimmered high in the sky, setting the neighboring farm dogs to barking in melancholy appreciation.

What Tschaikowsky we were allowed, the Fourth Symphony, was staunchly though not passionately performed by Mr. Munch. He read it with strongly contrasted dramatic and [illegible] sections, throwing the solo instruments into high relief and perking up the tempi for extra verve.

It was a vigorous rather than a moving reading, somewhat contained in the French manner and a far cry from the wrenching emotions that the late, great Serge Koussevitzky called up so many times at Tanglewood in the brooding setting of the ancient pines. Still, it was elegant and showy in its own way and as has been said, a considerable success with the customers.

The "Eumenides" excerpt was being heard here for the first time and some would probably not mind if it were the last. For Milhaud's writing, though indeed a massive piece of wailing and gnashing of teeth suitable to the Aeschylus theme, is standard stuff, "Trauermus K" of a kind, and without any special imagination to commend it. It received hardly more than a flutter of applause and that it scarcely earned.

As for the rest of the evening, however, it was given over to fine rading and playing of the familiar Debussy Nocturnes and "La Valse." As someone remarked, "Monteux knows more about this music than the composers did." It all sounded very handsome and elegant and brilliant, and balanced up the concert on the credit side for all concerned, on both sides of the footlights.

T.H.P.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 60,734

JUL 26 1958

Music: Boston Symphony Excels at Lenox

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — A spectacular performance of Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 4 in F minor, Opus 36, last night heralded the second big weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood. The audience numbered 6,437.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra was conducted by Pierre Monteux.

Some years ago, the late Serge Koussevitzky identified the music of Tchaikovsky as "specialty of the house" with the Boston Symphony under Charles Munch's direction, it has sometimes digressed from that status.

Last night it was revived, in fact this was the best Tchaikovsky we have heard from the Boston Symphony in some years.

The rest of the program was Glinka's "Russian and Ludmilla" overture; the prelude to Act III from "Les Eumenides" by Darius Milhaud; three preludes (Clouds, Festivals, and Sirens) by Debussy; and Ravel's "La Valse."

Brass Fanfares

Spotted brass fanfares marked the opening of the Tchaikovsky Fourth Symphony. But they did have brilliant penetration. It should be pointed out that a muggy night is no help to these instruments.

The morbidity and frustration and despair of the opening movement (which is a subject of unpleasant despair to the Tchaikovsky antagonists) were brought out in the open without becoming maudlin.

Monteux emphasized (we could almost say, created) new orchestral effects, notably some counterpoint in brasses tha is usually left out in the provinces of the instrumentation. The by-play of the woodwinds, led by clarinets, was taken at a singularly slow speed. The prolific cues that holds this business together required no ostentations cues from the conductor. In fact, they were almost imperceptible.

"Fittingly Climactic"

The close of the movement had a little of "Pagliacci," but was fittingly climactic.

An accelerated speed for the second movement (marked andantino) didn't allow much possibility to dwell on the pseudo sorrow that Tchaikovsky not only didn't try to conceal but made into a luxurious outpouring.

The third movement (Sherzo) in plucked strings was a marvel of precision. The string section of the Boston Symphony remains without a peer. There were remarkable gradations of volume that were absolutely synchronized.

Incidentally, as a side issue, Monteux had little patience with the prolonged undertones of approval that followed each movement. He waited without any particular patience for quiet. After the Scherzo, however, he invited the audience to applaud the work of the strings and made the string and woodwind players to rise.

Oddly Shrill

The trio of the Scherzo was oddly shrill-the one serious defect in an otherwise brilliant performance.

Stentorean sound and crashing cymbals were dramatic issues in the symphony's finale. Passage work in the strings was quite phenomenal to a point that Tchaikovsky's melodramatics became dazzling, if obvious.

Powerful incisive chords opened the "Russian and Ludmilla" overture by Glinka. Thereafter, melodies traveled swiftly and with high enthusiasm. The famous second theme was loaded with resonance and sobriety in the cello section.

Significantly, Monteux made no effort to sentimentalize or dramatize the little fragments that are so much like inserted anecdotes as Tchaikovsky used less than a half century later.

Big-Scale Playing

There was little in the overture that belonged to the confines of an operatic orchestra. Rather, it was big-scale playing, but that's what the Russian and Ludmilla overture has developed into-the opera having become obsolete.

Tonight's program will be conducted by Charles Munch. The Boston Symphony will play Debussy's tone-poem, "La Mer." Piano soloist will be Byron Janis in Rachmaninoff's Concerto No. 3 in D minor, Opus 30. The program will include a repeat performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum," which had indifferent reception here last summer. Soloists will be Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone. The festival chorus has been prepared by Hugh Ross for the performance

---

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ: 102,839

JUL 26 1958

4th Concert At Tanglewood Draws 6,437

By JOHN F. KYES

LENOX — The fourth weekend at Tanglewood drew 6,437 last night to a concert conducted by Pierre Monteux, and will continue tonight and Sunday as Charles Munch maintains the emphasis on Ravel, Debussy, Bartok and various Russian composers.

The concert last night, built on strong contrasts, was not technically perfect, but had many perfect moments. The most subtle music was in Debussy's "Nocturnes." We frequently hear "Nuages" with its cloud-pictures, and the exotic "Fetes," enlivened by a strange procession. Less familiar is "Sirenes," where a sweet, wordless song mingles with the ceaseless ocean-murmurs. The sirens last night were 27 women of the Berkshire Festival Chorus, trained by Lorna Cooke de Varon, who has led fine Worcester concerts by the New England Conservatory Chorus.

"La Valse"

Ravel's "La Valse" has had several fine performances in Worcester, under Eugene Ormandy. The Tanglewood version achieved the sense of mists and mystery in the opening, and the final blatancy, to a skilled degree which found the audience still cheering Monteux's fourth recall.

Glinka's Overture to "Russlan and Ludmilla" opened the concert gaily, with deft runs in the violins, but the frequent burst of timpani were handled much too loudly.

The well-played Prelude to Act III from Milhaud's "Les Eumenides" was a malign, awe-inspiring thing, its mounting waves of modern dissonance well suited to the vengeful Greek furies it portrayed.

Tchaikovsky's Fourth

Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony in F. minor was interpreted with great skill, the many and sudden changes of rhythm and mood being encompassed without losing the singing quality of the work.

The initial fateful statements were electrifying, with stunning brasses. Later in this movement, the trumpets were too edgy and cutting.

The pizzicato Scherzo was so marvelous that the audience interupted with applause, and Monteux graciously let the orchestra stand. The "furious Finale" was tossed off with great bravura.

Tonight Byron Janis plays the Rachmaninoff Third Piano Concerto, in which he was much admired at the 1957 Worcester Festival. Sunday brings Zino Francescatti in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto in D. major. Next weekend the spotlight turns to Wagner.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,541

JUL 26 1958

HUB SYMPHONY AND MONTEUX HEARD BY 6437

Beauty Pervades Concert Under Stars at Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 25 — Pierre Monteux, the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the music of Glinka, Tschaikowsky, Milhaud, Debussy, and Ravel, coupled with starry skies and an almost full moon, drew 6437 people to Tanglewood tonight for the first of the weekend concerts in the shed.

Rich Performance

Serge Koussevitzky and Tschaikowsky were so closely associated with Tanglewood that tonight it was difficult to disassociate memories from realities. Mr. Monteux provided a clear cut performance, one rich in detail and contrasts, but lacking in the inner excitement to which we have become accustomed. The sounds which came from the orchestra were nothing short of magnificent. After the scherzo, spontaneous applause caused Mr. Monteux to request the string section to rise.

The program opened with a stunning performance of the overture to "Russlan and Ludmilla" by Glinka. It was another performance which would have delighted the composer, so closely were his demands met. The new upper shield, over the orchestra, has real acoustical value in that it brings out the strings and woodwinds much clearer, so much so, in fact, that sometimes the expected blend does not appear.

In the music of the French composers, Milhaud, Debussy and Ravel, Mr. Monteux was in his element. Milhaud's "Les Eumenides," from which the prelude to the third act was played, is a furious work and it deals with the furies who had snakes instead of hair on their heads. Milhaud is at his most wary musically and horrendous sounds are heard throughout. It is vastly exciting, nevertheless.

Voices Are Heard

The music of Debussy poses no problems for Monteux. In the lovely impressionistic music of the "Nocturnes" one heard the most beautiful tones imaginable. There was no attempt at the theatrical. All was calm and lovely in the "Nuagues," dash and fire in "Fetes" and allure and sensuality in "Sirenes," for which the festival chorus provided a small group of voices. The singer had been prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon.

Ravel's "La Valse" provided a fitting climax to this unusually rewarding program. Again, Mr. Monteux brought a vitality which was almost breath-taking in its impact. This was a performance in which one needed only to listen to grasp the intent of the composer, but one could read in this music what one pleased. The Boston Symphony is an extremely flexible instrument and "La Valse" gained thereby.

Tomorrow the young American pianist Byron Janis will be heard for the first time at Tanglewood, playing Rachmaninoff's third piano concerto. Mr. Munch will open the program with the Stravinsky "Canticum Sacrum," which he introduced last season, and will close the program with "La Mer," by Debussy.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,937

JUL 26 1958

Monteux Leads Boston Symphony Amid Applause

Tonal beauty of many facets was drawn from the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday night in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. Pierre Monteux was conducting. He made the evening an exciting one for the 6,437 listeners.

The 83-year-old conductor received an ovation following the performance. He was interrupted with applause as the orchestra played Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 4 in F minor, Op. 36. With seemingly effortless conducting, Monteux draws the best from the Boston Symphony.

The orchestra opened with a quick, gay, and flamboyant performance of Glinka's Overture to "Russlan and Lumdmilla." The Glinka "showpiece" was followed by Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 4, in which the violin section shone, especially in the second movement. The first movement was dramatic and intense with its rich threads carefully woven. After the light scherzo third movement, the audience interrupted with applause and the violin section was invited to stand by Monteux. The rousing fourth movement with repetition of the various themes and melodies brought another burst of applause. Monteux's interpretation was rich, well integrated.

The furies were unleashed in Milhaud's Prelude to Act III from "Les Eumenides" in which the weird wails and clawing of the Greek mythological beings are heard. A cacophony of sounds intended to create a mood of horror were given full vent by Monteux.

The most beautiful tones of the evening were produced in Debussy's "Nocturnes." Tonal poems were created in the three-part work, each distinctive and lovely. The violin section produced exquisite tonal qualities in "Nuages" which moved serenely calmly as the "clouds" wafted in the heavens. The gay and vibrant quality of "Fetes" was brought out .The piece de resistance of the work was "Sirenes" with 27 members of the Festival chorus, prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon, singing the role of sirens against the sound of the sea. The rhythms of the sea and the echoing calls combined to another distinctive mood.

In keeping with the lyrical tone of the program, the orchestra closed with Ravel's "La Valse." The waltz rhythms were gay accented by pulsating vibrations.

Tonight's Berkshire Festival program will feature Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacram," Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3 in D minor, Op. 30, and Debussy's "La Mer." Pianist Byron Janis, soloists Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone; and the festival chorus will also be heard.

—J. R. M.

---

ampshire Gazette (e)
ORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,286

JUL 26 1958

nteux Directs anglewood Conce

r his second appeara
the Boston Symphony O ra at Tanglewood this we the incomparable Pierre teux chose compositions the nineteenth and twentieth uries, all with program-c intent.
arting with Glinka's Ove to his opera "Russlan an milla," an opera fated to sta in its Russian boundaries, Monteux led an alertly rensive orchestra through a -paced but freshly delineated rpretation of what has come be regarded as the forerunner typically Russian music.
nka's use of the whole-tone
e in the coda, it is interesting note, was fifty years in ad-ce of Debussy's adaptation
t. lthough most people have ome familiar with Tschaikow
's Fourth Symphony through ious media, it nonetheless re ins one of the most musically omplished of his works. Mr nteux did not allow the mus ns to overdisplay its richly ored sonorities; there wa
th of feeling but no sent ntality, capriciousness withou volity, and a majesty bot lliant and commanding in th rformance. The charm of th rd movement to break in ontaneous applause, which M nteux and the orchestra a owledged with pleasure. Wi e close of the festive four e listeners accepted progra atic suggestion and rejoiced very happily projected perfor nce.
Just the proper length ne's sanity, but intriguing he same. Darius Milhaud's P ude to Act III from "Les Eum ides" conjured a murmuring a howling of all the furies little higher roar it seem never to leave a low-pitc boundary of tones. At the be ing the solo winds sounded melodic themes, with other wi brasses and percussion a moaning accompaniment.
the strings finally joined charivari to complete the e discordant and restlessly wa ensemble. Mr. Monteux u standably used a score fo weird offering.
A welcome chaser was De sy's triptych, "Nocturnes."
evocative Nuages was pa
larly welcome at Tanglew where the surroundings ing the ever-changing sky sometimes as evocative music. The vocally
"Sirenes" was well-handle the female members of the val Chorus, prepared by Cook de Varon. Mr. Monteu trolled the balance chorus and orchestra with ty and finesse, resulting graphic and colorful ent though the elan of fered noticeably at times.
The entrancing strains
Viennese waltz treated wa

[148]

anscript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
ndependent Republican
Circ. 26,937

JUL 26 195

onteux Leads oston Symphony mid Applause

Tonal beauty of many facet s drawn from the Bosto
mphony Orchestra Frida ght in the Music Shed nglewood. Pierre Monteu
s conducting. He made th ening an exciting one for th 37 listeners.

The 83-year-old conductor r ived an ovation following th rformance. He was interrup with applause as the orchest
ayed Tchaikovsky's Sympho
. 4 in F minor, Op. 36. Wit emingly effortless conductin onteux draws the best fro
e Boston Symphony.

The orchestra opened with ick, gay, and flamboyant pe rmance of Glinka's Overture ussian and Lummilla." T inka "showpiece" was followe
Tchaikovsky's Symphony N
in which the violin secti one, especially in the seco ovement. The first moveme
s dramatic and intense wi rich threads carefully wove ter the light scherzo th ovement, the audience int pted with applause and t olin section was invited and by Monteux. The rousi urth movement with repe n of the various them d melodies brought anoth rst of applause. Monteux's rpretation was rich, well grated.

The furies were unleashed ilhaud's Prelude to Act III fr
Les Eumenides in which t eird wails and clawing of t reek mythological beings eard. A cacophony of sounds nded to create a mood of horr ere given full vent by Monte
The most beautiful tones of t vening were produced in D ssy's "Nocturnes." Tonal poe ere created in the three-p ork, each distinctive and love e violin section produced isite tonal qualities in "N es" which moved seren imly as the "clouds" wafted e heavens. The gay and vibr hality of "Fetes" was brou
t. The piece de resistance e work was "Sirenes" with embers of the Festival cho epared by Lorna Cooke aron, singing the role of sir ainst the sound of the sea.
ythms of the sea and chorus calls combined to an distinctive mood.

In keeping with the lyr
ne of the program, the orc a closed with Ravel's alse." The waltz rhythms w y accented by pulsating vi ons.

Tonight's Berkshire Festi
ogram will feature Stravins
nticum Sacram," Rachma
's Piano Concerto No. 3 i inor, Op. 30, and Debus
a Mer." Pianist Byron Ja loists Blake Stern, tenor, nald Gramm, baritone; and stival chorus will also be he

—I. R. M

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,286

JUL 26 1958

Monteux Directs Tanglewood Concert

[illegible] appearance [illegible] Boston Symphony Or[illegible] Tanglewood this week-[illegible] Pierre [illegible] compositions [illegible] twentieth [illegible] with program.

[illegible] Glinka's Over[illegible] opera "Russian and [illegible] opera fated to stay [illegible] boundaries. [illegible] Russian [illegible] through a [illegible] freshly delineated [illegible] what has come [illegible] the forerunner [illegible] Russian music. [illegible] use of the whole-tone [illegible] coda, it is interesting [illegible] was fifty years in advance of Debussy's adaptation of it.

Although most people have become familiar with Tschaikowsky's Fourth Symphony through various media, it nonetheless remains one of the most musically [illegible] of his works. Mr. Monteux did not allow the musicians to overdisplay its richly colored sonorities; there was depth of feeling but no sentimentality, capriciousness without [illegible] and a majesty both [illegible] and commanding in the [illegible]. The charm of the [illegible] movement to break into [illegible]ous applause, which Mr. Monteux and the orchestra acknowledged with pleasure. With the close of the festive fourth, [illegible]teners accepted program[illegible] suggestion and rejoiced at [illegible] happily projected perform[illegible]

Just the proper length for one's sanity, but intriguing all the same, Darius Milhaud's Prelude to Act III from "Les Eumenides" conjured a murmuring and a howling of all the furies one can imagine; from a low growl to a little higher roar it seemed never to leave a low-pitched boundary of tones. At the beginning the solo winds sounded the melodic themes, with other winds, brasses and percussion a low moaning accompaniment, until the strings finally joined the charivari to complete the eerily discordant and restlessly wailing ensemble. Mr. Monteux understandably used a score for this weird offering.

A welcome chaser was Debussy's triptych, "Nocturnes." The evocative Nuages was particularly welcome at Tanglewood, where the surroundings, including the ever-changing sky, are sometimes as evocative as the music. The vocally trying "Sirenes" was well-handled by the female members of the Festival Chorus, prepared by Lorna Cook de Varon. Mr. Monteux controlled the balance between chorus and orchestra with subtlety and finesse, resulting in a graphic and colorful entity, although the elan of both suffered noticeably at times.

The entrancing strains of a Viennese waltz treated with expressionistic skill by Maurice Ravel, in his "La Valse" and consumated with understanding exactitude and artistry by Mr. Monteux and the virtuoso orchestra, ended an engaging musical evening, attested to by prolonged and vociferous applause.

This evening's program will include Rachmaninoff's Third piano concerto played by Byron Janis, Debussy's "La Mer" and Stravinsky's "Canticrum Sacrum," with Charles Munch conducting.—Mde.B. B.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 113,886

JUL 27 1958

AUDIENCE GIVES PIANIST OVATION AT TANGLEWOOD

Byron Janis Applauded for Performance of Rachmaninoff Concerto

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 26—The bright particular star of tonight's concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch was Byron Janis, pianist who made known his very considerable gifts during a performance of Rachmaninoff's "Piano Concerto No. 3, in D Minor."

Virtuoso Performance

We have seldom seen a Tanglewood audience wax more enthusiastic, and with reason, for one heard a virtuoso perform.

The program opened with a work Mr. Munch introduced to Tanglewood last summer, Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" for tenor, baritone, chorus and orchestra. A second hearing of this work and a study of a recorded performance have somewhat mellowed our feeling about this work, but we still dislike it.

Tonight, with Donald Gramm and Blake Stern as the soloists, and the festival chorus singing the best we have heard it this season, the work assumed a more reasonable pattern but it is still unlovely. Mr. Munch evidently has a fondness for the work, for he lavished his power upon it and received remarkable support from all the participants.

Sings Very Well

Mr. Gramm sang exceedingly well, personalizing his fine solo and in so doing, humanizing it. Mr. Stern revealed his fine musicianship and ably seconded Mr. Gramm in the duets. The chorus is asked to do almost the impossible but Mr. Ross had worked diligently with the singers and all went well.

Stravinsky wrote the "Sacred Canticle in Honor of Saint Mark" in 1955. It had its first performance at the festival in Venice in 1956. Opening and closing with verses from the book of Mark, the work is appropriately devoted to the patron Saint of Venice.

We first heard Byron Janis about five years ago and felt then he was a sensitive and gifted young man. Tonight he revealed himself as a virtuoso pianist, but still sensitive and aware of the instrument's limitations. Seldom was the orchestra able to drown out this pianist, yet he could, and did, provide some of the most beautiful singing tones imaginable. He had a full array of colors at his command and used them judiciously. The "Intermezzo" was exquisite in its detail and colorations and the monumental finale was a stunning example of great pianism fully backed by a superb orchestral collaboration. Mr. Janis plays easily and seldom gives the effect that he is about to climb into the piano. He has fingers of steel under absolute control.

"La Mer" Presented

The final work on the program was DeBussy's "La Mer." Mr. Munch has made these three orchestral sketches very much his own and tonight the ear was regaled, with beautiful sounds. There was no denying the rich detail and balanced symmetry of the music, nor its sensuous appeal to the ear. The ideal was always evident. The work could have had no more sympathetic treatment.

An estimated 9736 persons heard the concert which had the added excitement of thunder and lightning most of the evening.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 104,590

JUL 27 1958

Music: Janis Triumphs At Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — A fiery performance of Rachmaninoff's piano Concerto No 3 in D Minor by Byron Janis won him a tremendous ovation at Tanglewood last night.

This was the second concert of Series "B" of the Berkshire Music Festival. The Boston Symphony was conducted by Charles Munch.

Balance of the program was Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" for tenor, baritone, chorus and orchestra — and Debussy's tone poem, "La Mer."

The Tanglewood audience is usually enthusiastic, but it reserves its "bravos" for the very best. Janis heard them in abundance last night at the conclusion of the Rachmaninoff.

A Hit Here Last Fall

This is the piano concerto with which he created something of a furore at the Worcester Music Festival last October. It is clearly his work, technically, interpretively, and temperamentally.

It may not accomplish anything to make comparisons between two performances with different orchestras, but the fact is that last night's had even more excitement. For one thing, we have rarely heard better co-ordination between a solo instrument and orchestra.

Munch consistently placed his soloist is the interpretive "Driver's Seat," in matters of tempo, dynamics, and disposition. There were moments, particularly in the final movement, where one might have wanted less orchestra and more piano — but, oddly enough, the method seemed to enhance and exhilarate climaxes.

Janis gave a sensitive delivery of the opening passages. His technique was fluent and vibrant, with incisive accents and a magnificent control over dynamics.

In the second movement, he took advantage of every opportunity to make the piano sing with warmth. Some climaxes of the first and final movements were arrived at with a degree of fever, but were part and parcel of a carefully calculated plan.

Some Turbulence

The pianist crashed through some of the turbulent passages—perhaps a bit too violently for their own good. But this was playing of the most exciting order—and definitely an antidote for the music that preceded it.

As in past years, it is again the policy at Tanglewood to combine, on nearly every program, works of solid proven substance with contemporary music. This can be accepted with approval, on the surface.

In the case of last night's program, the choice was unfortunate. When Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" was performed here last summer, it received indifferent or hostile response. It is probable that a select few liked it.

It is a mystery why another Tanglewood audience should have been subjected to it.

The work opens and closes with verses from the Book of Mark, the Evangelist. The tenor solo is a verse from the Song of Solomon.

It is extremely doubtful if "Canticum Sacrum" would receive even polite attention if Stravinsky's name were not affixed to it.

"Just Plain Boring"

Also, it could be argued that his earlier works, like "Rite of Spring" and "Firebird", received violent reactions in their day. But both of them were either irritating or temper arousing. The "Canticum Sacrum" is just plain boring.

The chorus of 100 voices from the Berkshire Music Center earned admiration for its determined adherence to pitch.

The abbreviated orchestra and organist Alfred Nash Patterson were adept.

Winds Admirable

The winds, in particular, were to be admired for maintaining accuracy in passages that sounded like improvised, individual rehersals.

These mechanical virtues, plus resonant qualities of voice, distinguished the soloists — Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone.

Whatever the reason for performing "Canticum Sacrum," nothing more was accomplished than to prove, more emphatically, that it is abysmally lacking in interest.

Applause of admirable politeness from an audience of 9,736 was proof enough.

This afternoon's concert by the Boston Symphony will be conducted by Munch. Zino Francescatti will be violin soloist in the Tchaikovsky Concerto. Orchestra works are Bartok's music for strings, percussion, and celesta—and the second Daphnis and Chloe suite by Ravel.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

JUL 26 1958

Monteux at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

PIERRE MONTEUX led the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first concert of the fourth weekend of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood last night. It was his second guest appearance of the season and he chose a program on the popular side, which pleased his audience extremely well.

The only novelty of the evening was the prelude to the third act of Milhaud's incidental music to Claudel's translation of the Aeschylus drama "Les Eumenides." This is a short, unrelieved mood sketch which makes a very deep impression by never deviating from its purpose. Milhaud requires an enlarged orchestra here and, in addition to the last man on the orchestra's roster, there were further recruited a half-dozen brass players consisting of three saxophones, of which one was an E flat baritone, and three Wagnerian tubas which were used in lieu of saxhorns.

* * *

MILHAUD deliberately blurs the introduction by asking the wind instruments to play in clusters of tones. Through this foggy background, he allows a trombone to play a doleful lament in a reiterated, wailing, half-step descent. The strings do not enter until the moaning and mourning have been firmly established, but the augmented winds have by this time accumulated a volume of decibels and reached a degree of grief without respite that the strings find too much competition.

If Milhaud was trying to convey the processes of the mythical Furies as they settle accounts with mortals for their earthly transgressions, he succeeded beyond dispute. The insistent cacophonous mood became a method of flagellation which exactly scored its point. The audience was not moved — even found it bewildering, but we are indebted to Monteux for introducing us to graphically powerful scene.

* * *

GLINKA'S overture to "Russian and Ludmilla" opened the concert. The Boston Symphony played with remarkable zest for their guest conductor, and when the subordinate theme arrived in the violas and cellos, the tone soared with strength and abandon.

At the inaugural concert of the Berkshire Festivals on the Hanna estate 24 years ago, Henry Hadley, leading 65 men from the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra, included the last two movements of the Tchaikovsky fourth symphony on his program. Last night, Monteux played the whole symphony and won a tremendous ovation. It was a reading conspicuously unsentimental, very speedy, very loud, very exciting and a trifle careless. In the introduction after the stentorian fanfare, the first reposeful chord, in E major, and the ensuing modulations were not as effective as they might have been.

* * *

OBOEIST Ralph Gomberg played the Canzona first theme with noticeable grace. There was no doubt how Monteux wished to contrast the subordinate theme here, for he took it certainly swifter than it is commonly played although he made the "piu mosso" valid. The pizzicato scherzo was a virtuoso performance. The string players were divided in their schools of plucking the strings, but the result was scintillating. Whereas Monteux discouraged end-of-movement interruptions by applause, at the completion of the scherzo he practically solicited a show of appreciation of the brilliant performance his men had produced for him.

He concluded his concert with Debussy's three Nocturnes and the Ravel "La Valse." After the Milhaud, this music of the preceding French generation was an undemanding contrast. The English horn solos by Louis Speyer were played with beautiful inflection and a short viola sentence by Joseph de Pasquale was played in a telling manner. The "Fetes" were played with infectious gaiety and the "Sirenes" enlisted a part of the soprano section of the Festival chorus, trained by Lorna Cooke de Varon, which added immeasurably to the effectiveness of these beautiful impressions. The score calls for only eight sopranos and mezzo-sopranos but 24 sang last night. They sing without text and are used as components of the orchestra. Monteux gave them more prominence than is usually permitted. Their first entrance was considerably more ample than was justified, but it was a reading in which the elusive and fleeting delicacy, in the main, was fully realized.

* * *

"LA VALSE" dates from the almost unreal days of the ballet in the second decade of this century in Paris. All the factors were present which contributed to the d'oeuvres. First and basically were composers capable of responding to the inspiration furnished by individuals and the spirit of the times. No music exudes exhiliration and pure inspiration to exceed this mighty page of Ravel. Eighty-three-year-old Monteux gave it a performance marked by youthful exuberance. The orchestra played with incandescent verve.

Sun — July 28

MUSICIANS RISE TO RARE HEIGHT IN RAVEL WORK

Violinist Also Acclaimed By Audience of 10,379 At Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 27 — The largest audience of the current Tanglewood season, 10,379, heard one of the greatest performances of the "Daphne et Chloe" second suite that Director Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony players have ever given. If there is such a thing as an inspired performance, this was it. In addition to the Ravel item, Mr. Munch chose to program the Bartok piece titled, "Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta," and Tschaikowsky's "Violin Concerto in D Major" with the distinguished violinist Zino Francescatti as soloist.

Grows Upon One

Bartok's music is of the sort that grows upon one with repeated hearings. His "Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta" is at first a baffling listening experience, but this afternoon it emerged clearly and logically and, excitingly. Mr. Munch was at his most persuasive. There were terrific climaxes and eerie pianissimi. The passages for the celesta, were splendidly played by harpist Bernard Zighera. Mr.

Musicians Rise

Continued From Page 1

Munch was so pleased with the performance and the performers that he recognized several for special acknowledgement.

It was in the Ravel performance that the distinguished French conductor was at his most rewarding. Seldom have we heard such gorgeous sounds emerge from an orchestra, particularly in the opening sketch, "Lever Du Jour." Colors were piled high atop of each other and the tapestry of tone was rich and lustrous. The impact of the "Danse Generale" was tremendous. People sat stunned at its close, but only for a moment. Then applause burst forth like a thunderstorm and it did not cease for many minutes.

At Top Form

When Zino Francescatti is in top form, as he was this afternoon, one is sure to hear violin playing of the very best. So it was in the Tschaikowsky Violin Concerto. A virtuoso piece at its best, Mr. Francescatti and Mr. Munch brought a good deal more than bravura to it. Sentimentalism was rampant, but not too much so, particularly in the first movement. It was a performance of fine breadth and spaciousness. The Canzonetta was beautifully lyrical and fireworks of the finale were dazzling. Mr. Francescatti received splendid collaboration from Mr. Munch and the Boston players and the [illegible] of this performance was very fine. In fact, it is doubtful that any audience will hear a finer performance of this concerto, for Mr. Francescatti has the rich, full tone it needs and the tremendous technical facility demanded for its complete revelation.

[148]

anscript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
dependent Republican
Circ. 26,937

JUL 26 [illegible]

onteux Leads oston Symphony mid Applause

Tonal beauty of many face s drawn from the Bosto mphony Orchestra Frida ght in the Music Shed nglewood. Pierre Monteu s conducting. He made th ening an exciting one for th 37 listeners.

The 83-year-old conductor r ived an ovation following th rformance. He was interrup with applause as the orchest ayed Tchaikovsky's Symphon . 4 in F minor, Op. 36. Wi emingly effortless conductin nteux draws the best fro e Boston Symphony.

The orchestra opened with ick, gay, and flamboyant p rmance of Glinka's Overture ussian and Lummilla." T inka "showpiece" was follow Tchaikovsky's Symphony N in which the violin secti one, especially in the seco ovement. The first moveme s dramatic and intense wi rich threads carefully wov fter the light scherzo th ovement, the audience int pted with applause and t olin section was invited and by Monteux. The rousi urth movement with repe on of the various them d melodies brought anoth urst of applause. Monteux's rpretation was rich, well grated.

The furies were unleashed ilhaud's Prelude to Act III fr Les Eumenides," in which eird wails and clawing of reek mythological beings eard. A cacophony of sounds nded to create a mood of hor ere given full vent by Monte The most beautiful tones of vening were produced in D ssy's "Nocturnes." Tonal poe ere created in the three-p ork, each distinctive and love e violin section produced isite tonal qualities in " es" which moved seren lmly as the "clouds" wafted e heavens. The gay and vibr uality of "Fetes" was brou t. The piece de resistance e work was "Sirenes" with embers of the Festival cho repared by Lorna Cooke aron, singing the role of sir ainst the sound of the sea. ythms of the sea and hoing calls combined to an [illegible] mood.

In keeping with the lyr ne of the program, the orc a closed with Ravel's alse." The waltz rhythms w y accented by pulsating vi ons.

Tonight's Berkshire Festi ogram will feature Stravinsk anticum Sacram," Rachma 's Piano Concerto No. 3 i inor, Op. 30, and Debus a Mer." Pianist Byron Ja loists Blake Stern, tenor, onald Gramm, baritone; and stival chorus will also be he

—I. R. M

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,286

JUL 26 1958

Monteux Directs Tanglewood Concert

[illegible] Pierre [illegible] program. [illegible] Glinka's over [illegible] "Russian and [illegible] boundaries [illegible] through a [illegible] delineate [illegible] the foreground [illegible] Russian [illegible] the wholesome [illegible] it is interesting [illegible] fifty years in ad- [illegible] Debussy's adaptation

[illegible] most people have [illegible] familiar with Tschaikow- [illegible] Symphony through [illegible] it nonetheless re- [illegible] of the most musically [illegible] of his works. Mr. [illegible] did not allow the musi- [illegible] overdisplay its richly sonorities; there was [illegible] feeling but no senti- [illegible] capriciousness without [illegible] and a majesty both [illegible] and commanding in the [illegible] mance. The charm of the [illegible] movement to break into [illegible] ous applause, which Mr. [illegible] and the orchestra ac- [illegible] edged with pleasure. With [illegible] of the festive fourth, [illegible] teners accepted program- [illegible] ggestion and rejoiced at [illegible] appily projected perform-

[illegible] the proper length for [illegible] sanity, but intriguing all [illegible] Darius Milhaud's Pre- [illegible] to Act III from "Les Eumen- [illegible] conjured a murmuring and [illegible] wling of all the furies one [illegible] imagine; from a low growl to [illegible] higher roar it seemed [illegible] leave a low-pitched [illegible] dary of tones. At the begin- [illegible] ng the solo winds sounded the melodic themes, with other winds, [illegible] sses and percussion a low moaning accompaniment, until the strings finally joined the charivari to complete the eerily discordant and restlessly wailing ensemble. Mr. Monteux understandably used a score for this weird offering.

A welcome chaser was Debussy's triptych, "Nocturnes." The [illegible] ative Nuages was particularly welcome at Tanglewood, where the surroundings, including the ever-changing sky, are sometimes as evocative as the music. The vocally trying "Sirenes" was well-handled by the female members of the Festival Chorus, prepared by Lorna Cook de Varon. Mr. Monteux controlled the balance between chorus and orchestra with subtlety and finesse, resulting in a graphic and colorful entity, although the elan of both suffered noticeably at times.

The entrancing strains of a Viennese waltz treated with expressionistic skill by Maurice Ravel, in his "La Valse" and consumated with understanding exactitude and artistry by Mr. Monteux and the virtuoso orchestra, ended an engaging musical evening, attested to by prolonged and vociferous applause.

This evening's program will include Rachmaninoff's Third piano concerto played by Byron Janis, Debussy's "La Mer" and Stravinsky's "Canticrum Sacrum," with Charles Munch conducting.—Mde.B. B.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 113,886

JUL 27 1958

AUDIENCE GIVES PIANIST OVATION AT TANGLEWOOD

Byron Janis Applauded for Performance of Rachmaninoff Concerto

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 26—The bright particular star of tonight's concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch was Byron Janis, pianist who made known his very considerable gifts during a performance of Rachmaninoff's "Piano Concerto No. 3, in D Minor."

Virtuoso Performance

We have seldom seen a Tanglewood audience wax more enthusiastic, and with reason, for one heard a virtuoso perform.

The program opened with a work Mr. Munch introduced to Tanglewood last summer, Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" for tenor, baritone, chorus and orchestra. A second hearing of this work and a study of a recorded performance have somewhat mellowed our feeling about this work, but we still dislike it.

Tonight, with Donald Gramm and Blake Stern as the soloists, and the festival chorus singing the best we have heard it this season, the work assumed a more reasonable pattern but it is still unlovely. Mr. Munch evidently has a fondness for the work, for he lavished his power upon it and received remarkable support from all the participants.

Sings Very Well

Mr. Gramm sang exceedingly well, personalizing his fine solo and in so doing, humanizing it. Mr. Stern revealed his fine musicianship and ably seconded Mr. Gramm in the duets. The chorus is asked to do almost the impossible but Mr. Ross had worked diligently with the singers and all went well.

Stravinsky wrote the "Sacred Canticle in Honor of Saint Mark" in 1955. It had its first performance at the festival in Venice in 1956. Opening and closing with verses from the book of Mark, the work is appropriately devoted to the patron Saint of Venice.

We first heard Byron Janis about five years ago and felt then he was a sensitive and gifted young man. Tonight he revealed himself as a virtuoso pianist, but still sensitive and aware of the instrument's limitations. Seldom was the orchestra able to drown out this pianist, yet he could, and did, provide some of the most beautiful singing tones imaginable. He had a full array of colors at his command and used them judiciously. The "Intermezzo" was exquisite in its detail and colorations and the monumental finale was a stunning example of great pianism fully backed by a superb orchestral collaboration. Mr. Janis plays easily and seldom gives the effect that he is about to climb into the piano. He has fingers of steel under absolute control.

"La Mer" Presented

The final work on the program was DeBussy's "La Mer." Mr. Munch has made these three orchestral sketches very much his own and tonight the ear was regaled with beautiful sounds. There was no denying the rich detail and balanced symmetry of the music, nor its sensuous appeal to the ear. The ideal was always evident. The work could have had no more sympathetic treatment.

An estimated 9736 persons heard the concert which had the added excitement of thunder and lightning most of the evening.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 104,590

JUL 27 1958

Music: Janis Triumphs At Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — A fiery performance of Rachmaninoff's piano Concerto No 3 in D Minor by Byron Janis won him a tremendous ovation at Tanglewood last night.

This was the second concert of Series "B" of the Berkshire Music Festival. The Boston Symphony was conducted by Charles Munch.

Balance of the program was Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" for tenor, baritone, chorus and orchestra — and Debussy's tone poem, "La Mer."

The Tanglewood audience is usually enthusiastic, but it reserves its "bravos" for the very best. Janis heard them in abundance last night at the conclusion of the Rachmaninoff.

A Hit Here Last Fall

This is the piano concerto with which he created something of a furore at the Worcester Music Festival last October. It [illegible] early his work, technically, [illegible] pretively, and temperament[illegible].

It may not accomplish anything to make comparisons between two performances with different orchestras, but the fact is that last night's had even more excitement. For one thing, we have rarely heard better co-ordination between a solo instrument and orchestra.

Munch consistently placed his soloist is the interpretive "Driver's Seat," in matters of tempo, dynamics, and disposition. There were moments, particularly in the final movement, where one might have wanted less orchestra and more piano — but, oddly enough, the method seemed to enhance and exhilarate climaxes.

Janis gave a sensitive delivery of the opening passages. His technique was fluent and vibrant, with incisive accents and a magnificent control over dynamics.

In the second movement, he took advantage of every opportunity to make the piano sing with warmth. Some climaxes of the first and final movements were arrived at with a degree of fever, but were part and parcel of a carefully calculated plan.

Some Turbulence

The pianist crashed through some of the turbulent passages—perhaps a bit too violently for their own good. But this was playing of the most exciting order—and definitely an antidote for the music that preceded it.

As in past years, it is again the policy at Tanglewood to combine, on nearly every program, works of solid proven substance with contemporary music. This can be accepted with approval, on the surface.

In the case of last night's program, the choice was unfortunate. When Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" was performed here last summer, it received indifferent or hostile response. It is probable that a select few liked it.

It is a mystery why another Tanglewood audience should have been subjected to it.

The work opens and closes with verses from the Book of Mark the Evangelist. The tenor solo a verse from the Song of Solom

It is extremely doubtful "Canticum Sacrum" would ceive even polite attention Stravinsky's name were not fixed to it.

"Just Plain Boring"

Also, it could be argued his ear[illegible] works, like "R Spring" [illegible] "Firebird", re violent [illegible]ctions in thei but both [illegible] them were ei ritating or temper arousin "Canticum Sacrum" is ju boring.

The chorus of 100 voic the Berkshire Music Cente admiration for its determ herence to pitch.

The abbreviated orche organist Alfred Nash were adept.

Winds Admirabl

The winds, in particu to be admired for m accuracy in passages th like improvised, individ sals.

These mechanical v resonant qualities of tinguished the soloists Stern, tenor, and Don baritone.

Whatever the reas forming "Canticum nothing more was than to prove, more that it is abysmally interest.

Applause of admira from an audience proof enough.

This afternoon's c Boston Symphony w ed by Munch. Zin will be violin s Tchaikovsky Concer works are Bartok' strings, percussion, and the second Dap suite by Ravel.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

JUL 26 1958

Monteux at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

PIERRE MONTEUX led the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first concert of the fourth weekend of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood last night. It was his second guest appearance of the season and he chose a program on the popular side, which pleased his audience extremely well.

The only novelty of the evening was the prelude to the third act of Milhaud's incidental music to Claudel's translation of the Aeschylus drama "Les Eumenides." This is a short, unrelieved mood sketch which makes a very deep impression by never deviating from its purpose. Milhaud requires an enlarged orchestra here and, in addition to the last man on the orchestra's roster, there were further recruited a half-dozen brass players consisting of three saxophones, of which one was an E flat baritone, and three Wagnerian tubas which were used in lieu of saxhorns.

* * *

MILHAUD deliberately blurs the introduction by asking the wind instruments to play in clusters of tones. Through this foggy background, he allows a trombone to play a doleful lament in a reiterated, wailing, half-step descent. The strings do not enter until the moaning and mourning have been firmly established, but the augmented winds have by this time accumulated a volume of decibels and reached a degree of grief without respite that the strings find too much competition.

If Milhaud was trying to convey the processes of the mythical Furies as they settle accounts with mortals for their earthly transgressions, he succeeded beyond dispute. The insistent cacophonous mood became a method of flagellation which exactly scored its point. The audience was not moved — even found it bewildering, but we are indebted to Monteux for introducing us to a graphically powerful scene.

* * *

GLINKA'S overture to "Russlan and Ludmilla" opened the concert. The Boston Symphony played with remarkable zest for their guest conductor, and when the subordinate theme arrived in the violas and cellos, the tone soared with strength and abandon.

At the inaugural concert of the Berkshire Festivals on the Hanna estate 24 years ago, Henry Hadley, leading 65 men from the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra, included the last two movements of the Tchaikovsky fourth symphony on his program. Last night, Monteux played the whole symphony and won a tremendous ovation. It was a reading conspicuously unsentimental, very speedy, very loud, very exciting and a trifle careless. In the introduction, after the stentorian fanfare, the first reposeful chord, in E major, and the ensuing modulations were not as effective as they might have been.

* * *

OBOEIST Ralph Gomberg played the Canzona first theme with noticeable grace. There was no doubt how Monteux wished to contrast the subordinate theme here, for he took it certainly swifter than it is commonly played although he made the "piu mosso" valid. The pizzicato scherzo was a virtuoso performance. The string players were divided in their schools of plucking the strings, but the result was scintillating. Whereas Monteux discouraged end-of-movement interruptions by applause, at the completion of the scherzo he practically solicited a show of appreciation of the brilliant performance his men had produced for him.

He concluded his concert with Debussy's three Nocturnes and the Ravel "La Valse." After the Milhaud, this music of the preceding French generation was an undemanding contrast. The English horn solos by Louis Speyer were played with beautiful inflection and a short viola sentence by Joseph de Pasquale was played in a telling manner. The "Fetes" were played with infectious gaiety and the "Sirenes" enlisted a part of the soprano section of the Festival chorus, trained by Lorna Cooke de Varon, which added immeasurably to the effectiveness of these beautiful impressions. The score calls for only eight sopranos and mezzo-sopranos but 24 sang last night. They sing without text and are used as components of the orchestra. Monteux gave them more prominence than is usually permitted. Their first entrance was considerably more ample than was justified, but it was a reading in which the elusive and fleeting delicacy, in the main, was fully realized.

* * *

"LA VALSE" dates from the almost unreal days of the ballet in the second decade of this century in Paris. All the factors were present which contributed to the d'oeuvres. First and basically were composers capable of responding to the inspiration furnished by individuals and the spirit of the times. No music exudes exhiliration and pure inspiration to exceed this mighty page of Ravel. Eighty-three-year-old Monteux gave it a performance marked by youthful exuberance. The orchestra played with incandescent verve.

Sun Union - July 28

MUSICIANS RISE TO RARE HEIGHT IN RAVEL WORK

Violinist Also Acclaimed By Audience of 10,379 At Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 27 — The largest audience of the current Tanglewood season, 10,379, heard one of the greatest performances of the "Daphne et Chloe" second suite that Director Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony players have ever given. If there is such a thing as an inspired performance, this was it. In addition to the Ravel item, Mr. Munch chose to program the Bartok piece titled, "Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta," and Tschaikowsky's "Violin Concerto in D Major" with the distinguished violinist Zino Francescatti as soloist.

Grows Upon One

Bartok's music is of the sort that grows upon one with repeated hearings. His "Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta" is at first a baffling listening experience, but this afternoon it emerged clearly and logically and, excitingly. Mr. Munch was at his most persuasive. There were terrific climaxes and eerie pianissimo. The passages for the celesta, were splendidly played by harpist Bernard Zighera. Mr.

Musicians Rise

Continued From Page 1

Munch was so pleased with the performance and the performers that he recognized several for special acknowledgement.

It was in the Ravel performance that the distinguished French conductor was at his most rewarding. Seldom have we heard such gorgeous sounds emerge from an orchestra, particularly in the opening sketch, "Lever Du Jour." Colors were piled high atop of each other and the tapestry of tone was rich and lustrous. The impact of the "Danse Generale" was tremendous. People sat stunned at its close, but only for a moment. Then applause burst forth like a thunderstorm and it did not cease for many minutes.

At Top Form

When Zino Francescatti is in top form, as he was this afternoon, one is sure to hear violin playing of the very best. So it was in the Tschaikowsky Violin Concerto. A virtuoso piece at its best, Mr. Francescatti and Mr. Munch brought a good deal more than bravura to it. Sentimentalism was rampant, but not too much so, particularly in the first movement. It was a performance of fine breadth and spaciousness. The Canzonetta was beautifully lyrical and fireworks of the finale were dazzling. Mr. Francescatti received splendid collaboration from Mr. Munch and the Boston players and the [illegible] of this performance was very [illegible]. In fact, it is doubtful that any audience will hear a finer performance of this concerto for Mr. Francescatti has the rich, full tone it needs and the tremendous technical facility demanded for its complete revelation.

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 53,178

JUL 28 1958

[149]

Summer Circuit

Tanglewood Takes on Gallic Air

By ORMONDE PLATER
Knickerbocker News Music Critic

THIS weekend at Tanglewood held a distinctly Gallic air. Pierre Monteux, who conducted the Friday night concert, and Charles Munch, who led the other two, are both French, and so were Debussy and Ravel, the main composers.

One might also add that Debussy and Ravel were the most French of the French composers. They were musical poets, whose poems breathed of French atmosphere—an atmosphere not only of cosmopolitan Paris but of the lights and colors away from the cities.

The feelings they brought to these poems were like those of the avant-garde French painters of their time, the late 19th and early 20th Century. Scenes from life became musical impressions, and the composer became the man through whose quick eyes we see the scenes.

* * *

ALMOST EVERYONE has heard one or two works by both Debussy and Ravel, and they were probably the ones the Boston Symphony Orchestra played this weekend—Debussy's "Nocturnes" and "La Mer" and Ravels "La Valse" and "Daphniset Chloe" (the second suite)—in an almost hackneyed program.

But the commonplace does no harm when the performance is superior, as it was. M. Monteux and Dr. Munch were bound to do no less for their countrymen's music.

The big evening for Debussy and Ravel was Friday (which also included another French work, the prelude to Act III of Darius Milhaud's incidental music to Aeschylus' "Les Eumenides").

M. Monteux, who dresses for Berkshire Festival concerts as if he were going boating (blue jacket, white trousers, white ducks), lightly brushed the senses with the three Debussy "Nocturnes" — impressions of sky, atmosphere and sea. "La Valse" become less a waltz than a shimmering painting of a waltz.

The "Eumenides" piece is likewise mood music, but what a mood! You could hear dark figures moving in the shadows as befits girls who have snakes for hair.

* * *

"LA MER," an expansion of the love for the sea that Debussy revealed in the final "Nocturne," was played on Saturday night with Dr. Munch conducting. And he also led the "Daphnis et Chloe" suite yesterday afternoon. It's an example of Ravel's admiration of dancers and dancing (you know about "Bolero").

The Russians, too, had a hand in the weekend's programs. Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony and Violin Concerto (Zino Francescatti on fiddle), Rachmaninoff's Third Piano Concerto (Byron Janis at the keyboard) Stravinsky's new "Canticum Sacrum" and Glinka's "Russian and Ludmilla" Overture were played.

M. Monteux's conducting of the Tchaikovsky Fourth ran into mud in the slow second movement, but he certainly dragged it out afterwards. It leaped into that famous plucking and ended in a brilliantly executed, charging final movement, which brought lightning into the Tanglewood skies. For a man of 83, M. Monteux can hurl bolts when he wants to.

* * *

THE STAVINSKY work ("Sacred Canticle in Honor of Saint Mark") was first performed in 1956 at the Venice Festival, and the Boston Symphony also tried it last summer. It's far from the brightest of Stravinsky's religious compositions, but Dr. Munch brought it back on Saturday night.

The only truly modern work of the weekend was Bartok's Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta, performed yesterday. Bartok composed this work, which is alternately mysterious and folksy, in 1936.

It was all quite a way to prepare for the contrast of the coming weekend. That, with lots of Wagner, will be heavily Germanic.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,286

JUL 28 1958

Throng Of 10,000 Cheers Francescatti, Director Munch

A host of 10,000 music-lovers et al poured into Tanglewood's spacious grounds and Concert Shed Sunday afternoon to hear the Boston Symphony directed by Charles Munch, in the fourth weekend of the current Berkshire Festival. They were not disappointed in either music or performers.

Bartok, the composer, almost stole the day from Francescatti, the violinist. His absorbing and exciting "Music for Celesta, Percussion and Strings" started the program. Since the unusual seating arrangement didn't quite follow the composer's intent exactly, it was rather difficult to tell exactly where the string groups were separate and where merged from this person's vantage point. The piano and celesta were obviously in the middle, with the percussion to the left and center, back of the strings.

As is customary, the first movement was disconected from the ensuing three by the usual latecomers, its mood lost in the chatter and bustle. However, one remembers well the layers of melodic and instrumental invention that are the whole composition; the pursuit of little-used and unexplored tonal and percussive possibilities in the non-percussive instruments, including "col legno," "sul ponticello" and repetitive glissandi; the wide range of the percussion instruments. It is music of many dimensions, fertile themes and variegated harmonics, with the vibrant Dr. Munch and his orchestra giving it a most emphatic interpretation with unusually demanding skill. Dr. Munch shared the tumultuous applause with Charles Smith, the talented percussion head, and of course his eminent orchestra.

It was well that the rearrangement of the orchestral seating to normal took several minutes, for Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite No. 2 which followed needed a clear atmosphere for its inception. As it was, the "Lever de Jour" did not get the usual hushed treatment by Dr. Munch and his musicians; day "broke" pretty rapidly, no doubt the gymnastics of the Bartok did not help to induce the necessary piannissimos; but the homogeneous sounds were expectant and fulfilling, the Pantomime with its solo instruments evocative. Described by the composer as a "choreographic symphony" Mr. Munch took the orchestra beyond this nomenclature, in the last movement particularly. No dancers whirled in one's imagination, but sound whirled and surrounded one with the unbounded energy and dynamism Dr. Munch imposes on his players, stereophonic sound at its highest degree.

Tschaikowsky's violin concerto, so often overplayed with gooey sentimality and distorted rhythms, became a vehicle of pure classic elegance with Zino Francescatti's approach. The ease of technique that is his, the impeccable taste in phrasing, his superlative vibrato and resonant rotund harmonics, topped by a tone that is pure silk, (not heavy or penetrating), resulted in a performance one is seldom privileged to hear. Dr. Munch was extremely attentive to Mr. Francescatti throughout, subduing the orchestra when it tended to overplay, especially at the very beginning. The audience lingered long to express their satisfaction, Mr. Francescatti insisting on including Mr. Munch at each outburst. Afterwards, Dr. Munch graciously refused to sign autographs, as it was Mr. Francescatti's day, he remarked.

M. deB. R.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D. 570,717 S. 1,168 844

JUL 28 1958

Music: At Tanglewood

Francescatti and Janis Week-End Soloists

By ROSS PARMENTER
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 27—At each of his two concerts this week-end at Tanglewood, Charles Munch gave festival-goers an astringent modern appetizer, a big Russian concerto and a heaped-up serving of French impressionism.

The week-end, like the three previous ones of the festival, was dogged by overcast skies. Nevertheless the concert Saturday night, when it rained hard, drew 9,736, and this afternoon's program attracted 10,379. These are the two largest audiences so far this summer.

The soloists in the two big concertos were Zino Francescatti, who played the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto this afternoon, and Byron Janis, who played Rachmaninoff's Third Piano Concerto last night.

This was Mr. Janis' first appearance at Tanglewood. He was the fourth in the succession of young American pianists who are being featured as soloists this summer. Lukas Foss, Seymour Lipkin, Leon Fleisher were his predecessors. Leonard Pennario and Eugene Istomin are the pianists still to be heard.

•

Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum," which Mr. Munch led at last summer's Berkshire Festival too, was the modern work on Saturday. Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, Baritone, were the soloists, Alfred Nash Patterson was at the organ, and the choir was the Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross.

Stravinsky's orchestral accompaniment dispenses with violins and 'cellos. With its short phrases, dark-hued strings, organ and Gabrieli-like brasses, it seemed puzzlingly esoteric to a number of listeners, yet it held the audience in absorbed silence. Mr. Munch led it reverently, and particularly beautiful moments were provided by the women singers in the "Fides" and by the combination of chorus and Mr. Gramm in the section beginning "Jesus Autem."

Mr. Janis scored a resounding popular success in the Rachmaninoff Concerto. He deserved the plaudits, for he was brilliant technically, and he brought unfailing intensity to the work, both in its passages of melting romanticism and in its heroic thunders. Mr. Munch matched his big-scaled approach with a virile and exciting accompaniment.

Debussy's "La Mer" closed the program, and it was during this number that the rain came. There was lightning and thunder, too. As it turned out, these contributions of the weather were not inappropriate, for Mr. Munch led the work in a particularly stormy fashion. To this listener it was coarse-grained and not a bit magical, but it, too, brought long applause from the large audience.

Byron Janis

The modern work on this afternoon's program was Bartók's Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta. The Impressionist work was Ravel's second "Daphnis et Chloe" ballet suite. Both received virtuoso performances, for although Mr. Munch led them with careful attention to detail and strict dynamic control, he also infused them with warmth and tension and built them stirringly to their climaxes.

•

Mr. Francescatti is the only big-name instrumental soloist who is appearing at this year's festival. In the Tchaikovsky Concerto he displayed the attributes that have brought him fame: the technical assurance, the warmth of tone and the distinction and grace of phrasing. It was a performance that always held the attention, but in his reading the work did not have as much [illegible] lyricism as it sometimes has in other hands. However, it was a performance of a high level, and it was very cordially received.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 60,734

JUL 28 1958

Music: Brilliant Program At Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — Three brilliant performances — music by Bartok, Ravel, and Tchaikovsky — closed the second big weekend of concerts yesterday afternoon at Tanglewood.

Yesterday's attendance at the Berkshire Music Festival was 10,379, bringing the total figure for this weekend to 26,552.

Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the soloist was violinist Zino Francescatti.

Yesterday's modern work was a most happy choice, attesting favorably to the festival's policy of combining standard repertory with contemporary music. It was Bartok's 'Music for Strings, Percussion, and Celesta."

Contemporary Idioms

Written in 1936, this work features what might be considered by the purists the best issues in contemporary idioms. The audience was clearly and consistently entertained — and inspired.

This music specializes in beauty of sound. It also proves that harmonic purity and straight-lined melody are not requisites of the modern language.

Munch and the orchestra gave it a sensitive, virile, sympathetic performance. The work of Everett Firth, timpanist, was of such excellence that Munch called him to the front of the stage for a bow.

Ingratiating Sounds

Odd and ingratiating sounds were heard from the start of the first movement. Blankets of muffled but euphonious tone were originating points for vital melodies. Rhythms were maintained in direct patterns, and harmonies were not overly set in complexities.

Boiling points were reached in the second movement. The percussion instruments, particularly piano and xylophone, cut through frenzied backgrounds. Munch directed the series of climaxes, drawing out rich instrumental colorations and precipitous speeds.

Most Beautiful

Most beautiful of the sounds were heard in the third movement, which is initiated with a kind of cricket effect in xylophone. The texture was rich in harmonies and gorgeous instrumental combinations. Sharp attacks in strings were subtly developed in langorous, mystical passages.

Munch brought out heavily emphasized syncopation in the finale, which could be powerful fodder for the jazzists. The movement develops into a raucous conglomeration of conflicting rhythms and percussive effects.

Sensitivity and brilliance were the main attributes of Francescatti's playing of the Tchaikovsky violin concerto.

He derived a silken tone, adroitly phrased, in the opening movement. Most important, he didn't allow the work [illegible] into another "war-horse" production. It was too highly personal and communicative for that. He definitely raised it out of the run-of-the-mill category.

Difficulties Disguised

Even the most stringent passages of the first and third movements were done with ease, poise, vitality, and relaxation. In fact, the severe difficulties were quite throughly disguised. The first movement cadenza had all of these qualities, with the exception of one of two spots where pitch might have been subject to question.

The fullest measure of Francescatti's sensitivity and dignified approach to the concerto appeared in the slow movement. He placed effective stress on its simple beauty without attempting to convert it into sticky romanticism.

Perfect Vehicle

Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" suite no. 2 was a perfect vehicle with which to demonstrate the virtuosity of the Boston Symphony. Both conductor and orchestra were in perfect fettle for a dazzling performance.

The fountain-like start of "Daybreak" was projected in luxuriant sounds. Here, and in "Pantomine", Nicole Henriot Dwyer produced as pure flute phrases as we have ever heard in this work.

"General Dance" was nothing short of tremendous. Rhythms were energized to the hilt and the movement closed with geysers of brilliant sounds.

Friday Night

The festival will resume Friday night. Series "C" will be devoted mainly to music by Wagner.

Friday night's program by the Boston Symphony, conducted by Charles Munch, will include the prelude to "Die Meistersinger," "Siegfried Idyll," prelude and "Love Death" from "Tristan and Isolde," and the 'Immolation Scene" — all by Wagner. Violist Joseph de Pasquale will be soloist in the Piston Concerto.

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 53,178

JUL 28 1958

[149]

Summer Circuit

Tanglewood Takes on Gallic Air

By ORMONDE PLATER
Knickerbocker News Music Critic

THIS weekend at Tanglewood held a distinctly Gallic air. Pierre Monteux, who conducted the Friday night concert, and Charles Munch, who led the other two, are both French, and so were Debussy and Ravel, the main composers.

One might also add that Debussy and Ravel were the most French of the French composers. They were musical poets, whose poems breathed of French atmosphere—an atmosphere not only of cosmopolitan Paris but of the lights and colors away from the cities.

The feelings they brought to these poems were like those of the avant-garde French painters of their time, the late 19th and early 20th Century. Scenes from life became musical impressions, and the composer became the man through whose quick eyes we see the scenes.

* * *

ALMOST EVERYONE has heard one or two works by both Debussy and Ravel, and they were probably the ones the Boston Symphony Orchestra played this weekend—Debussy's "Nocturnes" and "La Mer" and Ravels "La Valse" and "Daphniset Chloe" (the second suite)—in an almost hackneyed program.

But the commonplace does no harm when the performance is superior, as it was. M. Monteux and Dr. Munch were bound to do no less for their countrymen's music.

The big evening for Debussy and Ravel was Friday (which also included another French work, the prelude to Act III of Darius Milhaud's incidental music to Aeschylus' "Les Eumenides").

M. Monteux, who dresses for Berkshire Festival concerts as if he were going boating (blue jacket, white trousers, white ducks), lightly brushed the senses with the three Debussy "Nocturnes" — impressions of sky, atmosphere and sea. "La Valse" become less a waltz than a shimmering painting of a waltz.

The "Eumenides" piece is likewise mood music, but what a mood! You could hear dark figures moving in the shadows, as befits girls who have snakes for hair.

* * *

"LA MER," an expansion of the love for the sea that Debussy revealed in the final "Nocturne," was played on Saturday night, with Dr. Munch conducting. And he also led the "Daphnis et Chloe" suite yesterday afternoon. It's an example of Ravel's admiration of dancers and dancing (you know about "Bolero").

The Russians, too, had a hand in the weekend's programs. Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony and Violin Concerto (Zino Francescatti on fiddle), Rachmaninoff's Third Piano Concerto (Byron Janis at the keyboard), Stravinsky's new "Canticum Sacrum" and Glinka's "Russlan and Ludmilla" Overture were played.

M. Monteux's conducting of the Tchaikovsky Fourth ran into mud in the slow second movement, but he certainly dragged it out afterwards. It leaped into that famous plucking and ended in a brilliantly executed, charging final movement, which brought lightning into the Tanglewood skies. For a man of 83, M. Monteux can hurl bolts when he wants to.

* * *

THE STAVINSKY work ("Sacred Canticle in Honor of Saint Mark") was first performed in 1956 at the Venice Festival, and the Boston Symphony also tried it last summer. It's far from the brightest of Stravinsky's religious compositions, but Dr. Munch brought it back on Saturday night.

The only truly modern work of the weekend was Bartok's Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta, performed yesterday. Bartok composed this work, which is alternately mysterious and folksy, in 1936.

It was all quite a way to prepare for the contrast of the coming weekend. That, with lots of Wagner, will be heavily Germanic.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,286

JUL 28 1958

rong Of 10,000
heers Francescatti,
Director Munch

host of 10,000 music-lovers poured into Tanglewood's ous grounds and Concert
Sunday afternoon to hear Boston Symphony directed by les Munch, in the fourth end of the current Berkshire val. They were not disnted in either music or per-rs.
tok, the composer, almost the day from Francescatti, olinist. His absorbing and g "Music for Celesta, Per-n and Strings" started the
m. Since the unusual seatrangement didn't quite fol-e composer's intent exact-was rather difficult to tell where the string groups eparate and where merged his person's vantage point.
ano and celesta were ob-in the middle, with the ion to the left and center,
the strings.
s customary, the first ent was disconected from ing three by the usual rs, its mood lost in the nd bustle. However, one rs well the layers of me-instrumental invention
the whole composition;
it of little-used and untonal and percussive es in the non-percuss e ts, including "col ponticello" and repeti-ndi; the wide range of sion instruments. It is many dimensions, fer-and variegated harh the vibrant Dr.
his orchestra giving mphatic interpretanusually demanding unch shared the tuplause with Charles alented percussion course his eminent that the rearrangechestral seating to veral minutes, for nis and Chloe" ch followed need-sphere for its inas, the "Lever de get the usual

by Dr. Munch
s; day "broke" doubt the gym-ok did not help essary piannishomogeneous ant and fulfill-with its solo
ve. Described is a "choreo-
Mr. Munch beyond this e last move-
No dancers gination, but surrounded ded energy Munch imstereophon-degree.
n concerto, ith gooey
rhythms, re classic
Frances-ease of e impecis super-ant roby a t heavy or penetrating), resulted in a performance one is seldom privileged to hear. Dr. Munch was extremely attentive to Mr. Francescatti throughout, subduing the orchestra when it tended to overplay, especially at the very beginning. The audience lingered long to express their satisfaction, Mr. Francescatti insisting on including Mr. Munch at each outburst. Afterwards, Dr. Munch graciously refused to sign autographs, as it was Mr. Francescatti's day, he remarked.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D 570,717 S. 1,168 844

JUL 28 1958

Music: At Tanglewood

Francescatti and Janis Week-End Soloists

By ROSS PARMENTER
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 27—At each of his two concerts this week-end at Tanglewood, Charles Munch gave festival-goers an astringent modern appetizer, a big Russian concerto and a heaped-up serving of French impressionism.

The week-end, like the three previous ones of the festival, was dogged by overcast skies. Nevertheless the concert Saturday night, when it rained hard, drew 9,736, and this afternoon's program attracted 10,379. These are the two largest audiences so far this summer.

The soloists in the two big concertos were Zino Francescatti, who played the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto this afternoon, and Byron Janis, who played Rachmaninoff's Third Piano Concerto last night.

This was Mr. Janis' first appearance at Tanglewood. He was the fourth in the succession of young American pianists who are being featured as soloists this summer. Lukas Foss, Seymour Lipkin, Leon Fleisher were his predecessors. Leonard Pennario and Eugene Istomin are the pianists still to be heard.

●

Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum," which Mr. Munch led at last summer's Berkshire Festival too, was the modern work on Saturday. Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, Baritone, were the soloists, Alfred Nash Patterson was at the organ, and the choir was the Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross.

Stravinsky's orchestral accompaniment dispenses with violins and 'cellos. With its short phrases, dark-hued strings, organ and Gabrieli-like brasses, it seemed puzzlingly esoteric to a number of listeners, yet it held the audience in absorbed silence. Mr. Munch led it reverently, and particularly beautiful moments were provided by the women singers in the "Fides" and by the combination of chorus and Mr. Gramm in the section beginning "Jesus Autem."

Mr. Janis scored a resounding popular success in the Rachmaninoff Concerto. He deserved the plaudits, for he was brilliant technically, and he brought unfailing intensity to the work, both in its passages of melting romanticism and in its heroic thunders. Mr. Munch matched his big-scaled approach with a virile and exciting accompaniment.

Debussy's "La Mer" closed the program, and it was during this number that the rain came. There was lightning and thunder, too. As it turned out, these contributions of the weather were not inappropriate, for Mr. Munch led the work in a particularly stormy fashion. To this listener it was coarse-grained and not a bit magical, but it, too, brought long applause from the large audience.

Byron Janis

The modern work on this afternoon's program was Bartók's Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta. The Impressionist work was Ravel's second "Daphnis et Chloe" ballet suite. Both received virtuoso performances, for although Mr. Munch led them with careful attention to detail and strict dynamic control, he also infused them with warmth and tension and built them stirringly to their climaxes.

●

Mr. Francescatti is the only big-name instrumental soloist who is appearing at this year's festival. In the Tchaikovsky Concerto he displayed the attributes that have brought him fame: the technical assurance, the warmth of tone and the distinction and grace of phrasing. It was a performance that always held the attention, but in his reading the work did not have as much [illegible] lyricism as it sometimes has in other hands. However, it was a performance of a high level, and it was very cordially received.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 60,734

JUL 28 1958

Music: Brilliant Program At Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — Three brilliant performances — music by Bartok, Ravel, and Tchaikovsky — closed the second big weekend of concerts yesterday afternoon at Tanglewood.

Yesterday's attendance at the Berkshire Music Festival was 10,379, bringing the total figure for this weekend to 26,552.

Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the soloist was violinist Zino Francescatti.

Yesterday's modern work was a most happy choice, attesting favorably to the festival's policy of combining standard repertory with contemporary music. It was Bartok's 'Music for Strings, Percussion, and Celesta."

Contemporary Idioms

Written in 1936, this work features what might be considered by the purists the best issues in contemporary idioms. The audience was clearly and consistently entertained — and inspired.

This music specializes in beauty of sound. It also proves that harmonic purity and straight-lined melody are not requisites of the modern language.

Munch and the orchestra gave it a sensitive, virile, sympathetic performance. The work of Everett Firth, timpanist, was of such excellence that Munch called him to the front of the stage for a bow.

Ingratiating Sounds

Odd and ingratiating sounds were heard from the start of the first movement. Blankets of muffled but euphonious tone were originating points for vital melodies. Rhythms were maintained in direct patterns, and harmonies were not overly set in complexities.

Boiling points were reached in the second movement. The percussion instruments, particularly piano and xylophone, cut through frenzied backgrounds. Munch directed the series of climaxes, drawing out rich instrumental colorations and precipitous speeds.

Most Beautiful

Most beautiful of the sounds were heard in the third movement, which is initiated with a kind of cricket effect in xylophone. The texture was rich in harmonies and gorgeous instrumental combinations. Sharp attacks in strings were subtly developed in langorous, mystical passages.

Munch brought out heavily emphasized syncopation in the finale, which could be powerful fodder for the jazzists. The movement develops into a raucous conglomeration of conflicting rhythms and percussive effects.

Sensitivity and brilliance were the main attributes of Francescatti's playing of the Tchaikovsky violin concerto.

He derived a silken tone, adroitly phrased, in the opening movement. Most important, he didn't allow the work digress into another "war-horse" production. It was too highly personal and communicative for that. He definitely raised it out of the run-of-the-mill category.

Difficulties Disguised

Even the most stringent passages of the first and third movements were done with ease, poise, vitality, and relaxation. In fact, the severe difficulties were quite throughly disguised. The first movement cadenza had all of these qualities, with the exception of one of two spots where pitch might have been subject to question.

The fullest measure of Francescatti's sensitivity and dignified approach to the concerto appeared in the slow movement. He placed effective stress on its simple beauty without attempting to convert it into sticky romanticism.

Perfect Vehicle

Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" suite no. 2 was a perfect vehicle with which to demonstrate the virtuosity of the Boston Symphony. Both conductor and orchestra were in perfect fettle for a dazzling performance.

The fountain-like start of "Daybreak" was projected in luxuriant sounds. Here, and in "Pantomine", Nicole Henriot Dwyer produced as pure flute phrases as we have ever heard in this work.

"General Dance" was nothing short of tremendous. Rhythms were energized to the hilt and the movement closed with geysers of brilliant sounds.

Friday Night

The festival will resume Friday night. Series "C" will be devoted mainly to music by Wagner.

Friday night's program by the Boston Symphony, conducted by Charles Munch, will include the prelude to "Die Meistersinger," "Siegfried Idyll," prelude and "Love Death" from "Tristan and Isolde," and the "Immolation Scene" — all by Wagner. Violist Joseph de Pasquale will be soloist in the Piston Concerto.

lliant Program
Tanglewood

h. Most important, he llow [illegible] ress other "war-horse" pro- was too highly person- communicative for that. nitely moved it out of the e-mill category.

ifficulties Disquised

the most stringent pass- the first and third move- ere done with ease, poise, and relaxation. In fact, ere difficulties were quite y disguised. The first nt cadenza had all of ualities, with the exception of two spots where pitch ave been subject to quesllest measure of Frances- sensitivity and dignified h to the concerto appear- the slow movement. He effective stress on its beauty without attempting ert it into sticky roman-

Perfect Vehicle

's "Daphnis and Chloe" o. 2 was a perfect vehicle hich to demonstrate the ty of the Boston Sym- Both conductor and orch- were in perfect fettle for a g performance.

ountain-like start of "Day- was projected in luxuri- unds. Here, and in "Pan- ", Nicole Henriot Dwyer ed as pure flute phrases have ever heard in this eral Dance" was nothing of tremendous. Rhythms energized to the hilt and the ment closed with geysers of nt sounds.

Friday Night

festival will resume Friday Series "C" will be devoted to music by Wagner. ay night's program by the Symphony, conducted by s Munch, will include the e to "Die Meistersinger," ried Idyll," prelude and Death" from "Tristan solde," and the 'Immola- Scene" — all by Wagner. Joseph de Pasquale will ist in the Piston Concerto.

Music Review B Eagle - July 28

Bartok at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE MUSICAL fare at the final two concerts of the fourth Tanglewood weekend followed nearly [illegible] patterns. Charles Munch [illegible] Boston Symphony Orchestra [illegible] programs [illegible] played a [illegible] performed a [illegible] established reper- work from a French composer and a tory [illegible] work of experi- contemporary mental character.

It was in the modern works that the greatest interest lay. Yesterday afternoon Bela Bartok's "Music for strings, percussion and celesta" proved again that it is one of the most valuable additions to the orchestral literature of recent times. Bartok has added to the potentialities of the orchestra, and his imagination has guided him into new sonorities and areas of tonal texture.

* * *

BARTOK HERE designates the disposition of the orchestra into two choirs, one to each side of the stage with the percussion in the center. The work, in four movements, begins with two desks of muted violas playing a tranquil theme of chromatic intervals which is soon joined by additional small sections of the viols, always maintaining in imperturbable character until the mutes are removed and muffled tympani ride the crest of a surging wave of sound from which the descent is in the reverse direction. Only the celesta in four bars of the coda is invited to join the strings in this impressive section.

Munch allowed the marvelous Boston strings to demonstrate their most articulate lucidity, and for the audience the orchestral achievement equaled the revelation of Bartok's mastery. The second movement is an abandoned dance in an abandoned rhythmic idiom which has a Magyar flavor, very possibly the fruit of the composer's diligent search for years into the folk music of his own and the adjacent countries. But there is a strain of seriousness in its energy which seems to be more an element of compulsion than of complete gaiety. In this there is an affinity with the final movement which also has terrific rhythmic drive.

* * *

BARTOK IS NOT limited by bar lines. The irregularity of his rhythms is frightening in the more agitated sections, and they have a flood-like irresistibility which rises in spots to rampant elation. His choice of instruments adds an aroma which is distinctive and novel and is significant of his pioneering in sound. The piano was played by Bernard Zighera, the tympani by Everett Firth, celesta by Melvin Bryant, and xylophone by Charles Smith.

* * *

SATURDAY evening Munch repeated the Stravinsky "Canticum Sacrum," the "Sacred Canticle in Honor of Saint Mark," which the orchestra had played here almost exactly a year ago. It is no more acceptable to the ear now than it was at its initial hearing. At best it is cerebral.

Stravinsky asks for unconventional instrumentation: Winds without clarinets; and of strings, only violas and three double bass players. There is a mixed chorus and two soloists who in Saturday's performance were Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bartone. It would be difficult to find more ungrateful assignments for a soloist. Just how they, and the excellent Festival chorus, trained with exceptional musicality by Hugh Ross, perused the unsupported vocal line and, to these ears, unrelated intervals, remains a marvel of accomplishment.

Byron Janis

STRAVINSKY wrote this cantata in 1955, and he here uses a serial technique in which ingenuity and scholarship replace any of the guideposts once the measure of tonal art. An organ in reconizable guise is used as a prelude in many sections, but the ensuing musical comments by the sparsely chosen instruments are fragmentary, meager, and, if looks toward the conductor on the part of the executants are of any significance, equally bewildering to the performers as it was to this listener.

* * *

EACH PROGRAM contained one conventional orchestral work which afforded the audience a respite of unrelaxed listening which was as welcome as it was enjoyable. Munch played Debussy's "La Mer" Saturday night and yesterday the second suite from Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" ballet music. The exhilaration of the Ravel is still fresh in our minds. The Boston orchestra's exceptional tonal resources were spread on an immense canvas with vivid color and with brush strokes of sweeping grandeur.

The most exciting moments of the programs derived from the brilliant performances by the respective soloists, Zino Francescatti playing the Tchaikovsky violin concerto yesterday with all the authority and command he always displays in this as in anything he attempts, and, Saturday evening, the Tanglewood debut of the astounding young American pianist, Byron Janis, in the third concerto of Rachmaninoff.

* * *

ONE OF the outstanding features of this year's Berkshire Festival program construction has been the opportunity for six of the top-flight pianists of the younger American generation to gain a hearing before the large audiences. The opportunities have not been exactly equal. A late 19th or early 20th century romantic concerto offers quite different potentialities to any performer from that of a baroque and relatively restricted concerto. There would be little validity to measure the audience reaction to a reading, regardless of the artist's prowess, between a Tchaikovsky and a classical concerto.

* * *

YOUNG, PERSONABLE Janis had exactly the right vehicle for his talents and the audience's approval, and he rode it as an heroic champion. The initial statement which follows the orchestra introduction showed him to be an artist of graphic sensitiveness and expressive breadth. From there on technical obstacles were overcome with effortless and abundant dynamism, and he released a thrilling performance whenever Munch did not outweigh him. The orchestra conductor gave his forces entirely too much leeway. He, as was the soloist, was possibly carried away by Rachmoninoff's bambastic romanticism. Janis was accorded an ovation which he thoroughly earned.

There was a zing to his playing that conveyed stimulation to the audience. Of the five Rachmaninoff concertos this has not been the most popular in current usage until this very year, but Janis would have been hard put to choose a work in which his wealth of talent could have flourished more conspicuously. He took full advantage of every possible instance to "sing" his piano, and in the more ostentatious passages he lavished his technique like a frisky puppy. It was happy music-making.

* * *

FRANCESCATTI in Tchaikovsky has a permanence that music does not always allow. In its fleeting nature the performance of music affords pleasures which become memories almost instantly. Francescatti comes as near as the art can go in making a performance a thing to continue to enjoy as a painting or a piece of sculpture. Each time he plays he recreates his choice vividly and vivaciously, but underneath is solidity of musicianship and externally the polish and refinement of maturity.

In the last movement we thought Francescatti was almost hoist by his own petard. A soloist's fingers are sometimes unreliable counselors and lead him into excesses of agility which musical validity might question.

No Francescatti performance is a carbon copy of a previous one. The last time, two years ago, when he played the Tchaikovsky on this same stage, he left little or nothing to be desired. Yet yesterday, details had been altered; his bow never served better. He played longer and more telling phrases on a single bow-stroke; he played with the most extreme effectiveness in the most hushed moments, moments a less capable and experienced artist would not dare hazard. His crossed strings ascended into the higher positions to retain a continuity of phrasing; all these were lessons to anyone interested and eager to see and learn how a master plays.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 361,379 - S. 576,176

JUL 28 1958

[150]

'Daphnis and Chloe' Heard In Festival at Tanglewood

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., July 27.—On the completion of Bartok's "Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta," its first offering this afternoon at Tanglewood, you would have thought the Boston Symphony would go home. After all, improving upon or competing with perfection is no mortal man's business, and the Bostonians and Charles Munch, their director, had given us a Bartok to lock in the memory and treasure there.

But being by nature an adventurous group the musicians went on to a "Daphnis and Chloe" that surpassed even their previous effort and brought off the whole affair with a first-rate accompaniment to Tchaikovsky's violin concerto, in which Zino Francescatti appeared as soloist.

Now as it happens, Bartok's score, conceivably his greatest for orchestra, is, quite apart from its musical merit, all about the matter of balance. And it was on this foundation that Mr. Munch laid the cornerstone of his performance. As a result the piece, with its incredible instrumental speech, spoke with a clarity not often realized in a work so wretchedly difficult. This is not to suggest that the clarity was achieved at the expense of the music's mysterious, other-worldly aural surface. Not at all. But the thematic network of lines that cross and recross one another, generating new ones in their path, stood out in bold and uncompromising relief. The "Music for Strings," in consequence, emerged like an enormous tapestry woven of gold and silver and such metals as are known only to alchemists like Bartok himself.

"Daphnis And Chloe"

On the remaining works of the afternoon there is no reason to deliberate at length. The Boston Symphony has had squatter's rights on Ravel's second "Daphnis and Chloe" suite for so long that it amounts almost to claim jumping for another orchestra to attempt it. It seems sufficient to say that no other ensemble in the world makes it shimmer and dance in quite the same way.

Nor, for that matter, are there many violinists who bring to Tchaikovsky as much elegance and refinement as Mr. Francescatti. His rendition, on a muggy anti-fiddle day, was everywhere spick and span, everywhere chiselled in phrase and neat in expression. Elsewhere it is possible to hear the concerto given with more billowing smoke, though it is impossible, in other hands, to hear it played with a flame so steady and clean.

Saturday night's concert, under Mr. Munch's direction, played with the crackle of lightning and the distant thud of thunder as a backdrop; appropriately enough, the rains came as the program concluded with Debussy's "La Mer." There had been an earlier shower five minutes before curtain time, but it was wasted since there was no Debussy sea-spray to accompany it.

Effect is Tonic

And how, on this occasion, "La Mer" sported and swelled. Mr. Munch's reading of the work has given up a good deal of its finicky detail, his concentration at present leaning toward a dissolution of the score's contents into a luminous fog. The effect is tonic.

Moreover, one imagines that Debussy had in mind just such an orchestra as the Boston while composing his work, for there is, in truth, no sense writing with a rainbow brush unless you have a ranbow orchestra to reproduce your colors. And the performance, save for an eceptionally rowdy conclusion, was all mother-of-pearl and velvet. Iridescent it was and ever smooth to the touch.

Not quite as smooth, however, was Byron Janis' performance of Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3, as it was uneven both musically and tonally. Technically, there was considerable to admire in Mr. Janis' interpretation, for the young man has fingers that operate much like steel springs. And there was spirit to his work, heart, too, and genuine fervor throughout. Still, Mr. Janis has a wayward tendency to over-romanticize what is already romantic, and in his dependence on syruppy retards and coyly turned phrases he frankly makes too much of a good thing.

Further, from my vantage point, his tone seemed variable in its quality, ranging from a sonority warm and full-blooded to a sound rather meager and lacking in juice. With this view, however, the 9,000 in the audience did not agree. At the piece's end it gave Mr. Janis a standing ovation.

"Canticum Sacrum"

On the other hand, there was practically no demonstration at the close of Stravinksy's "Canticum Sacrum," which opened the program, nor is it necessary that there should be. The work is church music, profoundly spiritual and of deep religious conviction. Its language is aggressivly austere and thus difficult for the average listener to comprehend: the "Canticum" gives up its secrets slowly as do all messages concerned with personal faith.

And yet I am bound to say that it is a towering master work, a piece of historic importance. Certainly it appeared to be nothing less in its eloquent performance by soloists Donald Gramm and Blake Stern, the impeccably trained Berkshire Festival Choir and the Boston Band. Perhaps it is only that the "Canticum Sacrum" is not meant for today. Likely it is designed as one of Stravinksy's gifts to a fortunate posterity.

Zino Francescatti

MUSICAL LEADER
CHICAGO, ILL.

AUG 1958

Berkshire Music Festival

by Walter F. Loeb

The Berkshire M[illegible]tival is one of the best established [illegible] of the Summ[illegible]n. Mature musicianship permeates [illegible] whole atmosph[illegible]tentive students mingle with so- [illegible]ted audience [illegible]en to fine schooled instrumentalists [illegible]ke up the B[illegible] Symphony Orchestra. 6 weeks of [illegible] programs, [illegible] on July 4, when a Bach weekend [illegible] [illegible] attend the concerts that weekend. Charles Munch [illegible] the conductor the following week- [illegible]d, which was a[illegible] Chamber Music series, devoted to Mozart [illegible] Musical Joke to the C major Piano [illegible] played w[illegible]at sensitivity and insight by Seymour Lipkin. Lipk[illegible] teamed up with Lucas Foss to play [illegible] major co[illegible] for two pianos. Works like the G [illegible] Symphony a[illegible]ajor Symphony received authorita- [illegible]ngs. Hugh R[illegible] conducted three Choral works—the [illegible] C major ben[illegible] major work, as well as a Kyrie in D [illegible] and a Gra[illegible]. They were interesting for contrast [illegible]ent, and given valid readings. The recently formed Festival Chorus (members of the school) participated—though it was evident that they had just mastered their parts. Sarah Fleming, Doris Okerson, Richard Gilley and Laurene Chels were the soloists. The heavy attendance at the Mozart concerts attest to their popularity and general interest.

Brahms was featured during the July 18-20 weekend. On July 19 Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra were assisted by soprano Hilde Gueden, baritone Donald Gramm and the Festival Chorus in the "German Requiem." On this damp, chilly evening, none of the performers fully succeeded in capturing the moving, elegaic, basically warm spirit of the work. Nevertheless, there were enough moments of dramatic impact to make the discomforts caused by the elements seem remote. Pierre Monteux directed the July 20 concert and led off with a happily rollicking reading of the Academic Festival Overture. Pianist Leon Fleisher then joined him in a generally effective reading of the D minor Concerto. The week's activities concluded with brightening skies and a colorful rendition of Stravinsky's "Petrouchka."—H.F.

(Continued on page 23)

Berkshire Music Festival

(Continued from page 3)

The impressionists had a field day the weekend of July 25-27. Both Monteux and Munch took a swat at them, with some very happy results. Debussy's Nocturnes, sung by the Festival Chorus and conducted by Monteux on Friday evening was sung with interpretative feeling and understanding. Ravel's "La Valse," on the same program, was given an overwhelming reading. The concert also included Tchaikowsky's 4th Symphony—magnificently played with attention to every nuance. Glinka and Milhaud rounded out the program. Saturday night's program was soaked in rain, but contained much valuable music, especially the "Caniticum Sacrum" by Stravinsky. This is a repeat performance from last year and is an important contribution to modern liturgical literature. Blake Stern and Donald Gramm were again the soloists, with the Festival Chorus. Byron Janis was the soloist in Rachmaninoff's 3rd Piano Concerto, a work he played with vigor and authority. Debussy's "La Mer" sketches concluded the performance. This and the Sunday afternoon program were conducted by Mr. Munch. In the latter a fury was whipped up for Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" suite No. 2. He also conducted Bartok's Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta. Tschaikowsky's Violin Concerto in D with Zino Francescatti concluded the weekend.—A.S.

[150]

Music Review B Eagle - July 28

Bartok at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE MUSICAL fare at the final two concerts of the fourth Tanglewood weekend followed nearly identical patterns. Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two programs in each of which a soloist played a concerto of Russian derivation and the orchestra performed a work from the established repertory by a French composer and a contemporary work of experimental character.

It was in the modern works that the greatest interest lay. Yesterday afternoon Bela Bartok's "Music for strings, percussion and celesta" proved again that it is one of the most valuable additions to the orchestral literature of recent times. Bartok has added to the potentialities of the orchestra, and his imagination has guided him into new sonorities and areas of tonal texture.

* * *

BARTOK HERE designates the disposition of the orchestra into two choirs, one to each side of the stage with the percussion in the center. The work, in four movements, begins with two desks of muted violas playing a tranquil theme of chromatic intervals which is soon joined by additional small sections of the viols, always maintaining an imperturbable character until the mutes are removed and muffled tympani ride the crest of a surging wave of sound from which the descent is in the reverse direction. Only the celesta in four bars of the coda is invited to join the strings in this impressive section.

Munch allowed the marvelous Boston strings to demonstrate their most articulate lucidity, and for the audience the orchestral achievement equaled the revelation of Bartok's mastery. The second movement is an abandoned dance in an abandoned rhythmic idiom which has a Magyar flavor, very possibly the fruit of the composer's diligent search for years into the folk music of his own and the adjacent countries. But there is a strain of seriousness in its energy which seems to be more an element of compulsion than of complete gaiety. In this there is an affinity with the final movement which also has terrific rhythmic drive.

* * *

BARTOK IS NOT limited by bar lines. The irregularity of his rhythms is frightening in the more agitated sections, and they have a flood-like irresistibility which rises in spots to rampant elation. His choice of instruments adds an aroma which is distinctive and novel and is significant of his pioneering in sound. The piano was played by Bernard Zighera, the tympani by Everett Firth, celesta by Melvin Bryant, and xylophone by Charles Smith.

* * *

SATURDAY evening Munch repeated the Stravinsky "Canticum Sacrum," the "Sacred Canticle in Honor of Saint Mark," which the orchestra had played here almost exactly a year ago. It is no more acceptable to the ear now than it was at its initial hearing. At best it is cerebral.

Stravinsky asks for unconventional instrumentation: Winds without clarinets; and of strings, only violas and three double bass players. There is a mixed chorus and two soloists who in Saturday's performance were Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone. It would be difficult to find more ungrateful assignments for a soloist. Just how they, and the excellent Festival chorus, trained with exceptional musicality by Hugh Ross, perused the unsupported vocal line and, to these ears, unrelated intervals, remains a marvel of accomplishment.

Byron Janis

STRAVINSKY wrote this cantata in 1955, and he here uses a serial technique in which ingenuity and scholarship replace any of the guideposts once the measure of tonal art. An organ in reconizable guise is used as a prelude in many sections, but the ensuing musical comments by the sparsely chosen instruments are fragmentary, meager, and, if looks toward the conductor on the part of the executants are of any significance, equally bewildering to the performers as it was to this listener.

* * *

EACH PROGRAM contained one conventional orchestral work which afforded the audience a respite of unrelaxed listening which was as welcome as it was enjoyable. Munch played Debussy's "La Mer" Saturday night and yesterday the second suite from Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" ballet music. The exhilaration of the Ravel is still fresh in our minds. The Boston orchestra's exceptional tonal resources were spread on an immense canvas with vivid color and with brush strokes of sweeping grandeur.

The most exciting moments of the programs derived from the brilliant performances by the respective soloists, Zino Francescatti playing the Tchaikovsky violin concerto yesterday with all the authority and command he always displays in this as in anything he attempts, and, Saturday evening, the Tanglewood debut of the astounding young American pianist, Byron Janis, in the third concerto of Rachmaninoff.

* * *

ONE OF the outstanding features of this year's Berkshire Festival program construction has been the opportunity for six of the top-flight pianists of the younger American generation to gain a hearing before the large audiences. The opportunities have not been exactly equal. A late 19th or early 20th century romantic concerto offers quite different potentialities to any performer from that of a baroque and relatively restricted concerto. There would be little validity to measure the audience reaction to a reading, regardless of the artist's prowess, between a Tchaikovsky and a classical concerto.

* * *

YOUNG, PERSONABLE Janis had exactly the right vehicle for his talents and the audience's approval, and he rode it as an heroic champion. The initial statement which follows the orchestra introduction showed him to be an artist of graphic sensitiveness and expressive breadth. From there on technical obstacles were overcome with effortless and abundant dynamism, and he released a thrilling performance whenever Munch did not outweigh him. The orchestra conductor gave his forces entirely too much leeway. He, as was the soloist, was possibly carried away by Rachmoninoff's bambastic romanticism. Janis was accorded an ovation which he thoroughly earned.

There was a zing to his playing that conveyed stimulation to the audience. Of the five Rachmaninoff concertos this has not been the most popular in current usage until this very year, but Janis would have been hard put to choose a work in which his wealth of talent could have flourished more conspicuously. He took full advantage of every possible instance to "sing" his piano, and in the more ostentatious passages he lavished his technique like a frisky puppy. It was happy music-making.

* * *

FRANCESCATTI in Tchaikovsky has a permanence that music does not always allow. In its fleeting nature the performance of music affords pleasures which become memories almost instantly. Francescatti comes as near as the art can go in making a performance a thing to continue to enjoy as a painting or a piece of sculpture. Each time he plays he recreates his choice vividly and vivaciously, but underneath is solidity of musicianship and externally the polish and refinement of maturity.

In the last movement we thought Francescatti was almost hoist by his own petard. A soloist's fingers are sometimes unreliable counselors and lead him into excesses of agility which musical validity might question.

No Francescatti performance is a carbon copy of a previous one. The last time, two years ago, when he played the Tchaikovsky on this same stage, he left little or nothing to be desired. Yet yesterday, details had been altered; his bow never served better. He played longer and more telling phrases on a single bow-stroke; he played with the most extreme effectiveness in the most hushed moments, moments a less capable and experienced artist would not dare hazard. His crossed strings ascended into the higher positions to retain a continuity of phrasing; all these were lessons to anyone interested and eager to see and learn how a master plays.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 361,379 - S. 576,176

JUL 28 1958

'Daphnis and Chloe' Heard In Festival at Tanglewood

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., July 27.—On the completion of Bartok's "Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta," its first offering this afternoon at Tanglewood, you would have thought the Boston Symphony would go home. [illegible] improving upon or competing with perfection is no mortal man's business, and the Bostonians and Charles Munch, their director, had given us a Bartok to lock in the memory and treasure there.

But being by nature an adventurous group the musicians went on to a "Daphnis and Chloe" that surpassed even their previous effort and brought off the whole affair with a first-rate accompaniment to Tchaikovsky's violin concerto, in which Zino Francescatti appeared as soloist.

Now as it happens, Bartok's score, conceivably his greatest for orchestra, is, quite apart from its musical merit, all about the matter of balance. And it was on this foundation that Mr. Munch laid the cornerstone of his performance. As a result the piece, with its incredible instrumental speech, spoke with a clarity not often realized in a work so wretchedly difficult. This is not to suggest that the clarity was achieved at the expense of the music's mysterious, other-worldly aural surface. Not at all. But the thematic network of lines that cross and recross one another, generating new ones in their path, stood out in bold and uncompromising relief. The "Music for Strings," in consequence, emerged like an enormous tapestry woven of gold and silver and such metals as are known only to alchemists like Bartok himself.

"Daphnis And Chloe"

On the remaining works of the afternoon there is no reason to deliberate at length. The Boston Symphony has had squatter's rights on Ravel's second "Daphnis and Chloe" suite for so long that it amounts almost to claim jumping for another orchestra to attempt it. It seems sufficient to say that no other ensemble in the world makes it shimmer and dance in quite the same way.

Nor, for that matter, are there many violinists who bring to Tchaikovsky as much elegance and refinement as Mr. Francescatti. His rendition, on a muggy anti-fiddle day, was everywhere spick and span, everywhere chiselled in phrase and neat in expression. Elsewhere it is possible to hear the concerto given with more billowing smoke, though it is impossible, in other hands, to hear it played with a flame so steady and clean.

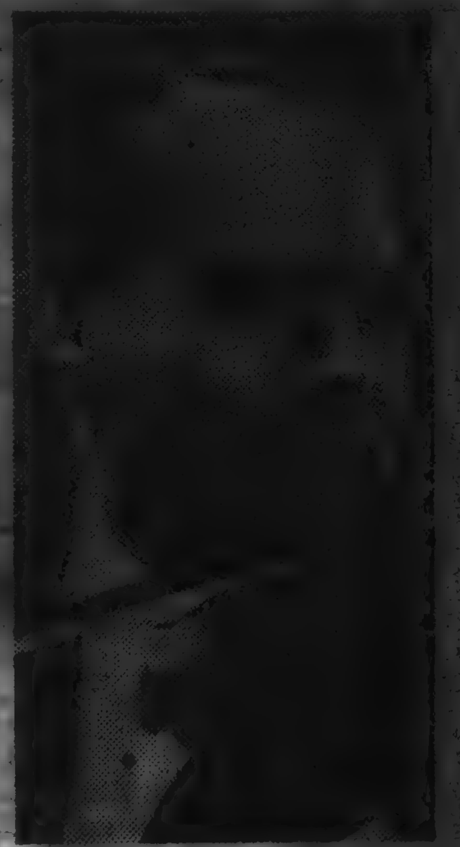
Saturday night's concert, under Mr. Munch's direction, played with the crackle of lightning and the distant thud of thunder as a backdrop; appropriately enough, the rains came as the program concluded with Debussy's "La Mer." There had been an earlier shower five minutes before curtain time but it was wasted since there was no Debussy sea-spray to accompany it.

Effect is Tonic

And how, on this occasion, "La Mer" sported and swelled. Mr. Munch's reading of the work has given up a good deal of its finicky detail, his concentration at present leaning toward a dissolution of the score's contents into a luminous fog. The effect is tonic.

Moreover, one imagines that Debussy had in mind just such an orchestra as the Boston while composing his work, for there is, in truth, no sense writing with a rainbow brush unless you have a ranbow orchestra to reproduce your colors. And the performance, save for an eceptionally rowdy conclusion, was all mother-of-pearl and velvet. Iridescent it was and ever smooth to the touch.

Not quite as smooth, however, was Byron Janis' performance of Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3, as it was uneven both musically and tonally. Technically, there was considerable to admire in Mr. Janis' interpretation, for the young man has fingers that operate much like steel springs. And there was spirit to his work, heart, too, and genuine fervor throughout. Still, Mr. Janis has a wayward tendency to over-romanticize what is already romantic, and in his dependence on syruppy retards and coyly turned phrases he frankly makes too much of a good thing.



Zino Francescatti

Further, from my vantage point, his tone seemed variable in its quality, ranging from a sonority warm and full-blooded to a sound rather meager and lacking in juice. With this view, however, the 9,000 in the audience did not agree. At the piece's end it gave Mr. Janis a standing ovation.

"Canticum Sacrum"

On the other hand, there was practically no demonstration at the close of Stravinksy's "Canticum Sacrum," which opened the program, nor is it necessary that there should be. The work is church music, profoundly spiritual and of deep religious conviction. Its language is aggressivly austere and thus difficult for the average listener to comprehend: the "Canticum" gives up its secrets slowly as do all messages concerned with personal faith.

And yet I am bound to say that it is a towering master work, a piece of historic importance. Certainly it appeared to be nothing less in its eloquent performance by soloists Donald Gramm and Blake Stern, the impeccably trained Berkshire Festival Choir and the Boston Band. Perhaps it is only that the "Canticum Sacrum" is not meant for today. Likely it is designed as one of Stravinksy's gifts to a fortunate posterity.

MUSICAL LEADER
CHICAGO, ILL.
AUG 1958

Berkshire Music Festival

by Walter F. Loeb

The Berkshire Mu stival is one of the best established events of the Summe on. Mature musicianship permeates the whole, atmosphe ttentive students mingle with sophisticated audiences sten to fine schooled instrumentalists that make up the B Symphony Orchestra. 6 weeks of excellent programs, b on July 4, when a Bach weekend was scheduled. We co not attend the concerts that weekend.

Charles Munch wa n the conductor the following weekend, which was als Chamber Music series, devoted to Mozart. It ranged fr Musical Joke to the C major Piano Concerto, played wit reat sensitivity and insight by Seymour Lipkin. Lipkin teamed up with Lucas Foss to play the E flat major conce to for two pianos. Works like the G minor Symphony and D major Symphony received authoritative readings. Hugh Ross conducted three Choral works—the Mass in C major being the major work, as well as a Kyrie in D minor and a Graduale. They were interesting for contrast and content, and given valid readings. The recently formed Festival Chorus (members of the school) participated—though it was evident that they had just mastered their parts. Sarah Fleming, Doris Okerson, Richard Gilley and Laurene Chels were the soloists. The heavy attendance at the Mozart concerts attest to their popularity and general interest.

Brahms was featured during the July 18-20 weekend. On July 19 Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra were assisted by soprano Hilde Gueden, baritone Donald Gramm and the Festival Chorus in the "German Requiem." On this damp, chilly evening, none of the performers fully succeeded in capturing the moving, elegaic, basically warm spirit of the work. Nevertheless, there were enough moments of dramatic impact to make the discomforts caused by the elements seem remote. Pierre Monteux directed the July 20 concert and led off with a happily rollicking reading of the Academic Festival Overture. Pianist Leon Fleisher then joined him in a generally effective reading of the D minor Concerto. The week's activities concluded with brightening skies and a colorful rendition of Stravinsky's "Petrouchka."—H.F.

(Continued on page 23)

Berkshire Music Festival

(Continued from page 3)

The impressionists had a field day the weekend of July 25-27. Both Monteux and Munch took a swat at them, with some very happy results. Debussy's Nocturnes, sung by the Festival Chorus and conducted by Monteux on Friday evening was sung with interpretative feeling and understanding. Ravel's "La Valse," on the same program, was given an overwhelming reading. The concert also included Tchaikowsky's 4th Symphony—magnificently played with attention to every nuance. Glinka and Milhaud rounded out the program. Saturday night's program was soaked in rain, but contained much valuable music, especially the "Caniticum Sacrum" by Stravinsky. This is a repeat performance from last year and is an important contribution to modern liturgical literature. Blake Stern and Donald Gramm were again the soloists, with the Festival Chorus. Byron Janis was the soloist in Rachmaninoff's 3rd Piano Concerto, a work he played with vigor and authority. Debussy's "La Mer" sketches concluded the performance. This and the Sunday afternoon program were conducted by Mr. Munch. In the latter a fury was whipped up for Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" suite No. 2. He also conducted Bartok's Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta. Tschaikowsky's Violin Concerto in D with Zino Francescatti concluded the weekend.—A.S.

iant Program
Tanglewood

Most important, [illegible] "war-horse" approach was too highly person[illegible] for that. [illegible] it out of the [illegible] category.

Difficulties Disguised

[illegible] most stringent pas[sages of] the first and third movements were done with ease, poise, and relaxation. In fact, [the] difficulties were quite disguised. The first [illegible] cadenza" had all of [illegible], with the exception [of] two spots where pitch [might ha]ve been subject to ques[tion].

[illegible] measure of Frances[catti's s]ensitivity and dignified [approach] to the concerto appear[ed in the] slow movement. He [placed e]ffective stress on its [be]auty without attempting [to turn] it into sticky roman[ticism].

Perfect Vehicle

"Daphnis and Chloe" was a perfect vehicle [with whi]ch to demonstrate the [illegible] of the Boston Sym[phony, with] conductor and orch[estra] in perfect fettle for a performance.

[illegible]tain-like start of "Day[break" w]as projected in luxuri[illegible]. Here, and in "Pan[tomime,"] Nicole Henriot Dwyer [illegible] as pure flute phrases [as I] have ever heard in this [illegible].

[illegible] Dance" was nothing [short of] tremendous. Rhythms [illegible] to the hilt and the [illegible] closed with geysers of [s]ounds.

Friday Night

[The Fe]stival will resume Friday [illegible] "C" will be devoted [t]o music by Wagner.

[illegible] night's program by the [Boston S]ymphony, conducted by [illegible] will include the [illegible] "Meistersinger," [illegible] prelude and [illegible] from "Tristan [illegible] and the "Immola[tion] [illegible] all by Wagner. [illegible] der Pasquale will [illegible] the Piston Concerto.

Music Review B Eagle - July 28

Bartok at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE MUSICAL fare at the [fin]al two concerts of the fourth Tanglewood weekend followed [n]early identical patterns. Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two programs in each of which a soloist played a concerto of Russian derivation and the orchestra performed a work from the established repertory by a French composer and a contemporary work of experimental character.

It was in the modern works that the greatest interest lay. Yesterday afternoon Bela Bartok's "Music for strings, percussion and celesta" proved again that it is one of the most valuable additions to the orchestral literature of recent times. Bartok has added to the potentialities of the orchestra, and his imagination has guided him into new sonorities and areas of tonal texture.

* * *

BARTOK HERE designates the disposition of the orchestra into two choirs, one to each side of the stage with the percussion in the center. The work, in four movements, begins with two desks of muted violas playing a tranquil theme of chromatic intervals which is soon joined by additional small sections of the viols, always maintaining an imperturbable character until the mutes are removed and muffled tympani ride the crest of a surging wave of sound from which the descent is in the reverse direction. Only the celesta in four bars of the coda is invited to join the strings in this impressive section.

Munch allowed the marvelous Boston strings to demonstrate their most articulate lucidity, and for the audience the orchestral achievement equaled the revelation of Bartok's mastery. The second movement is an abandoned dance in an abandoned rhythmic idiom which has a Magyar flavor, very possibly the fruit of the composer's diligent search for years into the folk music of his own and the adjacent countries. But there is a strain of seriousness in its energy which seems to be more an element of compulsion than of complete gaiety. In this there is an affinity with the final movement which also has terrific rhythmic drive.

* * *

BARTOK IS NOT limited by bar lines. The irregularity of his rhythms is frightening in the more agitated sections, and they have a flood-like irresistibility which rises in spots to rampant elation. His choice of instruments adds an aroma which is distinctive and novel and is significant of his pioneering in sound. The piano was played by Bernard Zighera, the tympani by Everett Firth, celesta by Melvin Bryant, and xylophone by Charles Smith.

* * *

SATURDAY evening Munch repeated the Stravinsky "Canticum Sacrum," the "Sacred Canticle in Honor of Saint Mark," which the orchestra had played here almost exactly a year ago. It is no more acceptable to the ear now than it was at its initial hearing. At best it is cerebral.

Stravinsky asks for unconventional instrumentation: Winds without clarinets; and of strings, only violas and three double bass players. There is a mixed chorus and two soloists who in Saturday's performance were Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone. It would be difficult to find more ungrateful assignments for a soloist. Just how they, and the excellent Festival chorus, trained with exceptional musicality by Hugh Ross, perused [illegible] unsupported vocal line and, to these ears, unrelated intervals, remains a marvel of accomplishment.

Byron Janis

STRAVINSKY wrote this cantata in 1955, and he here uses a serial technique in which ingenuity and scholarship replace any of the guideposts once the measure of tonal art. An organ in reconizable guise is used as a prelude in many sections, but the ensuing musical comments by the sparsely chosen instruments are fragmentary, meager, and, if looks toward the conductor on the part of the executants are of any significance, equally bewildering to the performers as it was to this listener.

* * *

EACH PROGRAM contained one conventional orchestral work which afforded the audience a respite of unrelaxed listening which was as welcome as it was enjoyable. Munch played Debussy's "La Mer" Saturday night and yesterday the second suite from Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" ballet music. The exhilaration of the Ravel is still fresh in our minds. The Boston orchestra's exceptional tonal resources were spread on an immense canvas with vivid color and with brush strokes of sweeping grandeur.

The most exciting moments of the programs derived from the brilliant performances by the respective soloists, Zino Francescatti playing the Tchaikovsky violin concerto yesterday with all the authority and command he always displays in this as in anything he attempts, and, Saturday evening, the Tanglewood debut of the astounding young American pianist, Byron Janis, in the third concerto of Rachmaninoff.

* * *

ONE OF the outstanding features of this year's Berkshire Festival program construction has been the opportunity for six of the top-flight pianists of the younger American generation to gain a hearing before the large audiences. The opportunities have not been exactly equal. A late 19th or early 20th century romantic concerto offers quite different potentialities to any performer from that of a baroque and relatively restricted concerto. There would be little validity to measure the audience reaction to a reading, regardless of the artist's prowess, between a Tchaikovsky and a classical concerto.

* * *

YOUNG, PERSONABLE Janis had exactly the right vehicle for his talents and the audience's approval, and he rode it as an heroic champion. The initial statement which follows the orchestra introduction showed him to be an artist of graphic sensitiveness and expressive breadth. From there on technical obstacles were overcome with effortless and abundant dynamism, and he released a thrilling performance whenever Munch did not outweigh him. The orchestra conductor gave his forces entirely too much leeway. He, as was the soloist, was possibly carried away by Rachmoninoff's bambastic romanticism. Janis was accorded an ovation which he thoroughly earned.

There was a zing to his playing that conveyed stimulation to the audience. Of the five Rachmaninoff concertos this has not been the most popular in current usage until this very year, but Janis would have been hard put to choose a work in which his wealth of talent could have flourished more conspicuously. He took full advantage of every possible instance to "sing" his piano, and in the more ostentatious passages he lavished his technique like a frisky puppy. It was happy music-making.

* * *

FRANCESCATTI in Tchaikovsky has a permanence that music does not always allow. In its fleeting nature the performance of music affords pleasures which become memories almost instantly. Francescatti comes as near as the art can go in making a performance a thing to continue to enjoy as a painting or a piece of sculpture. Each time he plays he recreates his choice vividly and vivaciously, but underneath is solidity of musicianship and externally the polish and refinement of maturity.

In the last movement we thought Francescatti was almost hoist by his own petard. A soloist's fingers are sometimes unreliable counselors and lead him into excesses of agility which musical validity might question.

No Francescatti performance is a carbon copy of a previous one. The last time, two years ago, when he played the Tchaikovsky on this same stage, he left little or nothing to be desired. Yet yesterday, details had been altered; his bow never served better. He played longer and more telling phrases on a single bow-stroke; he played with the most extreme effectiveness in the most hushed moments, moments a less capable and experienced artist would not dare hazard. His crossed strings ascended into the higher positions to retain a continuity of phrasing; all these were lessons to anyone interested and eager to see and learn how a master plays.

---

[150]

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 361,379 - S. 576,176

JUL 28 1958

'Daphnis and Chloe' Heard In Festival at Tanglewood

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., July 27.—On the completion of Bartok's "Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta," its first offering this afternoon at Tanglewood, you would have thought the Boston Symphony would go home [illegible]ving upon or competing with perfection is no mortal man's business, and the Bostonians and Charles Munch, their director, had given us a Bartok to lock in the memory and treasure there.

But being by nature an adventurous group the musicians went on to a "Daphnis and Chloe" that surpassed even their previous effort and brought off the whole affair with a first-rate accompaniment to Tchaikovsky's violin concerto, in which Zino Francescatti appeared as soloist.

Now as it happens, Bartok's score, conceivably his greatest for orchestra, is, quite apart from its musical merit, all about the matter of balance. And it was on this foundation that Mr. Munch laid the cornerstone of his performance. As a result the piece, with its incredible instrumental speech, spoke with a clarity not often realized in a work so wretchedly difficult. This is not to suggest that the clarity was achieved at the expense of the music's mysterious, other-worldly aural surface. Not at all. But the thematic network of lines that cross and recross one another, generating new ones in their path, stood out in bold and uncompromising relief. The "Music for Strings," in consequence, emerged like an enormous tapestry woven of gold and silver and such metals as are known only to alchemists like Bartok himself.

"Daphnis And Chloe"

On the remaining works of the afternoon there is no reason to deliberate at length. The Boston Symphony has had squatter's rights on Ravel's second "Daphnis and Chloe" suite for so long that it amounts almost to claim jumping for another orchestra to attempt it. It seems sufficient to say that no other ensemble in the world makes it shimmer and dance in quite the same way.

Nor, for that matter, are there many violinists who bring to Tchaikovsky as much elegance and refinement as Mr. Francescatti. His rendition, on a muggy anti-fiddle day, was everywhere spick and span, everywhere chiselled in phrase and neat in expression. Elsewhere it is possible to hear the concerto given with more billowing smoke, though it is impossible, in other hands, to hear it played with a flame so steady and clean.

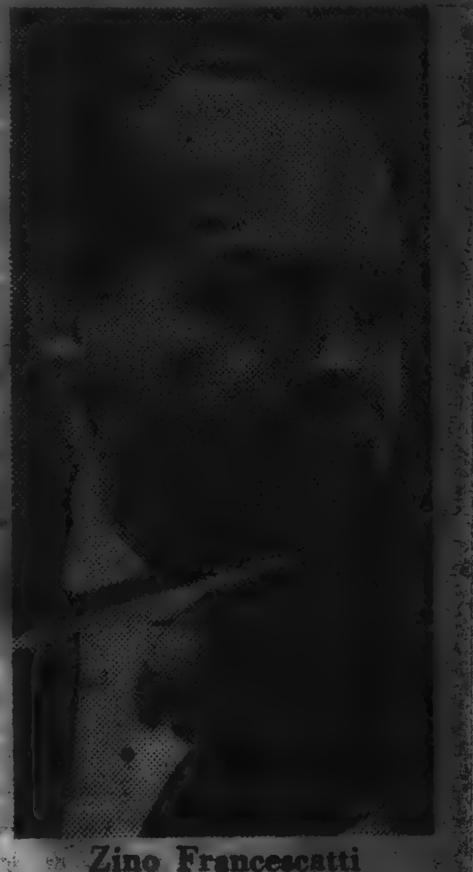
Saturday night's concert, under Mr. Munch's direction, played with the crackle of lightning and the distant thud of thunder as a backdrop; appropriately enough, the rains came as the program concluded with Debussy's "La Mer." There had been an earlier shower five minutes before curtain time, but it was wasted since there was no Debussy sea-spray to accompany it.

Effect is Tonic

And how, on this occasion, "La Mer" sported and swelled. Mr. Munch's reading of the work has given up a good deal of its finicky detail, his concentration at present leaning toward a dissolution of the score's contents into a luminous fog. The effect is tonic.

Moreover, one imagines that Debussy had in mind just such an orchestra as the Boston while composing his work, for there is, in truth, no sense writing with a rainbow brush unless you have a ranbow orchestra to reproduce your colors. And the performance, save for an eceptionally rowdy conclusion, was all mother-of-pearl and velvet. Iridescent it was and ever smooth to the touch.

Not quite as smooth, however, was Byron Janis' performance of Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3, as it was uneven both musically and tonally. Technically, there was considerable to admire in Mr. Janis' interpretation, for the young man has fingers that operate much like steel springs. And there was spirit to his work, heart, too, and genuine fervor throughout. Still, Mr. Janis has a wayward tendency to over-romanticize what is already romantic, and in his dependence on syruppy retards and coyly turned phrases he frankly makes too much of a good thing.



Zino Francescatti

Further, from my vantage point, his tone seemed variable in its quality, ranging from a sonority warm and full-blooded to a sound rather meager and lacking in juice. With this view, however, the 9,000 in the audience did not agree. At the piece's end it gave Mr. Janis a standing ovation.

"Canticum Sacrum"

On the other hand, there was practically no demonstration at the close of Stravinkxy's "Canticum Sacrum," which opened the program, nor is it necessary that there should be. The work is church music, profoundly spiritual and of deep religious conviction. Its language is aggressivly austere and thus difficult for the average listener to comprehend: the "Canticum" gives up its secrets slowly as do all messages concerned with personal faith.

And yet I am bound to say that it is a towering master work, a piece of historic importance. Certainly it appeared to be nothing less in its eloquent performance by soloists Donald Gramm and Blake Stern, the impeccably trained Berkshire Festival Choir and the Boston Band. Perhaps it is only that the "Canticum Sacrum" is not meant for today. Likely it is designed as one of Stravinksy's gifts to a fortunate posterity.

MUSICAL LEADER
CHICAGO, ILL.

AUG 1958

Berkshire Music Festival

by Walter F. Loeb

The Berkshire Mu stival is one of the best established events of the Summe son. Mature musicianship permeates the whole atmosphe. attentive students mingle with sophisticated audiences sten to fine schooled instrumentalists that make up the B n Symphony Orchestra. 6 weeks of excellent programs, b n on July 4, when a Bach weekend was scheduled. We co not attend the concerts that weekend. Charles Munch wa n the conductor the following week-end, which was als Chamber Music series, devoted to Mozart. It ranged fr Musical Joke to the C major Piano Concerto, played wit reat sensitivity and insight by Seymour Lipkin. Lipkin also teamed up with Lucas Foss to play the E flat major concerto for two pianos. Works like the G minor Symphony and D major Symphony received authoritative readings. Hugh Ross conducted three Choral works—the Mass in C major being the major work, as well as a Kyrie in D minor and a Graduale. They were interesting for contrast and content, and given valid readings. The recently formed Festival Chorus (members of the school) participated—though it was evident that they had just mastered their parts. Sarah Fleming, Doris Okerson, Richard Gilley and Laurene Chelsi were the soloists. The heavy attendance at the Mozart concerts attest to their popularity and general interest.

Brahms was featured during the July 18-20 weekend. On July 19 Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra were assisted by soprano Hilde Gueden, baritone Donald Gramm and the Festival Chorus in the "German Requiem." On this damp, chilly evening, none of the performers fully succeeded in capturing the moving, elegaic, basically warm spirit of the work. Nevertheless, there were enough moments of dramatic impact to make the discomforts caused by the elements seem remote. Pierre Monteux directed the July 20 concert and led off with a happily rollicking reading of the Academic Festival Overture. Pianist Leon Fleisher then joined him in a generally effective reading of the D minor Concerto. The week's activities concluded with brightening skies and a colorful rendition of Stravinsky's "Petrouchka."—H.F.

(Continued on page 23)

Berkshire Music Festival

(Continued from page 3)

The impressionists had a field day the weekend of July 25-27. Both Monteux and Munch took a swat at them, with some very happy results. Debussy's Nocturnes, sung by the Festival Chorus and conducted by Monteux on Friday evening was sung with interpretative feeling and understanding. Ravel's "La Valse," on the same program, was given an overwhelming reading. The concert also included Tchaikowsky's 4th Symphony—magnificently played with attention to every nuance. Glinka and Milhaud rounded out the program. Saturday night's program was soaked in rain, but contained much valuable music, especially the "Caniticum Sacrum" by Stravinsky. This is a repeat performance from last year and is an important contribution to modern liturgical literature. Blake Stern and Donald Gramm were again the soloists, with the Festival Chorus. Byron Janis was the soloist in Rachmaninoff's 3rd Piano Concerto, a work he played with vigor and authority. Debussy's "La Mer" sketches concluded the performance. This and the Sunday afternoon program were conducted by Mr. Munch. In the latter a fury was whipped up for Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" suite No. 2. He also conducted Bartok's Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta. Tschaikowsky's Violin Concerto in D with Zino Francescatti concluded the weekend.—A.S.

051

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,566

JUL 28 1958

Byron Janis Soloist at Tanglewood—

Pianist Acclaimed in Rachmaninov Work

By Jules Wolffers
Lenox, Mass.

"They may be beating us in sputniks but we are certainly beating them in pianists," one enthusiastically applauding member of the audience was heard to say Saturday night at Tanglewood. Byron Janis had just completed an altogether magnificent performance of the Rachmaninov Third Piano Concerto with the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch.

There is no doubt that America's crop of largely American-trained musicians needs take a back seat to no other group in this shrinking world. There is some significance in the fact that American art, artists, and art forms are giving repeated examples of health and vigor at a time when this country is accused of selfish materialism.

Mr. Janis is only one of several American pianists who have shown enormous artistic and technical abilities. By the same token, after having heard Mr. Janis three times within one year, one would not care to place him second to any other pianist on these or any other shores.

Damp weather adversely affects a piano quite as much as it does other instruments. The weather Saturday night was just about as damp as could be with mist, fog, drizzle, and rain, alternating in a horrid humid sequence. Piano sounding boards become water logged, hammer heads become soggy, and damp piano keys cause fingers to lose their sure grip.

* * *

But Mr. Janis was in nothing daunted by these conditions or his own personal discomfort. Showing extraordinary power and strength he made light of all the work's formidable difficulties. What is more important, he utilized his amazing technical equipment not for its own sake but to produce a beautifully balanced interpretation full of the color and romantic warmth the work demands. It needed only Dr. Munch's exceptionally sympathetic accompaniment to add the last word to this brilliant rendition.

No wonder that Mr. Janis was called back repeatedly by a rapturously applauding audience. And no wonder that the hearers finally awarded him the supreme distinction of a standing ovation. Never did an artist deserve it more, and there were those who still applauded as the signal was finally given for the orchestra to leave the stage.

The same high performance standards were in evidence throughout this entire memorable program. Apparently Dr. Munch has much admiration for Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" for tenor, baritone, chorus and orchestra, for he has listed the work three times in one year. While those who share the conductor's views about this work are distinctly in the minority, there is no doubt that his efforts have made it clear and plain for inspection.

From the vantage point of previous experiences with the "Canticum" one can say that Saturday's performance was supremely satisfying, so much so that one could take pleasure in the performance itself without liking the work much more than at previous hearings. Yet one is prepared to hear a work written by one of the great composers of our time over and over in the hope that the fault lies not in the music but in the listener. Nor does one lightly dismiss the judgment of so eminent a musician as Dr. Munch.

* * *

Both Blake Stern, the tenor, and Donald Gramm, the baritone, conquered the difficulties of their parts with apparent ease, singing with dramatic intensity and complete conviction. The Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross, sang true and clear with the orchestra, handsomely surmounting the score-imposed problems of timbre and balance under the conductor's careful and controlled direction.

The same standard of performance and direction brought the evening to a most satisfactory close with a masterly interpretation of "La Mer" by Debussy.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly · Independent
Circ. 2,292

JUL 31 1958

TANGLEWOOD
Friday, July 25

By C. D.

Pierre Monteux conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday night in a concert that was high-lighted by a superb performance of the three Debussy Nocturnes and the Ravel La Valse. Sirenes, the last of the three Nocturnes, is seldom heard because it demands a chorus as well as an orchestra. On Friday night the Festival chorus prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon sang the part of the Sirens with a beauty of tone which equalled that of the orchestra and the result created a magnificent tonal picture.

A novelty on the program for most listeners was Milhaud's Prelude to the Third Act of the Eumenides. It is doubtful if this music can stand on its own as a concert piece. Certainly the anguished groans of the orchestra might clarify the mood of the play when used as incidental music, but isolated as a single piece on a concert program, its feverish anguish seemed far removed from the dignified tragedy of Aeschylus.

Other works on the program were, the Tchaikovsky Symphony No. 4 and a Prelude by

(Continued on Page 18)

Grace Notes

(Continued from Page 6)

Glinka. At the end of the concert there was an ovation for Mr. Monteux which was a tribute to his age as well as to his distinguished conducting.

TANGLEWOOD
July 26 and 27

By A. C. S.

Rachmaninoff's Third Piano Concerto has recently been having a world-wide hearing and winning acclaim for the soloist involved. Although it contains none of the "popular" tunes, it does provide a wide range of pianistic challenges which require a technical development of the highest order. Byron Janis met every challenge Saturday evening. His tone was big, but never harsh; his playing was letter-perfect, but never pedantic. With a fine assist from Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Janis took Tanglewood by storm. It was his first appearance at these concerts and, judging from the standing ovation accorded him, it will not be the last.

Also included on Saturday's program were La Mer, by Debussy, and Stravinsky's Canticum Sacrum. Mr. Munch obviously likes the latter work for this is the second season he has performed it and his approach is devotional. Blake Stern, tenor, Donald Gramm, baritone, and the Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross, sang with conviction.

The Sunday concert also had a contemporary work, but one which the audience could digest more easily: Bela Bartok's Music for Strings, percussion and Celeste. A rather fugal first movement for strings is followed by one fast and scherzo-like which introduces the other instruments. The most interesting movement is the third, an Adagio filled with nebulous, eerie sounds, including glissandi for the kettle drum. The work, which concludes with an exhilarating Allegro, was given a stunning performance. The B.S.O. was also in top form for the Suite No. 2 of Daphnis and Chloe by Ravel.

Zino Francescatti gave evidence to justify his position in the hierarchy of the world's violinists. Appearing as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto, his tone was lush and warm, his intonation sure, and his articulation impeccable.

Both programs had audience appeal with the result that the weekend, despite the weather, drew the largest attendance of the season.

FRANCE AMERIQUE

MASSACHUSETTS

Charles Münch et Francescatti à Tanglewood

CHARLES MUNCH a dirigé la semaine dernière à Tanglewood deux concerts qui, en dépit du temps menaçant, ont attiré chacun plus de 10.000 personnes. Le grand chef d'orchestre français a notamment donné, avec sa fougue, son intensité et sa maestria coutumières, "La Mer" de Debussy et "Daphnis et Chloé" de Ravel.

Zino Francescatti a joué en solo un Concerto pour violon de Tchaïkowsky. "He displayed," écrit le New York Times, "the attributes that have brought him fame: the technical assurance, the warmth of tone and the distinction and grace of phrasing".

Après le concert, un dîner a été offert, par Mme Robinson Smith, de New-York, en l'honneur de MM. Münch et Francescatti. M. Pierre Monteux assistait également à ce dîner, ainsi que le Consul général de France et Mme Charles de Pampelonne, qui étaient venus spécialement de Boston à cette occasion.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

JUL 24

Argentine Envoy Praises Center for Music Exchange

TANGLEWOOD — Dardo Cuneo, special envoy of Argentine President Arturo Frondizi, this week thanked the widow of famed conductor Serge Koussevitzky for the important contribution to music exchange between the United States and Latin America through the Berkshire Music Center, founded by her husband.

Frondizi's press secretary met Mrs. Koussevitzky during the intermission of a Berkshire Festival concert in the Music Shed. Cuneo said the Argentine government was particularly grateful for Tanglewood's long history of helping to further the recognition of Argentine musicians such as Alberto Ginastera and young Mario Davidovsky, a student at the school this year.

Praise From Widow

Mrs. Koussevitzky expressed her appreciation of Cuneo's visit and announced that the Koussevitzky Music Foundation had just noted a commission for a major work by Ginastera to be played at the next Inter-American Music Festival in Washington. She also praised Davidovsky and the two Argentine instrumentalists who are Fromm Foundation Fellowship students at the Berkshire Music Center doing special work in contemporary music. They are Efrain Guigui, clarinet, and Gerardo Levy, flutist, formerly of the Teatro Colon.

Mr. Cuneo had warm praise for the concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Sunday. The concert featured the first appearance of the season by the 83-year-old conductor, Pierre Monteux, who recently led the Colon Orchestra in Buenos Aires, and the appearance of pianist Leon Fleisher in Brahms' First Piano Concerto.

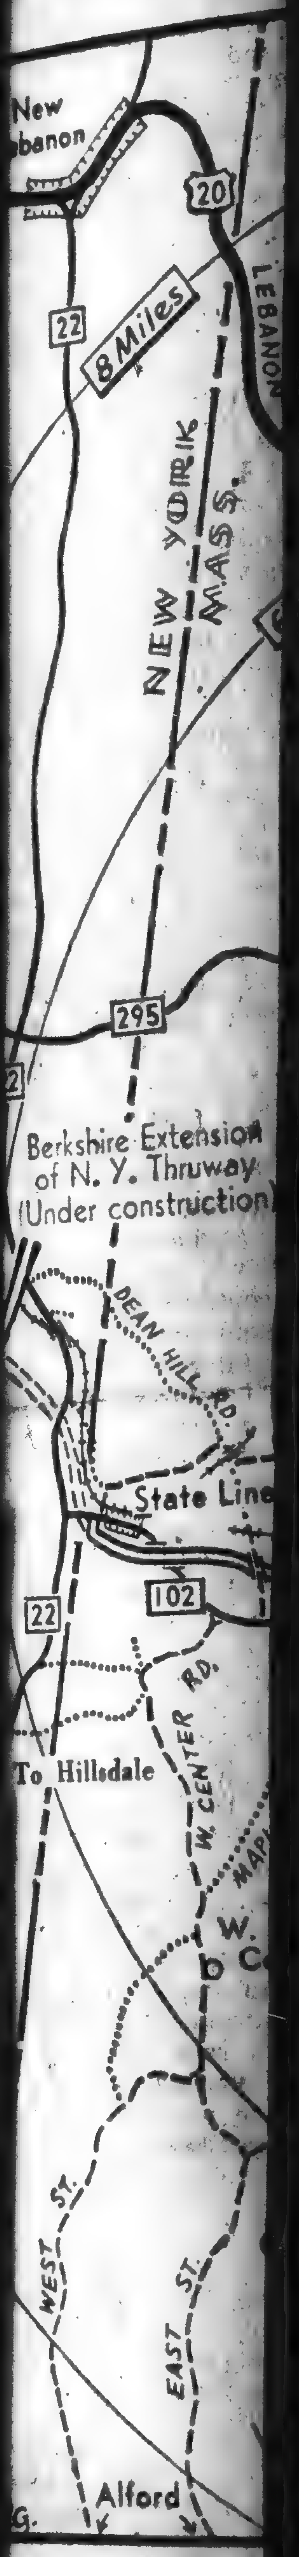
Fleisher, who also recently toured Argentina and South America, is regarded as one of this country's outstanding young musicians.

---

hire Eagle (e)
FIELD, Mass.
ndependent
irc. 28,354

UL 26 1958

o Esc



EASIER DRIVIN
y-ways in area.
nap. Dotted-line

051

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,566
JUL 28 1958

Byron Janis Soloist at Tanglewood

Pianist Acclaimed in Rachmaninov Work

By Jules Wolffers
Lenox, Mass.

"They may be beating us in sputniks but we are certainly beating them in pianists," one enthusiastically applauding member of the audience was heard to say Saturday night at Tanglewood. Byron Janis had just completed an altogether magnificent performance of the Rachmaninov Third Piano Concerto with the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch.

There is no doubt that America's crop of largely American-trained musicians needs take a back seat to no other group in this shrinking world. There is some significance in the fact that American art, artists, and art forms are giving repeated examples of health and vigor at a time when this country is accused of selfish materialism.

Mr. Janis is only one of several American pianists who have shown enormous artistic and technical abilities. By the same token, after having heard Mr. Janis three times within one year, one would not care to place him second to any other pianist on these or any other shores.

Damp weather adversely affects a piano quite as much as it does other instruments. The weather Saturday night was just about as damp as could be with mist, fog, drizzle, and rain, alternating in a horrid humid sequence. Piano sounding boards become water logged, hammer heads become soggy, and damp piano keys cause fingers to lose their sure grip.

* * *

But Mr. Janis was in nothing daunted by these conditions or his own personal discomfort. Showing extraordinary power and strength he made light of all the work's formidable difficulties. What is more important, he utilized his amazing technical equipment not for its own sake but to produce a beautifully balanced interpretation full of the color and romantic warmth the work demands. It needed only Dr. Munch's exceptionally sympathetic accompaniment to add the last word to this brilliant rendition.

No wonder that Mr. Janis was called back repeatedly by a rapturously applauding audience. And no wonder that the hearers finally awarded him the supreme distinction of a standing ovation. Never did an artist deserve it more, and there were those who still applauded as the signal was finally given for the orchestra to leave the stage.

The same high performance standards were in evidence throughout this entire memorable program. Apparently Dr. Munch has much admiration for Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" for tenor, baritone, chorus and orchestra, for he has listed the work three times in one year. While those who share the conductor's views about this work are distinctly in the minority, there is no doubt that his efforts have made it clear and plain for inspection.

From the vantage point of previous experiences with the "Canticum" one can say that Saturday's performance was supremely satisfying, so much so that one could take pleasure in the performance itself without liking the work much more than at previous hearings. Yet one is prepared to hear a work written by one of the great composers of our time over and over in the hope that the fault lies not in the music but in the listener. Nor does one lightly dismiss the judgment of so eminent a musician as Dr. Munch.

* * *

Both Blake Stern, the tenor, and Donald Gramm, the baritone, conquered the difficulties of their parts with apparent ease, singing with dramatic intensity and complete conviction. The Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross, sang true and clear with the orchestra, handsomely surmounting the score-imposed problems of timbre and balance under the conductor's careful and controlled direction.

The same standard of performance and direction brought the evening to a most satisfactory close with a masterly interpretation of "La Mer" by Debussy.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292
JUL 31 1958

TANGLEWOOD
Friday, July 25
By C. D.

Pierre Monteux conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday night in a concert that was high-lighted by a superb performance of the three Debussy Nocturnes and the Ravel La Valse. Sirenes, the last of the three Nocturnes, is seldom heard because it demands a chorus as well as an orchestra. On Friday night the Festival chorus prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon sang the part of the Sirens with a beauty of tone which equalled that of the orchestra and the result created a magnificent tonal picture.

A novelty on the program for most listeners was Milhaud's Prelude to the Third Act of the Eumenides. It is doubtful if this music can stand on its own as a concert piece. Certainly the anguished groans of the orchestra might clarify the mood of the play when used as incidental music, but isolated as a single piece on a concert program its feverish anguish seemed far removed from the dignified tragedy of Aeschylus.

Other works on the program were the Tchaikovsky Symphony No. 4 and a Prelude by

(Continued on Page 18)

Grace Notes
(Continued from Page 6)

Glinka. At the end of the concert there was an ovation for Mr. Monteux which was a tribute to his age as well as to his distinguished conducting.

TANGLEWOOD
July 26 and 27
By A. C. S.

Rachmaninoff's Third Piano Concerto has recently been having a world-wide hearing and winning acclaim for the soloist involved. Although it contains none of the "popular" tunes, it does provide a wide range of pianistic challenges which require a technical development of the highest order. Byron Janis met every challenge Saturday evening. His tone was big, but never harsh; his playing was letter-perfect, but never pedantic. With a fine assist from Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Janis took Tanglewood by storm. It was his first appearance at these concerts and, judging from the standing ovation accorded him, it will not be the last.

Also included on Saturday's program were La Mer, by Debussy, and Stravinsky's Canticum Sacrum. Mr. Munch obviously likes the latter work for this is the second season he has performed it and his approach is devotional. Blake Stern, tenor, Donald Gramm, baritone, and the Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross, sang with conviction.

The Sunday concert also had a contemporary work, but one which the audience could digest more easily: Bela Bartok's Music for Strings, percussion and Celeste. A rather fugal first movement for strings is followed by one fast and scherzo-like which introduces the other instruments. The most interesting movement is the third, an Adagio filled with nebulous, eerie sounds, including glissandi for the kettle drum. The work, which concludes with an exhilarating Allegro, was given a stunning performance. The B.S.O. was also in top form for the Suite No. 2 of Daphnis and Chloe by [illegible]

Zino Francescatti gave evidence to justify his position in the hierarchy of the world's violinists. Appearing as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto, his tone was lush and warm, his intonation sure, and his articulation impeccable.

Both programs had audience appeal with the result that the weekend, despite the weather, drew the largest attendance of the season.

FRANCE AMERIQUE

MASSACHUSETTS

Charles Münch et Francescatti à Tanglewood

CHARLES MUNCH a dirigé la semaine dernière à Tanglewood deux concerts qui, en dépit du temps menaçant, ont attiré chacun plus de 10.000 personnes. Le grand chef d'orchestre français a notamment donné, avec sa fougue, son intensité et sa maestria coutumières, "La Mer" de Debussy et "Daphnis et Chloé" de Ravel.

Zino Francescatti a joué en solo un Concerto pour violon de Tchaïkowsky. "He displayed," écrit le New York Times, "the attributes that have brought him fame: the technical assurance, the warmth of tone and the distinction and grace of phrasing".

Après le concert, un dîner a été offert, par Mme Robinson Smith, de New-York, en l'honneur de MM. Münch et Francescatti. M. Pierre Monteux assistait également à ce dîner, ainsi que le Consul général de France et Mme Charles de [illegible]pelonne, qui étaient venus spécialement de Boston à cette occasion.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354
JUL 24 1958

Argentine Envoy Praises Center for Music Exchange

TANGLEWOOD — Dardo Cuneo, special envoy of Argentine President Arturo Frondizi, this week thanked the widow of famed conductor Serge Koussevitzky for the important contribution to music exchange between the United States and Latin America through the Berkshire Music Center, founded by her husband.

Frondizi's press secretary met Mrs. Koussevitzky during the intermission of a Berkshire Festival concert in the Music Shed. Cuneo said the Argentine government was particularly grateful for Tanglewood's long history of helping to further the recognition of Argentine musicians such as Alberto Ginastera and young Mario Davidovsky, a student at the school this year.

Praise From Widow

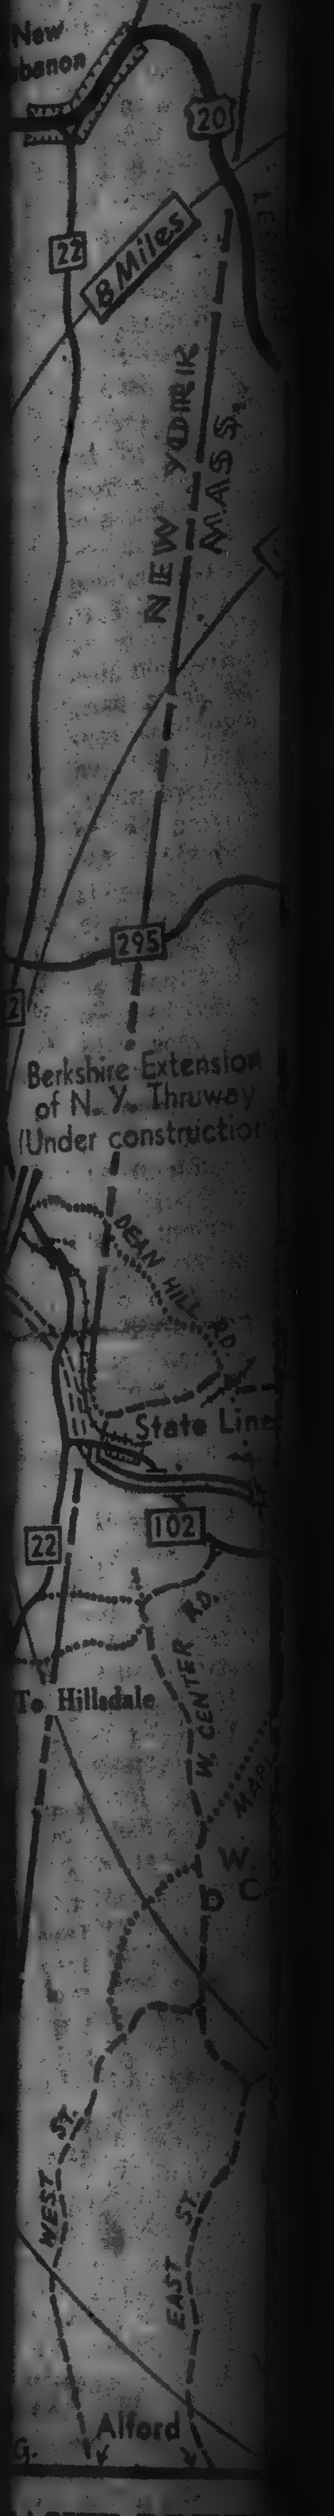
Mrs. Koussevitzky expressed her appreciation of Cuneo's visit and announced that the Koussevitzky Music Foundation had just noted a commission for a major work by Ginastera to be played at the next Inter-American Music Festival in Washington. She also praised Davidovsky and the two Argentine instrumentalists who are Fromm Foundation Fellowship students at the Berkshire Music Center doing special work in contemporary music. They are Efrain Guigui, clarinet, and Gerardo Levy, flutist, formerly of the Teatro Colon.

Mr. Cuneo had warm praise for the concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Sunday. The concert featured the first appearance of the season by the 83-year-old conductor, Pierre Monteux, who recently led the Colon Orchestra in Buenos Aires, and the appearance of pianist Leon Fleisher in Brahms' First Piano Concerto.

Fleisher, who also recently toured Argentina and South America, is regarded as one of this country's outstanding young musicians.

Circ. 28,354
JUL 26 1958

To Esc



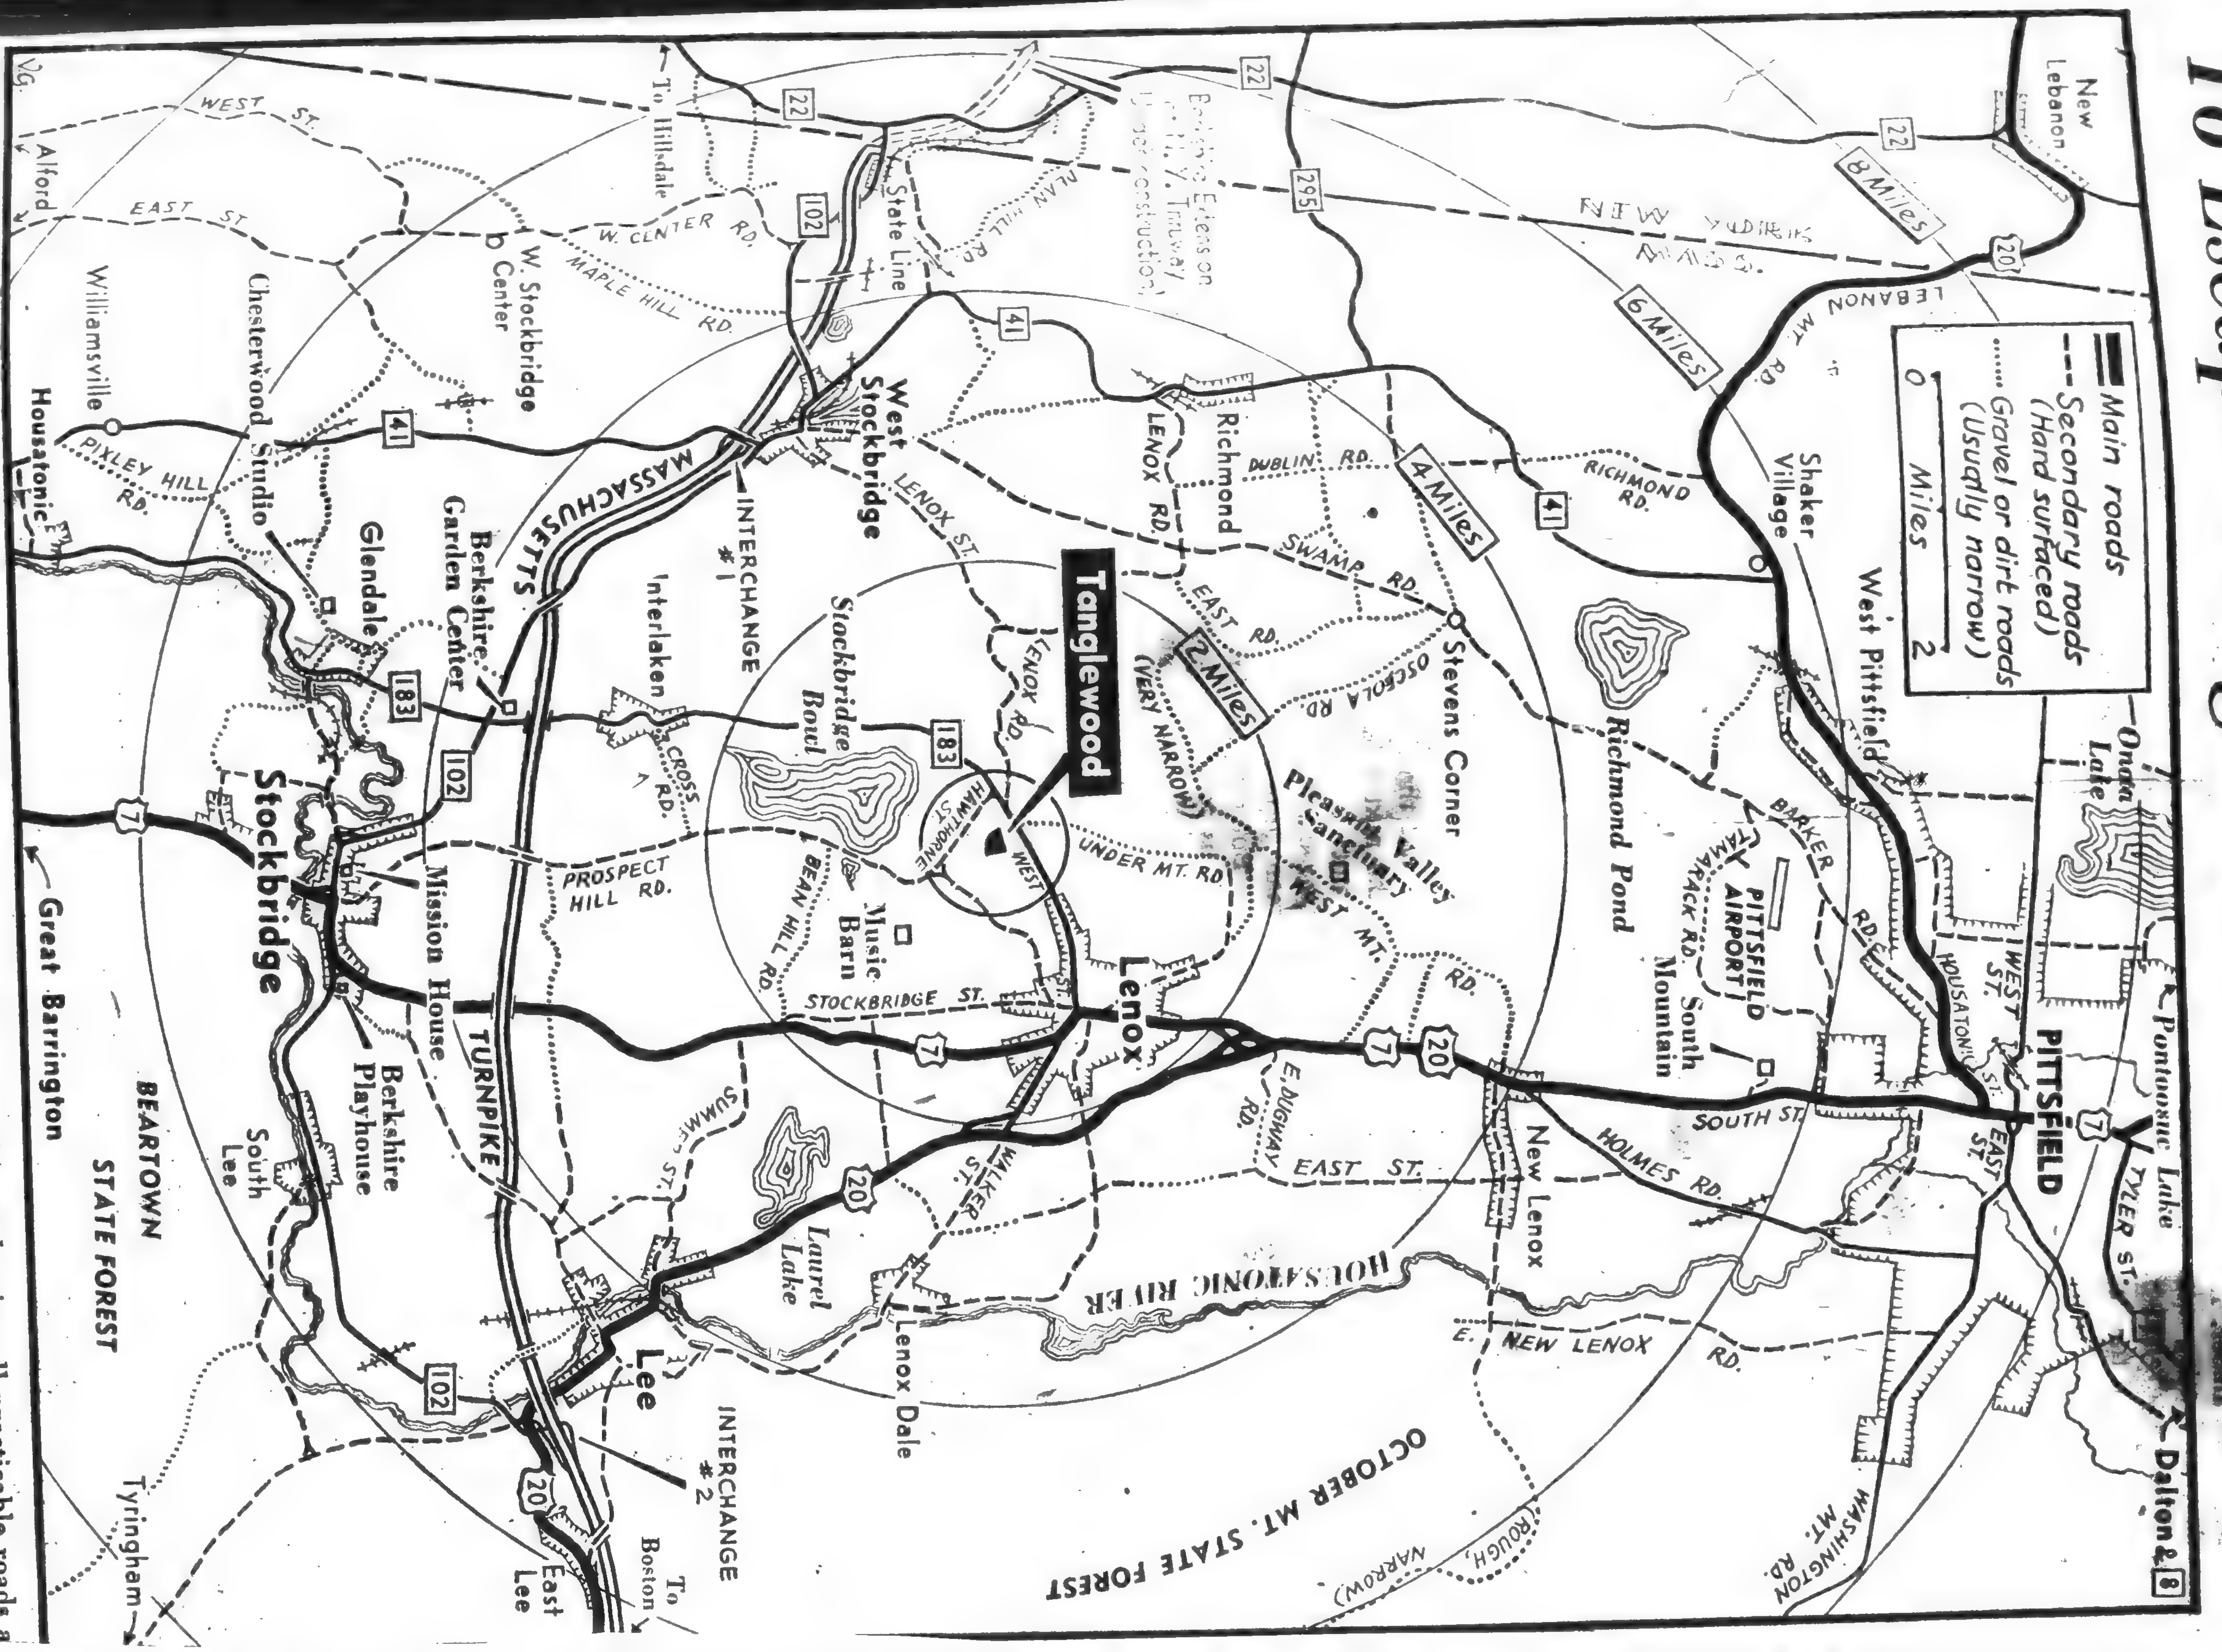
EASIER DRIVI
y-ways in area.
map. Dotted-line

[152]

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

JUL 26 1958

To Escape Tanglewood Traffic . . .



Main roads
Secondary roads (Hard surfaced)
Gravel or dirt roads (Usually narrow)
0 Miles 2
PITTSFIELD
Pontoosuc Lake
Onota Lake
Dalton & 8
TYLER ST.
WEST ST.
EAST ST.
HOUSATONIC ST.
SOUTH ST.
HOLMES RD.
WASHINGTON MT. RD.
New Lebanon
LEBANON MT. RD.
West Pittsfield
Shaker Village
BARKER RD.
PITTSFIELD AIRPORT
TAMARACK RD.
South Mountain
Richmond Pond
RICHMOND RD.
New Lenox
E. NEW LENOX RD.
(ROUGH, NARROW)
OCTOBER MT. STATE FOREST
HOUSATONIC RIVER
Stevens Corner
OSCEOLA RD.
Pleasant Valley Sanctuary
WEST MT. RD.
EAST ST.
E. DUGWAY RD.
Richmond
DUBLIN RD.
SWAMP RD.
EAST RD.
LENOX RD.
(VERY NARROW)
UNDER MT. RD.
Berkshire Extension of N. Y. Thruway (Under construction)
Lenox
Tanglewood
HAWTHORNE ST.
WEST
LENOX RD.
WALKER ST.
Lenox Dale
STOCKBRIDGE ST.
Stockbridge Bowl
Music Barn
BEAN HILL RD.
Laurel Lake
West Stockbridge
LENOX ST.
State Line
INTERCHANGE #1
INTERCHANGE #2
To Hillsdale
W. CENTER RD.
MAPLE HILL RD.
PLAIN HILL RD.
Interlaken
CROSS RD.
PROSPECT HILL RD.
SUMMER ST.
Lee
To Boston
East Lee
MASSACHUSETTS TURNPIKE
W. Stockbridge Center
Berkshire Garden Center
Mission House
Berkshire Playhouse
Glendale
Stockbridge
South Lee
Chesterwood Studio
Williamsville
PIXLEY HILL RD.
Alford
WEST ST.
EAST ST.
Housatonic
Great Barrington
BEARTOWN STATE FOREST
Tyringham
2 Miles
4 Miles
6 Miles
8 Miles
7 20 22
41
102
183
295
V.G.

EASIER DRIVING to and from Tanglewood is possible after studying this special map showing all practicable roads a by-ways in area. Berkshire Week staffer Jon Middlebrook checked roads; cartographer Vaughn S. Gray of Glendale dr map. Dotted-line roads display some of Berkshire's finest vistas and panoramas, but are not advised in wet weath

---

TIMES-UNION • Albany, Wed., July 23, 1958

AROUND THE TOWN:

Berkshire Festival A Thing of Beauty

By EDGAR S. VAN OLINDA

If you cannot attend the Brussels Fair this Summer, do not despair. Right in Albany's back yard is one of the most cosmopolitan gatherings of people from every civilized nation in the world attending the 24th Symphonic Festival at Tanglewood in the Berkshires.

The elite of Boston's Back Bay mingles friendly like with fellow music lovers, probably secretly envying the Bermuda-shorted devotees of the "Three Bs" munching hot dogs or drinking Cokes.

Ralph Waldo Emerson, who was a Bostonian of sorts, once said: "An institution is the lengthened shadow of a man," a generic term for anyone who has contributed something for the betterment of mankind. However, it is the "lengthened shadow" of Gertrude Robinson Smith which hovers over the "Salzburg of America."

IN FOREFRONT

She gathered together a nucleus of music lovers of Lenox, Stockbridge and the surrounding Berkshire communities to institute a series of Summer concerts, which were known as "Music Under the Moon," with the late Henry Hadley and some 65 members of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra presenting a series of concerts in the horse show ring on the Hanna Farm.

The first concert was Aug. 23, 1934. Miss Smith has dominated the festival ever since. Her moving appeal for a permanent shed after a disastrous concert during a severe thunderstorm under a tent when the god of nature even defied Serge Koussevitzky, is responsible for the present acoustically perfect open auditorium where the major concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra have been held ever since.

They are now in the second of a four-weeks' series of incomparable orchestral and vocal galas which, on a pleasant Sunday afternoon attract an audience of some 14,000 music lovers.

SECOND THOUGHTS

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, until recently, has been a man's world. The first break was the entry of Doriet Anthony Dwyer who became first flutist of the orchestra. This year, another young lady has been added to the 'cello section, being the only two members of the ensemble to work in short sleeves.

There is a comforting absence of dive-bombing insects in the shed this season, owing to the cool weather or perhaps, an allergy to Bach, Mozart, Brahms and Beethoven. A new lighting system, flooding the players with neon brilliance, is a great boon to the hundreds of camera addicts, intent upon getting action shots.

John G. W. Mah[illegible] of the Pittsfield, Mass., Berkshire Eagle, has compiled a wonderful history of Tanglewood, with innumerable pictures of the progress of the festival, titled, naturally: "Music Under the Moon." It is on sale at the festival book store. However, to get the [illegible] thrill of Tanglewood [illegible] attend the annual "Tanglewood on Parade," which explores every facet of the festival, Thursday evening, Aug. 7. We hope to see you there.

EAGLE 7/24

Lenox

Tel. Eagle Office Lee 683-W
or Lenox 881

New Parking Limits Passed By Selectmen

LENOX — Additional one-hour parking restrictions were approved by the Selectmen last night and sent to the state Department of Public Works for its approval.

The new regulations limit parking on the west side of Main Street between Cliffwood and West streets and on the north side of Franklin Street from Main to Church streets. There are presently no restrictions in those areas.

The new regulations won't go into effect until they are approved by the DPW. The Selectmen acted after receiving recommendations from the newly organized parking committee.

Also at their meeting last night, the Selectmen agreed to erect a sign at the corner of Hawthorne Street and Stockbridge Street to direct persons coming to Lenox from Tanglewood by way of Hawthorne Street.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra requested the sign be erected. The BSO also asked the Selectmen to erect a sign on the corner of Mahkeenac Road and Hawthorne Street. The board said they would notify the BSO that the corner is in Stockbridge.

The county commissioners informed the Selectmen that Chapter 90 work on West Street has been approved.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

JUL 28 1958

Best Weekend of '58 Season Reported Throughout County

Many of Berkshire County's hotels, motels and inns had the SRO sign out over the weekend for the first time this season, according to John F. Downing, executive director of the Berkshire Hills Conference.

At the Hotel Wendell-Sherwood in Pittsfield, Manager William H. Clifford said only a few rooms were vacant Friday and all 300 were filled by 7:15 Saturday evening. Mr. Clifford reported the hotel's dining room business about 25 per cent ahead of the same weekend last year.

The Kiwanis Information Center in Lenox reported a "very good" weekend with all rooms rented by Saturday noon. Miss Lucile Schefisch, who is in charge of the Chamber of Commerce information booth in Lee, said that for the first time this season, all 138 rooms registered there were filled.

1958 Tanglewood High

Tanglewood attendance hit a 1958 weekend high of 26,552, which was also much higher than the comparable 1957 weekend. Last year's weekend attendance at the second of the major weekend concerts was about 19,000. The breakdown: Friday, 6,437; Saturday, [illegible]; yesterday afternoon, 10,379.

The rain which fell shortly after the concert opened Saturday night drenched most of the crowd of about 3,700 on the lawns outside the Shed and many fled to their automobiles for shelter.

While yesterday afternoon's attendance of 10,379 was the highest for a single concert this year, due in part to the program and the appearance of Zino Francescatti as violin soloist, it did not come within striking distance of the two all-time attendance records set in 1951 when 15,800 showed up for Dr. Charles Munch's debut with the BSO at Tanglewood, and the crowd of 15,624 which turned out to hear the noted pianist, Rudolf Serkin, as soloist with the orchestra in 1955.

Better Up North

M. Warren Quadland, president of the Williamstown Board of Trade, reported that business in that area was "good, much better, almost hitting the normal stride" over the weekend. Mr. Quadland, attributing the area's slow start this season to poor weather, said the weather helped this weekend. "We had sun," he said, "and the only time it rained was at night, when we don't care what it does."

Mr. Quadland said area motels and inns filled early Saturday. By evening the surplus was spilling over into tourist homes and rooming houses.

Good business also was reported Friday and yesterday.

Personnel at the Southern Berkshire Chamber of Commerce information booth in Great Barrington reported "the best weekend so far." Of 224 persons who stopped at the booth Saturday, 132 were placed in rooms, they said. "We were sold out on rooms," Chamber officials said. A week ago several rooms were left unoccupied in the Great Barrington area.

Spot-Check Made

Following are some of the spot-check reports furnished The Eagle by the Berkshire Hills Conference:

Elwal Pines Motel and Restaurant, Williamstown. Motel booked solid over the weekend for an increase of 10 per cent over 1957. Dining business 15 per cent ahead of last year.

The Springs, New Ashford. Twenty per cent ahead of last year.

Breezy Knoll, Pontoosuc Lake. At capacity Friday and Saturday nights; had to farm out 25 guests to other places. Dining room business 20 per cent ahead.

Curtis Hotel, Lenox. Booked solid over weekend for a 20 per cent rise over same period in 1957. Dining business up 25 per cent.

Berkshire Inn, Great Barrington. Booked solid. Dining room filled to capacity Saturday and Sunday.

Jug End Barn, South Egremont, and Eastover, Lenox. Booked solid, plus farming out some guests.

Red Lion Inn, Stockbridge. Full house. Food business about 25 per cent ahead of last year.

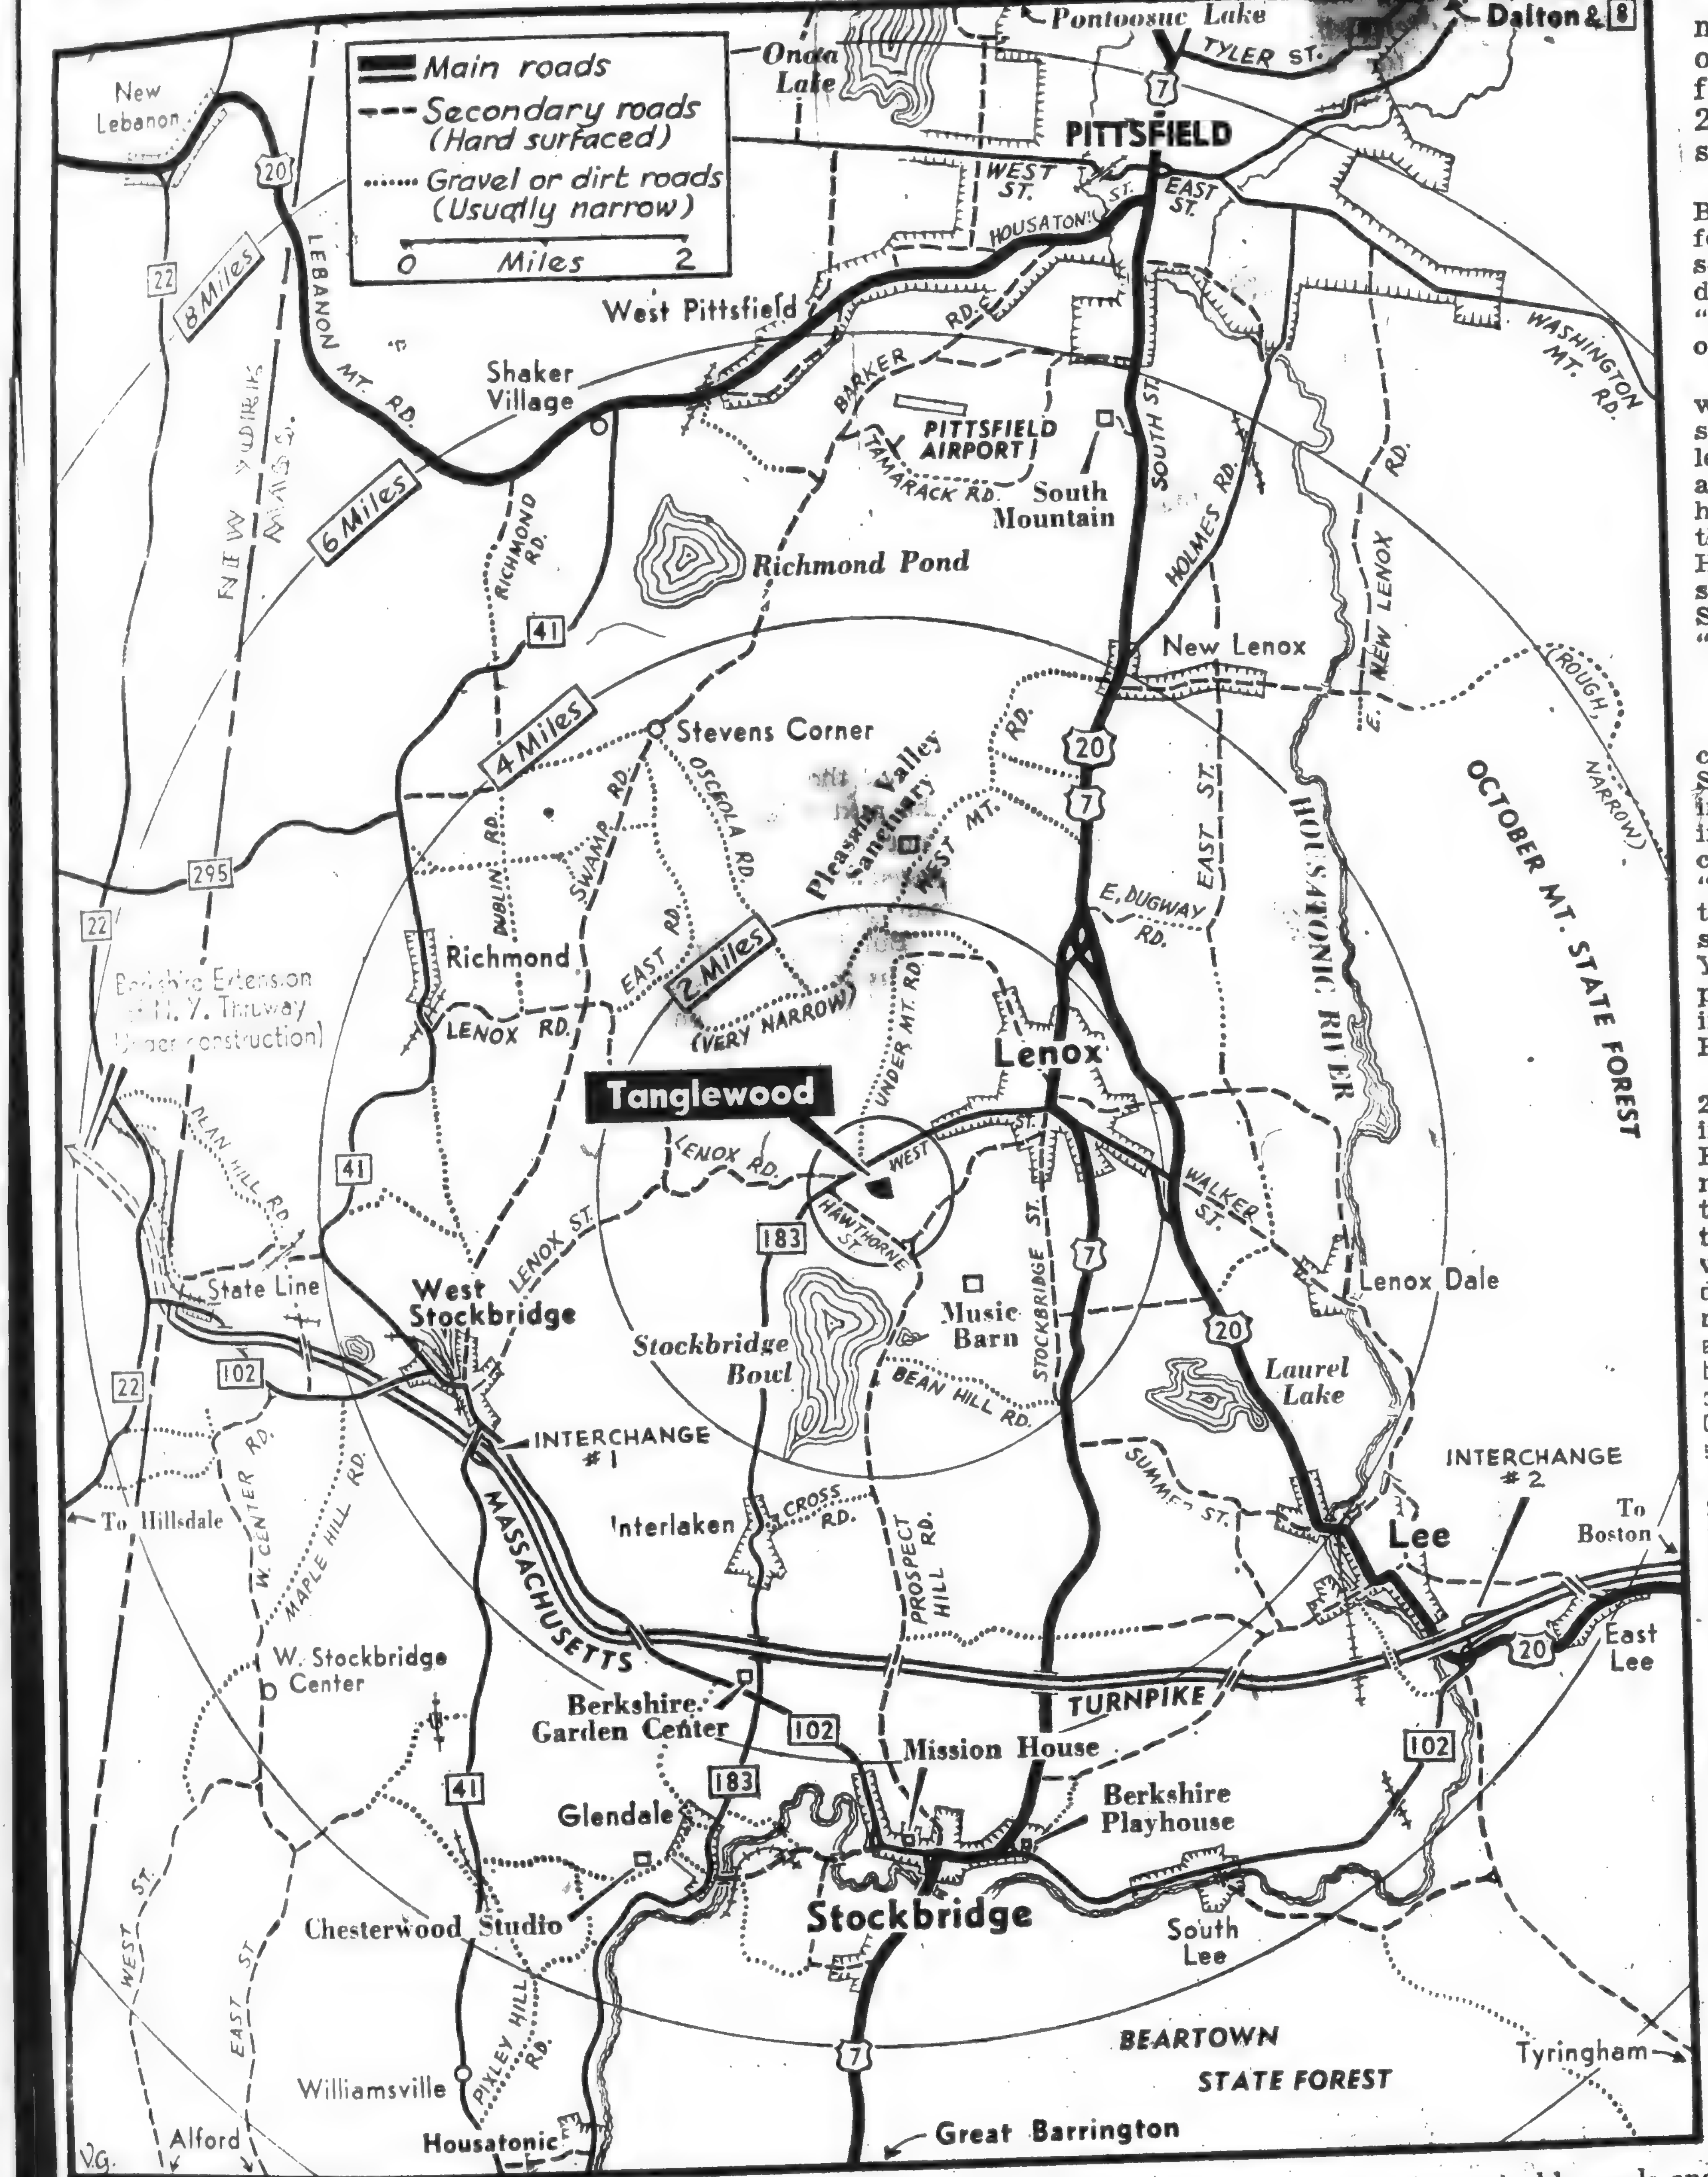
Birchwood Inn, Lenox. Booked solid. Many guests returning for second or third year. Best year Birchwood has had since it opened five years ago.

Blue Belton Inn, Sheffield. Best weekend of the year. Booked solid.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

JUL 26 1958

To Escape Tanglewood Traffic . . .



Main roads
Secondary roads (Hard surfaced)
Gravel or dirt roads (Usually narrow)
0 Miles 2
Pontoosuc Lake
Dalton & 8
Onota Lake
TYLER ST.
PITTSFIELD
New Lebanon
WEST ST.
EAST ST.
HOUSATONIC ST.
West Pittsfield
LEBANON MT. RD.
WASHINGTON MT. RD.
Shaker Village
PITTSFIELD AIRPORT
South Mountain
Richmond Pond
6 Miles
8 Miles
4 Miles
2 Miles
Stevens Corner
New Lenox
Pleasant Valley Sanctuary
OCTOBER MT. STATE FOREST
HOUSATONIC RIVER
Richmond
Berkshire Extension N.Y. Thruway (Under construction)
(VERY NARROW)
Tanglewood
Lenox
Lenox Dale
Stockbridge Bowl
Music Barn
Laurel Lake
West Stockbridge
State Line
INTERCHANGE #1
INTERCHANGE #2
To Hillsdale
Interlaken
Lee
To Boston
East Lee
MASSACHUSETTS TURNPIKE
W. Stockbridge Center
Berkshire Garden Center
Mission House
Glendale
Berkshire Playhouse
Chesterwood Studio
Stockbridge
South Lee
BEARTOWN STATE FOREST
Williamsville
Tyringham
Alford
Housatonic
Great Barrington
V.G.

EASIER DRIVING to and from Tanglewood is possible after studying this special map showing all practicable roads and by-ways in area. Berkshire Week staffer Jon Middlebrook checked roads; cartographer Vaughn S. Gray of Glendale drew map. Dotted-line roads display some of Berkshire's finest vistas and panoramas, but are not advised in wet weather.

TIMES-UNION * Albany, Wed., July 23, 1958

AROUND THE TOWN:

Berkshire Festival A Thing of Beauty

By EDGAR S. VAN OLINDA

If you cannot attend the Brussels Fair this Summer, do not despair. Right in Albany's back yard is one of the most cosmopolitan gatherings of people from every civilized nation in the world attending the 24th Symphonic Festival at Tanglewood in the Berkshires.

The elite of Boston's Back Bay mingles friendly like with fellow music lovers, probably secretly envying the Bermuda-shorted devotees of the "Three Bs" munching hot dogs or drinking Cokes.

Ralph Waldo Emerson, who was a Bostonian of sorts, once said: "An institution is the lengthened shadow of a man," a generic term for anyone who has contributed something for the betterment of mankind. However, it is the "lengthened shadow" of Gertrude Robinson Smith which hovers over the "Salzburg of America."

IN FOREFRONT

She gathered together a nucleus of music lovers of Lenox, Stockbridge and the surrounding Berkshire communities to institute a series of Summer concerts, which were known as "Music Under the Moon," with the late Henry Hadley and some 65 members of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra presenting a series of concerts in the horse show ring on the Hanna Farm.

The first concert was Aug. 23, 1934. Miss Smith has dominated the festival ever since. Her moving appeal for a permanent shed after a disastrous concert during a severe thunderstorm under a tent when the god of nature even defied Serge Koussevitzky, is responsible for the present acoustically perfect open auditorium where the major concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra have been held ever since.

They are now in the second of a four-weeks' series of incomparable orchestral and vocal galas which, on a pleasant Sunday afternoon attract an audience of some 14,000 music lovers.

SECOND THOUGHTS

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, until recently, has been a man's world. The first break was the entry of Doriet Anthony Dwyer who became first flutist of the orchestra. This year, another young lady has been added to the 'cello section, being the only two members of the ensemble to work in short sleeves.

There is a comforting absence of dive-bombing insects in the shed this season, owing to the cool weather or perhaps, an allergy to Bach, Mozart, Brahms and Beethoven. A new lighting system, flooding the players with neon brilliance, is a great boon to the hundreds of camera addicts, intent upon getting action shots.

John G. W. Mahanna of the Pittsfield, Mass., Berkshire Eagle, has compiled a wonderful history of Tanglewood, with innumerable pictures of the progress of the festival, titled, naturally: "Music Under the Moon." It is on sale at the festival book store. However, to get the [illegible] thrill of Tanglewood, [illegible] attend the annual "Tanglewood on Parade," which explores every facet of the festival, Thursday evening, Aug. 7. We hope to see you there.

EAGLE 7/24

Lenox

Tel. Eagle Office Lee 683-W
or Lenox 881

New Parking Limits Passed By Selectmen

LENOX — Additional one-hour parking restrictions were approved by the Selectmen last night and sent to the state Department of Public Works for its approval.

The new regulations limit parking on the west side of Main Street between Cliffwood and West streets and on the north side of Franklin Street from Main to Church streets. There are presently no restrictions in those areas.

The new regulations won't go into effect until they are approved by the DPW. The Selectmen acted after receiving recommendations from the newly organized parking committee.

Also at their meeting last night, the Selectmen agreed to erect a sign at the corner of Hawthorne Street and Stockbridge Street to direct persons coming to Lenox from Tanglewood by way of Hawthorne Street.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra requested the sign be erected. The BSO also asked the Selectmen to erect a sign on the corner of Mahkeenac Road and Hawthorne Street. The board said they would notify the BSO that the corner is in Stockbridge.

The county commissioners informed the Selectmen that Chapter 90 work on West Street has been approved.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

JUL 28 1958

Best Weekend of '58 Season Reported Throughout County

Many of Berkshire County's hotels, motels and inns had the SRO sign out over the weekend for the first time this season, according to John F. Downing, executive director of the Berkshire Hills Conference.

At the Hotel Wendell-Sherwood in Pittsfield, Manager William H. Clifford said only a few rooms were vacant Friday and all 300 were filled by 7:15 Saturday evening. Mr. Clifford reported the hotel's dining room business about 25 per cent ahead of the same weekend last year.

The Kiwanis Information Center in Lenox reported a "very good" weekend with all rooms rented by Saturday noon. Miss Lucile Schefisch, who is in charge of the Chamber of Commerce information booth in Lee, said that for the first time this season, all 138 rooms registered there were filled.

1958 Tanglewood High

Tanglewood attendance hit a 1958 weekend high of 26,552, which was also much higher than the comparable 1957 weekend. Last year's weekend attendance at the second of the major weekend concerts was about 19,000. The breakdown: Friday, 6,437; Saturday, [illegible]; yesterday afternoon, 10,379.

The rain which fell shortly after the concert opened Saturday night drenched most of the crowd of about 3,700 on the lawns outside the Shed and many fled to their automobiles for shelter.

While yesterday afternoon's attendance of 10,379 was the highest for a single concert this year, due in part to the program and the appearance of Zino Francescatti as violin soloist, it did not come within striking distance of the two all-time attendance records set in 1951 when 15,800 showed up for Dr. Charles Munch's debut with the BSO at Tanglewood, and the crowd of 15,624 which turned out to hear the noted pianist, Rudolf Serkin, as soloist with the orchestra in 1955.

Better Up North

M. Warren Quadland, president of the Williamstown Board of Trade, reported that business in that area was "good, much better, almost hitting the normal stride" over the weekend. Mr. Quadland, attributing the area's slow start this season to poor weather, said the weather helped this weekend. "We had sun," he said, "and the only time it rained was at night, when we don't care what it does."

Mr. Quadland said area motels and inns filled early Saturday. By evening the surplus was spilling over into tourist homes and rooming houses.

Good business also was reported Friday and yesterday.

Personnel at the Southern Berkshire Chamber of Commerce information booth in Great Barrington reported "the best weekend so far." Of 224 persons who stopped at the booth Saturday, 132 were placed in rooms, they said. "We were sold out on rooms," Chamber officials said. A week ago several rooms were left unoccupied in the Great Barrington area.

Spot-Check Made

Following are some of the spot-check reports furnished The Eagle by the Berkshire Hills Conference:

Elwal Pines Motel and Restaurant, Williamstown. Motel booked solid over the weekend for an increase of 10 per cent over 1957. Dining business 15 per cent ahead of last year.

The Springs, New Ashford. Twenty per cent ahead of last year.

Breezy Knoll, Pontoosuc Lake. At capacity Friday and Saturday nights; had to farm out 25 guests to other places. Dining room business 20 per cent ahead.

Curtis Hotel, Lenox. Booked solid over weekend for a 20 per cent rise over same period in 1957. Dining business up 25 per cent.

Berkshire Inn, Great Barrington. Booked solid. Dining room filled to capacity Saturday and Sunday.

Jug End Barn, South Egremont, and Eastover, Lenox. Booked solid, plus farming out some guests.

Red Lion Inn, Stockbridge. Full house. Food business about 25 per cent ahead of last year.

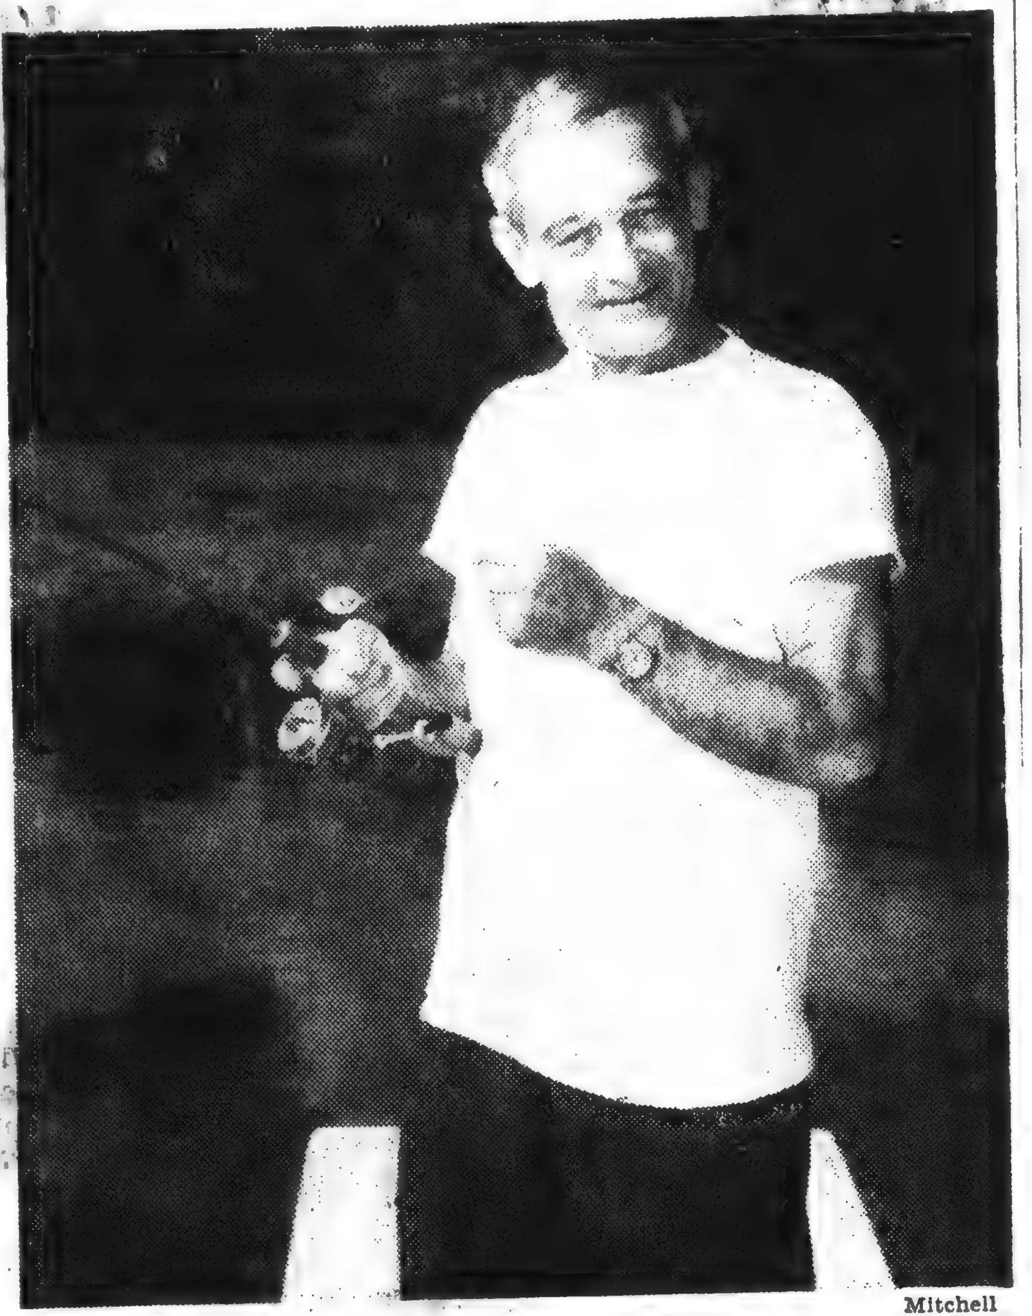
Birchwood Inn, Lenox. Booked solid. Many guests returning for second or third year. Best year Birchwood has had since it opened five years ago.

Blue Belton Inn, Sheffield. Best weekend of the year. Booked solid.

Our Berkshires

Dr. Munch's Man Masters Trout

By Theodore Giddings



Mitchell

PLASTIC BUBBLE AND FLY on the business end of a spinning rod have been catching big brown trout for Roger Toureau, chauffeur for Dr. Charles Munch, director of the BSO, who is spending the summer in Richmond.

ROGER TOUREAU, chauffeur and "man Friday" for Dr. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has fished in some 20 countries and thinks the Berkshires are an angler's paradise. You would too if you could hoist braggin' size trout out of a pond where other anglers have been harvesting only sore arms for their fly tossing efforts.

* * *

THE POND (fishing by permission) is just across the road from the house in Richmond which maestro Munch leased from Donald B. Miller for the summer. Earlier in the season some fair catches of average size browns were made from the shallow, heavily weeded waters. The lunkers lurked, however, in the pond pockets and seldom were enticed by the flies, worms, and hardware tossed in their direction by anglers, young and old.

Then Roger came along, and the pond tempo, in the words of a Tanglewood program, suddenly changed from adagio to presto. The brown busters showed the explosive tendencies for which they are noted in blasting away at Roger's offerings. He hooked and beached (no net) several of them, the biggest 17 inches and topping two pounds.

How did he do it? One report was that he tied his own flies, using felt from an old hat for the body and chicken feathers for the wings.

"No, not chicken feathers," he explained when asked. "I use feathers I find under the birds' nests."

* * *

SOUNDS SIMPLE enough but really is misleading. For the secret of Roger's success isn't so much the fly as the equipment and method used in casting it. His choice for pond fishing is a spinning outfit rather than a fly rod. By attaching a plastic bubble to nylon line a few feet back of the fly he is able to cast great distances with great accuracy.

The bubble has a small stopper so that it can be filled with water to regulate its buoyancy. The bubble, like Roger, is of French origin and long familiar to him. He is 55 and says he caught his first fish when he was seven on the proverbial bent pin and "kitchen line."

Trouble with most anglers, Roger advises, is that they use "too big nylon." His Platyl monofilament is .008 diameter, four-pound test and about the equivalent of the fly fisherman's delicate 3 X tippet. He keeps it floating by passing it through ordinary household wax. "I try other ones," he explains, displaying a line dressing tin and pad, "but they not so good."

* * *

PATIENCE is said to be a virtue, especially for fishermen, and Roger is blessed with plenty of it. He lets the fly float until he gets a hit or it starts losing its buoyancy. The way he figures it, a fly out of the water is as useless as no fly at all.

He spends as much time studying the pond and the rises and movements of the trout as he does fishing. The other day, as an experiment, he switched from a fly to live bait—a small bullhead. He didn't catch anything but he had the pleasure of discovering that a trout is too smart to swallow a bullhead head first but consumes it from the tail up so as not to be injured by the "horns." He has been laughing off and on over this ever since.

Until this season Roger did most of his fishing in Stockbridge Bowl. He caught plenty of pickerel, perch, and bluegills there but mostly by "jigging," a method he doesn't enjoy as much as spincasting because he says it is too easy.

Much of his fishing knowledge he credits to nomads encountered in his travels in foreign countries. They fish for food and have to be skillful or go hungry, he explains.

* * *

NEXT TO FISHING his favorite activity is mushroom hunting. And the two go together because his wife, an excellent cook, uses them along with onions and a bit of garlic in frying the trout. When the fish is ready for the table she mashes the condiments through a strainer to provide a sauce. All that is then needed to make the fish fry complete, Roger says, is a bottle of white wine, Burgundy or Sauterne, whatever your choice.

Roger's equipment includes a magnifying glass. It's helpful in tieing flies and also for examining trouts' stomachs to see what they have been feeding on. However, he doesn't rely too heavily on trying to match artificial flies with real ones.

"You change colors and sizes," he says, "but trout don't always know. If they hungry they bite. Not hungry, no bite."

But that's all right with Roger. He fishes for the fun and the companionship that goes with it.

"When you fisherman you make friends everywhere you go—in every country," he says.

He certainly has made friends here and made them envious too. In their eyes he's as handy with a spinning rod as maestro Munch is with the baton.

* * *

---

the village VOICE, July 30, 1958

the village square

139th

the column of lasting insignificance

by John Wilcock

Tanglewood, Mass., July 27

The rain thoughtfully held off until 8.20 last night and then began with a short, penetrating burst that sent all the $2 grass-sitters scurrying for shelter under the fringe of the open-sided music shed. Tanglewood fans are a doughty breed, however, and all through the Rachmaninoff piano concerto (No. 3) they were filtering back to sit on the wet grass under tables, umbrellas, newspapers, in sleeping bags and waterproof ponchos.

Toward the close, a tremendous deluge—which began, appropriately enough, during Debussy's "La Mer"—finally washed all but the most determined fans right out of the grounds.

This afternoon, fortunately, was better and re-established the wonderful feeling of camaraderie that always exists here on fine days, with hundreds of predominantly young people sprawled blanket to blanket, and the whole seething mass profusely punctuated with picnic lunches, beer-filled Scotch koolers, and brightly colored cushions. (Not far from me a group flaunted a sign bearing an arrow and the words: "Newport Jazz Festival this way.")

Tanglewood's organizers, who keep this summer center open partly as a music school, partly to keep the Boston Symphony employed throughout the year, and partly from sheer public-spiritedness, have suffered badly from rain in this their 21st year. Even at the best of times, they run the six-week season (it closes August 10) at a loss.

Ironically, it has made money for many other people—restaurants in Lenox (there are all too few, causing regular line-ups for all meals); the near-by Music Barn, with its program of jazz and folk music; and numerous inns, motels, and guesthouses.

The spot that everybody seems to find is de rigeur, both before and after the concerts, is the hilltop resort called Avalock, whose compulsively young guests, clad in elegant sports clothes, lining the swimming pool, led my companion to remark with unhappy memories of her youth that it "looks like the Catskills in the Berkshires."

It does, however, have a good dining room (try the barbecued spareribs, $2.50), old theatrical posters on the walls, and a jam-packed bar offering good beer and about two-dozen foreign cheeses. The customers talk even more than they drink.

[154]

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 113,886

AUG 3 - 1958

Second Thoughts On Music

Three Guest Artists Score Triumphs at Tanglewood

Byron Janis, Zino Francescatti and Adele Addison Give Fine Performances; Boston Orchestra in Top Form; Composers' Forum Stimulating

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX—Highlights of the past week of the Berkshire Festival here at Tanglewood were headed by the magnificent performance of Rachmaninoff's third piano concerto as played by the young American pianist Byron Janis and the Boston Symphony Orchestra directed by Charles Munch. On the same program, Dr. Munch provided us with one of the finest performances of Debussy's "La Mer" we have heard in many years.

Another splendid performanec was provided by Zino Francescatti as he played the Tchaikowsky violin concerto under the direction of Dr. Munch, who on this same program offered a lucid, finely proportioned performance of "Music of Strings, percussion and Celesta" by Bela Bartok.

Milhaud's "Prelude"

Pierre Monteux, who is sharing the podium with Dr. Munch, had his triumphs also. His reading of the Debussy "Nocturnes" was one of extreme beauty. Few orchestras today match the beauty of tone of the Boston Symphony. Milhaud's Prelude to the third act of "Les Eumenides" caused some eyebrows to raise for it is a fierce, hair-raising piece of music, predominately loud. Personally it appealed to us for how could the Furies with snakes on their heads instead of hair be portrayed otherwise?

Mr. Monteux's reading of Tchaikowsky's fourth symphony was a tonal joy. It was a close knit performance, rich in detail, but it lacked the electric impact that we have become accustomed to at Tanglewood. The music of Tchaikowsky is so closely associated with the late Serge Koussevitzky that it was difficult to disassociate memories from realities during the performance.

Dr. Munch again wished Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" upon his audience. It remains an ugly work, entirely cerebral, and it poses almost impossible demands upon the singers. Soloists Donald Gramm, bass, and Blake Stern, tenor, managed their music capably and the chorus sounded well.

Adele Addison in Recital

One of the finest chamber music recitals was given by soprano Adele Addison, who is a genuine favorite with Tanglewood audiences. As always, she held the audience spellbound. She whipped up a deal of audience emotion as she sang the Schumann cycle, "Frauenliebe und Leben." It was a warm, beautifully voiced realization of this fine cycle. She opened the program with four bewitching songs by Scarlatti and followed these with four songs by Schubert.

Particularly fine was her singing of Schubert's "Erlafsee" and "Ach um deine feuchten Schwingen." There was a fine bit of singing lavished on Debussy's "Chansons de Bilitis" and in three Hindemith songs. She was ably accompanied by pianist James Payne.

Composers' Forum

We stopped in for a glimpse of one of the Composers' Forum Sunday night. These are stimulating session during which the composers have an opportunity to hear their works played and their colleagues and more articulate members of the audience criticize them. Aaron Copland was the moderator and a fine one.

All the works had one thing in common—length. All seemed to emanate from the brain, rather than the heart. Bruce Archibald of White Plains, N. Y., offered two movements from his piano trio. The music was close knit and on the energetic side. Mr. Archibald played the piano part, playing much better than the usual composer.

Ilhan Usmanbas from Ankara, Turkey, offered his "Music of Children." There were some attractive tunes rather intricately handled, but they were tunes. Alvin Lucier conducted his "Partita for Flute, Harpsichord and Strings." He has written grateful music for the flute and harpsichord and the work on the whole was of a professional nature. Lucier comes from Greensboro, N. C.

The composition department of the Berkshire Center is doing a fine bit of work. It must be stimulating for a young person to work with such a man as Aaron Copland and to be among those who have the same interests. This being together with kindred spirits seems to us to be one of the most important opportunities the Center offers.

CHATHAM, N. Y.
COURIER
Circ. W. 3,500

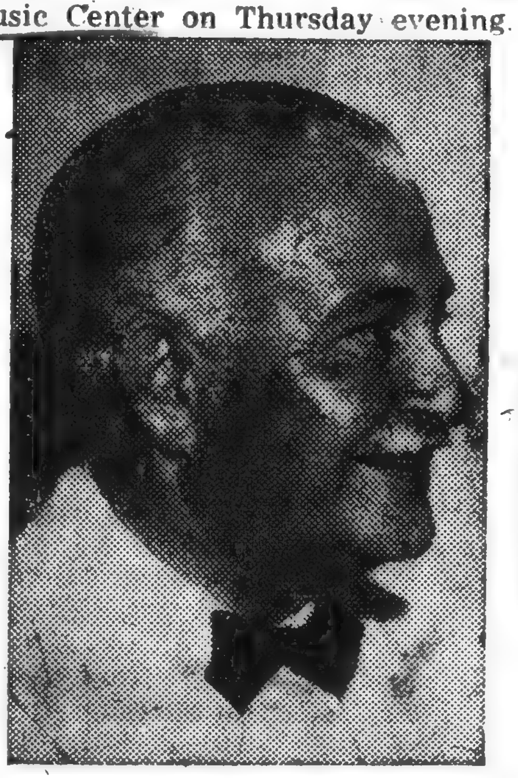
JUL 31 1958

VALATIE, N. Y.
ROUGH NOTES
Circ. W. 1,000

AUG 1 1958

76 Trombones Lead Tanglewood Parade

The gala concert in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Director, and the Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler, Conductor, will climax the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center on Thursday evening, August 7, at 8:15.



Arthur Fiedler conducts the famous Boston Pops Orchestra during the second half of the annual Tanglewood-on-Parade concert, Thursday evening, August 7, in the Music Shed.

Aaron Copland will appear as soloist in his own Piano Concerto for the first time with his orchestra in thirty-one years.

Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in a group of Pops favorites in the second half of the program. Mr. Fiedler's program will include Offenbach's Suite from "Gaite Parisienne," Ginastera's Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia," a selection from the "West Side Story" by Leonard Bernstein, Dancing Through the Years, an arrangement by Richard Hyman of dance tunes from the cakewalk to rock and roll. The program will close with 76 Trombones from "The Music Man" by Meredith Willson, and Mr. Fiedler will also offer some of the traditional Pops encores.

There will be a drawing of door prizes in the intermission.

Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,290

JUL 31 1958

Reviewers Acclaim Weekend Offerings At Tanglewood

Pierre Monteux leading the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday evening, and Byron Janes, pianist and Zino Francescatti, violinist in Saturday and Sunday performances received critical plaudits at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood last weekend as did the work of the women members of the Festival Chorus in the somewhat esoteric Stravinsky "Canticum Sacrum" Saturday.

Music critics particularly lauded Mr. Monteux and the orchestra in their interpretation of Debussy's "Nocturnes." Ross Parmenter, writing in the New York Times, said that "The three pieces, "Nuages", "Fetes", and "Sirenes", were each played "with a shimmering, atmospheric delicacy. And Mr. Monteux, as is his way with Debussy, managed to achieve remarkable clarity of texture without loss of the floating, gauzy mystery that holds these pieces together." "La Valse", next on the Friday program, was also hailed by reviewers for its poignancy and the skill with which it was conducted by Mr. Monteux.

Byron Janis received plaudits for his performance of the Rachmaninoff Piano Concerto with "brilliance and intensity", in the Saturday concert with Charles Munch conducting.

Zino Francescatti was a critical hit in his performance of the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto on the Sunday afternoon program.

The audience was favored by a clear, cool night Friday, but heavy rains occured Saturday evening and cloudy skies cast their shadow over Tanglewood on Sunday, it was reported.

Tanglewood On Parade

The gala concert in the Music shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Director, and the Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler, Conductor, will climax the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center on Thursday evening, August 7, at 8:15.

Eleazar de Carvalho, who will open the program conducting Gomes' Overture to "Il Guarany' and Falla's "El Amor Brujo" is the head of the Department of Orchestral Conducting at the Berkshire Music Center and has been affiliated with the school for many years.

Aaron Copland will appear as soloist in his own Piano Concerto for the first time with this Orchestra in thirty-one years. Richard Burgin will conduct the performance. Mr. Copland last performed the work with the Boston Symphony under Serge Koussevitzky's direction in 1927. When the Concerto (sometimes called the "Jazz Concerto") was first performed, in 1927, it was the subject of some controversy. After a recent performance of the Concerto in Boston Rudolph Elie wrote "The. . . Concerto is both a milestone and a masterpiece. . . the critics of 1927 did not see it that way, nor could they have. the true creative artist is always ahead of his time." The Musical Quarterly has written of the work ". . a period piece of the best kind. . evoking the atmoshere of the 'twenties perhaps most effectively than any other work of 'serious' American music."

"Boston Pops"

Arthur Fiedler, who will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in a group of Pops favorites in the second half of the program, will come to Tanglewood from San Francisco where he has conducted nine concerts with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Fiedler will return to San Francisco, following a week of Esplanade concerts in Boston, and in late August will conduct the Louisville Symphony Orchestra at the French Lick (Indiana) Music Festival. He then returns to San Francisco until September 7th. Mr. Fiedler's program will include Offenbach's Suite from "Gaite Parisienne", Ginastera's Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia", a Selection from the "West Side Story" by Leonard Bernstein, Dancing Through the Years, an arrangement by Richard Hayman of dance tunes from

(Continued on Page 11

AMSTERDAM, N.Y.
RECORDER
D. 13,783

JUL 29 1958

Music Festival At Tanglewood In Final Weeks

The Berkshire Music Festiva at Tanglewood has entered its final two weeks and many features are in store for music lovers, particularly during the fina week.

This week the regular concerts will be held Friday evening, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon, the performances to be centered around Wagnerian works.

Next week's offerings will include the Tanglewood Opera Department in presentation of Rossini's comic opera, "Count Ory," this on Monday and Tuesday evenings. On Wednesday, Aug. 6, the Kroll Quartet will present a program of chamber music by Hayden, Bartok and Beethoven.

What is known as Tanglewood-on-Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will be held Thursday. At 6 p.m. simultaneous sessions will be held, with the orchestra in the shed, compositions in the chamber music hall, and opera in the theater-concert hall. A lawn party will be held at 7 o'clock and those attending are invited to bring a picnic and hear a concert by the Tanglewood Choir.

Beginning at 8:15, Eleazar deCarvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Gomes "Il Guarany" Overture and Falla's "El Amour Brujo." Richard Burgin will conduct the orchestra in Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with Copland as pianist.

TOWN TIMES (WATERTOWN,

sic Hall will include works composed during the summer by students of the composition department performed by Fromm Fellowship players.

At 7 o'clock while visitors are enjoying a picnic supper on the grounds, the Tanglewood Choir will present a choral program on the porch of the Main House.

[155]

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
'Independent
Circ. 28,354

JUL 30 1958

Composers' Forum To Discuss Works By Foss, Kirchner

The fifth session of the Seminar on Contemporary Music at Tanglewood will be held Friday afternoon, at 3:15 in the Chamber Music Hall, and will feature music of Lukas Foss and Leon Kirchner, discussed by Mr. Foss.

Among the works to be performed is Mr. Foss's "Psalms for Chorus With Two Pianos," a work which was commissioned by the Stockbridge Bowl Assn., and completed in 1956. The text is from four Psalms and opens with the verse "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills." Mr. Foss's Concertino for Oboe and Eleven Instruments will also be performed, and works by Leon Kirchner include a Trio for Violin, Cello and Piano and a Sonata Concertante for Violin and Piano.

The Seminar in Contemporary Music is presented through the generosity of Paul Fromm, president of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago, and musical selections are performed by Fromm Fellowship players. The final lecture in the series Aug. 8 will feature Aaron Copland in a discussion of his own music.

ADVERTISEMENT

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,138

JUL 24 1958

Fifth Sunday Chamber Concert At Tanglewood

The fifth in the series of Sunday morning chamber music concerts will take place at 10 July 27 in the Chamber Music Hall. The concert will be under the auspices of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

William Kroll, co-head of the Department of Chamber Music, has prepared the Boccherini Quintet which will begin the program. The principal trumpet of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Roger Voisin, has directed the rehearsals of the Janacek Capriccio which is scored for two trumpets, three trombones, flute, tuba and piano. This is one of the larger ensembles to perform at these concerts this season. The concert will close with the Hindemith Quintet which has been supervised by Rosario Mazzeo, bass clarinet of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

B Eagle - July 31

Perry Relates History of BSO And Tanglewood

LEE—The Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood gives students the opportunity of rehearsing every day and playing in a concert once a week, an experience not available to students in a conservatory, Thomas D. Perry, manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, told the Rotary Club here Tuesday.

Mr. Perry reviewed the history of the BSO and Tanglewood. The orchestra was founded in 1881 by Henry Higginson, a banker who had studied music in Vienna. He supported the orchestra almost entirely alone until 1918, when he turned the organization over to a board of trustees, Mr. Perry said.

In regard to the history of the Berkshire Music Festival, Mr. Perry related that Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Glendale spearheaded its establishment. In 1934, a concert was held at the old Hanna Farm, now Stockbridge School, by an orchestra made up largely of members of the New York Philharmonic. In 1937, concerts by the BSO were given on the estate which is now Foxhollow School. The following year, the concerts were given at Tanglewood, where the Shed was built in 1938 and the school started in 1940.

July 31

Choral Group Appears Tonight With BMC Orchestra

TANGLEWOOD—The most ambitious program of the season will be performed by the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra at its fifth concert tonight at 8:30 in the Music Shed. Each of the student conductors appearing at this concert will be conducting for the second time this season. A number of soloists have been selected from the department of instrumental music, and for the first time this season the department of choral music will join with the orchestra in a performance of the Bach Magnificat.

Other works to be heard will be the Tombeau de Couperin of Ravel conducted by Joseph Krienes of Chicago. This will be followed by the playing of Mozart's Sinfonia Concertante in E Flat Major to be conducted by Claudio Abbado from Milan, Italy. Soloists in the Mozart work will be James Caldwell, oboe; Donald Rosenthal, bassoon; William Slocum, French horn.

Two modern pieces will precede the concluding Bach number. The first of these is the Concert Music for Piano, Brass and Two Harps of Hindemith. Gustav Meier of Zurich, Switzerland will conduct with Marilyn Neely as piano soloist. Arnold Schoenberg's Kammer Symphony For Fifteen Solo Instruments, conducted by Zuben Mehta of Bombay, India, completes the modern music on this program.

In the concluding Bach Magnificat in D, David Buttolph of New York will be the conductor. The Tanglewood Choir will be heard with the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra, and Aracy Bellas Campos, Doralene McNeely, Elaine Panaretos, Sopranos; Shirley Sudock, mezzo-soprano; Armando Pacheco, tenor; Cullen Maiden, baritone are to be the soloists.

With the Colors

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

JUL 31 1958

Library Opens Music Exhibit

LENOX — An exhibition of music scores, some of them autographed by Tanglewood personalities, is currently on view at the Lenox Library.

Among the six autographed scores exhibited is Lukas Foss' "Psalms," which he was commissioned to do by the Stockbridge Bowl Assn. Aaron Copland, who will be soloist at Tanglewood on Parade next Thursday, is represented by an autographed score of his opera, "The Second Hurricane."

Schuman's Second Symphony is autographed by Seymour Lipkin, who conducted the student orchestra in that piece in 1955. Other composers whose scores are autographed are Paul Hindemith, Milhaud and Jacques Ibert.

Scores by Mozart, Schubert and Johann Strauss printed from the original plates in Vienna are on exhibit in another case. These scores were loaned by Dr. L. D. McCarley of Lenox. He also loaned the library a commemorative medal issued at the unveiling of the statue of Mozart in Vienna in 1896.

Commemorative postage stamps issued in Vienna for the Mozart anniversaries in 1941 and 1956 are also on view. Schubert anniversary stamps from 1957 are also shown. Proofs of the 1956 Mozart stamps are autographed by G. Wimmer, the designer. The stamps were loaned by Alfons Stach of Lenox.

Photographs of Tanglewood and Tanglewood personalities are hung above the display cases.

EAGLE
8/2/58

Lukas Foss Moderator for Composer's Forum

TANGLEWOOD — The fourth composers' forum of the 1958 Berkshire Music Center season will be held in the chamber music hall tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. Lukas Foss of the department of composition will be the moderator. Six student composers will have work which has been done at least in part at Tanglewood performed by members of the Fromm Players and certain instrumentalists from the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra.

The program will include "Variations for Two Violins," by Frank Shallenberg of Guthrie, Okla.; Batholomeus Kool's trio for violin, viola and violoncello. Mr. Kool is a resident of Amsterdam, Holland although he has been studying in the United States for the past 18 months.

Also to be played is Henry Weinberg's Sinfonia for Eight Instruments. The Philadelphian's work will be conducted by Joseph Krienes of Chicago, a member of the orchestral conducting class. "Three Bugs — A Spider — A Caterpillar — A Beetle," by Thomas Putsche of West Hartford, Conn., will be followed by Marjorie Grief's movement for string quartet. The concluding number is the trio in one movement for piano, violin and violoncello by Joseph Lukewitz, also of Chicago.

EAGLE 8/2/58

Chamber Music Tomorrow at 10

TANGLEWOOD — Four pieces will be heard in the fifth concert by members of the department of chamber music of the Berkshire Music Center tomorrow morning at 10 in the chamber music hall.

BMC officials estimate that more than 2,000 people will have attended these chamber music concerts by the end of the season, Aug. 10.

The opening work of tomorrow's concert will be the Sextet in B-flat major of Johannes Brahms. This is scored for two violins, two violas and two violoncellos. Beverly Somach is to be the first violin with Joseph Roche, violin; Jesse Levine, viola; Arthur Lewis, viola; Rhoda Stern, and Jacqueline Simon, cellos, making up the remainder of the ensemble.

Following the Brahms will be Thompson's Suite for Oboe, Clarinet, and Violas, with Dorothy Kidney, oboe; Homer Lee, clarinet, and Arthur Lewis, viola, as the performers.

Sue Bourns, Peter Schoenbach, Shirley Vineyard, Mary MacKinnon, all bassoonists, will play the Prokofieff Scherzo for Four Bassoons, which is to be followed by the concluding work, a sextet of Martinu.

Ronald Knudsen, violin, and Olga Kwasniak, violoncello, have previously been heard as soloists with the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra as well as at earlier Sunday chamber music concerts. Joining them in the Martinu composition will be Miriam Wexler, violin; Walter Cogswell and Thomas Drumm, violas, and Takayori Atsumi, cello. Mr. Martinu is a former member of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center's department of composition.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

JUL 28 1958

BSO Manager Rotary Speaker

LEE — Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be the speaker at tomorrow's 12:15 p.m. meeting of the Lee Rotary Club at the East Lee Inn.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

JUL 29 1958

On the Reviving Art Of Reading Aloud

A little while ago a young man took his wife to a Tanglewood concert. It was a moonlit night, and the BSO was to play several selections he particularly enjoyed. They spread their blanket on the lawn in an uncrowded spot and he contemplated an enjoyable, relaxed evening. Then the concert started. Quick as a wink, the wife whipped out a pocket flashlight, opened her program, snuggled up to her husband and began reading the program notes to him.

In vain his protests that he could read, too! In vain his hints that the music was what he had come to hear! Relentlessly his spouse went through the notes, repeating passages that struck her as especially helpful. When the concert was over, the husband had broadened his knowledge of musicology, but had received only scattered, dim impressions of the music itself.

The next week the couple happened to attend the Westbury (L.I.) Music Fair, where the reading performance was repeated. Then, at intermission, the husband found himself in a gathering of other men, all with remarkably similar complaints. All grumbled that their wives, models of courtesy and reserve at other times, began chattering like magpies as soon as a performance began. One wife insisted on telling her husband about every individual mentioned in the playbill, down to the assistant electrician. Another bombarded her spouse with questions about the actors. Whereupon, in a desperate gesture of self-defense, the husbands organized a new club known as the Society To Withhold Summer Theater Programs From Young Wives Until After the Conclusion of the Performance.

As yet the society is too young to prove its worth. But concert and theatergoers will agree it has a potential. And if its campaign against talking wives is successful, we trust it will move into related fields. There is, for example, much work to be done with the Clucking Hen playgoer, that motherly soul in the row behind who goes "Tsk, tsk" at every juncture in a show, be it dramatic, sorrowful or simply funny. There is also need for counter measures against those highly rhythmic individuals who kick your chair in time to the music. Not to mention the women, so frequently in large flowered hats, who swivel in their seats as if they were watching tennis.

Troublesome as they may be, in short, young wives who read program notes aloud are not the only afflictions to burden theater and concertgoers. We'd like to see the society wax strong and successful and take them all on—old wives as well as young, and even (if such exist) noisy middle-aged men.

Lenox

Fire Dept. Fights Blaze in Car at Tanglewood Lot

LENOX—The Fire Department truck stationed at Tanglewood during the concerts there extinguished a fire in a car Sunday afternoon.

Fire Chief Oscar R. Hutchinson reported that a cigarette apparently started the fire in a cushion of a car parked in the Tanglewood lot. The truck, parked on Under Mountain Road to be available for emergencies while heavy traffic clogs West Street, responded to the alarm.

Eagle Aug 2

Musical Fare: From Bus to Bus Boys

By STUART C. AUERBACH

YOU CAN'T live on music alone.

That was demonstrated in 1940 at Tanglewood when the Berkshire Music Center was faced [illegible] feeding its students on the [illegible]. The immediate solution [illegible] a mobile kitchen in the [illegible] bus equipped with [illegible].

[illegible] of summers in the Berkshires, [illegible] casual [illegible]. When the first Berkshire [illegible] held [illegible] at the [illegible] Stockbridge, the [illegible] ran [illegible] sum- [illegible] Boston Symphony [illegible] settled at Tanglewood [illegible] thousands [illegible] brought their [illegible].

[illegible] Club of [illegible] Pittsfield [illegible] Makes were [illegible] on the grounds [illegible]. A concession, serving [illegible] crowds, was run under agreement between the concessionaires and the BSO.

Rolling Diner

But until the bus rolled into Tanglewood in 1940, to serve Music Center students, feeding was largely a thing of snacks or picnics. Today, as an outgrowth, Tanglewood has its own quiet-eating cafeteria with a new, fully equipped kitchen, a bevy of bus boys and six service lines for speedy public service.

The cafeteria is "one of the most difficult feeding operations in the world," James J. Brosnahan, business administrator of the Boston Symphony Orchestra says. The BSO itself runs the feeding operation.

In addition to serving box lunches and snacks before concerts and during intermissions, the cafeteria is open daily for lunches for the 352 Berkshire Music Center students and Tanglewood staff members. Special events, like the opening day exercises, are also catered on the grounds.

Hungry Hordes

Mr. Brosnahan estimates that some 5,000 persons out of a possible 15,000 attending a big Shed concert will be served in some way by the cafeteria. George Phillips, now in his first year of managing the food served at Tanglewood, said that for the second Saturday night concert those attending spent an average of 25 cents at the cafeteria.

When the BMC was started, the faculty soon discovered that lunch for the students must be set up on the grounds. Otherwise, Mr. Brosnahan said, a good part of the day was wasted by students heading off the grounds for meals.

A bus was set up on the site of the present cafeteria, near the theater concert hall. A steam table was installed in the bus, and raised platforms ran along the outside of the vehicle. Students were served through the bus windows.

The food was prepared in the Curtis Hotel by chef Karl Grosser, who now runs Chef Karl's restaurant in Lenox. Lester Roberts, who owned the Curtis then, was in charge of the food.

The bus lasted only one season.

Breakdown in Plans

Original plans called for the bus to make a run daily from the Curtis Hotel kitchen to Tanglewood. The bus, however, had other ideas. It broke down at Tanglewood on the first run. From then on, it was left parked and the food was brought to it from the Curtis Hotel.

At Tanglewood in 1940: a mobile kitchen to feed students

A building was constructed with only one thought in mind, Mr. Brosnahan said, "To have it as far away from the music shed as possible." A prime requisite of the feeding operation here is that it be done with the utmost quiet so as not to disturb the music patrons.

The cafeteria concentrates on serving meals and snacks prior to a concert and during a 20-minute intermission. The new kitchen facilities were not designed with an eye to efficient management, but rather to quiet operation.

Went That-a-Way

The kitchen was moved this season from behind the serving lines in the food shed to a carriage house about 75 yards outside the Tanglewood grounds. Four cafeteria lines were added to the two already there to give faster food service on concert days. Rubber-tired carts carry the food from the kitchen to the serving area.

All the food — including pastries and rolls—is prepared on the grounds. The new kitchen is equipped with a freezer unit, range, ovens and work space. Much of the equipment was brought from Wheatleigh when the estate was sold by the BSO last fall.

Between $35,000 and $40,000 is spent in Berkshire County by the food operation at Tanglewood, Mr. Brosnahan said. Ninety per cent of all the food is bought locally.

Offers Variety

A choice of three box-lunch dinners—including either fried chicken or a choice of sandwiches, desert, fruit, relish and a beverage—is served at concert time. In addition, packages of cookies, ice cream and beverages are sold separately.

Prices range from a high of $2.50 for a box lunch of half a chicken with potato salad and the trimmings, to a low of 15 cents for milk or coffee and cookies.

A full-time staff of 18 with 6 additional members added during weekends takes care of the commissary department. Key staff members, like Mr. Phillips, are hired by the BSO through Treadway Inns Inc. The men spend the winter working at food concessions operated by the Treadway chain.

Mr. Phillips is in charge of the dining halls at Trinity-Pawling School during the winter. The chef is Earl Hughes, who works at the Bookshop Inn at Mount Holyoke College. Assistant manager is John Bennett, manager of dining halls at St. Mark's School.

Auerbach

At Tanglewood today: a modern cafeteria open to all

IS NOTHING sacred? An irreverent colleague of ours notes that one of the selections recently played at Tanglewood chamber music hall was Bartholomew Kool's trio for violin, viola and violoncello. "This Kool kid sure gets around," he quipped to a ringing silence.

—o—

SHADES OF Elsie Venner, snake girl of the Oliver Wendell Holmes novel of the 1860s! Chemists have developed a rattlesnake repellent that works. Charcoal lumps soaked in a solution of synthetic skunk juice and placed around their haunts drive the rattlers away. The odor is said to be not strong enough to disturb humans, but do you suppose it might attract real skunks?

—o—

ONE OF our colleagues, who really knows better, feigned confusion over Jay Rosenfeld's review of the recent Tanglewood concerts which featured Wagner's "Ring" music and a concerto by Piston. "I'm mixed up," he said, "shouldn't it be the Piston Ring?"

RICHARD V. HAPPEL.

Hearing New Music

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

Eagle readers are well informed on Tanglewood events. Few of them, though, seem to realize that American music is being made and played in the heart of Berkshire County. I refer to the Composers' Forums, presented each Sunday evening in the Chamber Music Hall at Tanglewood. This series of concerts, featuring works written by students of composition at Tanglewood, concludes with a program on Sunday, August 3.

Although other Tanglewood concerts are well attended, very few were on hand for the Forum last Sunday, July 27. I suggest that Composers' Forums be opened to the public free of charge. At present only Friends of the Berkshire Music Center are admitted, but there are many Berkshire residents who would attend if these Forums were open to the public, as are similar concerts sponsored by Columbia University and the New York Public Library.

To make these Composers' Forums real forums would seem the proper way to publicize new music. There is no use waiting for Washington to help the American artist if the Berkshires will not listen to him.

JOHN JOVANOVIC.

71 Easton Ave.,
Pittsfield.

Quotes

Another false idea is that newspapers are hounding busy public men for their own commercial advantage. This is palpably absurd. You just don't sell papers with hard news about government; I wish you did. Much of it unfortunately is dull. The newspaper concerned only with selling a product wastes no time on this I can assure you. They use more easily acquired and more glamorous lures.—James S. Pope, executive editor, Louisville Courier-Journal.

Civilization is a movement and not a condition, a voyage, and not a harbor.—Arnold Toynbee, historian.

The Hustings Include Tanglewood

Whitestone

Governor's Councilor Christian A. Herter Jr., Republican candidate for attorney general, chats with Mrs. Bruce Crane in her box at the Saturday evening concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. Her husband, former Governor's Councilor Crane, was campaign manager for Herter in the preprimary campaign for governor. At the GOP convention Herter lost his bid for the gubernatorial nomination but was named the party's candidate for attorney general.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 204,395

PHILADELPHIA, PA.
INQUIRER
Circ. D. 637,561 - S. 1,124,395

AUG 10 1958

Berkowitz to Manage Albuquerque Orchestra

Ralph Berkowitz, Philadelphia pianist and dean of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, has been appointed manager of the Albuquerque Civic Symphony of New Mexico.

Berkowitz will continue as dean at Tanglewood, a post he has held since 1951. Previous to that he had been executive assistant to Serge Koussevitsky, founder of the Berkshire Festival. As a pianist he has for many years been associated with 'cellist Gregor Piatigorsky.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y.
NEW YORKER
D. 27,999 S. 28,943

JUL 30 1958

Chamber Music Concert Slated at Tanglewood

Tonight, 8:30 o'clock, in the Theater-Concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., the fifth in the series of Wednesday night chamber music concerts will be presented. The Kroll quarter will be heard in a program including Mozart's Quarter in C. major, K. 465; Easley Blackwood's Quartet No. 1 and Brahms' Quartet No. 1 in C minor, Op. 51, No. 1. Members of the quartet, which is headed by William Kroll, violinist and head of the Department of Chamber Music at the Berkshire Music center, include Louis Graeler, violin, David Mandovitz, viola; and Avron Twedowsky, cello. The Kroll quartet also will be heard in the final Wednesday night chamber music concert, 8:30 o'clock, Aug. 6.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 95,535

JUL 30 1958

THE KROLL QUARTET AT LENOX TONIGHT

The fifth in the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be held tonight at 8.30 in the theater-concert hall.

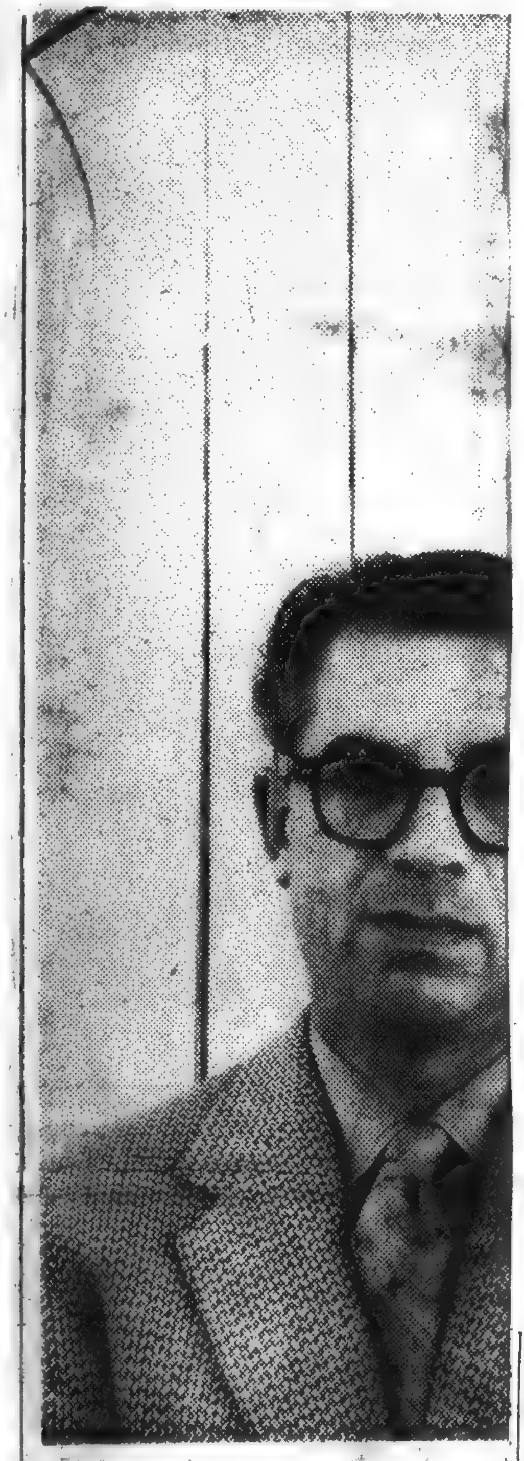
The Kroll Quartet will be heard in a program including Mozart's Quartet in C major, K. 465, Easley Blackwood's Quartet No. 1 and Brahms' Quartet No. 1 in C minor, Op. 51 No. 1. Mr. Black- in Indianap- f composition 48, 49 and 50. missioned by undation and at Tangle- now in the dapest Quar- roll Quartet. Mr. Blackwood's First Symphony was premiered by the Boston Symphony last winter and recently [illegible] Merit Award of the American International Music Fund. Mr. Blackwood, who has recently been appointed an instructor in the University of Chicago music department, will be at Tanglewood for the performance of his quartet.

Members of the Kroll Quartet, which is headed by William Kroll, violinist and head of the Department of Chamber Music at the Berkshire Music Center, include Louis Graeler, violin; David Mandovitz, viola, and Avron Twedowsky, cello.

The Kroll Quartet will also be heard in the final Wednesday evening chamber music concert Aug. 6 at 8.30.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

JUL 26 1958



NEW MANAGER of the New Mexico, Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center, stands before some of his art work in the Exhibition House at Tanglewood where he showed more than 25 pastels, woodcuts and drawings this season.

Berkowitz Taking Post In New Mexico

Music Center Dean To Manage Civic Symphony

TANGLEWOOD — Ralph Berkowitz, pianist and dean of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, has been appointed manager of the Albuquerque Civic Symphony of New Mexico. Mr. Berkowitz will start his tenure this fall along with the orchestra's newly appointed conductor Maurice Bonney, formerly assistant to Leopold Stokowski in Houston, Texas.

Mr. Berkowitz will continue as dean at Tanglewood, a post he has held since 1951. Previous to that he had been executive assistant to Serge Koussevitzky, founder of the Berkshire Festival. Mr. Berkowitz is also a painter whose most recent one-man show took place this summer in the Exhibition House at Tanglewood. On view were more than 25 pastels, woodcuts and drawings.

As a pianist Mr. Berkowitz has for many years been associated with the eminent cellist, Gregor Piatigorsky, with whom he has played in the Orient, the Middle East, Europe and the Western Hemisphere. Among his numerous recordings the most recent is with the California violinist Eddice Shapiro with whom he made the 3 Sonatas for Violin and Piano of Brahms for Vanguard Records.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M.
JOURNAL
Circ. D. 42,386 - S. 57,303

AUG 31 1958

Ticket Campaign Will Open Civic Symphony Activities

Mrs. W. M. Lowe, 635 Isleta SW, has been appointed general chairman of the 1958-1959 Albuquerque Civic Symphony ticket sales campaign by the symphony's board of directors.

Mrs. Lowe said the drive will be sparked by the orchestra's "New Look for a New Season."

Foremost in the new aspect of the twenty-seven year old symphony is Maurice Bonney, whose appointment as conductor was announced in June. Mr. Bonney comes to Albuquerque from three years' tenure as associate conductor of the Houston Symphony under Leopold Stokowski.

New Look

Also part of the Symphony's "New Look" is Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Mass., who has been appointed to the newly-created post of manager of the Symphony. As a pianist, Mr. Berkowitz has appeared in concerts with Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist, and has recorded with violinist Eudice Shapiro. For a number of years he has been familiar to Albuquerque music audiences as a member of La Quinta quintet in the June Music Festivals sponsored by Albert Simms.

Ralph Berkowitz, pianist and dean of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, has been appointed manager of the Albuquerque Civic Symphony of New Mexico. Mr. Berkowitz will start his tenure this Fall along with the orchestra's conductor, Maurice Bonney, formerly assistant to Leopold Stokowski in Houston, Texas.

Berkowitz will continue as dean at Tanglewood, a post he has held since 1951.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,138

JUL 29 1958

Tanglewood Dean Made Manager in N. Mexico

Ralph Berkowitz, pianist and dean of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, has been appointed manager of the Albuquerque Civic Symphony of New Mexico. Mr. Berkowitz will start his tenure this fall along with the orchestra's newly appointed conductor, Maurice Bonney, formerly assistant to Leopold Stokowski in Houston, Texas.

Ralph Berkowitz will continue as dean at Tanglewood, a post he has held since 1951. Previous to that he had been executive assistant to Serge Koussevitzky, founder of the Berkshire Festival. Mr. Berkowitz is also a painter whose most recent one-man show took place this summer in the Exhibition House at Tanglewood. On view were more than 25 pastels, wood-cuts and drawings.

As a pianist Ralph Berkowitz has for many years been associated with the eminent cellist, Gregor Piatigorsky, with whom he has played in the Orient, the Middle East, Europe and the Western Hemisphere. Among his numerous recordings the most recent s with the California violinist, Edlice Shapiro, with whom he made he 3 Sonatas for Violin and Piano f Brahms for Vanguard Records.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 204,395

JL 30 1958

Kroll Quartet Plays At Lenox Tonight

The fifth in the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be held tonight at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall.

The Kroll Quartet will be heard in a program including Mozart's Quartet in C major, K. 465, Easley Blackwood's Quartet No. 1 and Brahms' Quartet No. 1 in C minor, Op. 51 No. 1. Mr. Blackwood, who was born in Indianapolis, was a student of composition at Tanglewood in 1948, '49 and '50.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,937

JUL 29 1958

New Mexico Position For Tanglewood Dean

Ralph Berkowitz, pianist and Dean of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood has been appointed manager of the Albuquerque Civic Symphony of New Mexico. Mr. Berkowitz will start his tenure this fall along with the orchestra's newly appointed conductor Maurice Bonney, formerly Assistant to Leopold Stokowski in Houston, Tex.

Ralph Berkowitz will continue as Dean at Tanglewood, a post he has held since 1951. Previous to that he had been Executive Assistant to Serge Koussevitzky, founder of the Berkshire Festival. Mr. Berkowitz is also a painter whose most recent one-man show took place this summer in the Exhibition House at Tanglewood.

As a pianist Ralph Berkowitz has for many years been associated with the eminent cellist Gregor Piatigorsky with whom he has played in the Orient, the middle East, Europe and the Western Hemisphere.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,138

JUL 30 1958

Banner (e)
BENNINGTON, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 5,451

JUL 30 1958

Kroll Quartet To Perform This Evening

The fifth in the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be held tonight at 8:30 in the Theatre - Concert Hall.

The Kroll Quartet will be heard in a program including Mozart's Quartet in C major, K. 465, Easley Blackwood's Quartet No. 1 and Brahms' Quartet No. 1 in C minor, Op. 51 No. 1. Mr. Blackwood. who was born in Indianapolis, was a student of composition at Tanglewood in 1948, 49 and 50. His Quartet was commissioned by the Fromm Music Foundation and was first performed at Tanglewood in 1956. It is now in the repertoire of the Budapest Quartet as well as the Kroll Quartet. Mr. Blackwood's First Symphony was premiered by the Boston Symphony last winter and recently won the Merit Award of the American International Music Fund. Mr. Blackwood, who has recently been appointed an instructor in the University of Chicago Music Department, will be at Tanglewood for the performance of his Quartet.

Members of the Kroll Quartet, which is headed by William Kroll violinist and head of the Department of Chamber Music at the Berkshire Music Center, include Louis Graeler, violin, David Mandovit, viola; and Avron Twedowsky, Cello.

The Kroll Quartet will also be heard in the final Wednesday Evening Chamber Music Concert on Aug. 6 at 8:30.

Sunday
BURLING
Indepe
Circ.

JUL 27

HERE T

Kro
Rea

When the K pears here
July 29, a tion of the Su ries of the Un mont, its lead
—William Kro with him an varius which tion of its o noisseurs of
The chamb will be offere len Chapel a Tuesday even cert will summer sea presented ba last Tuesday
ing of Broad songs sung by nus Robert G
and his wife,
The pair we press lunche
sity.

Tanglew

Tuesday's offering will tet's Wedne at Tanglewo Kroll's vio exceptional when comp
Strads.
In the 19th centur named Andr ed for his instrument one to the Henri Erns
during his death left first she but after put it in at a price prohibitiv
De Never to sell er it pa of other and of several it was b
States b Zlatko Ba
it landed, able "Str
tion of En

[157]

5

The Hustings Include Tanglewood

TRADITIONAL MODERN
UQUERQUE FOR OVER 3
DDING RING HEADQUART
Mindl
erque with Fine Jewel

Whitestone

Governor's Councilor Ch an candidate for attorney general, chats with Mrs. Bruce Cr evening concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tan Governor's Councilor Crane, was campaign manager for H ign for governor. At the GOP convention Herter lost his nation but was named the party's

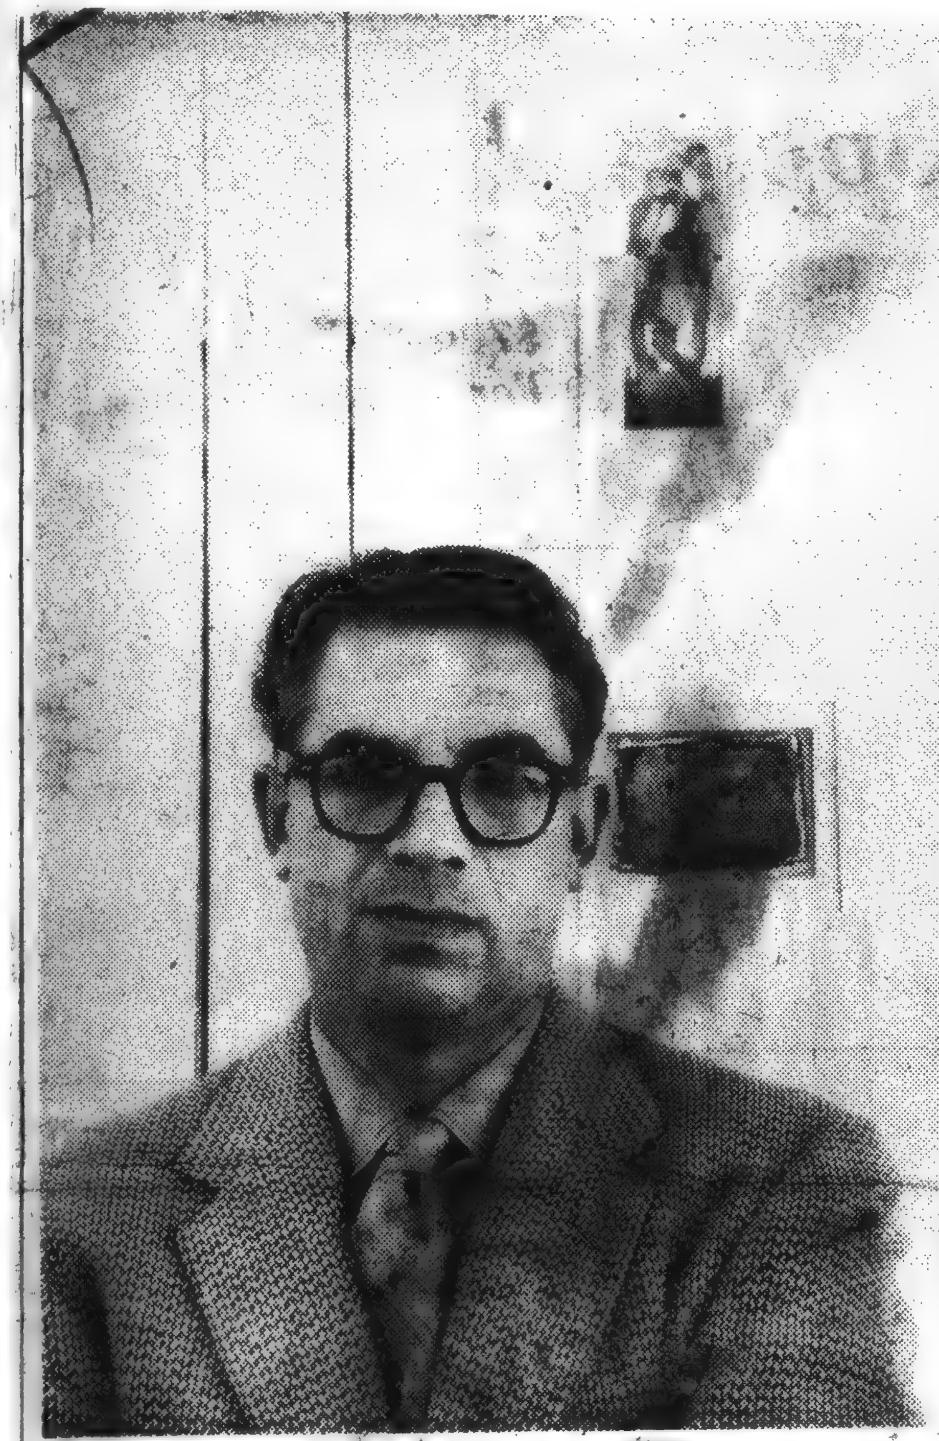
BARTLEY

Berkshire
PITTSFIE
Indep
Circ.

JUL 26 1958



Manos

NEW MANAGER of the Albuquerque Civic Symphony in New Mexico, Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center, stands before some of his art work in the Exhibition House at Tanglewood where he showed more than 25 pastels, woodcuts and drawings this season.

Berkowitz Taking Post In New Mexico

Music Center Dean To Manage Civic Symphony

TANGLEWOOD — Ralph Berkowitz, pianist and dean of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, has been appointed manager of the Albuquerque Civic Symphony of New Mexico. Mr. Berkowitz will start his tenure this fall along with the orchestra's newly appointed conductor Maurice Bonney, formerly assistant to Leopold Stokowski in Houston, Texas.

Mr. Berkowitz will continue as dean at Tanglewood, a post he has held since 1951. Previous to that he had been executive assistant to Serge Koussevitzky, founder of the Berkshire Festival. Mr. Berkowitz is also a painter whose most recent one-man show took place this summer in the Exhibition House at Tanglewood. On view were more than 25 pastels, woodcuts and drawings.

As a pianist Mr. Berkowitz has for many years been associated with the eminent cellist, Gregor Piatigorsky, with whom he has played in the Orient, the Middle East, Europe and the Western Hemisphere. Among his numerous recordings the most recent is with the California violinist Eddice Shapiro with whom he made the 3 Sonatas for Violin and Piano of Brahms for Vanguard Records.

[157]

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 204,395

JUL 31 1958

B. Globe ~~July 3~~ Aug 1

Berkowitz New Manager In Albuquerque

Ralph Berkowitz, pianist and dean of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, has been appointed manager of the Albuquerque Civic Symphony of New Mexico. Mr. Berkowitz will start his tenure this Fall along with the orchestra's conductor, Maurice Bonney, formerly assistant to Leopold Stokowski in Houston, Texas.

Berkowitz will continue as dean at Tanglewood, a post he has held since 1951.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,138

JUL 29 1958

Tanglewood Dean Made Manager in N. Mexico

Ralph Berkowitz, pianist and dean of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, has been appointed manager of the Albuquerque Civic Symphony of New Mexico. Mr. Berkowitz will start his tenure this fall along with the orchestra's newly appointed conductor, Maurice Bonney, formerly assistant to Leopold Stokowski in Houston, Texas.

Ralph Berkowitz will continue as dean at Tanglewood, a post he has held since 1951. Previous to that he had been executive assistant to Serge Koussevitzky, founder of the Berkshire Festival. Mr. Berkowitz is also a painter whose most recent one-man show took place this summer in the Exhibition House at Tanglewood. On view were more than 25 pastels, wood-cuts and drawings.

As a pianist Ralph Berkowitz has for many years been associated with the eminent cellist, Gregor Piatigorsky, with whom he has played in the Orient, the Middle East, Europe and the Western Hemisphere. Among his numerous recordings the most recent is with the California violinist, Eddice Shapiro, with whom he made the 3 Sonatas for Violin and Piano of Brahms for Vanguard Records.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.
INQUIRER
Circ. D. 637,561 - S. 1,124,395

AUG 10 1958

Berkowitz to Manage Albuquerque Orchestra

Ralph Berkowitz, Philadelphia pianist and dean of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, has been appointed manager of the Albuquerque Civic Symphony of New Mexico.

Berkowitz will continue as dean at Tanglewood, a post he has held since 1951. Previous to that he had been executive assistant to Serge Koussevitsky, founder of the Berkshire Festival. As a pianist he has for many years been associated with 'cellist Gregor Piatigorsky.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 95,535

JUL 30 1958

THE KROLL QUARTET AT LENOX TONIGHT

The fifth in the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be held tonight at 8.30 in the theater-concert hall.

The Kroll Quartet will be heard in a program including Mozart's Quartet in C major, K. 465, Easley Blackwood's Quartet No. 1 and Brahms' Quartet No. 1 in C minor, Op. 51 No. 1. Mr. Blackwood, who was born in Indianapolis, was a student of composition at Tanglewood in 1948, 49 and 50. His Quartet was commissioned by the Fromm Music Foundation and was first performed at Tanglewood in 1956. It is now in the repertoire of the Budapest Quartet as well as the Kroll Quartet. Mr. Blackwood's First Symphony was premiered by the Boston Symphony last winter and recently won the Merit Award of the American International Music Fund. Mr. Blackwood, who has recently been appointed an instructor in the University of Chicago music department, will be at Tanglewood for the performance of his quartet.

Members of the Kroll Quartet, which is headed by William Kroll, violinist and head of the Department of Chamber Music at the Berkshire Music Center, include Louis Graeler, violin; David Mandovitz, viola, and Avron Twedowsky, cello.

The Kroll Quartet will also be heard in the final Wednesday evening chamber music concert Aug. 6 at 8.30.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 204,395

JL 30 1958

Kroll Quartet Plays At Lenox Tonight

The fifth in the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be held tonight at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall.

The Kroll Quartet will be heard in a program including Mozart's Quartet in C major, K. 465, Easley Blackwood's Quartet No. 1 and Brahms' Quartet No. 1 in C minor, Op. 51 No. 1. Mr. Blackwood, who was born in Indianapolis, was a student of composition at Tanglewood in 1948, '49 and '50.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,937

JUL 29 1958

New Mexico Position For Tanglewood Dean

Ralph Berkowitz, pianist and Dean of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood has been appointed manager of the Albuquerque Civic Symphony of New Mexico. Mr. Berkowitz will start his tenure this fall along with the orchestra's newly appointed conductor Maurice Bonney, formerly Assistant to Leopold Stokowski in Houston, Tex.

Ralph Berkowitz will continue as Dean at Tanglewood, a post he has held since 1951. Previous to that he had been Executive Assistant to Serge Koussevitzky, founder of the Berkshire Festival. Mr. Berkowitz is also a painter whose most recent one-man show took place this summer in the Exhibition House at Tanglewood.

As a pianist Ralph Berkowitz has for many years been associated with the eminent cellist Gregor Piatigorsky with whom he has played in the Orient, the middle East, Europe and the Western Hemisphere.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y.
NEW YORKER
D. 27,999 S. 28,943

JUL 30 1958

Chamber Music Concert Slated at Tanglewood

Tonight, 8:30 o'clock, in the Theater-Concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., the fifth in the series of Wednesday night chamber music concerts will be presented. The Kroll quarter will be heard in a program including Mozart's Quarter in C. major, K. 465; Easley Blackwood's Quartet No. 1 and Brahms' Quartet No. 1 in C minor, Op. 51, No. 1. Members of the quartet, which is headed by William Kroll, violinist and head of the Department of Chamber Music at the Berkshire Music center, include Louis Graeler, violin, David Mandovitz, viola; and Avron Twedowsky, cello. The Kroll quartet also will be heard in the final Wednesday night chamber music concert, 8:30 o'clock, Aug. 6.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,138

JUL 30 1958

Banner (e)
BENNINGTON, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 5,451

JUL 30 1958

Kroll Quartet To Perform This Evening

The fifth in the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be held tonight at 8:30 in the Theatre - Concert Hall.

The Kroll Quartet will be heard in a program including Mozart's Quartet in C major, K. 465, Easley Blackwood's Quartet No. 1 and Brahms' Quartet No. 1 in C minor, Op. 51 No. 1. Mr. Blackwood, who was born in Indianapolis, was a student of composition at Tanglewood in 1948, 49 and 50. His Quartet was commissioned by the Fromm Music Foundation and was first performed at Tanglewood in 1956. It is now in the repertoire of the Budapest Quartet as well as the Kroll Quartet. Mr. Blackwood's First Symphony was premiered by the Boston Symphony last winter and recently won the Merit Award of the American International Music Fund. Mr. Blackwood, who has recently been appointed an instructor in the University of Chicago Music Department, will be at Tanglewood for the performance of his Quartet.

Members of the Kroll Quartet, which is headed by William Kroll violinist and head of the Department of Chamber Music at the Berkshire Music Center, include Louis Graeler, violin, David Mandovit, viola; and Avron Twedowsky, Cello.

The Kroll Quartet will also be heard in the final Wednesday Evening Chamber Music Concert on Aug. 6 at 8:30.

[158]

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

JUL 29 1958

Kroll Quartet To Play at Tanglewood Tomorrow Night

Program Announced For Fifth in Series Of Chamber Concerts

The Kroll Quartet, originally the Coolidge Quartet, named for the late Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, founder of South Mountain Music Assn. in this city, will present the fifth in a series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts at the theater concert hall, Tanglewood, tomorrow night at 8:30. In 1945. the ensemble adopted the name of its leader, William Kroll, left, a member of the faculty of the chamber music department at the Berkshire Music Center. Tomorrow's program will include the works of Haydn, Bartok and Beethoven.

TANGLEWOOD—The fifth in the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts here, will open tomorrow night at 8:30 in the theater concert hall.

The Kroll Quartet will be heard in a program including Mozart's Quartet in C major, K. 465, Easley Blackwood's Quartet No. 1 and Brahms' Quartet No. 1 in C minor, Op. 51 No. 1.

Mr. Blackwood, who was born in Indianapolis, was a student of composition at Tanglewood in 1948, 1949 and 1950. His quartet was commissioned by the Fromm Music Foundation and was first performed at Tanglewood in 1956. It is now in the repertoire of the Budapest Quartet as well as the Kroll Quartet.

Blackwood To Attend

Mr. Blackwood's First Symphony was premiered by the Boston Symphony last winter and recently won the Merit Award of the American International Music Fund. Mr. Blackwood, who has recently been appointed an instructor in the University of Chicago music department, will be at Tanglewood for the performance of his quartet.

Members of the Kroll Quartet, which is headed by William Kroll, violinist and head of the department of chamber music at the Berkshire Music Center, include Louis Graeler, violin; David Mandovitz, viola; and Avron Twedowsky, cello.

The Kroll Quartet will also be heard in the final Wednesday evening chamber music concert on Aug. 6 at 8:30.

OBSCURED TEXT

Sunday News
BURLINGTON, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 11,783

JUL 27 1958

HERE TUESDAY NIGHT

Kroll Quartet to Feature Real Stradivarius Violin

When the Kroll Quartet appears here Tuesday evening, July 29, as the final presentation of the Summer Lane Series of the University of Vermont, its leader and founder—William Kroll—will bring with him an "Ernst" Stradivarius which has a reputation of its own among connoisseurs of violin lovers.

The chamber music group will be offered in the Ira Allen Chapel at UVM at 8:30 Tuesday evening. Their concert will close out a Lane summer season which has presented ballet, opera and last Tuesday evening's offering of Broadway and folksongs sung by Vermont alumnus Robert Goss of Wilder, and his wife, Louise Whetsel. The pair were honored in a press luncheon by the university.

Tanglewood Next

Tuesday's chamber music offering will precede the quartet's Wednesday appearance at Tanglewood.

Kroll's violin is regarded as exceptional in tone, even when compared with other Strads.

In the early years of the 19th century an Englishman named Andrew Fontaine, noted for his knowledge of fine instruments, presented this one to the Moravian violinist, Henri Ernst, who played it during his lifetime, and at his death left it to his widow. At first she decided to keep it, but after 15 years or so she put it in the hands of a dealer at a price he had considered prohibitive.

Dealer Had Violin

Nevertheless he was able to sell it for more. Thereafter it passed through the hands of other dealers, of violinists and of wealthy collectors in several countries until finally it was brought to the United States by the violin virtuoso Zlatko Balakovic. Eventually it landed, as do so many valuable "Strads," in the collection of Emiml Hermann, and was from this eminent dealer that Mr. Kroll acquired it in 1950.

It is of standard size; its "S" neck has recently been renewed (which is common practice with violins that are reaching their 300th birthday) and the chin rest was carved by Mr. Kroll himself. Spruce and curly maple from Appenine groves that were haunted by Signor Stradivari have gone into the making of the "Case." To quote Mr. Kroll who has been over the North Italian terrain:

"The old man was keen on wood. He married a woman a couple of decades his senior whose father seems to have had a store-room full of choice timber. When that was used up, Stradivari went out to choose his own trees. When he found a grove that was evenly grown he would pick a tree from the center. The outer ones would have been more exposed on one side, you see."

Some people say modern violin-makers are as competent as Amati, Guarnieri and Stradivari. Mr. Kroll cannot agree.

"Take the question of varnish," he says. "The wood could not be so wonderfully resonant if it were coated with anything produced today. The formula for Stradivari varnish has never been found or duplicated."

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,138

JUL 31 1958

Kroll String Quartet Gives 5th Program Of Chamber Music

The Kroll String Quartet last night presented the fifth in the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood. A capacity crowd was on hand.

One of the works performed was a string quartet by Easely Blackwood, a 25-year-old former student of composition at the Berkshire Music Center. It was the first time the work had been played at Tanglewood and the composer was present for the performance.

Also on the program were Mozart's "String Quartet in C Major" and Brahms' "String Quartet in C Minor Op. 51 No. 1."

The Berkshire Music Festival continues over the weekend, with concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon. Those will be held in the music shed.

S Union - July 31

KROLL GROUP IS HEARD AT TANGLEWOOD

String Quartet Presents Work by Former Student

By WILLARD CLARK

LENOX—The fifth in the current cycle of chamber music concerts was given Wednesday by the Kroll String Quartet. The quartet will also play next Wednesday night. The theater-concert hall was filled to capacity with a discriminating audience.

The novelty on the program was a string quartet by Easely Blackwood, a 25-year-old former student of composition here. It was the first time the work has been played at Tanglewood. In sum total this is an interesting work. Mr. Easely has written fine passages for cello and viola and the second movement of the work, with its long pizzicato passages, has considerable charm. The final movement is extremely energetic and brilliant. The composer was present to share the applause with the quartet.

The program opened with a perceptive performanee of Mozart's "String Quartet in C Major," often labeled the "Dissonant" quartet on account of the introductory adagio. This quartet found Mozart at the height of his powers. It is music which delights the musician, both the listener and the participant. Mr. Kroll and his colleagues provided a full bodied performance, well balanced and satisfying.

Listening to the Kroll Quartet, one is conscious of the scholarship to be found in its readings. This was particularly true throughout the program, but never more so than in the performance of the Brahms' "String Quartet in C Minor Op 51 No. 1." In this quartet we find Brahms at his most lyrical. Seldom somber moments intrude on this flow of lyricism. The "Romanza" is truly a song without words. The finale is a broad, expansive movement, very dramatic. The Kroll Quartet played the work with thorough understanding providing fine detail and tonal beauty. This was the finest performance of the program.

Next week the quartet will be heard in quartets by Haydn, Bortek and Beethoven.

[159]

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

JUL 31 1958

Music Review

Kroll String Quartet at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE KROLL String Quartet concert in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood last night was the last but one of the Wednesday evening chamber music series. Their program was selected with almost century-long Brobdingnagian leaps from Mozart and Brahms to a 25-year-old American, Easley Blackwood.

The Mozart C major (K.465) has come to be called the "Dissonant" because of a contrapuntal situation in the very second bar where the first violin plays an A natural over an existing far-removed harmonic base. This, to ears of 1769, must have sounded strange indeed. Many thought it was incorrect and intolerable. Fetis, the famous historian and director of the Brussels conservatory, attempted to correct it by delaying the entrance of the violin until the offensive harmony has dissolved and a proper base for the conspicuous note prepared. Everyone of musical eminence of the day took sides. Cherubini, director of the Paris conservatory, called the harmony a barbarism. Mozart, quite unaware of the rumpus he had stirred up, seems to have endured and the music is played unaltered.

* * *

THE KROLLS are the standard bearers of a tradition in chamber music which is excelled in its brewing and distilling by few, if any, and, which in its authority is not equalled by many. Yet they maintain a fresh and vital approach to the masterpieces which they have undoubtedly played innumerable times. Kroll is a master violinist. Artists cannot be graded or compared, but probably of him it might be said, as Schumann in his day protested against a critic's attempt to assign him a rung on the ladder: "I am distressed," he wrote, "to be placed in second rank. I do not ask to stand in the first, but I think I have some pretension to a place of my own." No one disputes Kroll's right to a unique place in chamber music. He permits himself a few slight, violinistic coquetries at times, but it would concern purists more than a general audience which is always charmed by the elegance and virtuosity of his quartet's playing.

* * *

BRAHMS HAD trouble reducing his musical conceptions to four solo instruments. He was an orchestral writer up to the time the C minor, opus 51, no. 1, appeared, and he has always been the butt of comments, which have been doubtful compliments, to the effect that his quartet music, or the performers, sounded orchestral.

The Krolls: William Kroll and Louis Graeler, violins, David Mankovitz, viola, and Avron Twerdowsky, cello, displayed tremendous penetration of their Brahms. The first movement tempo, was deeply satisfactory. It can be so disturbing when taken faster and under less control as less mature quartets at times think required. The Romanza and the third movement allegretto are two of the most precious gems in quartet literature, and they are never more beautiful than when the artists, by their own sense of taste and reticence, make the music itself stand out in all it glories.

* * *

BLACKWOOD was in the audience last night, and was beckoned to the stage by Kroll at the completion of his quartet to acknowledge the genuine and spontaneous approval his music evoked. Blackwood is on familar terrain at Tanglewood as he was a student there himself for three years only a short time ago. His quartet, a Fromm Music Foundation commission, was played for the first time last year on this same stage. His first symphony was played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in April of this year.

It is not a radical quartet, yet he leaves few devices of technic for resources of the instruments untapped. There are many occasions when he allows a single instrument to soliloquize or daydream. Indeed, the quartet begins with the cello singing a slow, long, wandering line after which the other three instruments join him in an agitated courant mood, gay and frivolous, possibly flippant, not by any means in the style of, but very possibly in the spirit of "West Side Story."

* * *

SOME of the novel effects are ingenious, and we could not discern whether it was the capabilities of the Krolls which were making them so or the originality of the composer. Mutes, string-plucking, ponticello, tremolo are made use of with reason, but there is a consistent forward urge to the musical line. The second movement begins with an incident which, fleetingly, recalls the dissonant Mozart cause celebre, but which proceeds to give the cello and viola, in turns, lovely fantasies which they developed with warm tone.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 399,044

JUL 27 1958

Wagner Tanglewood Feature

Excerpts from the operas and music-dramas by Richard Wagner will be featured at the concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at ~~the Berk~~shire Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox, next week-end. Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux will conduct, and soprano Margaret Harshaw will be soloist.

Another highlight will be first Tanglewood performance of Walter Piston's Viola Concerto, with Joseph De Pasquale as soloist. The work was written for and dedicated to the first viola of the Orchestra.

The major production of the Summer for the Berkshire Music Center opera department will be Rossini's "Count Ory," which will receive two performances in the Theater-Concert Hall Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 4 and 5.

Journal Record
AMHERST, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,353

JUL 24 1958

The Boston Symphony orchestra will present three concerts featuring the music of Wagner at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 1, 2 and 3. Charles Munch will conduct programs including selections from "Die Meistersinger," "Tristan and Isolde," "Gotterdammerung," and "Tannhauser" and music by Piston, Vaughan Williams and Liszt Friday and Saturday.

Post
WALLINGFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ 3,408

JUL 24 1958

3 Wagner Concerts At Tanglewood

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will ~~present three~~ concerts featuring the music of Wagner next Friday and Saturday evenings at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, will conduct two of these Berkshire Festival concerts (on Aug. 1 and 2) and Pierre Monteux will conduct the concert of Aug. 3.

TANGLEWOOD SOLOIST — JOSEPH dePASQUALE, principal violist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, makes his second solo appearance of the Berkshire Festival Friday, Aug. 1 at 8:30. Mr. de Pasquale will play the Viola Concerto of Walter Piston.

For the concert on Friday, Aug. 1, Dr. Munch will present Wagner's Prelude to "Die Meistersinger", Siegfried Idyll, and Prelude and Love-death from "Tristan and Isolde". Margaret Harshaw will sing the Love-death and will close the program in a performance of the "Immolation Scene", the finale of the opera "Gotterdammerung". Joseph de Pasquale, first violist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first Tanglewood performance of the Viola Concerto by Walter Piston.

Charles Munch will open the program of Aug. 2 with Wagner's Overture and Bacchanale from "Tannhauser". Leonard Pennario, pianist, will be heard in the Liszt First Piano Concerto. Following the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8. The concert will close with Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Gotterdammerung".

Pierre Monteux will conduct an all-Wagner concert on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 3 at 2:30 with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, as soloist.

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,566

JUL 25 19

Progr

Wagnerian
Works
Sche

The Boston Sympho present three concerts the music of Wagner day and Saturday eve
8:30 and Sunday after
2:30 in the Music
Tanglewood, Lenox, Mas
Charles Munch will the first two of these and Pierre Monteux
duct the third. Soloists weekend will include Harshaw, soprano (Au
3), Joseph de Pasqua
(Aug. 1), and Leonard piano (Aug. 2).
For the Friday con
Munch will present
Prelude to "Die Miest
Siegfried Idyll, and Pre
Love-Death from "Tri Isolde." Miss Harshaw
the Love-Death and wi program in a performa Immolation Scene, the
the opera "Götterdäm
Mr. de Pasquale will in the first Tanglewood ance of the Viola Co
Walter Piston.
Dr. Munch will open urday program with Overture and Baccha
"Tannhäuser." Mr. Pen be heard in the Liszt F Concerto. Following mission Dr. Munch wi
Vaughan Williams' S
No. 8, also to receive Tanglewood performa concert will close wi fried's Rhine Journe
"Götterdämmerung."
Pierre Monteux will an all-Wagner concert afternoon with Miss Ha soloist. His program i lows: Prelude to "Pars of Kundry from Prelude to "Lohengrin Dream from "Lohengri ture to "Rienzi," "Ov
"The Flying Dutchman Ballad from "The Flyin man," Forest Murmu
"Siegfried," "Dich, teur from "Tannhäuser," Ride of the Valkyries Walküre."

Rossini's 'Count

The major productio season for the Berksh Center Opera Depart be Rossini's "Count Or will receive two perf
in the Theater-Concert
Tanglewood, Lenox,
Monday and Tuesday
Aug. 4 and 5.
The English version
A. Simon was commiss the Juilliard School of the Juilliard Opera Th has been released to t shire Music Center for ance at Tanglewood. T the opera, to be under rection of Boris Goldov of the Opera Departm include John McCollun Ory); Angelica Lazada ess Fourmoutiers); Na liams (Isolier, the Pag Okerson (Ragonda);
Smith (Raimbaud); Ro
gate (Tutor).
The opera will be
by Wyn Morris. Mr.
Llanelly, South Wales, winner last year of t
sevitzky Memorial Sc awarded to an outstan dent conductor. He stu
ing the season just
George Szell, conduct
Cleveland Orchestra.
The scenery for the consist of a Fiberglas which 15 projectors, lo hind the shell, will pr different effects signed by Dr. Elemer scenery is part of the undertaken with the
of the New Eng
Theater and a grant Ford Foundation for opment of new scenic It is hoped that this may do away with bu ery difficult to handl
pensive to transport.
The comic opera was the first of two eras written by Rossi Paris Opéra where it performed in 1828.
by A. E. Scribe,
laboration of C.
Poirson. The opera in Paris in 1926 a in Turin in Italia has recently been the Glyndebourne
pany in England.

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 295,512

JUL 27 1958

Tanglewood Lists Wagner Concerts

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will present three concerts featuring the music of Wagner next Friday and Saturday evenings at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts. Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, will conduct two of these Berkshire Festival concerts (Aug 1 and 2) and Pierre Monteux will conduct the concert of August 3.

For the concert on Friday, Dr. Munch will conduct Wagner's Prelude to "Die Meistersinger," Siegfried Idyll, and Prelude and Love-death from "Tristan and Isolde." Margaret Harshaw, soprano, will sing the Love-death and will close the program in a performance of the "Immolation Scene," the finale of the opera "Gotterdammerung." Joseph de Pasquale, first violist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first Tanglewood performance of the Viola Concerto by Walter Piston, who dedicated it to him.

Charles Munch will open the Saturday program with Wagner's Overture and Baccahanale from "Tannhauser." Leonard Pennario, pianist, will be heard in the Liszt First Piano Concerto. Following the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8 (first Tanglewood performance). The concert will close with Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Gotterdammerung."

Pierre Monteux will conduct the all-Wagner concert on Sunday afternoon. His complete program is as follows. Prelude to "Parsifal," Air of Kundry from "Parsifal" (Miss Harshaw), Prelude to "Lohengrin," Elsa's Dream from "Lohengrin" (Miss Harshaw), Overture to "Rienzi," Overture to "The Flying Dutchman," Senta's Ballad from "The Flying Dutchman" (Miss Harshaw), Forest Murmurs from "Siegfried," "Dich, teure Halle" from "Tannhauser" and The Ride of the Valkyries from "Dire Walkure."

The Open Rehearsal of Saturday morning will be devoted to the preparation of the Saturday and Sunday Berkshire Festival concerts. Admission of $1 is donated to the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

The fifth in the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts for the benefit of the Tangle wood Revolving Scholarship Fund will be held July 30 at 8:30 in the Theater Concert Hall. The Kroll Quartet, headed by William Kroll, violinist, will be heard in a program including Mozart's Quartet in C major, K 465, Easly Blackwood's String Quartet No. 1 and Brahms Quartet in C minor, Op. 51, No. 1. Members of the Kroll Quartet in addition to William Kroll are Louis Graeler, Violin, David Mankovitz, Viola and Avron Twerdowsky, Cello.

Berkshire Music Center events open to friends will take place each day of this next to last week of the Tanglewood season. Tomorrow evening the Opera Department will present scenes from Puccine's "La Rondine," Verdi's "Aida" and "La Traviata." Tuesday evening the Tanglewood Choir will be heard, at 8:30, both concerts to be presented in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Wednesday afternoon at 3:15 in the Chamber Music Hall Hugh Ross, head of the Department of Choral Music will give a lecture. Thursday evening at 8:30 in the Music Shed the Student Orchestra presents its weekly concert, and on Friday afternoon at 3:15, the fifth program of the Seminar in Contemporary Music will feature Lukas Foss speaking on his own music and that of Leon Kirchner. Works of both composers will be performed by Fromm Fellowship players. More detailed information may be obtained from the Friends Office at Tanglewood.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 118,644

JUL 28 1958

Tanglewood Sets Wagner Concerts

The Boston Symphony Orchestra ~~will present three~~ concerts featuring the music of Wagner next Friday and Saturday at 8:30 p. m. and Sunday at 2:30 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

On Friday, Charles Munch will conduct Wagner's Prelude to "Die Meistersinger," Siegfried Idyll, and Prelude and Lovedeath from "Tristan and Isolde." Margaret Harshaw will sing the Lovedeath and will close the program in a performance of the "Immolation Scene," the finale of the opera "Gotterdammerung."

Joseph de Pasquale, first violinist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first Tanglewood performance of the Viola Concerto by Walter Piston. Mr. Piston wrote the Concerto for Mr. de Pasquale and dedicated it to him.

Dr. Munch will open the program Saturday with Wagner's Overture and Bacchanale from "Tannhauser." Leonard Pennario, pianist, will be heard in the Lizst First Piano Concerto. Dr. Munch will conduct Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8 in its first Tanglewood performance. The concert will close with Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Gotterdammerung."

Pierre Monteux will conduct an all-Wagner concert Sunday afternoon, with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, as soloist.

The Kroll Quartet will be heard Wednesday at 8:30 in a program including Mozart's Quartet in C major, K. 465, Easly Blackwood's String Quartet No. 1 and Brahms' Quartet in C minor, Op. 51, No. 1.

[160]

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,566

JUL 25 1958

Programs for Tanglewood-

Wagnerian Works On Schedule

[illegible] will [illegible] featuring [illegible] next Friday [illegible] evenings at [illegible] afternoon at [illegible] Shed at [illegible] Mass. [illegible] will conduct [illegible] concerts, [illegible] will con- [illegible] Soloists for the [illegible] Margaret [illegible] (Aug. 1 and [illegible] de Pasquale, viola [illegible] and Leonard Pennario, [illegible] Aug. 2.

[illegible] the Friday concert, Dr. [illegible] present Wagner's Prelude to "Die Miestersinger," Siegfried Idyll, and Prelude and Love-Death from "Tristan and Isolde." Miss Harshaw will sing the Love-Death and will close the program in a performance of the Immolation Scene, the finale of the opera "Götterdämmerung." Mr. de Pasquale will be soloist in the first Tanglewood performance of the Viola Concerto by Walter Piston.

Dr. Munch will open the Saturday program with Wagner's Overture and Bacchanale from "Tannhäuser." Mr. Pennario will be heard in the Liszt First Piano Concerto. Following the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8, also to receive its first Tanglewood performance. The concert will close with Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Gotterdammerung."

Pierre Monteux will conduct an all-Wagner concert Sunday afternoon with Miss Harshaw as soloist. His program is as follows: Prelude to "Parsifal," Air of Kundry from "Parsifal," Prelude to "Lohengrin," Elsa's Dream from "Lohengrin," Overture to "Rienzi," "Overture to The Flying Dutchman," Senta's Ballad from "The Flying Dutchman," Forest Murmurs from Siegfried," "Dich, teure Halle" from "Tannhäuser," and the Ride of the Valkyries from "Die Walkure."

* * *

Rossini's 'Count Ory'

The major production of the [illegible] for the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department will [illegible] Rossini's "Count Ory," which will receive two performances in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 4 and 5.

The English version by Robert [illegible] Simon was commissioned by [illegible] ard School of Music for [illegible] ard Opera Theater and [illegible] been released to the Berkshire Music Center for performance at Tanglewood. The cast of the opera, to be under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department, will [illegible] John McCollum (Count [illegible] Angelica Lazada (Countess [illegible] Formoutiers); Nancy Wil[illegible] (Isolier, the Page); Doris [illegible] (Ragonda); David [illegible] (Raimbaud); Ronold Hol[illegible] (Tutor).

The opera will be conducted [illegible] Morris. Mr. Morris of [illegible] South Wales, was the [illegible] of the Kous[illegible] Scholarship, [illegible] to an outstanding student [illegible]. He studied during the season just past with George Szell, conductor of the [illegible] Orchestra.

[illegible] for the opera will [illegible] Fiberglas shell on [illegible] located be[illegible] produce the [illegible] needed. De[illegible] Elemer Nagy, the [illegible] is part of the program undertaken with the cooperation of the New England Opera Theater and a grant from the Ford Foundation for the development of new scenic materials. It is hoped that this innovation may do away with bulky scenery, difficult to handle and expensive to transport.

The comic opera "Count Ory" was the first of two French operas written by Rossini for the Paris Opéra where it was first performed in 1828. The text was by A. E. Scribe, with the collaboration of C. G. Delestre-Poirson. The opera was revived in Paris in 1926 and performed in Turin in Italian in 1930. It has recently been performed by the Glyndebourne Opera Company in England.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,138

JUL 26 1958

Tanglewood Shed Concerts Feature Wagner Next Week

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will present three concerts featuring music of Wagner next Friday and Saturday evenings at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox.

Munch and Monteux

Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, will conduct two of these Berkshire Festival concerts Aug. 1 and 2 and Pierre Monteux will conduct the concert of Aug. 3. Soloists for the weekend will include Margaret Harshaw, soprano, Aug. 1 and 3, Joseph de Pasquale, viola, Aug. 1 and Leonard Pennario, piano, Aug. 2.

For the concert on Friday, Dr. Munch will present Wagner's Prelude to "Die Meistersinger," Siegfried Idyll, and Prelude and Lovedeath from "Tristan and Isolde." Margaret Harshaw will sing the Lovedeath and will close the program in a performance of the "Immolation Scene," the finale of the Opera "Gotterdammerung." Joseph de Pasquale, first violinist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first Tanglewood performance of the Viola Concerto by Walter Piston. Mr. Piston wrote the Concerto for Mr. de Pasquale and dedicated it to him, and Mr. de Pasquale gave the work its first performance in Boston during the season just past.

Charles Munch will open the program of Saturday with Wagner's Overture and Bacchanale from "Tannhauser." Leonard Pennario, pianist, will be heard in the Liszt First Piano Concerto. Following the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8 which will also be receiving its first Tanglewood performance. The concert will close with Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Gotterdammerung."

Sunday Afternoon

Pierre Monteux will conduct an all-Wagner concert on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, as soloist. His complete program is as follows: Prelude to "Parsifal," Air of Kundry from "Parsif al" (Miss Harshaw), Prelude to "Lohengrin," Elsa's Dream from "Lohengrin" (Miss Harshaw), Overture to "Rienzi," Overture to "The Flying Dutchman," Senta's Pallad from "The Flying Dutchman" (Miss Harshaw), Forest Murmurs from "Siegfried," "Dich, teure Halle" from "Tannhauser" and The Ride of the Valkyries from "Dire Walkure."

The Open Rehearsal of Saturday morning, August 2, will be devoted to the preparation of the Saturday and Sunday Berkshire Festival concerts. Admission of $1 is donated to the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

The fifth in the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts for the benefit of the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund will be held on Wednesday, July 30 at 8.30 in the Theatre Concert Hall. The popular Kroll Quartet, headed by William Kroll, violinist and member of the Chamber Music faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will be heard in a program including Mozart's Quartet in C. major, K. 465, Easly Blackwood's String Quartet No. 1 and Brahms Quartet in C minor, Op. 51, No. 1. Members of the Kroll Quartet in addition to William Kroll are Louis Graeler, Violin, David Mankovitz, Viola and Avron Twerdowsky, Cello.

Music Center Events

Berkshire Music Center events open to Friends will take place each day of this next to last week of the Tanglewood season. Monday evening the Opera Department will present scenes from Puccine's "La Rondine," Verdi's "Aida" and 'La Traviata." Tuesday evening the Tanglewood Choir will be heard, at 8.30, both concerts to be presented in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Wednesday afternoon at 3.15 in the Chamber Music Hall Hugh Ross, head of the Department of Choral Music will give a lecture. Thursday evening at 8.30 in the Music Shed the Student Orchestra presents its weekly concert, and on Friday afternoon at 3.15, the fifth program of the Seminar in Contemporary Music will feature Lukas Foss speaking on his own music and that of Leon Kirchner. Works of both composers will be performed by Fromm Fellowship players. More detailed information may be obtained from the Friends Office at Tanglewood.

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,566

JUL 26 1958

Anthony di Gesù

Leonard Pennario will be piano soloist with the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood on Saturday night, Aug. 2.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,937

JUL 28 1958

Wagner Featured At Tanglewood Next Weekend

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will present three concerts featuring the music of Wagner next Friday and Saturday evenings at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox. Charles Munch will conduct two of these Berkshire Festival concerts and Pierre Monteux will conduct the concert of August 3. Soloists for the weekend will include Margaret Harshaw, soprano, Joseph de Pasquale, viola and Leonard Pennario, piano.

For the concert on Aug. 1, Dr. Much will present Wagner's Prelude to "Die Meistersinger", Siegfied Idyll, and Prelude and Lovedeath from "Tristan and Isolde". Margaret Harshaw will sing the Love-death and will close the program in a performance of the "Immolation Scene", the finale of the opera "Gotterdammerung". Joseph de Pasquale, first violist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first Tanglewood performance of the Viola Concerto by Walter Piston.

Charles Munch will open the program of Aug. 2, with Wagner's Overture and Bacchanale from "Tannhauser". Leonard Pennario, pianist, will be heard in the Liszt First Piano Concerto. Dr. Munch will conduct Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8 which will also be receiving its first Tanglewood performance. The concert will close with Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Gotterdammerung".

Pierre Monteux will conduct an all-Wagner concert on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 3, with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, as soloist. His complete program is as follows. Prelude to "Parsifal", Air of Kundry from "Parsifal" (Miss Harshaw), Prelude to "Lohengrin", Elsa's Dream from "Lohengrin" (miss Harshaw), Overture to "Rienzi", Overture to "The Flying Dutchman", Senta's Pallad from "The Flying Dutchman" (Miss Harshaw), Forest Murmurs From "Siegfried", "Dich, teure Halle" from "Tannhauser" and The Ride of the Valkyries from "Dire Walkure".

The Open Rehearsal of Saturday morning, August 2, will be devoted to the preparation of the Saturday and Sunday Berkshire Festival concerts. Admission of $1 is donated to the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

The fifth in the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts for the benefit of the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund will be held on Wednesday, July 30, in the Theatre Concert Hall. The popular Kroll Quartet, headed by William Kroll, will be heard in a program including Mozart's Quartet in C major, K. 465, Easly Blackwood's String Quartet No. 1 and Brahms Quaartet in C minor, Op. 51, No. 1. Members of the Kroll Quartet in addition to William Kroll are Louis Graeler, Vilin, David Mankvitz, Viola and Avron Twerdowsky, Cello.

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 40,029

JUL 28 1958

Tanglewood Offers Music Of Wagner

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will present three concerts featuring the music of Wagner Friday and Saturday evenings at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, will conduct two of these Berkshire Festival concerts Friday and Saturday and Pierre Monteux will conduct the Sunday concert. Soloists for the week end will include Margaret Harshaw, soprano, Joseph de Pasquale, viola, and Leonard Pennario, piano.

For the concert on Friday, Dr. Munch will present Wagner's Prelude to "Die Meistersinger." Siegfried Idyll, and Prelude and Lovedeath from "Tristan and Isolde." Margaret Harshaw will sing the Lovedeath and will close the program in a performance of the "Immolation Scene," the finale of the opera "Gotterdammering.

Charles Munch will open the program of Saturday with Wagner's Overture and Bacchanale from "Tannhauser." Leonard Pennario, pianist, will be heard in the Liszt First Piano Concerto. Following the intermission, Dr. Munch will conduct Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8 which will also be receiving its first Tanglewood performance. The concert will close with Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Gotterdammerung."

Mr. Monteux will conduct an all-Wagner concert Sunday afternoon at 2:30 with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, as soloist.

Sunday Republican
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 46,025

JUL 27 1958

3 Concerts Slated At Tanglewood

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will present three concerts featuring the music of Wagner Friday and Saturday evenings at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, will conduct two of these Berkshire Festival concerts Friday and Saturday and Pierre Monteux will conduct the Sunday concert. Soloists for the week end will include Margaret Harshaw, soprano, Joseph de Pasquale, viola, and Leonard Pennario, piano.

For the concert on Friday, Dr. Munch will present Wagner's Prelude to "Die Meistersinger." Siegfried Idyll, and Prelude and Lovedeath from "Tristan and Isolde." Margaret Harshaw will sing the Lovedeath and will close the program in a performance of the "Immolation Scene," the finale of the opera "Gotterdammerung." Joseph de Pascuale, first violist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first Tanglewood performance of the Viola Concerto by Walter Piston. Mr. Piston wrote the concerto for Mr. de Pasquale and dedicated it to him, and Mr. de Pasquale gave the work its first performance in Boston during the season just past.

Charles Munch will open the program of Saturday with Wagner's Overture and Bacchanale from "Tannhauser." Leonard Pennario, pianist, will be heard in the Liszt First Piano Concerto. Following the intermission, Dr. Munch will conduct Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8 which will also be receiving its first Tanglewood performance. The concert will close with Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Gotterdammerung."

Mr. Monteux will conduct an all-Wagner concert Sunday afternoon at 2:30 with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, as soloist. His complete program is as follows: Prelude to "Parsifal," Air of Kundry from "Parsifal" (Miss Harshaw), Prelude to "Lohengrin," Elsa's Dream from "Lohengrin" (Miss Harshaw), Overture to "Rienzi," Overture to "The Flying Dutchman," Senta's Ballad from "The Flying Dutchman" (Miss Harshaw), Forest Murmurs from "Siegfried," "Dich, teure Halle" from "Tannhauser" and The Ride of the Valkyries from "Dire Walkure."

[101]

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 104,169

JUL 27 1958

More Freedom Of Action For Russian Composers

By GORDON E. ARMSTRONG

In our preoccupation with the cold war, we are apt to forget that the Soviets have been conducting a "war" against their own artists and composers for an even longer period of time. We are reminded of the latter fact in recent dispatches from Moscow concerning the revocation of the Stalin edict which has hampered and regimented Russian composers for over a decade. With the lifting of the restrictions against "formalistic tendencies" in their music, composers in the Soviet State will henceforth be free to exercise their God-given talents without interference. Will there now be a feverish resurgence of activity among Soviet composers comparable to that currently evident in the fields of science and technology where the Russians have made rapid strides forward? We can only wait and see!

It might be well to review briefly the situation which has confronted Soviet composers for many years. Creative musicians in that country had to turn their backs on the West and ignore what the government called "western decadence." They were told to avoid modern technical practices in both harmony and counterpoint and there were official bans on any suggestions of the abstract, the mystical, and the erotic in their music. Soviet composers were not supposed to use modern dissonance, the most intriguing element in present day music, but were urged to remember and be guided by classical heritage in their compositions. It might be added, parenthetically, that few if any of the Soviet composers in recent years were able to keep out of the government's "doghouse" for any length of time. Leading composers like Shostakovich and Prokofieff were constantly out of favor with the state and many of their compositions were placed on the official "black list." Blacklisted works were prohibited from performance within the Soviet Union.

It was indeed a most serious matter when a Soviet composer incurred the displeasure of the state. Officially, he lost both his social and professional standing when his music was deemed to ignore the government's decree against formalism, naturalism, aestheticism, cosmopolitanism, and against what were called "manifestations of anti-popular bourgeois ideology." A composer's first step in restoring himself to governmental favor was to write an open confession of "guilt" to Pravda (official government newspaper) and the Central Committee. The creative musician was a pathetic figure in this aesthetic farce since it requires no effort of the imagination to appreciate what this whole false procedure did to his artistic integrity and his self respect.

The cumulative effect of the Soviet government's efforts of long standing to make music an arm of the state's social policy may be detected with regard to the music of Shostakovich, one of the potentially great contemporary Russian composers. His earlier career, which marked him as one of the most brilliant and significant composers of our time, has recently deteriorated to the point where his docile conformism with official dictates of the Soviet State has robbed his music of its former originality and exciting qualities. Evidence of this fact may be found in his latest piano concerto and string quartet which fail miserably to measure up to the great artistic successes and accomplishments of which he is provedly capable. Shostakovich, as some will remember, once took to drinking some years ago when the government removed him from his professorship at the Moscow Conservatory and stopped the salary which all Soviet composers have received from the Composer's Union. Who could blame him?

It would be idle to speculate on the reasons for the complete about-face of Soviet officials in the present musical scene. Perhaps, like the ghosts in Macbeth, such revered Russian composers of the past—Glinka, Dargomizsky, Rubinstein, Tchaikovsky, Rimsky-Korsakoff, and "The Russian Five"—have risen to belatedly confound and refute the self-appointed masters of recent Soviet musical ideology. Even the greatest living Russian composer, Igor Stravinsky, an expatriate from his native land for many years, may be restored to his rightful place in the Kremlin's musical hall of fame. The unpredictable Soviets are like that!

JAZZ FESTIVAL TONIGHT AT OAKDALE

Anyone who resides in the vicinity of the Oakdale Musical Theater in Wallingford should forget [illegible] he has provided himself with earmuffs! Jazz festivals don't [illegible] respectable hours! The one scheduled for this evening at [illegible] may go on indefinitely if the one held there last summer is any criterion. The goings-on at that previous event were loud and long!!!

Of course, a better idea would be to join in the boisterous musical proceedings this evening for the audience is sure to have as much fun in listening as the performers invariably have in playing. With two bands providing continuous music, there shouldn't be a dull moment since the promised "battle" — Swing vs. Dixieland — will be fought [illegible] musicians.

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 183,539

JUL 27 1958

Hub Symphony Plans Tanglewood Concerts

THE Boston Symphony Orchestra will present three concerts featuring the music of Wagner next Friday and Saturday evenings at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Charles Munch will conduct Aug. 1 and 2 and Pierre Monteux will conduct the concert of Aug. 3. Soloists for the weekend will include Margaret Harshaw, soprano (Aug. 1 and 3), Joseph de Pasquale, viola (Aug. 1) and Leonard Pennario, piano (Aug. 2).

For the concert Friday Dr. Munch will present Wagner's Prelude to "Die Meistersinger," Siegfried Idyll, and Prelude and Lovedeath from "Tristan and Isolde". Margaret Harshaw will sing the Lovedeath and will close the program in a performance of the "Immolation Scene", the finale of the opera "Gotterdammerung".

Joseph de Pasquale, first violist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first Tanglewood performance of the Viola Concerto by Walter Piston. Mr. Piston wrote the Concerto for Mr. de Pasquale and dedicated it to him, and Mr. de Pasquale gave the work its first performance in Boston during the season just past.

Charles Munch will open the program Saturday with Wagner's Overture and Bacchanale from "Tannhauser." Leonard Pennario, pianist, will be heard in the Liszt First Piano Concerto. After the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8 which will also be receiving its first Tanglewood performance. The concert will close with Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Gotterdammerung."

Pierre Monteux will conduct an all-Wagner concert Sunday afternoon, Aug. 3, at 2:30 with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, as soloist. His complete program is as follows. Prelude to "Parsifal," Air of Kundry from "Parsifal" (Miss Harshaw), Prelude to "Lohengrin," Elsa's Dream from "Lohengrin" (Miss Harshaw), Overture to "Rienzi," Overture to "The Flying Dutchman," Senta's Ballad from "The Flying Dutchman" (Miss Harshaw), Forest Murmurs from "Siegfried," "Dich, teure Halle" from "Tannhauser" and The Ride of the Valkyries from "Die Walkure."

The open rehearsal of Saturday morning, Aug. 2, will be devoted to the preparation of the Saturday and Sunday Berkshire Festival concerts.

The fifth in the series of chamber music concerts will be held Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. in the Theatre Concert Hall. The popular Kroll Quartet, headed by William Kroll, violinist and member of the Chamber Music Faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will be heard in a program including Mozart's Quartet in C major, K, 465, Easly Blackwood's String Quartet No. 1 and Brahms Quartet in C minor, Op. 51, No. 1. Members of the Kroll Quartet in addition to William Kroll are Louis Graeler, Violin, David Mankovitz, Viola and Avron Twerdowsky, Cello.

Berkshire Music Center events open to friends will take place each day of this next to last week of the Tanglewood season. Tomorrow evening (Monday) the opera department will present scenes from Puccini's "La Rondine," Verdi's "Aida" and "La Traviata." Tuesday evening the Tanglewood Choir will be heard at 8:30, both concerts to be presented in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Wednesday afternoon at 3:15 in the Chamber Music Hall Hugh Ross, head of the Department of Choral Music will give a lecture. Thursday evening at 8:30 in the Music Shed the Student Orchestra presents its weekly concert, and on Friday afternoon at 3:15, the fifth program of the Seminar in Contemporary Music will feature Lukas Foss speaking on his own music and that of Leon Kirchner. Works of both composers will be performed by Fromm Fellowship players.

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON,
Mass.
Weekly Independent
Cir. 2,498

JUL 31 1958

Boston Symphony to Play Wagner Music

To Feature This Week-End's Tanglewood Program

Munch Will Conduct Friday and Saturday Night Programs.—Monteux In Charge of Sunday Afternoon Concert.—Opera Department to Present "Count Ory".

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will present three concerts featuring the music of Wagner on Friday and Saturday evenings at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood in Lenox. Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, will conduct two of these Berkshire Festival concerts on August 1 and 2, and Pierre Monteux will conduct the concert of August 3. Soloists for the week-end will include Margaret Harshaw, soprano, August 1 and 3; Joseph de Pasquale, viola, August 1; and Leonard Pennario, piano, August 2.

For the concert on tomorrow night, Dr. Munch will present Wagner's Prelude to "Die Meistersinger," Siegfried Idyll, and Prelude and Lovedeath from "Tristan and Isolde." Margaret Harshaw will sing the Lovedeath and will close the program in a performance of the "Immolation Scene," the finale of the opera "Gotterdammerung."

Joseph de Pasquale, first violist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first Tanglewood performance of the Viola Concerto by Walter Piston. Mr. Piston wrote the concerto for Mr. de Pasquale and dedicated it to him, and Mr. de Pasquale gave the work its first performance in Boston during the season just past.

Charles Munch will open the program Saturday night with Wagner's Overture and Bacchanale from "Tannhauser." Leonard Pennario, pianist, will be heard in the Liszt First Piano Concerto. Following the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8 which will also be receiving its first Tanglewood performance. The concert will close with Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Gotterdammerung."

Tanglewood

(Continued from first page)

Pierre Monteux will conduct an all-Wagner concert on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, as soloist. His complete program is as follows. Prelude to "Parsifal," Air of Kundry from "Parsifal" (Miss Harshaw), Prelude to "Lohengrin," Elsa's Dream from "Lohengrin" (Miss Harshaw), Overture to "Rienzi," Overture to "The Flying Dutchman," Senta's Ballad from "The Flying Dutchman" (Miss Harshaw), "Forest Murmurs" from "Siegfried," "Dich, teure Talle" from "Tannhauser" and The Ride of the Valkyries from "Dire Dalkure."

The major production of the season for the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department will be Rossini's comic opera "Count Ory," which will receive two performances in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood on Monday and Tuesday evenings, August 4 and 5. The English version by Robert A. Simon was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music for the Juilliard Opera Theatre and has been released to the Berkshire Music Center for performance at Tanglewood.

The cast of the opera, which will be under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department, includes John McCollum (Count Ory); Angelica Lazada (Countess Fourmoutiers); Nancy Williams (Isolier, the Page); Doris Okerson (Radonga); David Smith (Raimbaud); and Ronald Holgate (Tutor).

The opera will be conducted by Wyn Morris. Mr. Morris of Llanelly, South Wales, was the winner last year of the Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship, awarded to an outstanding student conductor. He studied during the season just past with George Szell, conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra.

The scenery for the opera will consist of a fiberglass shell on which 15 projectors, located behind the shell, will produce different effects needed.

ATHENS, N. Y.
HERALD

JUL 31 1958

CAIRO, N. Y.
HERALD
Circ. W. 415

JUL 31 1958

New Lebanon Echo - July 29

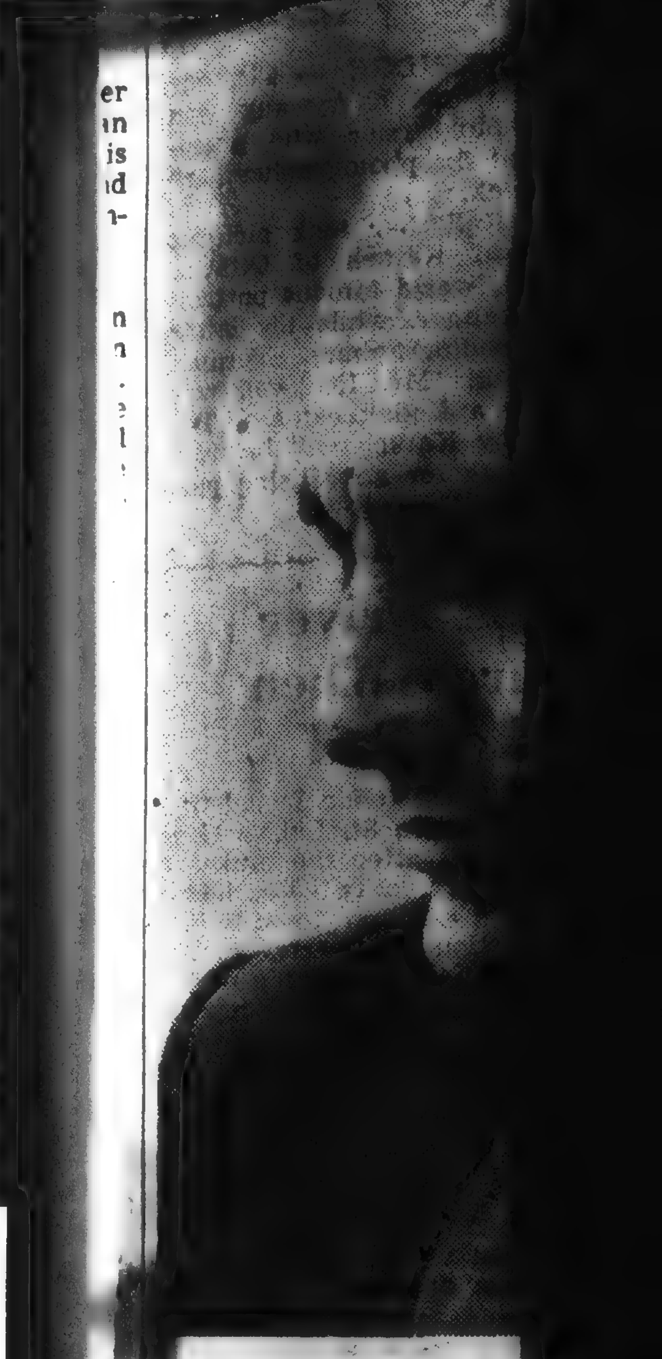
Wagner Concerts At Tanglewood

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will present three concerts featuring the music of Wagner next Friday and Saturday evenings at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox. Charles Munch, the Orchestra's Music Director, will conduct two of these Berkshire Festival concerts (on August 1 and 2) and Pierre Monteux will conduct the concert of August 3rd. Soloists for the week-end will include Margaret Harshaw, soprano (August 1 and 3), Joseph de Pasquale, viola (August 1) and Leonard Pennario, piano (Aug. 2nd)

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert "Tanglewood - on - Parade" which will take place on Thursday evening, Aug. 7th in the Music Shed.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard with the Boston Symphony orchestra in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the Department of Conducting, will direct a performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo". Richard Burgin, Associate Conductor of the Orchestra and members of the faculty of the School will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer appearing as soloist. Mr. Copland is chairman of the Faculty and head of the Department of Composition.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program.



FRIDAY'S SOLOIS
in the Music Shed wi of the orchestra. He formance of Walter concerto for Mr. de gave the work its fi with the

Violist, Pia
With BSO

TANGLEWOOD — Three will be featured at the Symphony Orchestra's con
the Music Shed this weeke
Dr. Charles Munch, mus rector of the BSO, and Monteux sharing the podiu

Friday night at 8:30, Dr will present Wagner's pr
"Die Meistersinger," Sie
Idyll, and prelude and lo from "Tristan and Isolde garet Harshaw, Metropol era star, will sing the lo and close the program in formance of the "Imm Scene," the finale of the "Gotterdammerung."

Joseph de Pasquale, firs of the Boston Symphony, soloist in the first perform Tanglewood of the viola by Walter Piston, who w work for Mr. de Pasqu dedicated it to him. Mr.
quale performed the con its first performance in last season.

Dr. Munch will also cond greatest living Russian composer, Igor Stravinsky, an expatriate from his native land for many years, may be restored to his rightful place in the Kremlin's musical hall of fame. The unpredictable Soviets are like that!

JAZZ FESTIVAL TONIGHT AT OAKDALE

Anyone who resides in the vicinity of the Oakdale Musical Theater in Wallingford should forget about retiring early this evening unless he has provided himself with earmuffs! Jazz festivals don't hold with respectable hours! The one scheduled for this evening at Oakdale may go on indefinitely if the one held there last summer is any criterion. The goings-on at that previous event were loud and long!!!

Of course, a better idea would be to join in the boisterous musical proceedings this evening for the audience is sure to have as much fun in listening as the performers invariably have in playing. With two bands providing continuous music, there shouldn't be a dull moment since the promised "battle" — Swing vs. Dixieland — will be fought out by 14 of the leading jazz musicians.

If you are a jazz fan, the names of tonight's performers form an exciting lineup! If you are not, your jazz friends may feel sorry for you. In any case, here is the roster of the two ensembles. In the Dixieland group will be the following: Red Allen, trumpet; Coleman Hawkins, tenor saxophone; Cozy Cole, drums; Buster Bailey, clarinet; "Big Chief" Moore (he's a full-blooded Indian), trombone; Marty Napoleon, piano; and Benny Moten, bass. The Swing group notables are to be: Buck Clayton, trumpet; Buddy Tate, tenor saxophone; Jo Jones, drums; Earl Warren, clarinet; Benny Morton, trombone; Ray Bryant, piano; and Tommy Bryant, bass. All of the latter ensemble are alumni of Count Basie's Band!

Last, but definitely not least, the vocals this evening will be handled by the incomparable Billie Holiday. If you haven't heard her, a jazz fan might ask, "Where have you been, man, for the last 20 years? That's a good question as is another one pertinent to tonight's festival. The program will start at 8 p. m. sharp but when it will conclude is anybody's guess!

STARLIGHT FESTIVAL OF CHAMBER MUSIC

The Starlight Festival of Chamber Music will present its third concert on Tuesday evening at 8:30 in the courtyard of the Yale Art Gallery. The guest artist of the occasion is to be pianist Donald Currier of the Yale Music School faculty. He has added considerably to his following here through recent guest appearances with the New Haven Symphony. He was the soloist with the orchestra in two performances of the popular Tchaikovsky Piano Concerto in B flat, the first of which was given in Woolsey Hall and the other during the Festival of Arts on the Green in June.

The accomplished young pianist will be heard in two of the works scheduled for Tuesday's concert. These are Beethoven's Piano Trio No. 7 in B flat, Op. 97 (Archduke Trio) and Schumann's Piano Quintet in E flat. The other players to be heard with Currier are regular members of the festival group. They are Julius Scheir and Ann Barak, violins; Meyer Katz, viola and Nathan Stutch, cello.

YALE NORFOLK MUSIC SCHOOL

The current chamber music series of Yale's Norfolk Music School will conclude with the concert on Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 in the Music Shed at Norfolk. The final program will be devoted entirely to 17th century German Baroque cantatas, to be presented by soloists, chorus, and string orchestra under the direction of Howard Boatwright. Soprano Helen Boatwright and baritone Benjamin De Loache will have the solo roles.

Conductor Boatwright now enjoys an enviable reputation in the field of cantata performances, a number of which he has directed both in New Haven and at the Metropolitan Musuem of Art in New York. The young Yale pedagogue prepared some of the cantatas heard in these programs from rare manuscripts and thus they were given first performances in this country under his direction. Wednesday's Norfolk program of cantatas by Tunder, Buxtehude, and Rosenmueller will include both solo and group offerings.

CONCERTS BY BOSTON SYMPHONY

The music of Richard Wagner will be featured in this week's three concerts by the Boston Symphony at the Berkshire Music Festival. Charles Munch ~~will conduct the concerts~~ on Friday and Saturday evenings while Pierre Monteux is to be on the podium for next Sunday afternoon's all-Wagner program.

Margaret Harshaw, soprano, and Joseph de Pasquale, first violist of the Boston Orchestra, are to be the soloists in Friday's concert. Miss Harshaw will sing the Love-death from "Tristan and Isolde" and the Immolation Scene from "Gotterdammerung." The violist will perform Walter Piston's Viola Concerto, which was dedicated to him by the composer, and first performed in Boston last season with de Pasquale as soloist. The other Wagner works—the Prelude to "Die Meistersinger" and the Siegfried Idyll complete Friday's program.

Music by Wagner to be heard in Saturday's concert includes the Overture and Bacchanale from "Tannhauser" and Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Gotterdammerung." Pianist Leonard Pennario will have the guest role in this concert, playing the Liszt Concerto No. 1. The Symphony No. 8, by Vaughan Williams, is to be the featured orchestral offering.

Miss Harshaw will appear again in Sunday's concert. Her offerings will include: Air of Kundry ("Parsifal"); Elsa's Dream ("Lohengrin"); and Senta's Pallad ("The Flying Dutchman"). Monteux will conduct the orchestra in the following: Prelude to "Parsifal"; Prelude to "Lohengrin"; Overture to "Rienzi"; Overture to "The Flying Dutchman"; Forest Murmurs from Siegfried"; Dich, teure Halle, from "Tannhauser"; and The Ride of the Valkyries from "Die Walkure."

---

on was commissioned School of Music for era Theatre and has the Berkshire Music formance at Tangle-the opera, which will irection of Boris Gol- f the Opera Depart- ohn McCollum (Count Lazada (Countess Nancy Williams (Iso- Doris Okerson (Ra- Smith (Raimbaud); gate (Tutor).

be conducted by . Morris of Llanel- was the winner last oussevitzky Memorial arded to an outstand- nductor. He studied son just past with nductor of the Clevethe opera will con- shell on which 15 behind the shell, different effects needed.

RO, N. Y.
ERALD
c. W. 415

31 1958

Mahos

FRIDAY'S SOLOIST at the Boston Symphony's concert in the Music Shed will be Joseph de Pasquale, first violist of the orchestra. He will play in the first Tanglewood performance of Walter Piston's viola concerto, who wrote the concerto for Mr. de Pasquale and dedicated it to him. He gave the work its first performance in Boston last season with the BSO in Symphony Hall.

Violist, Pianist and Soprano With BSO Over the Weekend

TANGLEWOOD — Three soloists will be featured at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's concerts in the Music Shed this weekend with Dr. Charles Munch, musical director of the BSO, and Pierre Monteux sharing the podium.

Friday night at 8:30, Dr. Munch will present Wagner's prelude to "Die Meistersinger," Siegfried Idyll, and prelude and love death from "Tristan and Isolde." Margaret Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera star, will sing the love death and close the program in a performance of the "Immolation Scene," the finale of the opera, "Gotterdammerung."

Joseph de Pasquale, first violist of the Boston Symphony, will be soloist in the first performance at Tanglewood of the viola concerto by Walter Piston, who wrote the work for Mr. de Pasquale and dedicated it to him. Mr. de Pasquale performed the concerto at its first performance in Boston last season.

Dr. Munch will also conduct the orchestra at Saturday night's concert, with Wagner's Overture and Bacchanale from "Tannhauser."

Leonard Pennario, pianist, will be heard in the Liszt first piano concerto. Following the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8 which will also be receiving its first Tanglewood performance. The concert will close with Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Gotterdammerung."

All-Wagner Concert

Pierre Monteux will conduct an all-Wagner concert on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, as soloist. His complete program follows. Prelude to "Parsifal," Air of Kundry from "Parsifal" (Miss Harshaw), prelude to "Lohengrin," Elsa's Dream from "Lohengrin" (Miss Harshaw), overture to "Rienzi," overture to "The Flying Dutchman," Senta's Ballard from "The Flying Dutchman" (Miss Harshaw), Forest Murmurs from "Siegfried," "Dich, teure Halle" from "Tannhauser" and "The Ride of the Valkyries" from "Dire Walkure."

The open rehearsal of Saturday morning will be devoted to the preparation of the Saturday and Sunday Berkshire Festival concerts. Admission of $1 is donated to the orchestra's pension fund.

The fifth in the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts for the benefit of the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund will be held tonight at 8:30 in the theater concert hall. The Kroll Quartet, headed by William Kroll, violinist and member of the chamber music faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will be heard.

Friends Events

Berkshire Music Center events open to Friends will take place each day of this next to the last week of the Tanglewood season. Last evening the opera department presented scenes from Puccini's "La Rondine," Verdi's "Aida" and "La Traviata." This evening the Tanglewood choir will be heard at 8:30, both concerts to be presented in the theater concert hall. Tomorrow afternoon at 3:15 in the Chamber Music Hall Hugh Ross, head of the department of choral music will give a lecture. Thursday evening at 8:30 in the Music Shed the Student Orchestra presents its weekly concert, and on Friday afternoon at 3:15, the fifth program of the seminar in contemporary music will feature Lukas Foss speaking on his own music and that of Leon Kirchner. Works of both composers will be performed by Fromm Fellowship players. More detailed information may be obtained from the Friends office at Tanglewood.

MILLERTON, N. Y.
NEWS-REPUBLICAN
Circ. W. 3,617

JUL 24 1958

Joseph de Pasquale, principal violist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, makes his second solo appearance of the Berkshire Festival Friday, August 1 at 8:30. Mr. de Pasquale will play the Viola Concerto of Walter Piston.

Press (e)
BRISTOL, Conn.
Independent Republican
Circ. 13,480

JUL 28 1958

Music For Everybody

By SIGMUND SPAETH

The recent celebration of the diamond jubilee of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia, America's unique musical fraternity, produced some stimulating and practical ideas, to which the country's leading authorities on music contributed significantly. (This columnist admits a particular personal interest as the unexpected recipient of the organization's highly prized "Man of Music" award, a memorial to the late, great music educator, Charles E. "Casey" Lutton.)

Prominent in the discussions at this important convention were Congressman Carroll D. Kearns (R., Pa.), Dr. Harold Spivacke, head of the Music Division of the Library of Congress, Dr. William McBride, past President of the Music Educators National Conference, and Edwin Hughes, Executive Secretary of the National Music Council, with Archie N. Jones, of the University of Texas, presiding.

Among those elected to honorary membership were Brian Sullivan and William Wilderman of the Metropolitan Opera, Ferde Grofe, Don Gillis and Gail Kubik, composers, and Oliver Daniel, outstanding expert on America's contemporary composers.

Congressman Kearns, who spoke eloquently on "The Importance of Our Cultural Relations," is himself a musician, having sung with Mary Garden as a concert and operatic baritone and served as Music Supervisor in Greenville, Pa., before his election to the House of Representatives.

Both he and Dr. Spivacke expressed optimism as to the attitude of the Federal Goverment toward music, emphasizing the fact that the Senate had voted favorably on a bill for establishing a cultural center in Washington and that the State Department is increasingly active in its cooperation with ANTA in sending musical ambassadors of good will abroad.

It was generally agreed, however, that there is much to be done, and that the time has come for definite action rather than mere words and gestures to prove to the world that the United States of America can no longer be considered a purely materialistic nation, interested only in financial success.

The latest demonstrations of the value of music as a literally universal language and a common meeting ground for all people, regardless of racial or political differences, hardly required special emphasis.

In a lively discussion panel our sincere and well-equipped music lovers were urged to reach out beyond their little circle of serious appreciators in an effort to transfer some of their own enthusiasm to those of lesser talent or experience. "Music for Everybody" was presented as far more than a mere slogan—actually a practical possibility. While the current Rock 'n' Roll was roundly condemned, there was no suggestion of a "holier than thou" attitude.

If any proof were needed of the solid achievements of these American college students and teachers, it was amply provided in the band and choral programs given almost at sight under the direction of Mark Hindsley of the University of Illinois and Harry Robert Wilson of Columbia respectively. Music was allowed to speak for itself, and it spoke in no uncertain terms. National repercussions may be expected in the near future.

* * *

It is not often that a book on music gets into the best seller lists. Mary Lewis Coakley has made the grade, however, with her biographical "Mister Music Maker, Lawrence Welk" (Doubleday & Co.). The current popularity of this unpretentious little volume is a tribute to its author as well as to the prodigiously successful conductor-accordionist.

Half-Notes — Frank Luther's musical version of "Tom Sawyer" in its world premiere at Kansas City . . . New York's City Symphony Orchestra completing a schedule of four concerts in Central Park . . . Benjamin Britten's latest opera "Noye's Fludde" ("Noah's Flood") presented over New York's FM station, WBAI . . . Angna Enters' unique combination of dance and pantomime at Ravina Park, Chicago, August 6 and 8 . . . Gershwin Memorial Contest for Young Composers open until the end of August, with details available through the Foundation at 55 W. 42nd St., New York City . . .

Duke Ellington writing songs for a Broadway musical, "Saturday Laughter" . . . Antioch College, Yellow Springs, Ohio, presenting five "Pops" concerts conducted by Evan Whallon . . . S. Hurok offering a film version of Puccini's opera, "Tosca," in honor of the centenary of the composer's birth . . . Charles Munch featuring Wagner on next week's Berkshire Festival programs . . . The People's Symphony Concerts at Washington Irving High School emphasizing chamber music and individual recitals this fall . . . Pizzetti's operatic treatment of "Murder in the Cathedral" to have its American premiere at Ellenville, N.Y., August 14.

* * *

Verdi, Mozart, Kurt Weill and Richard Rodgers are the composers to be featured in the closing week of New York's Stadium Concerts. Alfedo Antonini, Samuel Matlovsky and Savatore Dell' Isola are the conductors, with soloists including Roberta Peters, Claramae Turner, Jan Peerce, Lotte Lenya and Elaine Malbin.

* * *

HUDSON, N. Y.
REGISTER-STAR
D.

[143]

JUL 25 1958

Boston Symphony Orchestra To Feature Wagner

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will present three concerts featuring the music of Wagner next Friday and Saturday evening at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts. Charles Munch, the Orchestra's Music Director, will conduct two of these Berkshire Festival concerts (on August 1 and 2) and Pierre Monteux will conduct the concert of August 3. Soloists for the weekend will include Margaret Harshaw, soprano (August 1 and 3), Joseph de Pasquale, viola (August 1) and Leonard Pennario, piano (August 2).

For the concert on Friday, August 1, Dr. Munch will present Wagner's Prelude to "Die Meistersinger," Siegfried Idyll. and Prelude and Lovedeath from "Tristan and Isolde." Margaret Harshaw will sing the Lovedeath and will close the program in a performance of the "Immolation Scene," the finals of the opera "Gotterdammerung." Joseph de Pasquale, first violinist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first Tanglewood performance of the Viola Concert by Walter Piston. Mr. Piston wrote the Concerto for Mr. de Pasquale and dedicated it to him, and Mr. de Pasquale gave the work its first performance in Boston during the season just past.

Charles Munch will open the program of Saturday, August 2, with Wagner's Overture and Bacchanale from "Tannhauser." Leonard Pennario, pianist, will be heard in the Liszt First Piano Concerto. Following the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8 which will also be receiving its first Tanglewood performance. The concert will close with Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Gotterdammerung."

Pierre Monteux will conduct an all-Wagner concert on Sunday afternoon, August 3 at 2:30 with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, as soloist. His complete program is as follows: Prelude to "Parsifal," Air of Kundry from "Parsifal" (Miss Harshaw), Overture to "Rienzi," Overture to "The Flying Dutchman," Senta's Ballad from "The Flying Dutchman" (Miss Harshaw), Forest Murmura from "Siegfried," "Dich, teure Halle" from "Tannhauser" and The Ride of the Valkyries from "Dire Walkure."

A mural and sculpture competition "Art For Our Town" is announced by the Munson-Williams-Proctor Institute of Utica. This competition is open to all artists in New York State. It is a cooperative project of business and professional organizations of the Utica area.

"The purpose is to stimulate and encourage an appreciation and use of art in public places." There are 15 different design projects ranging from a decorative mural for a bank to a sculpture design for a fountain.

The sum of $150 is the award for the jury-selected design for each project with an additional prize of $250 each for the best one in the mural and the best one in the sculpture competition.

The sponsor of each project plans wherever possible to complete the project by a commission. This final decision of commissioning rests with the individual project sponsor. All projects are in the greater Utica area.

The artist is requested to write to the Institute for a prospectus with specifications and full information of the competition including a post card entry-form on which the artist may enter his name and his preference as to the project for entry. The application entry-forms close August 16, 1953, and the competition project designs are due on or before November 15, 1958.

The jury of selection consists of five members: Roy R. Neuberger, president of the American Federation of Arts: Anton Refregier, mural painter: and Jose deCreeft, sculptor; a representative of the Institute and one from each of the sponsors.

An artist desiring to enter the competition should write for the prospectus and the entry-card to Munson - Williams - Proctor Institute, 310 Genesee Street, Utica 4, New York.

The Open Rehearsal of Saturday morning, August 2, will be devoted to the preparation of the Saturday and Sunday Berkshire Festival concert. Admission of $1 is donated to the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

The fifth in the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts for the benefit of the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund will be held on Wednesday, July 30 at 8:30 in the Theatre Concert Hall. The popular Kroll Quartet, headed by William Kroll, violinist and member of the Chamber Music faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will be heard in a program including Mozart's Quartet in C. major, K. 465, Easy Blackwood's String Quartet No. 1 and Brahms Quartet in C. minor. Op. 51, No. 1. Members of the Kroll Quartet in addition to William Kroll are Louis Graeler, Violin, David Mankovitz, Viola and Avon Twerdowsky, Cello.

Berkshire Music Center event open to Friends will take place each day of this next week to last week of the Tanglewood season. Tomorrow evening (Monday) the Opera Department will present scenes from Puccine's "La Rondine," Verdi's "Adia" and "La Traviata." Tuesday evening the Tanglewood Choir will be heard, at 8:30 both concerts to be presented in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Wednesday afternoon at 3:15 in the Chamber Music Hall Hugh Ross, head of the Department of Choral Music will give a lecture. Thursday evening at 8:30 in the Music Shed the Student Orchestra presents its weekly concert and on Friday afternoon at 3:15, the fifth program of the Seminar in Contemporary Music will feature Lukas Foss speaking on his own music and that of Leon Kirchner. Works of both composers will be performed by Fromm Fellowship players. More detailed information may be obtained from the Friends Office at Tanglewood.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

JUL 31 1958

FIFTH PIANIST to appear at Tanglewood this season will be Leonard Pennario, who will play the piano concerto No. 1 in E flat of Liszt with the Boston Symphony in the Shed Saturday night at 8:30. The young American pianist made his concert debut with the Dallas Symphony at age of 12. Since then he has appeared with many major orchestras.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292

JUL 31 1958

Wagner Program For Tanglewood Concerts

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will present three concerts featuring the music of Wagner next Friday and Saturday evenings at 8:30 and Sundayday afternoon at 2:30 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. Charles Munch, the Orchestra's Music Director, will conduct two of these Berkshire Festival concerts (on August 1 and 2) and Pierre Monteux will conduct the concert of August 3. Soloists for the weekend will include Margaret Harshaw, soprano (August 1 and 3), Joseph de Pasquale, viola (August 1) and Leonard Pennario, piano (August 2).

For the concert on Friday, August 1, Dr. Munch will present Wagner's Prelude to Die Meistersinger, Siegfried Idyll, and Prelude and Lovedeath from Tristan and Isolde. Margaret Harshaw will sing the Lovedeath and will close the program in a performance of the Immolation Scene, the finale of the opera Gotterdammerung. Joseph de Pasquale, first violist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first Tanglewood performance of the*Viola Concerto* by Walter Piston. Mr. Piston wrote the Concerto for Mr. de Pasquale and dedicated it to him, and Mr. de Pasquale gave the work its first performance in Boston during the season just past.

Charles Munch will open the program of Saturday, August 2, with Wagner's Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhauser. Leonard Pennario, pianist, will be heard in the Liszt First Piano Concerto. Following the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8 which will also be receiving its first Tanglewood performance. The concert will close with Siegfried's Rhine Journey from Gotterdammerung.

Pierre Monteux will conduct an all-Wagner concert on Sunday afternoon, August 3, at 2:30 with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, as soloist. His complete program is as follows: Prelude to Parsifal, Air of Kundry from Parsifal (Miss Harshaw), Prelude to Lohengrin, Elsa's Dream from Lohengrin (Miss Harshaw), Overture to Rienzi, Overture to The Flying Dutchman, Senta's Pallad from The Flying Dutchman (Miss Harshaw), Forest Murmurs from Siegfried, Dich, teure Halle from Tannhauser and The Ride of the Valkyries from Dire Walkure.

The Open Rehearsal of Saturday morning, August 2, will be devoted to the preparation of the Saturday and Sunday Berkshire Festival concerts. Admission is donated to the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

CHATHAM, N. Y.
COURIER
Circ. W 3,500

JUL 24 1958

Wagner Concerts Next at Tanglewood

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will present three concerts featuring the music of Wagner next Friday and Saturday evening at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox. Charles Munch, the Orchestra's Music Director, will conduct two of these Berkshire Festival concerts on August 1 and 2 and Pierre Monteux will conduct the concert of August 3. Soloists for the weekend will include Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; and Leonard Pennario, piano.

For the concert on Friday, August 1, Dr. Munch will present Wagner's Prelude to "Die Meistersinger" Siegfried Idyll, and Prelude and Lovedeath from "Tristan and Isolde."

Charles Munch will open the program of Saturday, August 2, with Wagner's Overture and Bacchanale from "Tannhauser." Leonard Pennario, pianist, will be heard in the Liszt First Piano Concerto. Following the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8 which will also be receiving its first Tanglewood performance. The concert will close with Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Gotterdammerung."

Pierre Monteux will conduct an all-Wagner concert on Sunday afternoon, August 3 at 2:30 with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, as soloist, including prelude to "Parsifal," "Elsa's Dream from Lohengrin," and Overture to "Rienzi."

[103]

HUDSON, N. Y.
REGISTER-STAR
D.

JUL 25 1958

Boston Symphony Orchestra To Feature Wagner

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will present three concerts featuring the music of Wagner next Friday and Saturday evening at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts. Charles Munch, the Orchestra's Music Director, will conduct two of these Berkshire Festival concerts (on August 1 and 2) and Pierre Monteux will conduct the concert of August 3. Soloists for the weekend will include Margaret Harshaw, soprano (August 1 and 3), Joseph de Pasquale, viola (August 1) and Leonard Pennario, piano (August 2).

For the concert on Friday, August 1, Dr. Munch will present Wagner's Prelude to "Die Meistersinger," Siegfried Idyll, and Prelude and Lovedeath from "Tristan and Isolde." Margaret Harshaw will sing the Lovedeath and will close the program in a performance of the "Immolation Scene," the finals of the opera "Gotterdammerung." Joseph de Pasquale, first violinist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first Tanglewood performance of the Viola Concert by Walter Piston. Mr. Piston wrote the Concerto for Mr. de Pasquale and dedicated it to him, and Mr. de Pasquale gave the work its first performance in Boston during the season just past.

Charles Munch will open the program of Saturday, August 2, with Wagner's Overture and Bacchanale from "Tannhauser." Leonard Pennario, pianist, will be heard in the Liszt First Piano Concerto. Following the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8 which will also be receiving its first Tanglewood performance. The concert will close with Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Gotterdammerung."

Pierre Monteux will conduct an all-Wagner concert on Sunday afternoon, August 3 at 2:30 with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, as soloist. His complete program is as follows; Prelude to "Parsifal," Air of Kundry from "Parsifal" (Miss Harshaw), Overture to "[illegible]" Overture to "The Flying Dutchman," Senta's Ballad from "[illegible] Flying Dutchman" (Miss Harshaw), Forest Murmurs from "Siegfried," "Dich, teure Halle" from "Tannhauser" and The Ride of the Valkyries from "Dire Walkure."

A mural and sculpture competition "Art For Our Town" is announced by the Munson-Williams-Proctor Institute of Utica. This competition is open to all artists in New York State. It is a cooperative project of business and professional organizations of the Utica area.

"The purpose is to stimulate and encourage an appreciation and use of art in public places." There are 15 different design projects ranging from a decorative mural for a bank to a sculpture design for a fountain.

The sum of $150 is the award for the jury-selected design for each project with an additional prize of $250 each for the best one in the mural and the best one in the sculpture competition.

The sponsor of each project plans wherever possible to complete the project by a commission. This final decision of commissioning rests with the individual project sponsor. All projects are in the greater Utica area.

The artist is requested to write to the Institute for a prospectus with specifications and full information of the competition including a post card entry-form on which the artist may enter his name and his preference as to the project for entry. The application entry-forms close August 16, 1958, and the competition project designs are due on or before November 15, 1958.

The jury of selection consists of five members: Roy R. Neuberger, president of the American Federation of Arts; Anton Refregier, mural painter; and Jose deCreeft, sculptor; a representative of the Institute and one from each of the sponsors.

An artist desiring to enter the competition should write for the prospectus and the entry-card to Munson - Williams - Proctor Institute, 310 Genesee Street, Utica 4, New York.

The Open Rehearsal of Saturday morning, August 2, will be devoted to the preparation of the Saturday and Sunday Berkshire Festival concert. Admission of $1 is donated to the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

The fifth in the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts for the benefit of the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund will be held on Wednesday, July 30 at 8:30 in the Theatre Concert Hall. The popular Kroll Quartet, headed by William Kroll, violinist and member of the Chamber Music faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will be heard in a program including Mozart's Quartet in C major, K. 465, Easy Blackwood's String Quartet No. 1 and Brahms Quartet in C minor, Op. 51, No. 1. Members of the Kroll Quartet in addition to William Kroll are Louis Graeler, Violin, David Mankovitz, Viola and Avon Twerdowsky, Cello.

Berkshire Music Center event open to Friends will take place each day of this next week to last week of the Tanglewood season. Tomorrow evening (Monday) the Opera Department will present scenes from Puccine's "La Rondine," Verdi's "Adia" and "La Traviata." Tuesday evening the Tanglewood Choir will be heard, at 8:30 both concerts to be presented in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Wednesday afternoon at 3:15 in the Chamber Music Hall Hugh Ross, head of the Department of Choral Music will give a lecture. Thursday evening at 8:30 in the Music Shed the Student Orchestra presents its weekly concert and on Friday afternoon at 3:15, the fifth program of the Seminar in Contemporary Music will feature Lukas Foss speaking on his own music and that of Leon Kirchner. Works of both composers will be performed by Fromm Fellowship players. More detailed information may be obtained from the Friends Office at Tanglewood.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

JUL 31 1958

FIFTH PIANIST to appear at Tanglewood this season will be Leonard Pennario, who will play the piano concerto No. 1 in E flat of Liszt with the Boston Symphony in the Shed Saturday night at 8:30. The young American pianist made his concert debut with the Dallas Symphony at age of 12. Since then he has appeared with many major orchestras.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292

JUL 31 1958

Wagner Program For Tanglewood Concerts

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will present three concerts featuring the music of Wagner next Friday and Saturday evenings at 8:30 and Sundayday afternoon at 2:30 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. Charles Munch, the Orchestra's Music Director, will conduct two of these Berkshire Festival concerts (on August 1 and 2) and Pierre Monteux will conduct the concert of August 3. Soloists for the weekend will include Margaret Harshaw, soprano (August 1 and 3), Joseph de Pasquale, viola (August 1) and Leonard Pennario, piano (August 2).

For the concert on Friday, August 1, Dr. Munch will present Wagner's Prelude to Die Meistersinger, Siegfried Idyll, and Prelude and Lovedeath from Tristan and Isolde. Margaret Harshaw will sing the Lovedeath and will close the program in a performance of the Immolation Scene, the finale of the opera Gotterdammerung. Joseph de Pasquale, first violist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in the first Tanglewood performance of the*Viola Concerto* by Walter Piston. Mr. Piston wrote the Concerto for Mr. de Pasquale and dedicated it to him, and Mr. de Pasquale gave the work its first performance in Boston during the season just past.

Charles Munch will open the program of Saturday, August 2, with Wagner's Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhauser. Leonard Pennario, pianist, will be heard in the Liszt First Piano Concerto. Following the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8 which will also be receiving. its first Tanglewood performance. The concert will close with Siegfried's Rhine Journey from Gotterdammerung.

Pierre Monteux will conduct an all-Wagner concert on Sunday afternoon, August 3, at 2:30 with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, as soloist. His complete program is as follows: Prelude to Parsifal, Air of Kundry from Parsifal (Miss Harshaw), Prelude to Lohengrin, Elsa's Dream from Lohengrin (Miss Harshaw), Overture to Rienzi, Overture to The Flying Dutchman, Senta's Pallad from The Flying Dutchman (Miss Harshaw), Forest Murmurs from Siegfried, Dich, teure Halle from Tannhauser and The Ride of the Valkyries from Dire Walkure.

The Open Rehearsal of Saturday morning, August 2, will be devoted to the preparation of the Saturday and Sunday Berkshire Festival concerts. Admission is donated to the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

[redacted]

Wagner Concerts Next at Tanglewood

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will present three concerts featuring the music of Wagner next Friday and Saturday evening at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Charles Munch, the Orchestra's Music Director, will conduct two of these Berkshire Festival concerts on August 1 and 2 and Pierre Monteux will conduct the concert of August 3. Soloists for the weekend will include Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; and Leonard Pennario, piano.

For the concert on Friday, August 1, Dr. Munch will present Wagner's Prelude to "Die Meistersinger" Siegfried Idyll, and Prelude and Lovedeath from "Tristan and Isolde."

Charles Munch will open the program of Saturday, August 2, with Wagner's Overture and Bacchanale from "Tannhauser." Leonard Pennario, pianist, will be heard in the Liszt First Piano Concerto. Following the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8 which will also be receiving its first Tanglewood performance. The concert will close with Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Gotterdammerung."

Pierre Monteux will conduct an all-Wagner concert on Sunday afternoon, August 3 at 2:30 with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, as soloist, including prelude to "Parsifal," "Elsa's Dream from Lohengrin," and Overture to "Rienzi."

[104]

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 53,178

1958

Munch's Music—A Sacred Calling

Charles Munch, in his recent book "I Am a Conductor," describes his profession as "a sacred calling, sometimes a priesthood." It will be nine years this fall that Dr. Munch has practiced this calling with what is perhaps the world's most famous orchestra, the Boston Symphony.

"Fifteen years of work and study do not make a conductor of a man if he is not infused with an inner exhaltation, an all-consuming flame and a magnetism that can bewitch both the musicians of his orchestra and the audience," he wrote.

Every summer (since 1936) the Boston Symphony leaves the lowlands of Boston and journeys to a high valley in the Massachusetts Berkshires, where the 200-acre Tanglewood estate overlooks a peaceful lake. The crowds that fill the big Music Shed, with its sides opening to the Tanglewood lawn, and the smaller concert halls attest to Dr. Munch's magnetism.

The six weeks of the Berkshire Festival (July and early August) form the major music event of the summer months in this continent. Each weekend is devoted to a composer (but this week there are two, Debussy and Ravel, and next weekend it returns to one, Wagner), on Wednesdays there are chamber-music concerts, and in between there are numerous performances by students.

On the Cover

★ ★ ★

THE MAN responsible for the continued success of the Booston Symphony — and of the Berkshire Festival — was born in Strasbourg in Alsace. Despite the guttural sound of his last name, he was the most French of his family, but was drafted to serve with the Germans during World War I.

Thereafter, he turned to his love of music, left Alsace (to avoid becoming a German citizen) and went to Paris. There he conducted the Straram Orchestra in 1932, founded the Orchestre Symphonique de Paris and became conductor of the Paris Conservatory Orchestra in 1937.

Because of the war, Dr. Munch was unable to visit his country until 1946, when he was guest conductor of the Boston Symphony and New York Philharmonic. He was invited to succeed Serge Koussevitsky as the Boston Symphony conductor, and thus, in 1949, began his present career.

★ ★ ★

THIS CAREER has been one of brilliant success. In 1952 Dr. Munch took the orchestra on its first tour of Europe, and in 1956 his second tour included concerts in Moscow and Leningrad.

KROLL QUARTET——The ensemble will play chamber music Wednesday at the Berkshire Festiyal. From left: William Kroll, Louis Graeler, Avron Twedowsky, David Mankovitz.

MARGARET HARSHAW—The Metropolitan soprano will sing Wagner works Friday and Aug. 3 at Tanglewood.

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Wagner to Be Featured at Lenox

The music of Wagner will be featured during the coming weekend's trio of concerts by the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. This is the third week of Berkshire Festival programs by the full complement of the Bostonians in the 6,000-seat Music Shed. The festival closes Sunday, Aug. 10.

At Friday night's event, Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Harshaw will be soloist, singing the "Love Death" from "Tristan and Isolde" and Bruennhilde's "Immolation Scene" from "Die Goetterdaemmerung."

The prelude to "Die Meistersinger" and the "Siegfried Idyll," are also listed. In addition, Joseph de Pasquale, first violist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be heard in the initial Tanglewood performance of the viola concerto by Walter Piston.

Charles Munch, who will lead this concert, will also be on the podium for Saturday night's program in which pianist Leonard Pennario will be soloist in the Liszt First Piano Concerto in E Flat Major. Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8 is also scheduled. The Wagnerian fare will include Siegfried's Rhine journey from "Die Goetterdaemmerung."

Pierre Monteux Sunday

Pierre Monteux is the maestro for Sunday afternoon's all-Wagner Concert in which Miss Harshaw will again be soloist. She will sing Kundry's Air from "Parsifal" and Elsa's Dream from "Lohengrin," Senata's Ballad from "The Flying Dutchman," and "Dich Teure Halle" fron "Tannhaeuser."

In addition, the preludes to "Parsifal" and "Lohengrin" are scheduled plus "The Ride of The Valkyries" from "Die Walkuere."

MARGARET HARSHAW
As Bruennhilde

NEW HAVEN, CONN.
REGISTER
D. 94,453 S. 104,169
JUL 27 1958

Margaret Harshaw, world famous soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Charles Munch, directing, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Friday, and again with the orchestra under the baton of Pierre Monteux, next Sunday. Miss Harshaw will sing selected works of Richard Wagner.

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE WED. JULY 30 1958

Weekend Performances at Berkshire Festival to Feature Wagner's Music

Music of Wagner will be featured at the weekend programs of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass.

* * *

CHARLES MUNCH will conduct the programs on Friday and Saturday evenings and Pierre Monteux will conduct the Sunday afternoon program.

All evening programs at Tanglewood open at 8:30 o'clock and afternoon programs at 2:30 o'clock.

The Friday evening program will include the Prelude to "Die Meistersinger," Siegfried Idyll and the Prelude and Love-death from "Tristan and Isolde." Margaret Harshaw will sing the Love-death and will close the program in a performance of the "Immolation Scene" from "Gotterdammerung." Joseph de Pasquale, first violist of the Boston Symphony, will be soloist in the first Tanglewood performance of the Viola Concerto by Walter Piston. Piston wrote the concerto for de Pasquale and dedicated it to him. De Pasquale gave the work its first performance in Boston during the past season.

* * *

THE SATURDAY evening program will open with the Overture and Bacchanale from "Tannhauser." Leonard Pennario will be heard in the Liszt First Piano Concerto and after intermission Dr. Munch will conduct Vaughan Williams' Symphony number 8 for its first Tanglewood performance. The concert will close with Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Gotterdammerung."

The all-Wagner concert on Sunday afternoon will feature Margaret Harshaw, soprano, as soloist. Monteux' complete program includes the Prelude to "Parsifal," Air of Kundry from "Parsifal," Prelude to "Lohengrin," Elsa's Dream from "Lohengrin," Overture to "Rienzi," Overture to "The Flying Dutchman," Senta's Ballad from "The Flying Dutchman," Forest Murmurs from "Siegfried," "Dich, teure Halle" from "Tannhauser," and the Ride of the Valkyries from "Die Walkure."

* * *

THE SATURDAY morning open rehearsal at 10 a.m. will be devoted to preparation of the Saturday and Sunday Berkshire Festival concerts. Proceeds benefit the orchestra's pension fund.

The Kroll Quartet will present their chamber program this evening. Quartet members are William Kroli and Louis Graeler, violins; David Mankowitz, viola; and Avron Twerdowsky, cello. The program will include the Mozart Quartet in C major, K. 465; Easly Blackwood's String Quartet number 1; and the Brahms Quartet in C minor, opus 51, number 1.

[165]

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 53,178

JUL 26 1958

THE KNICKERBOCKER NEWS
Saturday
The Week's TV Programs
★ Radio ★ Books ★ Movies ★ Records ★ Music
Albany, N. Y., Saturday, July 26, 1958

CHARLES MUNCH:

Cool Nights and Sweet Sounds in Tanglewood's Music Shed

See B-12

Second Thoughts On Music

Boston Symphony Performs Major Works by Brahms

Fourth Symphony, First Piano Concerto, 'German' Reguiem Heard in Music Shed at Tanglewood; 'Petrouchka' Presented in Entirety

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 26—The Berkshire Festival really got under way last week with concerts starting in the big Shed. These first week-end concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra served to introduce regular conducter Dr. Charles Munch and the ever popular guest conductor Pierre Monteux.

The week-end concerts devoted to the music of Bach and Mozart, and the weekly chamber music concerts, bring to Tanglewood a distinguished audience of musicians However, it is those concerts in the Shed which draw to Tanglewood people from far and near. Indeed, the parking space here would be a mecca for collectors of license plates were they not well guarded, for there are plates from every state in the union and many from Canadian provinces.

Brahms and Copland

Johannes Brahms and Aaron Copland were the composers represented on the first Friday night program. Dr. Munch conducted a finely proportioned, rich-voiced performance of the "Serenade No. 1 in D major, Op. 11" by Brahms. The texture was opalescent and the phrasing rich in musicality. Brahms was also served well as Dr. Munch conducted his fourth symphony. This is a spacious work, capable of many interpretations, but Dr. Munch was wise in letting the music speak for itself. It was a less hurried performance than some which Dr. Munch has given us this season.

Aaron Copland wrote his "Variations for Orchestra" on commission from the Louisville Symphony Orchestra. He took his piano variations and orchestrated them. This is a massive piece of music without a moment of letup in its volume. It must be a percussionist's delight. The opening theme is enunciated in heroic style and is plainly heard throughout the piece. It is the sort of piece that the Boston Symphony men play magnificently.

Koussevitzky Memorial

Each year the orchestra plays a concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, its long-time conductor and founder of the Berkshire Festival. This year, the work chosen was the "German" Requiem by Brahms. It was an entirely appropriate work, and, as performed, a worthy memorial. The soloists were Hilda Gueden, making her first festival appearance, and Donald Gramm, bass. The Festival Chorus had been prepared by Hugh Ross.

The choruses are the glory of this work and the Festival Chorus sang them with enthusiasm and plentitude of tone. There have been better choruses in the past, but Mr. Ross can work miracles with any material. Miss Gueden sang beautifully and Mr. Gramm displayed his fine musicianship and knowledge of style, even though the music alloted him was not wholly congenial to his voice. More than 8000 people were on hand.

Last Sunday, Pierre Monteux took on his first conducting assignment. He is a prime favorite with the orchestra and audience and the reasons for this popularity are clear. At the age of 83, he conducts with the enthusiasm of a man much younger. The years have deepened his knowledge of his scores. One listended to a vigorous highly styled performance of the "Academic Festival Overture" by Brahms, one rich in detail and contrasts.

Fleisher's Debut

Leon Fleisher, one of the best of the young American pianists, made his first appearance at this festival playing Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 1 in D minor. He had played the work with Mr. Monteux before and a beautiful collaboration was the result. Fleisher has ample technique and a piano tone which never fails to sing. His playing has been more immaculate in the past, particularly in rapid passages, but the performance, on the whole, was one of understanding and brilliance.

The final work was one which Mr. Monteux has been associated with for many years. Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" received its debut performance in Paris in 1911 under his baton. We seldom hear the entire work in concert presentation, but Mr. Monteux chose to give it in its entirety. It was a wonderful vital and detailed performance, one which might well be called difinitive. Mr. Monteux conducts easily these days, but the climaxes are always there and one hears the orchestra at its best.

The New York Pro Musica

There was a distinguished audience on hand last Wednesday night to hear the New York Pro Musica musicians perform a program of the music of Flanders and Spain. Under the direction of Noah Greenberg one listened to performances which rang with authority. The 10 performers are both singers and instrumentalists, doubling in such instruments as recorders, treble viol, Portative organ and harpsicord. There was some fine singing, particularly by counter-tenor Russe Oberin, a true artist.

The Student Orchestra

Eleazar de Carvalho, the Brazilian coductor in charge of the student orchestra, has fine material this season. There are also some very clever student conductors as was revealed Tuesday night. Monsik Lim from Seoul, Korea, led the orchestra through a stimulating performance of Von Weber's overture to "Der Freischutz." Zubin Kehta provided excellent collaboration with Olga Kwasniak from Toronto, Can. during her performance of the Concerto in D minor for Violincello and Orchestra by Lalo. Miss Kwasniak revealed a large tone and ample technique.

A movement from Bruckner's Symphony No. 9 in D minor was conducted by Thomas Griswold of Williamstown. It was evident that Mr. Griswold is a profound student. He knew just what he was doing all the time and was able to communicate his wishes to the players. It would have been interesting to hear him conduct less demanding work at this time.

Sibelius Festival Taped From Canada

New York, July 26 — The cordial relations which prevail between CBS and CBC (Canadian Broadcasting Corporation) made it possible for a listener to enjoy a portion of this year's Sibelius Festival in Helsinki under conditions far more pictureque than those which prevail on the shores of the Gulf of Finland. That is to say, high in the Canadian Rockies overlooking the Bow River Valley, where it was being dispensed by radio from a tape recording made by Jim Fassett some weeks ago.

Paul Kletzki's performances of the fourth and seventh symphonies seemed as germane to the fir-covered Rockies as they are to the pine forests of Finland, at least to the point in the seventh when the broadcast was curtailed because of atmospheric disturbances between Winnipeg (the local relay point) and the home station in Toronto. I. K.

10 Top Records

(Selected from a poll of listening audiences)

Popular

"Purple People Eater," Sheb Wooley (M-G-M).

"Secretly," Jimmie Rodgers (Roulette).

"All I Have to Do Is Dream," Everly Bros. (Cadence).

"Patricia," Perez Prado (RCA Victor).

"Return to Me," Dean Martin (Capitol).

Classical

Concerto No. 1 (Tchaikovsky), Van Cliburn, piano (RCA Victor).

"Andrea Chenier," R. Tebaldi-M. Del Monaco (London).

"Rumanian Rhapsody No. 2 (Enesco), etc., E. Ormandy-Phila. Orch. (Columbia).

"Medea" (Cherubini), M. Callas-T. Serafin (Mercury).

"Music of the Strausses," F. Slatkin-Hollywood Bowl Orch. (Capitol).

SEE WHAT YOU'RE MISSING!
SEE THE WHOLE SHOW IN "LIVING COLOR" by RCA VICTOR TV
You Are Invited To View The Following Shows At Our Store —
— MONDAY —
12:30 - 1 P.M. It Could Be You
2:30 - 3 P. M. Haggis Baggis
7:30 - 8 P.M. Haggis Baggis
— TUESDAY —
12:30 - 1 P.M. It Could Be You
2:30 - 3 P.M. Haggis Baggis
8 - 9 P.M. The Investigator
— WEDNESDAY —
12:30 - P.M. It Could Be You
2:30 - 3 P.M. Haggis Baggis
9 - 10 P.M. Kraft Mystery Theatre
VACATION SPECIAL! 17" RCA Victor Port. T.V. Black & White 169.95
ONE STOP! ONE PRICE!
HOLLAND TV
159 Boston Rd.
RE 2-0988
RE 2-4629
Open Daily Till 10 P.M.

Featured Artists at Tanglewood This Week

MARGARET HARSHAW

ZINO FRANCESCATTI

JOSEPH DePASQUALE

DYER - BENNET ON TODAY'S PROGRAM AT FALLS VILLAGE

Folk Singer and Natasha Magg Will Appear With Quartet

Falls Village, Conn., July 26—Richard Dyer-Bennet, renowned folk singer and Natasha Magg, pianist, will be the assisting artists with the Berskhire qurtet in the fifth concert of the 29 season of chamber music concerts at Music Mountain here tomorrow at 4 p. m. The program yill include the Quartet in D major, Opus 18, No. 3, by Beethoven; the Scottish and Irish songs for piano, violin and cello by Beethoven; the Quartet in E flat major Opus 51, by vorak; and a group of songs by Dyer-Bennet to his guitar accompaniment.

Pianist Next Week

The program for the sixth concert on Sunday, Aug. 3, will present Walter Bricht pianist, in a program which will include the Quartet in G major, K 387 by Mozrt; the Piano Quartet in E flat major, Opus 47, by Schumann, and the Quartet "Voces intimae" by Sibelius.

Assisting artists for the remaining concerts will include John Barrows, French horn, and Janna Dawson, pianist, in the Horn Trio in E flat major, Opus 40, by Brahms on Aug. 10; Natasha Magg, pianist, and Fritz Magg, cellist of the Berkshire Quartet, in the Sonata for cello and piano in A major, Opus 69, by Beethoven and the Piano Trio in E flat major, Opus 100, by Schubert on Aug. 17; Frederick Baldwin, pianist, in the Piano Quintet No. 1 by Bloch on Aug. 24; and Frank Glazer, pianist, in the Piano Quintet in F minor, Opus 34, on Aug. 31.

TRINITY CARILLON RECITAL TUESDAY

The third in the series of the carillon recitals at Trinity Methodist Church on Sumner Ave. will be held Tuesday evening at 7.30. The musician will be Robert Donnell, dominion carillonneur of the houses of parliament, Ottawa, Can. The program will consist of numbers by such noted composers as J. S. Bach, J. Strauss, J. Offenbach and others.

One of the best places to hear these recitals is from the park area in the rear of the church where benches are provided.

The fourth recital will be held on Tuesday evening, Aug. 19, at 7.30 p. m. The guest artist is the noted carillonneur, Wendell Prescott of Michigan State University.

Mr. Donnell's program:

Carillon Prelude
Sheep May Safely Graze	J. S. Bach
Toccata	G. Frescobaldi
Two American Folk Songs
(a) Young Charlotte
(b) Stars of the Summer Night
Die Fledermaus - Waltzes	J. Strauss
Suite for Carillon (Prelude, Folk Song, Ballad, Flemish Dance)	G. Nees
Tales of Hoffman—Barcarolle	J. Offenbach
Lento	E. Tinel
La Legere	J. H. Fiocco
Hymn Tunes
(a) Wiltshire; Through All the Changing Scenes;
(b) Vesper Hymn; Saviour, Breathe an Evening Blessing

Hyannis, July 26—The Cape Cod Conservatory of Music and Arts closes its 1958 summer season concert program with Sophia Delza in a program of Chinese dances Aug. 10th. A concert Aug. 17 will include Mrs. Truman Fassett, cellist, Carleton Sprague Smith, flutist, and Ralph Lawton, pianist.

Tanglewood Topics

Dr. Dardo Cuneo, press secretary and special envoy to President Frondizi of Argentina, spent a Sunday at Tanglewood recently. He attended a festival concert conducted by Pierre Monteux and afterwards met Mr. Monteaux and the piano soloist, Leon Fleisher. He also spoke with three Argentine students who are attending the Berkshire Music Center this summer: Efrain Guigui, clarinet, Gerardo Levy, flutist, and Mario Davidovsky, composer.

Dr. Dardo Cuneo, who is visiting the United States as a guest of the State Department, expressed the thanks of the Argentine government for the help of the Berkshire Music Center in furthering musical exchanges between this country and Argentina, to Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the school's founder.

* * *

George Phillips, in charge of the Tanglewood cafeteria, is celebrating the recent birth of his first child, a daughter. Mr. Phillips, who in winter is in charge of the catering for the Trinity Pawling School in Pawling, N. Y., feeds some 600 students and staff members each day and approximately 8000 people each week end. He provides a variety of box lunches which are enjoyed of each of their rehearsals. The cafeteria and picnic-style on the surrounding lawns. The cafeteria is open at 6 p. m. before evening concerts and at noon on Sundays.

* * *

Two sons of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra are students this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, both playing in the student orchestra. Everett Beale, son of Minot Beale of the violin section, is a percussionist and James Freeman follows in the footsteps of his father, Henry Freeman, as a performer on the double bass.

Howard Burkat, son of Leonard Burkat, administrator of the Berkshire Music Center, sang in the Festival Chorus in last week's performance of the Brahms "Requiem," and Rodney Perry, son of Thomas D. Perry, Jr., manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has been entrusted with the important job of "coffee boy" for the orchestra, supplying coffee and doughnuts for orchestra members during the intermission of each of ther rehearsals. The Boston Symphony is one of the only orchestras that observes this pleasant custom of a players "coffee break."

* * *

Students from 17 foreign countries are attending the 16th session of the Berkshire Music Center this summer. Among these is Wadad Mouzannar from Beirut, Lebanon. Miss Mouzannar learned about the school from its director, Dr. Munch, and Leonard Burkat, Administrator, during their visit to Lebanon last year for Dr. Munch's conducting engagements at the Baalbeck Festival. She is a pianist and is visiting this country under the auspices of the State Department program for International Education leader and specialist exchange.

* * *

Several newly married students studying this year at Tanglewood originally met there in previous years. Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Schwartz of Shaker Heights, O., met in the Tanglewood Study Group last summer and have returned to spend two weeks again this year. Alfred Troppe of Miami, Fla., has returned with his wife whom he met in the Berkshires last year. He plays clarinet in the student orchestra. Also newly married are Harold Farberman, percussionist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Corinne Curry, soprano. Mrs. Farberman is this summer one of the Fromm Foundation Fellows who are working in contemporary music at the school.

* * *

Leonard Pennario, young American pianist, who will appear at the Berkshire Festival on Saturday evening in a performance of Liszt's Piano Concerto No. 1, finds an antidote to performing music in writing it and has published many pieces for the piano. He was a student of composition at the Berkshire Music Center some years ago.

* * *

Margaret Harshaw, soprano, will perform a total of six Wagnerian selections during the two concerts devoted to music of this composer next Friday evening and Sunday afternoon. Miss Harshaw comes to Tanglewood directly from a performance of "Die Walkure" at the Denver Red Rocks Festival, where she appeared for the second summer in this spectacular outdoor setting against the mammoth rocks of the Colorado mountains.

RECORD ROUNDUP

Classical

"John Sebastian Plays Bach." This title may seem devised for the purpose of sounding pat, but the fact is that John Sebastian is both a brilliant harmonica player and a sensitive student of Bach. His performance of two Bach flute sonatas with piano (B minor and E flat) and an unaccompied one in A minor are fluent, deft and always understanding. (Columbia.)

Sonatas (Bartok, Hindemith). Wolfgang Schneiderhan, violinist, joins to the Bartok No. 2 and the Hindemith Sonata in C the Duo Concertant of Stravinsky. Each work is strongly representative of the composer under consideration, and very well served by Schneiderhan and pianist Carl Seemann. (Decca.)

"Pictures at an Exhibition." The latest version—and one of the most brilliantly reproduced—of the Ravel transcription of Mussorgsky's piano pieces, with Fritz Reiner conducting the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. The "effects," to me, often usurp the place rightfully occupied by the music. (RCA Victor.)

"Hines in Recital." Jerome Hines runs the bassist's gamut from "On the Road to Mandalay" to "Jonah and the Whale," with a scholarly detour on behalf of Beethoven's setting of the "Song of the Flea," as well as the more familiar one of Mussorgsky. (London.)

I. K.

(Copyright 1958, the Saturday Review)

To Play at Tanglewood Wednesday

The Kroll Quartet, which will appear at Tanglewood Wednesday in the fifth of the regular Wednesday series of chamber music concerts in the Theater at 8.30. Originally the Coolidge Quartet, named for Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, this distinguished group has been prominent in the performance of chamber music for more than two decades. In 1945 the ensemble adopted the name of its renowned leader, William Kroll, a member, of the faculty of the Department of Chamber Music of the Berkshire Music Center.

TOP PRODUCTION BY OPERA GROUP DUE NEXT WEEK

Rossini's 'Count Ory' Will Be Presented On Aug. 4 and 5

Lenox, July 26—The major production of the season for the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department will be Rossini's "Count Ory," which will receive two performances in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 4 and 5. The English version by Robert A. Simon was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music for the Juilliard Opera Theater and has been released to the Berkshire Music Center for performance here.

The case of the opera, which will be under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department, includes John McCollum (Count Ory); Angelica Lazada (Countess Fourmoutiers); Nancy Williams (Isolier, the Page); Doeris Okerson (Ragonda); David Smith (Raimbaud); Ronald Holgate (Tutor).

Morris Conductor

The opera will be conducted by Wyn Morris of Llanelly, South Wales. Winner last year of the Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship, awarded to an outstanding student conductor, he has studied during the season just past with George Szell, conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra.

The scenery for the opera will consist of a fibreglass shell on which 15 projectors, behind the shell, will produce the different effects needed. Designed by Dr. Eelmer Nagy, of the Hartt College of Music in Hartford, and the Berkshire Music Center faculty, the scenery is part of the program undertaken with the cooperation of the New England Opera Theater and a grant from the Ford Foundation for the development of new scenic materials.

The comic opera "Count Ory" was the first of two French operas written by Rossini for the Paris Opera, where it was first performed in 1828. The text was by A. E. Scribe with the collaboration of C. G. Delestre-Poirson. The opera was revived in Paris in 1926 and performed in Turin in Italian in 1930. It has recently been performed by the Glyndebourne Opera Co. in England.

DEERFIELD CONCERT IS THIRD OF SERIES

Deerfield, July 26—The third of this summer's Memorial Hall series of Sunday afternoon concerts will take place in Memorial Hall, Deerfield, tomorrow at 4 p. m. Participants in the concert will be Frederick Hyde, harsichord, William McClelland, flute, Robin Stone, violin and piano, and Kenneth Josephson, cello.

The program will consist of solo and ensemble selections from the works of Quantz, Handel, Scarlatti, Vivaldi, Haydn, Rameau, Chopin and Milhaud.

Sweden, alarmed by the shortage of physicians in that country, is inviting doctors of other countries to practice there.

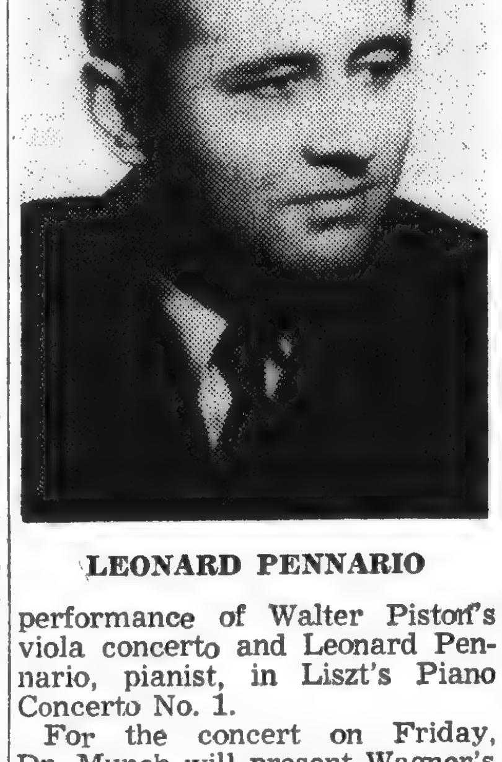
Zino Francescatti Soloist At Tanglewood Shed Today

Famed Violinist to Play Tchaikowsky Concerto; Works by Bartok and Ravel On Program; Music of Wagner Featured This Week

Today's concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood at 2.30 p. m. will be conducted by the orchestra's music director, Charles Munch. Zino Francescatti, the French violinist, will appear as soloist in Tchaikovsky's violin concerto. Dr. Munch opens his program with Bartok's "Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta" and the second suite from "Daphnis and Chloe" by Ravel.

Wagner Programs

The third week end of Berkshire Festival concerts by the orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, on Friday and Saturday evenings (Aug. 1-2) and Sunday afternoon (Aug. 3) will feature the music of Richard Wagner. Concerts will be conducted by Dr. Munch and Pierre Monteux and soloists will include Margaret Harshaw, soprano, who will sing a number of selections from Wagner operas; Joseph de Pasquale, violist, in a performance of Walter Piston's viola concerto and Leonard Pennario, pianist, in Liszt's Piano Concerto No. 1.



LEONARD PENNARIO

For the concert on Friday, Dr. Munch will present Wagner's Prelude to "Die Meistersinger", "Siegfried Idyll," and Prelude and "Love-death" from "Tristan and Isolde." Margaret Harshaw will sing the "Love-death" and will close the program in a performance of the "Immolation Scene," the finale of the opera "Gotterdammerung."

Joseph de Pasquale, first violist of the Boston Symphony, will be soloist in the first Tanglewood performance of the viola concerto by Walter Piston. Piston wrote the concerto for De Pasquale and dedicated it to him, and the latter gave the work its first performance in Boston during the season just past.

Pennario Soloist

Dr. Munch will open the program of Saturday with Wagner's Overture and "Bacchanale" from "Tannhauser." Leonard Pennario, pianist, will be heard in the Liszt first piano concerto. Following the intermission Dr. Munch wil conduct Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8, which will also be receiving its first Tanglewood performance. The concert will close with "Siegfried's Rhine Journey" from "Gotterdammerung."

Piere Monteux will conduct an all-Wagner concert on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 3 at 2.30 with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, as soloist. His complete program is as follows: Prulude to "Parsifal", "Air of Kundry" from "Parsifal" (Miss Harshaw), prelude to "Lohengrin", Elsa's Dream from "Lohengrin" (Miss Harshaw), Overture to "Rienzi," Overture to "The Flying Dutchman," "Senta's Ballad" from "The Flying Dutchman" (Miss Harshaw), "Forest Murmurs" from "Siegfried," "Dich, teure Halle" from "Tannhauser" and "The Ride of the Valkyries" from "Die Walkure."

The open rehearsal of Saturday morning will be devoted to the preparation of the Saturday and Sunday Berkshire Festival concertssss. Admission of $1 is donated to the Orchetra's Pension Fund.

Kroll Quartet

The fifth in the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts for the benefit of the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund will be held Wednesday at 8.30 p. m. in the Theater Concert Hall. The popular Kroll Quartet, headed by William Kroll, violinist and member of the Chamber Music faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will be heard in a program including Mozart's Quartet in C major, K. 465, Easly Blaackwood's String Quartet No. 1 and Brahms' Quartet in C minor, Op. 51, No. 1.

Members of the Kroll Quartet in addition to William Kroll are Louis Graeler, violin, David Mankovitz, viola, and Avron Twerdowsky, cello.

Berkshire Music Center events open to Friends will take place each day of this month to last week of the Tanglewood season. Tomorrow evening (Monday) the scenes from Puccini's "La Rondine," Verdi's "Aida" and "La Traviata." Tuesday evening the Tanglewood Choir will be heard, at 8.30, both concerts to be presented in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Wednesday afternoon at 3.15 in the Chamber Music Hall Hugh Ross, head of the Department of Choral Music will give a lecture, and Thursday, evening at 8.30 in the Music Shed the Student Orchestra presents its weekly concert.

Friday afternoon at 3.15, the fifth program of the Seminar in Contemporary Muic will feature Lukas Foss speaking on his own muic and that of Leon Kirchner. Work of both composers will be performed by Fromm Fellowship players. More detailed information may be obtained fromn the Friends Office at Tanglewood.

WEEK'S PROGRAMS AT TANGLEWOOD

Programs for the week at Tanglewood are as follows:—

TODAY, 2.30 P. M.
Boston Symphony Orchestra, Music Shed
Charles Munch, conductor
Music for Strings, Percussion & Celesta .... Bartok
"Daphnis and Chloe," second suite .... Ravel
Violin Concerto .... Tchaikowsky
Zino Francescatti, soloist

WEDNESDAY, JULY 30, 8.30 P. M.
Chamber Music by the Kroll Quartet
Quartet in C major, K. 465 .... Mozart
Quartet No. 1 .... Blakwood
Quartet No. 1 in C minor, Op. 51, No. 1 .... Brahms

FRIDAY, AUG. 1, 8.30 P. M.
Boston Symphony Orchestra, Music Shed
Charles Munch, conductor
Prelude to "Die Meistersinger" .... Wagner
"Siegfried" Idyll .... Wagner
Prelude and "Love Death," "Tristan and Isolde" .... Wagner
Violin Concerto .... Piston
Immolation Scene, "Gotterdammerung" .... Wagner
Margaret Henshaw, soprano
Joseph De Pasquale, viola

SATURDAY, AUG. 2, 8.30 P. M.
Boston Symphony Orchestra, Music Shed
Charles Munch, conductor
Overture and Bacchanale, "Tannhauser" .... Wagner
Piano Concerto No. 1 in E flat ... Liszt
Leonard Pennario, soloist
Symphony No. 8 .... Vaughan Williams
"Siegfried's Rhine Journey" .... Wagner

BINGO AT HOME
Get In The Game
ANYONE PLAYS
FULL DETAILS ON AIR
MON. THRU FRI. 1-2 P.M.
WHYN-TV, CH. 40
MANY PRIZES DAILY

REDUCTION

RATIO

18x

2.5 mm

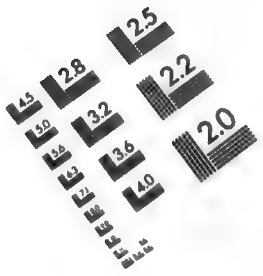
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

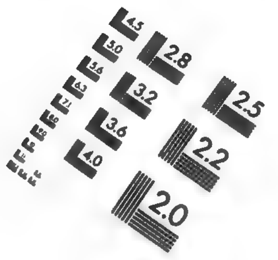
2.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

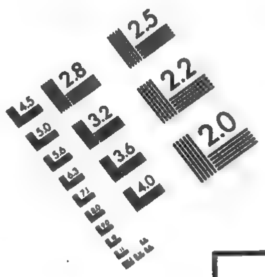
1.5 mm

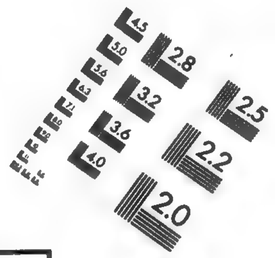
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

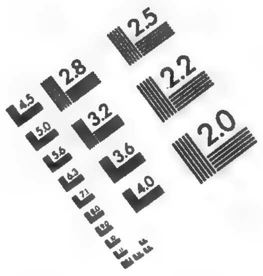


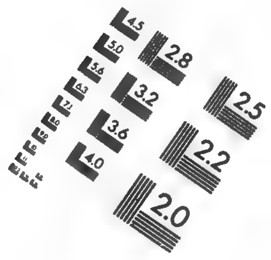


PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC





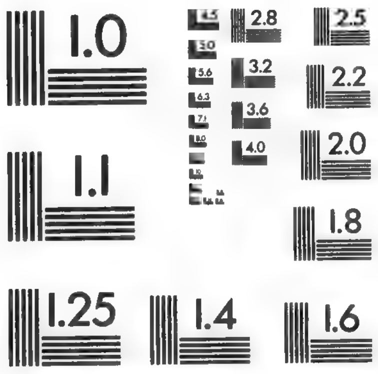




200 mm

150 mm

100 mm



ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

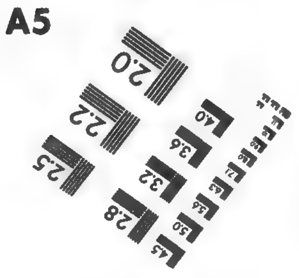
1.0 mm

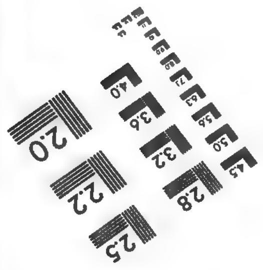
1.5 mm

2.0 mm

2.5 mm

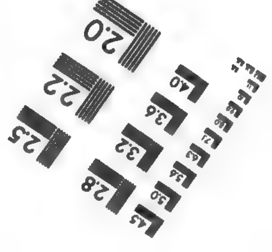
A5

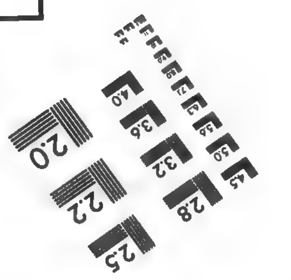




A4

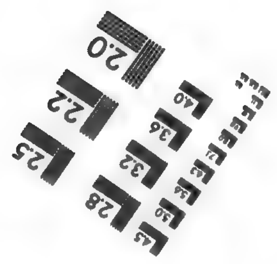
A3





PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119



ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

4.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.0 mm

Best Weather of the Season Greets Weekend at Tanglewood

Manos

Pierre Monteux, guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, shown here during a performance of Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony with the BSO, will return to the podium tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 to conduct the all-Wagner concert. He will also appear again with orchestra Aug. 9.

TANGLEWOOD — The best weather of the 1958 Berkshire Festival weekend greeted the fifth and next to last weekend of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed. Last night's concert of the BSO, with Dr. Charles Munch conducting featured two soloists, Margaret Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera soprano, and Joseph de Pasquale, violist, who is first violist in the orchestra. A crowd of more than 6,300 attended.

First Performance

Tonight at 8:30 Dr. Munch will return to the podium, conducting the Boston Symphony in Wagner's Overture and Bacchanale from "Tannhauser." Leonard Pennario, pianist, will be heard in the Liszt First Piano Concerto. Following the intermission, Dr. Munch will conduct Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8, which will also be receiving its first Tanglewood performance. The concert will close with Siegfried's Rhine [illegible] "Gotterdammerung."

Pierre Monteux will conduct an all-Wagner concert tomorrow afternoon at 2:30, with Margaret Harshaw as soloist. His complete program follows: Prelude to "Parsifal," Air of Kundry from "Parsifal" (Miss Harshaw), Prelude to "Lohengrin," Elsa's Dream from "Lohengrin" (Miss Harshaw), Overture to "Rienzi," Overture to "The Flying Dutchman," Senta's Ballad from "The Flying Dutchman" (Miss Harshaw), Forest Murmurs from "Siegfried," "Dich, teure Halle" from "Tannhauser" and "The Ride of the Valkyries" from "Die Walkure."

The last in the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts for the benefit of the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund will be held on Wednesday at 8:30 in the theater concert hall. The Kroll Quartet, headed by William Kroll, violinist and member of the Chamber Music faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will be heard. Members [illegible] viola, and Avron Twerdowsky, cello.

Music Review

Program of Wagner, Piston Called Tanglewood Triumph

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE MUSIC of Richard Wagner is the predominant part of the three programs of this next-to-the-last weekend at Tanglewood. The Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch played the first program last night. Soprano Margaret Harshaw was the soloist in two of her most impressive Wagnerian roles, Isolde and Brunhilde. The sole departure of the evening from Wagner was the performance of Walter Piston's new viola concerto with Joseph de Pasquale as soloist.

Piston was in the audience and was called to the stage at the completion of the concerto to share the applause with De Pasquale and the orchestra. Its initial performance was only four months ago in Boston, where it also was played by the Boston orchestra's solo violist, to whom the concerto is dedicated.

* * *

IT HAS NEVER been possible to analyze inspiration and thus to determine how much of a composition is out of the air, or the mind or the heart, or out of diligent application to one's task. Piston's wisdom in the fortification of the viola's best tonal areas is a large factor in the first good impression the work makes. He has given the instrument, particularly in the first two of the three movements, most of its long lines below the chanterelle, in the most graceful and luscious parts of a viola and certainly ones where De Pasquale is most eloquent.

Except for the vigor and gaiety of the last movement, it is a lyric piece. The orchestra, kept well in the background by Munch, allowed the soloist to enjoy the spotlight while still a part of the larger ensemble. De Pasquale's tone and true intonation in the far-from-conventional double stops, and, again, in the cadenza of the finale, were high-lights of a fine performance.

* * *

IS THERE a more lasting birthday present in the world than the "Idyll" which Wagner wrote for his wife Cosima? The orchestra which Munch directed last night was a bit different in size from the select little band Wagner assembled on the stairs of his villa at Lucerne on Christmas morning in 1871. But it is a tribute to the Boston orchestra and its conductor to note that the performance had a fervor which the audience appreciated almost as much as the lady at the top of the stairs of Tribschen.

The prelude to "Die Meistersinger von Nuernberg" opened the evening. Munch kept asking for more and more from his men. The Boston orchestra's "all" is quite a massive response and the tremendous chords of the noble march alternated with the more gentle motifs in as colorful a performance as one needs to hear on this planet.

The singing of Miss Harshaw above the passion-filled pages of the orchestral background was the most telling part of the evening. She needs no operatic costume to portray the heroic characters of Wagner's dramas. Her regal posture and stature and imperturbable attitude are stage-settings before a note is sounded, and when she allows her easy-but-powerful and majestic voice to be heard her domination is both vocal and graphic.

* * *

THE GREAT Boston orchestra was at its most expressive last night. The sighing arch which the celli play at the beginning of the Prelude which preceded Miss Harshaw's singing of the Liebestod from "Tristan and Isolde" was a miniature but mighty detail of the orchestra's magnificence during the whole program. Miss Harshaw achieved her memorable success entirely vocally, for she makes no emotional display and stands with immobile majestic dignity.

The formidable intensity of her grief was a supreme demonstration of her art and Munch drew the orchestral narrative with a vivid brush.

Again in the "Immolation Scene" from "The Twilight of the Gods" there was a sense of overwhelming tragedy and sublime sacrifice. The prodigious culmination and climax of Wagner's vast "Ring" could not have been communicated much more expressively in an opera house than Miss Harshaw and the orchestra conveyed with such triumphal glory.

Music: Mostly Wagner

His Works Highlight Lenox Week-End

By EDWARD DOWNES
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 1—Perfect weather, a clear, sunny afternoon and a cool evening blessed refugees from the heat of New York and music lovers from all over, who gathered here for the next to last week-end of the Berkshire Festival.

This week-end is to be devoted largely to Richard Wagner, with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, as the principal soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch. Tonight's concert consisted entirely of Wagner except for one work, which seemed to have nothing whatever to do with the rest of the program.

Margaret Harshaw

This was the new Viola Concerto of Walter Piston, which was introduced to Boston and New York audiences last spring by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The concerto was sandwiched in between the Prelude and Love-Death from "Tristan und Isolde" and the Immolation scene from "Goetterdaemmerung."

On paper Mr. Piston's gracious little work looked fair to be crushed between the two collossal Wagnerian climaxes.

•

The event turned out quite differently. It was the concerto and its superb performance that brought down the house with cheers, excited applause and many recalls for the soloist, Joseph de Pasquale; Dr. Munch and Mr. Piston, who seemed obviously delighted by the roars of enthusiasm.

The composer had every reason to be pleased. Mr. de Pasquale, for whom he wrote the concerto, played with such musicianly finish and, especially in the slow movement, with such ingratiating tenderness and warmth that one could hardly fail to respond to what may be one of Mr. Piston's most beautiful and moving inspirations. Dr. Munch, too, seemed clearly absorbed in his task, an alert and appreciative conductor.

In the Wagner works, which included the prelude to "Die Meistersinger" and "A Siegfried Idyll" as well as the "Tristan" and "Goetterdaemmerung" excerpts, he was less happy. There even were poor orchestral balances in the "Meistersinger" prelude, overpowering timpani and brasses for example.

•

But aside from such technical details, Dr. Munch gave the impression of one not overfond of or particularly excited by these works. He emphasized especially the more obvious sides of the music, which is one way in which Wagner needs no help. The subtler moments came off less well.

Miss Harshaw's interpretations of the final scenes of "Tristan" and the "Goetterdaemmerung" are familiar to New York audiences from her impersonations of Isolde and Bruennhilde at the Metropolitan Opera. She was not in her best voice tonight, and one felt, particularly in the "Goetterdaemmerung" scene, that she had to fight to make herself heard over the big climaxes of the great orchestra on stage behind her. But she sang with dignity and assurance, and she was warmly applauded.

Sunday-Aug 4

FINAL WAGNER PROGRAM HEARD AT TANGLEWOOD

Margaret Harshaw Again Soloist With Monteux As Conductor

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX — Pierre Monteux, soprano Margaret Harshaw and the Boston Symphony Orchestra shared honors on the all-Wagner program given Sunday afternoon in the shed. During the week end we have had a cross section of the works of Wagner under the direction of Charles Munch and Mr. Monteux. Miss Harshaw has been soloist on both occasions.

Dignity and Splendor

Proceedings Sunday afternoon started off with a fine performance of the prelude to "Parsifal." What wonderful music this is, with its motifs of love, faith and hope. Mr. Monteux gave the music that dignity, splendor and even the humility which is within it. Following the prelude, Miss Harshaw sang Kundry's great air, "Ich Sah Das Kind." The soprano was not in her best voice at the opening, the lower notes and those of the middle register sounded breathy, but she poured out some thrilling top notes. The interpretation had little color or contrast.

Wagner's prelude to "Lohengrin" is one of the loveliest bits of music he has written. Under Mr. Monteux's easy, deft direction the orchestral tone was

See FINAL WAGNER
Page Seven

Final Wagner

Continued From Page 1

transparent, crystal clear and the details were meticulously met. Miss Harshaw's singing of "Elsa's dream" differed little from her pronouncement of the aria from "Parsifal." The feeling of ecstasy was there in a limited degree. One felt that she was never wholly at ease. The audience was very cordial and she returned to the stage several times, twice with Mr. Monteux, towering over the little Frenchman to the delight of the audience.

Most Exciting Moment

The really exciting moments of the first portion of the program came during the performance of the overture to "Rienzi." This was a spacious, vibrant performance such as Monteux can summon on occasion.

The second portion of the program was of the same format as the opening portion. The dark hued overture to "The Flying Dutchman" was provided a penetrating, zestful reading and Miss Harshaw's utterance of "Senta's ballad" almost reach the exciting stage. The voice was warm and often colored expressively. It is no small task to sing four great Wagnerian arias, but there must have been an added inspiration in singing them to the accompaniment of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Mr. Monteux provided a beautiful tapestry of tone as the forest murmurs from "Siegfried" were unfolded. One can find within this music practically anything one wishes. It remained for the Dich Teure Halle from "Tannhauser" to witness Miss Harshaw at her best.

Audience Enthusiastic

It was a performance marked by vocal [illegible] and interpretive depth. The audience, which had seemed a bit [illegible] of so much monumental music, waxed really enthusiastic and was ready for the tremendous performance of the ride of the Valkyries from "Die Walkure" which closed the program.

Wagner has had his day at Tanglewood and was well served. An estimated 6866 persons heard this concert. The total attendance of the three shed concerts this past week end was 21,946. Where are the audiences? The weather has been favorable during the three concerts and the music has been great. What do people want?

NGFIELD, MASS., SATURDAY, AUGUST 2, 1958

WAGNER, PISTON WORKS OFFERED AT TANGLEWOOD

Margaret Harshaw, Joseph De Pasquale Soloists In Lenox

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX, Tanglewood—The music of Richard Wagner and Walter Piston was featured on the program Friday night by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch. To add splendor to the occasion there was Margaret Harshaw, a dramatic soprano in the true Wagnerian tradition, and violist Joseph De Pasquale who was soloist in the "Concerto for Viola and Orchestra" by Walter Piston, a work dedicated to him by the composer.

Prelude Opens Program

The program opened with a spacious performance of the prelude to "Die Meistersinger von Nurmburg." It was a brilliant performance, powerful and yet finely contrasted. What was large was very large, but Mr. Munch made the most of the numerous opportunities for contrast and did not eliminate or gloss over the humor.

Wagner's "A Siegfried Idyll" is a work of great charm, one of the most gracious he ever wrote. A birthday present to Cosima Wagner, and a surprise, there is within this work a deep personal devotion expressed through glorious music. This music came from the heart of the composer. It was played with real insight into its mood and realization of its depth of feeling.

To this listener, there is a little music more beautiful than that within "Tristan and Isolde." Mr. Munch offered the prelude and "love-death" from this opera, with Margaret Harshaw as soloist in the "love-death."

In Excellent Voice

The soprano was in excellent voice and was able to cut through the torrents of tone from the orchestra. Indeed, she sang every note, rather than declaiming them, as is often the case. The prelude is a thing of poignant beauty, a work of limitless breadth and depth. Mr. Munch was particularly eloquent in his perusal of the prelude and the sounds which came from the orchestra were wonderful to hear.

Walter Piston wrote his "Concerto for Viola and Orchestra" for the Boston Symphony Orchestra and dedicated it to the first violist, Joseph De Pasquale, who played the first performance in Boston in March of this year. The work is written with all the craftsmanship of this fine American composer. It undertakes to explore all the possibilities of the viola in melodic expressivity as well as technical agility throughout its range. However, it is more than a showpiece. Its purely musical ideas and their development in a formal design remain predominant. The orchestra is always a collaborating partner.

Mr. De Pasquale's great gifts and musicianship were at the service of this music and one heard a performance rich in tone and technically flawless.

Mr. Piston has individual ideas about melody and they are usually effective. He was well served by Mr. Munch, Mr. De Pasquale and the orchestra.

Listening to the Immolation scene from Wagner's "Die Gotterdamerung," we are often tempted to write that there is no more effective music for voice and orchestra. Margaret Harshaw sang it magnificently and the orchestra sounded inspired.

The music runs the gamut of emotion. Lofty passion, devotion and the will to die are in it and the voice must be an instrument. We have seldom heard Miss Harshaw sing with such freedom and brilliance and depth of understanding. Mr. Munch provided fine collaboration.

An estimated 6310 persons attended the concert. It is expected that the audiences Saturday and Sunday will be much larger if the weather continues as fine as it has been.

Boston
Wagner,

By Francis D. Pe

LENOX, Mass., Aug
Boston Symphony Orch gan the largely W semifinal week end of shire Festival last ni
6,310 persons heard Harshaw as soprano so the musicians under Munch's direction in bestod from "Tristan olde" and the Immolat from "Goetterdaem
The American wor shared the progra
Wagner was Walter viola concerto with Pasquale as the solois

Mr. Piston's concer was introduced to B
New York last sea genuinely fervent app
the orchestra's tale violist called the co
the stage to share in onstration.

Opportunity for Vi

Mr. Piston's anno was to set melodic and es and he h this with ghness. The rous opportun his technical
r. Piston alw ola as a prim strument while the wide span of which it can produc

His score is also ha blending of the viola small combinations instruments or with orchestra.

With the instrume
ity and balance Mr. provided appealing treated melodic ideas lyric line of the a particularly engagin first movement als poetically meditativ phere.

Here a slightly gr
matic contrast would an added asset.
finale had such co
seemed more conven
the rest of this we distinguished work.

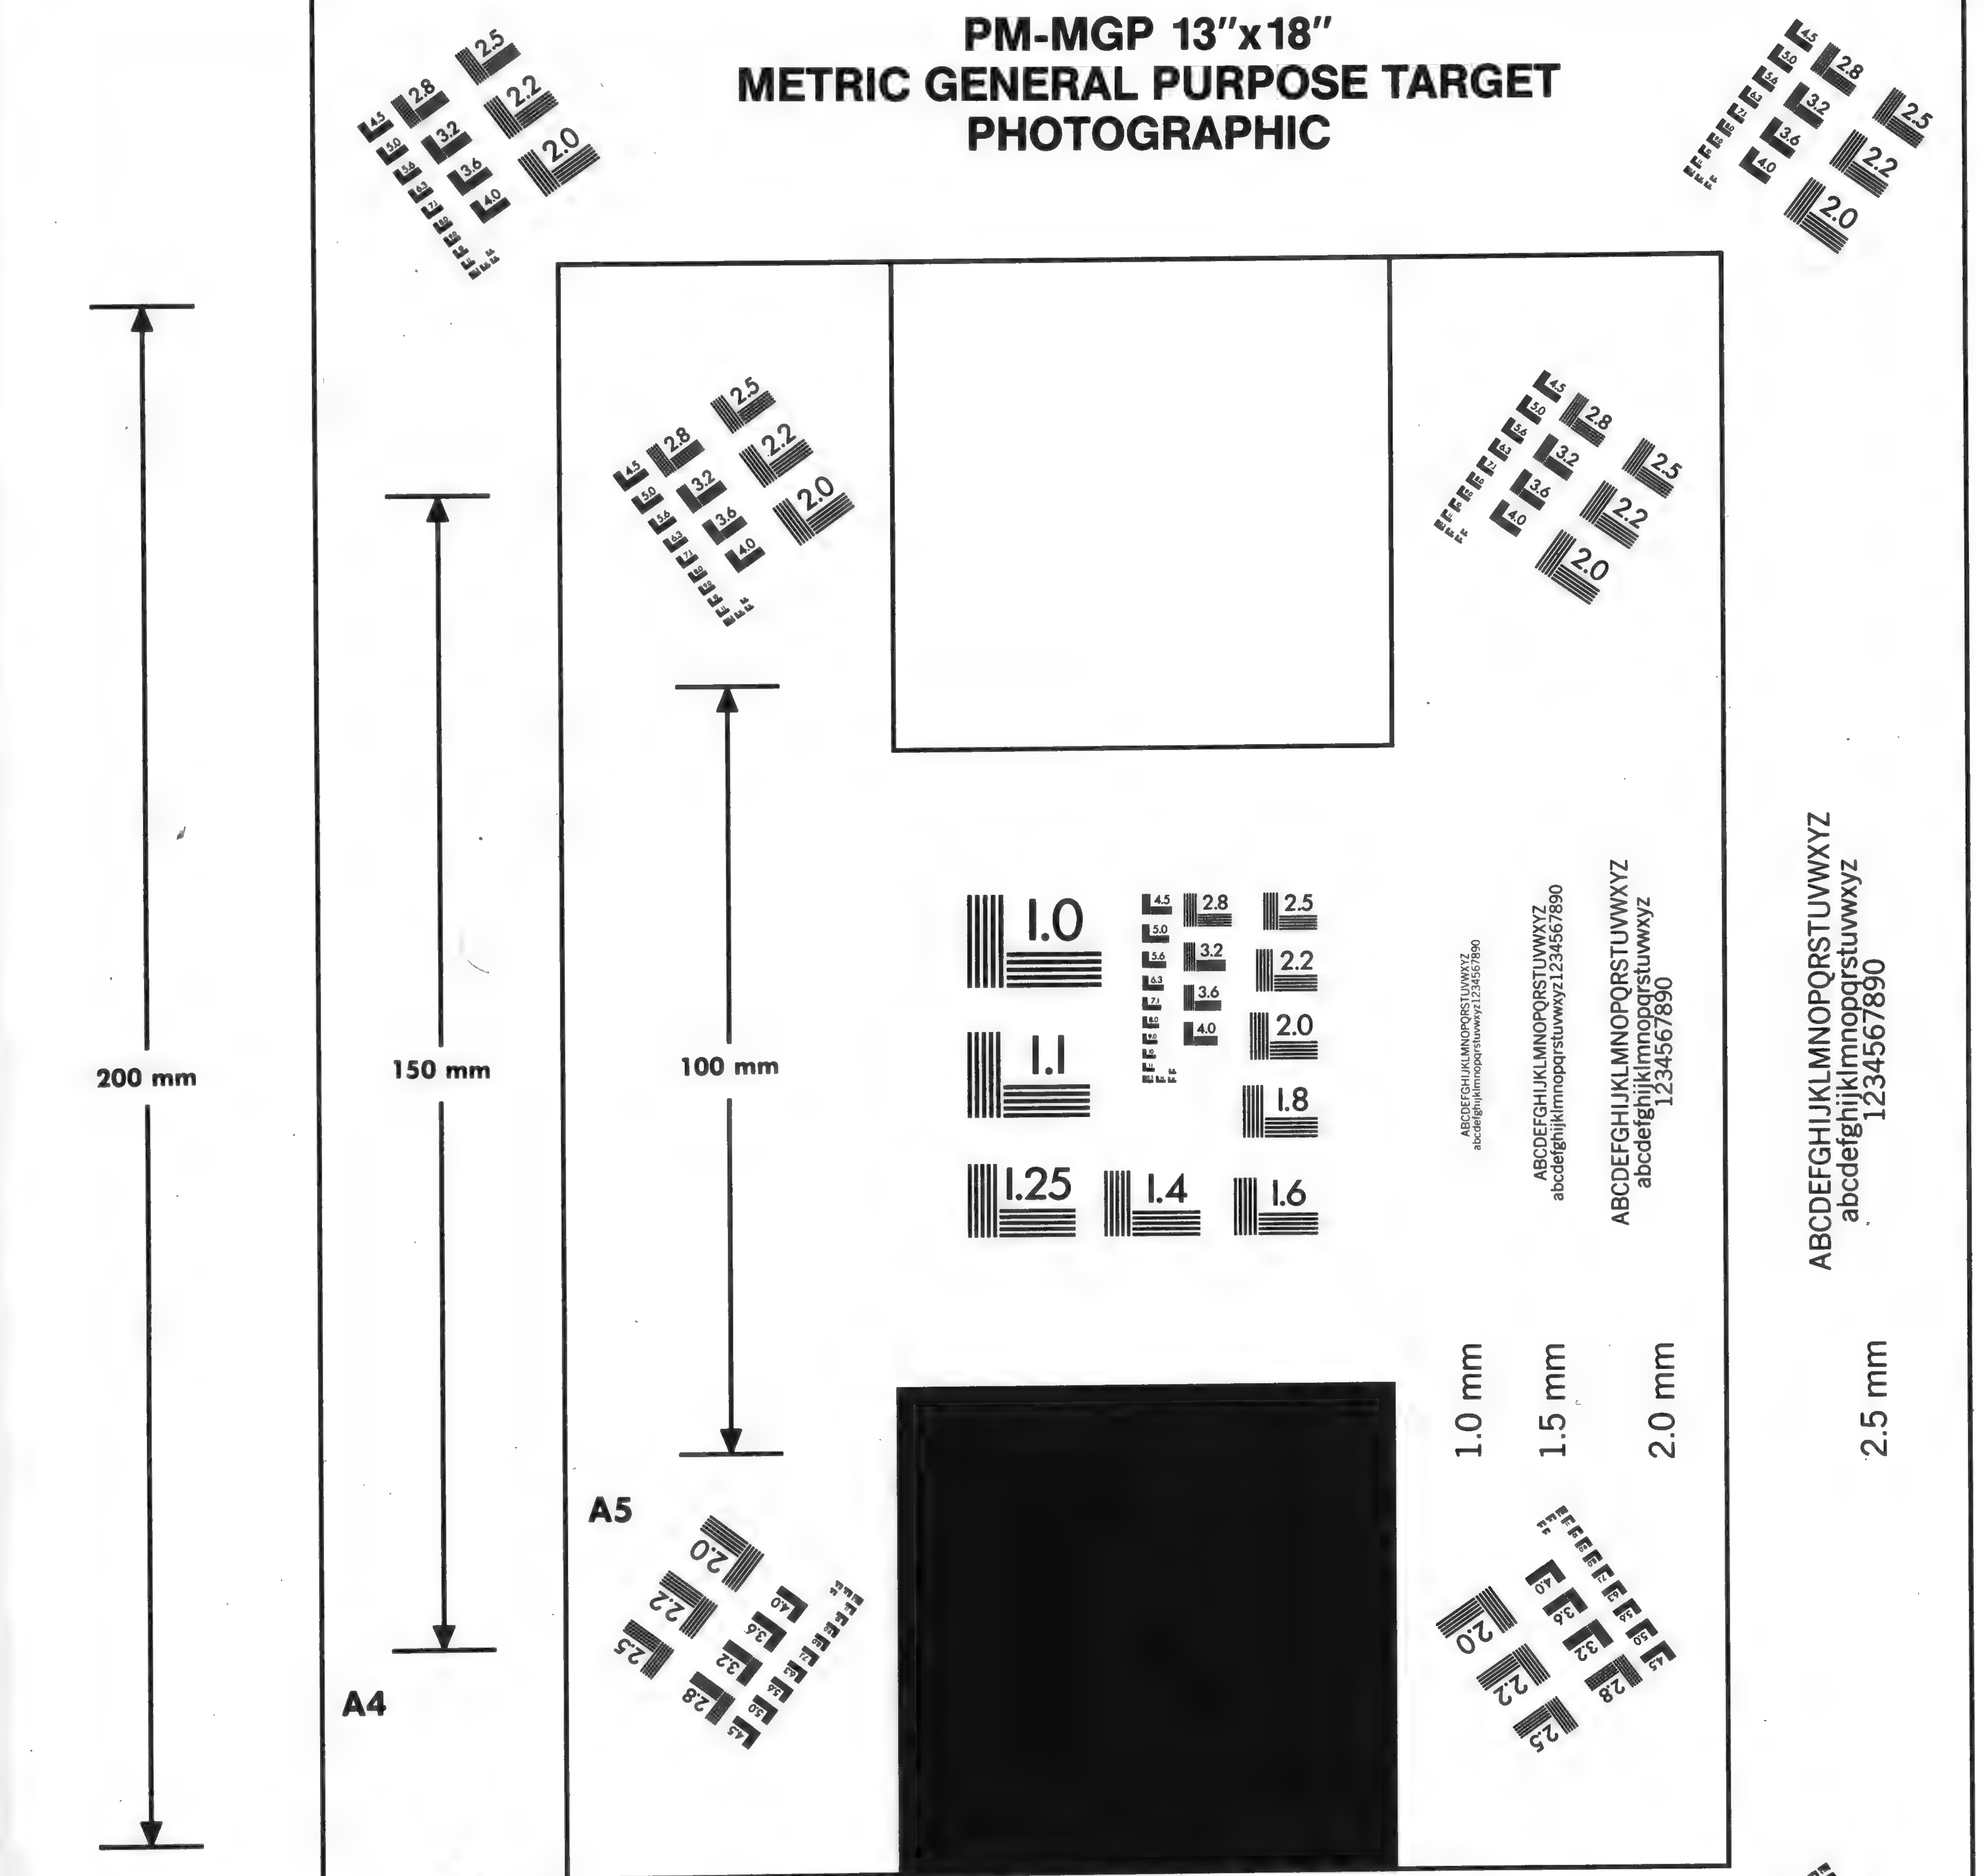
REDUCTION
RATIO
14x

PM-MGP 13"x18"
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



200 mm
150 mm
100 mm
A5
A4
A3
1.0
1.1
1.25
1.4
1.6
1.8
2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0
5.6
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890
1.0 mm
1.5 mm
2.0 mm
2.5 mm

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P

1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

Best Weather of the Season Greets Weekend at Tanglewood

Manos

Pierre Monteux, guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, shown here during a performance of Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony with the BSO, will return to the podium tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 to conduct the all-Wagner concert. He will also appear again with orchestra Aug. 9.

TANGLEWOOD — The best weather of the 1958 Berkshire Festival weekend greeted the fifth and next to last weekend of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed. Last night's concert of the BSO, with Dr. Charles Munch conducting featured two soloists, Margaret Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera soprano, and Joseph de Pasquale, violist, who is first violist in the orchestra. A crowd of more than 6,300 attended.

First Performance

Tonight at 8:30 Dr. Munch will return to the podium, conducting the Boston Symphony in Wagner's Overture and Bacchanale from "Tannhauser." Leonard Pennario, pianist, will be heard in the Liszt First Piano Concerto. Following the intermission, Dr. Munch will conduct Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8, which will also be receiving its first Tanglewood performance. The concert will close with Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Gotterdammerung."

Pierre Monteux will conduct an all-Wagner concert tomorrow afternoon at 2:30, with Margaret Harshaw as soloist. His complete program follows: Prelude to "Parsifal," Air of Kundry from "Parsifal" (Miss Harshaw), Prelude to "Lohengrin," Elsa's Dream from "Lohengrin" (Miss Harshaw), Overture to "Rienzi," Overture to "The Flying Dutchman," Senta's Ballad from "The Flying Dutchman" (Miss Harshaw), Forest Murmurs from "Siegfried," "Dich, teure Halle" from "Tannhauser" and "The Ride of the Valkyries" from "Die Walkure."

The last in the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts for the benefit of the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund will be held on Wednesday at 8:30 in the theater concert hall. The Kroll Quartet, headed by William Kroll, violinist and member of the Chamber Music faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will be heard. Members of the Kroll Quartet in addition to William Kroll are Louis [illegible] viola, and Avron Twerdowsky, cello.

Music Review

Program of Wagner, Piston Called Tanglewood Triumph

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE MUSIC of Richard Wagner is the predominant part of the three programs of this next-to-the-last weekend at Tanglewood. The Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch played the first program last night. Soprano Margaret Harshaw was the soloist in two of her most impressive Wagnerian roles, Isolde and Brunhilde. The ner assembled on the stairs of his villa at Lucerne on Christmas morning in 1871. But it is a tribute to the Boston orchestra and its conductor to note that the performance had a fervor which the audience appreciated almost as much as the lady at the top of the stairs of Tribschen.

The prelude to "Die Meistersinger von Nuernberg" opened the evening. Munch kept asking for more and more from his men.

Music: Mostly Wagner

His Works Highlight Lenox Week-End

By EDWARD DOWNES

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 1—Perfect weather, a clear, sunny afternoon and a cool evening blessed refugees from the heat of New York and music lovers from all over, who gathered here for the next to last week-end of the Berkshire Festival.

This week-end is to be devoted largely to Richard Wagner, with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, as the principal soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch. Tonight's concert consisted entirely of Wagner except for one work, which seemed to have nothing whatever to do with the rest of the program.

Margaret Harshaw

This was the new Viola Concerto of Walter Piston, which was introduced to Boston and New York audiences last spring by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The concerto was sandwiched in between the Prelude and Love-Death from "Tristan und Isolde" and the Immolation scene from "Goetterdaemmerung."

On paper Mr. Piston's gracious little work looked fair to be crushed between the two collossal Wagnerian climaxes.

•

The event turned out quite differently. It was the concerto and its superb performance that brought down the house with cheers, excited applause and many recalls for the soloist, Joseph de Pasquale; Dr. Munch and Mr. Piston, who seemed obviously delighted by the roars of enthusiasm.

The composer had every reason to be pleased. Mr. de Pasquale, for whom he wrote the concerto, played with such musicianly finish and, especially in the slow movement, with such ingratiating tenderness and warmth that one could hardly fail to respond to what may be one of Mr. Piston's most beautiful and moving inspirations. Dr. Munch, too, seemed clearly absorbed in his task, an alert and appreciative conductor.

In the Wagner works, which included the prelude to "Die Meistersinger" and "A Siegfried Idyll" as well as the "Tristan" and "Goetterdaemmerung" excerpts, he was less happy. There even were poor orchestral balances in the "Meistersinger" prelude, overpowering timpani and brasses for example.

•

But aside from such technical details, Dr. Munch gave the impression of one not overfond of or particularly excited by these works. He emphasized especially the more obvious sides of the music, which is one way in which Wagner needs no help. The subtler moments came off less well.

Miss Harshaw's interpretations of the final scenes of "Tristan" and the "Goetterdaemmerung" are familiar to New York audiences from her impersonations of Isolde and Bruennhilde at the Metropolitan Opera. She was not in her best voice tonight, and one felt, particularly in the "Goetterdaemmerung" scene, that she had to fight to make herself heard over the big climaxes of the great orchestra on stage behind her. But she sang with dignity and assurance, and she was warmly applauded.

Sun.-Aug 4

FINAL WAGNER PROGRAM HEARD AT TANGLEWOOD

Margaret Harshaw Again Soloist With Monteux As Conductor

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX — Pierre Monteux, soprano Margaret Harshaw and the Boston Symphony Orchestra shared honors on the all-Wagner program given Sunday afternoon in the shed. During the week end we have had a cross section of the works of Wagner under the direction of Charles Munch and Mr. Monteux. Miss Harshaw has been soloist on both occasions.

Dignity and Splendor

Proceedings Sunday afternoon started off with a fine performance of the prelude to "Parsifal." What wonderful music this is, with its motifs of love, faith and hope. Mr. Monteux gave the music that dignity, splendor and even the humility which is within it. Following the prelude, Miss Harshaw sang Kundry's great air, "Ich Sah Das Kind." The soprano was not in her best voice at the opening, the lower notes and those of the middle register sounded breathy, but she poured out some thrilling top notes. The interpretation had little color or contrast.

Wagner's prelude to "Lohengrin" is one of the loveliest bits of music he has written. Under Mr. Monteux's easy, deft direction the orchestral tone was

See FINAL WAGNER
Page Seven

Final Wagner

Continued From Page 1

transparent, crystal clear and the details were meticulously met. Miss Harshaw's singing of "Elsa's dream" differed little from her pronouncement of the aria from "Parsifal." The feeling of ecstasy was there in a limited degree. One felt that she was never wholly at ease. The audience was very cordial and she returned to the stage several times, twice with Mr. Monteux, towering over the little Frenchman to the delight of the audience.

Most Exciting Moment

The really exciting moments of the first portion of the program came during the performance of the overture to "Rienzi." This was a spacious, vibrant performance such as Monteux can summon on occasion.

The second portion of the program was of the same format as the opening portion. The dark hued overture to "The Flying Dutchman" was provided a penetrating, zestful reading and Miss Harshaw's utterance of "Senta's ballad" almost reach the exciting stage. The voice was warm and often colored expressively. It is no small task to sing four great Wagnerian arias, but there must have been an added inspiration in singing them to the accompaniment of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Mr. Monteux provided a beautiful tapestry of tone as the forest murmurs from "Siegfried" were unfolded. One can find within this music practically anything one wishes. It remained for the Dich Teure Halle from "Tannhauser" to witness Miss Harshaw at her best.

Audience Enthusiastic

It was a performance marked by vocal splendor and interpretive depth. The audience, which had seemed a bit tired of so much monumental music, waxed really enthusiastic and was ready for the tremendous performance of the ride of the Valkyries from "Die Walkure" which closed the program.

Wagner has had his day at Tanglewood and was well served. An estimated 6866 persons heard this concert. The total attendance of the three shed concerts this past week end was 21,946. Where are the audiences? The weather has been favorable during the three concerts and the music has been great. What do people want?

NGFIELD, MASS., SATURDAY, AUGUST 2, 1958

WAGNER, PISTON WORKS OFFERED AT TANGLEWOOD

Margaret Harshaw, Joseph De Pasquale Soloists In Lenox

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX, Tanglewood—The music of Richard Wagner and Walter Piston was featured on the program Friday night by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch. To add splendor to the occasion there was Margaret Harshaw, a dramatic soprano in the true Wagnerian tradition, and violist Joseph De Pasquale who was soloist in the "Concerto for Viola and Orchestra" by Walter Piston, a work dedicated to him by the composer.

Prelude Opens Program

The program opened with a spacious performance of the prelude to "Die Meistersinger von Nurmburg." It was a brilliant performance, powerful and yet finely contrasted. What was large was very large, but Mr. Munch made the most of the numerous opportunities for contrast and did not eliminate or gloss over the humor.

Wagner's "A Siegfried Idyll" is a work of great charm, one of the most gracious he ever wrote. A birthday present to Cosima Wagner, and a surprise, there is within this work a deep personal devotion expressed through glorious music. This music came from the heart of the composer. It was played with real insight into its mood and realization of its depth of feeling.

To this listener, there is a little music more beautiful than that within "Tristan and Isolde." Mr. Munch offered the prelude and "love-death" from this opera, with Margaret Harshaw as soloist in the "love-death."

In Excellent Voice

The soprano was in excellent voice and was able to cut through the torrents of tone from the orchestra. Indeed, she sang every note, rather than declaiming them, as is often the case. The prelude is a thing of poignant beauty, a work of limitless breadth and depth. Mr. Munch was particularly eloquent in his perusal of the prelude and the sounds which came from the orchestra were wonderful to hear.

Walter Piston wrote his "Concerto for Viola and Orchestra" for the Boston Symphony Orchestra and dedicated it to the first violist, Joseoh De Pasquale, who played the first performance in Boston in March of this year. The work is written with all the craftsmanship of this fine American composer. It undertakes to explore all the possibilities of the viola in melodic expressivity as well as technical agility throughout its range. However, it is more than a showpiece. Its purely musical ideas and their development in a formal design remain predominant. The orchestra is always a collaborating partner.

Mr. De Pasquale's great gifts and musicianship were at the service of this music and one heard a performance rich in tone and technically flawless.

Mr. Piston has individual ideas about melody and they are usually effective. He was well served by Mr. Munch, Mr. De Pasquale and the orchestra.

Listening to the immolation scene from Wagner's "Die Gotterdamerung," we are often tempted to write that there is no more effective music for voice and orchestra. Margaret Harshaw sang it magnificently and the orchestra sounded inspired.

The music runs the gamut of emotion. Lofty passion, devotion and the will to die are in it and the voice must be an instrument. We have seldom heard Miss Harshaw sing with such freedom and brilliance and depth of understanding. Mr. Munch provided fine collaboration.

An estimated 6310 persons attended the concert. It is expected that the audiences Saturday and Sunday will be much larger if the weather continues as fine as it has been.

Boston Sym Wagner, P

By Francis D. Perkins

LENOX, Mass., Aug. Boston Symphony Orchestra gan the largely Wagner semifinal week end of the B shire Festival last night w 6,310 persons heard Marg Harshaw as soprano soloist the musicians under Ch Munch's direction in the bestod from "Tristan und olde" and the Immolation S from "Goetterdaemmeru The American work w shared the program Wagner was Walter Pis viola concerto with Josep Pasquale as the soloist.

Mr. Piston's concerto, was introduced to Boston New York last season, genuinely fervent applause the orchestra's talented violist called the compo the stage to share in the nstration.

Opportunity for Virtu

Piston's announced was to set forth melodic and te ces and he has this with admi ghness. The soloist rous opportunity his technical vir r. Piston always ola as a primarily ment while illust the wide span of sono which it can produce.

His score is also happy blending of the viola tone small combinations of instruments or with the orchestra.

With the instrumental ty and balance Mr. Piston provided appealing and treated melodic ideas. The lyric line of the adagio particularly engaging, first movement also poetically meditative phere.

Here a slightly greater matic contrast would have an added asset. The finale had such contrast seemed more conventional the rest of this welcome distinguished work.

Manos

Pierre Monteux, guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, shown here during a performance of Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony with the BSO, will return to the podium tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 to conduct the all-Wagner concert. He will also appear again with orchestra Aug. 9.

TANGLEWOOD — The best weather of the 1958 Berkshire Festival weekend greeted the fifth and next to last weekend of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed. Last night's concert of the BSO, with Dr. Charles Munch conducting featured two soloists, Margaret Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera soprano, and Joseph de Pasquale, violist, who is first violist in the orchestra. A crowd of more than 6,300 attended.

First Performance

Tonight at 8:30 Dr. Munch will return to the podium, conducting the Boston Symphony in Wagner's Overture and Bacchanale from "Tannhauser." Leonard Pennario, pianist, will be heard in the Liszt First Piano Concerto. Following the intermission, Dr. Munch will conduct Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8, which will also be receiving its first Tanglewood performance. The concert will close with Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Gotterdammerung."

Pierre Monteux will conduct an all-Wagner concert tomorrow afternoon at 2:30, with Margaret Harshaw as soloist. His complete program follows: Prelude to "Parsifal," Air of Kundry from "Parsifal" (Miss Harshaw), Prelude to "Lohengrin," Elsa's Dream from "Lohengrin" (Miss Harshaw), Overture to "Rienzi," Overture to "The Flying Dutchman," Senta's Ballad from "The Flying Dutchman" (Miss Harshaw), Forest Murmurs from "Siegfried," "Dich, teure Halle" from "Tannhauser" and "The Ride of the Valkyries" from "Die Walkure."

The last in the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts for the benefit of the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund will be held on Wednesday at 8:30 in the theater concert hall. The Kroll Quartet, headed by William Kroll, violinist and member of the Chamber Music faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will be heard. Members of the Kroll Quartet in addition to William Kroll are Louis Graeler, violin; David Mankovitz, viola, and Avron [illegible] cello.

Music Review

Program of Wagner, Piston Called Tanglewood Triumph

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE MUSIC of Richard Wagner is the predominant part of the three programs of this next-to-the-last weekend at Tanglewood. The Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch played the first program last night. Soprano Margaret Harshaw was the soloist in two of her most impressive Wagnerian roles, Isolde and Brunhilde. The sole departure of the evening from Wagner was the performance of Walter Piston's new viola concerto with Joseph de Pasquale as soloist.

Piston was in the audience and was called to the stage at the completion of the concerto to share the applause with De Pasquale and the orchestra. Its initial performance was only four months ago in Boston, where it also was played by the Boston orchestra's solo violist, to whom the concerto is dedicated.

* * *

IT HAS NEVER been possible to analyze inspiration and thus to determine how much of a composition is out of the air, or the mind or the heart, or out of diligent application to one's task. Piston's wisdom in the fortification of the viola's best tonal areas is a large factor in the first good impression the work makes. He has given the instrument, particularly in the first two of the three movements, most of its long lines below the chanterelle, in the most graceful and luscious parts of a viola and certainly ones where De Pasquale is most eloquent.

Except for the vigor and gaiety of the last movement, it is a lyric piece. The orchestra, kept well in the background by Munch, allowed the soloist to enjoy the spotlight while still a part of the larger ensemble. De Pasquale's tone and true intonation in the far-from-conventional double stops, and, again, in the cadenza of the finale, were high-lights of a fine performance.

* * *

IS THERE a more lasting birthday present in the world than the "Idyll" which Wagner wrote for his wife Cosima? The orchestra which Munch directed last night was a bit different in size from the select little band Wagner assembled on the stairs of his villa at Lucerne on Christmas morning in 1871. But it is a tribute to the Boston orchestra and its conductor to note that the performance had a fervor which the audience appreciated almost as much as the lady at the top of the stairs of Tribschen.

The prelude to "Die Meistersinger von Nuernberg" opened the evening. Munch kept asking for more and more from his men. The Boston orchestra's "all" is quite a massive response and the tremendous chords of the noble march alternated with the more gentle motifs in as colorful a performance as one needs to hear on this planet.

The singing of Miss Harshaw above the passion-filled pages of the orchestral background was the most telling part of the evening. She needs no operatic costume to portray the heroic characters of Wagner's dramas. Her regal posture and stature and imperturbable attitude are stage-settings before a note is sounded, and when she allows her easy-but-powerful and majestic voice to be heard her domination is both vocal and graphic.

* * *

THE GREAT Boston orchestra was at its most expressive last night. The sighing arch which the celli play at the beginning of the Prelude which preceded Miss Harshaw's singing of the Liebestod from "Tristan and Isolde" was a miniature but mighty detail of the orchestra's magnificence during the whole program. Miss Harshaw achieved her memorable success entirely vocally, for she makes no emotional display and stands with immobile majestic dignity.

The formidable intensity of her grief was a supreme demonstration of her art and Munch drew the orchestral narrative with a vivid brush.

Again in the "Immolation Scene" from "The Twilight of the Gods" there was a sense of overwhelming tragedy and sublime sacrifice. The prodigious culmination and climax of Wagner's vast "Ring" could not have been communicated much more expressively in an opera house than Miss Harshaw and the orchestra conveyed with such triumphal glory.

SUnion - Aug 4

NAL WAGNER ROGRAM HEARD T TANGLEWOOD

argaret Harshaw Again Soloist With Monteux As Conductor

By WILLARD M. CLARK

ENOX — Pierre Monteux, so-no Margaret Harshaw and the ton Symphony Orchestra red honors on the all-Wagner gram given Sunday afternoon he shed. During the week end have had a cross section of works of Wagner under the ection of Charles Munch and Monteux. Miss Harshaw has n soloist on both occasions.

Dignity and Splendor

roceedings Sunday afternoon rted off with a fine performe of the prelude to "Parsi-" What wonderful music this with its motifs of love, faith hope. Mr. Monteux gave the ic that dignity, splendor and n the humility which is with-t. Following the prelude, Miss shaw sang Kundry's great "Ich Sah Das Kind." The rano was not in her best e at the opening, the lower es and those of the middle ster sounded breathy, but she red out some thrilling top s. The interpretation had lit-color or contrast.

agner's prelude to "Lohen-" is one of the loveliest bits music he has written. Under Monteux's easy, deft direc- the orchestral tone was sparent, crystal clear and the ils were meticulously met. Harshaw's singing of "El- dream" differed little from pronouncement of the aria "Parsifal." The feeling of ay was there in a limited de-. One felt that she was never ly at ease. The audience was cordial and she returned to stage several times, twice Mr. Monteux, towering over little Frenchman to the de- of the audience.

See FINAL WAGNER Page Seven

Final Wagner

Continued From Page 1

Most Exciting Moment

e really exciting moments of first portion of the program e during the performance of overture to "Rienzi." This a spacious, vibrant perform- such as Monteux can sum- on occasion.

e second portion of the pro- m was of the same format as opening portion. The dark d overture to "The Flying chman" was provided a pen-ting, zestful reading and Miss shaw's utterance of "Senta's ad" almost reach the excit- stage. The voice was warm often colored expressively. no small task to sing four t Wagnerian arias, but there t have been an added inspira- in singing them to the ac-paniment of the Boston Symny Orchestra.

r. Monteux provided a beau- tapestry of tone as the forest rmurs from "Siegfried" were lded. One can find within this sic practically anything one hes. It remained for the Dich re Halle from "Tannhauser" witness Miss Harshaw at her t.

Audience Enthusiastic

was a performance marked vocal splendor and interpre- depth. The audience which seemed a bit tired of so ch monumental music, waxed really enthusiastic and was ready for the tremendous performance of the ride of the Valkyries from "Die Walkure" which closed the program.

Wagner has had his day at Tanglewood and was well served. An estimated 6866 persons heard this concert. The total attendance of the three shed concerts this past week end was 21,946. Where are the audiences? The weather has been favorable during the three concerts and the music has been great. What do people want?

NGFIELD, MASS., SATURDAY, AUGUST 2, 1958

WAGNER, PISTON WORKS OFFERED AT TANGLEWOOD

Margaret Harshaw, Joseph De Pasquale Soloists In Lenox

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX, Tanglewood—The music of Richard Wagner and Walter Piston was featured on the program Friday night by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch. To add splendor to the occasion there was Margaret Harshaw, a dramatic soprano in the true Wagnerian tradition, and violist Josepn De Pasquale who was soloist in the "Concerto for Viola and Orchestra" by Walter Piston, a work dedicated to him by the composer.

Prelude Opens Program

The program opened with a spacious performance of the prelude to "Die Meistersinger von Nurmburg." It was a brilliant performance, powerful and yet finely contrasted. What was large was very large, but Mr. Munch made the most of the numerous opportunities for contrast and did not eliminate or gloss over the humor.

Wagner's "A Siegfried Idyll" is a work of great charm, one of the most gracious, he ever wrote. A birthday present to Cosima Wagner, and a surprise, there is within this work a deep personal devotion expressed through glorious music. This music came from the heart of the composer. It was played with real insight into its mood and realization of its depth of feeling.

To this listener, there is a little music more beautiful than that within "Tristan and Isolde." Mr. Munch offered the prelude and "love-death" from this opera, with Margaret Harshaw as soloist in the "love-death."

In Excellent Voice

The soprano was in excellent voice and was able to cut through the torrents of tone from the orchestra. Indeed, she sang every note, rather than declaiming them, as is often the case. The prelude is a thing of poignant beauty, a work of limitless breadth and depth. Mr. Munch was particularly eloquent in his perusal of the prelude and the sounds which came from the orchestra were wonderful to hear.

Walter Piston wrote his "Concerto for Viola and Orchestra" for the Boston Symphony Orchestra and dedicated it to the first violist, Joseoh De Pasquale, who played the first performance in Boston in March of this year. The work is written with all the craftsmanship of this fine American composer. It undertakes to explore all the possibilities of the viola in melodic expressivity as well as technical agility throughout its range. However, it is more than a showpiece. Its purely musical ideas and their development in a formal design remain predominant. The orchestra is always a collaborating partner.

Mr. De Pasquale's great gifts and musicianship were at the service of this music and one heard a performance rich in tone and technically flawless.

Mr. Piston has individual ideas about melody and they are usually effective. He was well served by Mr. Munch, Mr. De Pasquale and the orchestra.

Listening to the Immolation scene from Wagner's "Die Gotterdamerung," we are often tempted to write that there is no more effective music for voice and orchestra. Margaret Harshaw sang it magnificently and the orchestra sounded inspired.

The music runs the gamut of emotion. Lofty passion, devotion and the will to die are in it and the voice must be an instrument. We have seldom heard Miss Harshaw sing with such freedom and brilliance and depth of understanding. Mr. Munch provided fine collaboration.

An estimated 6310 persons attended the concert. It is expected that the audiences Saturday and Sunday will be much larger if the weather continues as fine as it has been.

Boston Symp Wagner, Pist

By Francis D. Perkins

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 2.—The Boston Symphony Orchestra began the largely Wagnerian semifinal week end of the Berkshire Festival last night when 6,310 persons heard Margaret Harshaw as soprano soloist with the musicians under Charles Munch's direction in the Liebestod from "Tristan und Isolde" and the Immolation Scene from "Goetterdaemmerung." The American work which shared the program with Wagner was Walter Piston's viola concerto with Joseph de Pasquale as the soloist.

Mr. Piston's concerto, which was introduced to Boston and New York last season, won genuinely fervent applause, and the orchestra's talented first violist called the composer to the stage to share in the demonstration.

Opportunity for Virtuosity

Mr. Piston's announced ob- was to set forth the melodic and technical es and he has accom- this with admirable ghness. The soloist has rous opportunity to ex- his technical virtuosity, r. Piston always treats ola as a primarily lyric trument while illustrating the wide span of sonorities which it can produce.

His score is also happy in the blending of the viola tone with small combinations of other instruments or with the entire orchestra.

With the instrumental lucidity and balance Mr. Piston has provided appealing and deftly treated melodic ideas. The long lyric line of the adagio was particularly engaging, and the first movement also had a poetically meditative atmosphere.

Here a slightly greater thematic contrast would have been an added asset. The lively finale had such contrast, but seemed more conventional than the rest of this welcome and distinguished work.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 113,886

AUG 3 - 1958

Selections From Wagner Will Be Performed Today

Margaret Harshaw Soloist With Pierre Monteux Conducting at Tanglewood; Music of Beethoven Friday and Saturday

Pierre Monteux, the Boston Symphony Orchestra and soprano Margaret Harshaw will join forces to present an all-Wagner program this afternoon at 2.30 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox. The program will include selections from "Parsifal," "Lohengrin," "Rienzi," "The Flying Dutchman," "Siegfried," "Tannhauser" and "Die Walkure."

The final week end of Berkshire Festival concerts will feature music of Beethoven. Dr. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct the concerts of Friday evening, at 8.30 and Sunday afternoon, the 10th, at 2.30, while Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor on Saturday evening at 8.30. Soloists will include Eugene Istomin, pianist, in Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto Friday and Berl Senofsky, violinist, in the Beethoven violin concerto Saturday.

Istomin Soloist

Dr. Munch will open Friday evening's concert with Honegger's Prelude, Fugue and Postlude, followed by Beethoven's Symphony No. 7. Eugene Istomin will be soloist in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor") Istomin is the sixth of the outstanding young American pianists to be presented at Tanglewood during the current season, following Lukas Foss, Seymour Lipkin, Leon Fleisher, Byron Janis and Leonard Pennario. Istomin last appeared at Tanglewood in 1955.

The concert Saturday will open with music from "Prometheus" by Beethoven. Berl Senofsky, soloist in the Beethoven violin concerto, was the winner of the 1955 Brussels Competition and has appeared with many of the outstanding American orchestras since his United States debut in 1956. This will be his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In the second half of the program Mr. Monteux will present Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" and Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 3.

Bethoven's Ninth

Dr. Munch will follow his custom of closing the Berkshire Festival season with a performace of Beethoven's ninth symphony next Sunday afternoon. Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson.

The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johannesburg Festival Overture, which was written for the 70th anniversary of the city of Johannesburg in South Africa and first performed there in 1956. The Boston Symphony Orchestra presented the United States premiere of the overture during tthe 1956-57 season.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's rehearsal on Saturday morning, at 10 will be open to the public for the benefit of the pension fund.

Opera Evenings

Tomorrow and Tuesday evenings at 8.30 in the Theater-Concert Hall the Tanglewood Opera Department will present Rossini's comic opera "Count Ory." The preformances will be conducted by Wyn Morris and the title role of Count Ory will be sung by John McCollum, tenor. Scenery has been designed by Elemer Nagy, costumes by Leo Van Witsen, and the entire production will be under the supervision of Boris Goldovsky.

The final concert in the chamber music series, Wednesday evening at 8.30, features the Knoll Quartet in a program which includes Haydn's Quartet in G minor, Op. 74, No. 3, Bartok's Quartet No. 2, Op. 17 and Beethoven's Quartet No. 15 in A minor, Op. 132.

WEEK'S PROGRAMS AT TANGLEWOOD

Programs for the week at Tanglewood are as follows:

TODAY, 2.30 P. M.
Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra
Pierre Monteux conductor
Excerpts from "Parsifal," "Lohengrin," "Rienzi," "The Flying Dutchman," "Siegfried," "Tannhauser" and "Die Walkure." .... Wagner
Margaret Harshaw, soprano, soloist

WEDNESDAY, AUG. 6, 8.30
Chamber Music, the Knoll Quartet
Quartet in G minor, Op. 74, No. 3 Haydn
Quartet No. 2, Op. 17 .... Bartok
Quartet No. 15 in A minor, Op. 132 .... Beethoven

THURSDAY, AUG. 7, 8.15
Music Shed Boston Symphony Orchestra
Tanglewood-on-Parade
Overture "Il Guarany" .... Gomes
"El Amor Brujo" .... Falla
(Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor)
Piano Concerto .... Copland
(Aaron Copland soloist; Richard Burgin conducting)
Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler Conductor
"Gaite Parisienne" .... Offenbach
Dance of Wheat and Malambo, from "Estancia" .... Ginastera
Selection from "West Side Story" .... Bernstein
Dancing through the years Hayman, arr.
76 Trombones from "The Music Man" .... Willson

FRIDAY AUG. 8, 8.30
Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra
Charles Munch, conductor
Prelude Fugue and Postlude .. Honegger
Symphony No. 7 .... Beethoven
Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor") .... Beethoven
(Eugene Istomin soloist)

SATURDAY, AUG. 9, 8.30
Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra
Pierre Monteux, conductor
Music from "Prometheus" .... Beethoven
Violin Concerto .... Beethoven
(Berl Senofsky soloist)
Nobilissima Visione .... Hindemith
Leonore Overture No. 3 ..... Beethoven

SUNDAY, AUG. 10, 2.30
Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra
Charles Munch, conductor
Johannesburg Festival Orverture Walton
Ninth Symphony .... Beethoven
(Adele Addison, Blake Stern, Florence Kopleff, Donald Gramm soloists)

Tanglewood On Parade

Tanglewood-on-Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will be held on Thursday evening between 6 and 11 p. m. Concerts by the various departments of the school including orchestra, opera, chamber music and choir, will be followed by a picnic on the lawn and a gala concert at 8.15 in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Boston Pops Orchestras.

Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct works of Gomes and Falla, followed by Aaron Copland performing the piano part of his own piano concerto. The orchestra will be under the direction of Richard Burgin. Following the drawing of door prizes, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites.

Copland will also be heard in the final session of the Seminar in Contemporary Music on Friday afternoon at 3.15. He will discuss his own music and there will be performances of his "Four Songs from Twelve Poems of Emily Dickinson" and the "Piano Fantasy," with guest soloist Noel Lee.

The final concert of the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra will be given on Saturday afternoon at 3 in the Music Shed. Various prizes will be awarded to the students at this concert. The final student chamber music concert on Sunday morning at 10 will be held in the Theater-Concert Hall. The last three events are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Boston Symphony Gives Wagner, Piston Concerto

By Francis D. Perkins

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 2.—The Boston Symphony Orchestra began the largely Wagnerian semifinal week end of the Berkshire Festival last night when 6,310 persons heard Margaret Harshaw as soprano soloist with the musicians under Charles Munch's direction in the Liebestod from "Tristan und Isolde" and the Immolation Scene from "Goetterdaemmerung." The American work which shared the program with Wagner was Walter Piston's viola concerto with Joseph de Pasquale as the soloist.

Mr. Piston's concerto, which was introduced to Boston and New York last season, won genuinely fervent applause, and the orchestra's talented first violist called the composer to the stage to share in the demonstration.

Opportunity for Virtuosity

Mr. Piston's announced objective was to set forth the viola's melodic and technical resources and he has accomplished this with admirable thoroughness. The soloist has a generous opportunity to exhibit his technical virtuosity, but Mr. Piston always treats the viola as a primarily lyric instrument while illustrating the wide span of sonorities which it can produce.

His score is also happy in the blending of the viola tone with small combinations of other instruments or with the entire orchestra.

With the instrumental lucidity and balance Mr. Piston has provided appealing and deftly treated melodic ideas. The long lyric line of the adagio was particularly engaging, and the first movement also had a poetically meditative atmosphere.

Here a slightly greater thematic contrast would have been an added asset. The lively finale had such contrast, but seemed more conventional than the rest of this welcome and distinguished work.

Mr. di Pasquale gave it an ideal interpretation, with flexibility of phrase and technical flawlessness. His tone, ingratiating throughout his compass, was a communicative medium for an entire expressive understanding which also marked the well co-ordinated playing of his colleagues under Mr. Munch.

An Ideal Interpretation

Miss Harshaw's singing was emotionally revealing both in the "Tristan" Liebestod, which was prefaced by the prelude, and the epic closing scene of the "Ring" cycle. Both her use of tonal color and of dynamic shading contributed to this impression.

The vocal quality, indeed varied to some extent in clearness and the exacting nature of the music was not always disguised, but these were sensitive interpretations with a dramatic understanding which included the heroic nature of the Immolation Scene.

Grandeur and Serenity

The instrumental close of that scene was a memorable feature of the concert in its climactic grandeur and the serenity of its closing measures. The orchestra, indeed, was in its best form throughout the evening and this means playing hard to rival in a program which began with the Prelude to "Die Meistersinger" and the "Siegfried Idyll."

Mr. Munch proved to be an intent and unusually evocative interpreter of Wagner. The especially strong point of the performances, besides their array of sonorities and expressive conviction, was their realization of the differing moods and atmosphers of each of Mr. Munch's Wagnerian choices.

Debussy? Wagner? Mozart? Bach? Rachmaninoff? Sibelius? Ah, yes! Yet there is no sweeter music than the hearty laughter of little children. Keep them happy by providing summer vacations through your gift to Herald Tribune Fresh Air Fund, New York 36, N. Y.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 104,590

AUG 3 - 1958

MUSIC: Festival Continues Wagner Selections

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — The third Berkshire Music Festival weekend, highlighting music by Wagner, was continued last night in the music shed at Tanglewood.

Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Leonard Pennario was piano soloist. There was an audience of 8,770, a heartening improvement over Friday night's attendance.

The program was the Overture and Bacchanale from 'Tannhauser,' and "Daybreak" and Siegfried's Rhine journey from "Twilight of the Gods"—by Wagner. Pennario played Liszt's Piano Concerto in E flat, No. 1. The orchestra was also heard in Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8 in D Minor.

Completely Satisfying

The 'Tannhauser" excerpts were a complete satisfaction. In fact, they were given a "rip-roaring" performance. Nothing more could have been asked, tonally. The hymnal chorale of the beginning was purely voiced—no light task for the horns in the frivolous atmospheric conditions of the Berkshires.

Concept-wise, the 'Tannhauser" was a considerable improvement over Munch's treatment of the "Meistersinger" prelude and "A Siegfried Idyll" of Friday night. Both of those sounded well, but seemed to lack synchronization of ideas.

Woodwinds Effective

The "Tannhauser" overture and ensuing "Venusberg Music" were cast in inseparable molds. Everything was in its place—the warmth of the strings, domineering brasses, delicately soloing woodwinds, and enough percussion to consumate climaxes dramatically without forcing issues.

Boiling points of the "Bacchanale" were thrilling. Munch prodded tempos while exposing counter melodies that so frequently go unnoticed. We've never heard the repeated companion theme in the violas played more clearly or with better percision.

Hears Choir Sequence

To authenticate the performance, a small mixed choir was heard off-stage in the final sequences. They were students of the Berkshire Music Center directed by Hugh Ross who followed Munch's best literally.

This is the season for young pianists at Tanglewood. Pennario was the fifth to perform so far in the festival. Another, Eugene Istomin, will be heard next week.

The merits of the Liszt E Flat Concerto are a matter of personal opinion. There's no argument that it's a pretty obvious war-horse, and that it was intended more for the eye and ear than for the emotions.

Virtuosity a Must

This is an era of gargantuan keyboard techniques. Therefore, to give the Liszt Concerto a normal, methodical performance is to barely get it off the ground by present standards.

Pennario has an impressive, if not reliable technique. It isn't spectacular, nor is it "run of the mill." He clearly sought to carry out Liszt's precise objective—to "wow" his listeners. It can't be said that he failed. The applausse was substantial and prolonged. But Pennario fell considerably short of what can be accompished with this splashy work.

Orchestra Hesitant

We weren't exactly persuaded that Munch and the orchestra were carefully considered and pro-over their assignment—namely to polish the showcase for the soloist. This was apparent in the slow movement. Emotions here are a bit sticky but the pianist can turn the gush into reasonably dignified poetry.

The hammered piano octaves of the beginning were muddied with pedalling, and there were some real 'bloopers" elsewhere in the form of wrong notes. Much of it was sure-fingered. It didn't have the bravura glitter of most virtuoso performances, but the musical values (such as they are) jected with rather scanty tone. tone.

Triangle Insistent

The triangle, so freely used in the finale, was quite out of line dynamically. It is supposed to attract attention—not demand it.

This afternoon's concert will be conducted by Pierre Monteux. The Boston Symphony will play the prelude to 'Parsifal" and the overtures to Rienzi.

Margaret Harshaw, soprano, will sing excerpts from "Parsifal," "Lohengrin," "The Magic Flute," and "Tannhauser."

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292

AUG 7 1958

TANGLEWOOD
August 1 and 2
By A. C. S.

Two artists appeared in solo roles at Tanglewood Friday evening. One was a familiar face, the first-violist of the Boston Symphony, Joseph de Pasquale, playing a Concerto for Viola and Orchestra written for him by Walter Piston and premiered in March of this year. While it may prove to be a worthy addition to the repertory, on first hearing it does not seem to get off the ground until the last movement, a lively, rhythmic, rondo form. This did not appear to be the result of any lack of love and care on the part of the performers. Mr. de Pasquale played with conviction and was warmly received. There are many interesting instrumental combinations in the work which allow the solo voice to be heard in all registers. It is a built-in guarantee for the soloist.

The other artist unfortunately had no such guarantee from the composer and got none from the conductor in the first of her Wagnerian arias. The Lovedeath from Tristan and Isolde became more a drowning by orchestra than death from a broken heart. Admittedly, Margaret Harshaw was not in top vocal form having recently been indisposed, but she fared better in the Immolation Scene from "Die Goetterdaemmerung." The voice seemed to have gained strength during the intermission and Charles Munch held the orchestra under control. The very evident lack of sympathy with the vocalist's problems in the first aria was made more apparent in the obvious friction on stage. By the end of the concert, however, harmony appeared to have triumphed.

Also included on the program were the Prelude to "Die Meistersinger" and A Siegfried Idyll.

Saturday's concert began and ended with more Wagner: the Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhauser, and Daybreak and Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Die Goetterdaemmerung." The approach was bombastc, the balance of choirs was uneven, and the effect was phrenetic. The audience loved it.

Leonard Pennario appeared as soloist in the Liszt E-Flat Piano Concerto. Although his playing was technically correct, it lacked the sparkle which this work calls for. What should be a virtuoso show-piece became a mere technical study.

Ralph Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8 received the most thoughtful performance of the evening. Given its first hearing only two years ago, the work represents the accumulated knowledge of a mature composer who is fully aware of what he wants to say and has the ability to express himself clearly. Dr. Munch seemed most receptive to the message, especially in the Scherzo for woodwinds.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 113,886

AUG 3 - 1958

Selections From Wagner Will Be Performed Today

Margaret Harshaw Soloist With Pierre Monteux Conducting at Tanglewood; Music of Beethoven Friday and Saturday

Pierre Monteux, the Boston Symphony Orchestra and soprano Margaret Harshaw will join forces to present an all-Wagner program this afternoon at 2.30 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox. The program will include selections from "Parsifal," "Lohengrin," "Rienzi," "The Flying Dutchman," "Siegfried," "Tannhauser" and "Die Walkure."

The final week end of Berkshire Festival concerts will feature music of Beethoven. Dr. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct the concerts of Friday evening, at 8.30 and Sunday afternoon, the 10th, at 2.30, while Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor on Saturday evening at 8.30. Soloists will include Eugene Istomin, pianist, in Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto Friday and Berl Senofsky, violinist, in the Beethoven violin concerto Saturday.

Istomin Soloist

Dr. Munch will open Friday evening's concert with Honegger's Prelude, Fugue and Postlude, followed by Beethoven's Symphony No. 7. Eugene Istomin will be soloist in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor"). Istomin is the sixth of the outstanding young American pianists to be presented at Tanglewood during the current season, following Lukas Foss, Seymour Lipkin, Leon Fleisher, Byron Janis and Leonard Pennario. Istomin last appeared at Tanglewood in 1955.

The concert Saturday will open with music from "Prometheus" by Beethoven. Berl Senofsky, soloist in the Beethoven violin concerto, was the winner of the 1955 Brussels Competition and has appeared with many of the outstanding American orchestras since his United States debut in 1956. This will be his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In the second half of the program Mr. Monteux will present Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" and Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 3.

Bethoven's Ninth

Dr. Munch will follow his custom of closing the Berkshire Festival season with a performace of Beethoven's ninth symphony next Sunday afternoon. Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson.

The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johannesburg Festival Overture, which was written for the 70th anniversary of the city of Johannesburg in South Africa and first performed there in 1956. The Boston Symphony Orchestra presented the United States premiere of the overture during tthe 1956-57 season.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's rehearsal on Saturday morning, at 10 will be open to the public for the benefit of the pension fund.

Opera Evenings

Tomorrow and Tuesday evenings at 8.30 in the Theater-Concert Hall the Tanglewood Opera Department will present Rossini's comic opera "Count Ory." The preformances will be conducted by Wyn Morris and the title role of Count Ory will be sung by John McCollum, tenor. Scenery has been designed by Elemer Nagy, costumes by Leo Van Witsen, and the entire production will be under the supervision of Boris Goldovsky.

The final concert in the chamber music series, Wednesday evening at 8.30, features the Knoll Quartet in a program which includes Haydn's Quartet in G minor, Op. 74, No. 3, Bartok's Quartet No. 2, Op. 17 and Beethoven's Quartet No. 15 in A minor, Op. 132.

Tanglewood On Parade

Tanglewood-on-Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will be held on Thursday evening between 6 and 11 p. m. Concerts by the various departments of the school including orchestra, opera, chamber music and choir, will be followed by a picnic on the lawn and a gala concert at 8.15 in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Boston Pops Orchestras.

Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct works of Gomes and Falla, followed by Aaron Copland performing the piano part of his own piano concerto. The orchestra will be under the direction of Richard Burgin. Following the drawing of door prizes, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites.

Copland will also be heard in the final session of the Seminar in Contemporary Music on Friday afternoon at 3.15. He will discuss his own music and there will be performances of his "Four Songs from Twelve Poems of Emily Dickinson" and the "Piano Fantasy," with guest soloist Noel Lee.

The final concert of the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra will be given on Saturday afternoon at 3 in the Music Shed. Various prizes will be awarded to the students at this concert. The final student chamber music concert on Sunday morning at 10 will be held in the Theater-Concert Hall. The last three events are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

WEEK'S PROGRAMS AT TANGLEWOOD

Programs for the week at Tanglewood are as follows:

TODAY, 2.30 P. M.
Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra
Pierre Monteux conductor
Excerpts from "Parsifal," "Lohengrin," "Rienzi," "The Flying Dutchman," "Siegfried," "Tannhauser" and "Die Walkure." .... Wagner
Margaret Harshaw, soprano, soloist

WEDNESDAY, AUG. 6, 8.30
Chamber Music, the Knoll Quartet
Quartet in G minor, Op. 74, No. 3 Haydn
Quartet No. 2, Op. 17 .... Bartok
Quartet No. 15 in A minor, Op. 132 .... Beethoven

THURSDAY, AUG. 7, 8.15
Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra
Tanglewood-on-Parade
Overture "Il Guarany" .... Gomes
"El Amor Brujo" .... Falla
(Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor)
Piano Concerto .... Copland
(Aaron Copland soloist; Richard Burgin conducting)
Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler Conductor
"Gaite Parisienne" .... Offenbach
Dance of Wheat and Malambo, from "Estancia" .... Ginastera
Selection from "West Side Story" .... Bernstein
Dancing through the years Hayman arr.
76 Trombones from "The Music Man" .... Willson

FRIDAY AUG. 8, 8.30
Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra
Charles Munch, conductor
Prelude Fugue and Postlude .. Honegger
Symphony No. 7 .... Beethoven
Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor") .... Beethoven
(Eugene Istomin soloist)

SATURDAY, AUG. 9, 8.30
Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra
Pierre Monteux, conductor
Music from "Prometheus" ... Beethoven
Violin Concerto .... Beethoven
(Berl Senofsky soloist)
Nobilissima Visione .... Hindemith
Leonore Overture No. 3 ..... Beethoven

SUNDAY, AUG. 10, 2.30
Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra
Charles Munch, conductor
Johannesburg Festival Overture Walton
Ninth Symphony .... Beethoven
(Ad-le Addison, Blake Stern, Florence Kopleff, Donald Gramm soloists)

Boston Symphony Gives Wagner, Piston Concerto

By Francis D. Perkins

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 2.—The Boston Symphony Orchestra began the largely Wagnerian semifinal week end of the Berkshire Festival last night when 6,310 persons heard Margaret Harshaw as soprano soloist with the musicians under Charles Munch's direction in the Liebestod from "Tristan und Isolde" and the Immolation Scene from "Goetterdaemmerung." The American work which shared the program with Wagner was Walter Piston's viola concerto with Joseph de Pasquale as the soloist.

Mr. Piston's concerto, which was introduced to Boston and New York last season, won genuinely fervent applause, and the orchestra's talented first violist called the composer to the stage to share in the demonstration.

Opportunity for Virtuosity

Mr. Piston's announced objective was to set forth the viola's melodic and technical resources and he has accomplished this with admirable thoroughness. The soloist has a generous opportunity to exhibit his technical virtuosity, but Mr. Piston always treats the viola as a primarily lyric instrument while illustrating the wide span of sonorities which it can produce.

His score is also happy in the blending of the viola tone with small combinations of other instruments or with the entire orchestra.

With the instrumental lucidity and balance Mr. Piston has provided appealing and deftly treated melodic ideas. The long lyric line of the adagio was particularly engaging, and the first movement also had a poetically meditative atmosphere.

Here a slightly greater thematic contrast would have been an added asset. The lively finale had such contrast, but seemed more conventional than the rest of this welcome and distinguished work.

Mr. di Pasquale gave it an ideal interpretation, with flexibility of phrase and technical flawlessness. His tone, ingratiating throughout his compass, was a communicative medium for an entire expressive understanding which also marked the well co-ordinated playing of his colleagues under Mr. Munch.

An Ideal Interpretation

Miss Harshaw's singing was emotionally revealing both in the "Tristan" Liebestod, which was prefaced by the prelude, and the epic closing scene of the "Ring" cycle. Both her use of tonal color and of dynamic shading contributed to this impression.

The vocal quality, indeed varied to some extent in clearness and the exacting nature of the music was not always disguised, but these were sensitive interpretations with a dramatic understanding which included the heroic nature of the Immolation Scene.

Grandeur and Serenity

The instrumental close of that scene was a memorable feature of the concert in its climactic grandeur and the serenity of its closing measures. The orchestra, indeed, was in its best form throughout the evening and this means playing hard to rival in a program which began with the Prelude to "Die Meistersinger" and the "Siegfried Idyll."

Mr. Munch proved to be an intent and unusually evocative interpreter of Wagner. The especially strong point of the performances, besides their array of sonorities and expressive conviction, was their realization of the differing moods and atmosphere of each of Mr. Munch's Wagnerian choices.

Debussy? Wagner? Mozart? Bach? Rachmaninoff? Sibelius? Ah, yes! Yet there is no sweeter music than the hearty laughter of little children. Keep them happy by providing summer vacations through your gift to Herald Tribune Fresh Air Fund, New York 36, N. Y.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 104,590

AUG 3 - 1958

MUSIC: Festival Continues Wagner Selections

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — The third Berkshire Music Festival weekend, highlighting music by Wagner, was continued last night in the music shed at Tanglewood.

Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Leonard Pennario was piano soloist. There was an audience of 8,770, a heartening improvement over Friday night's attendance.

The program was the Overture and Bacchanale from "Tannhauser," and "Daybreak" and Siegfried's Rhine journey from "Twilight of the Gods"—by Wagner. Pennario played Liszt's Piano Concerto in E flat, No. 1. The orchestra was also heard in Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8 in D Minor.

Completely Satisfying

The "Tannhauser" excerpts were a complete satisfaction. In fact, they were given a "rip-roaring" performance. Nothing more could have been asked, tonally. The hymnal chorale of the beginning was purely voiced—no light task for the horns in the frivolous atmospheric conditions of the Berkshires.

Concept-wise, the "Tannhauser" was a considerable improvement over Munch's treatment of the "Meistersinger" prelude and "A Siegfried Idyll" of Friday night. Both of those sounded well, but seemed to lack synchronization of ideas.

Woodwinds Effective

The "Tannhauser" overture and ensuing "Venusberg Music" were cast in inseparable molds. Everything was in its place—the warmth of the strings, domineering brasses, delicately soloing woodwinds, and enough percussion to consumate climaxes dramatically without forcing issues.

Boiling points of the "Bacchanale" were thrilling. Munch prodded tempos while exposing counter melodies that so frequently go unnoticed. We've never heard the repeated companion theme in the violas played more clearly or with better percision.

Hears Choir Sequence

To authenticate the performance, a small mixed choir was heard off-stage in the final sequences. They were students of the Berkshire Music Center directed by Hugh Ross who followed Munch's best literally.

[illegible] young pianists at Tanglewood. Pennario was the fifth to perform so far in the festival. Another, Eugene Istomin, will be heard next week.

The merits of the Liszt E Flat Concerto are a matter of personal opinion. There's no argument that it's a pretty obvious war-horse, and that it was intended more for the eye and ear than for the emotions.

Virtuosity a Must

This is an era of gargantuan keyboard techniques. Therefore, to give the Liszt Concerto a normal, methodical performance is to barely get it off the ground by present standards.

Pennario has an impressive, if not reliable technique. It isn't spectacular, nor is it "run of the mill." He clearly sought to carry out Liszt's precise objective—to "wow" his listeners. It can't be said that he failed. The applausse was substantial and prolonged. But Pennario fell considerably short of what can be accomplished with this splashy work.

Orchestra Hesitant

We weren't exactly persuaded that Munch and the orchestra were carefully considered and pro- over their assignment—namely to polish the showcase for the soloist. This was apparent in the slow movement. Emotions here are a bit sticky but the pianist can turn the gush into reasonably dignified poetry.

The hammered piano octaves of the beginning were muddied with pedalling, and there were some real "bloopers" elsewhere in the form of wrong notes. Much of it was sure-fingered. It didn't have the bravura glitter of most virtuoso performances, but the musical values (such as they are) jected with rather scanty tone. tone.

Triangle Insistent

The triangle, so freely used in the finale, was quite out of line dynamically. It is supposed to attract attention—not demand it.

This afternoon's concert will be conducted by Pierre Monteux. The Boston Symphony will play the prelude to "Parsifal" and the overtures to Rienzi.

Margaret Harshaw, soprano, will sing excerpts from "Parsifal," "Lohengrin," "The Magic Flute," and "Tannhauser."

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292

AUG 7 1958

TANGLEWOOD
August 1 and 2
By A. C. S.

Two artists appeared in solo roles at Tanglewood Friday evening. One was a familiar face, the first-violist of the Boston Symphony, Joseph de Pasquale, playing a Concerto for Viola and Orchestra written for him by Walter Piston and premiered in March of this year. While it may prove to be a worthy addition to the repertory, on first hearing it does not seem to get off the ground until the last movement, a lively, rhythmic, rondo form. This did not appear to be the result of any lack of love and care on the part of the performers. Mr. de Pasquale played with conviction and was warmly received. There are many interesting instrumental combinations in the work which allow the solo voice to be heard in all registers. It is a built-in guarantee for the soloist.

The other artist unfortunately had no such guarantee from the composer and got none from the conductor in the first of her Wagnerian arias. The Love-death from Tristan and Isolde became more a drowning by orchestra than death from a broken heart. Admittedly, Margaret Harshaw was not in top vocal form having recently been indisposed, but she fared better in the Immolation Scene from "Die Goetterdaemmerung." The voice seemed to have gained strength during the intermission and Charles Munch held the orchestra under control. The very evident lack of sympathy with the vocalist's problems in the first aria was made more apparent in the obvious friction on stage. By the end of the concert, however, harmony appeared to have triumphed.

Also included on the program were the Prelude to "Die Meistersinger" and A Siegfried Idyll.

Saturday's concert began and ended with more Wagner: the Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhauser, and Daybreak and Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Die Goetterdaemmerung." The approach was bombastc, the balance of choirs was uneven, and the effect was phrenetic. The audience loved it.

Leonard Pennario appeared as soloist in the Liszt E-Flat Piano Concerto. Although his playing was technically correct, it lacked the sparkle which this work calls for. What should be a virtuoso show-piece became a mere technical study.

Ralph Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8 received the most thoughtful performance of the evening. Given its first hearing only two years ago, the work represents the accumulated knowledge of a mature composer who is fully aware of what he wants to say and has the ability to express himself clearly. Dr. Munch seemed most receptive to the message, especially in the Scherzo for woodwinds.

[169]

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 361,379 - S. 576,176

AUG 4 1958

Wagner Music Dominates Week End at Tanglewood

By Francis D. Perkins

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 3.—Wagner, the dominating composer of the Berkshire Festival's fifth week end, occupied all of this afternoon's concert at Tanglewood where Pierre Monteux conducted the Boston Symphony in music from seven operas with Margaret Harshaw as the soloist. Wagner also opened and closed the program of the Bostonians' concert last night under Charles Munch's direction, but there were also two works by other composers, Liszt's "Piano Concerto in E Flat Major," with Leonard Pennario in the solo role, and Ralph Vaughan Williams' "Eighth Symphony."

With ideal weather, last night's audience was 8,770, but today's crowd of 6,866 was below the average for a festival Sunday afternoon in the music shed. An unfulfilled hint of rain earlier in the day probably affected the attendance, but the figure also suggested that a miscellaneous Wagner program of this kind no longer has the box office appeal which it possessed two or three decades ago. It is also not the type of program which best serves the artistic purposes of this country's most noted summer festival. The performance itself, however, again spoke highly for the Boston Symphony's playing standard and the conducting of Mr. Monteux.

The orchestra prefaced Miss Harshaw's singing of Kindry's Air from "Parsifal," Elsa's Dream from "Lohengrin" and the Ballad from "Der Fliegende Hollaender" with the preludes to these works "Dich, Teure Halle Tannhaeusser" was the soprano's fourth offering, while the orchestral list also included the Overture to "Rienzi," Waldweben from "Siegfried" and the Ride from "Die Walkuere."

Miss Harshaw has had a busy week end, having sung both in Friday night's concert and yesterday morning's public rehearsal. In her first appearance today expressive sensitiveness was combined with a hint of vocal fatigue. Later, although the tonal surface was slightly ruffled, vividness of color and waxing volume were added to the discerning expressiveness of her singing.

Mr. Monteux's direction had its customary stimulation and control with a sense of thorough understanding. There was fineness and wide range of dynamic shading throughout the afternoon, and a revelation of expressive nuances which added to the effect and impact of the sonorous climaxes.

Mr. Pennario is one of our most promising young American pianists, and his playing of the "Liszt Concerto" last night revealed interpretative discernment and musicianship as well as objective technical mastery. Fluency was combined with consistent lucidity and good judgment in regard to volume. The tone was always musical, and he never pounded. The performance was also rewarding in its disclosure of the work's more intimate and lyric aspects. It missed, however, some of the largeness of scale and the often elusive blend of grandeur and grandiosity which marks Liszt's most proclamative measures.

Dr. Vaughan Williams' "Eighth Symphony" is already known in New York; he was over eighty when he composed it, but the music has no suggestions of advanced age; it gives impressions of freshness, inventiveness and diversity. In tone, clarity and proportion and general understanding the performance under Mr. Munch was admirable, and left nothing to be desired in the lyric third movement. More, however, might have been made of the whimsicality of the scherzo and the surging exhilaration of the finale. The orchestra's share of the concerto was well co-ordinated and emotionally sympathetic.

In the overture and bacchanale from Tannhaeuser at the start the Venusberg music had a memorably foaming bacchanalian elan at its climax. In the Daybreak and Rhine Journey music from Goetterdaemmerung at the close sunrise was proclaimed with effective but too boisterous vigor.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 - S. 1,189,293

AUG 4 1958

Music: At Tanglewood

Monteux Leads Wagner Program With Miss Harshaw—Pennario Plays Liszt

By EDWARD DOWNES
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 3—An all-Wagner program under the direction of Pierre Monteux brought the fifth weekend of the Boston Symphony's Berkshire Festival to a close this afternoon in a blaze of summer sunshine.

The audience was a large and enthusiastic one, although it did not measure up to the attendance of 8,770 at last night's concert conducted by Charles Munch with Leonard Pennario as soloist in the Liszt E flat Piano Concerto.

This afternoon's program, with Margaret Harshaw of the Metropolitan Opera as soprano soloist, was obviously designed for its popular appeal. Miss Harshaw, who seemed in fresher voice than on Friday, sang four excerpts: Kundry's Narrative, "Ich sah das Kind," from "Parsifal," Senta's Ballad from "The Flying Dutchman," "Dich, teure Halle," from "Tannhaeuser" and Elsa's Dream from "Lohengrin."

She sang the last two with convincing dramatic fervor. And to Elsa's Dream she brought a quality of imagination that drew a warm response from the audience. Mr. Monteux, too, beamed with pride upon his soloist.

•

Miss Harshaw's look of thanks to Mr. Monteux was clearly heartfelt, the goodwill circulated in a crescendo through the great Music Shed, and in no time at all there were whistles and a little demonstration. Everyone seemed pleased as Punch.

Mr. Monteux handled his part of the program like the veteran and sensitive musician he is. He bestowed equal care on delicate, diaphanous textures of the "Forest Murmurs" from "Siegfried" and on the bombast of the "Rienzi" Overture, which ended the first half of the program with roaring timpani and brass. However, it was a well-modulated roar and the dignified breadth of the maestro's tempo managed to ward off the beer-garden atmosphere that the "Rienzi" Overture so easily suggests.

For all their popularity, the Overture to "The Flying Dutchman" and the "Ride of the Valkyries" from "Die Walkuere" were not exactly the works to put either the Boston Symphony or Mr. Monteux on their mettle. The Preludes to "Parsifal" and "Lohengrin," on the other hand, glowed with color and a musical conviction that made them high points of the concert.

The gem of last night's concert was Mr. Munch's interpretation of the Vaughan Williams Eighth Symphony. This beautiful score seemed to lie close to the conductor's heart. Its expansive developments, the long line of certain melodies, the mildly archaic, modal flavor of the whole seemed to speak to him, and thus he made them speak to the audience. The slow cavatina of the third movement had a grave and simple appeal all the more affecting for the modesty of its outward manner.

•

Mr. Munch seemed to feel less sympathy for the virtuoso flash and thunder of the Liszt E flat Concerto. Nor did Mr. Pennario, excellent pianist though he is, seem at home in this style, either. The notes were all there, as far as one could hear, but it was a well-combed, well-bred, overcautious performance. One felt almost that Mr. Pennario did not approve of glitter. But what is the E flat Concerto without glitter?

The remainder of the program consisted of the Overture and Bacchanal from the Paris version of "Tannhaeuser" and the daybreak and Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Goetterdaemmerung." Of these, the less said the better. Mr. Munch was all energy, but this listener has rarely, if ever, heard the Boston Symphony sound so coarse and even careless. It was the Vaughan Williams that one remembered with gratitude.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 225,162

AUG 4 - 1958

Tanglewood Treats Wagner

Rich, Velvety Patches

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, Aug. 3—A concert of Wagnerian shreds and patches this afternoon concluded a Berkshire Festival week-end largely given to the works of the mighty Richard I. In this case, however, the shreds were jeweled and the patches were of rich, velvety stuffs—a selection of overtures, preludes and arias beautifully performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the mellow authority of conductor Pierre Monteux.

Friday night had heard the "Meistersinger" prelude, the "Siegfried Idyll," the prelude and Love-Death from "Tristan and Isolde" and the immolation scene out of "The Dusk of the God's," from the vigorous but decidedly uneven Wagner hand of Charles Munch.

On Saturday he conducted the "Tannhaeuser" overture and Bacchanale, and the "Morning Dawn" and Siegfried's Rhine Jounrey" from the final music-drama of the "Nibelungen Ring." Soloist of the week-end was the gorgeous-voiced soprano from the Metropolitan, Margaret Harshaw.

For some time it has been virtually axiomatic that Wagner will bring joy to the box office. Any Wagner. All Wagner. But is it still true? This afternoon's attendance figure was 6686, and for the entire week-end of three concerts, 21,946 persons. A very good attendance, indeed, but less than special for Tanglewood's Music Shed. Perhaps another trend has set in.

These concerts, of which I heard the last two, were a study in the differences of temperament and technical approach between two great conductors operating with the same forces.

Monteux, this afternoon, displayed the calm authority of an old master. At more than 83 he shuffles in tiny steps to the stand, conserves his strength in gestures. But he commands a high general level of smooth competence, a fine clarity of texture, a delicate balance between instrumental sections. The rhythm is firm, nothing is hurried, scamped, over-slowed or otherwise distorted. The "Parsifal" prelude enjoys the same Olympian majesty as the overtures to "Rienzi" and "The Flying Dutchman," with their occasional tinny echoes of Meyerbeer or Bellini.

The younger Munch, quite naturally, is given to stronger accents, faster tempi, and also to less attention to just balance between the orchestral sections. With Wagner, Munch is erratic. 'Siegfried's 'Rhine Journey" can begin most casually and noisily, and end beautifully, as it did Saturday night. Munch can start the "Tannhaeuser" overture and make it sing in grave nobility, then turn the Bacchanale into a coarsely-accented orgy. Evidently his personal feelings of the moment can mean all the difference between good style and masterly control, and vagaries of ill-considered spontaeous detail that mar the over-all effect.

Miss Harshaw on Sunday afternoon sang with a superlative beauty of tone, a big dramatic thrust. Kundry's second-act aria from "Parsifal" is not effective divorced from staged production and context, but Miss Harshaw did as much with it as could be achieved. Elsa's Dream ("Lohengrin"), Senta's ballad ("Flying Dutchman") and Elizabeth's "Dich, Teure Halle" ("Tannhaeuser") were as fine Wagner singing you are likely to hear. She was, with Mr. Monteux and the orchestra, rapturously applauded.

The elements contrasting to Wagner, of the week-end, were Walter Piston's viola concerto, given its Tanglewood premiere Friday with Joseph De Pasquale again a remarkable soloist; Liszt's E-flat piano concerto and Vaughan Williams' Eighth Symphony, on Saturday. Leonard Pennario, a rising young American pianist, gave a fluent and small-scaled account of the concerto upon what sounded to me like a dully-voiced instrument. There were a few untidy technical details, and little power was evident in the soloist's performance. Liszt may not be his meat.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 40,029

AUG 4 - 1958

Tanglewood Season Is Nearing End

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 4 — It was a week-end of Wagner music with Margaret Harshaw, soprano soloist, and Leonard Pennario, pianist, in a Liszt concerto, that drew the large audiences to magnificent playing by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at ~~the semi-final~~ concerts of the season at Tanglewood. It will be an all-Beethoven week end with which the festival will close in a performance of the "Ninth Symphony" Sunday afternoon.

Pierre Monteux conducted the orchestra yesterday afternoon in a varied program that presented Miss Harshaw as soloist in selections from "Parsifal," "Lohengrin," "The Flying Dutchman," and "Tannhaeuser." Miss Harshaw gave the large audience more of the fine, sensitive singing she had given Friday night's 6,310 who heard her in the prelude and love-death from "Tristan and Isolde" and the "Immolation Scene" from "Die Goetterdaemmerung." That audience had heard "A Siegfried Idyll" and Walter Piston's "Concerto for Viola and Orchestra" played by Joseph De Pasquale.

Saturday night's concert heard by 8,770 found the orchestra under Charles Munch in top form in brilliant performances that included Wagner's overture and bacchanale from "Tannhaeuser" with an offstage chorus adding to its effectiveness. Leonard Pennario, another of the young soloists being featured this season at Tanglewood, gave a lyrical and vigorous performance and a dynamic finish to the Liszt "Concerto for Pianoforte, in E-flat major, No. 1." It seemed that Pennario got off to a bad start but soon left that behind for a memorable performance of the music of Wagner's father-in-law.

Munch Conducts

Vaughan Williams' "Symphony No. 8 in D minor" with its color and brilliance matched by the playing of the orchestra gave variety to Saturday's program and some of the best playing we have heard at Tanglewood this season. There was splendid string playing, the percussions had their say in the fourth movement, and all together it was good listening. Mr. Munch concluded with a beautiful performance of "Daybreak" and Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Goetterdaemmerung" that sent the audience home in a happy frame of mind.

Eugene Istomin will be soloist with the orchestra Friday night in a performance of Beethoven's "Emperor." Saturday night it will be Berl Senofsky as soloist in Beethoven's "Violin Concerto" and music from "Prometheus." Pierre Monteux will conduct the "Leonore Overture No. 3" to complete the program. The Festival Chorus will close the season this year by joining the orchestra under Charles Munch in Beethoven's "Ninth symphony."

Tanglewood-On-Parade, the annual concert for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, will be held Thursday night beginning at 6 p. m. with music going on all over the place until 11 p. m. There will be opera, orchestar, pops, and prizes. Aaron Copland will play his own piano concerto with Richard Burgin, concertmaster, conducting. Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct music of Gomes and Falla and Arthur Fielder will conduct music of Offenbach, Willson, and selections from Bernstein's "West Side Story." The gala concert in the shed will begin at 8:15 p. m. and the whole program will go on rain or shine.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 188
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

BUFFALO, N. Y.
EVENING NEWS
Circ. D. 297,660

AUG 4 1958

AT BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

Brilliant Command Of Buffalo Pianist Wins 4 Curtain Calls

By JOHN DWYER
Buffalo Evening News Music Critic

TANGLEWOOD, Mass., Aug. 4—A Berkshire Festival audience of 7000 demanded four curtain calls for Buffalo-born pianist Leonard Pennario Saturday evening after a glittering performance of the Liszt E Flat Concerto with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch.

L. Pennario

The audience included such musical lights as conductor Pierre Monteux, composer Aaron Copland and Mme. Serge Koussevitsky, widow of the festival's original music director.

Many in the informed gathering had prepared a somewhat tolerant view beforehand of the early, ultra-romantic Liszt work, set down in a welter of Wagnerian epics over three weekend programs.

* * *

AT ITS CONCLUSION, however, the deep pleasure of hearing an artist in brilliant command of his instrument overflowed in an unusual demonstration of applause.

Conductor and pianist set a pace for the rushing conclusion which swept the listeners along in the tonal excitement. Veteran residents in the festival community forgot the debatable forensics and sentiment of the work itself, and counted the performance among the most sparkling of the season.

Although the youthful pianist is fully established in recordings and performances with major orchestras of the United States and Europe, the Berkshire appearance was a substantial honor.

* * *

"I HAD BEEN under some tension," said Mr. Pennario after the performance. "This is the best orchestra, possibly, in the world, and the soloist cannot help but be conscious of it. But it seemed to turn out very well."

The soloist sent his respects to many Buffalo friends, particularly to his Buffalo teacher of the earlier years, Miss Laura Kelsey.

The treasurable richness of the Boston ensemble under the masterly control of Conductor Munch adorned excerpts from Wagner's "Tannhauser" and the "Gotterdamerung," and the Vaughan Williams Symphony No. 8.

Burrel
ESTABLISH
BArclay 7-5
PRESS CLIPPING BU
165 Church Street - N

ALBANY, N.
Knickerbocker N
Circ. D. 53,178

AUG 4

Munch Bring

Muted

By WILLIAM ECKH
Knickerbocker News Staff

There's more to w than snarling brasses, r percussion and squ strings.

Deep down inside, the poetic feeling, full of w ement and meaning.
rtunately, too many tors get so preoc
h producing dazzlin nd effects that they poetry that is the m ason for being.

Not so Charles Munc
Boston Symphony O
at this weekend's agner" series of co
. Munch shared th
m with Pierre Moteu
ter conducting yeste Neither conductor k
the edge of our seats, ing what hi-fi blast
ack us next. Instead, us lean back, relax
w warm with the ian poetry.

They were kind to ou
ms, too. Occasionally prove the orchestra it, the conductors al for the fortissimo
it poured, majes shatteringly — and portant, meaningfully.
haring this attitude conductors was so rgaret Harshaw, full voice was open utmost only once or weekend. The rest
e, she wove lovely p inflection and rough her half dozen Friday's Wagner In
e Meistersinger p e Siegfried Idyll, the de and Liebestod from n, and the Immolation
om Goetterdammerun

---

an find hich to underhes to of any accord-it is in divine l to one he must an then rees this
ls. Mrs.
Health rightly rmony."

y Father
" and he mankind eveth on ll he do

gh will-nform to iness and material s, involvprive him

BUFFALO, N. Y.
EVENING NEWS
Circ. D. 297,660

AUG 4 195

BERKSHIRE FESTIV

illiant Comma
Buffalo Pian ins 4 Curtain

By JOHN DWYE

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 53,178

AUG 4 1958

Munch Brings Out F

Muted Wagı

By WILLIAM ECKHOF
Knickerbocker News Staff Writer

There's more to Wagner than snarling brasses, roaring percussion and squealing strings.

Deep down inside, there's a poetic feeling, full of warmth, movement and meaning. And unfortunately, too many conductors get so preoccupied with producing dazzling hi-fi sound effects that they forget the poetry that is the music's reason for being.

Not so Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra at this weekend's "mostly Wagner" series of concerts. Mr. Munch shared the podium with Pierre Moteux, the latter conducting yesterday.

Neither conductor kept us on the edge of our seats, wondering what hi-fi blast would attack us next. Instead, both let us lean back, relax, and grow warm with the Wagnerian poetry.

They were kind to our eardrums, too. Occasionally, just to prove the orchestra could do it, the conductors would signal for the fortissimo. And out it poured, majestically and shatteringly — and most important, meaningfully.

Sharing this attitude with the conductors was soprano Margaret Harshaw, whose big, full voice was opened to its utmost only once or twice all weekend. The rest of the time, she wove lovely patterns of inflection and charm through her half dozen arias.

Friday's Wagner included the Meistersinger prelude, the Siegfried Idyll, the prelude and Liebestod from Tristan, and the Immolation Scene from Goetterdammerung. Saturday were tl and E fried's
Goette
Wagne
cluded udes)
Rienzi, man;
Waldw
and th

To f
Symph ~~hairs.~~ techni that e uncove there stance, a diffi
the end of the Immolation Scene, but even here, her recovery was so smooth that only a few, and a slightly surprised Mr. Munch, noted it.

Special praise is deserve by the group's brass section. Brass players often are regarded as the orchestra's necessary evil—they're there, but if they're heard, that's not good.

That's why brass players love Wagner—it gives them a chance to show what fine musicians they really are. And the Boston group is superb. When Mr. Munch signaled, out they came, displaying dynamics (loud and soft) control and a roundness of tone that makes one wish they'd be heard more often.

The weekend was not all Wagner. Saturday night's program included the Liszt Piano Concerto No. 1 with Leonard Pennario as soloist and the Ralph Vaughan Williams' Eight Symphony. But the real on-Wagner treat came Friday night.

dividual
ern fam ments."

Pointi
ed the onstrate ties, Mr. hoped t certain

At the and M composer
the work must have been fulfilled. The soloist seemed to enjoy the concerto immensely, as he drew warm, full tones from his superb instrument. And the work itself moved pleasantly and all too rapidly to a conclusion.

As the soloist and Mr. Munch appeared for their curtain call, Mr. DePasquale pointed his bow into the audience, and up the aisle walked Mr. Piston himself. The trio took three enthusiastic calls.

The Piston work alone would have made the weekend delightful. But there was Wagner, too.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,937

AUG 5 1958

Monteux's Interpretation Of Wagner's Music At Tanglewood "Clear . . Luminous"

The overwhelming music of Wagner was carefully drawn and understated by Pierre Monteux as he conducted the Boston Symphony orchestra Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood.

A relatively small audience for a Sunday afternoon, 6,866 persons, listened to the Wagnerian program bringing total attendance for the weekend concerts to 21,946. Perhaps the gargantuan qualities of Wagner frighten audiences, but it shouldn't. Monteux's interpretation was clear, luminous.

Opening with the prelude to "Parsifal," the orchestra linked the themes of love, faith, and hope with serenity of mood, understating rather than overstating. The air of Kundry from "Parsifal" followed with Miss Margaret Harshaw, Wagnerian soprano with the Metropolitan Opera Co. since 1942, as soloist. Her voice did not warm up to its fullest potential until the latter half of the program. However, the audience responded to her singing after each selection with warmth.

Monteux Interpretation Clear

The prelude to "Lohengrin" glowed with an ethereal, luminous quality under Monteux's direction, making it one of the highlights of the concert. The violins were sweet and colored by the wind instruments, they built up to a peak of ecstasy. Elsa's Dream from "Lohengrin" was sung with bell-like clarity by Miss Harshaw.

A vibrant performance of the overture to "Rienzi" gave the first half of the program a brilliant ending. The orchestra drew up all its resources to lend to the heroic overture many facets of color from the sustained trumpet note at the opening, to quivering vibrations, to reiteration of the theme by all the players.

Miss Harshaw Exciting

A thunderous performance of the overture to "The Flying Dutchman" with the echo of the crew's call accenting the selection opened the second half of program. The dramatic selection was followed by an aria, the ballad of Senta, from "The Flying Dutchman" excitingly sung by Miss Harshaw. Her voice warmed to the aria with color, clarity. The charm of "Waldweben" (Forest Murmurs" from "Siegried" came in the beautiful tonal stirrings of the forest.

Miss Harshaw reached her peak in her fourth aria, "Dich, Theure Halle," from "Tannhaeuser" in which her voice took on its full color. The vitality of the aria came thru as she gave it a vigoruous interpretation. The audience responded warmly, giving her three curtain calls.

The eerie sounds of "Ride of the Valkyries" from "Die Walkure", filled with Wagnerian agitation, ended the concert. Mr .Monteux was recalled to take bows for his interpretation of Wagner by an enthusiastic audience.

Munch Heavy

Friday evening the highlight of the program was Joseph de Pasquale's performance, with the orchestra, of Concerto for Viola and Orchestra by Piston. Mr. De Pasquale's singing tones were remakrable, and the Piston work, while in s trange contrast to the Wagnerian program, was refreshing.

Margaret Harshaw was soprano soloist in the Prelude and Liebestod from Tristan and the Immolation Scene from Gotterdammerung. She has a splendid, strong, clear voice, and it was unfortunate that much of the time she was nearly drowned out by the orchestra. Mr. Munch led the Wagner works with a heavy hand, especially the prelude to "Die Meistersinger", which was stripped of its intriguing textural variety. The Siegfried Idyll was sweet and springlike, thanks to the strings, but in general Mr. Munch seemed eager to get Wagner over with.

DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE

Aug. 4, 1958

SEVEN

Wagner Featured Composer Tanglewood Concerts

last weekend Festival at nox, the for-gner was the
The contem-Piston and along with Liszt, shared riday and Sat-oung pianist, was the solong in Liszt's in E flat ma-mental runs at the begin-r nerves, but ed, Mr. Pen-ique became ly sentimen-zt were proand singing lways a titilts use of the her strongly and the frol-

the piano,
lled by Mr.
chestra; the ost endless d unwaverveen orches-s admirable ience recall-
Dr. Munch

of Saturday Munch di-and dynam-ance of the nale" from clarity of n was so dience sat urchly melourse, until res of the st in pas-nclusion of s offstage s intensely dramatic interest, their full-blown tones matching those of the orchestra. The applause was spontaneous and wildly enthusiastic.

"Daybreak and Seigfried's Rhine Journey" from Gotterdamerung" ended the program for the evening, although it might have been deleted, since Vaughn Williams' captivating. eighth symphony, a cleverly contrived work in four marvelously contrasted movements, orchestrally ingenious and apt, left the audience quite happily satisfied. Performance and program were exceptionally first-rate, Dr. Munch inspired and inspiring.

Unlike Saturday's performance and program, Sunday's was entirely devoted to Wagner overtures and arias, with Margaret Harshaw, soprano soloist, and Pierre Monteux, guest conductor. A smaller audience attended, less than the weather warranted, although perhaps Wagner is too grandiose for a comfortable Sunday afternoon's listening pleasure.

Miss Harshaw was undoubtedly suffering from a cold or sinus or both, as her breathing seemed labored, and her low tones forced; fortunately the program encompassed those works for which she is well known and admired at the Metropolitan Opera, and she performed with admirable assurance and experience. As evidenced in recital here at John M. Greene in the Smith College concert series, her voice is tremendous and powerful, but her lack of warmth and ability to communicate is still paramount. Mr. Monteux controlled the balance of the orchestra, so her voice was readily heard, above the thunderous sonorities, more happily than Friday evening, but the day belonged to Mr. Monteux and the orchestra.

In the opening "Prelude" to "Parsifal" the hushed audience bespoke the wondrous oneness of strings and winds. Throughout Mr. Monteux was absorbedly intent on projecing every nuance with the hight amount of color and phrasing. His immediate inclusion of the orchestra at every sound of applause always evokes another round. The hackneyed Rienzi "Overture" was given new life with the brass emphatic precision; the whole sounded dignified, never blatant, and stirring enough to warrant one's stepping into line and "following the leader."

Wagner's music invariably lifts one onto another plane, but Sunday's performance, except for the above-mentioned, and perhaps "The Ride of the Valkyries," failed to get off the ground due in part to "technical difficulties" and lack of inspiration. The reliable and appreciative audience, however, were wildly and demonstrably enthusiastic in their prolonged acclaim. It still is inspired music to hear, and one certainly didn't feel the afternoon wasted.

The next and last weekend will be devoted to Beethoven, including a piano and violin concerto, and the usual closing performance of his ninth symphony.

On Thursday, of course, Tanglewood on Parade offers a widely varied program, and a chance to hear the Festival School students in action, and in the evening, the latter half of the program will be given by the favorite Boston Pops, a marvelous opportunity for every musical taste.—M.deB.B.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 158,729

AUG 4 - 1958

Wagnerian Music at Tanglew

Margaret Harshaw as Soprano Soloist

By Harold Rogers
Lenox, Mass.

The penultimate concerts of the Berkshire Festival were largely given over to the music of Wagner, with Margaret Harshaw, the Metropolitan's noted Wagnerian soprano, appearing with the Boston Symphony in six selections. She sang Friday night and Sunday afternoon.

The weather Saturday night at Tanglewood was close to ideal, a considerable change for the better, according to reports. Rain and an excessive humidity have been the prevailing factors this summer, interfering with both the attendance and the performance of the music.

For this concert Charles Munch was in rare form. A smile played about his lips throughout the program—a sure sign that the music, in his estimation, is going well. This is almost a sure sign that the music will also go well for the listeners, and so it proved as he opened with the Overture and Bacchanale from "Tannhäuser," first measuring a stately, sacred pace for the Pilgrim March, and then bursting into the dithyramb of the Venusburg. It was a striking contrast of the sacred with the profane.

Leonard Pennario came forward to give us a satisfying traversal of the Liszt Piano Concerto in E-flat, No. 1. Mr. Pennario is not a brilliant pianist in today's tradition of agile technicians, though his technique permits a polished performance. His major qualities, however, are more important—a pensive poesy, a delicacy of tone, a singing line.

Dr. Munch then gave a jovial reading of Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8, written two years ago by the 86-year-old composer while in a remarkably jovial mood. Again we were impressed by the fact that Vaughan Williams has refused to drag his feet, but is always in the vanguard of musical thought. And we were doubly impressed by his rollicking good humor, especially in the Scherzo alla marcia for the winds alone, and in the Toccata finale, featuring the percussion.

Dr. Munch then closed with a radiant performance of "Daybreak" and Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Götterdämmerung."

Pierre Monteux mounted the podium for the Sunday concert, which consisted of 10 Wagnerian selections. Perhaps the preludes to "Parsifal" and "Lohengrin" were a bit too long and soporific for a somnolent Sunday afternoon, but there were compensations in the rousing Overture to "Rienzi," and of course everyone knows what happens in the Ride of the Valkyries from "Die Walküre."

Miss Harshaw gave us, in her statuesque, remote, and epical way, the Air of Kundry from "Parsifal," Elsa's Dream from "Lohengrin," Senta's Ballad from "Der fliegende Holländer," and "Dich, teure Halle" from "Tanhäuser." The heroic and clarion quality of her voice was ably supported by Mr. Monteux and the orchestra in dynamics and balance.

PENNARIO PLAYS LISZT CONCERTO AT TANGLEWOOD

Featured Pianist Heard by 8770; Wagner Works Offered

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX—A brilliant performance of Liszt's First Concerto for Piano and Orchestra by Leonard Pennario and the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch thrilled an audience estimated at 8770 persons at Tanglewood's huge shed Saturday night.

Wagner Work Heard

The program opened with a tonally luscious performance of the Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhauser by Wagner, even though the ladies of the off-stage chorus added little to the sum total. Mr. Munch made much of the dignity and splendor of the overture and poured tremendous energy into the bacchanale, and his players responded nobly.

Leonard Pennario is another of our young American pianists who is bountifully equipped to play the music of Liszt. True, the first concerto is sure-fire, but without a pianist of requisite brilliance

(See PENNARIO PLAYS)
(Page 12A)

Pure Melody

Vaughan-Williams can, and often does, write pure melody and Mr. Munch caused such passages to glow. It was a performance of tonal splendor and technical virtuosity.

The program concluded with two excerpts from Wagner's "Die Goetterdammerung, "Daybreak" and "Siegfried's Rhine Journey."

This is music of sheer magic; music which causes one to tremble with mixed emotions. There were few moments when the reading became mannered, but these were few and the music flowed with ever-increasing beauty and impact. A splendid performance Sunday afternoon, Pierre

---

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 102,839

AUG 4 1958

8,770 Hear Famed Pianist At Lenox

By JOHN F. KYES

LENOX — The next-the-last weekend at Tanglewood emphasized the music of Wagner, but drew 8,770 of its total 21,946 Saturday night, when the program ventured farthest into other channels.

Leonard Pennario, maintaining the high order of piano-playing at the Festival, gave the Liszt Concerto in E flat major (No. 1) a reading which had a considerable degree of refinement and peotry and clean technique. Though the showier passages probably raged with less abandon than Liszt intended, the Much-Pennario team created a well-knit result out of a score which is hard to integrate.

The director, who had worked patiently in the "Tannhauser" Overture to draw a full, rich tone from the winds for the "Pilgrim's Chorus" themes, and had roused the ensemble to a stupendous climax in the "Bacchanale," with an off-stage choir adding beauty to the softer passages, was at a disadvantage for the first few minutes of the Liszt, when the change in composers brought a temporary letdown. But the concerto made its point eventually.

Delightful throughout was the Vaughan Williams Eighth Symphony, written in 1956 when the composer was 83. There was no trace of age or limited vision in the four sparkling movements. It seemed as if Vaughan Williams had tried to set down some of the things which made him glad to be English.

There was the hint of old songs and folk materials in the opening. The puckish march for winds was fast and intricate, a different facet of English character from the sweet, soul-searching "Cavatina" for strings, to which Richard Burgin, concert master, contributed an effective solo.

The concluding "Toccata" brought in all sorts of percussion instruments, perhaps personifying industry and realism, but the use of noble bells lent the final picture high ideals.

Munch's interpretation of "Daybreak" from Wagner's "Twilight of the Gods" was of breath-taking beauty, and the motifs of this opera sang gloriously in "Siegfried's Rhine Journey."

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 53,178

AUG 4 1958

Munch Brings Out Poetry

Muted Wagner Lovely

By WILLIAM ECKHOF
Knickerbocker News Staff Writer

There's more to Wagner than snarling brasses, roaring percussion and squealing strings.

Deep down inside, there's a poetic feeling, full of warmth, movement and meaning. And unfortunately, too many conductors get so preoccupied with producing dazzling hi-fi sound effects that they forget the poetry that is the music's reason for being.

Not so Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra at this weekend's "mostly Wagner" series of concerts. Mr. Munch shared the podium with Pierre Moteux, the latter conducting yesterday.

Neither conductor kept us on the edge of our seats, wondering what hi-fi blast would attack us next. Instead, both let us lean back, relax, and grow warm with the Wagnerian poetry.

They were kind to our eardrums, too. Occasionally, just to prove the orchestra could do it, the conductors would signal for the fortissimo. And out it poured, majestically and shatteringly — and most important, meaningfully.

Sharing this attitude with the conductors was soprano Margaret Harshaw, whose big, full voice was opened to its utmost only once or twice all weekend. The rest of the time, she wove lovely patterns of inflection and charm through her half dozen arias.

Friday's Wagner included the Meistersinger prelude, the Siegfried Idyll, the prelude and Liebestod from Tristan, and the Immolation Scene from Goetterdammerung. Saturday the Wagnerian works were the Tannhauser overture and Bacchanale and Siegfried's Rhine Journey, from Goetterdammerung. The all-Wagner program yesterday included the overtures (or preludes) to Parsifal, Lohengrin, Rienzi, and the Flying Dutchman; four soprano arias, the Waldweben from Siegfried, and the Ride of the Valkyries.

To find fault with a Boston Symphony Program is to split hairs. The orchestra is so fine technically and artistically that even close analysis would uncover few flaws. To be sure, there were a few. For instance, Miss Harshaw missed a difficult "ho-yo-to-ho" near the end of the Immolation Scene, but even here, her recovery was so smooth that only a few, and a slightly surprised Mr. Munch, noted it.

Special praise is deserve by the group's brass section. Brass players often are regarded as the orchestra's necessary evil—they're there, but if they're heard, that's not good.

That's why brass players love Wagner—it gives them a chance to show what fine musicians they really are. And the Boston group is superb. When Mr. Munch signaled, out they came, displaying dynamics (loud and soft) control and a roundness of tone that makes one wish they'd be heard more often.

The weekend was not all Wagner. Saturday night's program included the Liszt Piano Concerto No. 1 with Leonard Pennario as soloist and the Ralph Vaughan Williams' Eight Symphony. But the real on-Wagner treat came Friday night.

The treat was in the form of a concerto for viola and orchestra written especially for the Boston Symphony and its leading violist, Joseph DePasquale, by the noted New England composer, Walter Piston. It was the first time most Tanglewood listeners had heard the work, because it had its premier performance last Mar. 7.

Mr. Piston, an authority on orchestration and author of a well-known text in that field, sets forth objectives of the concerto in program notes. "The viola should not be thought of as a 'tenor violin' or a higher pitched cello," he says. "It is a distinct and individual member of our modern family of stringed instruments."

Pointing out that he intended the work in part to demonstrate the viola's capabilities, Mr. Piston also said he hoped the work would have certain artistic merit.

At the hands of Mr. Munch and Mr. DePasquale, the composer's highest hopes for the work must have been fulfilled. The soloist seemed to enjoy the concerto immensely, as he drew warm, full tones from his superb instrument. And the work itself moved pleasantly and all too rapidly to a conclusion.

As the soloist and Mr. Munch appeared for their curtain call, Mr. DePasquale pointed his bow into the audience, and up the aisle walked Mr. Piston himself. The trio took three enthusiastic calls.

The Piston work alone would have made the weekend delightful. But there was Wagner, too.

DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE

Aug. 4, 1958

SEVEN

[170]

Wagner Featured Composer At 2 Tanglewood Concerts

For the next to last weekend of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, the formidable Richard Wagner was the featured composer. The contemporaries, Walter Piston and Vaughan Williams, along with the romantic Franz Liszt, shared the programs on Friday and Saturday nights.

The talented young pianist, Leonard Pennario, was the soloist Saturday evening in Liszt's first piano concerto in E flat major. The developmental runs were rather blurred at the beginning, due to pedal or nerves, but as the work unfolded, Mr. Pennario's facile technique became clearer, and the lushly sentimental melodies of Liszt were projected with a warm and singing tone. The scherzo, always a titillating section with its use of the triangle, (here a rather strongly played instrument), and the frolicsome rhythms of the piano, was delicately handled by Mr. Pennario and the orchestra; the preceding and almost endless trill was brilliant and unwavering. The balance between orchestra and pianist was admirable throughout; the audience recalled Mr. Pennario and Dr. Munch many times.

For the opening of Saturday night's concert, Dr. Munch directed the most lucid and dynamically perfect performance of the "Overture and Bacchanale" from "Tannhauser"; the clarity of each thematic section was so shining bright the audience sat enthralled as each churchly melody ran its colorful course, until the seductive measures of the Venusgerg burst forst in passionate appeal. The inclusion of the chanting chorus offstage heightened the music's intensely dramatic interest, their full-blown tones matching those of the orchestra. The applause was spontaneous and wildly enthusiastic.

"Daybreak and Seigfried's Rhine Journey" from Gotterdamerung" ended the program for the evening, although it might have been deleted, since Vaughn Williams' captivating. eighth symphony, a cleverly contrived work in four marvelously contrasted movements, orchestrally ingenious and apt, left the audience quite happily satisfied. Performance and program were exceptionally first-rate, Dr. Munch inspired and inspiring.

Unlike Saturday's performance and program, Sunday's was entirely devoted to Wagner overtures and arias, with Margaret Harshaw, soprano soloist, and Pierre Monteux, guest conductor. A smaller audience attended, less than the weather warranted, although perhaps Wagner is too grandiose for a comfortable Sunday afternoon's listening pleasure.

Miss Harshaw was undoubtedly suffering from a cold or sinus or both, as her breathing seemed labored, and her low tones forced; fortunately the program encompassed those works for which she is well known and admired at the Metropolitan Opera, and she performed with admirable assurance and experience. As evidenced in recital here at John M. Greene in the Smith College concert series, her voice is tremendous and powerful, but her lack of warmth and ability to communicate is still paramount. Mr. Monteux controlled the balance of the orchestra, so her voice was readily heard, above the thunderous sonorities, more happily than Friday evening, but the day belonged to Mr. Monteux and the orchestra.

In the opening "Prelude" to "Parsifal" the hushed audience bespoke the wondrous oneness of strings and winds. Throughout Mr. Monteux was absorbedly intent on projecing every nuance with the hight amount of color and phrasing. His immediate inclusion of the orchestra at every sound of applause always evokes another round. The hackneyed Rienzi "Overture" was given new life with the brass emphatic precision; the whole sounded dignified, never blatant, and stirring enough to warrant one's stepping into line and "following the leader."

Wagner's music invariably lifts one onto another plane, but Sunday's performance, except for the above-mentioned, and perhaps "The Ride of the Valkyries," failed to get off the ground due in part to "technical difficulties" and lack of inspiration. The reliable and appreciative audience, however, were wildly and demonstrably enthusiastic in their prolonged acclaim. It still is inspired music to hear, and one certainly didn't feel the afternoon wasted.

The next and last weekend will be devoted to Beethoven, including a piano and violin concerto, and the usual closing performance of his ninth symphony.

On Thursday, of course, Tanglewood on Parade offers a widely varied program, and a chance to hear the Festival School students in action, and in the evening, the latter half of the program will be given by the favorite Boston Pops, a marvelous opportunity for every musical taste.—M.deB.B.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 158,729

AUG 4 - 1958

Wagnerian Music at Tanglewood—

Margaret Harshaw as Soprano Soloist

By Harold Rogers
Lenox, Mass.

The penultimate concerts of the Berkshire Festival were largely given over to the music of Wagner, with Margaret Harshaw, the Metropolitan's noted Wagnerian soprano, appearing with the Boston Symphony in six selections. She sang Friday night and Sunday afternoon.

The weather Saturday night at Tanglewood was close to ideal, a considerable change for the better, according to reports. Rain and an excessive humidity have been the prevailing factors this summer, interfering with both the attendance and the performance of the music.

For this concert Charles Munch was in rare form. A smile played about his lips throughout the program—a sure sign that the music, in his estimation, is going well. This is almost a sure sign that the music will also go well for the listeners, and so it proved as he opened with the Overture and Bacchanale from "Tannhäuser," first measuring a stately, sacred pace for the Pilgrim March, and then bursting into the dithyramb of the Venusburg. It was a striking contrast of the sacred with the profane.

Leonard Pennario came forward to give us a satisfying traversal of the Liszt Piano Concerto in E-flat, No. 1. Mr. Pennario is not a brilliant pianist in today's tradition of agile technicians, though his technique permits a polished performance. His major qualities, however, are more important—a pensive poesy, a delicacy of tone, a singing line.

Dr. Munch then gave a jovial reading of Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8, written two years ago by the 86-year-old composer while in a remarkably jovial mood. Again we were impressed by the fact that Vaughan Williams has refused to drag his feet, but is always in the vanguard of musical thought. And we were doubly impressed by his rollicking good humor, especially in the Scherzo alla marcia for the winds alone, and in the Toccata finale, featuring the percussion.

Dr. Munch then closed with a radiant performance of "Daybreak" and Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Götterdämmerung."

Pierre Monteux mounted the podium for the Sunday concert, which consisted of 10 Wagnerian selections. Perhaps the preludes to "Parsifal" and "Lohengrin" were a bit too long and soporific for a somnolent Sunday afternoon, but there were compensations in the rousing Overture to "Rienzi," and of course everyone knows what happens in the Ride of the Valkyries from "Die Walküre."

Miss Harshaw gave us, in her statuesque, remote, and epical way, the Air of Kundry from "Parsifal," Elsa's Dream from "Lohengrin," Senta's Ballad from "Der fliegende Holländer," and "Dich, teure Halie" from "Tanhäuser." The heroic and clarion quality of her voice was ably supported by Mr. Monteux and the orchestra in dynamics and balance.

PENNARIO PLAYS LISZT CONCERTO AT TANGLEWOOD

Featured Pianist Heard by 8770; Wagner Works Offered

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX—A brilliant performance of Liszt's First Concerto for stra by Leonard ie Boston Sym- conducted by brilled an audi- at 8770 persons at Tanglewood's huge shed Saturday night.

Wagner Work Heard

The program opened with a tonally luscious performance of the Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhauser by Wagner, even though the ladies of the off-stage chorus added little to the sum total. Mr. Munch made much of the dignity and splendor of the overture and poured tremendous energy into the bacchanale, and his players responded nobly.

Leonard Pennario is another of our young American pianists who is bountifully equipped to play the music of Liszt. True, the first concerto is sure-fire, but without a pianist of requisite brilliance

(See PENNARIO PLAYS)
(Page 12A)

Pure Melody

Vaughan-Williams can, and often does, write pure melody and Mr. Munch caused such passages to glow. It was a performance of tonal splendor and technical virtuosity.

The program concluded with two excerpts from Wagner's "Die Goetterdammerung, "Daybreak" and "Siegfried's Rhine Journey."

This is music of sheer magic; music which causes one to tremble with mixed emotions. There were few moments when the reading became mannered, but these were few and the music flowed with ever-increasing beauty and impact. A splendid performance Sunday afternoon, Pierre

---

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 102,839

AUG 4 1958

8,770 Hear Famed Pianist At Lenox

By JOHN F. KYES

LENOX — The next-the-last weekend at Tanglewood emphasized the music of Wagner, but drew 8,770 of its total 21,946 Saturday night, when the program ventured farthest into other channels.

Leonard Pennario, maintaining the high order of piano-playing at the Festival, gave the Liszt Concerto in E flat major (No. 1) a reading which had a considerable degree of refinement and peotry and clean technique. Though the showier passages probably raged with less abandon than Liszt intended, the Much-Pennario team created a well-knit result out of a score which is hard to integrate.

The director, who had worked patiently in the "Tannhauser" Overture to draw a full, rich tone from the winds for the "Pilgrim's Chorus" themes, and had roused the ensemble to a stupendous climax in the "Bacchanale," with an off-stage choir adding beauty to the softer passages, was at a disadvantage for the first few minutes of the Liszt, when the change in composers brought a temporary letdown. But the concerto made its point eventually.

Delightful throughout was the Vaughan Williams Eighth Symphony, written in 1956 when the composer was 83. There was no trace of age or limited vision in the four sparkling movements. It seemed as if Vaughan Williams had tried to set down some of the things which made him glad to be English.

There was the hint of old songs and folk materials in the opening. The puckish march for winds was fast and intricate, a different facet of English character from the sweet, soul-searching "Cavatina" for strings, to which Richard Burgin, concert master, contributed an effective solo.

The concluding "Toccata" brought in all sorts of percussion instruments, perhaps personifying industry and realism, but the use of noble bells lent the final picture high ideals.

Munch's interpretation of "Daybreak" from Wagner's "Twilight of the Gods" was of breath-taking beauty, and the motifs of this opera sang gloriously in "Siegfried's Rhine Journey."

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 53,178

AUG 4 1958

Munch Brings Out Poetry

Muted Wagner Lovely

By WILLIAM ECKHOF
Knickerbocker News Staff Writer

There's more to Wagner than snarling brasses, roaring percussion and squealing strings.

Deep down inside, there's a poetic feeling, full of warmth, movement and meaning. And unfortunately, too many conductors get so preoccupied with producing dazzling hi-fi sound effects that they forget the poetry that is the music's reason for being.

Not so Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra at this weekend's "mostly Wagner" series of concerts. Mr. Munch shared the podium with Pierre Moteux, the latter conducting yesterday.

Neither conductor kept us on the edge of our seats, wondering what hi-fi blast would attack us next. Instead, both let us lean back, relax, and grow warm with the Wagnerian poetry.

They were kind to our eardrums, too. Occasionally, just to prove the orchestra could do it, the conductors would signal for the fortissimo. And out it poured, majestically and shatteringly — and most important, meaningfully.

Sharing this attitude with the conductors was soprano Margaret Harshaw, whose big, full voice was opened to its utmost only once or twice all weekend. The rest of the time, she wove lovely patterns of inflection and charm through her half dozen arias.

Friday's Wagner included the Meistersinger prelude, the Siegfried Idyll, the prelude and Liebestod from Tristan, and the Immolation Scene from Goetterdammerung. Saturday the Wagnerian works were the Tannhauser overture and Bacchanale and Siegfried's Rhine Journey, from Goetterdammerung. The all-Wagner program yesterday included the overtures (or preludes) to Parsifal, Lohengrin, Rienzi, and the Flying Dutchman; four soprano arias, the Waldweben from Siegfried, and the Ride of the Valkyries.

To find fault with a Boston Symphony Program is to split hairs. The orchestra is so fine technically and artistically that even close analysis would uncover few flaws. To be sure, there were a few. For instance, Miss Harshaw missed a difficult "ho-yo-to-ho" near the end of the Immolation Scene, but even here, her recovery was so smooth that only a few, and a slightly surprised Mr. Munch, noted it.

Special praise is deserve by the group's brass section. Brass players often are regarded as the orchestra's necessary evil —they're there, but if they're heard, that's not good.

That's why brass players love Wagner—it gives them a chance to show what fine musicians they really are. And the Boston group is superb. When Mr. Munch signaled, out they came, displaying dynamics (loud and soft) control and a roundness of tone that makes one wish they'd be heard more often.

The weekend was not all Wagner. Saturday night's program included the Liszt Piano Concerto No. 1 with Leonard Pennario as soloist and the Ralph Vaughan Williams' Eight Symphony. But the real on-Wagner treat came Friday night.

The treat was in the form of a concerto for viola and orchestra written especially for the Boston Symphony and its leading violist, Joseph DePasquale, by the noted New England composer, Walter Piston. It was the first time most Tanglewood listeners had heard the work, because it had its premier performance last Mar. 7.

Mr. Piston, an authority on orchestration and author of a well-known text in that field, sets forth objectives of the concerto in program notes. "The viola should not be thought of as a 'tenor violin' or a higher pitched cello," he says. "It is a distinct and individual member of our modern family of stringed instruments."

Pointing out that he intended the work in part to demonstrate the viola's capabilities, Mr. Piston also said he hoped the work would have certain artistic merit.

At the hands of Mr. Munch and Mr. DePasquale, the composer's highest hopes for the work must have been fulfilled. The soloist seemed to enjoy the concerto immensely, as he drew warm, full tones from his superb instrument. And the work itself moved pleasantly and all too rapidly to a conclusion.

As the soloist and Mr. Munch appeared for their curtain call, Mr. DePasquale pointed his bow into the audience, and up the aisle walked Mr. Piston himself. The trio took three enthusiastic calls.

The Piston work alone would have made the weekend delightful. But there was Wagner, too.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 158,729

AUG 4 - 1958

Wagnerian Music at

Margaret Harshaw as Soprano Soloist

By Harold Rogers
Lenox, Mass.

The penultimate concerts of the Berkshire Festival were largely given over to the music of Wagner, with Margaret Harshaw, the Metropolitan's noted Wagnerian soprano, appearing with the Boston Symphony in six selections. She sang Friday night and Sunday afternoon.

The weather Saturday night at Tanglewood was close to ideal, a considerable change for the better, according to reports. Rain and an excessive humidity have been the prevailing factors this summer, interfering with both the attendance and the performance of the music.

For this concert Charles Munch was in rare form. A smile played about his lips throughout the program—a sure sign that the music, in his estimation, is going well. This is almost a sure sign that the music will also go well for the listeners, and so it proved as he opened with the Overture and Bacchanale from "Tannhäuser," first measuring a stately, sacred pace for the Pilgrim March, and then bursting into the dithyramb of the Venusburg. It was a striking contrast of the sacred with the profane.

Leonard Pennario came forward to give us a satisfying traversal of the Liszt Piano Concerto in E-flat, No. 1. Mr. Pennario is not a brilliant pianist in today's tradition of agile technicians, though his technique permits a polished performance. His major qualities, however, are more important—a pensive poesy, a delicacy of tone, a singing line.

Dr. Munch then gave a jovial reading of Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8, written two years ago by the 86-year-old composer while in a remarkably jovial mood. Again we were impressed by the fact that Vaughan Williams has refused to drag his feet, but is always in the vanguard of musical thought. And we were doubly impressed by his rollicking good humor, especially in the Scherzo alla marcia for the winds alone, and in the Toccata finale, featuring the percussion.

Dr. Munch then closed with a radiant performance of "Daybreak" and Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Götterdämmerung."

Pierre Monteux mounted the podium for the Sunday concert, which consisted of 10 Wagnerian selections. Perhaps the preludes to "Parsifal" and "Lohengrin" were a bit too long and soporific for a somnolent Sunday afternoon, but there were compensations in the rousing Overture to "Rienzi," and of course everyone knows what happens in the Ride of the Valkyries from "Die Walküre."

Miss Harshaw gave us, in her statuesque, remote, and epical way, the Air of Kundry from "Parsifal," Elsa's Dream from "Lohengrin," Senta's Ballad from "Der fliegende Holländer," and "Dich, teure Halle" from "Tanhäuser." The heroic and clarion quality of her voice was ably supported by Mr. Monteux and the orchestra in dynamics and balance.

DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE

Aug. 4, 1958

SEVEN

Wagner Featured Composer At 2 Tanglewood Concerts

For the next to last weekend of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, the formidable Richard Wagner was the featured composer. The contemporaries, Walter Piston and Vaughan Williams, along with the romantic Franz Liszt, shared the programs on Friday and Saturday nights.

The talented young pianist, Leonard Pennario, was the soloist Saturday evening in Liszt's first piano concerto in E flat major. The developmental runs were rather blurred at the beginning, due to pedal or nerves, but as the work unfolded, Mr. Pennario's facile technique became clearer, and the lushly sentimental melodies of Liszt were projected with a warm and singing tone. The scherzo, always a titillating section with its use of the triangle, (here a rather strongly played instrument), and the frolicsome rhythms of the piano, was delicately handled by Mr. Pennario and the orchestra; the preceding and almost endless trill was brilliant and unwavering. The balance betw en orches-

admirable ce recall-
r. Munch

Saturday
unch did dynamce of the le" from rity of was so ence sat hly mel-se, until of the in passion of offstage tensely fullose of se was nthusifried's

rdam-n for might aughn ighth trived contrally audi-Performance and program were exceptionally first-rate, Dr. Munch inspired and inspiring.

Unlike Saturday's performance and program, Sunday's was entirely devoted to Wagner overtures and arias, with Margaret Harshaw, soprano soloist, and Pierre Monteux, guest conductor. A smaller audience attended, less than the weather warranted, although perhaps Wagner is too grandiose for a comfortable Sunday afternoon's listening pleasure.

Miss Harshaw was undoubtedly suffering from a cold or sinus or both, as her breathing seemed labored, and her low tones forced; fortunately the program encompassed those works for which she is well known and admired at the Metropolitan Opera, and she performed with admirable assurance and experience. As evidenced in recital here at John M. Greene in the Smith College concert series, her voice is tremendous and powerful, but her lack of warmth and ability to communicate is still paramount. Mr. Monteux controlled the balance of the orchestra, so her voice was readily heard, above the thunderous sonorities, more happily than Friday evening, but the day belonged to Mr. Monteux and the orchestra.

In the opening "Prelude" to "Parsifal" the hushed audience bespoke the wondrous oneness of strings and winds. Throughout Mr. Monteux was absorbedly intent on projecing every nuance with the hight amount of color and phrasing. His immediate inclusion of the orchestra at every sound of applause always evokes another round. The hackneyed Rienzi "Overture" was given new life with the brass emphatic precision; the whole sounded dignified, never blatant, and stirring enough to warrant one's stepping into line and "following the leader."

Wagner's music invariably lifts one onto another plane, but Sunday's performance, except for the above-mentioned, and perhaps "The Ride of the Valkyries," failed to get off the ground due in part to "technical difficulties" and lack of inspiration. The reliable and appreciative audience, however, were wildly and demonstrably enthusiastic in their prolonged acclaim. It still is inspired music to hear, and one certainly didn't feel the afternoon wasted.

The next and last weekend will be devoted to Beethoven, including a piano and violin concerto, and the usual closing performance of his ninth symphony.

On Thursday, of course, Tanglewood on Parade offers a widely varied program, and a chance to hear the Festival School students in action, and in the evening, the latter half of the program will be given by the favorite Boston Pops, a marvelous opportunity for every musical taste.—M.deB.B.

(Continued From Page 1A)

and technical facility it could fall by the way. Mr. Pennario lived up to the expectations his many piano records have raised and he provided exciting pianism, even though, from where we sat, rapid passages were sometimes less than immaculate. The collaboration between pianist and orchestra was excellent and the performance won all concerned a well-deserved ovation.

Symphony Performed

Vaughan - Williams "Symphony No. 8 in D Minor fitted well into the program. Mr. Munch appears to have a fondness for the work and his reading of it is both scholarly and communicative. The symphony might acquire the title of a concerto for orchestra, for the composer has divided his orchestral resources to best show them off.

The opening movement is called a Fantasia, in which the orchestra is used as a whole; the second movement is a scherzo for wind instruments only; the third movement is a cavatina for strings only and the final movement utilizes all the percussion the composer could get.

This is the sort of music the Boston instrumentalists can play in superb fashion. Its wind and string sections are notable for their beauty of tone and the virtuosity of the players. The percussion section has its virtuosi and Saturday night one heard them to particular advantage.

Pure Melody

Vaughan-Williams can, and often does, write pure melody and Mr. Munch caused such passages to glow. It was a performance of tonal splendor and technical virtuosity.

The program concluded with two excerpts from Wagner's "Die Goetterdammerung, "Daybreak" and "Siegfried's Rhine Journey."

This is music of sheer magic; music which causes one to tremble with mixed emotions. There were few moments when the reading became mannered, but these were few and the music flowed with ever-increasing beauty and impact. A splendid performance. Sunday afternoon, Pierre

---

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 102,839

AUG 4 1958

8,770 Hear Famed Pianist At Lenox

By JOHN F. KYES

LENOX — The next-the-last weekend at Tanglewood emphasized the music of Wagner, but drew 8,770 of its total 21,946 Saturday night, when the program ventured farthest into other channels.

Leonard Pennario, maintaining the high order of piano-playing at the Festival, gave the Liszt Concerto in E flat major (No. 1) a reading which had a considerable degree of refinement and peotry and clean technique. Though the showier passages probably raged with less abandon than Liszt intended, the Much-Pennario team created a well-knit result out of a score which is hard to integrate.

The director, who had worked patiently in the "Tannhauser" Overture to draw a full, rich tone from the winds for the "Pilgrim's Chorus" themes, and had roused the ensemble to a stupendous climax in the "Bacchanale," with an off-stage choir adding beauty to the softer passages, was at a disadvantage for the first few minutes of the Liszt, when the change in composers brought a temporary letdown. But the concerto made its point eventually.

Delightful throughout was the Vaughan Williams Eighth Symphony, written in 1956 when the composer was 83. There was no trace of age or limited vision in the four sparkling movements. It seemed as if Vaughan Williams had tried to set down some of the things which made him glad to be English.

There was the hint of old songs and folk materials in the opening. The puckish march for winds was fast and intricate, a different facet of English character from the sweet, soul-searching "Cavatina" for strings, to which Richard Burgin, concert master, contributed an effective solo.

The concluding "Toccata" brought in all sorts of percussion instruments, perhaps personifying industry and realism, but the use of noble bells lent the final picture high ideals.

Munch's interpretation of "Daybreak" from Wagner's "Twilight of the Gods" was of breath-taking beauty, and the motifs of this opera sang gloriously in "Siegfried's Rhine Journey."

[171]

Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,290

AUG 7 - 1958

Wagner Program Is Musical Triumph In Tanglew'd Concert

Although we're not particularly Wagner fans, we have to admit that the August 1 concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, which consisted primarily of Wagner works, was a triumph of musical craftsmanship and art, with the added dividend of the powerful and rich voice of the Met's Margaret Harshaw giving the evening an apex of enjoyment.

The Boston Symphony's famed brass section was excellently prominent, in the first presentation of the evening, Wagner's prelude to "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg," and Maestro Charles Munch complemented the thrilling intensity and richness of the brasses and timpani with a sustained, determined pace full of Wagnerian suspense and promise, bringing the prelude to a crisp close.

The excellent strings and woodwinds of the orchestra were a treat to the ear in Wagner's "Siegfried Idyll," as Dr. Munch conducted the orchestra with purposeful restraint in the gently undulating melody which coasted to a restful ending.

Soloist Margaret Harshaw gave an exquisite and powerfully projected performance, eliciting many bravas from the audience in the performance of the Prelude and Love-Death from Wagner's "Tristan und Isolde." Miss Harshaw successfully transmitted the intense, passionate nature of this classic excerpt. The audience demanded several curtain calls from the soloist, and were graciously obliged.

A new work, the Walter Piston "Concerto For Viola and Orchestra" followed the intermission on the program. Joseph De Pasquale, superb violist of the Boston Symphony, was the soloist, and, as might be expected of this distinguished artist, gave a fine rendition of the concerto.

Mr. Munch conducted the orchestra and Mr. De Pasquale through the seeking, restless measures of the first movement and the contented, tentative second, to find in the third movement a measure of explosive, vibrant excitement. Once more the bravos rang out for composer and soloist, and a large ovation was given the orchestra and artists.

Last on the evening's program was the Finale "Immolation Scene" from Wagner's "Die Gotterdammerung." Under the volatile and dynamic baton of Dr. Munch, with again a superb performance by Miss Harshaw and the brass section, crescendo built upon crescendo to a stunning climax for the evening.

About the only thing wrong with the evening was the temperature. Concert goers leaving the huge shed were startled to find that their breaths were actually visible in the chill Berkshire air, and on the first day of August, too.

L.F.M.

Final Weekend

The final weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will feature music of Bethoven. Charles Munch, Music Director, will conduct the concerts of August 8 at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon, Augusut 10, at 2:30. The concert on August 9, at 8:30, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux. Soloists will include Eugene Istomin, pianist (August 8) and Berl Senofsky, violinist (August 9).

Dr. Munch will open Friday evening's concert with Honegger's ning's concert with Honegger's Pre Prelude, Fugue and Postlude, followed by Beethoven's Symphony No. 7. Eugene Istomin will be soloist in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5 "Emperor". Mr. Istomin is the sixth of the outstanding young American pianists who have appeared at Tanglewood during the current season, others being Lukas Foss, Seymour Lipkin, Leon Fleisher, Byron Janis and Leonard Pennario. Mrs. Istomin last appeared at Tanglewood in 1955.

The concert on Saturday conducted by Pierre Monteux will open with music from "Prometheus" by Beethoven. Berl Senofsky will be soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto. Mr. Senofsky was the winner of the 1955 Brussels Competition and has appeared with many of the outstanding American orchestras since his United States debut in 1956. This will be his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In the second half of the program, Mr. Monteux will present Hindemith's "Nibilissima Visione" and Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3.

Dr. Munch will follow his regular custom of closing the Berkshire Festival season with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on Sunday afternoon. Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto: Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson. The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johannesburg Festival Overture, which was written for the 70th Anniversary of the city of Johannesburg in South Africa and first performed there in 1956. The Boston Symphony Orchestra presented the United States premiere of the Overture during the 1956-57 season.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,138

AUG 2 1958

Music of Wagner, Piston Attracts 6,310 to Tanglewood

The music of Richard Wagner and Walter Piston, with an assist from dry weather, brought an estimated 6,310 persons to Tanglewood for last evening's program by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch.

The program was the first of three concerts this weekend, which will feature music by Wagner.

Last evening the program opened with the prelude to "Die Meistersinger." Then followed the Siegfried Idyll, Prelude and Love. Soprano Margaret Harshaw was soloist with the orchestra in the Death from "Tristan and Isolde."

Joseph De Pasquale, first violist of the orchestra, performed the only Piston work of the evening, the Viola Concerto. The work was dedicated to Mr. De Pasquale by the composer.

Miss Harshaw was soloist in the evening's final selection, the immolation scene from Wagner's "Die Gotterdamerung."

The forecast is for fine weather over the weekend which should help to bring out larger throngs for this evening's performance at 8:30 and tomorrow afternoon's program at 2:30.

Dr. Munch will conduct this evening's program of Wagner's "Tannhauser" Overture and Bacchanale; Liszt's Piano Concerto No. 1 in E-Flat, with soloist Leonard Pennario; Vaughan Williams, Symphony No. 8, and Wagner's Siegfried's Rhine Journey.

Pierre Monteux will conduct tomorrow afternoon. Miss Harshaw will return as soloist for the all-Wagner program, which includes excerpts from "The Flying Dutchman," "Lohengrin," "Die Walkure," "Parsifal," "Tannhauser," "Rienzi," and "Siegfried."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 113,886

AUG 10 1958

Second Thoughts' On Music

Boston Symphony Superb In Wagner Opera Excerpts

Margaret Harshaw Impressive as Soloist at Tanglewood; DePasquale Plays Piston Viola Concerto; Kroll Quartet in Chamber Music

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX—The music of Richard Wagner dominated the orchestral programs last week at Tanglewood, with conductors Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux putting the Boston Symphony Orchestra players through their paces in music which revealed the orchestra in all its splendor. Margaret Harshaw, currently the best of the Wagnerian sopranos, was the soloist. Joseph De Pasquale, first violist of the orchestra, was heard in Walter Piston's viola concerto, which the composer dedicated to him. The admirable Kroll String Quartet played to a capacity audience in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Wagner's Appeal

The week-end audiences, as far as size is concerned, was disappointing. Perhaps Wagner no longer has the appeal he used to have, but it is on record that opera audiences are mostly capacity audiences when Wagner is given. An entire afternoon of Wagner, without the theatrical trappings, can be boresome.

Miss Harshaw can summon imposing volume and top notes, but the voice is breathy in the middle and low ranges. She is a perceptive artist and her singing of the "Liebestod" from "Tristan and Isolde" was impressive, as was her singing of the Immolation Scene from "Gotterdammerung." These items she sang under Dr. Munch's direction.

Last Sunday, with Pierre Monteux at the helm, the soprano had a busy afternoon singing arias from, "Parsifal," "Lohengrin," "The Flying Dutchman" and "Tannhauser." Of the four the "Tannhauser" aria "Dich Teure Halle" was the most impressive. Miss Harshaw is built on Valkyrie proportions. Mr. Monteux is very short. When they appeared together to acknowledge applause, the audience's sense of humor came to the fore in no uncertain terms.

Orchestrally there was much fine playing heard in the Wagner items. Notable was the Prelude to "Die Meistersinger" and the Prelude to "Tristan and Isolde" as interpreted by Mr. Munch and the Prelude to "Lohengrin" and the "Ride of the Valkyrie" from "Die Walkure" as conducted by Mr. Monteux.

Piston's Concerto

Walter Piston is a skilled craftsman and also a deft melodist. His concerto for viola and piano utilizes all the resources of the instrument and imposes numerous challenges for the violist. These were met in fine fashion by Mr. De Pasquale. We had a feeling that did he play more solos his projection would improve. The concerto has a fine Adagio movement and a Finale which is awesome in its difficulty and audience impact.

Another deviation from the music of Wagner found pianist Leonard Pennario playing the Liszt Concerto for Piano and Orchestra, No. 1. It was not an entirely satisfactory performance. Although he is well equipped technically to play this sort of music, he appeared to lack the sense of grandeur and splendor which this music demands. At times, the scales fell short of perfection.

The collaboration between orchestra and soloist was excellent, but more could have been gotten from the work. In his recordings, Mr. Pennario often sounds percussive. There were no such sounds in the Liszt. Indeed, he offered some beautiful tones in lyrical passages and the most thunderous had body and solidity.

The Kroll String Quartet

The Kroll String Quartet made the first of two appearances last week and a capacity audience was on hand. The quartet consists of William Kroll, violinist; Louis Graeler, violin; David Mankovitz, viola, and Avron Twerdowsky, cello.

Mr. Kroll is the dominating member of the quartet, sometimes too much so. One thing of which you may be sure is that the interpretations of this quartet will be scholarly. The quartet was heard in Mozart's Quartet in C major, K. 165, Blackwood's "String Quartet No. 1" and Brahms' Quartet in C minor, Op. 51 No. 1.

There was interest in Mr. Blackwood's quartet for he had written a symphony for the Boston Symphony Orchestra last year and it was well received. The young man's string quartet owes a good deal to Bela Bartok. It is strongly written and may well take its place in the repertory of additional string quartets. The Budapest Quartet has added it to its repertory.

Blackwood was a former student here and was on the scene to acknowledge applause given his first quartet. The work was given a fine reading by Mr. Kroll and his colleagues.

Brahms comes well within the scope of the Kroll Quartet. The finest playing the evening was lavished upon it and the result was something to remember. Particularly lovely were the Romanza and the brilliant final Allegro. Mozart, from where we sat, suffered because of the predominance of the first violin. The performance was on the stiff side, lacking in the expected grace and elegance.

Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 142,739

AUG 3 1958

Wagner Saluted At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. Special) — Charles Munch and he Boston Symphony Orchestra 'an up the flag for Richard Vagner Friday night as the Berkshire Music Festival went nto its next-to-closing weekend.

It was an evening of interminable pieces. the Prelude to "Die Meistersinger," a Siegfried Idyll, he Prelude and Lovedeath from "Tristan and Isolde," the Immolation Scene from "Goetterdaemmerung." For though in lapsed time perhaps they are not so long, they seem to go quite beyond their logical end and start around for a second stanza.

All Very Showy

Nevertheless, they were excellently set out and performed by Mr. Munch and the orchestra Where the music required heroics, Mr. Munch gave it real oomph and the orchestra came up with the big oompah. Where it required anguish this was supplied with Vitamin D added. It was all very showy upon the ear and heart, which is of course what Wagner had in mind.

Margaret Harshaw, soprano, sang the "Love - Death" and the Immolation Scene. She is a veritable valkyr in stature and is equipped with a large and handsome voice which she uses with ease, never trying to knock off the ball at the big moment, but keeping things tasteful and forthright. This perhaps is a little non - Wagnerian but none the less attractive.

Only work on the program not from the German master was Walter Piston's recently - new Viola Concerta, a most attractive composition as offered by Joseph De Pasquale, first violist of the Boston Symphony, to whom it is dedicated. Extremely well written, for its particular solo instrument, it is essentially a modest work, relying on quiet and Patrician effects rather than novelty or surprise.

This concerto is concise, very well made, economic in its orchestration which stresses the strings. It is melodious from end to end, neither academic not yet very "modern" in temper. Of its three conventional movements, the first two are rather subdued and dark hued. The last livens up, with somewhat larger effects, for a bright sign-off.

Mr. DePasquale gave a splendid performance, full of elegance and eloquence, for which he received the prolonged "bravo," of the audience, sharing them with the composer who certainly deserved them as well.—T.H.P.

New England Newsclip Agency
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchm

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

AUG 7 - 1958

Notes and Footnotes

DROPPED around to Morton jewelers on Dunham Street and talked with watchmaker Edgar H. Winstead about the new watch cleaner which does its work with ultrasonic impulses in a liquid into which the works are dunked. Minute bubbles form which penetrate the works, but the theory failed to penetrate our mind, so we fell to discussing the less minute problems of a watchmaker.

More than once folks have come to Mr. Winstead with a watch just repaired by a competitor for him to check and see that they hadn't stolen any of the jewels. "This is pretty silly," Mr. Winstead allowed. "The jewels in a watch are commercial type and worth no more than $3 or $4 each. The labor of stealing them would be more than they are worth."

Summertime as usual brings a flock of watches that have gone in swimming. Mr. W's advice in such cases is to take it quickly to a watchmaker, even though it runs right. Rusting won't start for a couple of days, but then it is probably too late to save the delicate mechanism. Of course, waterproof jobs are all right, but they, too, have peculiarities. If damaged so the crystal and the metal ring that holds it fall out, by all means save the ring. "Each ring is a specially fitted job," he said, "and cannot be duplicated. If it's lost you must get a whole new case."

A good watch lasts indefinitely, he told us. Many keepsake timepieces come to him that are 70 and 80 years old. "They usually are well taken care of, and require little more than a cleaning," he said.

His own watches are like the shoemaker's children. He has three or four, but one has long been waiting its turn for attention. With his wife's it is different. "She says if someone asks her the time it is good business for her to have the right answer," he told us. Her watches always are right up to snuff.

—o—

AUDIENCE at last week's Tanglewood program that included soprano Margaret Harshaw puzzled at the cold manner in which she acknowledged the applause. Understand she was irked at finding there was another soloist on the program, violist Joseph de Pasquale.

—o

EXTENDED visit: Miss Sally Holroyd who taught dance at the Pittsfield Community Music School, and plans to open her own school this fall, dropped in at Jacob's Pillow to renew acquaintance with Myra Kinch recently. Quick as a bunny, she was signed up in Miss K's company and will dance this week on the Pillow program in "The Flowering Branch." Other summers Miss H has been Myra's assistant at the Pillow, and was leading dancer in "The Common Glory," an annual historical show that Miss Kinch stages at Williamsburg, Va.

—o—

WHAT'S in a name? The North Adams police have a "billet doux" for a man named Robert Search. They are looking, but no Search yet.

RICHARD V. HAPPEL.

New England Newsclip
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Rich
Bee
NEWTOWN,
Weekly Inde
Circ. 6,15

AUG 8 195

Reviewer Se
'Slightly Di

Pierre Monteux
Tanglew

Wagner had his wood last week from it all slight
The concerts on Fri day were mostly W afternoon's was large serving of arias, four of each Murmurs and The Valkyries thrown measure. Soprano shaw of the Metrop
Company was solo Monteux, looking dy Roosevelt every
Boston Symphony
Although the aud applauded each num

Music Review

By JAY C. RO

AN ALL-WAGN yesterday afternoo wood marked the
the fifth and next-end of the Berksh
The Boston Symph
under Pierre Mont half dozen of the excerpts from the supported Margaret four of the most arias for soprano.
Miss Harshaw h
Friday evening in Wagner arias. Ye seemed to be more more appreciative ence's enthusiastic her majestic voic
Monteux had to use erable powers of p force her to return to acknowledge t which would not di

IT WAS another
as a matter of fact.
seems to hold him miration and affect one will gainsay t not deserve both t orchestra plays wi refulgent response whether it was pianissimo passages beginning of the prelude in which the softly in their high or when they cele giously exciting jubile Ride of the Valkyrie magnificent music-m
A list of the cons tails they achieved afternoon would beg first bow strokes of in the Prelude to "Pa which the program tense warmth used the solemnity of the "Last Supper" was inflected to give shap ing to the phrase, succeeding section stand a critical magn and reward the analy

THE WEATHER of concerts was orable of the seaso and the proportion of ence which chose the adjacent to the gr seemed to be larger other concerts this ye
This weekend registe ber of firsts in progra at Tanglewood. This time here that Wagner the object of so much tion. His magnetism in house maintains its traction; on the conce
is a question whether same appeal. There is even a remembrance of gies and controversies evoked a century ago

PRESS CLI
165 Church S

ALBA
Knicker
Circ

AUG 4 1958

Munch Brings Out Poetry

Muted Wagner Lovely

By WILLIAM ECKHOF
Knickerbocker News Staff Writer

There's more to Wagner than snarling brasses, roaring percussion and squealing strings.

Deep down inside, there's a poetic feeling, full of warmth, movement and meaning. And unfortunately, too many conductors get so preoccupied with producing dazzling hi-fi sound effects that they forget the poetry that is the music's reason for being.

Not so Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra at this weekend's "mostly Wagner" series of concerts. Mr. Munch shared the podium with Pierre Moteux, the latter conducting yesterday.

Neither conductor kept us on the edge of our seats, wondering what hi-fi blast would attack us next. Instead, both let us lean back, relax, and grow warm with the Wagnerian poetry.

They were kind to our eardrums, too. Occasionally, just to prove the orchestra could do it, the conductors would signal for the fortissimo. And out it poured, majestically and shatteringly — and most important, meaningfully.

Sharing this attitude with the conductors was soprano Margaret Harshaw, whose big, full voice was opened to its utmost only once or twice all weekend. The rest of the time, she wove lovely patterns of inflection and charm through her half dozen arias.

Friday's Wagner included the Meistersinger prelude, the Siegfried Idyll, the prelude and Liebestod from Tristan, and the Immolation Scene from Goetterdammerung. Saturday the Wagnerian works were the Tannhauser overture and Bacchanale and Siegfried's Rhine Journey, from Goetterdammerung. The all-Wagner program yesterday included the overtures (or preludes) to Parsifal, Lohengrin, Rienzi, and the Flying Dutchman; four soprano arias, the Waldweben from Siegfried, and the Ride of the Valkyries.

To find fault with a Boston Symphony Program is to split hairs. The orchestra is so fine technically and artistically that even close analysis would uncover few flaws. To be sure, there were a few. For instance, Miss Harshaw missed a difficult "ho-yo-to-ho" near the end of the Immolation Scene, but even here, her recovery was so smooth that only a few, and a slightly surprised Mr. Munch, noted it.

Special praise is deserve by the group's brass section. Brass players often are regarded as the orchestra's necessary evil —they're there, but if they're heard, that's not good.

That's why brass players love Wagner—it gives them a chance to show what fine musicians they really are. And the Boston group is superb. When Mr. Munch signaled, out they came, displaying dynamics (loud and soft) control and a roundness of tone that makes one wish they'd be heard more often.

The weekend was not all Wagner. Saturday night's program included the Liszt Piano Concerto No. 1 with Leonard Pennario as soloist and the Ralph Vaughan Williams' Eight Symphony. But the real on-Wagner treat came Friday night.

The treat was in the form of a concerto for viola and orchestra written especially for the Boston Symphony and its leading violist, Joseph DePasquale, by the noted New England composer, Walter Piston. It was the first time most Tanglewood listeners had heard the work, because it had its premier performance last Mar. 7.

Mr. Piston, an authority on orchestration and author of a well-known text in that field, sets forth objectives of the concerto in program notes. "The viola should not be thought of as a 'tenor violin' or a higher pitched cello," he says. "It is a distinct and individual member of our modern family of stringed instruments."

Pointing out that he intended the work in part to demonstrate the viola's capabilities, Mr. Piston also said he hoped the work would have certain artistic merit.

At the hands of Mr. Munch and Mr. DePasquale, the composer's highest hopes for the work must have been fulfilled. The soloist seemed to enjoy the concerto immensely, as he drew warm, full tones from his superb instrument. And the work itself moved pleasantly and all too rapidly to a conclusion.

As the soloist and Mr. Munch appeared for their curtain call, Mr. DePasquale pointed his bow into the audience, and up the aisle walked Mr. Piston himself. The trio took three enthusiastic calls.

The Piston work alone would have made the weekend delightful. But there was Wagner, too.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 158,729

AUG 4 - 1958

Wagnerian Music at Ta

Margaret Harshaw as Soprano Soloist

By Harold Rogers
Lenox, Mass.

The penultimate concerts of the Berkshire Festival were largely given over to the music of Wagner, with Margaret Harshaw, the Metropolitan's noted Wagnerian soprano, appearing with the Boston Symphony in six selections. She sang Friday night and Sunday afternoon.

The weather Saturday night at Tanglewood was close to ideal, a considerable change for the better, according to reports. Rain and an excessive humidity have been the prevailing factors this summer, interfering with both the attendance and the performance of the music.

For this concert Charles Munch was in rare form. A smile played about his lips throughout the program—a sure sign that the music, in his estimation, is going well. This is almost a sure sign that the music will also go well for the listeners, and so it proved as he opened with the Overture and Bacchanale from "Tannhäuser," first measuring a stately, sacred pace for the Pilgrim March, and then bursting into the dithyramb of the Venusburg. It was a striking contrast of the sacred with the profane.

Leonard Pennario came forward to give us a satisfying traversal of the Liszt Piano Concerto in E-flat, No. 1. Mr. Pennario is not a brilliant pianist in today's tradition of agile technicians, though his technique permits a polished performance. His major qualities, however, are more important—a pensive poesy, a delicacy of tone, a singing line.

Dr. Munch then gave a jovial reading of Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8, written two years ago by the 86-year-old composer while in a remarkably jovial mood. Again we were impressed by the fact that Vaughan Williams has refused to drag his feet, but is always in the vanguard of musical thought. And we were doubly impressed by his rollicking good humor, especially in the Scherzo alla marcia for the winds alone, and in the Toccata finale, featuring the percussion.

Dr. Munch then closed with a radiant performance of "Daybreak" and Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Götterdämmerung."

Pierre Monteux mounted the podium for the Sunday concert, which consisted of 10 Wagnerian selections. Perhaps the preludes to "Parsifal" and "Lohengrin" were a bit too long and soporific for a somnolent Sunday afternoon, but there were compensations in the rousing Overture to "Rienzi," and of course everyone knows what happens in the Ride of the Valkyries from "Die Walküre."

Miss Harshaw gave us, in her statuesque, remote, and epical way, the Air of Kundry from "Parsifal," Elsa's Dream from "Lohengrin," Senta's Ballad from "Der fliegende Holländer," and "Dich, teure Halle" from "Tanhäuser." The heroic and clarion quality of her voice was ably supported by Mr. Monteux and the orchestra in dynamics and balance.

---

[170]

DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE

Aug. 4, 1958

SEVEN

Wagner Featured Composer At 2 Tanglewood Concerts

For the next to last weekend of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, the formidable Richard Wagner was the featured composer. The contemporaries, Walter Piston and Vaughan Williams, along with the romantic Franz Liszt, shared the programs on Friday and Saturday nights.

The talented young pianist, Leonard Pennario, was the soloist Saturday evening in Liszt's first piano concerto in E flat major. The developmental runs were rather blurred at the beginning, due to pedal or nerves, but as the work unfolded, Mr. Pennario's facile technique became clearer, and the lushly sentimental melodies of Liszt were projected with a warm and singing tone. The scherzo, always a titilating section with its use of the triangle, (here a rather strongly played instrument), and the frolicsome rhythms of the piano, was delicately handled by Mr. Pennario and the orchestra; the preceding and almost endless trill was brilliant and unwavering. The balance between orches- admirable ce recall- r. Munch

Saturday unch di- d dynam- ce of the le" from rity of was so ence sat hly mel- se, until of the in pas- sion of offstage tensely full- ose of se was nthusifried's rdam- m for might aughn eighth trived con- trally audi- Performance and program were exceptionally first-rate, Dr. Munch inspired and inspiring.

Unlike Saturday's performance and program, Sunday's was entirely devoted to Wagner overtures and arias, with Margaret Harshaw, soprano soloist, and Pierre Monteux, guest conductor. A smaller audience attended, less than the weather warranted, although perhaps Wagner is too grandiose for a comfortable Sunday afternoon's listening pleasure.

Miss Harshaw was undoubtedly suffering from a cold or sinus or both, as her breathing seemed labored, and her low tones forced; fortunately the program encompassed those works for which she is well known and admired at the Metropolitan Opera, and she performed with admirable assurance and experience. As evidenced in recital here at John M. Greene in the Smith College concert series, her voice is tremendous and powerful, but her lack of warmth and ability to communicate is still paramount. Mr. Monteux controlled the balance of the orchestra, so her voice was readily heard, above the thunderous sonorities, more happily than Friday evening, but the day belonged to Mr. Monteux and the orchestra.

In the opening "Prelude" to "Parsifal" the hushed audience bespoke the wondrous oneness of strings and winds. Throughout Mr. Monteux was absorbedly intent on projecting every nuance with the hight amount of color and phrasing. His immediate inclusion of the orchestra at every sound of applause always evokes another round. The hackneyed Rienzi "Overture" was given new life with the brass emphatic precision; the whole sounded dignified, never blatant, and stirring enough to warrant one's stepping into line and "following the leader."

Wagner's music invariably lifts one onto another plane, but Sunday's performance, except for the above-mentioned, and perhaps "The Ride of the Valkyries," failed to get off the ground due in part to "technical difficulties" and lack of inspiration. The reliable and appreciative audience, however, were wildly and demonstrably enthusiastic in their prolonged acclaim. It still is inspired music to hear, and one certainly didn't feel the afternoon wasted.

The next and last weekend will be devoted to Beethoven, including a piano and violin concerto, and the usual closing performance of his ninth symphony.

On Thursday, of course, Tanglewood on Parade offers a widely varied program, and a chance to hear the Festival School students in action, and in the evening, the latter half of the program will be given by the favorite Boston Pops, a marvelous opportunity for every musical taste.—M.deB.B.

(Continued From Page 1A)

and technical facility it could fall by the way. Mr. Pennario lived up to the expectations his many piano records have raised and he provided exciting pianism, even though, from where we sat, rapid passages were sometimes less than immaculate. The collaboration between pianist and orchestra was excellent and the performance won all concerned a well-deserved ovation.

Symphony Performed

Vaughan - Williams "Symphony No. 8 in D Minor fitted well into the program. Mr. Munch appears to have a fondness for the work and his reading of it is both scholarly and communicative. The symphony might acquire the title of a concerto for orchestra, for the composer has divided his orchestral resources to best show them off.

The opening movement is called a Fantasia, in which the orchestra is used as a whole; the second movement is a scherzo for wind instruments only; the third movement is a cavatina for strings only and the final movement utilizes all the percussion the composer could get.

This is the sort of music the Boston instrumentalists can play in superb fashion. Its wind and string sections are notable for their beauty of tone and the virtuosity of the players. The percussion section has its virtuosi and Saturday night one heard them to particular advantage.

Pure Melody

Vaughan-Williams can, and often does, write pure melody and Mr. Munch caused such passages to glow. It was a performance of tonal splendor and technical virtuosity.

The program concluded with two excerpts from Wagner's "Die Goetterdammerung, "Daybreak" and "Siegfried's Rhine Journey."

This is music of sheer magic; music which causes one to tremble with mixed emotions. There were few moments when the reading became mannered, but these were few and the music flowed with ever-increasing beauty and impact. A splendid performance unday afternoon, Pierre

---

"Show You Care"
Longmeadow
FLOWERS
LO 7-5994

Fine Flowers
SHEEHAN
FLORIST
2444 BOSTON RD.
TEL. LY 6-4200

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 102,839

AUG 4 1958

8,770 Hear Famed Pianist At Lenox

By JOHN F. KYES

LENOX — The next-the-last weekend at Tanglewood emphasized the music of Wagner, but drew 8,770 of its total 21,946 Saturday night, when the program ventured farthest into other channels.

Leonard Pennario, maintaining the high order of piano-playing at the Festival, gave the Liszt Concerto in E flat major (No. 1) a reading which had a considerable degree of refinement and peotry and clean technique. Though the showier passages probably raged with less abandon than Liszt intended, the Much-Pennario team created a well-knit result out of a score which is hard to integrate.

The director, who had worked patiently in the "Tannhauser" Overture to draw a full, rich tone from the winds for the "Pilgrim's Chorus" themes, and had roused the ensemble to a stupendous climax in the "Bacchanale," with an off-stage choir adding beauty to the softer passages, was at a disadvantage for the first few minutes of the Liszt, when the change in composers brought a temporary letdown. But the concerto made its point eventually.

Delightful throughout was the Vaughan Williams Eighth Symphony, written in 1956 when the composer was 83. There was no trace of age or limited vision in the four sparkling movements. It seemed as if Vaughan Williams had tried to set down some of the things which made him glad to be English.

There was the hint of old songs and folk materials in the opening. The puckish march for winds was fast and intricate, a different facet of English character from the sweet, soul-searching "Cavatina" for strings, to which Richard Burgin, concert master, contributed an effective solo.

The concluding "Toccata" brought in all sorts of percussion instruments, perhaps personifying industry and realism, but the use of noble bells lent the final picture high ideals.

Munch's interpretation of "Daybreak" from Wagner's "Twilight of the Gods" was of breath-taking beauty, and the motifs of this opera sang gloriously in "Siegfried's Rhine Journey."

Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,290
AUG 7 - 1958

Wagner Program Is Musical Triumph In Tanglew'd Concert

Although we're not particularly Wagner fans, we have to admit that the August 1 concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, which consisted primarily of Wagner works, was a triumph of musical craftsmanship and art, with the added dividend of the powerful and rich voice of the Met's Margaret Harshaw giving the evening an apex of enjoyment.

The Boston Symphony's famed brass section was excellently prominent, in the first presentation of the evening, Wagner's prelude to "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg," and Maestro Charles Munch complemented the thrilling intensity and richness of the brasses and timpani with a sustained, determined pace full of Wagnerian suspense and promise, bringing the prelude to a crisp close.

The excellent strings and woodwinds of the orchestra were a treat to the ear in Wagner's "Siegfried Idyll," as Dr. Munch conducted the orchestra with purposeful restraint in the gently undulating melody which coasted to a restful ending.

Soloist Margaret Harshaw gave an exquisite and powerfully projected performance, eliciting many bravas from the audience in the performance of the Prelude and Love-Death from Wagner's "Tristan und Isolde." Miss Harshaw successfully transmitted the intense, passionate nature of this classic excerpt. The audience demanded several curtain calls from the soloist, and were graciously obliged.

A new work, the Walter Piston "Concerto For Viola and Orchestra" followed the intermission on the program. Joseph De Pasquale, superb violist of the Boston Symphony, was the soloist, and, as might be expected of this distinguished artist, gave a fine rendition of the concerto.

Mr. Munch conducted the orchestra and Mr. De Pasquale through the seeking, restless measures of the first movement and the contented, tentative second, to find in the third movement a measure of explosive, vibrant excitement. Once more the bravos rang out for composer and soloist, and a large ovation was given the orchestra and artists.

Last on the evening's program was the Finale "Immolation Scene" from Wagner's "Die Gotterdammerung." Under the volatile and dynamic baton of Dr. Munch, with again a superb performance by Miss Harshaw and the brass section, crescendo built upon crescendo to a stunning climax for the evening.

About the only thing wrong with the evening was the temperature. Concert goers leaving the huge shed were startled to find that their breaths were actually visible in the chill Berkshire air, and on the first day of August, too.

L.F.M.

Final Weekend

The final weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will feature music of Bethoven. Charles Munch, Music Director, will conduct the concerts of August 8 at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon, Augusut 10, at 2:30. The concert on August 9, at 8:30, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux. Soloists will include Eugene Istomin, pianist (August 8) and Berl Senofsky, violinist (August 9).

Dr. Munch will open Friday evening's concert with Honegger's ning's concert with Honegger's Pre Prelude, Fugue and Postlude, followed by Beethoven's Symphony No. 7. Eugene Istomin will be soloist in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5 "Emperor". Mr. Istomin is the sixth of the outstanding young American pianists who have appeared at Tanglewood during the current season, others being Lukas Foss, Seymour Lipkin, Leon Fleisher, Byron Janis and Leonard Pennario. Mrs. Istomin last appeared at Tanglewood in 1955.

The concert on Saturday conducted by Pierre Monteux will open with music from "Prometheus" by Beethoven. Berl Senofsky will be soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto. Mr. Senofsky was the winner of the 1955 Brussels Competition and has appeared with many of the outstanding American orchestras since his United States debut in 1956. This will be his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In the second half of the program, Mr. Monteux will present Hindemith's "Nibilissima Visione" and Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3.

Dr. Munch will follow his regular custom of closing the Berkshire Festival season with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on Sunday afternoon. Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto: Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson. The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johannesburg Festival Overture, which was written for the 70th Anniversary of the city of Johannesburg in South Africa and first performed there in 1956. The Boston Symphony Orchestra presented the United States premiere of the Overture during the 1956-57 season.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,138
AUG 2 1958

Music of Wagner, Piston Attracts 6,310 to Tanglewood

The music of Richard Wagner and Walter Piston, with an assist from dry weather, brought an estimated 6,310 persons to Tanglewood for last evening's program by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch.

The program was the first of three concerts this weekend, which will feature music by Wagner.

Last evening the program opened with the prelude to "Die Meistersinger." Then followed the Siegfried Idyll, Prelude and Love. Soprano Margaret Harshaw was soloist with the orchestra in the Death from "Tristan and Isolde."

Joseph De Pasquale, first violist of the orchestra, performed the only Piston work of the evening, the Viola Concerto. The work was dedicated to Mr. De Pasquale by the composer.

Miss Harshaw was soloist in the evening's final selection, the immolation scene from Wagner's "Die Gotterdamerung."

The forecast is for fine weather over the weekend which should help to bring out larger throngs for this evening's performance at 8:30 and tomorrow afternoon's program at 2:30.

Dr. Munch will conduct this evening's program of Wagner's "Tannhauser" Overture and Bacchanale; Liszt's Piano Concerto No. 1 in E-Flat, with soloist Leonard Pennario; Vaughan Williams, Symphony No. 8, and Wagner's Siegfried's Rhine Journey.

Pierre Monteux will conduct tomorrow afternoon. Miss Harshaw will return as soloist for the all-Wagner program, which includes excerpts from "The Flying Dutchman," "Lohengrin," "Die Walkure," "Parsifal," "Tannhauser," "Rienzi," and "Siegfried."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 113,886
AUG 10 1958

Second Thoughts' On Music

Boston Symphony Superb In Wagner Opera Excerpts

Margaret Harshaw Impressive as Soloist at Tanglewood; DePasquale Plays Piston Viola Concerto; Kroll Quartet in Chamber Music

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX—The music of Richard Wagner dominated the orchestral programs last week at Tanglewood, with conductors Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux putting the Boston Symphony Orchestra players through their paces in music which revealed the orchestra in all its splendor. Margaret Harshaw, currently the best of the Wagnerian sopranos, was the soloist. Joseph De Pasquale, first violist of the orchestra, was heard in Walter Piston's viola concerto, which the composer dedicated to him. The admirable Kroll String Quartet played to a capacity audience in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Wagner's Appeal

The week-end audiences, as far as size is concerned, was disappointing. Perhaps Wagner no longer has the appeal he used to have, but it is on record that opera audiences are mostly capacity audiences when Wagner is given. An entire afternoon of Wagner, without the theatrical trappings, can be boresome.

Miss Harshaw can summon imposing volume and top notes, but the voice is breathy in the middle and low ranges. She is a perceptive artist and her singing of the "Liebestod" from "Tristan and Isolde" was impressive, as was her singing of the Immolation Scene from "Gotterdammerung." These items she sang under Dr. Munch's direction.

Last Sunday, with Pierre Monteux at the helm, the soprano had a busy afternoon singing arias from, "Parsifal," "Lohengrin," "The Flying Dutchman" and "Tannhauser." Of the four the "Tannhauser" aria "Dich Teure Halle" was the most impressive. Miss Harshaw is built on Valkyrie proportions. Mr. Monteux is very short. When they appeared together to acknowledge applause, the audience's sense of humor came to the fore in no uncertain terms.

Orchestrally there was much fine playing heard in the Wagner items. Notable was the Prelude to "Die Meistersinger" and the Prelude to "Tristan and Isolde" as interpreted by Mr. Munch and the Prelude to "Lohengrin" and the "Ride of the Valkyrie" from "Die Walkure" as conducted by Mr. Monteux.

Piston's Concerto

Walter Piston is a skilled craftsman and also a deft melodist. His concerto for viola and piano utilizes all the resources of the instrument and imposes numerous challenges for the violist. These were met in fine fashion by Mr. De Pasquale. We had a feeling that did he play more solos his projection would improve. The concerto has a fine Adagio movement and a Finale which is awesome in its difficulty and audience impact.

Another deviation from the music of Wagner found pianist Leonard Pennario playing the Liszt Concerto for Piano and Orchestra, No. 1. It was not an entirely satisfactory performance. Although he is well equipped technically to play this sort of music, he appeared to lack the sense of grandeur and splendor which this music demands. At times, the scales fell short of perfection.

The collaboration between orchestra and soloist was excellent, but more could have been gotten from the work. In his recordings, Mr. Pennario often sounds percussive. There were no such sounds in the Liszt. Indeed, he offered some beautiful tones in lyrical passages and the most thunderous had body and solidity.

The Kroll String Quartet

The Kroll String Quartet made the first of two appearances last week and a capacity audience was on hand. The quartet consists of William Kroll, violinist; Louis Graeler, violin; David Mankovitz, viola, and Avron Twerdowsky, cello.

Mr. Kroll is the dominating member of the quartet, sometimes too much so. One thing of which you may be sure is that the interpretations of this quartet will be scholarly. The quartet was heard in Mozart's Quartet in C major, K. 165, Blackwood's "String Quartet No. 1" and Brahms' Quartet in C minor, Op. 51 No. 1.

There was interest in Mr. Blackwood's quartet for he had written a symphony for the Boston Symphony Orchestra last year and it was well received. The young man's string quartet owes a good deal to Bela Bartok. It is strongly written and may well take its place in the repertory of additional string quartets. The Budapest Quartet has added it to its repertory.

Blackwood was a former student here and was on the scene to acknowledge applause given his first quartet. The work was given a fine reading by Mr. Kroll and his colleagues.

Brahms comes well within the scope of the Kroll Quartet. The finest playing the evening was lavished upon it and the result was something to remember. Particularly lovely were the Romanza and the brilliant final Allegro. Mozart, from where we sat, suffered because of the predominance of the first violin. The performance was on the stiff side, lacking in the expected grace and elegance.

Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 142,739
AUG 3 1958

Wagner Saluted At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. (Special) — Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra ran up the flag for Richard Wagner Friday night as the Berkshire Music Festival went into its next-to-closing weekend. It was an evening of interminable pieces. the Prelude to "Die Meistersinger," a Siegfried Idyll, the Prelude and Lovedeath from "Tristan and Isolde," the Immolation Scene from "Goetterdaemmerung." For though in elapsed time perhaps they are not so long, they seem to go quite beyond their logical end and start around for a second stanza.

All Very Showy

Nevertheless, they were excellently set out and performed by Mr. Munch and the orchestra Where the music required heroics, Mr. Munch gave it real oomph and the orchestra came up with the big oompah. Where it required anguish this was supplied with Vitamin D added. It was all very showy upon the ear and heart. which is of course what Wagner had in mind.

Margaret Harshaw, soprano, sang the "Love - Death" and the Immolation Scene. She is a veritable valkyr in stature and is equipped with a large and handsome voice which she uses with ease, never trying to knock off the ball at the big moment, but keeping things tasteful and forthright. This perhaps is a little non - Wagnerian but none the less attractive.

Only work on the program not from the German master was Walter Piston's recently - new Viola Concerta. a most attractive composition as offered by Joseph De Pasquale, first violist of the Boston Symphony, to whom it is dedicated. Extremely well written. for its particular solo instrument, it is essentially a modest work, relying on quiet and Patrician effects rather than novelty or surprise.

This concerto is concise, very well made, economic in its orchestration which stresses the strings. It is melodious from end to end, neither academic nor yet very "modern" in temper. Of its three conventional movements, the first two are rather subdued and dark hued. The last livens up, with somewhat larger effects, for a bright sign-off.

Mr. DePasquale gave a splendid performance, full of elegance and eloquence, for which he received the prolonged "bravo," of the audience, sharing them with the composer who certainly deserved them as well.—T.H.P.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354
AUG 7 - 1958

Notes and Footnotes

DROPPED around to Morton jewelers on Dunham Street and talked with watchmaker Edgar H. Winstead about the new watch cleaner which does its work with ultrasonic impulses in a liquid into which the works are dunked. Minute bubbles form which penetrate the works, but the theory failed to penetrate our mind, so we fell to discussing the less minute problems of a watchmaker.

More than once folks have come to Mr. Winstead with a watch just repaired by a competitor for him to check and see that they hadn't stolen any of the jewels. "This is pretty silly," Mr. Winstead allowed. "The jewels in a watch are commercial type and worth no more than $3 or $4 each. The labor of stealing them would be more than they are worth."

Summertime as usual brings a flock of watches that have gone in swimming. Mr. W's advice in such cases is to take it quickly to a watchmaker, even though it runs right. Rusting won't start for a couple of days, but then it is probably too late to save the delicate mechanism. Of course, waterproof jobs are all right, but they, too, have peculiarities. If damaged so the crystal and the metal ring that holds it fall out, by all means save the ring. "Each ring is a specially fitted job," he said, "and cannot be duplicated. If it's lost you must get a whole new case."

A good watch lasts indefinitely, he told us. Many keepsake timepieces come to him that are 70 and 80 years old. "They usually are well taken care of, and require little more than a cleaning," he said.

His own watches are like the shoemaker's children. He has three or four, but one has long been waiting its turn for attention. With his wife's it is different. "She says if someone asks her the time it is good business for her to have the right answer," he told us. Her watches always are right up to snuff.

—o—

AUDIENCE at last week's Tanglewood program that included soprano Margaret Harshaw puzzled at the cold manner in which she acknowledged the applause. Understand she was irked at finding there was another soloist on the program, violist Joseph de Pasquale.

—o—

EXTENDED visit: Miss Sally Holroyd who taught dance at the Pittsfield Community Music School, and plans to open her own school this fall, dropped in at Jacob's Pillow to renew acquaintance with Myra Kinch recently. Quick as a bunny, she was signed up in Miss K's company and will dance this week on the Pillow program in "The Flowering Branch." Other summers Miss H has been Myra's assistant at the Pillow, and was leading dancer in "The Common Glory," an annual historical show that Miss Kinch stages at Williamsburg, Va.

—o—

WHAT'S in a name? The North Adams police have a "billet doux" for a man named Robert Search. They are looking, but no Search yet.

RICHARD V. HAPPEL.

[172]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 9 • Richmond 2-4200

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159

AUG 8 1958

Reviewer Sees Wagner 'Slightly Disheveled'

Pierre Monteux Conducts At Tanglewood

Wagner had his day at Tanglewood last week end, and emerged from it all slightly disheveled. The concerts on Friday and Saturday were mostly Wagner. Sunday afternoon's was nothing but—a large serving of overtures and arias, four of each, with Forest Murmurs and The Ride of the Valkyries thrown in for good measure. Soprano Margaret Harshaw of the Metropolitan Opera Company was soloist and Pierre Monteux, looking more like Teddy Roosevelt every day, led the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Although the audience warmly applauded each number, and even waxed thunderous after Miss Harshaw's final aria, the afternoon was marked by a general lack of enthusiasm on both sides of the lights. Mr Monteux conducted evenly and with authority, but with little of the vigor and spirit which one has come to expect from this celebrated octogenarian. The main exception to this was the Rienzi overture, an old chestnut which Mr Monteux lifted from the realm of circus music and imbued with genuine dramatic power and excitement.

The Forest Murmurs from Siegfried was also well realized. But in the main the orchestral playing was out of focus—with the woodwinds and brass overwhelming the strings and the percussion dominating all by sheer brute force. Because this was a rare thing to hear from Mr Monteux, it was perhaps all the more noticeable.

The Parsifal and Lohengrin preludes were proper but not as vital as one might have wished. The Flying Dutchman overture was handled with an unBostonian lack of precision, although the mishaps in the brass and horns might well be traced to the effects of the humidity in the instruments. Whatever the reason, one noticed signs of disorder and of an improper balancing of forces.

Miss Harshaw suffered more than once from this general lack of equilibrium. Fresh from Di Walkuere at Denver's Red Rock Amphitheater, she displayed tremendous power and control. Even so she was occasionally inundated by the massive strength of the orchestra as it welled up in symphonic-type climaxes, seemingly unaware of her presence. But each time the voice reappeared, undaunted and ready to carry on.

Her most rewarding work came after intermission with Santa's Ballad from The Flying Dutchman and "Dich, teure Halle" from Tannhauser. In both arias she momentarily dispelled the feeling of disinterest which had pervaded the first half of the program. After both she was repeatedly recalled from the wings by audience and orchestra alike and by Mr Monteux's courtly entreaties.

The applause was apparently for her final arias. Her first pair, Kundry's Air from Parsifal and Elsa's Dream from Lohengrin, were marred by a cramped style and by the impression that only a fraction of her great talent was being put to use.

The final week end of the series, beginning August 8, will feature the music of Beethoven. Pianist Eugene Istomin and violinist Berl Senofsky will be heard on Friday and Saturday respectively. The Festival will conclude on Sunday afternoon with the Ninth Symphony under Charles Munch.

—Robert A. Eade

Waterbury, Conn. Town Times 8-7-58

Wagner Program Is Musical Triumph In Tanglew'd Concert

Although we're not particularly Wagner fans, we have to admit that the August 1 concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, which consisted primarily of Wagner works, was a triumph of musical craftsmanship and art, with the added dividend of the powerful and rich voice of the Met's Margaret Harshaw giving the evening an apex of enjoyment.

The Boston Symphony's famed brass section was excellently prominent, in the first presentation of the evening, Wagner's prelude to "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg," and Maestro Charles Munch complemented the thrilling intensity and richness of the brasses and timpani with a sustained, determined pace full of Wagnerian suspense and promise, bringing the prelude to a crisp close.

The excellent strings and woodwinds of the orchestra were a treat to the ear in Wagner's "Siegfried Idyll," as Dr. Munch conducted the orchestra with purposeful restraint in the gently undulating melody which coasted to a restful ending.

Soloist Margaret Harshaw gave an exquisite and powerfully projected performance, eliciting many bravas from the audience in the performance of the Prelude and Love-Death from Wagner's "Tristan und Isolde." Miss Harshaw successfully transmitted the intense, passionate nature of this classic excerpt. The audience demanded several curtain calls from the soloist, and were graciously obliged.

A new work, the Walter Piston "Concerto For Viola and Orchestra" followed the intermission on the program. Joseph De Pasquale, superb violist of the Boston Symphony, was the soloist, and, as might be expected of this distinguished artist, gave a fine rendition of the concerto.

Mr. Munch conducted the orchestra and Mr. De Pasquale through the seeking, restless measures of the first movement and the contented, tentative second, to find in the third movement a measure of explosive, vibrant excitement. Once more the bravos rang out for composer and soloist, and a large ovation was given the orchestra and artists.

Last on the evening's program was the Finale "Immolation Scene" from Wagner's "Die Gotterdammerung." Under the volatile and dynamic baton of Dr. Munch, with again a superb performance by Miss Harshaw, and the brass section, crescendo built upon crescendo to a stunning climax for the evening.

About the only thing wrong with the evening was the temperature. Concert goers leaving the huge shed were startled to find that their breaths were actually visible in the chill Berkshire air, and on the first day of August, too.

L.F.M.

Final Weekend

The final weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will feature music of Bethoven. Charles Munch, Music Director, will conduct the concerts of August 8 at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon, Augusut 10, at 2:30. The concert on August 9, at 8:30, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux. Soloists will include Eugene Istomin, pianist (August 8) and Berl Senofsky, violinist (August 9).

Dr. Munch will open Friday evening's concert with Honegger's ning's concert with Honegger's Pre Prelude, Fugue and Postlude, followed by Beethoven's Symphony No. 7. Eugene Istomin will be soloist in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5 "Emperor". Mr. Istomin is the sixth of the outstanding young American pianists who have appeared at Tanglewood during the current season, others being Lukas Foss, Seymour Lipkin, Leon Fleisher, Byron Janis and Leonard Pennario. Mrs. Istomin last appeared at Tanglewood in 1955.

The concert on Saturday conducted by Pierre Monteux will open with music from "Prometheus" by Beethoven. Berl Senofsky will be soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto. Mr. Senofsky was the winner of the 1955 Brussels Competition and has appeared with many of the outstanding American orchestras since his United States debut in 1956. This will be his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In the second half of the program, Mr. Monteux will present Hindemith's "Nibilissima Visione" and Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3.

Dr. Munch will follow his regular custom of closing the Berkshire Festival season with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on Sunday afternoon. Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson. The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johannesburg Festival Overture, which was written for the 70th Anniversary of the city of Johannesburg in South Africa and first performed there in 1956. The Boston Symphony Orchestra presented the United States premiere of the Overture during the 1956-57 season.

Music Review

Wagner at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

AN ALL-WAGNER program yesterday afternoon at Tanglewood marked the completion of the fifth and next-to-last weekend of the Berkshire Festival. The Boston Symphony orchestra under Pierre Monteux played a half dozen of the most famous excerpts from the Operas, and supported Margaret Harshaw in four of the most celebrated arias for soprano.

Miss Harshaw had appeared Friday evening in two other Wagner arias. Yesterday she seemed to be more relaxed and more appreciative of the audience's enthusiastic approval of her majestic voice, although Monteux had to use his considerable powers of persuasion to force her to return more often to acknowledge the applause which would not diminish.

* * *

IT WAS another Monteux day, as a matter of fact. The audience seems to hold him in equal admiration and affection, and no one will gainsay that he does not deserve both tributes. The orchestra plays with its most refulgent response for him, and whether it was in the most pianissimo passages as in the beginning of the "Lohengrin" prelude in which the violins play softly in their highest register or when they released prodigiously exciting jubilation in "the Ride of the Valkyries," it was magnificent music-making.

A list of the conspicuous details they achieved during the afternoon would begin with the first bow strokes of the cellos in the Prelude to "Parsifal" with which the program opened. The tense warmth used to express the solemnity of the motif of the "Last Supper" was beautifully inflected to give shape and meaning to the phrase, and every succeeding section would withstand a critical magnifying glass and reward the analyst.

* * *

THE WEATHER for this trio of concerts was the most favorable of the season to date, and the proportion of the audience which chose the wide lawns adjacent to the great Shed seemed to be larger than at other concerts this year.

This weekend registered a number of firsts in program-making at Tanglewood. This is the first time here that Wagner has been the object of so much concentration. His magnetism in the opera house maintains its [illegible] attraction; on the concert stage it is a question whether he has the same appeal. There is no longer even a remembrance of the struggles and controversies his music evoked a century ago, and what was once unacceptable to many musicians is today routine even though it never descends to equanimity.

* * *

THE RICH invention of Wagner's harmony still melts our souls, or, as one of his most ardent admirers said: "His music opens my heart as a clenched fist opens to greet a friend." His use of mythical legends and inflated heroics in his libretti matched his propensity to make music as definite as speech, and no one since his time has ever come near his delineation of character and action in drama by means of music alone.

There are few audiences as cordial as those which come to Tanglewood. They obviously come to enjoy themselves, and no one will cavil that the Boston orchestra and its invited guests merit approval in an extremely enthusiastic degree. But their reactions at times are indiscriminate, and they clap and cheer music of all eras and sometimes of varying degrees of performance with equal strength and vociferousness. It thus would be difficult to gauge the true popularity of Wagner today by a typical Tanglewood reaction. Musicians of the age and advancement of the students at the Berkshire Music Center like his music and appreciate his originality and his place in artistic progress, but one might safely guess that he has been replaced in their estimation by the composers of succeeding generations and by those of today, such as Bartok, Hindemith and Stravinsky.

Margaret Harshaw

* * *

THIS IS pretty late to attempt to assay Wagner, but we would hazard a prediction that he will not figure so prominently again on Tanglewood programs in the regimes of anyone now in any post of authority and command of the Berkshire Festivals.

Miss Harshaw sang the Air of Kundry from "Parsifal," Elsa's Dream from "Lohengrin," Senta's ballad from "The Flying Dutchman" and "Dich, teure Halle" from "Tannhauser." Her voice dominates these roles and Monteux was most attentive to adjusting the orchestra to her singing. She thus was able to use all the variations of tone production of which she can well boast, and allow her art to be heard at its best advantage.

Monteux, in addition to orchestral episodes leading up to the vocal solos in "Parsifal" and "Lohengrin" also played the overtures to two of the early operas, "Rienzi" and "Der fliegende Hollander," the "Forest Murmurs" from "Siegfried." and, as a grand finale, the "Ride of the Valkyries." On last week's program Monteux had played a prelude from Milhaud's "Eumenides," sisters in the mystical and legendary areas where also abided Wagner's "Valkyries."

* * *

SATURDAY NIGHT Charles Munch constructed his program with two Wagner excerpts as frame, and with a Liszt piano concerto and Vaughan Williams's eighth symphony occupying the center of the canvas.

Munch played the overture and Bacchanale from Wagner's "Tannhauser" and "Daybreak" and Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Gotterdammerung." It was a pure joy to hear the Boston orchestra play the Pilgrims' chorus with its themes of salvation and repentance and the following strains of the Venusberg music. The tone of the brass, and, in turn, the strings, are heard here with the wealth of Wagner's genius. Munch used a small soprano choir offstage under the direction of Hugh Ross to give voice to the Nymphs lolling about onstage, to conform to the endemic Parisian operatic demands.

* * *

THE SOLOIST in the Liszt E-flat piano concerto was Leonard Pennario, who has gone on from a year at the Berkshire Music Center nine years ago to earn wide recognition on the concert stage. This is the first time any Liszt has been played at Tanglewood, and it was probably a most appropriate place to link Wagner with his father-(but not) in-law. No musician exerted more influence on his time or encouraged more aspiring artists and composers than did the Abbé Liszt. But he has been badly eclipsed by time. The evidence of his beneficent power is omnipresent in the works of others, but his own, particularly the orchestral ones, are more and more neglected.

Pennario was at his ease in the most demanding passages of the showy concerto, but the more potentially expressive passages are not as effective as they must have been in the composer's day. Musical histories tell of page turners standing by Liszt to separate the piano strings and prevent jangling when the pianist broke them. Liszt probably considered no limit of strength too much for the performance of his bravado manner. Pennario produced a good, healthy tone and used superior musical taste in the less pyrotechnical sections. He was recalled and applauded with especial vehemence.

* * *

VAUGHAN WILLIAMS wrote his eighth symphony two years ago when he was 84 years old. Tragacally-short lives of such composers as Mozart and Schubert and many othersa re offset by the exceptionally long and creative terms allotted to others such as Sibelius, Strauss, Verdi et al. It would take a more discerning ear than ours to detect the age of the composer of the Williams symphony, except, that every line reveals the hand of a master of his craft.

He calls the first of the four movements "variations without a theme," but it has a very recognizable iambic idiom with which the trumpet alone starts the symphony. Williams then juggles this phrase around in every voice and in several tonal experiments, once even in an ecclesiastical mode, and he never allows his listeners' interest to flag.

The second movement, a scherzo, is for wind instruments alone, and the third, a cavatina, only for the strings. The scherzo is a sort of march for puppets and has a sly wit. In the cavatina recur the distinctive harmonic intervals which Williams uses in many other of his works, and which serve to identify him and render his sonorities significant. In the finale everyone rejoins hands for a gay and more conventional curtain. This is music in which Munch revels, and he communicated it to a willing audience with complete abandon.

[173]

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 60,734

AUG 4 - 1958

Music: Monteux Conducts At Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — Clangorous sound, philosophic meditation, and a little human interest all had a role in the final Wagner concert at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon.

This was the third weekend of the Berkshire Music Festival's shed concerts, most of which was Wagner's music.

Pierre Monteux conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Margaret Harshaw was soprano soloist.

Yesterday's attendance was 6,866, making a total of 21,946 for the weekend—somewhat below par, particularly since the weather was completely favorable.

This may or may not be attributable to the music of Wagner in concert form—but it seems likely that such was the case.

For the Connoisseur

Yesterday's program — all-Wagner—was clearly for the connoisseur, or at least for the rabid Wagnerite. There were preludes or overtures to four operas—"Parsifal," "Lohengrin," "Rienzi," and "The Flying Dutchman."

Miss Harshaw followed three of the operatic overtures with arias from them—in addition to one from "Tannhauser." The other operatic inclusions were "Forest Murmurs" from "Siegfried" and "The Ride of the Valkyries" from "Die Walkure."

Miss Harshaw's most admiring and irrepresible listner was Monteux.

Conductor's Conductor

The short, stocky, 83-year-old conductor is, as we have said many times, the conductor's conductor. Watching him shuffle to the podium, step up with great care, turn slowly for bows—completely belies the vitality and efficiency with which he directs an orchestra.

In supplying cues, he doesn't give them permission to make entrances (as some conductors appear to do) but he conveys instructions.

Miss Harshaw sang very well yesterday afternoon. The main general reservation was with reference to low tones, or those that concluded phrases that did not penetrate the orchestral composition.

The situation wasn't as acute as on Friday night when Munch conducted for her Isolde "Love Death" or the "Immolation Scene" from "Gotterdammerung." But there were, nevertheless, instances of poor balance in yesterday's performances.

The singer was warmly received by the audience, not to enough to satisfy Monteux.

So She Returned

She took a couple of bows, at which point Monteux stationed himself among the string players to his right. It didn't look as if Miss Harshaw would return. Music stands were moved so that Monteux could go backstage and get her. He did this several times.

Miss Harshaw looked delighted and modest about it—and the audience gave Monteux an equal ovation when he returned to the podium to continue the orchestral part of the program.

One of the most severe problems in singing concert performances of Wagner's epic arias is to project the mood and personality, without excessive visual or dramatic indulgence.

Kindry in "Parsifal" is a seductress—"Lohengrin's" Elsa is an innocent defendant—Senta in "Flying Dutchman" is a woman of redemption—and Elizabeth in "Tarnhauser" is an enraptured heroine.

Most vivid of Miss Harshaw's interpretations was Senta. It's It's the ballad of the Dutchman—sinister and heroic. She did it in the grand manner, hurling out the high, heavy tones with force and no apparent effort.

There was an infectious enthusiasm in the "Tannhauser" excerpt. The scene is the hall at Wartburg where a song contest is about to take place. Miss Harshaw was completely successful in projecting the ecstacy with which Elizabeth greets the hall to which Tannhauser has returned.

The Monteux craftsmanship was most fully encompassed in the "Parsifal" prelude. His tempos were extraordinarily slow. He placed great emphasis on tonal color, a rather hazardous demand of the brasses who must place and sustain tones without blemish.

It was a performance that carried great conviction and exacted consistent engrossment.

The "Lohengring" prelude was richly enhanced with a pure quality in high strings.

"Rienze" was the noisy, blatant thing that it can't help being, although Monteux managed to give it a measure of dignified magnitude. The "Flying Dutchman" was over-loaded with intense frustration that couldn't sensibly be separated from the story. "Forest Murmurs" was beautifully played and a "Coup" for the woodwind section.

A Fitting Climax

A great storm was raised with the "Ride of the Valkyries" and made a fitting climax for a generally stentorean afternoon.

Tonight the Berkshire music center opera department will give the first of two performances of Rossini's "Count Ory."

The festival continues next Friday night with the first of three final concerts devoted chiefly to music by Bethoven.

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony in Bethoven's Seventh Symphony. Eugene Istomin will be soloist in the fifth piano concerto "Emperor"—and the orchestral program will be completed with Honegger's Prelude, Fugue and Postlude.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

AUG 2 1958

Music Review

Program of Wagner, Piston Called Tanglewood Triumph

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE MUSIC of Richard Wagner is the predominant part of the three programs of this next-to-the-last weekend at Tanglewood. The Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch played the first program last night. Soprano Margaret Harshaw was the soloist in two of her most impressive Wagnerian roles, Isolde and Brunhilde. The sole departure of the evening from Wagner was the performance of Walter Piston's new viola concerto with Joseph de Pasquale as soloist.

Piston was in the audience and was called to the stage at the completion of the concerto to share the applause with De Pasquale and the orchestra. Its initial performance was only four months ago in Boston, where it also was played by the Boston orchestra's solo violist, to whom the concerto is dedicated.

* * *

IT HAS NEVER been possible to analyze inspiration and thus to determine how much of a composition is out of the air, or the mind or the heart, or out of diligent application to one's task. Piston's wisdom in the fortification of the viola's best tonal areas is a large factor in the first good impression the work makes. He has given the instrument, particularly in the first two of the three movements, most of its long lines below the chanterelle, in the most graceful and luscious parts of a viola and certainly ones where De Pasquale is most eloquent.

Except for the vigor and gaiety of the last movement, it is a lyric piece. The orchestra, kept well in the background by Munch, allowed the soloist to enjoy the spotlight while still a part of the larger ensemble. De Pasquale's tone and true intonation in the far-from-conventional double stops, and, again, in the cadenza of the finale, were high-lights of a fine performance.

* * *

IS THERE a more lasting birthday present in the world than the "Idyll" which Wagner wrote for his wife Cosima? The orchestra which Munch directed last night was a bit different in size from the select little band Wagner assembled on the stairs of his villa at Lucerne on Christmas morning in 1871. But it is a tribute to the Boston orchestra and its conductor to note that the performance had a fervor which the audience appreciated almost as much as the lady at the top of the stairs of Tribschen.

The prelude to "Die Meistersinger von Nuernberg" opened the evening. Munch kept asking for more and more from his men. The Boston orchestra's "all" is quite a massive response and the tremendous chords of the noble march alternated with the more gentle motifs in as colorful a performance as one needs to hear on this planet.

The singing of Miss Harshaw above the passion-filled pages of the orchestral background was the most telling part of the evening. She needs no operatic costume to portray the heroic characters of Wagner's dramas. Her regal posture and stature and imperturbable attitude are stage-settings before a note is sounded, and when she allows her easy-but-powerful and majestic voice to be heard her domination is both vocal and graphic.

* * *

THE GREAT Boston orchestra was at its most expressive last night. The sighing arch which the celli play at the beginning of the Prelude which preceded Miss Harshaw's singing of the Liebestod from "Tristan and Isolde" was a miniature but mighty detail of the orchestra's magnificence during the whole program. Miss Harshaw achieved her memorable success entirely vocally, for she makes no emotional display and stands with immobile majestic dignity.

The formidable intensity of her grief was a supreme demonstration of her art and Munch drew the orchestral narrative with a vivid brush.

Again in the "Immolation Scene" from "The Twilight of the Gods" there was a sense of overwhelming tragedy and sublime sacrifice. The prodigious culmination and climax of Wagner's vast "Ring" could not have been communicated much more expressively in an opera house than Miss Harshaw and the orchestra conveyed with such triumphal glory.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 60,734

AUG 2 1958

Music: Tanglewood Fare Includes Wagner

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — Last night's program at Tanglewood raised a question as to how much of a draw Wagner's music is in concert form.

It was a perfect night for music—clear skies, cool atmosphere and favorable conditions in every way. When attendance is down, it is instinctive to blame it on the weather. This was not possible last night and there was an attendance of 6,310.

Munch Conducts

Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony in the first of three programs devoted in the main to music by Wagner. This was the opening concert of series "c", Berkshire Music Festival.

The Wagner works were the prelude to "Die Meistersinger," "A Siegfried Idyll", prelude and love death from "Tristan and Isolde," and the "Immolation scene" from "Twilight of the Sods."

Soprano Margaret Harshaw was heard in the "love death" and "immolation scene."

De Pasquale, Soloist

Violist Joseph De Pasquale was soloist in the Walter Piston Concerto.

The "Meistersinger" prelude opened with tremendous gusto, fortified with heavy blows on timpani.

The woodwind interlude was beautifully played as it reached the martial main theme. Grandiosity was plentiful in strings and brass.

Munch made much of what could have been hidden counterpoint, bringing unaccustomed hues to the work. The sentimental second theme in strings was played sympathetically and with rich tone. Something less than perfect accuracy was heard in the woodwind bridge that leads back to the pompous oration of the beginning.

Ends With Clatter

To some it may have sounded a bit dragged out, but it certainly did end with great clangor and clatter.

We weren't particularly taken with the Munch interpretation of the "Siegfried Idyll." In the first place, almost complete emphasis was placed on its bucolic character that can reach a point of sweetened nostalgia.

There was however, exceptionally fine coordination of phrase and tone in the string section. Munch did succeed in bringing out a pliancy and personal traits that made for confidential communication, but there were places where the trend of thought became disjointed.

Even in such instances, concentration could be directed with rich reward at beauty and sensitivity of nuances.

Overemotional

In other words, the "Siegfried" music sounded very beautifully, but practically disintegrated with emotion.

Miss Harshaw took cognizance of the fact that Wagner's heroines, Isolde in prtiulr, re n ines, Isolde in particular, are an unhappy lot. She made a most un-smiling entrance.

The orchestra gave a fervent and gripping account of the prelude. Strings, especially the cellos, sang with gorgeous warmth. A new sound effect was added by some planes overhead that sounded like distant timpani rolls. Wagner probably would have thoroughly approved as they were very close to pitch.

Miss Harshaw sang with ample voice, clear substance and enough force to penetrate the orchestra even in the final sequences where the voice is all but completely engulfed.

Restrained

She gave a performance that with restrained drama, and tonally gorgeous.

The Piston viola concerto gives little to enthuse about, other than to admire factors in design and harmonic skill of the modern genre.

De Pasquale played it dutifully, demonstrating a high degree of technical skill, steady bow, and perhaps more enthusiasm than the work actually engenders.

It is a new work, having been written in March of this year, and is dedicated to De Pasquale.

Liszt Tonight

Tonight's concert, with Munch conducting the Boston Symphony, will include the overture and Baccanale from Wagner's "Tannhauser", also "Daybreak" and Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Twilight of the Gods."

Leonard Pennario will be heard in Liszt's Piano Concerto in E Flat, and the program will be completed with Vaughan Williams' Symphony No 8 in D Minor.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,138

AUG 4 - 1958

Fifth Tanglewood Weekend Concerts Draw 21,946 to Lenox

The fifth weekend of concerts in the 1958 Berkshire Music Festival attracted 21,946 persons to Tanglewood. Richard Wagner was the featured composer.

Yesterday afternoon Pierre Monteux conducted an all-Wagner program which included excerp from "The Flying Dutchman," "Lohengrin," "Die Walkure," "Parsifal," "Tannhauser," "Rienzi" and "Siegried." Soprano Margaret Harshaw was soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Charles Munch was on the podium for the Saturday evening concert. That included two works by Wagner, "Tannhauser" Ove-ture and Bacchanale and Siegried's Rhine Journey. Also heard were Liszt's Piano Concert No. 1 in E-Flat, with Leonard Pennario as soloist, and Vaughn Wiliams' Symphony No. 8.

The weather over the weekend was ideal, and the size of the Saturday and Sunday audiences, 8,770 and 6,866, was below expectations. The total for the weekend series of three concerts was some 4,500 less than the previous weekend.

The festival now goes into its final week, with the usual Wednesday evening chamber music concert in the theater-concert hall, the annual Tanglewood on Parade program Thursday night in the big shed, and the last weekend series of concerts Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

Tonight and tomorrow night at 8.30 in the theater-concert hall there will be performances of Rossini's opera, "Count Ory," by the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department. John McCollum will have the title role.

New England Newsclip Agency, In
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-42

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

AUG 4 1958

Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Jackson of Stockbridge entertained Dr. Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, orchestra mem~~bers and their~~ families at an outdoor buffett supper at their home after yesterday's concert at Tanglewood. Mr. Jackson is a member of the board of trustees of the Boston Symphony.

This Is The Final Week At Tanglewood

Echo Aug 5

Thursday, August 7, 8:15 Music Shed "Tanglewood-On-Parade", Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler, Conductor.

Friday, August 8, 8:30 Music Shed Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Conductor. Honegger, Prelude, Fugue and Postlude; Beethoven, Symphony No. 7. Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor")

Saturday, August 9, 8:30 Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux, Conductor. Beethoven Music from "Prometheus"; Hindemith, Nobilissima Visione; Beethoven Leoeenore Overture No. 3

Sunday, August 10 2:30 Music Shed Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Conductor.

Walton, Johannesburg Festival Beethoven Ninth Symphony

Aug 4-10 6th WEEK - TANGLEWOOD 1958

[174]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

JUL 18 1958

Fiedler, Pops Coming Aug. 7 For Tanglewood on Parade

Arthur Fiedler

TANGLEWOOD — The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade, which will take place on Thursday evening, Aug. 7, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the department of conducting, will direct a performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the faculty of the orchestral department of the school, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer appearing as soloist. Mr. Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the department of composition at the school.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program. Mr. Fiedler's announced program will include Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne," the Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia" by Ginastera, a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story," an arrangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman entitled "Dancing Through the Years" and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Wilson. Mr. Fiedler will also present the traditional Pops encores.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, beginning at 6 p.m. Picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn are a popular feature of Tanglewood-on-Parade between the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's concert at 8:15 p.m.

Tickets for Tanglewood-on-Parade will be available at the Tanglewood Box Office after July 21.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,286

JUL 18 1958

LY 18, 1958.

Program Given For Tanglewood Parade Event

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade, which will take place Thursday evening, Aug. 7, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestras summer school of music.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the Department of Conducting, will direct a performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the faculty of the orchestral department of the school, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer appearing as soloist. Mr. Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the department of composition at the school.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program. Mr. Fiedler's annual visit to Tanglewood is eagerly anticipated and this year his announced program will include Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne," the Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia" by Ginastera, a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story," an arrangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman entitled "Dancing Through the Years" and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Wilson. Mr. Fiedler will also present the traditional Pops encores.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, beginning at 6 p. m. Picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn are a popular feature of Tanglewood-on-Parade between the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's gala concert at 8:15

Tickets for Tanglewood-on Parade will be available at the Tanglewood Box Office after July 21.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 - S. 1,189,293

JUL 19 1958

COPLAND TO BE SOLOIST

Will Play His Piano Concerto at Tanglewood on Aug. 7

Aaron Copland will be the soloist in his own Piano Concerto at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's annual concert, "Tanglewood on Parade," on Aug. 7 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Richard Burgin will conduct.

The concert will be a benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music. The program also will include Falla's "El Amor Brujo" conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the department of conducting. The second half of the program will present the Boston Pops Orchestra under the direction of Arthur Fiedler.

Ticket holders for the concert, which begins at 8:15, are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, beginning at 6 P. M.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 401,810

JUL 19 1958

Tanglewood-on-Parade Benefit Concert

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade, which will take place on Thursday evening, Aug. 7, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the Dept. of Conducting, will direct a performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo."

Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the faculty of the Orchestral Dept. of the school, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer appearing as soloist. Mr. Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the Dept. of Composition at the [illegible]

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

KINGSTON, N.Y.
FREEMAN
D. 15,969

JUL 18 1958

Tanglewood on Parade Program Announced For August 7; Will Climax Benefit Concerts

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade, which will take place on Thursday evening, Aug. 7, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the Department of Conducting, will direct a performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Richard Burgin, Associate Conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the faculty of the Orchestral Department of the School, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer appearing as soloist. Mr. Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the Department of Composition at the school.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program. Mr. Fiedler's annual visit to Tanglewood is eagerly anticipated and this year his announced program will include Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne," the Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia" by Ginastera, a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story," an arrangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman entitled "Dancing Through the Years" and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Wilson. Mr. Fiedler will also present the traditional Pops encores.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, beginning at 6 p. m. Picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn are a popular feature of Tanglewood-on-Parade between the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's gala concert at 8:15 p. m.

Tickets for Tanglewood-on-Parade will be available at the Tanglewood Box Office after July 21.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 361,379 - S. 576,176

JUL 19 1958

Copland Soloist Aug. 7 At Tanglewood Gala

LENOX, Mass., July 18. — Aaron Copland will appear as soloist in his own Piano Concerto at the annual Tanglewood-on-Parade gala to be presented here on Thursday evening, Aug. 7. The composer will be featured on a program, given for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, that also includes performances by the Boston Pops Orchestra under the direction of Arthur Fieldler.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,138

JUL 19 1958

Gala Tanglewood-on-Parade Scheduled Thursday, Aug. 7

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade, which will take place on Thursday evening, Aug. 7, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Three Faculty Members

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the Department of Conducting, will direct a performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the faculty of the Orchestral Department of the school, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer appearing as soloist. Mr. Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the Department of Composition at the school.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program. Mr. Fiedler's annual visit to Tanglewood is eagerly anticipated and this year his announced program will include Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne," the Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia" by Ginastera, a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story," an arrangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman entitled "Dancing Through the Years" and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Wilson. Mr. Fiedler will also present the traditional Pops encores.

Picnic Suppers

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, beginning at 6 p. m. Picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn are a popular feature of Tanglewood-on-Parade between the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's gala concert at 8.15 p. m.

Tickets for Tanglewood-on-Parade will be available at the Tanglewood box office after July 21.

[175]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,541

JUL 19 1958

Tanglewood On Parade Concert Is Slated Aug. 7

Lenox, July 17 — The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces ~~the program~~ for its gala concert at Tanglewood on Parade, which will take place on Thursday evening, Aug. 7, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the department of conducting, will direct a performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the faculty of the orchestral department of the school, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer appearing as soloist, Mr. Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the department of composition at the school.

Arthur Feidler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of pops favorites in the second half of the program. Mr. Fiedler's annual visit to Tanglewood is eagerly anticipated and this year his announced program will include Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne," the Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia" by Ginastera, a selection from Leonard Berstein's "West Side Story," an arrangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman entitled "Dancing Through the Years" and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Wilson. Mr. Fiedler will also present the traditional Pops encores.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, beginning at 6 p. m. Picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn are a popular feature of Tanglewood on Parade between the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's gala concert at 8.15 p. m.

Tickets for Tanglewood on Parade will be available at the Tanglewood box office after July 21.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-420
News (e)
FRAMINGHAM, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,207

JUL 21 1958

Tanglewood on Parade Program

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade, which will take place on Thursday evening August 7, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the Department of Conducting, will direct a performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo."

Richard Burgin, Associate Conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the faculty of the Orchestral Department of the School, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer appearig as soloist. Mr. Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the Department of Composition at the School.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHE
BArclay 7-5
PRESS CLIPPING BUR
165 Church Street - Ne

HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
D. 118 514

JUL 22 1958

Dr. Nagy-Cr

By TERE PASCONE

Lenox, Mass. — The prog offered last night by the O Department under the d
tion of Dr. Boris Goldovs off to a fine start at 8:30 p

The theater-concert hal jammed as the curtain the temperature was on comfortable side; and th scene of the condensed v of Gounod's "Romeo Juliet" with Gertrude Pe
Juliet and Howard Ja
Romeo, gave promise seemingly enjoyable even come.

* * *

AS MUCH could not b at 12:30 a. m. or there when the curtain went after the presentation of zetti's "Don Pasquale" in entirety. For by the tim five acts of "Romeo and J had been performed in 125 minutes by four Romeos and Juliets, a Pasquale" sung by tw
Pasquales, two Dr. M
four Zorinas and fou
the size of the audi dwindled to less tha
size. The reasons: T
"Arctic" cold that
ers literally shiveri seats despite coats a
and the much too

As the "Romeo a progressed, it drag
formers lacked the ability to cope with scenes, and the tom almost a fiasco—tu
be a bigger bite tha
Romeo and Juliet so touching off in the
wave of spontaneou
trolled titters from e
of the hall.

* * *

BUT THERE WA
be lauded in the p
of Dr. Goldovsky's
in the "Don Pasqua
the exciting, experim
sets created by D
Nagy, head of the H
Department of the
lege of Music, Unive
Hartford.

The Donizetti
turned out to be

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

DENTON, TEX.
RECORD-CHRONICLE

JUL 20 1958

Margaret Grubbs Teaching Music At Tanglewood

Miss Margaret Grubb of the NTSC School of Music faculty is spending the summer on the staff of the Berkshire (Mass.) Music Center.

As a consultant on opera from NTSC, Miss Grubb is in charge of the associates division of the opera department at the center, which is known throughout the world as Tanglewood. It is the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the scene of the Tanglewood Summer Music Festival.

Head of the opera department is Boris Goldovsky, director of opera at the New England Conservatory, Boston, and commentator for the Metropolitan Opera Intermission Broadcasts.

Miss Grubb joined the NTSC faculty in 1947 as a piano instructor.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 204,395

JUL 21 1958

TANGLEWOOD-PARADE PROGRAM ANNOUNCED

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert at ~~Tanglewood-on-Parade~~, which will take place Thursday evening, Aug. 7, in the Music Shed at Lenox. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center the concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the department of conducting, will direct a performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the faculty of the orchestral department of the school, will conduct Aaron Copland's piano concerto with the composer appearing as soloist.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program, on his annual visit to Tanglewood. His program will include Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne," the Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia" by Ginastera, a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story," an arrangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman entitled "Dancing Through the Years" and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Wilson.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, beginning at 6 p.m. Picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn are a popular feature of Tanglewood-on-Parade between the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's gala concert at 8:15 p.m.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 95,535

JUL 21 1958

TANGLEWOOD PARADE SET FOR AUG. 7

DeCarvalho, Burgin, Copland To Be Heard; Fiedler To Lead Pops

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade, which will take place on Thursday evening, Aug. 7, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the Department of Conducting; Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the faculty of the orchestral department of the school. Mr. Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the Department of Composition at the school.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, beginning at 6 p. m. Picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn are a popular feature of Tanglewood-on-Parade, between the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's gala concert at 8.15 p. m.

Tickets for Tanglewood-on-Parade will be available at the Tanglewood Box Office after today.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 225,162

JUL 21 1958

"Tanglewood On Parade" August 7

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will ~~present its~~ gala concert, "Tanglewood-on-Parade," Thursday evening, Aug. 7, in the music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer school of music.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the department of conducting, will direct Falla's "El Amor Brujo"; Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the faculty of the orchestral department of the Center, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer as soloist. Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the department of composition.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present Pops favorites in the second half of the program. His announced program will include Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne," the Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia" by Ginastera; a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story," an arrangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman entitled "Dancing Through the Years" and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Willson.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Post
BRIDGEPORT, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 66,613

JUL 20 1958

YMCA PLANS TRIPS BY CARS IN AUGUST

The YMCA is planning summer trips as a public service to the community, it was announced by A. Forrest Louks, adult program committee chairman.

The program will start on Aug. 6, with a car caravan going to the Oakdale theater to see "Most Happy Fellow." On Aug. 9, and 23, the department plans to provide an opportunity for the individuals interested in swimming in the afternoon and dancing in the evening at Jones Beach.

On Aug. 10, a trip to Tanglewood in the Berkshires will be made to hear the Walter Johannesburg Festival Orchestra present Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, plus the Festival Chorus and soloists conducted by Charles Munch. A visit to the UN, plus a cruise around Manhattan is planned for Aug. 24.

The public is invited to participate, but registration must be made at least one week in advance. For further information, please call ED 6-1181, the Program department.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

MUSICAL COURIER
NEW YORK, N. Y.

JUL 1958

Artists: At Home and Abroad

Claudio Arrau helping Israel celebrate its 10th anniversary by playing recital tour there this summer. . . . Mary Curtis-Verna off to Augsburg, Austria, from Italy for a batch of Aidas. . . . Berl Senofsky to play the Beethoven Violin Concerto with the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood this summer. . . . Soprano Saramae Endich debuting with Santa Fe Opera this month as Fiordiligi in "Cosi fan tutte."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 113,886

JUL 20 1958

AARON COPLAND WILL APPEAR IN OWN CONCERTO

Boston Pops Also Booked For Tanglewood-On-Parade, Aug. 7

Lenox, July 19—The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade Thursday evening, Aug. 7, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Copland Soloist

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the department of conducting, will direct a performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony and member of the faculty of the orchestral department of the school, will conduct Aaron Copland's piano concerto with the composer appearing as soloist. Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the department of composition at the school.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program. Fiedler's annual visit to Tanglewood eagerly anticipated and this year his announced program will include Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne," the "Dance of Wheat" and "Malambo" from "Estancia" by Ginastera, a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story," an arrangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman entitled "Dancing Through the Years" and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Wilson. Fiedler will also present the traditional Pops encores.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, beginning at 6 p. m. Tickets for Tanglewood-on-Parade will be available at the Tanglewood box office after Monday.

[175]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,541

JUL 19 1958

Tanglewood On Parade Concert Is Slated Aug. 7

Lenox, July 17 — The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert at Tanglewood on Parade, which will take place on Thursday evening, Aug. 7, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the department of conducting, will direct a performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the faculty of the orchestral department of the school, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer appearing as soloist, Mr. Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the department of composition at the school.

Arthur Feidler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of pops favorites in the second half of the program. Mr. Fiedler's annual visit to Tanglewood is eagerly anticipated and this year his announced program will include Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne," the Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia" by Ginastera, a selection from Leonard Berstein's "West Side Story," an arrangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman entitled "Dancing Through the Years" and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Wilson. Mr. Fiedler will also present the traditional Pops encores.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, beginning at 6 p. m. Picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn are a popular feature of of Tanglewood on Parade between the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's gala concert at 8.15 p. m.

Tickets for Tanglewood on Parade will be available at the Tanglewood box office after July 21.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News (e)
FRAMINGHAM, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,207

JUL 21 1958

Tanglewood on Parade Program

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade, which will take place on Thursday evening, August 7, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the Department of Conducting, will direct a performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo."

Richard Burgin, Associate Conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the faculty of the Orchestral Department of the School, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer appearig as soloist. Mr. Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the Department of Composition at the School.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

DENTON, TEX.
RECORD-CHRONICLE

JUL 20 1958

Margaret Grubbs Teaching Music At Tanglewood

Miss Margaret Grubb of the NTSC School of Music faculty is spending the summer on the staff of the Berkshire (Mass.) Music Center.

As a consultant on opera from NTSC, Miss Grubb is in charge of the associates division of the opera department at the center, which is known throughout the world as Tanglewood. It is the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the scene of the Tanglewood Summer Music Festival.

Head of the opera department is Boris Goldovsky, director of opera at the New England Conservatory, Boston, and commentator for the Metropolitan Opera Intermission Broadcasts.

Miss Grubb joined the NTSC faculty in 1947 as a piano instructor.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 204,395

JUL 21 1958

TANGLEWOOD-PARADE PROGRAM ANNOUNCED

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade, which will take place Thursday evening, Aug. 7, in the Music Shed at Lenox. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center the concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the department of conducting, will direct a performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo," Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the faculty of the orchestral department of the school, will conduct Aaron Copland's piano concerto with the composer appearing as soloist.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program, on his annual visit to Tanglewood. His program will include Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne," the Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia" by Ginastera, a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story," an arrangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman entitled "Dancing Through the Years" and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Wilson.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, beginning at 6 p.m. Picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn are a popular feature of Tanglewood-on-Parade between the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's gala concert at 8:15 p.m.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 95,585

JUL 21 1958

TANGLEWOOD PARADE SET FOR AUG. 7

DeCarvalho, Burgin, Copland To Be Heard; Fiedler To Lead Pops

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade, which will take place on Thursday evening, Aug. 7, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the Department of Conducting; Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the faculty of the orchestral department of the school. Mr. Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the Department of Composition at the school.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, beginning at 6 p. m. Picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn are a popular feature of Tanglewood-on-Parade, between the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's gala concert at 8.15 p. m.

Tickets for Tanglewood-on-Parade will be available at the Tanglewood Box Office after today.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 225,162

JUL 21 1958

"Tanglewood On Parade" August 7

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will present its gala concert, "Tanglewood-on-Parade," Thursday evening, Aug. 7, in the music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer school of music.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the department of conducting, will direct Falla's "El Amor Brujo"; Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the faculty of the orchestral department of the Center, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer as soloist. Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the department of composition.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present Pops favorites in the second half of the program. His announced program will include Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne," the Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia" by Ginastera; a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story," an arrangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman entitled "Dancing Through the Years" and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Willson.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Post
BRIDGEPORT, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 66,613

JUL 20 1958

YMCA PLANS TRIPS BY CARS IN AUGUST

The YMCA is planning summer trips as a public service to the community, it was announced by A. Forrest Louks, adult program committee chairman.

The program will start on Aug. 6, with a car caravan going to the Oakdale theater to see "Most Happy Fellow." On Aug. 9, and 23, the department plans to provide an opportunity for the individuals interested in swimming in the afternoon and dancing in the evening at Jones Beach.

On Aug. 10, a trip to Tanglewood in the Berkshires will be made to hear the Walter Johannesburg Festival Orchestra present Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, plus the Festival Chorus and soloists conducted by Charles Munch. A visit to the UN, plus a cruise around Manhattan is planned for Aug. 24.

The public is invited to participate, but registration must be made at least one week in advance. For further information, please call ED 6-1181, the Program department.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

MUSICAL COURIER
NEW YORK, N. Y.

JUL 1958

Artists: At Home and Abroad

Claudio Arrau helping Israel celebrate its 10th anniversary by playing recital tour there this summer. . . . Mary Curtis-Verna off to Augsburg, Austria, from Italy for a batch of Aidas. . . . Berl Senofsky to play the Beethoven Violin Concerto with the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood this summer. . . . Soprano Saramae Endich debuting with Santa Fe Opera this month as Fiordiligi in "Cosi fan tutte."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 113,886

JUL 20 1958

AARON COPLAND WILL APPEAR IN OWN CONCERTO

Boston Pops Also Booked For Tanglewood-On-Parade, Aug. 7

Lenox, July 19—The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade Thursday evening, Aug. 7, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Copland Soloist

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the department of conducting, will direct a performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony and member of the faculty of the orchestral department of the school, will conduct Aaron Copland's piano concerto with the composer appearing as soloist. Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the department of composition at the school.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program. Fiedler's annual visit to Tanglewood is eagerly anticipated and this year his announced program will include Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne," the "Dance of Wheat" and "Malambo" from "Estancia" by Ginastera, a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story," an arrangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman entitled "Dancing Through the Years" and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Wilson. Fiedler will also present the traditional Pops encores.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, beginning at 6 p. m. Tickets for Tanglewood-on-Parade will be available at the Tanglewood box office after Monday.

Burrelle's
ESTABLIS
BArclay
PRESS CLIPPING
165 Church Street -

HARTFORD, CO
TIMES
D. 118 544

JUL 22 195

Dr. Nagy

By TERE PASCONE

Lenox, Mass. — Th offered last night b Department under tion of Dr. Boris off to a fine start

The theater-con jammed as the
the temperature comfortable scene of the co of Gounod's
Juliet" with Ger
Juliet and How Romeo, gave seemingly enjoy
come.

• • •

AS MUCH co at 12:30 a. m.
when the curta
after the presen
zetti's "Don Pas entirety. For by five acts of "Rom had been perfor
in 125 minutes by Romeos and Julie Pasquale" sung
Pasquales, two Dr four Zorinas and the size of the dwindled to less size. The reasons:
"Arctic" cold tha
ers literally shive seats despite coat and the much to

As the "Romeo progressed, it d formers lacked t ability to cope w scenes, and the to almost a fiasco—t be a bigger bite th
Romeo and Juliet
touching off in the
wave of spontaneou
trolled titters from ev
of the hall.

• • •

BUT THERE WAS
be lauded in the
of Dr. Goldovsky's
in the "Don Pasqua
the exciting, experim
sets created by Nagy, head of the Department of th
lege of Music, U
Hartford.

The Donizetti
turned out to be a

[176]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Wilton Bulletin
WILTON, Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 1,804

JUL 23 1958

Tanglewood Parade Features the Pops

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade, which will take place on Thursday evening, Aug. 7, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the Department of Conducting, will direct a performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo."

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program. Mr. Fiedler's program will include Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne," the Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia" by Ginastera, a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story," an arrangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman entitled "Dancing Through the Years", and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Wilson. Mr. Fiedler will also present the traditional Pops encores.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, beginning at 6 p.m. Picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn are a popular feature of Tanglewood-on-Parade between the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's gala concert at 8:15 p.m.

Tickets for Tanglewood-on-Parade will be available at the Tanglewood Box Office after July 21.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 17,740

JUL 22 1958

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade, which will take place on Thursday evening, August 7, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony orchestra's summer school of music.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the department of conducting, will direct a performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo". Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra and member of the faculty of the orchestral department will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer appearing as soloist. Mr. Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the department of composition.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program. His announced program will include Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne", the Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia" by Ginastera, a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story", an arrangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman titled "Dancing Through the Years" and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Wilson. Mr. Fiedler will also present the traditional Pops encores.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, beginning at 6 p. m. Picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn are a popular feature of Tanglewood-on-Parade between the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's gala concert at 8:15 p. m.

Tickets for Tanglewood-on-Parade are now available at the Tanglewood box office.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES

JUL 22 1958

Dr. Nagy-Created Sets Used in Opera at Tanglewood

By TERE PASCONE

Lenox, Mass. — The program offered last night by the Opera Department under the direction of Dr. Boris Goldovsky got off to a fine start at 8:30 p. m.:

The theater-concert hall was jammed as the curtain rose; the temperature was on the comfortable side; and the first scene of the condensed version of Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet" with Gertrude Pepin as Juliet and Howard Jarratt as Romeo, gave promise of a seemingly enjoyable evening to come.

* * *

AS MUCH could not be said at 12:30 a. m. or thereabouts when the curtain went down after the presentation of Donizetti's "Don Pasquale" in its entirety. For by the time the five acts of "Romeo and Juliet" had been performed in relays in 125 minutes by four different Romeos and Juliets, and "Don Pasquale" sung by two Don Pasquales, two Dr. Maletestas, four Zorinas and four Ernestos, the size of the audience had dwindled to less than half its size. The reasons: The wave of "Arctic" cold that had listeners literally shivering in their seats despite coats and wraps, and the much too much long

As the "Romeo and Juliet" progressed, it dragged. Performers lacked the histrionic ability to cope with the love scenes, and the tomb scene — almost a fiasco—turned out to be a bigger bite than the final Romeo and Juliet could chew, touching off in the audience a wave of spontaneous, uncontrolled titters from every corner of the hall.

* * *

BUT THERE WAS much to be lauded in the performance of Dr. Goldovsky's 18 students in the "Don Pasquale" and in the exciting experimental stage sets created by Dr. Elemer Nagy, head of the Hartt Opera Department of the Hartt College of Music, University of Hartford.

The Donizetti comic opera turned out to be a little gem of entertainment with the characters, both principal and minor, giving gay, delightful performances — particularly Ronald Holgate, David Smith and Annabelle Bernard as the first Don Pasquale, Doctor Malatesta and Norina, respectively.

The sets, of fiberglas and aluminum, were a big advance over the experimental sets made by Dr. Nagy last Summer, also for the Tanglewood Opera presentations. Working under a grant of $40,000 from the Ford Foundation, Dr. Nagy has been striving to create scenery that would be artistic, colorful and lightweight, easy to dismantle and store and inexpensive to transport for use by traveling opera companies.

Last Summer he succeeded in creating sets at least 20 per cent lighter weight than the traditional canvas and wood used successfully by Dr. Goldovsky in his tour with the New England Opera Company which he directs.

* * *

THE ADVANCES made by Dr. Nagy as evidenced last night were in the attainment of warm vivid colors by the use of a paint to which sand had been added; the creation of a surface on the fiberglas that not only looks like the traditional canvas, but feels like it; the surprising "bonus" discovery that the new, rough surface made for better acoustics; and the reduction of footage for the sets of "Romeo and Juliet" to one fifth of that required by the old grand opera "lumber yard" traditional settings of the past 100 years.

This year, also, Dr. Nagy was able also to achieve:

Columns with a sturdy and third dimensional quality which could be dismantled in minutes; a paint that was not only weatherproof, but easily removed from the fiberglas by the simple process of just hosing off the plastic with water.

The program last night is one of three to be offered this Summer by Dr. Goldovsky and his students in which further advances made by Dr. Nagy will be tried.

* * *

ON MONDAY, July 28, excerpts from Verdi's "Aida," Verdi's "La Traviata," and Puccini's "La Rondine," will be presented. On Monday, Aug. 4, Rossini's "Le Comte D'Ory" in its America premiere will be performed. In the latter, Dr. Nagy will do something which has never been done before. The entire set will be projected —back drop, wings and ceiling —through the use of slides 12 inches by 15½ inches and at least 18 projectors with special filament bulbs, able to project from a short distance behind each of the set sections used.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,937

JUL 23 1958

Boston Pops Plays Special Program At Tanglewood

The Boston Symphony orchestra announces the program for its gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade, which will take place on Thursday evening, Aug. 7, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony orchestra's summer school of music.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the Department of Conducting, will direct a performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra and member of the faculty of the orchestral department of the school, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer appearing as soloist. Mr. Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the department of composition at the school.

Arthur Fielder and the Boston Pops orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program. This will include Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne," the Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia" by Ginastera, a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story," an arrangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman entitled "Dancing Through the Years" and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Wilson. Mr. Fiedler will also present the traditional Pops encores.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, beginning at 6 p. m. Picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn are a popular feature of Tanglewood-on-Parade between the student performances and the Boston Symphony orchestra's gala concert at 8:15 p. m.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,566

JUL 22 1958

Tanglewood on Parade

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade, to be held Thursday evening, Aug. 7, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the conducting department, will direct a performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony and member of the faculty of the orchestral department of the school, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto, with the composer appearing as soloist. Mr. Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the department of composition at the school.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program. Mr. Fiedler's announced program will include Offenbach's "Gaîté Parisienne," the Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia" by Ginastera, a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story," an arrangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman entitled "Dancing Through the Years," and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Willson. Mr. Fiedler will also present the traditional Pops encores.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Banner (e)
BENNINGTON, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 5,451

JUL 23 1958

Tanglewood On Parade Set Aug. 7

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade, which will take place on Thursday evening, August 7, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the Department of Conducting, will direct a performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Richard Burgin, Associate Conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the faculty of the Orchestral Department of the school, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer appearing as soloist. Mr. Copland is Chairman of the Faculty and head of the Department of Composition at the school.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program. Mr. Fiedler's annual visit to Tanglewood is eagerly anticipated and this year his announced program will include Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne," the Dance of wheat and Malambo from "Estancia" by Ginastera, a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story," an arrangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman entitled "Dancing Through the Years" and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Willson. Mr. Fiedler will also present the traditional Pops encores.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, beginning at 6 p.m. Picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn are a popular feaure of Tanglewood-on-Parade between the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's gala concert at 8:15 p.m.

Tickets for Tanglewood - on Parade will be available at the Tanglewood Box office after July 21.

FADED TEXT

[177]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Back Bay Ledger &
Beacon Hill Times
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 10,000 Free

JUL 24 1958

Boston Symphony To Present Gala Concert At Lenox

The Boston Symphony Orchestra this week announced the program for its gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade, which will take place on Thursday evening, August 7, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts.

The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the department of conducting, will direct a performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo". Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the faculty of the orchestral department of the school, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the com-

Continued on Page Three

glewood lawn are a popular feature of Tanglewood-on-Parade between the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's gala concert at 8:15 p.m.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Express (e)
PORTLAND, Me.
Independent Republican
Circ. 28,708

JUL 23 1958

Bur[illegible] To Lead Orchestra [illegible] Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass. — Richard Burgin, former conductor of the Portland Symphony Orchestra; Aaron Copland; and the Boston Symphony Orchestra will highlight the first half of the Tanglewood-on-Parade concert here at 8:15 p.m. Aug. 7. The second half of the program will be devoted to Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra.

Tanglewood-on-Parade is the clamax of the annual benefit for the Symphony's summer Berkshire Music Center.

Burgin will conduct the Symphony in Copland's "Piano Concerto" with the composer as the featured soloist. Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the symphony in Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Copyand, Burgin and de Carvalho are members of the Center's faculty.

Fiedler will lead the Boston Pops Orchestra in "76 Trombones" from Meredith Wilson's "The Music Man", a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story,"; Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne"; a dance suite from Ginastera's "Estancia." and a medley of dance tunes arranged by Richard Hayman.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354
JUL 24 1958

Two Performances Scheduled For French Comic Opera Aug. 4-5

TANGLEWOOD—The major production of the season for the Berkshire Music Center Opera department will be Rossini's "Count Ory" which will receive two performances in the theater-concert hall on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 4 and 5.

The English version by Robert A. Simon was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music for the Juilliard Opera Theater and has been released to the Berkshire Music Center for performance at Tanglewood.

Cast Announced

The cast of the opera, which will be under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department, includes John McCollum (Count Ory); Angelica Lazada (Countess Fourmoutiers); Nancy Williams (Isolier, the Page); Doris Okerson (Ragonda); David Smith(Raimbaud); Ronald Holgate (Tutor).

The opera will be conducted by Wyn Morris. Mr. Morris, of Llanelly, South Wales, was the winner last year of the Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship awarded to an outstanding student conductor. He studied during the season just past with George Szell, conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra.

The scenery for the opera will consist of a Fiberglass shell on which 15 projectors, located behind the shell, will produce the different effects needed. Designed by Dr. Elemer Nagy, of the Hartt College of Music in Hartford, and the Berkshire Music Center faculty, the scenery is part of the program undertaken with the cooperation of the New England Opera Theater and a grant from the Ford Foundation for the development of new scenic materials. It is hoped that this innovation may do away with bulky scenery which is difficult to handle and expensive to transport.

The comic opera, "Count Ory" was the first of two French operas written by Rossini for the Paris Opera where it was first performed in 1828. The text was by A. E. Scribe with the collaboration of C. G. Delestre-Poirson. The opera was revived in Paris in 1926 and performed in Turin in Italian in 1930. It has recently been performed by the Glyndebourne Opera Company in England.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,541

JUL 24 1958

Opera 'Count Ory' To Be Offered at Berkshire Center

Lenox, July 23—The major production of the season for the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department will be Rossini's "Count Ory." Two performances are scheduled in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 4 and 5.

English Version

The English version by Robert A. Simon was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music for the Juilliard Opera Theatre and has been released to the Berkshire Music Center for performance at Tanglewood. The cast of the opera, which will be under direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department, includes John McCollum (Count Ory); Angelica Lazada (Countess Fourmoutiers); Nancy Williams (Isolier, the Page); Doris Okerson (Ragonda); David Smith (Raimbaud); Ronald Holgate (Tutor).

The opera will be conducted by Wyn Morris. Mr. Morris, of Llanelly, South Wales, was the winner last year of the Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship, awarded to an outstanding student conductor. He studied during the season just past with George Szell, conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra.

New Scenery Plan

The scenery will consist of a Fibreglass shell on which 15 projectors, located behind the shell, will produce the different effects needed. Designed by Dr. Elemer Nagy of the Hartt College of Music in Hartford and the Berkshire Music Center faculty, the scenery is part of the program undertaken with the co-operation of the New England Opera Theatre and a grant from the Ford Foundation for the development of new scenic materials. It is [illegible] innovation may do away [illegible] bulky scenery which is difficult [illegible] handle and expensive to transport.

The comic opera "Count Ory" was the first of two French operas written by Rossini for the Paris Opera where it was first performed in 1828. The text was by A. E. Scribe with the collaboration of C. G. Delestre-Poirson. The opera was revived in Paris in 1926 and performed in Turin in Italian in 1930. It has recently been performed by the Glyndebourne Opera Company in England.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

RED HOOK, N. Y.
ADVERTISER
Circ. W. 925

JUL 24 1958

Varied Program At Tanglewood On August 7

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade, which will take place on Thursday evening, August 7, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Calvalho, head of the Department of Conducting, will direct a performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Richard Burgin, Associate Conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the faculty of the Orchestral Department of the School, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer appearing as soloist. Mr. Copland is Chairman of the Faculty and head of the Department of Composition at the School.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program. Mr. Fiedler's annual visit to Tanglewood is eagerly anticipated and this year his announced program will include Offenbah's "Gaite Parisienne," the Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia" by Ginastera, a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story," an arrangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman titled "Dancing Through the Years" and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Wilson. Mr. Fiedler will also present the traditional Pops encores.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, beginning at 6 p.m. Picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn are a popular feature of Tanglewood-on-Parade between the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestras gala concert at 8:15 p.m.

Tickets for Tanglewood-on-Parade are available at the Tanglewood box office.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

MILLBROOK, N. Y.
ROUND TABLE
Circ. W. 673

JUL 24 1958

Tanglewood on Parade Planned For August 7

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade, on Thursday evening, Aug. 7, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

In the first half of the program, Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the Department of Conducting, will direct a performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and members of the faculty of the Orchestral Department of the School, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the Composer appearing as soloist. Mr. Copland is Chairman of the Faculty and head of the Department of Composition at the School.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program. Mr. Fiedler's announced program will include Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne", the Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia" by Ginastera, a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story", an arangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman entitled "Dancing Through the Years" and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Wilson. Mr. Fiedler will also present the traditional Pops encores.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, beginning at 6 p.m. Picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn are a popular feature of Tanglewood-on-Parade between the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's gala concert at 8:15 p.m.

Tickets for Tanglewood-on-Parade will be available at the Tanglewood Box Office after July 21.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.
TIMES-HERALD
Circ. D. 10,258

[illegible] 1958

Rossini Opera To Be Revived At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass. — The major production of the season for the Berkshire Music Center opera department will be Rossini's "Count Ory", which will receive two performances at the theatre-concert hall at Tanglewood on Monday and Tuesday evenings, August 4 and 5.

The English version by Robert A. Simon was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music for the Juilliard Opera Theatre and has been released to the Berkshire Music Center for performance at Tanglewood. The cast of the opera, which will be under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department, includes John McCollum (Count Ory); Angelica Lazada (Countess Fourmoutiers); Nancy Williams (Isolier, the page); Doris Okerson (Ragonda); David Smith (Raimbaud); Ronald Holgate (tutor).

The opera will be conducted by Wyn Morris of Llanelly, South Wales, who was the winner last year of the Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship, awarded to an outstanding student conductor. Mr. Morris studied during the season just past with George Szell, conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra.

The scenery for the opera will consist of a fibreglass shell on which 15 projectors, located behind the shell, will produce the different effects needed. Designed by Dr. Elemer Nagy of the Hartt College of Music in Hartford, and the Berkshire Music Center faculty, the scenery is part of the program undertaken with the cooperation of the New England Opera Theatre and a grant from the Ford Foundation for the development of new scenic materials. It is hoped that this innovation may do away with bulky scenery, which is difficult to handle and expensive to transport.

The comic opera "Count Ory" was the first of two French operas written by Rossini for the Paris Opera, where it was first performed in 1828. The text was by A. E. Scribe with the collaboration of C. G. Delestre-Poirson. The opera was revived in Paris in 1926 and performed in Turin in Italian in 1930. It has recently been performed by the Glyndebourne Opera Company in England.

New England Newsclip Agency,
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-

News (e)
MILFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 7,214

JUL 24 1958

Gala Program For Aug. 7 B

LENOX, MASS.—The
mphony Orchestra has
the program for its gala
Tanglewood-on-Parade,
take place on Aug. 7,
ic Shed at Tanglewood
concert is the climax
al benefit for the Berk
Center, the Boston Sy
chestra's summer scho

Three members of th
Music Center faculty
in the first half of th
Eleazar de Carvalho,
Department of Conduct
rect a performance of Amor Brujo". Richard
sociate conductor of
Symphony Orchestra
of the faculty of the Or
partment of the Scho
duct Aaron Copland's
certo with the compos
as soloist. Mr. Copla
man of the faculty and
Department of Compo
School.

Arthur Fiedler and
Pops Orchestra will pr
gram of Pops favorit
ond half of the progra
ler's annual visit to T eagerly anticipated a

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond

Berkshire Cour
GT. BARRINGT
Mass.
Weekly Indepe
Cir. 2,498

JUL 24 19

"PARADE" PRO AT LENOX

Arthur Fiedler's Bo
Be a Tanglewoo

The Boston Symp
announces the progr
concert at Tangle
which will take pla evening, August 7
at Tanglewood in L
cert is the climax of efit for the Berksh
the Boston Symph
summer school of m

Three members
Music Center facult
in the first half of t
zar de Carvalho, hea
ment of conducting w
formance of Falla's
jo". Richard Burgi
ductor of the Bosto
chestra and member of the orchestral d school, will conduct
Piano Concerto with appearing as soloist is chairman of the
of the department of
the school.

Arthur Fiedler an
Pops Orchestra will gram of Pops favorite half of the program
annual visit to Tang ly anticipated and nounced program wi
back's "Gaite Parisi
of Wheat and Mal
tancia" by Ginas
from Leonard Berns Story", an arrang tunes by Richard
"Dancing Through
"76 Trombones" fro
Man" by Meredith W
will also prese
Pops encores.
gala concert at 8:15

Tickets for Tang are now available
box office.

FADED TEXT

[177]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Bay Ledger &
on Hill Times
TON, Mass.
Non-Partisan
10,000 Free
1958

Boston Symphony

Continued from Page One

poser appearing as soloist. Mr. Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the department of composition at the school.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program. Mr. Fiedler's annual visit to Tanglewood is eagerly anticipated and this year his announced program will include Offenbach's "Gáite Parisienne", the Dance of wheat and Malambo from "Estancia" by Ginastera, a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story", an arrangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman, entitled "Dancing Through the Years" and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Wilson. Mr. Fiedler will also present the traditional Pops encores.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, beginning at 6 p.m. Picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn are a popular feature of Tanglewood-on-Parade between the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's gala concert at 8:15 p.m.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354
JUL 24 1958

Two Performances Scheduled For French Comic Opera Aug. 4-5

TANGLEWOOD—The major production of the season for the Berkshire Music Center Opera department will be Rossini's "Count Ory" which will receive two performances in the theater-concert hall on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 4 and 5.

The English version by Robert A. Simon was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music for the Juilliard Opera Theater and has been released to the Berkshire Music Center for performance at Tanglewood.

Cast Announced

The cast of the opera, which will be under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department, includes John McCollum (Count Ory); Angelica Lazada (Countess Fourmoutiers); Nancy Williams (Isolier, the Page); Doris Okerson (Ragonda); David Smith(Raimbaud); Ronald Holgate (Tutor).

The opera will be conducted by Wyn Morris. Mr. Morris, of Llanelly, South Wales, was the winner last year of the Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship, awarded to an outstanding student conductor. He studied during the season just past with George Szell, conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra.

The scenery for the opera will consist of a Fiberglass shell on which 15 projectors, located behind the shell, will produce the different effects needed. Designed by Dr. Elemer Nagy, of the Hartt College of Music in Hartford, and the Berkshire Music Center faculty, the scenery is part of the program undertaken with the cooperation of the New England Opera Theater and a grant from the Ford Foundation for the development of new scenic materials. It is hoped that this innovation may do away with bulky scenery which is difficult to handle and expensive to transport.

The comic opera, "Count Ory" was the first of two French operas written by Rossini for the Paris Opera where it was first performed in 1828. The text was by A. E. Scribe with the collaboration of C. G. Delestre-Poirson. The opera was revived in Paris in 1926 and performed in Turin in Italian in 1930. It has recently been performed by the Glyndebourne Opera Company in England.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Express (e)
PORTLAND, Me.
Independent Republican
Circ. 28,708

JUL 23 1958

Burgin To Lead Orchestra at Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass. — Richard Burgin, former conductor of the Portland Symphony Orchestra; Aaron Copland; and the Boston Symphony Orchestra will highlight the first half of the Tanglewood-on-Parade concert here at 8:15 p.m. Aug. 7. The second half of the program will be devoted to Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra.

Tanglewood-on-Parade is the clamax of the annual benefit for the Symphony's summer Berkshire Music Center.

Burgin will conduct the Symphony in Copland's "Piano Concerto" with the composer as the featured soloist. Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the symphony in Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Copyand, Burgin and de Carvalho are members of the Center's faculty.

Fiedler will lead the Boston Pops Orchestra in "76 Trombones" from Meredith Wilson's "The Music Man", a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story,"; Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne"; a dance suite from Ginastera's "Estancia," and a medley of dance tunes arranged by Richard Hayman.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,541

JUL 24 1958

Opera 'Count Ory' To Be Offered at Berkshire Center

Lenox, July 23—The major production of the season for the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department will be Rossini's "Count Ory." Two performances are scheduled in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 4 and 5.

English Version

The English version by Robert A. Simon was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music for the Juilliard Opera Theatre and has been released to the Berkshire Music Center for performance at Tanglewood. The cast of the opera, which will be under direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department, includes John McCollum (Count Ory); Angelica Lazada (Countess Fourmoutiers); Nancy Williams (Isolier, the Page); Doris Okerson (Ragonda); David Smith (Raimbaud); Ronald Holgate (Tutor).

The opera will be conducted by Wyn Morris. Mr. Morris, of Llanelly, South Wales, was the winner last year of the Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship, awarded to an outstanding student conductor. He studied during the season just past with George Szell, conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra.

New Scenery Plan

The scenery will consist of a Fibreglass shell on which 15 projectors, located behind the shell, will produce the different effects needed. Designed by Dr. Elemer Nagy of the Hartt College of Music in Hartford and the Berkshire Music Center faculty, the scenery is part of the program undertaken with the co-operation of the New England Opera Theatre and a grant from the Ford Foundation for the development of new scenic materials. It is hoped that this innovation may do away with bulky scenery which is difficult to handle and expensive to transport.

The comic opera "Count Ory" was the first of two French operas written by Rossini for the Paris Opera where it was first performed in 1828. The text was by A. E. Scribe with the collaboration of C. G. Delestre-Poirson. The opera was revived in Paris in 1926 and performed in Turin in Italian in 1930. It has recently been performed by the Glyndebourne Opera Company in England.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
RED HOOK, N. Y.
ADVERTISER
Circ. W. 925
JUL 24 1958

Varied Program At Tanglewood On August 7

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade, which will take place on Thursday evening, August 7, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Calvalho, head of the Department of Conducting, will direct a performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Richard Burgin, Associate Conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the faculty of the Orchestral Department of the School, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer appearing as soloist. Mr. Copland is Chairman of the Faculty and head of the Department of Composition at the School.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program. Mr. Fiedler's annual visit to Tanglewood is eagerly anticipated and this year his announced program will include Offenbah's "Gaite Parisienne," the Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia" by Ginastera, a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story," an arrangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman titled "Dancing Through the Years" and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Wilson. Mr. Fiedler will also present the traditional Pops encores.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, beginning at 6 p.m. Picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn are a popular feature of Tanglewood-on-Parade between the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestras gala concert at 8:15 p.m.

Tickets for Tanglewood-on-Parade are available at the Tanglewood box office.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
MILLBROOK, N. Y.
ROUND TABLE
Circ. W. 673
JUL 24 1958

Tanglewood on Parade Planned For August 7

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade, on Thursday evening, Aug. 7, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

In the first half of the program, Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the Department of Conducting, will direct a performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and members of the faculty of the Orchestral Department of the School, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the Composer appearing as soloist. Mr. Copland is Chairman of the Faculty and head of the Department of Composition at the School.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program. Mr. Fiedler's announced program will include Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne", the Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia" by Ginastera, a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story", an arangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman entitled "Dancing Through the Years" and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Wilson. Mr. Fiedler will also present the traditional Pops encores.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, beginning at 6 p.m. Picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn are a popular feature of Tanglewood-on-Parade between the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's gala concert at 8:15 p.m.

Tickets for Tanglewood-on-Parade will be available at the Tanglewood Box Office after July 21.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.
TIMES-HERALD
Circ. D. 10,258
JUL 24 1958

Rossini Opera To Be Revived At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass. — The major production of the season for the Berkshire Music Center opera department will be Rossini's "Count Ory", which will receive two performances at the theatre-concert hall at Tanglewood on Monday and Tuesday evenings, August 4 and 5.

The English version by Robert A. Simon was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music for the Juilliard Opera Theatre and has been released to the Berkshire Music Center for performance at Tanglewood. The cast of the opera, which will be under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department, includes John McCollum (Count Ory); Angelica Lazada (Countess Fourmoutiers); Nancy Williams (Isolier, the page); Doris Okerson (Ragonda); David Smith (Raimbaud); Ronald Holgate (tutor).

The opera will be conducted by Wyn Morris of Lianelly, South Wales, who was the winner last year of the Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship, awarded to an outstanding student conductor. Mr. Morris studied during the season just past with George Szell, conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra.

The scenery for the opera will consist of a fibreglass shell on which 15 projectors, located behind the shell, will produce the different effects needed. Designed by Dr. Elemer Nagy of the Hartt College of Music in Hartford, and the Berkshire Music Center faculty, the scenery is part of the program undertaken with the cooperation of the New England Opera Theatre and a grant from the Ford Foundation for the development of new scenic materials. It is hoped that this innovation may do away with bulky scenery, which is difficult to handle and expensive to transport.

The comic opera "Count Ory" was the first of two French operas written by Rossini for the Paris Opera, where it was first performed in 1828. The text was by A. E. Scribe with the collaboration of C. G. Delestre-Poirson. The opera was revived in Paris in 1926 and performed in Turin in Italian in 1930. It has recently been performed by the Glyndebourne Opera Company in England.

New England Newsclip Agency,
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-
News (e)
MILFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 7,214

JUL 24 1958

Gala Progra
For Aug. 7 B

LENOX, MASS.—The
mphony Orchestra has
the program for its gala
Tanglewood-on-Parade,
take place on Aug. 1,
ic Shed at Tanglewood
concert is the climax
al benefit for the Berk
Center, the Boston Sy
chestra's summer scho
Three members of th
Music Center faculty w in the first half of th
Eleazar de Carvalho,
Department of Conduc
rect a performance of Amor Brujo". Richard
sociate conductor of Symphony Orchestra a of the faculty of the Or
partment of the Scho
duct Aaron Copland's
certo with the compos
as soloist. Mr. Copla
man of the faculty and
Department of Compo
School.
Arthur Fiedler and Pops Orchestra will p
gram of Pops favorit
ond half of the progra
ler's annual visit to T eagerly anticipated a

New England Newsclip Ag
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmo
Berkshire Cou
GT. BARRING
Mass.
Weekly Indep
Cir. 2,498

JUL 24 1

"PARADE" PR
AT LENOX

Arthur Fiedler's B
Be a Tanglewo

The Boston Sym
announces the prog
concert at Tangle
which will take pla evening, August 7, in at Tanglewood in L
cert is the climax of efit for the Berkshi
the Boston Symph
summer school of m
Three members o
Music Center facult
in the first half of th
zar de Carvalho, hea
ment of conducting w
formance of Falla's
jo". Richard Burgi
ductor of the Bosto
chestra and membe of the orchestral de school, will conduct
Piano Concerto wi appearing as solois is chairman of the f
of the department of
the school.
Arthur Fiedler a Pops Orchestra will
gram of Pops favorit
half of the program
annual visit to Tang ly anticipated and t
nounced program wi
back's "Gaite Parisi
of Wheat and Mala
tancia", by Ginaste
from Leonard Bernst Story," an arranger tunes by Richard H
"Dancing Through t
"76 Trombones" fro
Man" by Meredith W
ler will also present
Pops encores.
gala concert at 8:15
Tickets for Tangle are now available at box office.

[178]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News (e)
MILFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 7,214

JUL 24 1958

'Gala Program Set For Aug. 7 Benefit

LENOX, MASS.—The Boston Symphony Orchestra has announced the program for its gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade, which will take place on Aug. 1, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, here. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first halt of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the Department of Conducting, will direct a performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo". Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the faculty of the Orchestral Department of the School, will conduct Aaron Copland's piano concerto with the composer appearing as soloist. Mr. Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the Department of Composition at the School.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program. Mr. Fiedler's annual visit to Tanglewood is eagerly anticipated and this year his program will include Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne", the Dance of wheat and Malambo from "Estancia" by Ginastera, a selection from Leonard Berstein's "West Side Story", an arrangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman entitled "Dancing Through the Years" and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Willson. Mr. Fiedler will also present the traditional Pops encores.

Tickets for Tanglewood-on-Parade will be available at the Tanglewood Box Office after July 21.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, beginning at 6 p.m. Picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn are a popular feature of Tanglewood-on-Parade betwe n the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's gala concert at 8:15 p.m.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 186,306

JUL 25 1958

Hub Symphony To Present Tanglewood-on-Parade At Leno

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will present Tanglewood-on-Parade Thursday night, Aug. 7, in the Music Shed at Lenox. This is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the department of conduct Falla's "El Amor Brujo."

Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the orchestra and each er in the orchesral departmen of he cener, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer appearing as soloist. Mr. Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the department of composition at the school.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program. He will also have the traditional Pops encores.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, beginning at 6 P.M.

Picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn are a popular feature of Tanglewood-on-Parade between the student performances and the concert at 8:15 P.M.

Tickets for Tanglewood-on-Parade are available at the box office.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON,
Mass.
Weekly Independent
Cir. 2,498

JUL 24 1958

"PARADE" PROGRAM AT LENOX AUGUST 7

Arthur Fiedler's Boston Pops Will Be a Tanglewood Feature

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade, which will take place on Thursday evening, August 7, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood in Lenox. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the department of conducting will direct a performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo". Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the faculty of the orchestral department of the school, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer appearing as soloist. Mr. Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the department of composition at the school.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program. Mr. Fiedler's annual visit to Tanglewood is eagerly anticipated and this year his announced program will include Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne," the Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia" by Ginastera; a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story," an arrangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman entitled "Dancing Through the Years" and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Wilson. Mr. Fiedler will also present the traditional Pops encores.

gala concert at 8:15 p.m.

Tickets for Tanglewood-on-Parade are now available at the Tanglewood box office.

Program Postponed to Sunday

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 44,806

JUL 25 1958

Berkshire Music Center To Present 'Count Ory'

Rossini's "Count Ory" will be the major production of the summer season for the Berkshire Music Center opera department. It will receive two performances, on the evenings of Aug. 4 and 5 at the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

* * *

THE ENGLISH version by Robert A. Simon was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music for the Juilliard Opera Theater and has been released to the Berkshire Music Center for the Tanglewood performance.

Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department at the center, will direct the opera and Wyn Morris of Llanelly, South Whales, will conduct. Morris, winner last year of the Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship to an outstanding student conducter, has studied during the past season with George Szell, conducter of the Cleveland Orchestra.

* * *

MEMBERS OF THE cast include John McCollum (Count Ory); Angelica Lazada (Countess Fourmoutiers); Nancy Williams, (Isolier, the page); Doris Okerson (Ragonda); David Smith (Raimbaud); and Ronald Holgate (tutor).

Scenery for the opera will consist of a fiberglass shell on which 15 projectors, located behind the shell, will produce the different effects needed. Designed by Dr. Elemer Nagy the scenery is part of the program undertaken with the co-operation of the New England Opera Theater and a grant from the Ford Foundation for the development of new scenic materials.

The comic opera "Count Ory" was the first of two French operas written by Rossini for the Paris Opera where it was first performed in 1828. It was revived in Paris in 1926 and performed in Turin in Italian in 1930. It has recently been performed by the Glyndebourne Opera Company in England.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

JUL 26 1958

Parade Feature

Copland To Appear as Soloist For First Time in 31 Years

TANGLEWOOD — The gala concert in the Music Shed at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, and the Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler, conductor, will climax the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center on Thursday evening, Aug. 7, at 8:15.

Eleazar de Carvalho, who will open the program conducting Gome's Overture to "Il Guarany' and Falla's "El Amor Brujo" is the head of the department of orchestral conducting at the Berkshire Music Center and has been affiliated with the school for many years. Mr. Carvalho began his association with Tanglewood as a conducting student of Serge Koussevitzky.

Burgin To Conduct

Aaron Copland will appear as soloist in his own piano concerto for the first time with this orchestra in 31 years. Richard Burgin will conduct the performance. Mr. Copland last performed the work with the Boston Symphony under Serge Koussevitzky's direction in 1927. When the Concerto (sometimes called the "Jazz Concerto") was first performed, in 1927, it was the subject of some controversy.

Arthur Fiedler, who will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in a group of Pops favorites in the second half of the program, will come to Tanglewood from San Francisco where he has conducted nine concerts with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Fiedler will return to San Francisco, following a week of Esplanade concerts in Boston, and in late August will conduct the Louisville Symphony Orchestra at the French Lick (Ind.) Music Festival. He then returns to San Francisco until Sept. 7.

Mr. Fiedler's program will include Offenbach's Suite from "Gaite Parisienne," Ginastera's Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia," a selection from the "West Side Story," by Leonard Bernstein, "Dancing Through the Years," an arrangement by Richard Hayman of dance tunes from the cakewalk to rock and roll. The program will close with "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Willson, and Mr. Fiedler will also offer some of the traditional Pops encores.

There will be a drawing of door prizes in the intermission.

Two preliminary events of Tanglewood-on-Parade will take place at 4 p.m. when holders of box and reserved seats are invited to attend a special opera performance in the Formal Gardens. All ticket holders are invited to a concert by the Tanglewood Study Group in the Barn, also at 4 oclock.

Aaron Copland

At 5:45 p.m. all ticket holders are admitted to the Tanglewood grounds. A grass fanfare by students under the direction of Roger Voisin, first trumpet of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty, will be followed by a welcome to all guests from Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the school. Mr. Berkowitz will invite visitors to attend any of several simultaneous performances by different school departments at 6 p.m. the student orchestra in the Shed, Tanglewood composers in the Chamber Music Hall, opera scenes in the theater. These performances will sumarize the work of the students during the six weeks' session.

The program of the student orchestra will include Weber's Overture to "Der Freischutz" conducted by Wonsik Lim of Seoul, Korea; William Schuman's New England Triptych; conducted by David Zinman of New York City; "Don Juan" of Richard Strauss conducted by Zubin Mehta of India and the first movement (Angelic Concert) of Hindemith's "Mathis der Maler," conducted by Gustav Meier of Switzerland.

The concert in the Chamber Music Hall will include works composed during the summer by students of the composition department performed by Fromm Fellowship players.

At 7 o'clock while visitors are enjoying a picnic supper on the grounds, the Tanglewood choir will present a choral program on the porch of the Main House.

[179]

~~worden.~~ Sonntagsblatt Staats-Zeitung July 27

Rossinis "Graf Ory" in Kürze in Tanglewood

In der Theater- und Konzerthalle in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., gelangt am 4. und 5. August, die Rossini-Oper "Graf Ory" zur Aufführung. Das Orchester steht unter der Leitung von Wyn Morris, einem jungen im vergangenen Jahr mit einem Preis ausgezeichneten Künstler. Die komische Oper "Graf Ory" wurde im Jahre 1828 von Rossini für die Pariser Oper geschrieben. Der Text stammt im wesentlichen von A. E. Scribe.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

HARTFORD, CONN.
COURANT
D 103 521 S 142 739

JUL 27 1958

Rossini Opera Major Offering At Tanglewood

The major production of the season for the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department will be Rossini's "Count Ory" which will receive two performances in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 4 and 5. The English version by Robert A. Simon was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music for the Juilliard Opera Theater and has been released to the Berkshire Music Center

---

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 - S. 1,189,293

JUL 27 1958

PLASTICS AND OPERA

Fiberglas, Corrulux May Come to Aid Of the Harassed Scenic Designer

By HAROLD C. SCHONBERG

NO man is an island; and no art form either. Music itself has looked to mathematics ever since Pythagoras. Now another science—specifically, the new science of plastics—may come to the aid of opera. At least that is the earnest hope of Boris Goldovsky, who is investigating new resources that may make operatic life a little easier for all concerned.

Mr. Goldovsky, pianist, conductor and artistic director of the New England Opera Theatre since its inception thirteen years ago, for a long time has been unhappy with conventional methods of handling scenery. After any typical tour of the New England Opera Theatre—or any opera company, for that matter—the officials of the company invariably gaze upon tattered shreds of expensive scenery despondently hanging from their frames; or paint chipping away in gallons; or monstrous tears in canvas. This leads to frayed dollar bills, and from there to frayed nerves, and it is obviously a situation not to be borne.

Last April the New England Opera Theatre received a $40,000 one-year grant from the Ford Fouidation to investigate the possibilities of indestructible, fireproof, easily assembled and easily dismountable scenery. Work has been going on along those lines. But it also had been going on, under Mr. Goldovsky's direction, for some time.

Training Program

Three years ago an interested group in Cleveland donated a grant of $20,000 toward a leadership training program for operatic stage designers, directors and conductors. One of the problems that came up was the ever-present one of creating scenery easier to handle, transport and store.

"We decided to try plastics and aluminum," said Mr. Goldovsky when cornered a few weeks ago at Tanglewood. Mr. Goldovsky was wearing a standard Tanglewood uniform—slacks, a checked sports shirt and a sports jacket. At Tanglewood he will prepare the operatic program. "Then, about a year ago here at Tanglewood, we found that Fiberglas panels attached to aluminum frames offered some promising aspects. They not only are easy to work with but also have fine acoustic properties, reflecting sound in an agreeable manner."

As one who has played the piano and sponsored operatic presentations throughout the country, these acoustic aids considerably interested Mr. Goldovsky. "For many years," he said, "I have been distressed by the acoustics of auditoriums throughout the country. It is a scandalous situation."

Working with Elemer Nagy, of the Hartt School of Music in Hartford, Mr. Goldovsky designed an acoustic symphonic shell. The idea was to build something portable that could be carried by an opera company from city to city and assembled in any auditorium. They tried it out last season in Boston "with great success."

Indestructible Scenery

The shell is made of Fiberglas, and so is the scenery that is being designed. Fiberglas, says Mr. Goldovsky, is practically indestructible, can be stored in the open air, takes paint beautifully and is easy to manage. Generally the Fiberglas is given an undercoat, which stays permanently. Any outer layer of paint can easily be washed away and repainted.

Another thing that pleases Mr. Goldovsky about Fiberglas is that it is translucent. Need a set that calls for a window? Paint around the Fiberglas, leaving an appropriately sized opening, shine a light from behind, and presto! a window.

Fiberglas is not the only plastic material that Mr. Goldovsky and Mr. Nagy have been eying. They are trying to design a scenic shell—a series of Corrulux panels completely surrounding the stage and ceiling. In addition to offering an acoustic advantage, Corrulux is, like Fiberglas, translucent. Once the scenic shell is placed in an auditorium, it will be lighted by means of a special projector designed by Mr. Nagy. If this works out, an opera company will be able to go on the road without a single piece of painted scenery. All scenes will be projected.

Mr. Goldovsky led the way to the storage shed at Tanglewood. "Look," he said; and with one hand he picked up a 13-foot-tall tree in full bloom. True, it was a tree painted on Fiberglas, attached to an aluminum cross-support, but it looked very heavy, and an onlooker gazed with respect on Mr. Goldovsky's muscles.

"You try it," Mr. Goldovsky said. The onlooker tried and much to his surprise lifted it. With one hand, too.

New England Newsclip Agency, I
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4
Sunday Post
BRIDGEPORT, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 66,613

JUL 27 1958

COUNT ORY' SET AT TANGLEWOOD

The major production of the season for the Berkshire Music Center Opera department will be Rossini's "Count Ory" which will receive two performances in the Theatre-Concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., at 8:30 p.m. Aug. 4 and 5.

The English version by Robert A. Simon was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music for the Juilliard Opera theater and has been released to the Berkshire Music center for performance at Tanglewood. The case of the opera, which will be under the direction of Boris Goldovsky head of the Opera department includes John McCollum (Count Ory); Angelica Lazada (Countess Fourmoutiers); Nancy Williams (Isolier, the Page); Doris Okerson (Ragonda); David Smith (Raimbaud); and Ronald Holgate (Tutor).

The opera will be conducted by Wyn Morris. Mr. Morris, of Llanelly, South Wales, was the winner last year of the Koussevitzky Memorial scholarship, awarded to an outstanding student conductor. He studied during the season just past with George Szell, conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra.

The scenery for the opera will consist of a Fibreglass shell on which 15 projectors, located behind the shell, will produce the different effects needed. Designed by Dr. Elemer Nagy, of the Hartt College of Music in Hartford, and the Berkshire Music center faculty, the scenery is part of the program undertaken with the cooperation of the New England Opera Theater and a grant from the Ford Foundation for the development of new scenic materials. It is hoped that this innovation may do away with bulky scenery which is difficult to handle and expensive to transport.

The comic opera "Count Ory" was the first of two French operas written by Rossini for the Paris Opera where it was first performed in 1828. The text was by A. E. Scribe with the collaboration of C. G. Delestre-Poirson. The opera was revived in Paris in 1926 and performed in Turin in Italian in 1930. It has recently been performed by the Glyndebourne Opera Company in England.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.
PRESS
Circ. D. 37,128 - S. 27,530

JUL 27 1958

This Week In Music

by William McMahon

WHEN THE ROLLCALL of American music is made, we predict that "76 Trombones," penned by that one-time concert flutist Meredith Willson, will go down as the greatest American march since John Philip Sousa put his signature on "Stars and Stipes Forever".

One thing both pieces have in common — they are 100 per cent American in sound, in rhythm and in thought — that can never be denied. What this country has been waiting for in its musical chaos is a good march — this is it.

High school bands from coast to coast are playing it. There is not a summer orchestra in operation, including our own Atlantic City Festival Orchestra, that does not have a full blown orchestration of the same.

POPULAR DEMAND

When the State Elks started their parade last month in Asbury Park it was to the beat of "76 Trombones". The Ft. Monmouth Army Bugle and Drum Corps is presenting a bugle and drum version which has all the bounce of the oroiginal.

It is the number most asked for, and it will be the number America will be marching by for years to come.

It is as much a part of us as fireworks on the Fourth of July and ice cream in August.

America owes a debt of gratitude to Willson.

CONCERT PIANIST FEATURED

The resort area can take another bow, musically speaking, tonight when another of its sons takes the spotlight at the city-sponsored open air Garden Pier Concerts. Donald Betts, Absecon concert pianist who has made three appearances at Carnegie Hall in New York and who is praised by critics as one of the fast rising of the young American concert artists, will be featured in the program which begins at 7 p.m.

DONALD BETTS
soloist

This is a return engagement for young Betts by popular demand in that he made such an impression in an earlier season performance that an overflow audience cheered his playing. Betts is South Jersey's answer to Texas and Van.

For his concert tonight he has chosen Four Preludes of Chopin and the spectacular and intricate "Fireworks" of Debussy. We predict seats will be hard to find.

The Atlantic City Festival Orchestra under direction of veteran conductor William Madden, who has his own spot in the resort musical picture, has prepared a tuneful program for the occasion.

The complete program is as follows:

"Countess Maritza" overture. . . Kalman

"Beautiful Lady" from "Pink Lady" . . . Caryl

"March of a Marionette" . . . Gounod

Orchestra

Chopin Preludes

Betts

Excerpts from "The Bohemian Girl" . . . Balfe

Colonel Bogie March . . . Alford

Orchestra

On Tuesday night the Festival Orchestra will again be featured at the pier with an entirely new program and guest soloists.

— — —

CHANGE OF POST

ROBERT C. HEATH, director of the Orpheus Singers for the past several years, has resigned his post because of the pressure of other activities, it was learned this past week.

The organization has not announced his successor as yet.

Heath, who has taken on the directorship of the expanding Barbershop Quartet chapter of Atlantic City, is also anticipating extra work in getting the Atlantic City High School band ready for the Pageant parade, an additional activity of that group.

— — —

FINAL WEEK FOR DELL

A TRIO of top flight soloists and famed conductor Erich Leindorf are scheduled for the final week of outdoor concerts at Robin Hood Dell, beginning tomorrow. Moura Lympany, English pianist, will open the week's event, followed by Norman Carol, Philadelphia trained violinist, on Tuesday. The evening has been designated the William Kapell Memorial Concert in honor of the pianist killed in a plane crash in 1953.

Jan Peerce of the Metropolitan will ring down the curtain on the 1958 season on Thursday. This will terminate the sixth season of free concerts at the Dell sponsored by the City of Philadelphia.

— — —

ROSSINI OPERA

THE MAJOR production of the season for the opera department at the Berkshire Festival will be Rossini's "County Ory", which will receive two performances at Tanglewood, Aug. 4 and 5. The English version of Robert A. Simon was commissioned by Juilliard and released for performance by the Berkshire Center. This opera originally writeen for the Parish Opera was first performed in 1828.

— — —

TECHNICALITIES

METROPOLITAN Opera Star Hildo Gueden's scheduled appearance at Robin Hood Dell Thursday night was cancelled very suddenly after some misunderstndings developed between Miss Gueden and Conductor Josef Krips

HILDE GUEDEN
technicality

of the Vienna State Opera, during rehearsals.

The conductor stated that the cancellation was due to "technicalities." Krips, however, conceded that due to confusion over arrangement he had to tell Miss Gueden:

"You are not the star — Johann Strauss is the star."

That did it!

— — —

MUSICAL NOTEBOOK A familiar face showed up at the rehearsals of the Ventnor Festival Youth Orchestra last week. Sidney Polvnick former Junior High School musical director, here for a holiday decided to help out for the still absent Joseph Levine, who is somewhere in the "wilds" of Venezuela.

erkshire Music Center
Dept. at Tanglewood.
ass. Performances will in an English version
A. Simon, Aug. 4 and Morris will conduct.

RONALD HOLGATE as the Tutor and Nancy Williams as the Page, Isolier, bewail the dreadful task which the Tutor has as spy for Count Ory. This duet is from Act I of Rossini's "Count Ory" which is to be performed Aug. 4 and 5 at Tanglewood.

[179]

worden.

Sonntagsblatt Staats-Zeitung July 27

Rossinis "Graf Ory" in Kürze in Tanglewood

In der Theater- und Konzerthalle in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., gelangt am 4. und 5. August, die Rossini-Oper "Graf Ory" zur Aufführung. Das Orchester steht unter der Leitung von Wyn Morris, einem jungen im vergangenen Jahr mit einem Preis ausgezeichneten Künstler. Die komische Oper "Graf Ory" wurde im Jahre 1828 von Rossini für die Pariser Oper geschrieben. Der Text stammt im wesentlichen von A. E. Scribe.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

HARTFORD, CONN.
COURANT
D 103 521 S 142 739

JUL 27 1958

Rossini Opera Major Offering At Tanglewood

The major production of the season for the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department will be Rossini's "Count Ory" which will receive two performances in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 4 and 5. The English version by Robert A. Simon was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music for the Juilliard Opera Theater and has been released to the Berkshire Music Center

---

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 - S. 1,189,293

JUL 27 1958

PLASTICS AND OPERA

Fiberglas, Corrulux May Come to Aid Of the Harassed Scenic Designer

By HAROLD C. SCHONBERG

NO man is an island; and no art form either. Music itself has looked to mathematics ever since Pythagoras. Now another science—specifically, the new science of plastics—may come to the aid of opera. At least that is the earnest hope of Boris Goldovsky, who is investigating new resources that may make operatic life a little easier for all concerned.

Mr. Goldovsky, pianist, conductor and artistic director of the New England Opera Theatre since its inception thirteen years ago, for a long time has been unhappy with conventional methods of handling scenery. After any typical tour of the New England Opera Theatre—or any opera company, for that matter—the officials of the company invariably gaze upon tattered shreds of expensive scenery despondently hanging from their frames; or paint chipping away in gallons; or monstrous tears in canvas. This leads to frayed dollar bills, and from there to frayed nerves, and it is obviously a situation not to be borne.

Last April the New England Opera Theatre received a $40,000 one-year grant from the Ford Fouidation to investigate the possibilities of indestructible, fireproof, easily assembled and easily dismountable scenery. Work has been going on along those lines. But it also had been going on, under Mr. Goldovsky's direction, for some time.

Training Program

Three years ago an interested group in Cleveland donated a grant of $20,000 toward a leadership training program for operatic stage designers, directors and conductors. One of the problems that came up was the ever-present one of creating scenery easier to handle, transport and store.

"We decided to try plastics and aluminum," said Mr. Goldovsky when cornered a few weeks ago at Tanglewood. Mr. Goldovsky was wearing a standard Tanglewood uniform—slacks, a checked sports shirt and a sports jacket. At Tanglewood he will prepare the operatic program. "Then, about a year ago here at Tanglewood, we found that Fiberglas panels attached to aluminum frames offered some promising aspects. They not only are easy to work with but also have fine acoustic properties, reflecting sound in an agreeable manner."

As one who has played the piano and sponsored operatic presentations throughout the country, these acoustic aids considerably interested Mr. Goldovsky. "For many years," he said, "I have been distressed by the acoustics of auditoriums throughout the country. It is a scandalous situation."

Working with Elemer Nagy, of the Hartt School of Music in Hartford, Mr. Goldovsky designed an acoustic symphonic shell. The idea was to build something portable that could be carried by an opera company from city to city and assembled in any auditorium. They tried it out last season in Boston "with great success."

Indestructible Scenery

The shell is made of Fiberglas, and so is the scenery that is being designed. Fiberglas, says Mr. Goldovsky, is practically indestructible, can be stored in the open air, takes paint beautifully and is easy to manage. Generally the Fiberglas is given an undercoat, which stays permanently. Any outer layer of paint can easily be washed away and repainted.

Another thing that pleases Mr. Goldovsky about Fiberglas is that it is translucent. Need a set that calls for a window? Paint around the Fiberglas, leaving an appropriately sized opening, shine a light from behind, and presto! a window.

Fiberglas is not the only plastic material that Mr. Goldovsky and Mr. Nagy have been eying. They are trying to design a scenic shell — a series of Corrulux panels completely surrounding the stage and ceiling. In addition to offering an acoustic advantage, Corrulux is, like Fiberglas, translucent. Once the scenic shell is placed in an auditorium, it will be lighted by means of a special projector designed by Mr. Nagy. If this works out, an opera company will be able to go on the road without a single piece of painted scenery. All scenes will be projected.

Mr. Goldovsky led the way to the storage shed at Tanglewood. "Look," he said; and with one hand he picked up a 13-foot-tall tree in full bloom. True, it was a tree painted on Fiberglas, attached to an aluminum cross-support, but it looked very heavy, and an onlooker gazed with respect on Mr. Goldovsky's muscles.

"You try it," Mr. Goldovsky said. The onlooker tried and much to his surprise lifted it. With one hand, too.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Post
BRIDGEPORT, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 66,613

JUL 27 1958

COUNT ORY' SET AT TANGLEWOOD

The major production of the season for the Berkshire Music Center Opera department will be Rossini's "Count Ory" which will receive two performances in the Theatre-Concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., at 8:30 p.m. Aug. 4 and 5.

The English version by Robert A. Simon was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music for the Juilliard Opera theater and has been released to the Berkshire Music center for performance at Tanglewood. The case of the opera, which will be under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera department, includes John McCollum (Count Ory); Angelica Lazada (Countess Fourmoutiers); Nancy Williams (Isolier, the Page); Doris Okerson (Ragonda); David Smith (Raimbaud); and Ronald Holgate (Tutor).

The opera will be conducted by Wyn Morris. Mr. Morris, of Llanelly, South Wales, was the winner last year of the Koussevitzky Memorial scholarship, awarded to an outstanding student conductor. He studied during the season just past with George Szell, conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra.

The scenery for the opera will consist of a Fibreglass shell on which 15 projectors, located behind the shell, will produce the different effects needed. Designed by Dr. Elemer Nagy, of the Hartt College of Music in Hartford, and the Berkshire Music center faculty, the scenery is part of the program undertaken with the cooperation of the New England Opera Theater and a grant from the Ford Foundation for the development of new scenic materials. It is hoped that this innovation may do away with bulky scenery which is difficult to handle and expensive to transport.

The comic opera "Count Ory" was the first of two French operas written by Rossini for the Paris Opera where it was first performed in 1828. The text was by A. E. Scribe with the collaboration of C. G. Delestre-Poirson. The opera was revived in Paris in 1926 and performed in Turin in Italian in 1930. It has recently been performed by the Glyndebourne Opera Company in England.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.
POST
D. 78,913 S. 88,813

JUL 27 1958

RONALD HOLGATE as the Tutor and Nancy Williams as the Page, Isolier, bewail the dreadful task which the Tutor has as spy for Count Ory. This duet is from Act I of Rossini's "Count Ory" which is to be performed Aug. 4 and 5 at Tanglewood.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 408,150 - S. 281,019

JUL 27 1958

'Count Ory' at Tanglewood

Rossini's "Count Ory" will be the major production this season of the Berkshire Music Center Opera Dept. at Tanglewood. Lenox, Mass. Performances will be given in an English version by Robert A. Simon, Aug. 4 and 5. Wyn Morris will conduct.

JERSEY DOINGS—New J
Shrine convention in Chicago dent of the Edison Industries nent member of Crescent Te 800,000 member organization convention to be held next Daniel Poling, editor of the to serve as imperial chaplain of Virginia, Gov. Vernon Th
Pitt, of Trenton, chaplain of

Top Shriner Stringfellow Is Jerseyman

George E. Stringfellow, West Orange industrialist and newly elected imperial potentate of 800,000 Shriners has set in motion plans for the 85th Imperial Council session to be held here in 1959.

Stringfellow became the first Jerseyman ever elected to the Shrine's highest office at the 84th Imperial Council session in Chicago last week. He expressed gratification at the Shrine's decision to visit New Jersey, an official invitation for which was extended by the New Jersey Legislature. It was estimated that 100,000 Shriners attended the Chicago session, spending about $25 million.

The East Orange industrialist, who is vice president of the Thomas A. Edison Industries of McGraw-Edison Co., has long been outstanding in New Jersey civic and humanitarian activities. Among these activities, he is former president of the New Jersey Taxpayers Assn. and was first president of the New Jersey Division of the American Cancer Society.

LIFE DEPICTED

He brings to the Shrine activity the energy and business organization talent for which the late Thomas A. Edison early elevated him to a leading position in the Edison enterprises. Edison and New Jersey had prominent though. Fansler was an ex- for the National Biscuit area. He was district when he retired in of 1954.

---

next three years, Mr. and Fansler, of 17 S. Haverford Margate, spent in travel- They were in Florida in arch of 1957, when the Chamber's board of directors decided ey should hire Fansler to re- ve a sagging membership cam- aign.

Although the weather was still w, Fansler didn't hesitate when heard of the offer to return to lantic City as a Chamber executive. He was soon back in arness.

"I was tired of traveling," he ys. "I knew I was going to get ack into some kind of activity. hat better one could I have und than strengthening the Atntic City community?"

The chamber has recently nounced that for the first time

EARL BUTCHER
. . . Back In 'Harness'

reasons. Earl Butcher, of 1436 Absecon Blvd., had been chief of police for five years when, in April of 1956, he decided to go on pension. He had been ill for several months and did not think he could continue to do justice to the office.

But a year of leisure restored his health. As with so many others, the desire to become unretired soon asserted itself. He qualified for a real estate license and dabbled in that business until the downturn came along. Now he's taken a government job.

Samuel Weakley, of 1106 Atlantic Ave., also was an Atlantic City chief of police. He retired in March of 1944 as the resort's top policeman because of a law passed by the Legislature that year which would have diminished his pension benefits if he remained on active duty.

For six years Weakley filled the ole of garden putterer, growing rawberries and table vegetables ut in Margate. He did keep up ne lifetime activity, though: ublican politics in the Second Vard. As president of the ward's OP club, he ran for the Board f Freeholders in November of 949, won, and took the oath of ffice in early 1950. He's been a nember of the board ever since.

Many other local citizens have aken jobs after leaving lifetime areers, and there are great numers of oldsters so satisfied with he useful leisure of their retirenent that they would not consider eturning to the world of comnerce.

But, those who envy the red most may be among the estless many who find they do ot want to spend their final ears without a sustaining busiess connection.

JUL 30 1958

The major season for the Center opera d sini's "Count receive two per Theater-Concer

ATLANT
Journal & C
Circ. S.

AUG

glewood ssini's 'C

ssini's opera
the major season for t sic Center Op
nox, Mass.
The English ve t A. Simon was y the Juilliard S or the Juilliard and has been re
Berkshire Music
formance at Tan
Boris Goldovsk
the production.

165 Church Stre

UTICA, N.Y.
PRESS
D. 26,881

JUL

Tangle
Rossini

The summer s
Berkshire Music
Tanglewood ent two weeks toda of the outstandin
the period still dar.

Burrel
ESTABLI
BArclay
PRESS CLIPPING B
165 Church Street -

BATTLE CREEK, M
ENQUIRER AND NE
D. 37,186 S. 38,93

JUL 27 19

performa ng some pt, as the play ced anew i l.

Miss Margaret play the role of L and Craig Huebin Eddie in the presentation, will part back. Incident be Eddie in the new production.

Natalie Ros will
June Yaeger,
Signora Floria,
Giovanna, Ga
as Mrs. McIlhenny,
rard as Mr. McIlhen Stokes as Vito, and as Mauro.

The play tells th
Laura, an Americ a bit past her youth romance in played by John was understudy
New York and performance.
sort of old-ho
Draper, Huebi

The play wil formances. Then
" and "No

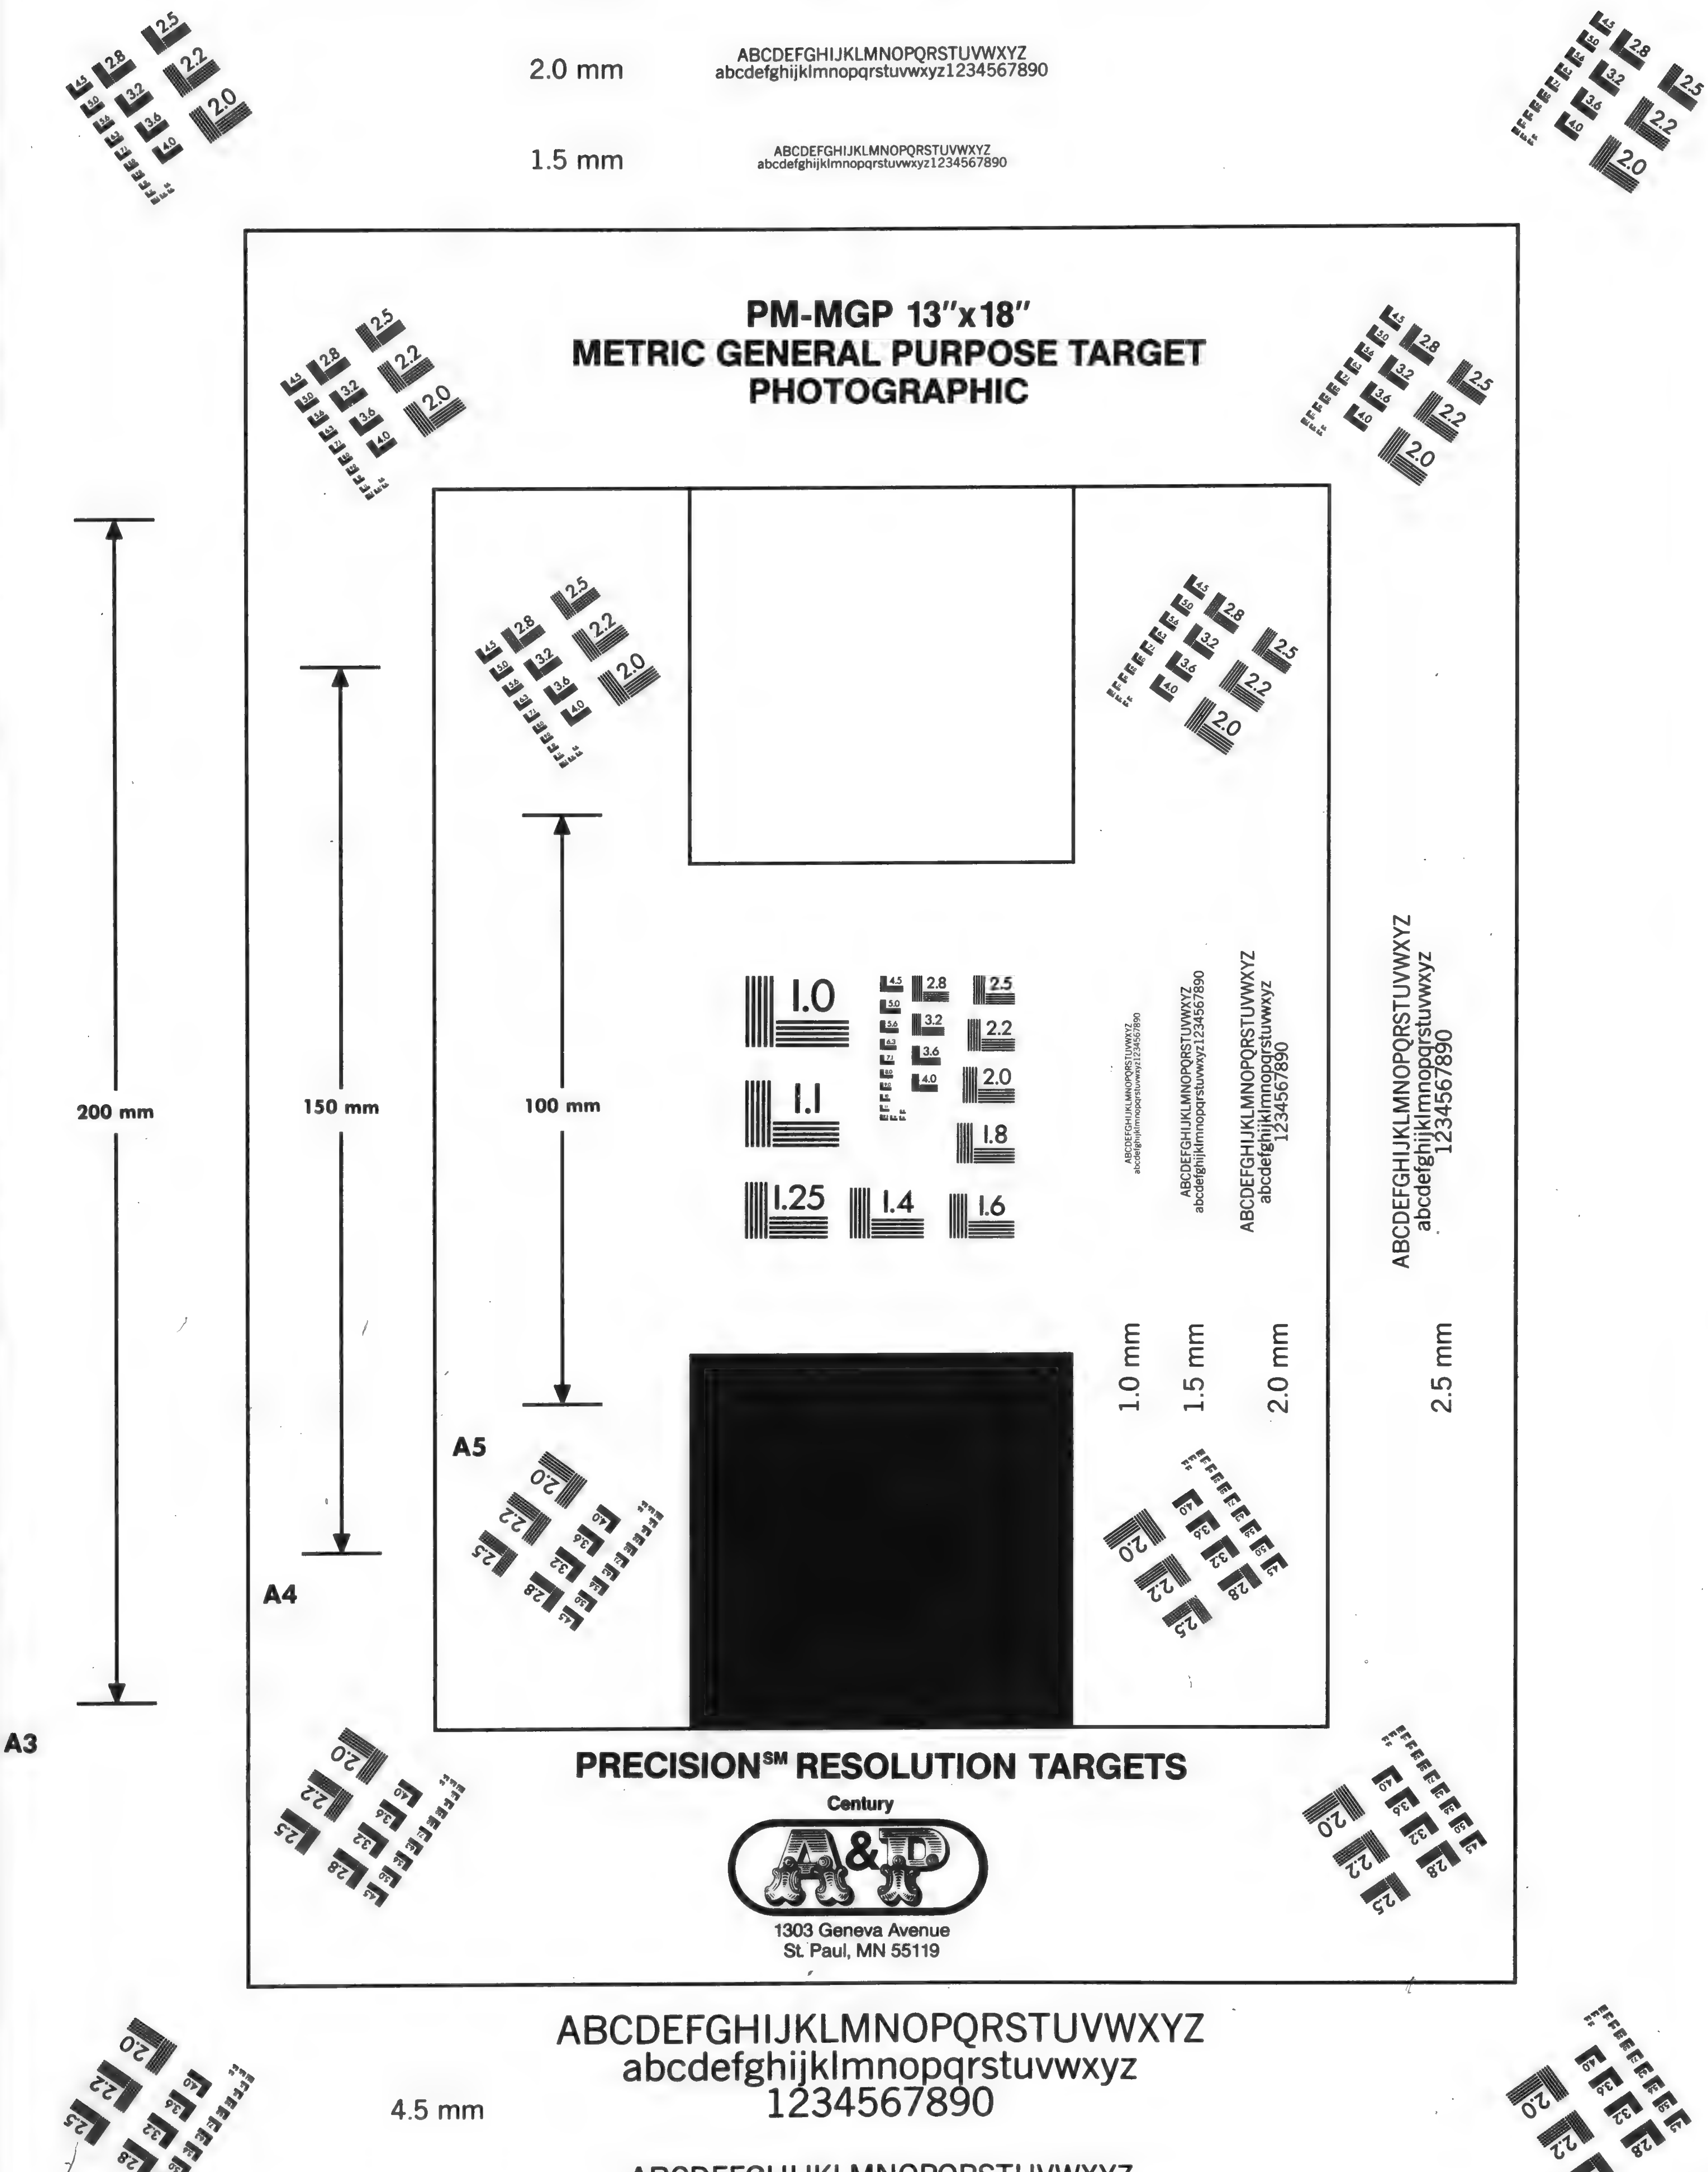
REDUCTION
RATIO
16x

2.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



1.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

2.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

4.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

3.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 176,318

JUL 30 1958

'Count Ory' Tops Opera Season at Tanglewood

… of the … Music … will be Rossini … which will … ances in the … at Tanglewood, Lenox, on Monday and Tuesday nights.

The cast of the opera, under direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera dept., includes John McCollum (Count Ory); Angelica Lazada (Countess Fourmoutiers); Nancy Williams (Isolier, the page); Doris Okerson (Ragonda); David Smith (Raimbaud), and Ronald Holgate (Tutor).

Give Your Family and Friends a ~~Treat—Take Them to the~~ Movies.

ATLANTA, GA.
Journal & Constitution
Circ. S. 504,759

AUG 01 1958

Tanglewood Slates Rossini's 'Count Ory'

… "Count Ory" … of … Berkshire … Opera Dept. at …

… by Rob… commissioned … ol of Music … ra Theater … ased to the … ter for per… wood. … will direct

---

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y.
NEW YORKER
D. 27,999 S. 28,943

JUL 28 1958

Tanglewood Slates
Rossini Opera

Rossini's "Count Ory," the major production of the season for the Berkshire Music Center Opera department, will be presented next Monday and Tuesday nights in the Theater-Concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The cast of the opera, which will be under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera department, includes John McCollum, Angelica Lazada, Nancy Williams, Doris Okerson, David Smith and Ronald Holgate, with Wyn Morris as conductor.

… PING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

UTICA, N.Y.
PRESS
D 26 881

JUL 28 1958

Tanglewood in Final Two Weeks; Rossini's 'Count Ory' Highlight

The summer season of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood enters its final two weeks today with some of the outstanding concerts of the period still on the calendar.

In addition to the regular concerts on Friday evening, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon of this coming weekend—which will center around the works of Wagner—coming up next week will be operatic performances and the annual "Tanglewood-on Parade."

On Monday and Tuesday of next week, the Tanglewood Opera Department will present Rossini's comic opera, "Count Ory," beginning at 8:30 each evening.

On Wednesday, Aug. 6, at 8:30, the Kroll Quartet will present a program of chamber music by Haydn, Bartok and Beethoven.

Tanglewood-on-Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will be held Thursday, Aug. 7, between 6 and 11 p.m.

At 6, simultaneous sessions will be held featuring the orchestra in the shed, compositions in the chamber music hall, and opera in the theater-concert hall. A lawn party will be held at 7 and those attending are invited to bring a picnic and hear a concert by the Tanglewood Choir.

Beginning at 8:15, Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Gomes "Il Guarany" overture and Falla's "El Amour Brujo." Richard Burgin will conduct the orchestra in Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with Copland as soloist.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,138

JUL 29 1958

Music Center Opera Department to Offer 'Count Ory' Aug. 4

The major production of the season for the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department will be Rossini's "Count Ory" which will receive two performances in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 4 and 5.

The English version by Robert A. Simon was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music for the Juilliard Opera Theatre and has been released to the Berkshire Music Center for performance at Tanglewood. The cast of the opera, which will be under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department, includes John McCollum (Count Ory); Angelica Lazada (Countess Fourmoutiers); Nancy Williams (Isolier, the Page); Doris Okerson (Ragonda); David Smith (Raimbaud); Ronald Holgate (Tutor).

The opera will be conducted by Wyn Morris. Mr. Morris, of Llanelly, South Wales, was the winner last year of the Koussevitsky Memorial Scholarship, awarded to an outstanding student conductor. He studied during the season just past with George Szell, conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra.

The scenery for the opera will consist of a Fibreglass shell on which fifteen projectors, located behind the shell, will produce the different effects needed. Designed by Dr. Elemer Nagy, of the Hartt College of Music in Hartford, and the Berkshire Music Center faculty, the scenery is part of the program undertaken with the co-operation of the New England Opera Theatre and a grant from the Ford Foundation for the development of new scenic materials. It is hoped that this innovation may do away with bulky scenery which is difficult to handle and expensive to transport.

The comic opera "Count Ory" was the first of two French operas written by Rossini for the Paris Opera where it was first performed in 1828. The text was by A. E. Scribe with the collaboration of C. G. Delestre-Poirson. The opera was revived in Paris in 1926 and performed in Turin in Italian in 1930. It has recently been performed by the Glyndebourne Opera Company in England.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,937

JUL 29 1958

Comic Opera At Tanglewood

The major production of the season for the Berkshire Music Center opera department will be Rossini's "Count Ory" which will receive two performances in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, the evenings of Aug. 4 and 5. The English version by Robert A. Simon was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music for the Juilliard Opera Theatre and has been released to the Berkshire Music Center for performance at Tanglewood. The cast of the opera, which will be under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department, includes John McCollum, Angelica Lazada, Nancy Williams, Doris Okerson, David Smith and Ronald Holgate.

The opera will be conducted by Wyn Morris. Mr. Morris, of Llanelly, South Wales, was the winner last year of the Koussevitzy Memorial Scholarship, awarded to an outstanding student conductor. He studied during the season just past with George Szell, conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra.

The scenery for the opera will consist of a Fibreglass shell on which 15 projectors, located behind the shell, will produce the different effects needed. Designed by Dr. Elemer Nagy, of the Hartt College of Music in Hartford, and the Berkshire Music Center faculty, the scenery is part of the program undertaken with the cooperation of the New England Opera Theatre and a grant from the Ford Foundation for the development of new scenic materials. It is hoped that this innovation may do away with bulky scenery which is difficult to handle and expensive to transport.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Town Crier
WESTPORT, Conn.
Bi-Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,200

JUL 27 1958

Tanglewood on Parade

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade, which will take place on Thursday evening, Aug. 7, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the Department of Conducting, will direct a performan of Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Richard Burgin, Associate Conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the faculty of the Orchestral Department of the School, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer appearing as soloist. Mr. Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the Department of Composition at the School.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program. Mr. Fiedler's annual visit to Tanglewood is eagerly anticipated and this year his announced program will include Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne," the Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia" by Ginastera, a selection from Leonard Bernstein's 'West Side Story", an arrangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman entitled "Dancing Through the Years" and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Wilson. Mr. Fiedler will also present the traditional Pops encores.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, beginning at 6 p.m. Picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn are a popular feature of Tanglewood-on-Parade between the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's gala concert at 8:15 p.m.

Tickets for Tanglewood-on-Parade are available at the Tanglewood Box Office.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 41,945

JUL 29 1958

Boston Pops Concert To Conclude Annual Berkshire Benefit

LENOX — The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will close with a concert in the Music Shed at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and ~~the Boston Pops Orchestra.~~

Eleazar de Carvalho head of the Department of Orchestral Conducting at the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the orchestra in Gomes' Overture to "Il Guarany" and Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Aaron Copland will appear as soloist in his own piano concerto for the first time with the Boston Symphony since he performed the work in 1927 under Serge Koussevitzky's direction.

Arthur Fiedler, will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra during the second half of the program which will include Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne" and selection from the "West Side Story."

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

BATTLE CREEK, MICH.
ENQUIRER AND NEWS
D. 37,186 S. 36,937

… 958

MUSIC and ART

With a Local Angle

AGAIN A NEW face will be seen at the Barn Theatre Tuesday evening, when the Equity players will give the first performance of "The Time of the Cuckoo." The owner will be Margaret Draper, who played the Shirley Booth role in Jack Ragotzy's off-Broadway presentation in New York City.

It is a matter of record that Miss Draper turned down sixteen weeks of television in California to come to this area. She also had to record several weeks ahead in two radio series. She plays Linda in "Pepper Young" and Fay in "Ma Perkins."

Margaret Draper

Miss Draper hails from Salt Lake City, where she attended the University of Utah. Then she joined the Provincetown Playhouse. There she played Andromache in "The Trojan Woman," and other roles. In New York later she appeared with the Michael Chekhov repertory company and went on tour with it. In the group were Yul Brynner and other notables. The war years interrupted her career as she worked overseas in the entertainment division of the Red Cross. After the war she appeared on Broadway in "The Gambler", with Alfred Drake, and "For Heaven's Sake, Mother," with Nancy Carroll. She found off-Broadway shows attractive and made a distinct hit in "The Time of the Cuckoo". After this play she will remain for "Picnic" and then she must return to radio and television commitments.

* * *

IT IS OF GENUINE interest that Arthur Laurents, who wrote "The Time of the Cuckoo," will be on hand for the Barn performance. He has been mailing some changes in the script, as the play is to be produced anew in New York this fall.

Miss Margaret Draper will play the role of Leona Samish and Craig Huebing, who was Eddie in the off-Broadway presentation, will have his old part back. Incidentally, he will be Eddie in the new Broadway production.

Natalie Ross will be seen as June Yaeger, Betty Ebert as Signora Floria, Nancy Hill as Giovanna, Gay Kleimenhagen as Mrs. McIlhenny, Louis Gerrard as Mr. McIlhenny, George Stokes as Vito, and Joe Racz as Mauro.

The play tells the story of Laura, an American secretary a bit past her youth, who finds romance in Senor DiRossi, played by John Newton, who was understudy for this role in New York and played it at one performance. So it will be a sort of old-home week for Miss Draper, Huebing and Newton.

The play will have six performances. Then will come "Picnic" and "No Time for Ser… … show, the Players will present "Laura," a romantic mystery.

* * *

THE NATIONAL company of "My Fair Lady," now in its 39th week at the Schubert Theatre, is breaking all theatrical records in Chicago. It has been seen by over 600,000 people. Anne Rogers continues as Eliza Doolittle and Michael Evans, who succeeded Brian Aherne, is an excellent Higgins.

It has been reported that seats have been sold out months in advance, but this is not true. Seats are available at almost every performance. However, it is best to order, with alternate dates, by mail. Mail orders are being accepted through October.

* * *

AUGUST IS to see four national conferences at Interlochen: String Teachers, 20-27; Chamber Music Festival, 20-27; Civic Symphony Workshop, 19-24; and National Association of College Wind and Percussion Instructors, 20-27. Joseph Maddy, president, will have Orien Dalley, U. of M. lecturer, as coordinator of the conferences.

* * *

EUGENE ORMANDY, who has twice directed the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra in Battle Creek, is to conduct at Zurich, Switzerland, this summer. So will Georg Szell, who brought the Cleveland orchestra to this community.

* * *

AT MICHIGAN STATE University auditorium Tuesday evening Charles E. Owen, percussionist of the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra, will demonstrate various percussion instruments and the marimbaphone and vibraharp. Owen was a featured soloist with the U.S. Marine band before he joined the Philadelphia orchestra. He formerly taught at the University of Oregon.

* * *

A TOUR of the United States has been planned by the Irish Repertoire Theatre of Dublin—the first time the famous group has been seen outside of the British Isles. It is likely the players will be seen in Detroit.

* * *

THE BOSTON Symphony orchestra, which has played in Battle Creek, will give a gala concert in the music shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., August 7. It will include a presentation of Falla's "El Amor Brujo" and the playing of the Aaron Copeland Piano Concerto by the composer. The Boston Pops, which has also been heard here, will be on the program.

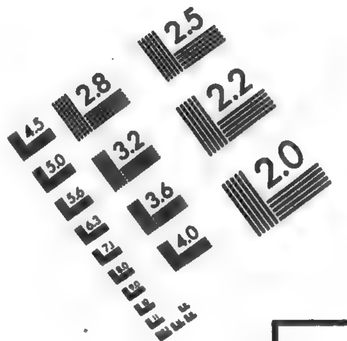
* * *

REDUCTION

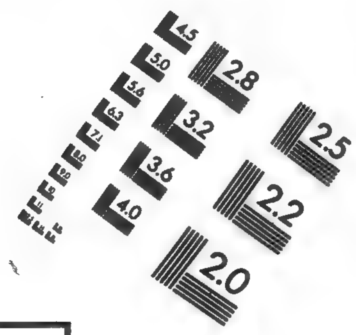
RATIO

14x

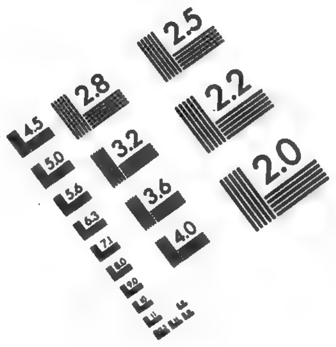
PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



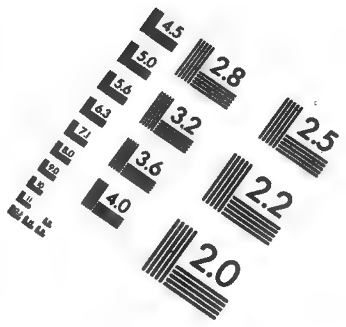
2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0



2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0



2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0

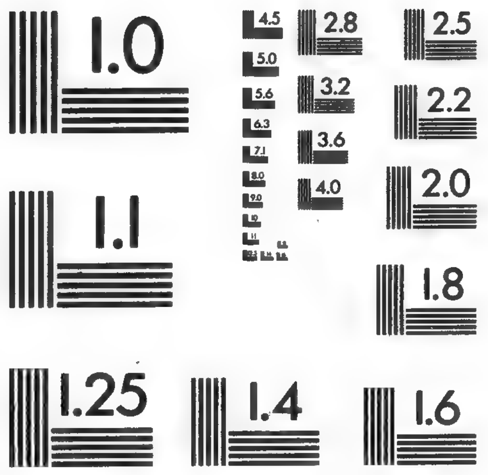


2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm



1.0
4.5
5.0
5.6
6.3
2.8
2.5
3.2
2.2
3.6
4.0
2.0
1.1
1.8
1.25
1.4
1.6

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm

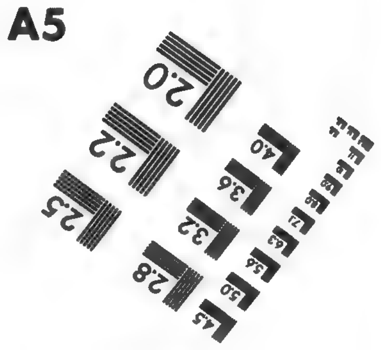
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.5 mm

A5

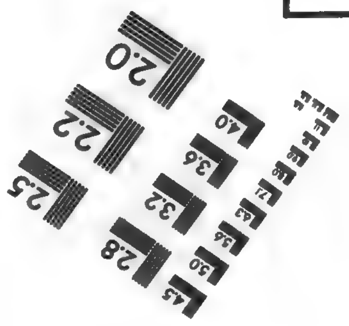


2.0
2.2
4.0
2.5
3.6
3.2
2.8
4.5

4.0
2.0
3.6
3.2
2.2
2.8
2.5
4.5

A4

A3



2.0
2.2
4.0
3.6
2.5
3.2
2.8
4.5

4.0
2.0
3.6
3.2
2.2
2.8
2.5
4.5

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 176,318

JUL 30 1958

'Count Ory' Tops Opera Season at Tanglewood

The major production of the season for the Berkshire Music Center opera dept. will be Rossini's "Count Ory," which will receive two performances in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, on Monday and Tuesday nights.

The cast of the opera, under direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera dept., includes John McCollum (Count Ory); Angelica Lazada (Countess Fourmoutiers); Nancy Williams (Isolier, the page); Doris Okerson (Ragonda); David Smith (Raimbaudf); and Ronald Holgate (Tutor).

Give Your Family and Friends a ~~Treat—Take Them to the~~ Movies.

ATLANTA, GA.
Journal & Constitution
Circ. S. 504,759

AUG 31 1958

Tanglewood Slates Rossini's 'Count Ory'

Rossini's opera "Count Ory" was the major production of the season for the Berkshire Music Center Opera Dept. at Lenox, Mass.

The English version by Robert A. Simon was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music for the Juilliard Opera Theater and has been released to the Berkshire Music Center for performance at Tanglewood.

Boris Goldovsky will direct the production.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y.
NEW YORKER
D. 27,999 S. 28,943

JUL 28 1958

Tanglewood Slates Rossini Opera

Rossini's "Count Ory," the major production of the season for the Berkshire Music Center Opera department, will be presented next Monday and Tuesday nights in the Theater-Concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The cast of the opera, which will be under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera department, includes John McCollum, Angelica Lazada, Nancy Williams, Doris Okerson, David Smith and Ronald Holgate, with Wyn Morris as conductor.

BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

UTICA, N.Y.
PRESS
D. 26,881

JUL 28 1958

Tanglewood in Final Two Weeks; Rossini's 'Count Ory' Highlight

The summer season of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood enters its final two weeks today with some of the outstanding concerts of the period still on the calendar.

In addition to the regular concerts on Friday evening, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon of this coming weekend—which will center around the works of Wagner—coming up next week will be operatic performances and the annual "Tanglewood-on Parade."

On Monday and Tuesday of next week, the Tanglewood Opera Department will present Rossini's comic opera, "Count Ory," beginning at 8:30 each evening.

On Wednesday, Aug. 6, at 8:30, the Kroll Quartet will present a program of chamber music by Haydn, Bartok and Beethoven.

Tanglewood-on-Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will be held Thursday, Aug. 7, between 6 and 11 p.m.

At 6, simultaneous sessions will be held featuring the orchestra in the shed, compositions in the chamber music hall, and opera in the theater-concert hall. A lawn party will be held at 7 and those attending are invited to bring a picnic and hear a concert by the Tanglewood Choir.

Beginning at 8:15, Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Gomes "Il Guarany" overture and Falla's "El Amour Brujo." Richard Burgin will conduct the orchestra in Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with Copland as soloist.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,138

JUL 29 1958

Music Center Opera Department to Offer 'Count Ory' Aug. 4

The major production of the season for the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department will be Rossini's "Count Ory" which will receive two performances in the Theatre Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 4 and 5.

The English version by Robert A. Simon was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music for the Juilliard Opera Theatre, and has been released to the Berkshire Music Center for performance at Tanglewood. The cast of the opera, which will be under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department, includes John McCollum (Count Ory); Angelica Lazada (Countess Fourmoutiers); Nancy. Williams. (Isolier, the Page); Doris Okerson (Ragonda); David Smith (Raimbaud); Ronald Holgate (Tutor).

The opera will be conducted by Wyn Morris. Mr. Morris, of Llanelly, South Wales, was the winner last year of the Koussevitsky Memorial Scholarship, awarded to an outstanding student conductor. He studied during the season just past with George Szell, conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra.

The scenery for the opera will consist of a Fibreglass shell on which fifteen projectors, located behind the shell, will produce the different effects needed. Designed by Dr. Elemer Nagy, of the Hartt College of Music in Hartford, and the Berkshire Music Center faculty, the scenery is part of the program undertaken with the co-operation of the New England Opera Theatre and a grant from the Ford Foundation for the development of new scenic materials. It is hoped that this innovation may do away with bulky scenery which is difficult to handle and expensive to transport.

The comic opera "Count Ory" was the first of two French operas written by Rossini for the Paris Opera where it was first performed in 1828. The text was by A. E. Scribe with the collaboration of C. G. Delestre-Poirson. The opera was revived in Paris in 1926 and performed in Turin in Italian in 1930. It has recently been performed by the Glyndebourne Opera Company in England.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,937

JUL 29 1958

Comic Opera At Tanglewood

The major production of the season for the Berkshire Music Center opera department will be Rossini's "Count Ory" which will receive two performances in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, the evenings of Aug. 4 and 5. The English version by Robert A. Simon was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music for the Juilliard Opera Theatre and has been released to the Berkshire Music Center for performance at Tanglewood. The cast of the opera, which will be under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department, includes John McCollum, Angelica Lazada, Nancy Williams, Doris Okerson, David Smith and Ronald Holgate.

The opera will be conducted by Wyn Morris. Mr. Morris, of Llanelly, South Wales, was the winner last year of the Koussevitzy Memorial Scholarship, awarded to an outstanding student conductor. He studied during the season just past with George Szell, conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra.

The scenery for the opera will consist of a Fibreglass shell on which 15 projectors, located behind the shell, will produce the different effects needed. Designed by Dr. Elemer Nagy, of the Hartt College of Music in Hartford, and the Berkshire Music Center faculty, the scenery is part of the program undertaken with the cooperation of the New England Opera Theatre and a grant from the Ford Foundation for the development of new scenic materials. It is hoped that this innovation may do away with bulky scenery which is difficult to handle and expensive to transport.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Town Crier
WESTPORT, Conn.
Bi-Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,200

JUL 27 1958

Tanglewood on Parade

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade, which will take place on Thursday evening, Aug. 7, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the Department of Conducting, will direct a performan of Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Richard Burgin, Associate Conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the faculty of the Orchestral Department of the School, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer appearing as soloist. Mr. Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the Department of Composition at the School.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program. Mr. Fiedler's annual visit to Tanglewood is eagerly anticipated and this year his announced program will include Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne," the Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia" by Ginastera, a selection from Leonard Bernstein's 'West Side Story", an arrangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman entitled "Dancing Through the Years" and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Wilson. Mr. Fiedler will also present the traditional Pops encores.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, beginning at 6 p.m. Picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn are a popular feature of Tanglewood-on-Parade between the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's gala concert at 8:15 p.m.

Tickets for Tanglewood-on-Parade are available at the Tanglewood Box Office.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 41,945

JUL 29 1958

Boston Pops Concert To Conclude Annual Berkshire Benefit

LENOX — The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will close with a concert in the Music Shed at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra ~~and the Boston Pops Orchestra.~~

Eleazar de Carvalho head of the Department of Orchestral Conducting at the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the orchestra in Gomes' Overture to "Il Guarany" and Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Aaron Copland will appear as soloist in his own piano concerto for the first time with the Boston Symphony since he performed the work in 1927 under Serge Koussevitzky's direction.

Arthur Fiedler, will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra during the second half of the program which will include Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne" and selection from the "West Side Story."

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

BATTLE CREEK, MICH.
ENQUIRER AND NEWS
D. 37,186 S. 36,937

JUL 27 1958

MUSIC and ART

With a Local Angle

AGAIN A NEW face will be seen at the Barn Theatre Tuesday evening, when the Equity players will give the first performance of "The Time of the Cuckoo." The owner will be Margaret Draper, who played the Shirley Booth role in Jack Ragotzy's off-Broadway presentation in New York City.

It is a matter of record that Miss Draper turned down sixteen weeks of television in California to come to this area. She also had to record several weeks ahead in two radio series. She plays Linda in "Pepper Young" and Fay in "Ma Perkins."

Margaret Draper

Miss Draper hails from Salt Lake City, where she attended the University of Utah. Then she joined the Provincetown Playhouse. There she played Andromache in "The Trojan Woman," and other roles. In New York later she appeared with the Michael Chekhov repertory company and went on tour with it. In the group were Yul Brynner and other notables. The war years interrupted her career as she worked overseas in the en-show, the Players will present "Laura," a romantic mystery.

* * *

THE NATIONAL company of "My Fair Lady," now in its 39th week at the Schubert Theatre, is breaking all theatrical records in Chicago. It has been seen by over 600,000 people. Anne Rogers continues as Eliza Doolittle and Michael Evans, who succeeded Brian Aherne, is an excellent Higgins.

It has been reported that seats have been sold out months in advance, but this is not true. Seats are available at almost every performance. However, it is best to order, with alternate dates, by mail. Mail orders are being accepted through October.

* * *

AUGUST IS to see four national conferences at Interlochen: String Teachers, 20-27; Chamber Music Festival, 20-27;

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 176,318

JUL 30 1958

'Count Ory' Tops Opera Season at Tanglewood

The major production of the season for the Berkshire Music Center opera dept. will be Rossini's "Count Ory," which will receive two performances in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, on Monday and Tuesday nights.

The cast of the opera, under direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera dept., includes John McCollum (Count Ory); Angelica Lazada (Countess Fourmoutiers); Nancy Williams (Isolier, the page); Doris Okerson (Ragonda); David Smith (Raimbaud); and Ronald Holgate (Tutor).

Give Your Family and Friends a ~~Treat—Take Them to the~~ Movies.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y.
NEW YORKER
D. 27,999 S. 28,943

JUL 28 1958

Tanglewood Slates Rossini Opera

Rossini's "Count Ory," the major production of the season for the Berkshire Music Center Opera department, will be presented next Monday and Tuesday nights in the Theater-Concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The cast of the opera, which will be under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera department, includes John McCollum, Angelica Lazada, Nancy Williams, Doris Okerson, David Smith and Ronald Holgate, with Wyn Morris as conductor.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

UTICA, N.Y.
PRESS
D. 26,881

JUL 28 1958

Tanglewood in Final Two Weeks; Rossini's 'Count Ory' Highlight

The summer season of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood enters its final two weeks today with some of the outstanding concerts of the period still on the calendar.

In addition to the regular concerts on Friday evening, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon of this coming weekend—which will center around the works of Wagner—coming up next week will be operatic performances and the annual "Tanglewood-on Parade."

On Monday and Tuesday of next week, the Tanglewood Opera Department will present Rossini's comic opera, "Count Ory," beginning at 8:30 each evening.

On Wednesday, Aug. 6, at 8:30, the Kroll Quartet will present a program of chamber music by Haydn, Bartok and Beethoven.

Tanglewood-on-Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will be held Thursday, Aug. 7, between 6 and 11 p.m.

At 6, simultaneous sessions will be held featuring the orchestra in the shed, compositions in the chamber music hall, and opera in the theater-concert hall. A lawn party will be held at 7 and those attending are invited to bring a picnic and hear a concert by the Tanglewood Choir.

Beginning at 8:15, Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Gomes "Il Guarany" overture and Falla's "El Amour Brujo." Richard Burgin will conduct the orchestra in Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with Copland as soloist.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

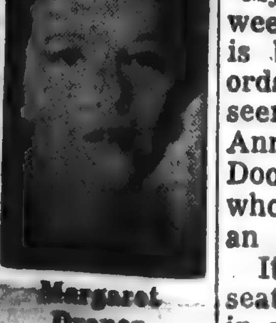
BATTLE CREEK, MICH.
ENQUIRER AND NEWS
D. 37,186 S. 36,937

JUL 27 1958

MUSIC and ART
With a Local Angle

AGAIN A NEW face will be seen at the Barn Theatre Tuesday evening, when the Equity players will give the first performance of "The Time of the Cuckoo." The owner will be Margaret Draper, who played the Shirley Booth role in Jack Ragotzy's off-Broadway presentation in New York City.

It is a matter of record that Miss Draper turned down sixteen weeks of television in California to come to this area. She also had to record several weeks ahead in two radio series. She plays Linda in "Pepper Young" and Fay in "Ma Perkins."



Margaret Draper

Miss Draper hails from Salt Lake City, where she attended the University of Utah. Then she joined the Provincetown Playhouse. There she played Andromache in "The Trojan Woman," and other roles. In New York later she appeared with the Michael Chekhov repertory company and went on tour with it. In the group were Yul Brynner and other notables. The war years interrupted her career as she worked overseas in the en-show, the Players will present "Laura," a romantic mystery.

* * *

THE NATIONAL company of "My Fair Lady," now in its 39th week at the Schubert Theatre, is breaking all theatrical records in Chicago. It has been seen by over 600,000 people. Anne Rogers continues as Eliza Doolittle and Michael Evans, who succeeded Brian Aherne, is an excellent Higgins.

It has been reported that seats have been sold out months in advance, but this is not true. Seats are available at almost every performance. However, it is best to order, with alternate dates, by mail. Mail orders are being accepted through October.

* * *

AUGUST IS to see four national conferences at Interlochen: String Teachers, 20-27;

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Town Crier
WESTPORT, Conn.
Bi-Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,200

JUL 27 1958

Tanglewood on Parade

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade, which will take place on Thursday evening, Aug. 7, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the Department of Conducting, will direct a performan of Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Richard Burgin, Associate Conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the faculty of the Orchestral Department of the School, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer appearing as soloist. Mr. Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the Department of Composition at the School.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program. Mr. Fiedler's annual visit to Tanglewood is eagerly anticipated and this year his announced program will include Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne," the Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia" by Ginastera, a selection from Leonard Bernstein's 'West Side Story", an arrangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman entitled "Dancing Through the Years" and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Wilson. Mr. Fiedler will also present the traditional Pops encores.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, beginning at 6 p.m. Picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn are a popular feature of Tanglewood-on-Parade between the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's gala concert at 8:15 p.m.

Tickets for Tanglewood-on-Parade are available at the Tanglewood Box Office.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,138

JUL 29 1958

Music Center Opera Department to Offer 'Count Ory' Aug. 4

The major production of the season for the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department will be Rossini's "Count Ory" which will receive two performances in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 4 and 5.

The English version by Robert A. Simon was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music for the Juilliard Opera Theatre, and has been released to the Berkshire Music Center for performance at Tanglewood. The cast of the opera, which will be under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department, includes John McCollum (Count Ory); Angelica Lazada (Countess Fourmoutiers); Nancy. Williams. (Isolier, the Page); Doris Okerson (Ragonda); David Smith (Raimbaud); Ronald Holgate (Tutor).

The opera will be conducted by Wyn Morris. Mr. Morris, of Llanelly, South Wales, was the winner last year of the Koussevitsky Memorial Scholarship, awarded to an outstanding student conductor. He studied during the season just past with George Szell, conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra.

The scenery for the opera will consist of a Fibreglass shell on which fifteen projectors, located behind the shell, will produce the different effects needed. Designed by Dr. Elemer Nagy, of the Hartt College of Music in Hartford, and the Berkshire Music Center faculty, the scenery is part of the program undertaken with the co-operation of the New England Opera Theatre and a grant from the Ford Foundation for the development of new scenic materials. It is hoped that this innovation may do away with bulky scenery which is difficult to handle and expensive to transport.

The comic opera "Count Ory" was the first of two French operas written by Rossini for the Paris Opera where it was first performed in 1828. The text was by A. E. Scribe with the collaboration of C. G. Delestre-Poirson. The opera was revived in Paris in 1926 and performed in Turin in Italian in 1930. It has recently been performed by the Glyndebourne Opera Company in England.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,937

JUL 29 1958

Comic Opera At Tanglewood

The major production of the season for the Berkshire Music Center opera department will be Rossini's "Count Ory" which will receive two performances in the wood, Lenox, the evenings of Theater-Concert Hall at Tangle- Aug. 4 and 5. The English version by Robert A. Simon was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music for the Juilliard Opera Theatre and has been released to the Berkshire Music Center for performance at Tanglewood. The cast of the opera, which will be under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department, includes John McCollum, Angelica Lazada, Nancy Williams, Doris Okerson, David Smith and Ronald Holgate.

The opera will be conducted by Wyn Morris. Mr. Morris, of Llanelly, South Wales, was the winner last year of the Koussevitzy Memorial Scholarship, awarded to an outstanding student conductor. He studied during the season just past with George Szeil, conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra.

The scenery for the opera will consist of a Fibreglass shell on which 15 projectors, located behind the shell, will produce the different effects needed. Designed by Dr. Elemer Nagy, of the Hartt College of Music in Hartford, and the Berkshire Music Center faculty, the scenery is part of the program undertaken with the cooperation of the New England Opera Theatre and a grant from the Ford Foundation for the development of new scenic materials. It is hoped that this innovation may do away with bulky scenery which is difficult to handle and expensive to transport.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 41,945

JUL 29 1958

Boston Pops Concert To Conclude Annual Berkshire Benefit

LENOX — The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will close with a concert in the Music Shed at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra.

Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the Department of Orchestral Conducting at the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the orchestra in Gomes' Overture to "Il Guarany" and Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Aaron Copland will appear as soloist in his own piano concerto for the first time with the Boston Symphony since he performed the work in 1927 under Serge Koussevitzky's direction.

Arthur Fiedler, will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra during the second half of the program which will include Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne" and selection from the "West Side Story."

QUEDEN
ality

ate Opera, dur-stated that the due to "tech-however, con-confusion over had to tell Miss star — Johann

."

TEBOOK. A fa-up at the re-Ventnor Festival
last week. Sider Junior High rector, here for to help out for eph Levine, who the "wilds" of

Center
lewood.
nces will version
. 4 and
duct.

JUL 28 1958

Tanglewood in Final Two Weeks; Rossini's 'Count Ory' Highlight

The summer season of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood enters its final two weeks today with some of the outstanding concerts of the period still on the calendar.

In addition to the regular concerts on Friday evening, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon of this coming weekend—which will center around the works of Wagner—coming up next week will be operatic performances and the annual "Tanglewood-on Parade."

On Monday and Tuesday of next week, the Tanglewood Opera Department will present Rossini's comic opera, "Count Ory," beginning at 8:30 each evening.

On Wednesday, Aug. 6, at 8:30, the Kroll Quartet will present a program of chamber music by Haydn, Bartok and Beethoven.

Tanglewood-on-Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will be held Thursday, Aug. 7, between 6 and 11 p.m.

At 6, simultaneous sessions will be held featuring the orchestra in the shed, compositions in the chamber music hall, and opera in the theater-concert hall. A lawn party will be held at 7 and those attending are invited to bring a picnic and hear a concert by the Tanglewood Choir.

Beginning at 8:15, Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Gomes "Il Guarany" overture and Falla's "El Amour Brujo." Richard Burgin will conduct the orchestra in Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with Copland as soloist.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

BATTLE CREEK, MICH.
ENQUIRER AND NEWS
D. 37,186 S. 36,937

JUL 27 1958

MUSIC and ART

With a Local Angle

AGAIN A NEW face will be seen at the Barn Theatre Tuesday evening, when the Equity players will give the first performance of "The Time of the Cuckoo." The owner will be Margaret Draper, who played the Shirley Booth role in Jack Ragotzy's off-Broadway presentation in New York City.

Margaret Draper

It is a matter of record that Miss Draper turned down sixteen weeks of television in California to come to this area. She also had to record several weeks ahead in two radio series. She plays Linda in "Pepper Young" and Fay in "Ma Perkins."

Miss Draper hails from Salt Lake City, where she attended the University of Utah. Then she joined the Provincetown Playhouse. There she played Andromache in "The Trojan Woman," and other roles. In New York later she appeared with the Michael Chekhov repertory company and went on tour with it. In the group were Yul Brynner and other notables. The war years interrupted her career as she worked overseas in the entertainment division of the Red Cross. After the war she appeared on Broadway in "The Gambler", with Alfred Drake, and "For Heaven's Sake, Mother," with Nancy Carroll. She found off-Broadway shows attractive and made a distinct hit in "The Time of the Cuckoo". After this play she will remain for "Picnic" and then she must return to radio and television commitments.

* * *

IT IS OF GENUINE interest that Arthur Laurents, who wrote "The Time of the Cuckoo," will be on hand for the Barn performance. He has been mailing some changes in the script, as the play is to be produced anew in New York this fall.

Miss Margaret Draper will play the role of Leona Samish and Craig Huebing, who was Eddie in the off-Broadway presentation, will have his old part back. Incidentally, he will be Eddie in the new Broadway production.

Natalie Ross will be seen as June Yaeger, Betty Ebert as Signora Floria, Nancy Hill as Giovanna, Gay Kleimenhagen as Mrs. McIlhenny, Louis Gerrard as Mr. McIlhenny, George Stokes as Vito, and Joe Racz as Mauro.

The play tells the story of Laura, an American secretary a bit past her youth, who finds romance in Senor DiRossi, played by John Newton, who was understudy for this role in New York and played it at one performance. So it will be a sort of old-home week for Miss Draper, Huebing and Newton.

The play will have six performances. Then will come "Picnic" and "No Time for Ser-show, the Players will present "Laura," a romantic mystery.

* * *

THE NATIONAL company of "My Fair Lady," now in its 39th week at the Schubert Theatre, is breaking all theatrical records in Chicago. It has been seen by over 600,000 people. Anne Rogers continues as Eliza Doolittle and Michael Evans, who succeeded Brian Aherne, is an excellent Higgins.

It has been reported that seats have been sold out months in advance, but this is not true. Seats are available at almost every performance. However, it is best to order, with alternate dates, by mail. Mail orders are being accepted through October.

* * *

AUGUST IS to see four national conferences at Interlochen: String Teachers, 20-27; Chamber Music Festival, 20-27; Civic Symphony Workshop, 19-24; and National Association of College Wind and Percussion Instructors, 20-27. Joseph Maddy, president, will have Orien Dalley, U. of M. lecturer, as coordinator of the conferences.

* * *

EUGENE ORMANDY, who has twice directed the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra in Battle Creek, is to conduct at Zurich, Switzerland, this summer. So will Georg Szell, who brought the Cleveland orchestra to this community.

* * *

AT MICHIGAN STATE University auditorium Tuesday evening Charles E. Owen, percussionist of the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra, will demonstrate various percussion instruments and the marimbaphone and vibraharp. Owen was a featured soloist with the U.S. Marine band before he joined the Philadelphia orchestra. He formerly taught at the University of Oregon.

* * *

A TOUR of the United States has been planned by the Irish Repertoire Theatre of Dublin—the first time the famous group has been seen outside of the British Isles. It is likely the players will be seen in Detroit.

* * *

THE BOSTON Symphony orchestra, which has played in Battle Creek, will give a gala concert in the music shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., August 7. It will include a presentation of Falla's "El Amor Brujo" and the playing of the Aaron Copeland Piano Concerto by the composer. The Boston Pops, which has also been heard here, will be on the program.

* * *

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Town Crier
WESTPORT, Conn.
Bi-Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,200

JUL 27 1958

Tanglewood on Parade

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade, which will take place on Thursday evening, Aug. 7, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the Department of Conducting, will direct a performan of Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Richard Burgin, Associate Conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the faculty of the Orchestral Department of the School, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer appearing as soloist. Mr. Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the Department of Composition at the School.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program. Mr. Fiedler's annual visit to Tanglewood is eagerly anticipated and this year his announced program will include Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne," the Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia" by Ginastera, a selection from Leonard Bernstein's 'West Side Story", an arrangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman entitled "Dancing Through the Years" and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Wilson. Mr. Fiedler will also present the traditional Pops encores.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, beginning at 6 p.m. Picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn are a popular feature of Tanglewood-on-Parade between the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's gala concert at 8:15 p.m.

Tickets for Tanglewood-on-Parade are available at the Tanglewood Box Office.

---

son for the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department will be Rossini's "Count Ory" which will receive two performances in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 4 and 5.

The English version by Robert A. Simon was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music for the Juilliard Opera Theatre and has been released to the Berkshire Music Center for performance at Tanglewood. The cast of the opera, which will be under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department, includes John McCollum (Count Ory); Angelica Lazada (Countess Fourmoutiers); Nancy Williams (Isolier, the Page); Doris Okerson (Ragonda); David Smith (Raimbaud); Ronald Holgate (Tutor).

The opera will be conducted by Wyn Morris. Mr. Morris, of Llanelly, South Wales, was the winner last year of the Koussevitsky Memorial Scholarship, awarded to an outstanding student conductor. He studied during the season just past with George Szell, conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra.

The scenery for the opera will consist of a Fibreglass shell on which fifteen projectors, located behind the shell, will produce the different effects needed. Designed by Dr. Elemer Nagy, of the Hartt College of Music in Hartford, and the Berkshire Music Center faculty, the scenery is part of the program undertaken with the co-operation of the New England Opera Theatre and a grant from the Ford Foundation for the development of new scenic materials. It is hoped that this innovation may do away with bulky scenery which is difficult to handle and expensive to transport.

The comic opera "Count Ory" was the first of two French operas written by Rossini for the Paris Opera where it was first performed in 1828. The text was by A. E. Scribe with the collaboration of C. G. Delestre-Poirson. The opera was revived in Paris in 1926 and performed in Turin in Italian in 1930. It has recently been performed by the Glyndebourne Opera Company in England.

Center for performance at Tanglewood. The cast of the opera, which will be under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department, includes John McCollum, Angelica Lazada, Nancy Williams, Doris Okerson, David Smith and Ronald Holgate.

The opera will be conducted by Wyn Morris. Mr. Morris, of Llanelly, South Wales, was the winner last year of the Koussevitzy Memorial Scholarship, awarded to an outstanding student conductor. He studied during the season just past with George Szeil, conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra.

The scenery for the opera will consist of a Fibreglass shell on which 15 projectors, located behind the shell, will produce the different effects needed. Designed by Dr. Elemer Nagy, of the Hartt College of Music in Hartford, and the Berkshire Music Center faculty, the scenery is part of the program undertaken with the cooperation of the New England Opera Theatre and a grant from the Ford Foundation for the development of new scenic materials. It is hoped that this innovation may do away with bulky scenery which is difficult to handle and expensive to transport.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 41,945

JUL 29 1958

Boston Pops Concert To Conclude Annual Berkshire Benefit

LENOX — The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will close with a concert in the Music Shed at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra.

Eleazar de Carvalho head of the Department of Orchestral Conducting at the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the orchestra in Gomes' Overture to "Il Guarany" and Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Aaron Copland will appear as soloist in his own piano concerto for the first time with the Boston Symphony since he performed the work in 1927 under Serge Koussevitzky's direction.

Arthur Fiedler, will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra during the second half of the program which will include Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne" and selection from the "West Side Story."

[181]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,138

JUL 29 1958

Berkshire Music Center Annual Benefit on Aug. 7

The gala concert in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, and the Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler, conductor, will climax the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center on Thursday evening, Aug. 7, at 8:15.

Eleazar de Carvalho, who will open the program conducting Gomes' Overture to "Il Guarany" and Falla's "El Amor Brujo," is the head of the department of orchestral conducting at the Berkshire Music Center and has been affiliated with the school for many years. Mr. Carvalho began his association with Tanglewood as a conducting student of Serge Koussevitzky.

Aaron Copland will appear as soloist in his own Piano Concerto for the first time with this orchestra in 31 years. Richard Burgin will conduct the performance. Mr. Copland last performed the work with the Boston Symphony under Serge Koussevitzky's direction in 1927. When the Concerto, sometimes called the "Jazz Concerto," was first performed in 1927, it was the subject of some controversy. After a recent performance of the Concerto in Boston, Rudolph Elie wrote, "The . . . Concerto is both a milestone and a masterpiece . . . the critics of 1927 did not see it that way, nor could they have, the true creative artist is always ahead of his time." The Musical Quarterly has written of the work " . . . a period piece of the best kind . . . evoking the atmosphere of the Twenties perhaps more effectively than any other work of 'serious' American music."

Fiedler to Conduct

Arthur Fiedler, who will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in a group of pops favorites in the second half of the program, will go to Tanglewood from San Francisco where he has conducted nine concerts with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Fiedler will return to San Francisco, following a week of Esplanade concerts in Boston, and in late August will conduct the Louisville Symphony Orchestra at the French Lick (Indiana) Music Festival. He then returns to San Francisco until Sept. 7. Mr. Fiedler's program will include Offenbach's Suite from "Gaite Parisienne," Ginastera's Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia," a selection from the "West Side Story" by Leonard Bernstein, Dancing Through the Years, an arrangement by Richard Hayman of dance tunes from the cakewalk to rock and roll. The program will close with 76 Trombones from "The Music Man" by Meredith Willson, and Mr. Fiedler will also offer some of the traditional pops encores.

Two preliminary events of Tanglewood-on-Parade will take place at 4 p. m. when holders of box and reserved seats may attend a special opera performance in the formal gardens. All ticket holders have been invited to a concert by the Tanglewood Study Group in the Barn, also at 4 o'clock.

At 5.45 p. m. all ticket holders are admitted to the Tanglewood grounds. A brass fanfare by students under the direction of Roger Voisin, first trumpet of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty, will be followed by a welcome to all guests from Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the school. Mr. Berkowitz will invite visitors to attend any of several simultaneous performances by different school departments at 6 p. m., the student orchestra in the shed, Tanglewood composers in the Chamber Music Hall, opera scenes in the theater. These performances will summarize the work of the students during the six weeks' session.

Student Orchestra

The program of the student orchestra will include Weber's Overture to "Der Freischutz" conducted by Wonsik Lim of Seoul, Korea; William Schuman's New England Triptych conducted by David Zinman of New York City; "Don Juan" of Richard Strauss conducted by Zubin Metha of India and the first movement (Angelic Concert) of Hindemith's "Mathis der Maler" conducted by Gustav Meier of Switzerland.

The concert in the Chamber Music Hall will include works composed during the summer by students of the composition department performed by Fromm Fellowship players.

At 7 o'clock, while visitors are enjoying a picnic supper on the grounds, the Tanglewood Choir will present a choral program on the porch of the Main House.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,286

JUL 30 1958

NORTHAMPTON, MASS., WEDNESDA

Closeup Of Maestro Fiedler

Arthur Fiedler conducts the famous Boston Pops Orchestra during the second half of the annual Tanglewood-on-Parade concert, Thursday evening, Aug. 7, in the Music Shed. Mr. Fiedler and the orchestra will present a program of tradidtional Pops favorites intermixed with the popular encores.

The gala concert in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, and the Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler, conductor, will climax the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center on Thursday evening, Aug. 7, at 8:15.

Eleazar de Carvalho, who will open the program conducting Gomes' Overture to "Il Guarany' and Falla's "El Amor Brujo" is the head of the Department of Orchestral Conducting at the Berkshire Music Center and has been affiliated with the school for many years. Mr. Carvalho began his association with Tanglewood as a conducting student of Serge Koussevitzky.

Aaron Copland will appear as soloist in his own Piano Concerto for the first time with this orchestra in 31 years. Richard Burgin will conduct the performance. Mr. Copland last performed the work with the Boston Symphony under Serge Koussevitzky's direction in 1927. When the concerto (sometimes called the "Jazz Concerto") was first performed, in 1927, it was the subject of some controversy.

After a recent performance of the concerto in Boston, Rudolph Elie wrote "The .... concerto is both a milestone and a masterpiece .... the critics of 1927 did not see it that way, nor could they have, the true creative artist is always ahead of his time." The Musical Quarterly has written of the work "... a period piece of the best kind....evoking the atmosphere of the 'twenties perhaps more effectively than any other work of 'serious' American music."

Arthur Fiedler, who will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in a group of Pops favorites in the second half of the program, will come to Tanglewood from San Francisco, where he has conducted nine concerts with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Fiedler will return to San Francisco, following a week of Esplanade concerts in Boston, and in late August will conduct the Louisville Symphony Orchestra at the French Lick, Ind., Music Festival. He then returns to San Francisco until Sept. 7.

Mr. Fiedler's program will include Offenbach's Suite from "Gaite Parisienne," Ginastera's Dance of Weat and Malambo from "Estancia," a selection from the "West Side Story" by Leonard Bernstein, Dancing Through the Years, an arrangement by Richard Hayman of dance tunes from the cakewalk to rock and roll. The program will close with 76 Trombones from "The Music Man" by Meredith Willson, and Mr. Fiedler also will offer some of the traditional Pops encores.

There will be a drawing of door prizes in the intermission.

Two preliminary events of Tanglewood-on-Parade will take place at 4 p.m., when holders of box and reserved seats are invited to attend a special opera performance in the Formal Gardens. All ticketholders are invited to a concert by the Tanglewood Study Group in the Barn, also at 4 o'clock.

At 5:45 p.m. all ticketholders are admitted to the Tanglewood grounds. A brass fanfare by students under the direction of Roger Voisin, first trumpet of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty, will be followed by a welcome to all guests from Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the school.

Mr. Berkowitz will invite visitors to attend any of several simultaneous performances by different school departments at 6 p.m., the Student Orchestra in the Shed, Tanglewood composers in the Chamber Music Hall, Opera Scenes in the Theatre. These performances will summarize the work of the students during the six-week session.

The program of the student orchestra will include Weber's Overture to "Der Freischutz" conducted by Wonsik Lim of Seoul, Korea; William Schuman's New England Triptych; conducted by David Zinman of New York City; "Don Juan" of Richard Strauss conducted by Zubin Mehta of India and the first movement (Angelic Concert) of Hindemith's "Mathis der Maler" conducted by Gustav Meier of Switzerland.

The concert in the Chamber Music Hall will include works composed during the summer by students of the composition department performed by Fromm Fellowship players.

At 7 o'clock while visitors are enjoying a picnic supper on the grounds, the Tanglewood Choir will present a choral program on the porch of the Main House.

Four Cowpokes

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 95,535

JUL 28 1958

'Tanglewood on Parade' To Offer Gala Program

Special Music Center Event on Aug. 7 Will Feature Wide Variety Designed to Show All Aspects Of Activities

Lenox, July 28—The gala concert in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, and the Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler, conductor, will climax the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center on Thursday evening, Aug. 7, at 8.15.

Eleazar de Carvalho, who will open the program conducting Gomes' Overture to "Il Guarany" and Falla's "El Amor Brujo" is the head of the Department of Orchestral Conducting at the Berkshire Music Center and has been affiliated with the school for many years. Mr. Carvalho began his association with Tanglewood as a conducting student of Serge Koussevitzky.

ELEAZAR DE CARVALHO

Copland Soloist

Aaron Copland will appear as soloist in his own Piano Concerto for the first time with this Orchestra in 31 years. Richard Burgin will conduct the performance. Mr. Copland last performed the work with the Boston Symphony under Serge Koussevitzky's direction in 1927. When the concerto (sometimes called the "Jazz Concerto") was first performed, in 1927, it was the subject of some controversy.

Arthur Fiedler, who will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in a group of Pops favorites in the second half of the program, will come to Tanglewood from San Francisco where he has conducted nine concerts with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Fiedler will return to San Francisco, following a week of Esplanade concerts in Boston, and in late August will conduct the Louisville Symphony Orchestra at the French Lick (Indiana) Music Festival. He then returns to San Francisco until Sept. 7. Mr. Fiedler's program will include Offenbach's Suite from "Gaite Parisienne," Ginastera's "Dance of Wheat and Malambo" from "Estancia," a selection from the "West Side Story" by Leonard Bernstein, "Dancing Through the Years," an arrangement by Richard Hayman of dance tunes from the cakewalk to rock and roll. The program will close with 76 Trombones from "The Music Man" by Meredith Willson, and Mr. Fiedler will also offer some of the traditional Pops encores.

There will be a drawing of door prizes in the intermission.

Opera Performance

Two preliminary events of Tanglewood-on-Parade will take place of 4 p. m. when holders of box and reserved seats are invited to attend a special opera performance in the Formal Gardens. All ticket holders are invited to a concert by the Tanglewood Study Group in the Barn, also at 4.

At 5.45 p. m. all ticket holders are admitted to the Tanglewood grounds. A brass fanfare by students under the direction of Roger Voisin, first trumpet of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty, will be followed by a welcome to all guests from Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the school. Mr. Berkowitz will invite visitors to attend any of several simultaneous performances by different school departments at 6 p. m, the Student Orchestra in the Shed, Tanglewood composers in the Chamber Music Hall, opera scenes in the theater. These performances will summarize the work of the students during the six weeks' session.

Students' Program

The program of the student orchestra will include Weber's overture to "Der Freischutz" conducted by Wonsik Lim of Seoul, Korea; William Schuman's New England Triptych conducted by David Zinman of New York City; "Don Juan" of Richard Strauss conducted by Zubin Mehta of India and the first movement (Angelic Concert) of Hindemith's "Mathis der Maler" conducted by Gustav Meier of Switzerland.

The concert in the Chamber Music Hall will include works composed during the summer by students of the composition department performed by Fromm Fellowship players.

At 7, while visitors are enjoying a picnic supper on the grounds, the Tanglewood choir will present a choral program on the porch of the main house.

SCREEN TIME

LOEW'S POLI — "The Fly," 12.51, 3.48, 6.45, 9.42; "Space Master X-7," 11.31, 2.88, 5.25, 8.22.
PARAMOUNT — "Rock-a-Bye Baby," 12.23, 3.22, 6.18, 9.17; "The Space Children," 11.[illegible]0, 2.09, 5.05, 8.04.
CAPITOL—"No Time for Sergeants," 11.15, 2.35, 5.55, 9.20; "Manhunt in the Jungle," 1.10, 4.30, 7.55.
ARCADE—"The Key," 1.25, 5.05, 8.45; "True Story of Lynn Stuart," 12, 3.40, 7.20.
BIJOU—"Cowboy," 12, 3.10, 6.20, 9.30; "Run Silent, Run Deep," 1.32, 4.42, 7.52.
BING—"River Kwai," 1.45, 8; Shorts, 1.30, 7.15.
PHILLIPS — "Chase a Crooked Shadow," 1.15, 7.15; "Two Much, Too Soon," 2.45, 8.45.
JEFFERSON — "Johnny Belinda," 7.25; "Rhapsody in Blue," 9.10.
MAJESTIC, West Springfield—"Time Limit," 1, 7; "Paris Holiday," 2.50, 8.50.

The Drive-Ins

Round Hill—"River's Edge," 8.49; "Farewell to Arms," 10.30.
MEMORIAL—"King and Four Queens," 8.35; "Paris Holiday," 10.10.
PARKWAY—"Cowboy," 8.40; "Pickup Alley," 10.20.

New England Newsclip
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIch
Times
NEW MILFORD,
Weekly Inde
Circ. 2,786

JUL 31 195

•Entertai

Gala Co
To High

LENOX, MASS.
cert in the Music
wood, by the Bo Orchestra, Charles director, and the chestra, Arthur Fie will climax the an
the Berkshire Music
7, at 8:15 p.m.

Eleazar de Car
open the progra
Gomes' Overture and Falla's "El A the head of the De chestral Conductin shire Music Cente affiliated with the years. Mr. Carvalh sociation with Ta conducting student sevitzky.

Copland Is

Aaron Copland wi
oist in his own pia
the first time with in 31 years. Richa conduct the perform land last performed
the Boston Sympho
called the "Ja
Koussevitzky's dir
When the Concert
called the "Jazz C
first performance
in Boston, Rudolph
. . . Concerto is bo and a masterpiece of 1927 did not see could they have, th artist is always ahe

The Musical Quar
ten of the work " piece of the best ki
the atmosphere of

New England Newscl
Box 2078, Boston 6 • R
Post
WALLINGFOR
Weekly In
Circ. 8,4

JUL 31

Boston "P

The gala conce
sic Shed at Tangl Mass., by the phony Orchest
Munch, music dir
Boston Pops Orc
Fiedler, conducto
the annual ben
Berkshire Music
Thursday evenin
8:15.

Eleazar de will open the

[182]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Times
NEW MILFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,786
JUL 31 1958

•Entertainment . . .

Gala Concert at Tanglewood To Highlight Annual Benefit

LENOX, MASS.—The gala concert in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, and the Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler, conductor, will climax the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center on Aug. 7, at 8:15 p.m.

Eleazar de Carvalho, who will open the program conducting Gomes' Overture to "Il Guarany' and Falla's "El Amor Brujo" is the head of the Department of Orchestral Conducting at the Berkshire Music Center and has been affiliated with the school for many years. Mr. Carvalho began his association with Tanglewood as a conducting student of Serge Koussevitzky.

Copland Is Soloist

Aaron Copland will appear as soloist in his own piano concerto for the first time with this orchestra in 31 years. Richard Burgin will conduct the performance. Mr. Copland last performed the work with the Boston Symphony under Serge called the "Jazz concerto") was Koussevitzky's direction in 1927. When the Concerto (sometimes called the "Jazz Concerto") was first performance of the Concerto in Boston, Rudolph Elie wrote "The . . . Concerto is both a milestone and a masterpiece . . . the critics of 1927 did not see it that way, nor could they have, the true creative artist is always ahead of his time."

The Musical Quarterly has written of the work " . . . a period piece of the best kind . . . evoking the atmosphere of the 'twenties perhaps more effectively than any other work of 'serious' American music."

Arthur Fiedler, who will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in a group of Pops favorites in the second half of the program, will come to Tanglewood from San Francisco where he has conducted nine concerts with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Fiedler will return to San Francisco, following a week of Esplanade concerts in Boston, and in late August will conduct the Louisville Symphony Orchestra at the French Lick (Indiana) Music Festival. He then returns to SanFrancisco until Sept. 7.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 102,839
JUL 29 1958

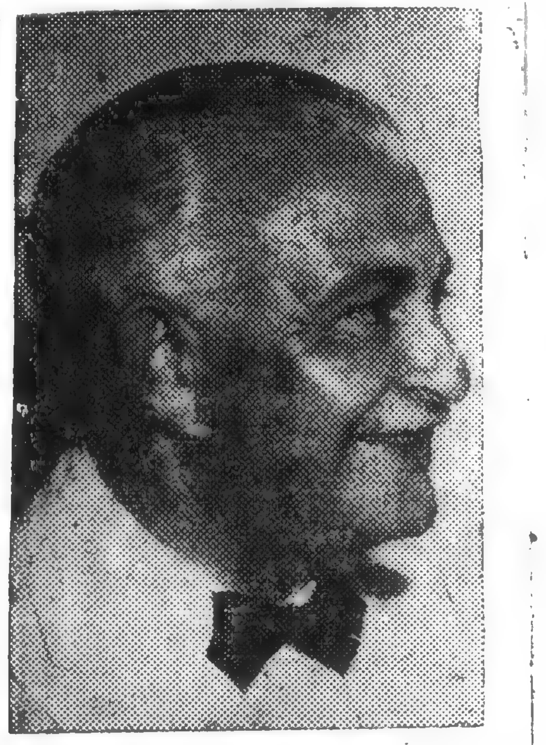
TANGLEWOOD ARTISTS GET COACHING

Singers who will appear in Rossini's "Count Ory" Aug. 4 and 5 at Tanglewood in Lenox are shown being coached on their parts by Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center. Back row from left, Nancy Williams as the page, Angleica Lozada as the countess, Ronald Holgate as the tutor, David Smith as Taimbaud, Goldovsky and John McCollum as Count Ory. Doris Okerson as Ragonda is kneeling in front of the

The opera department of the Berkshire Music Center will give Rossini's "Count Ory", a condensed version of Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet". Acts II and IV of "La Traviata", and Act III of Puccini's "I a Rondine" this summer. Boris Goldovsky is departmental director.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

MILLERTON, N. Y.
NEWS-REPUBLICAN
Circ. W. 3,617
JUL 31 1958



Arthur Fiedler conducts the famous Boston Pops Orchestra ~~during the second half~~ of the annual Tanglewood-on-Parade, concert, Thursday evening, August 7, in the Music Shed. Mr. Fiedler and the orchestra will present a program of traditional Pops favorites intermixed with the popular encores.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292
JUL 31 1958

Tanglewood On Parade Aug. 7

The Boston ~~Symphony~~ Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade, which will take place on Thursday evening, August 7, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the Department of Conducting, will direct a performance of Falla's El Amor Brujo. Richard Burgin, Associate Conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the faculty of the Orchestral Department of the School, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer appearing as soloist. Mr. Copland is Chairman of the Faculty and head of the Department of Composition at the School.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program. Mr. Fiedler's annual visit to Tanglewood is eagerly anticipated and this year his announced program will include Offenbach's Gaite Parisienne, the Dance of wheat and Malambo from Estancia by Ginastera, a selection from Leonard Bernstein's West Side Story, an arrangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman entitled Dancing Through the Years and 76 Trombones from The Music Man by Meredith Wilson. Mr. Fiedler will also present the traditional Pops encores.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire

(Continued on Page 14)

Notes and Footnotes

STOP SIGNS; Culture galore. Tanglewood operas have become so popular that they must be given two nights in the theater-concert hall. Rossini's "Count Ory" will be staged Aug. 4 and 5 to accommodate expected crowds . . . Sign of the times? Sign in front of Meadowview Inn being demolished by Pirzl contractors, "Free estimates on wrecking buildings." A teen-age rumble might do as much . . . If you fear dying of snake-bite, take heart. Of the 1½ million deaths annually in the U.S., only about 30 are caused by snakes . . . Nice note from Cliff Carroll of Schenectady Union-Star as result of our printing his recollections of the Colonial Theater in its heyday . . . There are 36,605 post offices in the U.S., and some of the names are a caution. Cloudy and Snow are separate offices in Oklahoma, there are Winter, Wis.; Spring, Tex.; Sun, La.; Fine, N.Y.; and Nice, Calif. For color, there are listed 3 White, 7 Orange, 2

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Post
WALLINGFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 3,408
JUL 31 1958

Boston "Pops" Orchestra To Play At Tanglewood

Thursday, July 31, 1958

The gala concert in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. by the ~~Boston Symphony~~ Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, and the Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler, conductor, will climax the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center on Thursday evening, Aug. 7, at 8:15.

Eleazar de Carvalho, who will open the program conducting Gomes' Overture to "Il Guarany" and Falla's "El Amor Brujo" is the head of the Department of Orchestral Conducting at the Berkshire Music Center.

Aaron Copland will appear as soloist in his own Piano Concerto for the first time with this orchestra in 31 years. Richard Burgin will conduct the performance. Mr. Copland last performed the work with the Boston Symphony under Serge Koussevitzky's direction in 1927.

Arthur Fiedler, who will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in a group of Pops favorites in the second half of the program, will come to Tanglewood from San Francisco where he has conducted nine concerts with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra.

Mr. Fiedler's program will include Offenbach's Suite from "Gaite Parisienne", Ginastera's Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia", a Selection from the "West Side Story" by Leonard Bernstein.

The major production of the season for the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department will be Rossini's "Count Ory" which will receive two performances in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 4 and 5.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Times
NEW MILFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,786
JUL 31 1958

•Entertainment . . .

Gala Concert at Tanglewood To Highlight Annual Benefit

LENOX, MASS.—The gala concert in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, and the Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler, conductor, will climax the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center on Aug. 7, at 8:15 p.m.

Eleazar de Carvalho, who will open the program conducting Gomes' Overture to "Il Guarany' and Falla's "El Amor Brujo" is the head of the Department of Orchestral Conducting at the Berkshire Music Center and has been affiliated with the school for many years. Mr. Carvalho began his association with Tanglewood as a conducting student of Serge Koussevitzky.

Copland Is Soloist

Aaron Copland will appear as soloist in his own piano concerto for the first time with this orchestra in 31 years. Richard Burgin will conduct the performance. Mr. Copland last performed the work with the Boston Symphony under Serge called the "Jazz concerto") was Koussevitizky's direction in 1927. When the Concerto (sometimes called the "Jazz Concerto") was first performance of the Concerto in Boston, Rudolph Elie wrote "The . . . Concerto is both a milestone and a masterpiece . . . the critics of 1927 did not see it that way, nor could they have, the true creative artist is always ahead of his time."

The Musical Quarterly has written of the work ". . . a period piece of the best kind . . . evoking the atmosphere of the 'twenties perhaps more effectively than any other work of 'serious' American music."

Arthur Fiedler, who will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in a group of Pops favorites in the second half of the program, will come to Tanglewood from San Francisco where he has conducted nine concerts with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Fiedler will return to San Francisco, following a week of Esplanade concerts in Boston, and in late August will conduct the Louisville Symphony Orchestra at the French Lick (Indiana) Music Festival. He then returns to SanFrancisco until Sept. 7.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

MILLERTON, N. Y.
NEWS-REPUBLICAN
Circ. W. 3,617

JUL 31 1958

Arthur Fiedler conducts the famous Boston Pops Orchestra during the second half of the annual Tanglewood-on-Parade, concert, Thursday evening, August 7, in the Music Shed. Mr. Fiedler and the orchestra will present a program of traditional Pops favorites intermixed with the popular encores.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Post
WALLINGFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 8,408
JUL 31 1958

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 102,839
JUL 29 1958

TANGLEWOOD ARTISTS GET COACHING

Singers who will appear in Rossini's "Count Ory" Aug. 4 and 5 at Tanglewood in Lenox are shown being coached on their parts by Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center. Back row from left, Nancy Williams as the page, Angelica Lozada as the countess, Ronald Holgate as the tutor, David Smith as Taimbaud, Goldovsky and John McCollum as Count Ory. Doris Okerson as Ragonda is kneeling in front of the

---

The opera department of the Berkshire Music Center will give Rossini's "Count Ory", a condensed version of Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet", Acts II and IV of "La Traviata", and Act III of Puccini's "La Rondine" this summer. Boris Goldovsky is departmental director. [illegible] AMERICA

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292
JUL 31 1958

Tanglewood On Parade Aug. 7

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade, which will take place on Thursday evening, August 7, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the Department of Conducting, will direct a performance of Falla's El Amor Brujo. Richard Burgin, Associate Conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the faculty of the Orchestral Department of the School, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer appearing as soloist. Mr. Copland is Chairman of the Faculty and head of the Department of Composition at the School.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program. Mr. Fiedler's annual visit to Tanglewood is eagerly anticipated and this year his announced program will include Offenbach's Gaite Parisienne, the Dance of wheat and Malambo from Estancia by Ginastera, a selection from Leonard Bernstein's West Side Story, an arrangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman entitled Dancing Through the Years and 76 Trombones from The Music Man by Meredith Wilson. Mr. Fiedler will also present the traditional Pops encores.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire

(Continued on Page 14)

Boston "Pops" Orchestra To Play At Tanglewood

Thursday, July 31, 1958

The gala concert in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, and the Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler, conductor, will climax the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center on Thursday evening, Aug. 7, at 8:15.

Eleazar de Carvalho, who will open the program conducting Gomes' Overture to "Il Guarany" and Falla's "El Amor Brujo" is the head of the Department of Orchestral Conducting at the Berkshire Music Center.

Aaron Copland will appear as soloist in his own Piano Concerto for the first time with this orchestra in 31 years. Richard Burgin will conduct the performance. Mr. Copland last performed the work with the Boston Symphony under Serge Koussevitsky's direction in 1927.

Arthur Fiedler, who will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in a group of Pops favorites in the second half of the program, will come to Tanglewood from San Francisco where he has conducted nine concerts with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra.

Mr. Fiedler's program will include Offenbach's Suite from "Gaite Parisienne", Ginastera's Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia", a Selection from the "West Side Story" by Leonard Bernstein.

The major production of the season for the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department will be Rossini's "Count Ory" which will receive two performances in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 4 and 5.

Notes and Footnotes

STOP SIGNS: Culture galore. Tanglewood operas have become so popular that they must be given two nights in the theater-concert hall. Rossini's "Count Ory" will be staged Aug. 4 and 5 to accommodate expected crowds . . . Sign of the times? Sign in front of Meadowview Inn being demolished by Pirzl contractors, "Free estimates on wrecking buildings." A teen-age rumble might do as much . . . If you fear dying of snake-bite, take heart. Of the 1½ million deaths annually in the U.S., only about 30 are caused by snakes . . . Nice note from Cliff Carroll of Schenectady Union-Star as result of our printing his recollections of the Colonial Theater in its heyday . . . There are 36,605 post offices in the U.S., and some of the names are a caution. Cloudy and Snow are separate offices in Oklahoma, there are Winter, Wis.; Spring, Tex.; Sun, La.; Fine, N.Y.; and Nice, Calif. For color, there are listed 2 White, 7 Orange, 2

[183]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159

AUG 1 1958

Music

Rossini's Comic opera, "Count Ory," will be presented by the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Monday and Tuesday evenings, August 4 and 5.

Duo-pianists Melvin Stecker and Norman Horowitz will present a concert Saturday evening, August 16, at Southbury Training School Auditorium in a benefit for the Steeple Fund of Christ Church, Quaker Farms.

Wagner will be featured this week end at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Charles Munch conducts the Friday and Saturday night concerts; Pierre Monteux, on Sunday afternoon. Music from "Die Meistersinger," "Tristan and Isolde," Seigfried Idyll, and the Immolation Scene from "Gotterdamerung" and Piston's Viola Concerto are scheduled for Friday. Saturday's program includes music from "Tannhauser," and Seigfried's Rhine Journey; Liszt's Piano Concerto No. 1 in E-flat, Leonard Pennario, soloist; and Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 8. On Sunday, it will be an all-Wagner concert, with excerpts from "The Flying Dutchman," "Lohengrin," "Die Walkure," "Tannhauser," "Parsifal," and "Rienzi," with soprano Margaret Harshow as soloist. Scheduled next Wednesday in the Theatre Concert Hall is the Kroll Quartet in a chamber music concert. Next Thursday features Tanglewood on Parade.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

JUL 31 1958

Opera Next Week at Tanglewood

Whitestone

Coaching two members of the cast of Rossini's "Count Ory," which will be presented under auspices of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, in the theater concert hall at Tanglewood next Monday and Tuesday evenings, is Boris Goldovsky, opera department head at the school. At left is Doris Okerson, who sings the part of Ragonda and Angelica Lozada, in the leading feminine role of Countess Fourmoutiers.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times
NEW MILFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,786

JUL 31 1958

Slate 'Count Ory' At Music Center

LENOX, MASS.—The major production of the season for the Berkshire Music Center Opera department will be Rossini's "Count Ory'" which will receive two performances in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, on Monday and Tuesday evenings. The English version by Robert A. Simon was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music for the Juilliard Opera Theatre and has been released to the Berkshire Music Center for performance at Tanglewood.

The cast of the opera, which will be under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department, includes John McCollum (Count Ory); Angelica Lazada Countess Fourmoutiers); Nancy Williams (Isolier, the Page); Doris Okerson (Ragonda); David Smith (Raimbaud); Ronald Holgate (Tutor).

The opera will be conducted by Wyn Morris. Mr. Morris, of Llanelly, South Wales, was the winner last year of the Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship, awarded to an outstanding student conductor. He studied during the season just past with George Szell, conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra.

The comic opera "Count Ory" was the first of two French operas written by Rossini for the Paris Opera, where it was first performed in 1828. The text was by A. E. Scribe with the collaboration of C.G. Delestre-Poirson. The opera was revived in Paris in 1926 and performed in Turin in Italian in 1930. It has recently been performed by the Glyndebourne Opera Company in England.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

AUG 1 1958

TITLE ROLE in the Berkshire Music Center's production of Rossini's opera "Count Ory," to be given at Tanglewood Monday and Tuesday evenings, under auspices of Friends of the Music Center, will be sung by John McCollum, frequent Festival soloist, who recently returned from England.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159

AUG 1 1958

Rossini Opera To Be Given At Tanglewood

Music Center Offers "Count Ory" Aug. 4, 5

The major production of the season for the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department will be Rossini's "Count Ory" which will receive two performances in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. on Monday and Tuesday evenings, August 4 and 5.

The English version by Robert A. Simon was commissioned by the Julliard School of Music for the Juilliard Opera Theatre and has been released to the Berkshire Music Center for performance at Tanglewood. The cast of the opera, which will be under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department, includes John McCollum (Count Ory); Angelica Lazada (Countess Fourmoutiers); Nancy Williams (Isolier, the Page); Doris Okerson (Ragonda); David Smith (Raimbaud); Ronald Holgate (Tutor).

The opera will be conducted by Wyn Morris. Mr Morris, of Llanelly, South Wales, was the winner last year of the Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship, awarded to an outstanding student conductor. He studied during the season just past with George Szell, conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra.

The comic opera "Count Ory" was the first of two French operas written by Rossini for the Paris Opera, where it was first performed in 1828.. The text was by A. E. Scribe with the collaboration of C. G. Delestre-Poirson. The opera was revived in Paris in 1926 and performed in Turin in Italian in 1930. It has recently been performed by the Glyndebourne Opera Company in England.

S. Union - Aug 1

'Count Ory' Set For Tanglewood

LENOX—Tenor John McCollum has made a special trip to Tanglewood to appear in the title role in Rossini's "Count Ory" to be presented by the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department on Monday and Tuesday evening.

Other members of the cast for "Count Ory" which will be under the supervision of Boris Goldovsky, are: Angelica Lazada, Nancy Williams, Doris Okerson, David Smith, and Ronald Holgate. The opera will be conducted by Wyn Morris.

Costumes have been designed by Leo Van Witsen of the Juilliard School and Berkshire Music Center Opera Department and Van Witsen.

The experimental settings, designed by Dr. Elemer Nagy of Hartford, also will be used in the performance.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Town Crier
WESTPORT, Conn.
Bi-Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,200

AUG 10 1958

Rossini's 'Count Ory'...

The major production of the season for the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department will be Rossini's "Count Ory" which will receive two performances in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts on Monday and Tuesday evenings, August 4 and 5. The English version by Robert A. Simon was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music for the Juilliard Opera Theatre and has been released to the Berkshire Music Center for performance at Tanglewood. The case of the opera, which will be under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department, includes John McCollum (Count Ory); Angelica Lazada (Countess Fourmoutiers); Nancy Williams (Isolier, the Page); Doris Okerson (Ragonda); David Smith (Raimbaud); Ronald Holgate (Tutor).

The opera will be conducted by Wyn Morris. Mr. Morris, of Llanelly, South Wales, was the winner last year of the Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship, awarded to an outstanding student conductor. He studied during the season just past with George Szell, conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra. '

The scenery for the opera will consist of a Fibreglass shell on which fifteen projectors, located behind the shell, will produce the different effects [illegible]. Designed by Dr. El[illegible] the H[illegible] Hart[illegible] Music Center faculty, [illegible] ery is part of the pro[illegible] dertaken with the co[illegible] of the New Engla[illegible] Theatre and a grant [illegible] Ford Foundat[illegible] for the [illegible] opment of new scenic [illegible]. It is hoped that this [illegible] may do away with bulky [illegible] ery which is difficult to handle and expensive to transport.

The comic opera "Count Ory" was the first of two French operas written by Rossini for the Paris Opera where it was first performed in 1828. The text was by A. E. Scribe with the collaboration of C. G. Delestre-Poirson. The opera was revived in Paris in 1926 and performed in Turin in Italian in 1930.

[184]

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

BOSTON, MASS.
GLOBE (Eve.)
Circ. D. 149,070

JUL 31 1958

Society:

Broadway goes to the Berkshire Hills in Tanglewood on Parade. Each season, the chamber music concerts and symphony programs by the world's ranking musicians go into show tempo for a musical variety program to benefit the Berkshire Music Center. Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the founder of the Center, is chairman of the committee for the 1958 benefit, starting with a full symphony orchestra fanfare at 5:45 tonight.

★ ★

An open-house picture o the Center in operation i provided by a three-rin concert simultaneously i session at the Shed (orchestra), the Chamber Musi Hall (compositions) and the Theatre-Concert Hall (opera). After the demonstration performances from six to seven, guests who haven't brought their own hampers may buy box-suppers for a lawn party. Music from Main House will be provided by members of the Tanglewood Choir.

The Gala Concert starts in the Shed at 8:15, with three conductors and Composer Aaron Copland as soloist, for the first time with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 31 years, in his own Piano (jazz Concerto. Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the first part, with the Latin American music of Gomes and Falla. Richard Burgin will conduct the Copland Concerto. Arthur Fiedler will take up the baton after the intermission and prize drawing.

Broadway hits from Willson's "The Music Man," and Bernstein's "West Side Story" will share the bill with popular dance tunes, Offenbach and Ginastera.

Honorary members of the Tanglewood on Parade committee include Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Cabot, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Cox, Mrs. William N. Bullard, Sen. and Mrs. Silvio Conte, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Fromm, Dr. and Mrs. Lewis Perry and John W. Haselton.

Agency, Inc.
mond 2-4200
Conn. ependent
00
+7 58 nt Ory' . . .

duction of the erkshire Music epartment will nt Ory" which performances oncert Hall at nox, Massachuand Tuesday 4 and 5. The
by Robert A. issioned by the
of Music for ra Theatre and d to the Berkter for perfor-wood. The cas ich will be un tion of Boris of the Opera
ludes John Mc Ory); Angelica
ntess Fourmou-Williams (Isolier
s Okerson (Ra-Smith (Raim-
Holgate (Tutor).
ll be conducted
. Mr. Morris, of Wales, was the r of the Kous-ial Scholarship, outstanding stu-
He studied dur-just past with onductor of the estra.
or the opera will oreglass shell on rojectors, located ll, will produce ects needed. De-Elemer Nagy, of the Berkshi
aculty, the sce the program u
the cooperati England Ope
grant from t n for the deve scenic materia
t this innovatio with bulky sce ifficult to hand to transport.
pera "Count Ory of two Frenc by Rossini f ra where it w
d in 1828. Th
. E. Scribe wi
on of C. G. Dele
he opera was r in 1920 and pe
rim in Italian

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159

AUG 1 1958

Berkshire Festival

Tanglewood Parades Tonight For Berkshire Music Center of California at Los Angeles, and served two years with the Army in the Pacific.

Tanglewood-on-Pa... ll take place on ...g, August 7, in the ...anglewood, Lenox, ...rt is the climax of ...efit for the Berk... ...enter, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Three members of the Berkshire Music center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the Department of Conducting, will direct a performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo". Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the faculty of the Orchestral Department of the school, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer appearing as soloist. Mr Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the Department of Composition at the School.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program. Mr Fiedler's annual visit to Tanglewood is eagerly anticipated and this year his announced program will include Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne", the Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia" by Ginastera, a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story", an arrangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman entitled "Dancing Through the Years" and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Wilson. Mr Fiedler will also present the traditional Pops encores.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, beginning at 6 p.m. Picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn are a popular feature of Tanglewood-on-Parade between the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's gala concert at 8:15 p.m.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,541

AUG 1 1958

Committees r Tanglewood Parade Aug. 7

LENOX—Tickets for Tanglewood-on-Parade, which runs Aug. 7 from 6 p. m. to 11 and includes a picnic supper on the lawns and student performances as well as the gala concert at 8.15 by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler, are now available at the Tanglewood Box Office.

Committees for Tanglewood-on-Parade are headed by Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, chairman, and Miss Margo Miller, secretary. Honorary members include Mrs. William N. Bullard, Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Cabot, Sen. and Mrs. Silvio O. Conte, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Cox, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Fromm, Rep. John W. Heselton, Dr. and Mrs. Lewis Perry.

The community committee is as follows: Mrs. Robert J. Allen, Williamstown; Mrs. Martha deB Beaver, Northampton; Mrs. Alexander Bloch, Hillsdale, N. Y.; Miss Giovannina deBlasiis, Glens Falls, N. Y.; Miss Virginia deBlasiis, Glens Falls; Mrs. Marc A. deFerranti, Pittsfield; Mrs. Joseph dePasquale, Lenox; Mr. D. Ross Edman, Cambridge; Mrs. Scoville Firuski, Lakeville; Miss Mary Lloyd Gross, Pittsfield; Mrs. David Huxley, Lenox; Mrs. David B. Karrick, Stockbridge; Mrs. Shaun Kelly, Richmond; Mr. Harry J. Kraut, Boston Symphony Orchestra; Mrs. John G. W. Mahanna, Pittsfield; Mrs. Cecil Mapes, Old Chatham, N. Y.; Mrs. Lawrence K. Miller, Pittsfield; Mrs. Percy Musgrave, Stockbridge; Dr. Alice McNiff, Stockbridge; Mrs. Thomas D. Perry, Jr., Stockbridge; Miss Charlotte B. Ripley, Stockbridge; Mrs. Jay C. Rosenfeld, Pittsfield; Mrs. John L. Senior, Lenox; Norman S. Shirk, Boston Symphony Orchestra; Albert C. Sly, Lakeville; Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, Stockbridge; Mrs. Albert Sterner, Richmond, Mrs. Willem Willeke, Pittsfield.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

AUG 1 1958

Crawford

CONDUCTOR Arthur Fiedler of the Boston Pops orchestra will appear during the second half of the annual Tanglewood on Parade concert in the Music Shed Thursday evening. Mr. Fiedler and the orchestra will present a program of traditional pop favorites intermixed with popular encores.

Many Door Prizes To Be Given At Tanglewood Parade Aug. 7

TANGLEWOOD—Door prizes to be given at the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood on Parade, on Thursday, Aug. 7, were announced today at a meeting of the benefit committee held at Tanglewood.

The prizes, which will be drawn at the intermission of the gala Tanglewood on Parade concert, and presented by William J. Cox, chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, will include an RCA Victor Orthophonic Stereophonic Victrola; tickets for two for the 1959 Berkshire Festival season in the Music Shed; a color woodcut by Ralph Berkowitz, "Minotaur and Labyrinth"; a child's red tractor; "Two on the Aisle" (tickets for two at the Adams Memorial Theater, Williamstown; Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge; Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox; Jacob's Pillow, Lee); five-year subscriptions to Time, Life, and Sports Illustrated from Time, Inc.; action photographs of Charles Munch by Constantine Manos; "Weekend in the Berkshires" (a weekend for two at Festival House, Lenox, presented by Mr. and Mrs. Bruno Aron); a pastel portrait of the winner by Anthony Toney; an original piece of pottery by David Proudo; RCA Victor records from the Tanglewood Music Store and a sketch of Van Cliburn by Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, framed and matted by Benjamin Carpino of Pittsfield.

Tickets on Sale

Tickets for Tanglewood on Parade, which runs from 6 p.m. to 11 and includes picnic suppers on the lawns and student performances, as well as the concert at 8:15 by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler, are now available at the Tanglewood Box Office.

Committees for Tanglewood on Parade are headed by Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, chairman, and Miss Margo Miller, secretary. Honorary members include Mrs. William N. Bullard, Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Cabot, Sen. and Mrs. Silvio O. Conte, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Cox, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Fromm, Rep. John W. Heselton and Dr. and Mrs. Lewis Perry.

The community committee follows:

Mrs. Robert J. Allen, Williamstown; Mrs. Martha deB. Beaver, Northampton; Mrs. Alexander Bloch, Hillsdale, N.Y.; Miss Giovannina deBlasiis, Glens Falls, N.Y.; Miss Virginia deBlasiis, Glens Falls; Mrs. Marc A. deFerranti, Pittsfield; Mrs. Joseph dePasquale, Lenox; D. Ross Edman, Cambridge; Mrs. Scoville Firuski, Lakeville; Miss Mary Lloyd Gross, Pittsfield; Mrs. David Huxley, Lenox; Mrs. David B. Karrick, Stockbridge; Mrs. Shaun Kelly, Richmond; Harry J. Kraut, Boston Symphony Orchestra; Mrs. John G. W. Mahanna, Pittsfield; Mrs. Cecil Mapes, Old Chatham, N.Y.; Mrs. Lawrence K. Miller, Pittsfield; Mrs. Percy Musgrave, Dr. Alice McNiff, Mrs. Thomas D. Perry Jr. and Miss Charlotte B. Ripley of Stockbridge; Mrs. Jay C. Rosenfeld, Pittsfield; Mrs. John L. Senior, Lenox; Norman S. Shirk, Boston Symphony Orchestra; Albert C. Sly, Lakeville; Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, Stockbridge; Mrs. Albert Sterner, Richmond, and Mrs. Willem Willeke, Pittsfield.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Eagle (e)
CLAREMONT, N. H.
Independent
Circ. 9,030

AUG 1 1958

ARTHUR FIEDLER conducts the famous Boston Pops orchestra during the second half of the annual Tanglewood-on-Parade concert at Lenox, Mass. Thursday evening, August 7, in the Music Shed. Mr. Fiedler and the orchestra will present a program of traditional Pops favorites intermixed with the popular encores.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 158,729

JUL 31 1958

Whitestone

Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department at Tanglewood, coaches Doris Okerson and Angelica Lozada in Rossini's "Count Ory," to be presented Monday and Tuesday evenings.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,138

AUG 1 1958

Mrs. Allen Assisting Tanglewood-on-Parade

Mrs. Robert J. Allen of South St. is serving on the Community Committee for Tanglewood-on-Parade, which is to be held Aug. 7 at Lenox and which will start at 6 o'clock in the afternoon and continue to 11 o'clock at night. Tickets for this event are now available.

The program includes a picnic supper on the lawns as well as student performances and concerts by the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

BOSTON, MASS.
GLOBE (Eve.)
Circ. D. 149,070

JUL 31 1958

Furcolo May

Staff Lines Up Facts For Pay-as-You-Go Fig

ranking the dormant Massac variety Port Authority.

A message on the now ready for delivery
Legislature, but the Hou

★ ★

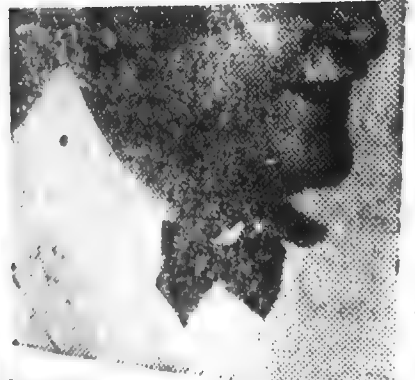
An open-house picture o the Center in operation i provided by a three-rin concert simultaneously i session at the Shed (orches tra), the Chamber Musi Hall (compositions) and the Theatre-Concert Hal (opera). After the demonstration performances from six to seven, guests who haven't brought their own hampers may buy box-suppers for a lawn party. Music from Main House will be provided by members of the Tanglewood Choir.

The Gala Concert starts in the Shed at 8:15, with three conductors and Composer Aaron Copland as soloist, for the first time with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 31 years, in his own Piano (jazz Concerto. Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the first part, with the Latin American music of Gomes and Falla. Richard Burgin will conduct the Copland Concerto. Arthur Fiedler will take up the baton after the intermission and prize drawing.

Broadway hits from Willson's "The Music Man," and Bernstein's "West Side Story" will share the bill with popular dance tunes, Offenbach and Ginastera.

Honorary members of the Tanglewood on Parade committee include Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Cabot, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Cox, Mrs. William N. Bullard, Sen. and Mrs. Silvio Conte, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Fromm, Dr. and Mrs. Lewis Perry and John W. Haselton.

Working with Mrs. Koussevitzky on preparations are Miss Margo Miller, Mrs. Joseph de Pasquale, D. Ross Edman, Mrs. Shaun Kelly, Mrs. Lawrence K. Miller, Mrs. Thomas D. Perry Jr., Mrs. John L. Senior, Mrs. Albert Sterner, Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith and Mrs. Willem Willeke.



ARTHUR FIEDLER conducts the famous Boston Pops orchestra during the second half of the annual Tanglewood-on-Parade concert at Lenox, Mass. Thursday evening, August 7, in the Music Shed. Mr. Fiedler and the orchestra will present a program of traditional Pops favorites intermixed with the popular encores.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159

AUG 1 1958

Berkshire Festival Slates Gala Concert

Tanglewood-On-Parade Is Set For August 7

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has ~~announced the program~~ for its gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade, which will take place on Thursday evening, August 7, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Three members of the Berkshire Music center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the Department of Conducting, will direct a performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo". Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the faculty of the Orchestral Department of the school, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer appearing as soloist. Mr Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the Department of Composition at the School.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites in the second half of the program. Mr Fiedler's annual visit to Tanglewood is eagerly anticipated and this year his announced program will include Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne", the Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia" by Ginastera, a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story", an arrangement of dance tunes by Richard Hayman entitled "Dancing Through the Years" and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Wilson. Mr Fiedler will also present the traditional Pops encores.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, beginning at 6 p.m. Picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn are a popular feature of Tanglewood-on-Parade between the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's gala concert at 8:15 p.m.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 158,729

JUL 31 1958

Whitestone

Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department at Tanglewood, coaches Doris Okerson and Angelica Lozada in Rossini's "Count Ory," to be presented Monday and Tuesday evenings.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,541

AUG 1 1958

List Committees For Tanglewood Parade Aug. 7

LENOX—Tickets for Tanglewood-on-Parade, which runs Aug. 7 from 6 p. m. to 11 and includes a picnic supper on the lawns and student performances as well as the gala concert at 8.15 by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler, are now available at the Tanglewood Box Office.

Committees for Tanglewood-on-Parade are headed by Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, chairman, and Miss Margo Miller, secretary. Honorary members include Mrs. William N. Bullard, Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Cabot, Sen. and Mrs. Silvio O. Conte, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Cox, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Fromm, Rep. John W. Heselton, Dr. and Mrs. Lewis Perry.

The community committee is as follows: Mrs. Robert J. Allen, Williamstown; Mrs. Martha deB Beaver, Northampton; Mrs. Alexander Bloch, Hillsdale, N. Y.; Miss Giovannina deBlasiis, Glens Falls, N. Y.; Miss Virginia deBlasiis, Glens Falls; Mrs. Marc A. deFerranti, Pittsfield; Mrs. Joseph dePasquale, Lenox; Mr. D. Ross Edman, Cambridge; Mrs. Scoville Firuski, Lakeville; Miss Mary Lloyd Gross, Pittsfield; Mrs. David Huxley, Lenox; Mrs. David B. Karrick, Stockbridge; Mrs. Shaun Kelly, Richmond; Mr. Harry J. Kraut, Boston Symphony Orchestra; Mrs. John G. W. Mahanna, Pittsfield; Mrs. Cecil Mapes, Old Chatham, N. Y.; Mrs. Lawrence K. Miller, Pittsfield; Mrs. Percy Musgrave, Stockbridge; Dr. Alice McNiff, Stockbridge; Mrs. Thomas D. Perry, Jr., Stockbridge; Miss Charlotte B. Ripley, Stockbridge; Mrs. Jay C. Rosenfeld, Pittsfield; Mrs. John L. Senior, Lenox; Norman S. Shirk, Boston Symphony Orchestra; Albert C. Sly, Lakeville; Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, Stockbridge; Mrs. Albert Sterner, Richmond, Mrs. Willem Willeke, Pittsfield.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

AUG 1 1958

[184]

Crawford

CONDUCTOR Arthur Fiedler of the Boston Pops orchestra will appear during the second half of the annual Tanglewood on Parade concert in the Music Shed Thursday evening. Mr. Fiedler and the orchestra will present a program of traditional pop favorites intermixed with popular encores.

Many Door Prizes To Be Given At Tanglewood Parade Aug. 7

TANGLEWOOD—Door prizes to be given at the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood on Parade, on Thursday, Aug. 7, were announced today at a meeting of the benefit committee held at Tanglewood.

The prizes, which will be drawn at the intermission of the gala Tanglewood on Parade concert, and presented by William J. Cox, chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, will include an RCA Victor Orthophonic Stereophonic Victrola; tickets for two for the 1959 Berkshire Festival season in the Music Shed; a color woodcut by Ralph Berkowitz, "Minotaur and Labyrinth"; a child's red tractor; "Two on the Aisle" (tickets for two at the Adams Memorial Theater, Williamstown; Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge; Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox; Jacob's Pillow, Lee); five-year subscriptions to Time, Life, and Sports Illustrated from Time, Inc.; action photographs of Charles Munch by Constantine Manos; "Weekend in the Berkshires" (a weekend for two at Festival House, Lenox, presented by Mr. and Mrs. Bruno Aron); a pastel portrait of the winner by Anthony Toney; an original piece of pottery by David Proudo; RCA Victor records from the Tanglewood Music Store and a sketch of Van Cliburn by Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, framed and matted by Benjamin Carpino of Pittsfield.

Tickets on Sale

Tickets for Tanglewood on Parade, which runs from 6 p.m. to 11 and includes picnic suppers on the lawns and student performances, as well as the concert at 8:15 by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler, are now available at the Tanglewood Box Office.

Committees for Tanglewood on Parade are headed by Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, chairman, and Miss Margo Miller, secretary. Honorary members include Mrs. William N. Bullard, Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Cabot, Sen. and Mrs. Silvio O. Conte, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Cox, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Fromm, Rep. John W. Heselton and Dr. and Mrs. Lewis Perry.

The community committee follows:

Mrs. Robert J. Allen, Williamstown; Mrs. Martha deB. Beaver, Northampton; Mrs. Alexander Bloch, Hillsdale, N.Y.; Miss Giovannina deBlasiis, Glens Falls, N.Y.; Miss Virginia deBlasiis, Glens Falls; Mrs. Marc A. deFerranti, Pittsfield; Mrs. Joseph dePasquale, Lenox; D. Ross Edman, Cambridge; Mrs. Scoville Firuski, Lakeville; Miss Mary Lloyd Gross, Pittsfield; Mrs. David Huxley, Lenox; Mrs. David B. Karrick, Stockbridge; Mrs. Shaun Kelly, Richmond; Harry J. Kraut, Boston Symphony Orchestra; Mrs. John G. W. Mahanna, Pittsfield; Mrs. Cecil Mapes, Old Chatham, N.Y.; Mrs. Lawrence K. Miller, Pittsfield; Mrs. Percy Musgrave, Dr. Alice McNiff, Mrs. Thomas D. Perry Jr. and Miss Charlotte B. Ripley of Stockbridge; Mrs. Jay C. Rosenfeld, Pittsfield; Mrs. John L. Senior, Lenox; Norman S. Shirk, Boston Symphony Orchestra; Albert C. Sly, Lakeville; Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, Stockbridge; Mrs. Albert Sterner, Richmond, and Mrs. Willem Willeke, Pittsfield

---

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,138

AUG 1 1958

Mrs. Allen Assisting Tanglewood-on-Parade

Mrs. Robert J. Allen of South St. is serving on the Community Committee for Tanglewood-on-Parade, which is to be held Aug. 7 at Lenox and which will start at 6 o'clock in the afternoon and continue to 11 o'clock at night. Tickets for this event are now available.

The program includes a picnic supper on the lawns as well as student performances and concerts by the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 399,044

AUG 3 - 1958

"Tanglewood On Parade"

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will be presented at Tanglewood, in Lenox, Thursday. A gala concert at 8:15 in the Music Shed will climax the festivities.

Eleazar de Carvalho and Arthur Fiedler will share the conducting. Aaron Copland will be soloist in his own Piano Concerto, with Richard Burgin directing the orchestra.

The Berkshire Music Center student orchestra will perform Weber's "Der Freischuetz" Overture; William Schuman's New England Triptych; Strauss' "Don Juan" and "Angelic Concert" from Hindemith's "Mathis der Maler," with student conductors.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

WASHINGTON, PA.
REPORTER
D. 8,685

AUG 2 1958

MUSIC FOR EVERYBODY

By SIGMUND SPAETH

While radio and television are still treating good music as a stepchild, apparently unaware of its actual and potential audience, the record manufacturers continue to combine education and entertainment for the benefit of America's music-loving public, which is constantly growing, largely through such stimulation.

Most gratifying is the fact that record buyers today seem more interested in the music itself than in the artists concerned. This trend may mean a gradual emancipation from the deadly "star system," which has held back our musical development by at least 50 years and created a snobbery and intolerance of menacing proportions.

It is encouraging to find people now buying records of the so-called "orphan" type, in which the identity of the performers is kept a secret. Such records are sold today in supermarkets and other places off the beaten track of the music business, naturally at most attractive prices, since no artists royalties are involved.

The buyers no longer ask for the names of the interpreters. They are interested only in the works themselves and their composers, with an extra critical ear for the standard of the performance and the quality of the recording.

Important Development

The development of high fidelity has undoubtedly played an important part in this improvement of tastes, and the rapid advance of stereophonic sound should add still more to the new attitude toward recorded music.

There are now numerous sets of "orphan" records on the market, with no mention whatever of the performing artists, but with considerable emphasis on the quality of the performance and its reproduction, as well as enlightening program notes and occasionally even some spoken comments.

The pioneer series of this type was made some years ago by Columbia under the title of "Music You Enjoy," with this columnist selecting the music, beautiful but anonymously recorded by the Columbia Broadcasting symphony orchestra, conducted by Howard Barlow. The records were distributed chiefly by newspapers, as circulation-builders, and the total ran well into the millions.

Today there is a "Basic Library of the World's Greatest Music," which pays a small royalty to the National Committee for the Musical Arts, enabling this active organization to contribute financially to the support of various musical causes in selected cities. Rochester and Syracuse have already profited by this practical arrangement, and several other musical centers are soon to be similarly aided. It is an excellent plan, since the sale of the records at low prices through chain stores automatically creates interest in local homes which is then expressed in support of musical activities in the community as a whole. Alec Templeton is chairman of this national committee, with Quaintance Eaton as its efficient Executive Secretary.

Through such distribution of established classics it is becoming more and more evident that music itself is of greater importance than any of its interpreters. The gradual substitution of "What?" for "Who?" in the approach to great music marks an enormous step forward in the musical culture of America.

* * *

The annual gala concert in aid of the Berkshire Music Center takes place at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on the evening of August 7, with Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops Orchestra for half of the program. Among the other artists will be Aaron Copland, playing his own Piano Concerto, with Richard Burgin conducting.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-420(

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

AUG 2 1958

All Boxes Sold For Tanglewood Parade Benefit

TANGLEWOOD — All boxes for the benefit concert in the Music Shed for Tanglewood on Parade have been sold, it was announced this morning. The "parade" will be held Thursday, Aug. 7.

The demand for $5 seats immediately in front of the stage in the Music Shed has been heavy, but many individual seats are still available in other price ranges throughout the Shed.

The main concert at 8:15 will be featured by performances in the first half by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho, and in the second half with Richard Burgin, BSO concertmaster, conducting the BSO, with Aaron Copland playing his piano concerto.

The second half will also feature the appearance of Arthur Fiedler with the Boston Pops Orchestra.

GLOBE 8/3

"Count Ory"

The major production of the season for the Berkshire Music Center opera department will be Rossini's "Count Ory" which will receive two performances in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Monday and Tuesday evenings.

The English version by Robert A. Simon was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music for the Juilliard Opera Theater and has been released to the Berkshire Music Center for performance at Tanglewood. The case of the opera, which will be under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department, includes John McCollum (Count Ory); Angelica Lazada (Countess Fourmoutiers); Nancy Williams (Isolier, the page); Doris Okerson (Ragonda); David Smith (Raimbaud); Ronald Holgate (Tutor).

The opera will be conducted by Wyn Morris. Morris, of Llanelly, South Wales, was the winner last year of the Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship awarded to an outstanding student conductor. He studied during the season just pas with George Szell, conducto of the Cleveland Orchestra.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
UNION-STAR
Circ. D. 36,678

AUG 2 1958

Tanglewood To Present 'Count Ory'

Tenor John McCollum will appear in the title role in Rossini's "Count Ory," to be presented by the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Monday and Tuesday evenings.

The role of Count Ory is a taxing one, written in a very high register which at times calls for almost a coloratura tenor voice. In addition to the music, McCollum also has to learn the new English translation by Robert Simon which has been especially released by the Juilliard School of Music for the Tanglewood performances.

McCollum has been traveling this summer in Germany, Holland and England. Other members of the cast, under the supervision of Boris Goldovsky, are Angelica Lazada, Nancy Williams, Doris Okerson, David Smith and Ronald Holgate. The opera will be conducted by Wyn Morris.

The annual benefit for the Berksire Music Center, Tanglewood-on-Parade, will be Thursday from 6 to 11 p.m. and includes a picnic supper on the lawns and student performances as well as a concert at 8:15 by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,937

AUG 2 1958

Elaborate Program Planned For Tanglewood On Parade

The gala concert in the Music Shed at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, and the Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler, conductor, will climax the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center on Thursday evening, Aug. 7.

Elezear de Carvalho, who will open the program conducting Gomes' Ovrture to "Il Guarany" and Falla's "El Amor Brujo" is the head of the Department of Orchestra Conducting at the Berkshire Music Center and has been affiliated with the school for many years. Mr. Carvalho began his association with Tanglewood as a conducting student of Serge Koussevitzky.

Aaron Copland will appear as soloist in his own Piano Coneerto for the first time with this Orchestra in thirty-one years. Richard Burgin will conduct the performace. Mr. Copland last performed the work with the Boston Symphony under Serge Koussevitzky's direction in 1927.

Arthur Fiedler, who will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in a group of Pops favorites in the second half of the program, will come to Tanglewood from San Francisco where he has conducted nine concerts with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra.

There will be a drawing of door prizes in the intermission.

Two preliminary events of Tanglewood-on-Parade will take place at 4 p.m. when holders of box and reserved seats are invoted to attend a special opera performance in the Formal Gardens. All ticket holders are invited to a concert by the Tanglewood Study Group in the Barn, also at 4 o'clock.

At 5:45 p.m. all ticket holders are admitted to the Tanglewood grounds. A brass fanfare by students under the direction of Roger Voisin, first trumpet of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty, will be followed by a welcome to all guests from Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the school. Mr. Berkowitz will invite visitors to attend any of several simultaneous performances by different school departments at 6 p. m., the Student Orchestra in the Shed, Tanglewood composers in the Chamber Music Hall, Opera Scenes in the Theatre. These performances will summarize the work of the students during the six weeks' session.

The program of the student orchestr awill include Weber's Overture to "Der Freischutz" conducted by Wonsik Lim of Seoul, Korea; William Schuman's New England Triptych; conducted by David Zinman of New York City; "Don Juan" of Richard Strauss conducted by Zubin Mehta of India and the first movement (Angelic Concert) of Hindemith's "Mathis der Maler" conducted by Gustav Meier of Switzerland.

The concert in the Chamber Music Hall will include works composed during the summer by students of the composition department performed by Fromm Fellowship players.

At 7 o'clock while visitors are enjoying a picnic supper on the grounds, the Tanglewood Choir will present a choral program on the porch of the Main House.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Banner (e)
BENNINGTON, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 5,451

AUG 2 1958

'Count Ory' Opera At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass. — The major production of the season for the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department will be Rossini's "Count Ory" which will receive two performances in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 4 and 5.

The English version by Robert A. Simon was commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music for the Juilliard Opera Theatre and has been released to the Berkshire Music Center for performance at Tanglewood.

Cast of the opera, which will be under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department, includes John McCollum (Count Ory); Angelica Lazada (Countess Fourmoutiers); Nancy Williams (Isolier, the Page) Doris Okerson (Ragonda); David Smith (Raimbaud); Ronald Holgate (Tutor).

The scenery for the opera will consist of a Fibreglass shell on which 15 projectors, located behind the shell, will produce the different effects needed. Designed by Dr. Elmr Nagy, of the Hartt College of Music in Hartford, the Berkshire Music Center faculty, the scenery is part of the program undertaken with the cooperation of the New England Opera theatre and a grant from the Ford Foundation for the development of new scenic materials.

The comic opera "Count Ory" was the first of two French operas written by Rossini for the Paris Opera where it was first performed in 1828.

New England Newsclip Agency, In
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-42

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

UG 2 1958

In Brief . . .

The way tickets for Tanglewood on Parade are being snapped up shows the public recognizes a real cymbal-clasher of a program. With any sort of break from the weather, the crowd Thursday should break last year's 12,000 mark . . . James M. Burns renders a distinct public service in authorizing Eagle readers to take down Burns-for-Congress political ads posted in scenic spots. We go further. As the posters are illegal, we hereby authorize readers to do the same with all they run across—and tear them into little bits . . . Ted Giddings' interesting column last night demonstrated that a sportif Frenchman has a way with just about anything he turns his hand to, including brown trout . . .

It is ironic that the Great Barrington School Committee's reluctant decision to shuffle students about to relieve overcrowding seems to have strengthened opposition to the new intermediate school coming up for a vote Monday. "We'll show that school committee!" is the common attitude among parents now. But the school board is not to blame. If anyone is to be "shown" Monday night, it is the regressive forces who have voted down all plans for educational expansion in the past . . .

Bu
PRESS CLIPPING
165 Church Street -

NEW YORK, HERALD TRI
Circ. D. 361,379 - S.

AUG 3 19

Berkshir
Rossini

y FRANCIS D. PERK

Rossini's "Le Comte hich the Berkshire Music er's opera department roduce tomorrow and Tu nights at Tanglewood, L Mass., has already been before in New York, whe had its first American formance at the old Theater on Aug. 19, five years after its premiere. But it has a stage performance many years, and was forgotten in Europe until revived in Paris in 1926. cent years, it has been formed by England's Gl bourne company.

Part of it is a readapt of Rossini's score for "Il Vi a Reims," produced in Robert A. Simon's English
sion of the original French by Augustin Eugene Scribe Charles Gaspare Delestreson will be used for the Ta wood production. Boris dovsky will stage the which will be conducte Wyn Morris, a young mu from Wales.

The novel light weight
ery designed by Dr. E Nagy consists of a fibr shell on which fifteen p tors will provide the d effects. This is part of a gram sponsored by a Foundation grant to d sets which will be easy to dle and cost little to tra

The Local Scene

The Pop Concert serie was scheduled to open Thursday in the New Yo seum has been canceled
Alfonso D'Artega, its m director, is recuperating a recent operation. He ex however, to give a week o concerts at Carnegie Ha
the end of August or ea
September.

The city will have qu few outdoor concerts month. The Goldman B season runs through Au nd the notable Monday chamber orchestra serie Washington Square star morrow. An orchestra of harmonic and Symphony Air musicians opens a series in Carl Schurz Thursday night, and the nicipal Concerts Orches play in Central Park on more Saturday nights, Au
and 23.

Randall's Island will h

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 361,379 - S. 576,176

AUG 3 1958

Berkshire Center Will Present Rossini Opera Sung Here in 1833

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

Rossini's "Le Comte Ory," which the Berkshire Music Center's opera department will produce tomorrow and Tuesday nights at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., has already been heard before in New York, where it had its first American performance at the old Park Theater on Aug. 19, 1833, five years after its Paris premiere. But it has not had a stage performance here for many years, and was also long forgotten in Europe until it was revived in Paris in 1926. In recent years, it has been performed by England's Glyndebourne company.

Part of it is a readaptation of Rossini's score for "Il Viaggio a Reims," produced in 1825. Robert A. Simon's English version of the original French text by Augustin Eugene Scribe and Charles Gaspare Delestre-Poirson will be used for the Tanglewood production. Boris Goldovsky will stage the work, which will be conducted by Wyn Morris, a young musician from Wales.

The novel light weight scenery designed by Dr. Elemer Nagy consists of a fibreglass shell on which fifteen projectors will provide the desired effects. This is part of a program sponsored by a Ford Foundation grant to develop sets which will be easy to handle and cost little to transport.

* * *

The Local Scene

The Pop Concert series which was scheduled to open this Thursday in the New York Coliseum has been canceled, since Alfonso D'Artega, its musical director, is recuperating from a recent operation. He expects, however, to give a week of Pop concerts at Carnegie Hall at the end of August or early in September.

The city will have quite a few outdoor concerts this month. The Goldman Band's season runs through Aug. 15, and the notable Monday night chamber orchestra series in Washington Square starts tomorrow. An orchestra of Philharmonic and Symphony of the Air musicians opens a weekly series in Carl Schurz Park Thursday night, and the Municipal Concerts Orchestra will play in Central Park on two more Saturday nights, Aug. 16 and 23.

Randall's Island will harbor the third annual New York Jazz Festival on Friday and Saturday nights, Aug. 22 and 23, with a list of various prominent performers in this field.

* * *

Orchestral Notes

Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center, has been appointed manager of the Albuquerque (N. M.) Symphony Orchestra, beginning this fall when a new conductor, Maurice Bonney, takes charge. Mr. Berkowitz will also continue in his Tanglewood position. Mr. Bonney was formerly assistant to Leopold Stokowski with the Houston Symphony.

The recently organized Symphony Orchestra of Puerto Rico will give its first concert in San Juan on Nov. 6, when Pablo Casals will conduct and Jose Figueroa will be soloist in Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto. Other concerts will be given in San Juan, Ponce and Mayaguez with Juan Jose Castro, Alexander Schneider and Richard Burgin sharing the conductorship.

* * *

Testimonial Opera

In honor of Lotte Lehmann's seventieth birthday (July 5), the Music Academy of the West will give three performances of "Der Rosenkavalier" at Santa Barbara, Calif., on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, Aug. 26, 28 and 30. Mme. Lehmann, who heads the Academy's vocal department, will produce the work, and Maurice Abravanel, director of the Academy, will conduct a student cast and instrumentalists. Painters living in Santa Barbara are designing the sets.

Douglas Moore will be represented in two summer opera series in Ohio. His humorous "Gallantry" will share a double bill with Carlisle Floyd's first lyric stage work, "Slow Dusk," in performances by the Cleveland Institute of Music Opera Workshop this Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the Peninsula Barn Theater. His "Ballad of Baby Doe" is slated for Cleveland's Music Carnival in September with Walter Cassel, Beverly Sills and Ruth Kobart among the principals.

Oberlin College's Gilbert and Sullivan Company is offering both Savoy and other light operas at the Highfield Theater in Falmouth, Mass.

* * *

Lower Duties

Under a new law passed by Congress late in May, harpsichords and clavichords can be imported at the rate of duty which is now charged for pianos. Formerly, when they were classified by the United States Customs among "Stringed Instruments, Other," the duty was twice as much. The campaign for this change was initiated by Theodore Mix, of Magnamusic Distributors, Sharon, Conn., and carried on by Rep. James T. Patterson, of Connecticut's fifth district, during three sessions of Congress.

At Tanglewood

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Today, 2:30 Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducting; soloist, Margaret Harshaw, soprano. Excerpts from "The Flying Dutchman," "Lohengrin," "Die Walkeure," "Parsifal," "Tannhaeuser," "Rienzi," Wagner.

Monday and Tuesday, 2:30 Rossini's "Count Ory."

Wednesday, 8:30 Kroll Quartet. Quartet in G minor, Op. 74, No. 3, Haydn; Quartet No. 2, Op. 17, Bartok; Quartet No. 15 in A minor, Op. 132, Beethoven.

Thursday, 8:15 (Tanglewood-on-Parade) Boston Symphony Orchestra, Overture "Il Guarany," Gomes; "El Amor Brujo" (Eleazar de Carvalho conducting), De Falla; Piano Concerto (Aaron Copland soloist; Richard Burgin conducting), Copland. Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler, conductor; "Gaite Parisienne," Offenbach; Dance of Wheat and Malambo, from "Estancia," Ginastera; Selection from "West Side Story," Bernstein; Dancing through the Years, arr. Hayman; 76 Trombones from "The Music Man," Willson.

Friday, 8:30 Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Much conducting. Prelude Fugue and Postlude, Honegger; Symphony No. 7; Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor") (Eugene Istomin, solist), Beethoven.

Saturday, 8:30 Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducting. Music from "Prometheus"; Violin Concerto (Berl Senofsky, soloist); Leonore Overture No. 3, Beethoven; Nobilissima Visione, Hindemith.

Sunday, Aug. 10, 2:30 Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Johannesburg Festival Overture, Walton; Ninth Symphony (Adele Addison, Blake Stern, Florence Kopleff, Donald Gramm), Beethoven.

---

[186]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 118,644

AUG 2 1958

TRYING A NEW APPROACH—Holding a color slide, and standing near corrugated plastic panel, Dr. Elemer Nagy shows major elements in plan for new opera scenery. [Times Photo.

Nagy's Novel Settings for Opera To Get Big Test at Tanglewood

By TERE PASCONE

Monday night at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., ~~may see~~ the ~~beginning~~ of a revolution in the field of operatic scenery.

Rossini's "Count Ory," will be given its American premiere in Theatre-Concert Hall in a Corrulux shell on which 24 projectors located behind nine panels and above the ceiling, will produce different color effects with 50 slides.

* * *

THE EXPERIMENTAL sets were made possible by a grant of $40,000 from the Ford Foundation for the Tanglewood program in cooperation with the New England Opera Theatre.

In charge of the scenic experiments is Dr. Elemer Nagy, head of the Opera Department of the Hartt College of Music, University of Hartford. Assisting him in the making of the panels, projectors and slides has been a crew from Tanglewood and volunteers in Hartford. The scenery was built in the auditorium of Hartt College and trucked to Lenox.

The shell, of corrugated, translucent plastic, includes eight side panels, 12 by 6¾ feet and a center section, 12 by 14 feet. Set in lightweight aluminum frames, the panels are reversible. If a scene calls for columns, he has the framework by using the panels in reverse.

* * *

TWIN PROJECTORS of pinpoint type, designed by Dr. Nagy, will be used behind each panel; multi-projectors will be used above the ceiling.

The twin projectors are on stands at the base of which are boxes holding two transformers and providing storage space for slides.

The projectors may be placed only a short distance behind each of the panels and will not block the backstage area so as to impede singers.

The plexigras slides in two sizes, 12 by 7 inches, and 12 by 14 inches, were made to scale, with each inch representing a foot in equal ratio with the panel used. Dr. Nagy designed the work on each slide.

In an interview this week, Dr. Nagy said he deliberately got away from naturalism when he made the slides.

"I have instead produced an impression of the background to capture the mood needed," he said.

* * *

THE ROSSINI opera traditionally calls for two sets, one for each of the two acts, but Dr. Nagy plans to project five scenes.

The slides will be changed often during the performance, according to the effect wanted at a particular moment, he said. He will be able to superimpose one slide upon the other, too, for example, to produce lightning in a window. His treatment will be on the cinematic side in some instances, that is, he may change a panoramic background into a closeup of a portion of that background.

"This is not lantern slide projection," he emphasized, "but a new art. Each scene will represent a mood like in modern painting."

* * *

DR. NAGY said experiments have been aimed not only at solving economic matters but also at creating something new "like a magic lantern," to stimulate the audience.

"This will be the first new thing in opera in the last 100 years. The projections will do away with all heavy scenery. The slides can be carried by hand in an average suitcase," he said.

The Rossini opera will be presented also on Tuesday evening and will be sung in English.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 - S. 1,189,293

AUG 3 1958

Whitestone

Berkshire Fest

REHEARSING ROSSINI—Doris Okerson, left, and ~~Angelica Lozada~~, who will sing in "Count Ory" this week at Tanglewood. Boris Goldovsky, at right, is the director.

[187]

Sunday Waterbury Republican 1958 - Aug 3

Randolph Scott and John Carroll.

Benefit Slated At Tanglewood

The gala concert in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, and the Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler, conductor, will climax the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center Thursday at 8:15 p. m.

Eleazar de Carvalho, who will open the program conducting Gomes' Overture to "Il Guarany' and Falla's "El Amor Brujo," is the head of the Department of Orchestral Conducting at the Berkshire Music Center and has been affiliated with the school for many years. Mr. Carvalho began his association with Tanglewood as a conducting student of Serge Kousevitzky.

Aaron Copland will appear as soloist in his own Piano Concerto for the first time with this orchestra in 31 years. Richard Burgin will conduct the performance. Mr. Copland last performed the work with the Boston Symphony under Serge Koussevitzky's direction in 1927. When the concerto (sometimes called the "Jazz Concerto") was first performed, in 1927, it was the subject of some controversy.

Arthur Fiedler, who will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in a group of Pops favorites in the second half of the program, will come to Tanglewood from San Francisco where he has conducted nine concerts with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Fiedler will return to San Francisco, following a week of Esplanade concerts in Boston, and in late August will conduct the Louisville Symphony Orchestra at the French Lick, Ind., Music Festival. He then returns to San Francisco until Sept. 7. Mr. Fiedler's program will include Offenbach's Suite from "Gaite Parisienne." Ginastera's Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia," a selection from the "West Side Story" by Leonard Bernstein.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
Circ. S. 5,000

AUG 3 1958

TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE FEATURES BERKSHIRE WEEK

Fiedler Will Conduct Boston Pops Next Thursday

Pittsfield, Aug 2—High light of this week's entertainment schedule in the Berkshire Hills is the annual Tangelwood on Parade program Thursday evening at Tanglewood in Lenox. This is one performance of the season when Tanglewood's classical hair is pushed somewhat askew by Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra. It also is the occasion of an unusual and colorful musical picnic.

Student Performances

The evening's events will start at 6 with performances by students from various departments of the Berkshire Music Center. Picnic suppers on the lush and spacious Tanglewood lawns are a popular feature between the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's concert at 8.15 p. m.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the department of conducting, will direct a BSO performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the BSO and a member of the faculty of the orchestral department of the school, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer appearing as soloist. Mr. Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the department of composition at the school.

In the second half of the program Mr. Fielder and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program which will include a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story," an arrangement of dance turns by Richard Hayman entitled "Dancing Through the Years," and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Wilson. Mr. Fiedler also will present the traditional Pops encores.

Next week end will be the final series of performances in the 1958 Tanglewood season. Dr. Charles Munch will conduct the BSO in Beethoven's "Symphony No. 7" Friday evening; Pierre Montoux will be at the podium for the Saturday evening concert, and Dr. Munch will return next Sunday when the final program of the season will include Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony."

Tuesday through Saturday this week. Also on the Pillow program this week will be Nina Novak and George Zorich, classic ballet, with Irina Kovalski and Edmund Novak, character ballet.

Also from Tuesday through Saturday, the Williamstown Theater will offer "Cat On a Hot Tin Roof" as its bill of fare this week. At the Berkshire Playhouse in Stockbridge "The Constant Wife" will open tomorrow evening and a one-week run.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 104,590

3 - 1958

WEEK AT TANGLEWOOD

Guest artists and the state's two famed leaders in the music world, the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Boston Pops Orchestra, will vie for encores this week at Tanglewood. World-renowned Arthur Fiedler (left) [illegible] oston Pops in Thursday night's pro[illegible] Violinist Berl Senofsky will appear ymphony Orchestra in the Beethorto Saturday night in the Shed.
ill conduct.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 399,044

AUG 3 - 1958

IN THE BERKSHIRE HILLS

Tanglewood-on-Parade Highlights Week's Program

PITTSFIELD, Mass.—Highlights of this week's entertainment schedule in the Berkshire Hills is the annual Tanglewood-on-Parade program Thursday evening at Tanglewood in Lenox. This is the one performance of the season when Tanglewood's classical hair is pushed somewhat askew by Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra. It also is the occasion of an unusual and colorful musical picnic.

★ ★ ★

The evening's events will start at 6 with performances by students from various departments of the Berkshire Music Center. Picnic suppers on the lush and spacious Tanglewood lawns are a popular feature between the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's concert at 8:15.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the department of conducting, will direct a B.S.O. performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the B.S.O. and a member of the faculty of the orchestral department of the school, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer appearing as soloist. Mr. Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the department of composition at the school.

In the second half of the program Mr. Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program which will include a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story," an arrangement of dance turns by Richard Hayman entitled "Dancing Through the Years," and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Wilson. Mr. Fiedler also will present the traditional Pops encores.

Next week-end will be the final series of performances in the 1958 Tanglewood season. Dr. Charles Munch will conduct the B.S.O. in Beethoven's "Symphony No. 7" Friday evening; Pierre Monteux will be at the podium for the Saturday evening concert, and Dr. Munch will return next Sunday when the final program of the season will include Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony."

At the Music Barn in Lenox, Richard Dyer-Bennett will be heard next Saturday afternoon at 3:30 in a program of folk songs of the world. Next Sunday evening at 8:30, the George Shearing Quintet will make its first Music Barn appearance.

In the field of the dance, Myra Kinch and Company will be featured by Ted Shawn at the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival in Becket Tuesday through Saturday this week. Also on the Pillow program this week will be Nina Novak and George Zorich, classic ballet, with Irina Kovalski and Edmund Novak, character ballet.

Also from Tuesday through Saturday, the Williamstown Theater will offer "Cat On a Hot Tin Roof." At the Berkshire Playhouse in Stockbridge "The Constant Wife" will open tomorrow evening and a one-week run.

An extra on the Berkshire Hill's entertainment scheduled throughout the month of August is an art exhibit which has special appeal to the American family. The artist is Norman Rockwell, a resident of the Berkshire Hills town of Stockbridge. The exhibition, largest even for Mr. Rockwell's works, is at the Berkshire Museum in downtown Pittsfield.

New England Newsclip A
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIch
Sunday Telegr
WORCESTER,
Republican
Circ. 104,59

Au 3 - 1958

Music

Lenox
Coplan

By RAYMOND
Telegram Musi
Aaron Copland wi
soloist in his own P with the Boston Sy chestra on Th
"Tanglewood on Par
nual "spectacular"
shire Music Festival
Richard Burgin wil
performance.
When the Concerto called the "Jazz Co
first performed in 19 subject of mu co
just as much Co
chestral Variations"
such mixed reaction
wood a couple of w
The gala concert
8:15 p.m.) will hav
ductors.
Eleazar de Carval
duct the Boston S
Gomes' "Il Guarany and selections from Brujo" by de Falla
The Boston Pops O
der Arthur Fiedler
will be heard in
"Gaite Parisienne" s
of the Wheat and M
Estancia" by Gina
ions from Leonard
"West Side Story";
rangement of popular
of the last 50 years;
bones from "The Mu
Willson.
Two preliminary
"Tanglewood on P
take place at 4 p.m.
of box and reserved
vited to attend a sp performance in the dens.
At 5:45 p.m. all will be admitted to
for several simultane ances by the various
of the Berkshire Mus
The program of the chestra will include W Freischutz" Overture
by Won Lim of Se
William Schuman's N Triptych conducted by man of New York
Juan" by Richard S ducted by Mehta and the first movemen Concert") from Hinde
this der Maler" co
Gustav Meier of Swit
In the Chamber M works composed by s ing the summer (com partment) will be pe
Fromm Fellowship p

[187]

Sunday Waterbury Republican 1958 - Aug 3

Randolph Scott and John Carroll.

Benefit Slated At Tanglewood

The gala concert in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, and the Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler, conductor, will climax the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center Thursday at 8:15 p. m.

Eleazar de Carvalho, who will open the program conducting Gomes' Overture to "Il Guarany' and Falla's "El Amor Brujo," is the head of the Department of Orchestral Conducting at the Berkshire Music Center and has been affiliated with the school for many years. Mr. Carvalho began his association with Tanglewood as a conducting student of Serge Kousevitzky.

Aaron Copland will appear as soloist in his own Piano Concerto for the first time with this orchestra in 31 years. Richard Burgin will conduct the performance. Mr. Copland last performed the work with the Boston Symphony under Serge Koussevitzky's direction in 1927. When the concerto (sometimes called the "Jazz Concerto") was first performed, in 1927, it was the subject of some controversy.

Arthur Fiedler, who will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in a group of Pops favorites in the second half of the program, will come to Tanglewood from San Francisco where he has conducted nine concerts with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Fiedler will return to San Francisco, following a week of Esplanade concerts in Boston, and in late August will conduct the Louisville Symphony Orchestra at the French Lick, Ind., Music Festival. He then returns to San Francisco until Sept. 7. Mr. Fiedler's program will include Offenbach's Suite from "Gaite Parisienne." Ginastera's Dance of Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia," a selection from the "West Side Story" by Leonard Bernstein.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 104,590

AUG 3 - 1958

WEEK AT TANGLEWOOD

Guest artists and the state's two famed leaders in the music world, the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Boston Pops Orchestra, will vie for encores this week at Tanglewood. World-renowned Arthur Fiedler (left) will conduct the Boston Pops in Thursday night's program in the Shed. Violinist Berl Senofsky will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Beethoven Violin Concerto Saturday night in the Shed. Pierre Monteux will conduct.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
Circ. S. 5,000

AUG 3 1958

TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE FEATURES BERKSHIRE WEEK

Fiedler Will Conduct Boston Pops Next Thursday

Pittsfield, Aug 2—High light of this week's entertainment schedule in the Berkshire Hills is the annual Tangelwood on Parade program Thursday evening at Tanglewood in Lenox. This is one performance of the season when Tanglewood's classical hair is pushed somewhat askew by Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra. It also is the occasion of an unusual and colorful musical picnic.

Student Performances

The evening's events will start at 6 with performances by students from various departments of the Berkshire Music Center. Picnic suppers on the lush and spacious Tanglewood lawns are a popular feature between the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's concert at 8.15 p. m.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the department of conducting, will direct a BSO performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the BSO and a member of the faculty of the orchestral department of the school, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer appearing as soloist. Mr. Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the department of composition at the school.

In the second half of the program Mr. Fielder and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program which will include a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story," an arrangement of dance turns by Richard Hayman entitled "Dancing Through the Years," and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Wilson. Mr. Fiedler also will present the traditional Pops encores.

Next week end will be the final series of performances in the 1958 Tanglewood season. Dr. Charles Munch will conduct the BSO in Beethoven's "Symphony No. 7" Friday evening; Pierre Montoux will be at the podium for the Saturday evening concert, and Dr. Munch will return next Sunday when the final program of the season will include Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony."

Tuesday through Saturday this week. Also on the Pillow program this week will be Nina Novak and George Zorich, classic ballet, with Irina Kovalski and Edmund Novak, character ballet.

Also from Tuesday through Saturday, the Williamstown Theater will offer "Cat On a Hot Tin Roof" as its bill of fare this week. At the Berkshire Playhouse in Stockbridge "The Constant Wife" will open tomorrow evening and a one-week run.

IRE HILLS

l-on-Parade

eek's Program

Highlights of this week the Berkshire Hills is the annual Tanglewood-on-Parade program Thursday evening at Tanglewood in Lenox. This is the one performance of the season when Tanglewood's classical hair is pushed somewhat askew by Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra. It also is the occasion of an unusual and colorful musical picnic.

★ ★ ★

The evening's events will start at 6 with performances by students from various departments of the Berkshire Music Center. Picnic suppers on the lush and spacious Tanglewood lawns are a popular feature between the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's concert at 8:15.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the department of conducting, will direct a B.S.O. performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the B.S.O. and a member of the faculty of the orchestral department of the school, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer appearing as soloist. Mr. Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the department of composition at the school.

In the second half of the program Mr. Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program which will include a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story," an arrangement of dance turns by Richard Hayman entitled "Dancing Through the Years," and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Wilson. Mr. Fiedler also will present the traditional Pops encores.

Next week-end will be the final series of performances in the 1958 Tanglewood season. Dr. Charles Munch will conduct the B.S.O. in Beethoven's "Symphony No. 7" Friday evening; Pierre Monteux will be at the podium for the Saturday evening concert, and Dr. Munch will return next Sunday when the final program of the season will include Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony."

At the Music Barn in Lenox, Richard Dyer-Bennett will be heard next Saturday afternoon at 3:30 in a program of folk songs of the world. Next Sunday evening at 8:30, the George Shearing Quintet will make its first Music Barn appearance.

In the field of the dance, Myra Kinch and Company will be featured by Ted Shawn at the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival in Becket Tuesday through Saturday this week. Also on the Pillow program this week will be Nina Novak and George Zorich, classic ballet, with Irina Kovalski and Edmund Novak, character ballet.

Also from Tuesday through Saturday, the Williamstown Theater will offer "Cat On a Hot Tin Roof." At the Berkshire Playhouse in Stockbridge "The Constant Wife" will open tomorrow evening and a one-week run.

An extra on the Berkshire Hill's entertainment scheduled throughout the month of August is an art exhibit which has special appeal to the American family. The artist is Norman Rockwell, a resident of the Berkshire Hills town of Stockbridge. The exhibition, largest even for Mr. Rockwell's works, is at the Berkshire Museum in downtown Pittsfield.

New England Newsclip A
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIch

Sunday Telegr
WORCESTER,
Republican
Circ. 104,5

AUG 3 - 1958

Music

Lenox
Coplan

By RAYMOND
Telegram Mus
Aaron Copland w
soloist in his own P
with the Boston S chestra on Thu
"Tanglewood on Pa
nual "spectacular"
shire Music Festiva Richard Burgin wi
performance.
When the Concert
called the "Jazz Co
first performed in 19 subject of mu just as much as C
chestral Variations"
such mixed reactio
wood a couple of w
The gala concert
8:15 p.m.) will hav
ductors.
Eleazar de Carva
duct the Boston S
Gomes' "Il Guaran and selections fro
Brujo" by de Falla
The Boston Pops
der Arthur Fiedle
will be heard in
"Gaite Parisienne"
of the Wheat and M
Estancia" by Gina
ions from Leonar
"West Side Story";
rangement of popula
of the last 50 years;
bones from "The Mu
Willson.
Two preliminary
"Tanglewood on P
take place at 4 p.m.
of box and reserved
vited to attend a performance in the dens.
At 5:45 p.m. all t
will be admitted to or several simultane nces by the various f the Berkshire Mu
The program of th
hestra will include reischutz" Overtu Wonsik Lim of illiam Schuman's iptych conducted b an of New York an" by Richard cted by d the first moveme ncert" from s der Maler" stav Meier of Sw n the Chamber ks composed by the summer (co rtment) will be p
Fellowship p

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 113,886
AUG 3 - 1958

TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE FEATURES BERKSHIRE WEEK

Fiedler Will Conduct Boston Pops Next Thursday

Pittsfield, Aug 2—High light of this week's entertainment schedule in the Berkshire Hills is the annual Tanglewood on Parade program Thursday evening at Tanglewood in Lenox. This is one performance of the season when Tanglewood's classical hair is pushed somewhat askew by Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra. It also is the occasion of an unusual and colorful musical picnic.

Student Performances

The evening's events will start at 6 with performances by students from various departments of the Berkshire Music Center. Picnic suppers on the lush and spacious Tanglewood lawns are a popular feature between the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's concert at 8.15 p. m.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the department of conducting, will direct a BSO performance of Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the BSO and a member of the faculty of the orchestral department of the school, will conduct Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto with the composer appearing as soloist. Mr. Copland is chairman of the faculty and head of the department of composition at the school.

In the second half of the program Mr. Fielder and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program which will include a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story," an arrangement of dance turns by Richard Hayman entitled "Dancing Through the Years," and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Wilson. Mr. Fiedler also will present the traditional Pops encores.

Next week end will be the final series of performances in the 1958 Tanglewood season. Dr. Charles Munch will conduct the BSO in Beethoven's "Symphony No. 7" Friday evening; Pierre Montoux will be at the podium for the Saturday evening concert, and Dr. Munch will return next Sunday when the final program of the season will include Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony."

Music Barn

At the Music Barn in Lenox, Richard Dyer-Bennett will be heard next Saturday afternoon at 3.30 in a program of folk songs of the world.

In the field of the dance, Myra Kinch and Company will be featured by Ted Shawn at the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival in Becket Tuesday through Saturday this week. Also on the Pillow program this week will be Nina Novak and George Zorich, classic ballet, with Irina Kovalski and Edmund Novak, character ballet.

Also from Tuesday through Saturday, the Williamstown Theater will offer "Cat On a Hot Tin Roof" as its bill of fare this week. At the Berkshire Playhouse in Stockbridge "The Constant Wife" will open tomorrow evening and a one-week run.

---

aders in estra and this week ler (left) ht's pro-ll appear Beethone Shed.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 104,590
- 1958

MUSIC

Lenox Festival to Present Copland in Own Concerto

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

Aaron Copland will appear as soloist in his own Piano Concerto with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Thursday night at "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual "spectacular" of the Berkshire Music Festival at Lenox.

Richard Burgin will conduct the performance.

When the Concerto (sometimes called the "Jazz Concerto") was first performed in 1927, it was the subject of much controversy — just as much as Copland's "Orchestral Variations" that received such mixed reactions at Tanglewood a couple of weeks ago.

The gala concert (beginning at 8:15 p.m.) will have three conductors.

Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony in Gomes' "Il Guarany" Overture, and selections from "El Amor Brujo" by de Falla.

The Boston Pops Orchestra, under Arthur Fiedler's direction, will be heard in Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne" Suite; "Dance of the Wheat and Malambo from Estancia" by Ginastera; selections from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story"; Hayman's arrangement of popular dance tunes of the last 50 years; and 76 Trombones from "The Music Man" by Willson.

Two preliminary events of "Tanglewood on Parade" will take place at 4 p.m. when holders of box and reserved seats are invited to attend a special opera performance in the formal gardens.

At 5:45 p.m. all ticket holders will be admitted to the grounds for several simultaneous performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center.

The program of the student orchestra will include Weber's "Der Freischutz" Overture conducted by Wonsik Lim of Seoul, Korea; William Schuman's New England Triptych conducted by David Zinman of New York City; "Don Juan" by Richard Strauss conducted by Zubin Mehta of India; and the first movement ("Angelic Concert") from Hindemith's "Mathis der Maler" conducted by Gustav Meier of Switzerland.

In the Chamber Music Hall, works composed by students during the summer (composition department) will be performed by Fromm Fellowship players.

Unreserved sections and general admission to the grounds is $2.50. Proceeds will benefit the Berkshire Music Center.

Ximenez-Vargas

A Worcester girl was substantially responsible for the exceptionally fine production of the Ximenez-Vargas Spanish Ballet a week ago at the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival in Lee.

She's Miss Judy Rutherford of 42 Berwick St., a senior at Vassar College.

Miss Rutherford was stage manager, an assignment that involved lighting, props, sets, and countless cues of vital importance. She was engaged by Ted Shawn for the challenging job throughout the summer. His praise of her work is nothing short of rhapsodic.

"Pride . . . and Control"

In his curtain talk (They are considerably abbreviated this summer) Shawn referred to Spanish dancing as a metier of "pride, dignity, restraint and control."

"Broadway and the movies have given a massacred impression of Spanish dance," he said. "Many people think of a Spanish dancer as a frizzy-headed woman who whirls and squirms, and tosses her combs in all direction."

He also described the Ximenez-Vargas Company as the very best he has ever seen anywhere.

Never has such unbridled enthusiasm been heard at the Pillow. At every performance there was stomping, shouting, and "Oles!"

A supreme sense of drama invaded everything on stage.

The audience fairly gasped as the story was unfolded of Petenera, Spain's most beautiful and seductive woman. She was a creature of splendor as danced by Pepa Reyes. Jose Lopez and Manolo Vargas were the impassioned and unscrupulous Dons who stab her to death—accidentally.

Exquisite Fantasia

Delightful fantasia was the lyrical story of the flower girl (Maria Gloria), the bravado senor (Lopez), and the love-sick bootblack (Angel Mancheno).

Roberto Ximenes gave a dazzling account of the "Zapateado," in his own choreography. It was dramatized, by having spotlights focused on his feet. In variation form he stamped and staccatoed brilliant r oed by guit

Mata and
The peak fiery eyes was reached an Iberian i mi pena."

First

This was ican appear Vargas. The about 5,000
castanets, whirling sha ment of a hensive art.

Dancers f day, Wedne
Saturday eve day, Friday nees at 4) a

Myra Kinc present the ful Dreamer venge," with guest artist.
done by Niha
Zorich — and Irina Kovalsk
vak.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
Circ. S. 218,516

AUG 3 1958

Music

The prize-winning Drama Critics' Circle musical, "Most Happy Fella," comes to the stage of the Lyric Circus for a two-week engagement starting Tuesday night.

Gene Hollman is starred as Tony, the middle-age California grape grower who orders a bride by mail. Hollman has portrayed the role of the French planter in "South Pacific" many times. For this production he will switch to an Italian accent.

Arlyne Frank repeats the role of Rosabella that she played recently at the Paper Mill Playhouse in New Jersey. Miss Frank was featured in the Broadway productions of "Let's Make an Opera", "All For Love" and "Touch and Go".

Edward Grace Returns

Returning to the Lyric stage after his successful comedy bit in "Carmen" is Edward Grace, who enacts Herman in "Fella". Grace is the son of a vaudevillian father and the grandson of an English opera singer.

Ray Hyson is Joey, Marjorie Rivingston plays Cleo and Dorothy Krebill acts Marie. All three are veterans of the tent circus this season.

The story was adapted from Sidney Howard's Pulitzer Prize play "They Knew What They Wanted."

Music by Loesser

Frank Loesser, previously represented on Broadway with "Guys and Dolls", furnished the score. Memorable tunes in the production are "Standing on the Corner", "Joey" and "Big D".

Two new members have been added to the male ensemble for the musical. They are Philip Dorian, brother of Lyric singer Elena Dorian, and Peter Lombard.

* * *

Syracuse University's School of Music presents its final summer concert at 8:30 p.m. tomorrow in Crouse Auditorium.

The summer chorus, under the direction of Frank Hakanson, and the summer band, directed by Harwood Simmons, will perform five Bach chorales.

The band will offer works by Verdi and Frescobaldi and will conclude with selections from the Broadway hit, "The Music Man".

* * *

Oboeist Courtnay Cauble again will be featured performer with the Krasner String Ensemble at the 8:30 p.m. concert at Hubbard Hall, Cazenovia Junior College.

The concert is sponsored by the Syracuse Friends of Chamber Music and the college.

* * *

Tanglewood of Parade is the principal attraction this week at the Berkshire Music Festival at Lenox, Mass.

Events begin at 6 p.m. Thursday with simultaneous sessions of the orchestra playing in the shed, compositions to be performed in the chamber music hall and the opera to be sung in the theater-concert hall.

The choir gives a recital at 7 p.m. to be followed by a concert in the shed at 8:15 p.m. Eleazar de Carvalho and Richard Burgin will conduct the symphony and Arthur Fiedler will wield the baton for the "pops".

Rossini's "Count Ory" is slated for performance tomorrow and Tuesday. Leads will be sung by John McCollum, Angelica Lazada, Nancy Williams, Doris Okerson, David Smith and Ronald Holgate.

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE 8/4/58

GAZETTE PHONE FR 4-4

John McCollum to Star in 'Count Ory' at Tanglewood

Tenor John McCollum will have the title role in Rossini's "Count Ory" when it is presented by the Berkshire Music Center opera department tonight and tomorrow evening.

* * *

THE ROLE of "Count Ory" is a taxing one, written in a very high register which at times calls for almost a coloratura tenor voice. In addition McCollum has to learn the new English translation by Robert Simon, which was commissioned by the Juilliard School and has been especially released for this performance.

McCollum has been traveling this summer in Germany, Holland and England and appeared in performances of "The Scarf," by American Lee Hoiby, at the Festival of Two Worlds at Spoleto, Italy. This coming season he will appear at the Toronto Opera Festival, with the New England Opera Theater in Boston, the Washington Opera Society and the Fort Worth Opera.

* * *

OTHER MEMBERS of the cast for "Count Ory," which will be under the supervision of Boris Goldovsky, are Angelica Lazada, Nancy Williams, Doris Okerson, David Smith and Ronald Holgate. Wyn Morris will conduct the opera.

Costumes have been designed by Leo Van Witsen of the Juilliard School and the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department. He has experimented with a number of new materials for the costumes and in the hopes that eventually that tiring and expensive costume fitting may become a thing of the past.

* * *

THE NEW MATERIALS include a stretchable jersey for chorus costumes such as is used for bathing suits. Costumes made in three basic sizes can adjust to the individual figure. In addition the chorus will wear stretchable shoes, made in only one size for men and one for women.

JOHN McCOLLUM
In Rossini Opera

Dr. Elemer Nagy of Hartford designed the experimental settings and the experimental scenery project was undertaken with the help of a grant from the Ford Foundation.

The opera department at Tanglewood this summer is being supported by the leadership training program of the New England Opera Theater with the addition of the Ford Foundation grant.

B. Herald - Aug 4

Rossini's 'Count Ory' At Tanglewood Tonight

Tenor John McCollum has made a special trip to Tanglewood to appear in the title role in Rossini's "Count Ory" presented by the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department tonight and Tuesday evening.

The role of "Count Ory" is a taxing one, written in a very high register which at times calls for almost a coloratura tenor voice. In addition to the music, Mr. McCollum has also to learn the new English Translation by Robert Simon, which has been especially released by the Juilliard School of Music for this performance.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 113,886
AUG 3 - 1958

TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE FEATURES BERKSHIRE WEEK

Fiedler Will Conduct Boston Pops Next Thursday

Pittsfield, Aug 2—High light of this week's entertainment schedule in the Berkshire Hills is the annual Tangelwood on Parade program Thursday evening at Tanglewood in Lenox. This is one performance of the season when Tanglewood's classical hair is pushed somewhat askew by Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra. It also is the occasion of an unusual and colorful musical picnic.

Student Performances

The evening's events will start at 6 with performances by students from various departments of the Berkshire Music Center. Picnic suppers on the lush and spacious Tanglewood lawns are a popular feature between the student performances and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's concert at 8.15 p. m.

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty will be heard in the first half of the program. Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the department of conducting, will direct a BSO performance of Falla's "El Amor

---

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 104,590

[illegible] - 1958

MUSIC

Lenox Festival to Present Copland in Own Concerto

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

Aaron Copland will appear as soloist in his own Piano Concerto with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Thursday night at "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual "spectacular" of the Berkshire Music Festival at Lenox.

Richard Burgin will conduct the performance.

When the Concerto (sometimes called the "Jazz Concerto") was first performed in 1927, it was the subject of much controversy — just as much as Copland's "Orchestral Variations" that received such mixed reactions at Tanglewood a couple of weeks ago.

The gala concert (beginning at 8:15 p.m.) will have three conductors.

Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony in Gomes' "Il Guarany" Overture, and selections from "El Amor Brujo" by de Falla.

The Boston Pops Orchestra, under Arthur Fiedler's direction, will be heard in Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne" Suite; "Dance of the Wheat and Malambo from Estancia" by Ginastera; selections from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story"; Hayman's arrangement of popular dance tunes of the last 50 years; and 76 Trombones from "The Music Man" by Willson.

Two preliminary events of "Tanglewood on Parade" will take place at 4 p.m. when holders of box and reserved seats are invited to attend a special opera performance in the formal gardens.

At 5:45 p.m. all ticket holders will be admitted to the grounds for several simultaneous performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center.

The program of the student orchestra will include Weber's "Der Freischutz" Overture conducted by Wonsik Lim of Seoul, Korea; William Schuman's New England Triptych conducted by David Zinman of New York City; "Don Juan" by Richard Strauss conducted by Zubin Mehta of India; and the first movement ("Angelic Concert") from Hindemith's "Mathis der Maler" conducted by Gustav Meier of Switzerland.

In the Chamber Music Hall, works composed by students during the summer (composition department) will be performed by Fromm Fellowship players.

Unreserved sections and general admission to the grounds is $2.50. Proceeds will benefit the Berkshire Music Center.

Ximenez-Vargas

A Worcester girl was substantially responsible for the exceptionally fine production of the Ximenez-Vargas Spanish Ballet a week ago at the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival in Lee.

She's Miss Judy Rutherford of 42 Berwick St., a senior at Vassar College.

Miss Rutherford was stage manager, an assignment that involved lighting, props, sets, and countless cues of vital importance. She was engaged by Ted Shawn for the challenging job throughout the summer. His praise of her work is nothing short of rhapsodic.

"Pride . . . and Control"

In his curtain talk (They are considerably abbreviated this summer) Shawn referred to Spanish dancing as a metier of "pride, dignity, restraint and control."

"Broadway and the movies have given a massacred impression of Spanish dance," he said. "Many people think of a Spanish dancer as a frizzy-headed woman who whirls and squirms, and tosses her combs in all direction."

He also described the Ximenez-Vargas Company as the very best he has ever seen anywhere.

Never has such unbridled enthusiasm been heard at the Pillow. At every performance there was stomping, shouting, and "Oles!"

A supreme sense of drama invaded everything on stage.

The audience fairly gasped as the story was unfolded of Petenera, Spain's most beautiful and seductive woman. She was a creature of splendor as danced by Pepa Reyes. Jose Lopez and Manolo Vargas were the impassioned and unscrupulous Dons who stab her to death—accidentally.

Exquisite Fantasia

Delightful fantasia was the lyrical story of the flower girl (Maria Gloria), the bravado senor (Lopez), and the love-sick bootblack (Angel Mancheno).

Roberto Ximenes gave a dazzling account of the "Zapateado," in his own choreography. It was dramatized by having spotlights focused on his feet. In variation form he stamped and staccatoed brilliant rhythmic patterns, echoed by guitarists Juan G. De La Mata and Emilio Bonet.

The peak of "hauteur" and fiery eyes and vivacious action was reached by senorita Reyes in an Iberian impression called "Con mi pena."

First Major Showing

This was the first major American appearance of the Ximenez-Vargas. They've made it clear to about 5,000 persons that clacking castanets, finger-snapping, and whirling shawls are a tiny fragment of a brilliant and comprehensive art.

Dancers for this week (Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday evenings at 9 — Thursday, Friday and Saturday matinees at 4) are the following:

Myra Kinch and Company will present the premiere of "Beautiful Dreamer" and "Giselle's Revenge," with Jean Cebron as guest artist. Classic ballet will be done by Nina Novak and George Zorich — and character ballet by Irina Kovalska and Edmund Novak.

---

sday through Saturday this
k. Also on the Pillow program week will be Nina Novak
George Zorich, classic ballet, Irina Kovalski and Edmund
ak, character ballet.
so from Tuesday through Sat-y, the Williamstown Theater offer "Cat On a Hot Tin
" as its bill of fare this
k. At the Berkshire Playe in Stockbridge "The Con-Wife" will open tomorrow
ing and a one-week run.

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE 8/4/58

GAZETTE PHONE FR 4-4

John McCollum to Star in 'Count Ory' at Tanglewood

Tenor John McCollum will have the title role in Rossini's "Count Ory" when it is presented by the Berkshire Music Center opera department tonight and tomorrow evening.

* * *

THE ROLE of "Count Ory" is a taxing one, written in a very high register which at times calls for almost a coloratura tenor voice. In addition McCollum has to learn the new English translation by Robert Simon, which was commissioned by the Juilliard School and has been especially released for this performance.

McCollum has been traveling this summer in Germany, Holland and England and appeared in performances of "The Scarf," by American Lee Hoiby, at the Festival of Two Worlds at Spoleto, Italy. This coming season he will appear at the Toronto Opera Festival, with the New England Opera Theater in Boston, the Washington Opera Society and the Fort Worth Opera.

* * *

OTHER MEMBERS of the cast for "Count Ory," which will be under the supervision of Boris Goldovsky, are Angelica Lozada, Nancy Williams, Doris Okerson, David Smith and Ronald Holgate. Wyn Morris will conduct the opera.

Costumes have been designed by Leo Van Witsen of the Juilliard School and the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department. He has experimented with a number of new materials for the costumes and in the hopes that eventually that tiring and expensive costume fitting may become a thing of the past.

* * *

THE NEW MATERIALS include a stretchable jersey for chorus costumes such as is used for bathing suits. Costumes made in three basic sizes can adjust to the individual figure. In addition the chorus will wear stretchable shoes, made in only one size for men and one for women.

JOHN McCOLLUM
In Rossini Opera

Dr. Elemer Nagy of Hartford designed the experimental settings and the experimental scenery project was undertaken with the help of a grant from the Ford Foundation.

The opera department at Tanglewood this summer is being supported by the leadership training program of the New England Opera Theater with the addition of the Ford Foundation grant.

B. Herald Aug 4

Rossini's 'Count Ory' At Tanglewood Tonight

Tenor John McCollum has made a special trip to Tanglewood to appear in the title role in Rossini's "Count Ory" presented by the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department tonight and Tuesday evening.

The role of "Count Ory" is a taxing one, written in a very high register which at times calls for almost a coloratura tenor voice. In addition to the music, Mr. McCollum has also to learn the new English Translation by Robert Simon, which has been especially released by the Juilliard School of Music for this performance.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

CHATHAM, N. Y.
COURIER
Circ. W. 3,500

JUL 31 1958

Beethoven Series Marks Final Week Of Tanglewood Concerts

The final weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, will feature music of Beethoven. Charles Munch, Music Director, will conduct the concerts of Friday evening, August 8 at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon, August 10, at 2:30. The concert on Saturday evening, August 9, at 8:30, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux. Soloists will include Eugene Istomin, pianist August 8 and Berl Senofsky, violist August 9.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

VALATIE, N. Y.
ROUGH NOTES
Circ. W. 1,000

AUG 1 1958

Beethoven Series Marks Final Week Of Tanglewood Concerts

The final weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, will feature music of Beethoven. Charles Munch, Music Director, will conduct the concerts of Friday evening, August 8 at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon, August 10, at 2:30. The concert on Saturday evening, August 9, at 8:30, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux. Soloists will include Eugene Istomin, pianist August 8 and Berl Senofsky, violist August 9.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 408,150 - S. 281,019

AUG 1 1958

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Berkshire Festival's Final Week-End

The music of Beethoven will be featured during the final week-end of the Berkshire Festival's season at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., which opens Friday, Aug. 8, with Charles Munch on the podium for the Boston Symphony. The Seventh Symphony and the "Emperor" Concerto with pianist Eugene Istomin as soloist comprise the major portion of the program. Honegger's "Prelude, Fugue and Postlude" completes the list.

Pierre Monteux will conduct Saturday's concert, Aug. 9, with Berl Senofsky as soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto. Beethoven's "Leonore Overture" No. 3; the music from "Prometheus" and Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" make up the rest of the concert.

The appearance of Senofsky is of special interest as he was the winner of the 1955 Brussels competition and made his U. S. debut in 1956. A concert at the Grace Rainey Rodgers Auditorium of the Metropolitan Museum of Art this past season brought him prominently to the attention of the public as a neglected major American talent. This coming season he will appear here with the Philharmonic-Symphony and also play with many other major orchestras throughout the country, including the Bostonians.

Beethoven's Ninth Symphony will bring the season to a conclusion, Sunday afternoon, Aug. 10, with Munch conducting. Soloists will be Adele Addison, Blake Stern, Florence Kopleff and Donald Gramm. Walton's "Johannesburg Festival Overture" opens the program.

"Tanglewood on Parade," the Boston Symphony's annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, takes its festive course Thursday, including, as usual, a lawn party, the Boston Pops Orchestra with Arthur Fiedler conducting, and many other attractions. During the first half of the evening concert Aaron Copland will be soloist in his piano concerto.

The gala event begins officially at 5:45 p.m., rain or shine, with a fanfare and welcome. Paying guests can observe the Berkshire Music Center in operation, including student performances of opera and other branches of their study. These begin at 4 p.m.

Paul Ballantyne is crusty Old Mahon in "Playboy of the Western World," Synge comedy giving its 100th performance tomorrow at the Tara Theater.

---

2 A THE BOSTON SUNDAY HERALD, AUG. 3, 1958 Section IV

Music Festival Ends with Opera, Symphony, Pops

Final Festival Week Opens

Tanglewood-on-Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will be held on Thursday evening, Aug. 7, between 6 and 11 P.M. Concerts by the various departments of the school including orchestra, opera, chamber music and choir, will be followed by picnic suppers on the lawn and a gala concert at 8:15 in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Boston Pops Orchestra.

Mr. Copland will also be heard in the final session of the Seminar in Contemporary Music on Friday afternoon, Aug. 8, at 3:15. He will discuss his own music and there will be performances of his Four Songs from Twelve Poems of Emily Dickinson and the Piano Fantasy, with guest soloist Noel Lee.

The final concert of the Berk-

Programs for the week are as follows:

Wednesday at 8:30, Chamber Music, The Kroll Quartet
Haydn Quartet in G minor, Op. 74, No. 3
Bartok Quartet No. 2, Op. 17
Beethoven Quartet No. 15 in A minor, Op. 132

Thursday at 8:15, Music Shed, Tanglewood-on-Parade. Boston Symphony Orchestra;
Gomes Overture "Il Guarany"
Falla "El Amor Brujo"
(Eleazar De Carvalho, conducting)
Copland Piano Concerto
(Aaron Copland, soloist; Richard Burgin, conducting)
Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler, conductor
Offenbach "Gaite Parisienne"
Ginastera Dance of Wheat and Malambo, from "Estancia"
Bernstein Selection from "West Side Story"
Hayman, arr. Dancing through the Years
Willson 76 Trombones from "The Music Man"

Friday, 8:30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor:
Honegger Prelude Fugue and Postlude
Beethoven Symphony No. 7
Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor")
(Eugene Istomin, Soloist)

Saturday, at 8:30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux, conductor:
Beethoven Music from "Prometheus"
Violin Concerto (Berl Senofsky, soloist)
Hindemith Nobilissima Visione
Beethoven Leonore Overture No. 3

Sunday, 2:30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor:
Walton Johannesburg Festival Overture
Beethoven Ninth Symphony
(Adele Addison, Blake Stern, Florence Kopleff, Donald Gramm)

"COUNT ORY," Rossini's opera features Ronald Holgate as the Tutor and Nancy Williams as the Page in the Act I Duet. The opera will be performed twice, tomorrow and Tuesday at 8:30 in the Theater in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., under the auspices of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

ATC AMERICAN THEATRES CORP Movie Bulletin

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,155

AUG 1 1958

The Kroll Quartet will present a chamber music concert in the Theatre Concert Hall, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., next Wednesday August 6, at 8:30 p.m., with a program that will include the Haydn Quartet in G minor, Opus 74, No. 3; Bartok Quartet No. 2, Opus 17, and Beethoven's Quartet No. 15 in A minor, Opus 132.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

ALLENTOWN, PA.
CHRONICLE
Circ. D. 21,563

AUG 2 1958

Tanglewood Music Festival To Be Visited by Local Party

The Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., is developing interest in an annual pilgrimage to that place from Allentown. The pilgrimage will take place Thursday through Sunday, Aug. 7-10.

The four-day trip by bus for music lovers and their friends has been organized and will be conducted by Mrs. Grace E. Peters.

Opera in Garden

Leaving Allentown Thursday morning, 41 people will make the trip. First on the program will be "Tanglewood on Parade," beginning at 4 p.m. that day with opera in the formal gardens.

At 6 p.m. the local group will see the Berkshire Music Center in operation. There are simultaneous sessions of orchestra, compositions and opera. The Tanglewood Choir will sing.

The Concert in the Shed by the Boston Symphony is the big attraction. Included in this program will be Copland's Piano Concerto with Aaron Copland as soloist. The Boston Pops Orchestra with Arthur Fiedler conducting, will complete the program.

The Allentown party will attend the Friday night program featuring the Beethoven Symphony No. 7, also Piano Concerto No. 5, with Eugene Istomin as soloist.

Big Saturday

Saturday's full schedule will include the open rehearsal and afternoon attendance at the Stockbridge Summer Playhouse to see "The Cocktail Party." In the evening the party will hear a violin concerto by Berl Senofsky and Beethoven's Lenore Overture No. 3.

On Sunday afternoon at 2:30 p.m., the group will attend the last concert of the season, at which Beethoven's 9th Symphony will be played with the festival chorus. Soloists are Adele Addison, Blake Stern, Florence Kopliff and Donald Gramm. Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux will be the conductors.

New England Newsclip Agency, I
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4
Hampshire Gazette (e
NORTHAMPTON, Ma
Independent
Circ. 13,286

AUG 1 1958

August 8, 9, 10
Closing Conc
At Tangl

The final weekend of B
Festival concerts by the Symphony Orchestra in Shed at Tanglewood
Massachusetts, will feat of Beethoven. Charles M sic director, will condu certs of Friday evenin
8:30, and Sunday after 10, at 2:30. The concert day evening, Aug. 9, at be under the direction
Monteux. Soloists wi
Eugene Istomin, pianist and Berl Senofsky, violi 9).
Dr. Munch will open Fr ning's concert with H
Prelude, Fugue and Pos
lowed by Beethoven's
No. 7. Eugene Istomin loist in Beethoven's Pia to No. 5 "Emperor." M is the sixth of the o young American pia have appeared at Tangl ing the current seas being Lukas Foss, Sey kin, Leon Fleisher, By and Leonard Pennario min last appeared at T in 1955.
The concert on Sat
ducted by Pierre Mo open with music fron theus" by Beethoven.
sky will be soloist in ven Violin Concerto. M was the winner of the sels Competition and peared with many o standing American since his United Stat 1956. This will be h pearance with the B phony Orchestra. In half of the program M will present Hindemith sima Visione" and Leonore Overture No.
Dr. Munch will follo lar custom of closing shire Festival season
formance of Beetho
Symphony on Sunda
Soloists will be Adele prano; Florence Kop to; Blake Stern, tenor Gramm, bass, with Chorus prepared by and Alfred Nash Pa program will open w liam Walton's Johann tival Overture which for the 70th Annive city of Johannesbur Africa and first perf
in 1956. The Boston
Orchestra presented States premiere of during the 1956-1957

PRESS CLIPPING
165 Church Street
NEW YORK C
DAILY N
Circ. D. 2,156,137
AUG 3

[190]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,286
AUG 1 1958

August 8, 9, 10 Closing Concerts At Tanglewood

The final weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the ~~Boston Symphony~~ Orchestra in the ~~Music Shed at~~ Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will feature music of Beethoven. Charles Munch, music director, will conduct the concerts of Friday evening, Aug. 8 at 8:30, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 10, at 2:30. The concert on Saturday evening, Aug. 9, at 8:30, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux. Soloists will include Eugene Istomin, pianist (Aug. 8) and Berl Senofsky, violinist (Aug. 9).

Dr. Munch will open Friday evening's concert with Honegger's Prelude, Fugue and Postlude, followed by Beethoven's Symphony No. 7. Eugene Istomin will be soloist in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5 "Emperor." Mr. Istomin is the sixth of the outstanding young American pianists who have appeared at Tanglewood during the current season, others being Lukas Foss, Seymour Lipkin, Leon Fleisher, Byron Janis and Leonard Pennario. Mr. Istomin last appeared at Tanglewood in 1955.

The concert on Saturday conducted by Pierre Monteux will open with music from "Prometheus" by Beethoven. Berl Senofsky will be soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto. Mr. Senofsky was the winner of the 1955 Brussels Competition and has appeared with many of the outstanding American orchestras since his United States debut in 1956. This will be his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In the second half of the program Mr. Monteux will present Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" and Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3.

Dr. Munch will follow his regular custom of closing the Berkshire Festival season with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on Sunday afternoon. Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfrer Nash Patterson. The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johannesburg Festival Overture which was written for the 70th Anniversary of the city of Johannesburg in South Africa and first performed there in 1956. The Boston Symphony Orchestra presented the United States premiere of the Overture during the 1956-1957 season.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 158,729
AUG 2 1958

Final Programs for Tanglewood

Beethoven To Dominate The Weekend

The final weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the ~~Music Shed at~~ Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will feature music of Beethoven. Charles Munch will conduct the concerts of Friday evening, Aug. 8, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 10. The concert on Saturday evening, Aug. 9, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux. Soloists will include Eugene Istomin, pianist, and Berl Senofsky, violinist.

Dr. Munch will open Friday evening's concert with Honegger's Prelude, Fugue and Postlude, followed by Beethoven's Symphony No. 7. Mr. Istomin will be soloist in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5 "Emperor." Mr. Istomin is the sixth of the outstanding young American pianists who have appeared at Tanglewood during the current season, others being Lukas Foss, Seymour Lipkin, Leon Fleisher, Byron Janis, and Leonard Pennario. Mr. Istomin last appeared at Tanglewood in 1955.

⁂

The concert on Saturday will open with music from "Prometheus" by Beethoven. Mr. Senofsky will be soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto. Mr. Senofsky was the winner of the 1955 Brussels Competition and has appeared with many of the outstanding American orchestras since his United States debut in 1956. This will be his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In the second half of the program Mr. Monteux will present Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" and Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3.

Dr. Munch will follow his regular custom of closing the Berkshire Festival season with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on Sunday afternoon. Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson. The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johannesburg Festival Overture, which was written for the 70th Anniversary of the city of Johannesburg in South Africa and first performed there in 1956. The Boston Symphony Orchestra presented the United States première of the Overture during the 1956-57 season.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's rehearsal on Saturday morning, Aug. 9, at 10 o'clock will be open to the public for the benefit of the Pension Fund.

⁂

Monday evening and Tuesday evening in the Theater-Concert Hall the Tanglewood Opera Department will present Rossini's comic opera "Court Ory." The performances will be conducted by Wyn Morris and the title role will be sung by John McCollum, tenor. Scenery has been designed by Elemer Nagy, costumes by Leo Van Witsen, and the entire production will be under the supervision of Boris Goldovsky.

The final concert in the Chamber Music Series on Wednesday evening will feature the Kroll Quartet in a program which includes Haydn's Quartet in G minor, Op. 74, No. 3, Bartók's Quartet No. 2, Op. 17, and Beethoven's Quartet No. 15 in A minor, Op. 132.

⁂

Tanglewood-on-Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will be held on Thursday evening between six and 11 o'clock. Concerts by the various departments of the school, including orchestra, opera, chamber music and choir, will be followed by picnic suppers on the lawn and a gala concert at 8:15 in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Boston Pops Orchestra.

Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct works of Gomes and Falla, followed by Aaron Copland performing the piano part of his own Piano Concerto. The Orchestra will be under the direction of Richard Burgin. Following the drawing of door prizes, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites.

Mr. Copland will also be heard in the final session of the Seminar in Contemporary Music on Friday afternoon at 3:15. He will discuss his own music, and there will be performances of his Four Songs from Twelve Poems of Emily Dickinson and the Piano Fantasy, with quest soloist Noel Lee.

The final concert of the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra will be given on Saturday afternoon in the Music Shed. Various prizes will be awarded to the students at this concert. The final student chamber music concert on Sunday morning at 10 o'clock will be held in the Theater-Concert Hall.

The last three events are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 295,512
AUG 3 - 1958

Final Festival Week Opens

Tanglewood-on-Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will be held on Thursday evening, Aug. 7, between 6 and 11 P.M. Concerts by the various departments of the school including orchestra, opera, chamber music and choir, will be followed by picnic suppers on the lawn and a gala concert at 8:15 in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Boston ~~Pops Orchestra~~.

Mr. Copland will also be heard in the final session of the Seminar in Contemporary Music on Friday afternoon, Aug. 8, at 3:15. He will discuss his own music and there will be performances of his Four Songs from Twelve Poems of Emily Dickinson and the Piano Fantasy, with guest soloist Noel Lee.

The final concert of the Berk-

Programs for the week are as follows:

Wednesday at 8:30, Chamber Music, The Kroll Quartet
Haydn — Quartet in G minor, Op. 74, No. 3
Bartok — Quartet No. 2, Op. 17
Beethoven — Quartet No. 15 in A minor, Op. 132

Thursday at 8:15, Music Shed, Tanglewood-on-Parade. Boston Symphony Orchestra:
Gomes — Overture "Il Guarany"
Falla — "El Amor Brujo"
(Eleazar De Carvalho, conducting)
Copland — Piano Concerto
(Aaron Copland, soloist Richard Burgin, conducting)
Boston Pops Orchestra,
Arthur Fiedler, conductor
Offenbach — "Gaite Parisienne"
Ginastera — Dance of Wheat and Malambo, from "Estancia"
Bernstein — Selection from "West Side Story"
Hayman, arr. — Dancing through the Years
Willson — 76 Trombones from "The Music Man"

Friday, 8:30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor:
Honegger — Prelude Fugue and Postlude
Beethoven — Symphony No. 7
Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor")
(Eugene Istomin, Soloist)

Saturday, at 8:30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux, conductor:
Beethoven — Music from "Prometheus"
Violin Concerto (Berl Senofsky, soloist)
Hindemith — Nobilissima Visione
Beethoven — Leonore Overture No. 3

Sunday, 2:30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor:
Walton — Johannesburg Festival Overture
Beethoven — Ninth Symphony
(Adele Addison, Blake Stern, Florence Kopleff, Donald Gramm)

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y.
NEW YORKER
D. 27,999 S. 28,943
AUG 3 1958

Final Concerts To Feature Beethoven

Music of Beethoven will be featured at the final weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the ~~Boston Symphony~~ orchestra in the Music ~~shed at~~ Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Charles Munch, music director, will conduct the concerts of Friday night, 8:30 o'clock, and next Sunday afternoon, 2:30 o'clock. The concert on Saturday night, 8:30 o'clock, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux. Soloists will include Eugene Istomin, pianist, Aug. 8, and Berl Senofsky, violinist, Aug. 9.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,156,137 - S. 3,586,789
AUG 3 1958

THEY DID IT! Ronald Radd (l.) and Edward Mulhare help tool "My Fair Lady" through its 1,000th performance on Wednesday evening at the Hellinger.

Berkshire Finale

The final weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the ~~Boston Symphony~~ in the Music ~~Shed at~~ Tanglewood, Lenox Mass., will feature music by Beethoven. Charles Munch will conduct on Friday evening and next Sunday afternoon, Pierre Monteux on Saturday night.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 399,044
AUG 3 - 1958

Berkshire Festival Finale

This coming week-end will mark the conclusion of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's ~~Berkshire Festival~~ at Tanglewood in Lenox. The programs will be as follows:

Wednesday at 8:30, Theater—Concert Hall. The Kroll Quartet. Haydn: Quartet in G minor, Op. 74, No. 3; Bartok: Quartet No. 2; Beethoven: Quartet in A minor, Op. 132.

Friday at 8:30, Music Shed. Charles Munch conducting. Honegger: Prelude, Fugue and Postlude; Beethoven: Seventh Symphony; "Emperor" Piano Concerto, soloist: Eugene Istomin.

Saturday at 8:30, Music Shed. Pierre Monteaux conducting. Beethoven: Music from "Prometheus"; Violin Concerto, soloist: Berl Senofsky; Hindemith: "Nobilissima Visione"; Beethoven: "Leonore" Overture No. 3.

Sunday, Aug. 10, at 2:30, Music Shed. Charles Munch conducting. Walton: Johannesburg Festival Overture; Beethoven: Ninth Symphony, soloists: Adele Addison, Blake Stern, Florence Kopleff, Donald Gramm. Berkshire Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson.

Music Review B. Eagle – Aug 5

Opera at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE OPERA department of the Berkshire Music Center presented the English version of a long-neglected opera of Gioacchino Rossini in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood last night for the first of two consecutive performances.

Boris Goldovsky, director of the department, made a very short speech before the curtain rose and introduced Elemer Nagy, the designer of the settings and of the lighting. The opera is "Count Ory," one of two Rossini wrote for the Paris opera almost exactly 130 years ago.

* * *

JUST HOW a dramatist of the eminence of Scribe, a man with such a knowledge of the tastes of an audience, could write such a silly and ludicrous libretto is almost incredible. Rossini's music is consistently vivacious and gay and gives the cast opportunities to sing in every conceivable florid manner, but the logic of their stage business is scarcely sophomoric.

The orchestra, selected from the students of the Center, was conducted by Wyn Morris and it was a major factor in the great success of the evening. The overture is a substantial composition and consists of three subjects which continue after the curtain rises.

* * *

THE STAGE settings consist of corrugated translucent glass panels. There is a wide one at the center rear and three to each side set obliquely as louvers. The slides which illuminate and throw designs upon them are so placed that there are no shadows. They can be changed in a flash and a regal masonry hall becomes a boudoir in an instant. The illusion thus created is not so applicable as painted scenery, but it supports the action adequately and saves time, space, and, undoubtedly, money.

The principal singers were outstandingly capable. John McCollum in the title role was superb. He depicted the cunning schemer almost as well as he sang, and had much occasion to use a high falsetto as the play, especially in the second act, becomes another "Charlie's Aunt." The Count tries to enter the bedroom of the Countess Fourmoutiers, sung by Angelica Lozada, whose wonderfully ornate singing was extremely effective. Rossini wrote many concerted numbers for this opera and, by this time, also had come to distrust singers ger allowed them to decorate and embellish his phrases themselves but insisted on writing in the ornamentation himself. He did not spare the vocalists, nor his audiences, however.

* * *

THE ENGLISH translation by Robert A. Simon was commissioned by the Juilliard Opera Theater and is of a chipper, Gilbert and Sullivan type. He has one of the Count's retainers ask "Can you bear with an air? For I cannot achieve this with recitative." And in another scene when the Count is thwarted by the fair lady's page, he exclaims: "Defeated by a page, out of my own book!"

The music is sprightly and the singing was excellent, but the scenes were too long. The second of the two acts begins with a scene in the Countess' salon with a group of 14 women which is interminable, for all its lovely singing. In the next scene the Count and his followers, disguised as female pilgrims, throw away the harmless milk and fruit which their hospitable hosts offer them and secretly partake of the products of the wine caves they discover. This is an hilarious scene, and at one point a tableau is effected like the Jordaens painting "Le Roi boit," but it, too, never stops. And so it goes with the farcical scene in the Countess' boudoir in which Ory has a vandeville stunt in confusing the page and her mistress.

* * *

THE COSTUMES by Leon Van Witsen are colorful and varied, but give the impression they may have been retrieved from several previous and heterogeneous productions.

This was a production on professional standards, and the performance enlisted contributions from every branch of theatrical facilities. The voices were maturely capable and included David Smith as Ory's friend, Gertrude Pepin as both a young peasant girl and a young noblewoman, Doris Okerson as the Countess' companion, Ronald Holgate as the Count's tutor, Nancy Williams as his page and George Tsandikos as his friend.

Wyn Morris deserves special commendation for the playing of the orchestra and the vital progress of whole performance. We are no longer surprised to have such productions under the sponsorship of Boris Goldovsky, but that does not prevent us from marveling each time anew that such a finished and enjoyable production can be achieved from scratch in only four or five weeks.

HARTFORD TIMES

TIMES, TUESDAY, AUGUST 5, 1958

Nagy-Designed Scenic Effects in Premiere

By TERE PASCONE

Lenox, Mass.—An overflow audience witnessed the American premiere of something old and the world premiere of something new in Theater-Concert Hall in Tanglewood last night. The double feature made for an interesting and very amusing evening.

The world premiere was the showing for the first time of the experimental scenic effects known as the "Nagy Multi-Projection System," designed by Dr. Elemer Nagy, head of the Opera Department of Hartt College of Music, University of Hartford.

The opera premiere, sung in English was the presentation for the first time in the United States of Gioacchino Rossini's two-act comic opera, "Count Ory" revived from the dust heap in 1952 at the Florence May Festival and two years later presented at the Edinburgh Festival, both times with spectacular success.

* * *

DR. NAGY'S basic idea—the projection of five scenic effects on a Corrulux shell with the use of 50 slides and 24 specially built projectors—came over successfully artistically and in the solution of technical problems.

It was an experiment, daring and revolutionary, and although a lot more research work will be needed to further its development, it gave promise of a new and different theater of tomorrow in which traditional lumber yard scenery of the past may bow to slide sets that can be carried about by traveling opera companies in one small satchel.

Also reflected were the possibilities of the freeing of the imagination of scenic designers in an art which has seen little change in the past 100 years.

Dr. Nagy's progress in his experiment unfolded panoramically as each of the five scenic moods were projected. The first, a traditional scene outside a castle proved too busy with detail and on the pale side. The second — the most daring of the evening—was a strong, overly-vivid, overly-colorful, impressionistic scene of a cave which had a startling, clashing effect on the viewer. But when the fourth and fifth scenes—the refectory and the bedroom—were presented a refinement and balance of artistry and color had been obtained with pleasing effect.

* * *

THE OPERA, staged by Dr. Boris Goldovsky, director of the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center, proved a delight musically. An example of Rossini's florid style, fresh and full of melody, the music with its elaborate and ingenious ensembles and surprising modulations in harmony, lived up to its reputation of being Rossini's most masterful comic opera. Based on an 11th Century French ballad, the story deals with the rakish Count Ory, who with his 12 knights attempts to invade the castle where live the Countess Fourmoutiers and 12 noblewomen, who have cloistered themselves until the return of their menfolk from the Crusades. As a hermit, in his first attempt, County Ory is unmasked. In his second attempt when he and his cavaliers appear as weary women pilgrims at the castle gates, they are admitted and then the rollicking fun begins within the cloistered walls.

The full, farcical possibilities of the opera, unfortunately, were not brought out by the stage direction in the first act. Movements by principals and chorus were meaningless and action was confined largely to the pointless picking up of chairs by singers and moving them from one side of the stage to the other. Adding to the bewilderment of the audience was the difficulty in following the English text—(it might as well have been sung in Italian for what one got out of it).

The perplexed state of patrons must have reached Dr. Goldovsky's ears, because during intermission he appeared on the stage and explained in witty, amusing fashion what the plot was all about.

* * *

THE SECOND ACT, however, moved faster and more convincingly as the student singers grasped the situations involved with gusto and enjoyment. And what was probably the most successful and hilarious portion of the opera was the scene in the castle dining room when the Count and his men have a gay old time for themselves—bedecked as women—filling themselves up with wine they had discovered from a cellar cache.

John McCollum gave a commendable performan Count Ory—a role wh taxing one, written in high register and cal times for almost a co tenor voice.

The English translati Robert Simon was disa ing and at times too and Sullivanesque rhymes.

Wynn Morris, student conductor, was outstanding in his direction of the Berkshire Music Center Student Orchestra.

The opera will be presented again tonight at 8:30 at Tanglewood.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
ESS CLIPPING BUREAU
Church Street - New York

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK, N. Y.

SEP 1958

ssini Novelty At Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 4.—The ten
ncy of the Opera Department of th
Berk Music Center to prese rare works was rewardin when its members, un con ce of Boris Goldovsky, P
th ssini's two-act opera "Co his work, the first of R o French operas, had its in Paris in 1828. After omposer was to write only opera, "William Tell", w s first performance a year early 40 years of almost co tive withdrawal by one o entially most productive com
the 19th century were to Neurasthenia, a certain indole cause of his wealth, legal bat unhappy love for Olympe P and bitterness because of the
of "William Tell" may have cause of this creative silence.
But at the time of "Cou
Rossini was still at the summ career. All Europe was at me is chiefly help smaller opera compani

without the expense and having to carry heavy st
with them. For this purpose
tion seems to be quite id fast scene changes can be a minimum of stage hands, little else to do but slides in the projectors.
the efficiency of this new achieved at the expense tiveness. The projections re ized "pictures", and the illusion
setting is largely a matter spectator's imagination. (An mosquito crawling over one lenses created something of a " ula" effect, not to speak of the trying to catch it.) Nevertheles schemes of the

5 Church Str

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y.
NEW YORKER
D. 27,999 S. 28,943

AUG 4 1958

Berkshire Concert Program Listed

Featuring the music of Beethoven, the program for the final weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra has been made known. Friday night's and Sunday afternoon's concerts will be conducted by Charles Munch, music director, and Saturday night's concert will be directed by Pierre Monteux. Eugene Istomin, pianist, will be the soloist Friday night, and Berl Senofsky, violinist, Saturday night.

Dr. Munch will open Friday night's concert with Honegger's Prelude, Fugue and Postlude, and Beethoven's Symphony No. 7. Mr. Istomin will be soloist in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5, "Emperor."

The concert on Saturday, conducted by Mr. Monteux, will open with music from "Prometheus" by Beethoven. Mr. Senofsky will be soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto. In the second half of the program Mr. Monteux will present Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" and Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3.

Dr. Munch will continue his regular custom of closing the Berkshire Festival season with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony next Sunday afternoon. Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass, with the Festival chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson. The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johannesburg Festival Overture.

The Boston Symphony orchestra's rehearsal on Saturday morning, 10 o'clock, will be open to the public for the benefit of the pension fund.

Tonight and tomorrow night 8:30 o'clock, in the Theater-Concert hall, the Tanglewood Opera department will present Rossini's comic opera, "Count Ory." The performances will be conducted by Wyn Morris and the title role of Count Ory will be sung by John McCollum, tenor.

The final concert in the Chamber music series on Wednesday night, 8:30 o'clock, will feature the Kroll quartet in a program which includes Haydn's Quartet in G minor, Op. 74, No. 3; Bartok's Quartet No. 2, Op. 17, and Beethoven's Quartet No. 15 in A minor, Op. 132.

Tanglewood-on-Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music center, will be conducted on Thursday night, between 6 and 11 o'clock. Concerts by the various departments of the school, including orchestra, opera, chamber music and choir will be presented, after which there will be picnic suppers on the lawn and a concert at 8:15 o'clock in the Music shed by the Boston Symphony orchestra and Boston Pops orchestra.

The final concert of the Berkshire Music Center orchestra will be given on Saturday afternoon, 3 o'clock, in the Music shed.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
POST-STANDARD
Circ. D. 89,399 - S. 97,610

AUG 3 1958

Final Weekend For Symphony

The final weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will feature music by Beethoven.

Charles Munch, music director, will conduct the concerts at 8:30 p.m. Friday, Aug. 8, and 2:30 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 10. The concert Saturday evening, Aug. 9, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux. Soloists will include Eugene Istomin, pianist (Aug. 8) and Berl Senofsky, violinist (Aug. 9).

The major production of the season for the Berkshire Center Opera Department will be Rossini's "Count Ory" which will receive two performances in the Theatre-Concert hall, tomorrow and Tuesday evenings.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 - S. 1,189,293

AUG 5 1958

ossini's 'The Count

By EDWARD DOWNES
Special to The New York Times.

ENOX, Mass., Aug. 4— Champagne must have n in Rossini's veins when wrote the sparkling comic era "The Count Ory," which students of the Berkshire sic Center Opera Department performed tonight in Theatre-Concert Hall at nglewood.

Four extremely gifted stunt stars sang the difficult rid roles, which recall some the livelier coloratura pasges of Rossini's "Barber of ville." In addition, the tenor n McCollum, formerly a dent here at the Berkshire sic Center, returned as an lumnus" to sing the deanding title role.

The opera was sung in an glish adaptation by Robert Simon of the original ench text of Eugene Scribe d Delestre-Poirson. The aptation was commissioned the Opera Department of Juilliard School in New rk, which released it for its st performance here. The illiard School has not yet esented the opera because the difficulty of casting the gh florid tenor part of the le role. Present plans call a production of "The unt Ory" by the school next ar.

•

Although the opera has en almost unknown to esent-day American operers, it was given in New rk 127 years ago, ree years after its emière. It was the first ossini's two French-age operas, the second g his "Guillaume Tell," was an instant success dly enough two-thirds music of "The Count y" had been a complete lure when it was first ard in Rossini's Italian-

---

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN
Circ. D. 703,449 - S. 882,925

AUG 5 1958

BERKSHIRE MUSIC FESTIVAL

Rossini's Opera in Scenic Shell

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 5.—Rossini's "Count Ory" became the first opera ever produced in a scenic shell and multi-projection stage last night. Presented by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, the production offered not only the performance of a little-known early 19th Century work but also the most advanced experimentation in 20th-century scenic design.

Created and developed by Elmer Nagy, the scenery consisted of a fibreglas shell on which 15 projectors, located behind, project whatever effect is desired. The innovation seeks to scrap bulky stage scenery which Dr. Nagy considers out of date.

That the experiment has definite possibilities became clear in the second act. The interiors used had illusion. At the moment, exteriors appear less successful, perhaps because too stylized. Abstractions may be too radical. The fact, however, that all the scenery consisted of a package of slides emerges as quite significantly practical.

Music Carries Act

As the first of two French operas by Rossini, "Count Ory" has more than a dash of sparkling burgundy. Only the music carries the first act.

As the plot thickens, interest picks up. That it ends in a bedroom farce is probably the French touch. The music is the thing. When it gets too florid however, quaintness steps in and makes the opera more a concert in costume than a piece of theatre.

As a student performance, this was earnest and good. It had a heaviness not conducive to making Rossini scintillate. Wyn Morris could have conducted with a lighter touch. John McCollum sang the difficult title role creditably.

Angelica Lozada caught interest for negotiating her florid vocalization skillfully. Ronald Holgate did the most substantial singing and acting. Boris Goldovsky's staging often lapsed into cuteness.

Among the many credits should be listed the Leadership Training Program of the New England Opera Theatre and the Ford Foundation which made the development of the new scenic materials possible.

Having twice reported on Van Cliburn's playing of the Tchaikovsky and Rachmaninoff concertos, I assume that his performances at Lewisohn Stadium were quite phenomenal last night. I hope that the post-season event achieved its purpose in helping balance Stadium Concerts' budget.

Music Review B. Eagle - Aug 5

Opera at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE OPERA department of the Berkshire Music Center presented the English version of a long-neglected opera of Gioacchino Rossini in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood last night for the first of two consecutive performances.

Boris Goldovsky, director of the department, made a very short speech before the curtain rose and introduced Elemer Nagy, the designer of the settings and of the lighting. The opera is "Count Ory," one of two Rossini wrote for the Paris opera almost exactly 130 years ago.

* * *

JUST HOW a dramatist of the eminence of Scribe, a man with such a knowledge of the tastes of an audience, could write such a silly and ludicrous libretto is almost incredible. Rossini's music is consistently vivacious and gay and gives the cast opportunities to sing in every conceivable florid manner, but the logic of their stage business is scarcely sophomoric.

The orchestra, selected from the students of the Center, was conducted by Wyn Morris and it was a major factor in the great success of the evening. The overture is a substantial composition and consists of three subjects which continue after the curtain rises.

* * *

THE STAGE settings consist of corrugated translucent glass panels. There is a wide one at the center rear and three to each side set obliquely as louvers. The slides which illuminate and throw designs upon them are so placed that there are no shadows. They can be changed in a flash and a regal masonry hall becomes a boudoir in an instant. The illusion thus created is not so applicable as painted scenery, but it supports the action adequately and saves time, space, and, undoubtedly, money.

The principal singers were outstandingly capable. John McCollum in the title role was superb. He depicted the cunning schemer almost as well as he sang, and had much occasion to use a high falsetto as the play, especially in the second act, becomes another "Charlie's Aunt." The Count tries to enter the bedroom of the Countess Fourmoutiers, sung by Angelica Lozada, whose wonderfully ornate singing was extremely effective. Rossini wrote many concerted numbers for this opera and, by this time, also had come to distrust singers so much that he no longer allowed them to decorate and embellish his phrases themselves but insisted on writing in the ornamentation himself. He did not spare the vocalists, nor his audiences, however.

* * *

THE ENGLISH translation by Robert A. Simon was commissioned by the Juilliard Opera Theater and is of a chipper, Gilbert and Sullivan type. He has one of the Count's retainers ask "Can you bear with an air? For I cannot achieve this with recitative." And in another scene when the Count is thwarted by the fair lady's page, he exclaims: "Defeated by a page, out of my own book!"

The music is sprightly and the singing was excellent, but the scenes were too long. The second of the two acts begins with a scene in the Countess' salon with a group of 14 women which is interminable, for all its lovely singing. In the next scene the Count and his followers, disguised as female pilgrims, throw away the harmless milk and fruit which their hospitable hosts offer them and secretly partake of the products of the wine caves they discover. This is an hilarious scene, and at one point a tableau is effected like the Jordaens painting "Le Roi boit," but it, too, never stops. And so it goes with the farcical scene in the Countess' boudoir in which Ory has a vandeville stunt in confusing the page and her mistress.

* * *

THE COSTUMES by Leon Van Witsen are colorful and varied, but give the impression they may have been retrieved from several previous and heterogeneous productions.

This was a production on professional standards, and the performance enlisted contributions from every branch of theatrical facilities. The voices were maturely capable and included David Smith as Ory's friend, Gertrude Pepin as both a young peasant girl and a young noblewoman, Doris Okerson as the Countess' companion, Ronald Holgate as the Count's tutor, Nancy Williams as his page and George Tsandikos as his friend.

Wyn Morris deserves special commendation for the playing of the orchestra and the vital progress of whole performance. We are no longer surprised to have such productions under the sponsorship of Boris Goldovsky, but that does not prevent us from marveling each time anew that such a finished and enjoyable production can be achieved from scratch in only four or five weeks.

HARTFORD TIMES

TIMES, TUESDAY, AUGUST 5, 1958

Nagy-Designed Scenic Effects in Premiere

By TERE PASCONE

Lenox, Mass.—An overflow audience witnessed the American premiere of something old and the world premiere of something new in Theater-Concert Hall in Tanglewood last night. The double feature made for an interesting and very amusing evening.

The world premiere was the showing for the first time of the experimental scenic effects known as the "Nagy Multi-Projection System," designed by Dr. Elemer Nagy, head of the Opera Department of Hartt College of Music, University of Hartford.

The opera premiere, sung in English was the presentation for the first time in the United States of Gioacchino Rossini's two-act comic opera, "Count Ory" revived from the dust heap in 1952 at the Florence May Festival and two years later presented at the Edinburgh Festival, both times with spectacular success.

* * *

DR. NAGY'S basic idea—the projection of five scenic effects on a Corrulux shell with the use of 50 slides and 24 specially built projectors—came over successfully artistically and in the solution of technical problems.

It was an experiment, daring and revolutionary, and although a lot more research work will be needed to further its development, it gave promise of a new and different theater of tomorrow in which traditional lumber yard scenery of the past may bow to slide sets that can be carried about by traveling opera companies in one small satchel.

Also reflected were the possibilities of the freeing of the imagination of scenic designers in an art which has seen little change in the past 100 years.

Dr. Nagy's progress in his experiment unfolded panoramically as each of the five scenic moods were projected. The first, a traditional scene outside a castle proved too busy with detail and on the pale side. The second — the most daring of the evening—was a strong, overly-vivid, overly-colorful, impressionistic scene of a cave which had a startling, clashing effect on the viewer. But when the fourth and fifth scenes—the refectory and the bedroom—were presented a refinement and balance of artistry and color had been obtained with pleasing effect.

* * *

THE OPERA, staged by Dr. Boris Goldovsky, director of the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center, proved a delight musically. An example of Rossini's florid style, fresh and full of melody, the music with its elaborate and ingenious ensembles and surprising modulations in harmony, lived up to its reputation of being Rossini's most masterful comic opera. Based on an 11th Century French ballad, the story deals with the rakish Count Ory, who with his 12 knights attempts to invade the castle where live the Countess Fourmoutiers and 12 noblewomen, who have cloistered themselves until the return of their menfolk from the Crusades. As a hermit, in his first attempt, County Ory is unmasked. In his second attempt when he and his cavaliers appear as weary women pilgirms at the castle gates, they are admitted and then the rollicking fun begins within the cloistered walls.

The full, farcical possibilities of the opera, unfortunately, were not brought out by the stage direction in the first act. Movements by principals and chorus were meaningless and action was confined largely to the pointless picking up of chairs by singers and moving them from one side of the stage to the other. Adding to the bewilderment of the audience was the difficulty in following the English text—(it might as well have been sung in Italian for what one got out of it).

The perplexed state of patrons must have reached Dr. Goldovsky's ears, because during intermission he appeared on the stage and explained in witty, amusing fashion what the plot was all about.

* * *

THE SECOND ACT, however, moved faster and more convincingly as the student singers grasped the situations involved with gusto and enjoyment. And what was probably the most successful and hilarious portion of the opera was the scene in the castle dining room when the Count and his men have a gay old time for themselves—bedecked as women—filling themselves up with wine they had discovered from a cellar cache.

John McCollum gave a commendable performan Count Ory—a role wh taxing one, written in high register and cal times for almost a tenor voice.

The English translati Robert Simon was disa ing and at times too and Sullivanesque rhymes.

Wynn Morris, studer ductor, was outstanding in his direction of the Berkshire Music Center Student Orchestra.

The opera will be presented again tonight at 8:30 at Tanglewood.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y.
NEW YORKER
D. 27,999 S. 28,943

AUG 4 1958

Berkshire Concert Program Listed

Featuring the music of Beethoven, the program for the final weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra has been made known. Friday night's and Sunday afternoon's concerts will be conducted by Charles Munch, music director, and Saturday night's concert will be directed by Pierre Monteux. Eugene Istomin, pianist, will be the soloist Friday night, and Berl Senofsky, violinist, Saturday night.

Dr. Munch will open Friday night's concert with Honegger's Prelude, Fugue and Postlude, and Beethoven's Symphony No. 7. Mr. Istomin will be soloist in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5, "Emperor."

The concert on Saturday, conducted by Mr. Monteux, will open with music from "Prometheus" by Beethoven. Mr. Senofsky will be soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto. In the second half of the program Mr. Monteux will present Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" and Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3.

Dr. Munch will continue his regular custom of closing the Berkshire Festival season with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony next Sunday afternoon. Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass, with the Festival chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson. The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johannesburg Festival Overture.

The Boston Symphony orchestra's rehearsal on Saturday morning, 10 o'clock, will be open to the public for the benefit of the pension fund.

Tonight and tomorrow night 8:30 o'clock, in the Theater-Concert hall, the Tanglewood Opera department will present Rossini's comic opera, "Count Ory." The performances will be conducted by Wyn Morris and the title role of Count Ory will be sung by John McCollum, tenor.

The final concert in the Chamber music series on Wednesday night, 8:30 o'clock, will feature the Kroll quartet in a program which includes Haydn's Quartet in G minor, Op. 74, No. 3; Bartok's Quartet No. 2, Op. 17, and Beethoven's Quartet No. 15 in A minor, Op. 132.

Tanglewood-on-Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music center, will be conducted on Thursday night, between 6 and 11 o'clock. Concerts by the various departments of the school, including orchestra, opera, chamber music and choir will be presented, after which there will be picnic suppers on the lawn and a concert at 8:15 o'clock in the Music shed by the Boston Symphony orchestra and Boston Pops orchestra.

The final concert of the Berkshire Music Center orchestra will be given on Saturday afternoon, 3 o'clock, in the Music shed.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
POST-STANDARD
Circ. D. 89,399 - S. 97,610

AUG 3 1958

Final Weekend For Symphony

The final weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will feature music by Beethoven.

Charles Munch, music director, will conduct the concerts at 8:30 p.m. Friday, Aug. 8, and 2:30 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 10. The concert Saturday evening, Aug. 9, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux. Soloists will include Eugene Istomin, pianist (Aug. 8) and Berl Senofsky, violinist (Aug. 9).

The major production of the season for the Berkshire Center Opera Department will be Rossini's "Count Ory" which will receive two performances in the Theatre-Concert hall, tomorrow and Tuesday evenings.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
RESS CLIPPING BUREAU
Church Street - New York

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK, N. Y.

SEP 1958

7

ssini Novelty At Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 4.—The ten
ncy of the Opera Department of t Berksh usic Center to pres rarel works was rewardin con when its members, un
the e of Boris Goldovsky, se ini's two-act opera "C O s work, the first of
o French operas, had its n Paris in 1828. After nposer was to write only opera, "William Tell", first performance a year
arly 40 years of almost co ative withdrawal by one entially most productive co
the 19th century were to urasthenia, a certain indol cause of his wealth, legal ba unhappy love for Olympe and bitterness because of th
of "William Tell" may have cause of this creative silenc
But at the time of "Co
Rossini was still at the sum career. All Europe was a

Th
me is chiefly de help smaller opera compani
without the expense and
having to carry heavy st
with them. For this purpose
tion seems to be quite id
fast scene changes can be ha
a minimum of stage hands, little else to do but "exch
slides in the projectors.
the efficiency of this new achieved at the expense of tiveness. The projections rem
ized "pictures", and the illusion
setting is largely a matter spectator's imagination. (An in mosquito crawling over one lenses created something of a ula" effect, not to speak of th trying to catch it.) Neverthele schemes of the

---

5 Church Stre

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 - S. 1,189,293

AUG 5 1958

ossini's 'The Count

By EDWARD DOWNES
Special to The New York Times.

ENOX, Mass., Aug. 4—Champagne must have in Rossini's veins when wrote the sparkling comic ra "The Count Ory," which students of the Berkshire sic Center Opera Depart-performed tonight in Theatre-Concert Hall at nglewood.
Four extremely gifted stu-
t stars sang the difficult rid roles, which recall some the livelier coloratura pas-es of Rossini's "Barber of ville." In addition, the tenor n McCollum, formerly a dent here at the Berkshire sic Center, returned as an umnus" to sing the de-nding title role.
The opera was sung in an glish adaptation by Robert Simon of the original nch text of Eugene Scribe Delestre-Poirson. The ptation was commissioned the Opera Department of Juilliard School in New rk, which released it for its t performance here. The lliard School has not yet sented the opera because the difficulty of casting the h florid tenor part of the e role. Present plans call a production of "The unt Ory" by the school next r.

•

Although the opera has n almost unknown to sent-day American ers, it
rk 127 years ago, ee years after its mière. It was the fi ssini's two French ge operas, the second his "Guillaume Tell," was an instant succes
dly enough, two-thirds o music of "The Coun
y" had been a complete ure when it was first rd in Rossini's Italian-

---

165 Church Street - ...

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN
Circ. D. 703,449 - S. 882,925

AUG 5 1958

BERKSHIRE MUSIC FESTIVAL

Rossini's Opera in Scenic Shell

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 5.—Rossini's "Count Ory" became the first opera ever produced in a scenic shell and multi-projection stage last night. Presented by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, the production offered not only the performance of a little-known early 19th Century work but also the most advanced experimentation in 20th-century scenic design.

Created and developed by Elmer Nagy, the scenery consisted of a fibreglas shell on which 15 projectors, located behind, project whatever effect is desired. The innovation seeks to scrap bulky stage scenery which Dr. Nagy considers out of date.

That the experiment has definite possibilities became clear in the second act. The interiors used had illusion. At the moment, exteriors appear less successful, perhaps because too stylized. Abstractions may be too radical. The fact, however, that all the scenery consisted of a package of slides emerges as quite significantly practical.

Music Carries Act

As the first of two French operas by Rossini, "Count Ory" has more than a dash of sparkling burgundy. Only the music carries the first act.

As the plot thickens, interest picks up. That it ends in a bedroom farce is probably the French touch. The music is the thing. When it gets too florid however, quaintness steps in and makes the opera more a concert in costume than a piece of theatre.

As a student performance, this was earnest and good. It had a heaviness not conducive to making Rossini scintillate. Wyn Morris could have conducted with a lighter touch. John McCollum sang the difficult title role creditably.

Angelica Lozada caught interest for negotiating her florid vocalization skillfully. Ronald Holgate did the most substantial singing and acting. Boris Goldovsky's staging often lapsed into cuteness.

Among the many credits should be listed the Leadership Training Program of the New England Opera Theatre and the Ford Foundation which made the development of the new scenic materials possible.

Having twice reported on Van Cliburn's playing of the Tchaikovsky and Rachmaninoff concertos, I assume that his performances at Lewisohn Stadium were quite phenomenal last night. I hope that the post-season event achieved its purpose in helping balance Stadium Concerts' budget.

[192]

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK, N. Y.

Rossini No... At Tang...

... the ... sent ... ingly ... under ... pre- ... Count ... Ros- ... pre- ... that. ... one ... which ... later. ... complete ... of the ... composers ... follow. ... be- ... an ... Pelissier. ... failure ... in the ... ce. ... Count Ory", ... summit of his ... at his feet, ... and pictures needed. ... still in its experi- ... stage is chiefly designed to ... opera companies to travel ... the expense and bother of ... to carry heavy stage props ... them. For this purpose the solution seems to be quite ideal, since ... scene changes can be handled by a minimum of stage hands, who have little else to do but exchange the slides in the projectors. Naturally, the efficiency of this new system is achieved at the expense of its effectiveness. The projections remain stylized "pictures", and the illusion of the setting is largely a matter of the spectator's imagination. (An innocent mosquito crawling over one of the lenses created something of a "Dracula" effect; not to speak of the hand trying to catch it.) Nevertheless, the ... schemes of the slides, ... pheric ... the ... stage ... John McCollum, who sang the title role. Encompassing extremely difficult fioriture passages, this part calls actually for an extinct vocal type, the tenor da grazia. Mr. McCollum negotiated his agile lines with conscientious artistry, although his well-shaped voice was not always completely able to master the physical demands of the part. Angelica Lozada sang the role of Countess Fourmoutiers commendably, save for a slight unsteadiness in attack and breath control. Nancy Williams was a light-hearted and secure-voiced page, Isolier, and Ronald Holgate gave a histrionically and vocally pleasing account of the Count's tutor.

Boris Goldovsky's staging had spirit and style, which could not be always said about Wyn Morris' conducting.

Lenox, Mass.—The final Tanglewood week-end, which closed Aug. 10, was under the direction of Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux.

On Aug. 8, Charles Munch conducted a program consisting of Honegger's "Prelude, Fugue, and Postlude", Beethoven's Symphony No. 7, and Piano Concerto No. 5. Eugene Istomin was the soloist.

On Aug. 9, Pierre Monteux led the Boston Symphony in Beethoven's "Prometheus" Overture, Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione", and Beethoven's "Lenore" Overture No. 3. Berl Senofsky was the soloist in Beethoven's Violin Concerto.

The concluding concert on Aug. 10 featured the Johannesburg Festival Overture by Walton, and the Ninth Symphony by Beethoven.

The week-end also marked the conclusion of the six American composer profiles, presented under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation. The series featured works by Charles Ives, Roger Sessions, Elliott Carter, Milton Babbitt, Marc Blitzstein, Leon Kirchner, Lukas Foss, and Aaron Copland. The works were performed by the Fromm Fellowship Players.

...HKEEPSIE, N.Y
...YORKER
...990 S. 28,943
AUG 4 1958

...shire Concert
...ram Listed

---

165 Church St...

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 - S. 1,189,293

AUG 5 1958

Rossini's 'The Count Ory' Sung by Students at Tanglewood

By EDWARD DOWNES
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 4— Champagne must have run in Rossini's veins when he wrote the sparkling comic opera "The Count Ory," which the students of the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department performed tonight in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood.

Four extremely gifted student stars sang the difficult florid roles which recall some of the livelier coloratura passages of Rossini's "Barber of Seville." In addition, the tenor John McCollum, formerly a student here at the Berkshire Music Center, returned as an "alumnus" to sing the demanding title role.

John McCollum

The opera was sung in an English adaptation by Robert A. Simon of the original French text of Eugene Scribe and Delestre-Poirson. The adaptation was commissioned by the Opera Department of the Juilliard School in New York, which released it for its first performance here. The Juilliard School has not yet presented the opera because of the difficulty of casting the high florid tenor part of the title role. Present plans call for a production of "The Count Ory" by the school next year.

•

Although the opera has been almost unknown to present-day American operagoers, it was given in New York 127 years ago, only three years after its Paris première. It was the first of Rossini's two French-language operas, the second being his "Guillaume Tell," and it was an instant success. Oddly enough, two-thirds of the music of "The Count Ory" had been a complete failure when it was first heard in Rossini's Italian-language opera buffa "Il Viaggio a Reims," produced in Paris in 1825. Rossini simply added a dozen new numbers and a libretto in the language his audience understood and he had a hit on his hands.

Modern revivals of this charming work began in Paris in 1926. Since then it has been done in Italy and at the Glyndebourne Festival and it has been recorded.

In addition to presenting a little-known work, tonight's performance was the first to use settings consisting chiefly of colored slides projected on a series of translucent, lightweight panels devised by Elmer Nagy of the Hart School in Hartford. The practical execution of Mr. Nagy's device here at the Berkshire Center was made possible by a grant from the Ford Foundation.

Both Mr. Nagy and Boris Goldovsky, head of the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department, emphasized the experimental character of this first performance. Four days ago, Mr. Goldovsky said, they still had not been sure the panels would work. They did tonight and were obviously valuable for the instant changes of scene they made possible as well as for their suitability for small operatic touring companies with limited transportation.

Their chief drawback is that the stage cannot really be brilliantly lighted without somewhat dulling of colors of the slides, which are projected on the panels from behind. In addition they are obviously projected "pictures" and hence force the stage designer to use stylized rather than realistic sets.

One was amazed that the student singers, who included Angelica Lozada as the countess, Nancy Williams as the page of Count Ory, Ronald Holgate as the count's tutor, and David Smith as the count's friend, Raimbaud, coped as fluently as they did with Rossini's swift coloratura and patter songs. In a sense their task was made a little easier by the often slow tempi of the conductor, Wyn Morris. On the other hand these very tempi robbed the performance of much of the vertiginous zest and glitter, as well as the elegance that are inherent in the music.

Miss Lozada came perhaps nearest to a true Rossinian brilliance, but Miss Williams excelled in the lyricism and grace, that are also essential to the style. Mr. Smith and Mr. Holgate were engaging mimes as well as singers, and Mr. McCollum's bright and agile voice was a main support of the performance. Despite the inevitable limitations of the occasion, it was a thoroughly enjoyable evening.

OPERA PROGRAM AT TANGLEWOOD EXCITING EVENT

New Scenery Technique Also Feature of Music Center Attraction

By WILLARD M. CLARK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox — The opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, Boris Goldovsky, director, can always be depended on to do something exciting and so it was Monday night when Rossini's seldom heard opera "Count Ory" was staged and sung by members of the department.

Projected Settings

Equally exciting was the first appearance of the Nagy Multiproduction System scenery. It consisted of seven blank panels upon which designs were thrown by 15 projectors back of them. The results reminded one of huge picture postcards. The advantage, of course, is the speed with which scenes may be changed and the easy method of transportation.

Rossini's opera has enough melodies in it to furnish a half dozen operas. There are some stunning ensemble numbers, duets and solo arias. The plot is slim and the opera was sung in an English translation by Robert A. Simon. Whether or not the audience got the majority of the words, it did seem pleased with the colorful, often gorgeous costumes and the beauty of some of the voices, notably the soprano of Angelica Lozada, the Count Ory of John McCollum; the fine base of Ronald Nolgate and mezzo soprano Doris Okerson.

The music is true Rossini, bright, embellished and always tuneful. Even the basso is required to trill. Mr. McCollum, for most of the evening, sang sturdily, often resorting to falsetto at the top of his range. A lighter voice could have handled this music more easily. Angelica Lozada, in the leading feminine role was able to encompass the taxing vocal range and the voice was flexible enough to handle the embellishments. Ronald Holkate, as tutor to Count Ory, is a huge man with a big voice. As always with a Goldovsky production, the action was natural and the stage movement fluid.

Elmer Nagy, who was responsible for the scenery, told the audience that he had studied the project for some 20 years and expressed his thanks to those who made it possible for him to use these ideas in this performance. Further refined, this multiproduction system may well have an important place in American theater.

Leo Van Witsen was responsible for the colorful, attractive costumes. The opera will be repeated tomorrow night.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 60,734

AUG 5 1958

Music: 'Count Ory' Featured At Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — Stunning and dramatic backgrounds, framing a ribald comedy, was Rossini's two-act opera, "Count Ory" that received the first of two performances last night in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood.

It was a presentation by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, Boris Goldovsky, director. A student orchestra of 46 was conducted by Wyn Morris.

Settings and lighting were designed by Elmer Nagy, and costumes by Leo Van Witsen.

Experimental Project

In his inevitable curtain spech, Goldovsky identified the project as a "first" in the musical theater. It is an important experiment that was started here last summer. Namely, this innovation in backgrounds is intended to do away with bulky scenery which is difficult to handle and expensive to transport.

Specifically, a wide fiberglass panel is in the rear of the stage, and three narrower panels on either side. Behind the panels are 15 projectors which produce the different effects needed.

Startling Effect

The effect is startling, to say the least. In a matter of seconds what was a castle in the background becomes a series of abstractions — then the castle's interior.

We can't say that the medium is a novelty, because it does have a practical side. But the illusions are only partly fulfilled. There was a bit too much business with projectors last night. At the start, the castle scene appears in sections which seemed to have no special significance other than to emphasize that it was done with lights.

Nagy joined Goldovsky in the curtain speech-making and went on to some length explaining that this method went back to the 17th century, and that he felt it would revolutionize operatic production.

Many Other Innovations

The center opera department has distinguished itself time and again, with all manner of innovations — first American productions of foreign and domestic works, English translations. and sparkling visual masterpieces.

"Count Ory" chalks up another. It isn't the best of Rossiniana and is frequently reminiscent of better things, but it has the typical zest. The English translation is tastily and smartly done by Robert A. Simon, except for a few obvious plays on words and some incongruous contemporary references.

The story itself is a potpourri of bed-ridden gimmicks of the 18th century — wholesale impersonations with a little Boccaccio seasoning.

First Presented 1828

Briefly, the yarn rotates around Count Ory and the Countess Fourmontiers. It's in France at the time of the Crusades. In 1828, when "Ory" was first produced, Paris audiences were very susceptible to women who vowed chastity and they found it quite plausible that an enamoured male should enter a ladies' home disguised as a nun.

The count loves the countess. She has sworn off men until her brother returns from the Crusades. So she loads up her castle with virtuous wives who are awaiting their husbands' return. The opera has the inevitable page with whom the countess falls in love.

Ory tries to crash the inner sanctum in the disguise of a hermit and later as a lady pilgrim. So do 14 other men. A good time is had by all until the husbands' return, whereupon, the visiting "gentlemen" beat a hasty retreat through the wine cellar.

Tenor Wasted

John McCollum was Count Ory. This was not his "Cup of Tea" although he did remarkably well with the role. His fine tenor voice was all but scrapped. He virtually falsettoed his way through the hermit score and the female impersonation.

It wouldn't be Rossini without a subterranean bass. In this production he's Ronald Holgate who sings the role of Ory's tutor. He is given superfluous action but it was largely compensated for with a thoroughly attractive vocal performance.

Coloratura Spotty

Angelica Lozada was an ornamental Countess Fourmoutiers. It's a difficult coloratura score which she sang with fluency and beautiful tone, if a bit insecurely in spots.

Other roles were taken by David Smith, Gertrude Pepin, Doris okerson, Nancy Williams (the page) in which she projected a pleasing voice but was pretty consistently behind the baton, and George Tsandikos.

The chorus of 22 was exuberant, vocally brilliant, and gorgeously attired.

"Count Ory" was a brave attempt and inspired. The new medium of producing illusion has immense possibilities. and no doubt will realize them when it is perfected — which seems a certainty.

[192]

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK, N. Y.

SEP 1958

Rossini Nov[illegible] At Tang[illegible]

L[illegible]x, M[illegible] —The tendency [illegible] the [illegible] of the present Berk[illegible] Music [illegible] rewardingly rarel[illegible] heard work[illegible] under [illegible] Goldovsky, pre[illegible] a "Count [illegible] of Ros[illegible] Ory [illegible] its pre[illegible] After that, [illegible] only one [illegible] which [illegible] a year later. [illegible] almost complete [illegible] of the [illegible] composers [illegible] to follow. [illegible] a certain indolence be[illegible] legal battles, an [illegible] Olympe Pelissier, [illegible] because of the failure [illegible] William [illegible] may have been the [illegible] this creative silence. But at the time of "Count Ory", Rossini was still at the summit of his career. All Europe was at his feet, [illegible] [illegible] and pictures [illegible]. This new device, still in its experimental stage, is chiefly designed to help smaller opera companies to travel without the expense and bother of having to carry heavy stage props with them. For this purpose the solution seems to be quite ideal, since fast scene changes can be handled by a minimum of stage hands, who have little else to do but exchange the slides in the projectors. Naturally, the efficiency of this new system is achieved at the expense of its effectiveness. The projections remain stylized "pictures", and the illusion of the setting is largely a matter of the spectator's imagination. (An innocent mosquito crawling over one of the lenses created something of a "Dracula" effect, not to speak of the hand trying to catch it.) Nevertheless, the delicate color schemes of the slides, combined with some atmospheric lighting produced, especially in the second act, moments of fanciful stage conception.

The singers were headed by John McCollum, who sang the title role. Encompassing extremely difficult fioriture passages, this part calls actually for an extinct vocal type, the tenore da grazia. Mr. McCollum negotiated his agile lines with conscientious artistry, although his well-shaped voice was not always completely able to master the physical demands of the part. Angelica Lozada sang the role of Countess Fourmoutiers commendably, save for a slight unevenness in attack and breath control. Nancy Williams was a light-hearted and secure-voiced page, Isolier, and Ronald Holgate gave a histrionically and vocally pleasing account of the Count's tutor.

Boris Goldovsky's staging had spirit and style, which could not be always said about Wyn Morris' conducting.

Lenox, Mass.—The [illegible] Tanglewood week-end, which closed [illegible] was under the direction of Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux.

On Aug. 8, Charles Munch conducted a program consisting of Honegger's "Prelude, Fugue, and Postlude", Beethoven's Symphony No. [illegible], and Piano Concerto No. 3. Eugene Istomin was the soloist.

On Aug. 9, Pierre Monteux led the Boston Symphony in Beethoven's "Prometheus" Overture, Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione", and Beethoven's "Lenore" Overture No. 3. Berl Senofsky was the soloist in Beethoven's Violin Concerto.

The concluding concert on Aug. 10 featured the Johannesburg Festival Overture by Walton, and the Ninth Symphony by Beethoven.

The week-end also marked the conclusion of the six American composer profiles, presented under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation. The series featured works by Charles Ives, Roger Sessions, Elliott Carter, Milton Babbitt, Marc Blitzstein, Leon Kirchner, Lukas Foss, and Aaron Copland. The works were performed by the Fromm Fellowship Players.

SHKEEPSIE, N.Y
YORKER
7,090 S. 28,943
AUG 4 1958

shire Concert ram Listed

Ory' Sung by Students at Tanglewood

John McCollum

, Aug. 4— Champagne must have un in Rossini's veins when e wrote the sparkling comic opera "The Count Ory," which the students of the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department performed tonight in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood.

Four extremely gifted student stars sang the difficult florid roles, which recall some of the livelier coloratura passages of Rossini's "Barber of Seville." In addition, the tenor John McCollum, formerly a student here at the Berkshire Music Center, returned as an "alumnus" to sing the demanding title role.

The opera was sung in an English adaptation by Robert A. Simon of the original French text of Eugene Scribe and Delestre-Poirson. The adaptation was commissioned by the Opera Department of the Juilliard School in New York, which released it for its first performance here. The Juilliard School has not yet presented the opera because of the difficulty of casting the high florid tenor part of the title role. Present plans call for a production of "The Count Ory" by the school next year.

•

Although the opera has been almost unknown to present-day American operagoers, it was given in New York 127 years ago, only three years after its Paris première. It was the first of Rossini's two French-language operas, the second being his "Guillaume Tell," and it was an instant success. Oddly enough, two-thirds of the music of "The Count Ory" had been a complete failure when it was first heard in Rossini's Italian-language opera buffa "Il Viaggio a Reims," produced in Paris in 1825. Rossini simply added a dozen new numbers and a libretto in the language his audience understood and he had a hit on his hands.

Modern revivals of this charming work began in Paris in 1926. Since then it has been done in Italy and at the Glyndebourne Festival and it has been recorded.

In addition to presenting a little-known work, tonight's performance was the first to use settings consisting chiefly of colored slides projected on a series of translucent, lightweight panels devised by Elmer Nagy of the Hart School in Hartford. The practical execution of Mr. Nagy's device here at the Berkshire Center was made possible by a grant from the Ford Foundation.

Both Mr. Nagy and Boris Goldovsky, head of the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department, emphasized the experimental character of this first performance. Four days ago, Mr. Goldovsky said, they still had not been sure the panels would work. They did tonight and were obviously valuable for the instant changes of scene they made possible as well as for their suitability for small operatic touring companies with limited transportation.

Their chief drawback is that the stage cannot really be brilliantly lighted without somewhat dulling of colors of the slides, which are projected on the panels from behind. In addition they are obviously projected "pictures" and hence force the stage designer to use stylized rather than realistic sets.

One was amazed that the student singers, who included Angelica Lozada as the countess, Nancy Williams as the page of Count Ory, Ronald Holgate as the count's tutor, and David Smith as the count's friend, Raimbaud, coped as fluently as they did with Rossini's swift coloratura and patter songs. In a sense their task was made a little easier by the often slow tempi of the conductor, Wyn Morris. On the other hand these very tempi robbed the performance of much of the vertiginous zest and glitter, as well as the elegance that are inherent in the music.

Miss Lozada came perhaps nearest to a true Rossinian brilliance, but Miss Williams excelled in the [illegible] and grace, that [illegible] essential to the style. Mr. Smith and Mr. Holgate were engaging mimes as well as singers, and Mr. McCollum's bright and agile voice was a main support of the performance. Despite the inevitable limitations of the occasion, it was a thoroughly enjoyable evening.

OPERA PROGRAM AT TANGLEWOOD EXCITING EVENT

New Scenery Technique Also Feature of Music Center Attraction

By WILLARD M. CLARK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox — The opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, Boris Goldovsky, director, can always be depended on to do something exciting and so it was Monday night when Rossini's seldom heard opera "Count Ory" was staged and sung by members of the department.

Projected Settings

Equally exciting was the first appearance of the Nagy Multiproduction System scenery. It consisted of seven blank panels upon which designs were thrown by 15 projectors back of them. The results reminded one of huge picture postcards. The advantage, of course, is the speed with which scenes may be changed and the easy method of transportation.

Rossini's opera has enough melodies in it to furnish a half dozen operas. There are some stunning ensemble numbers, duets and solo arias. The plot is slim and the opera was sung in an English translation by Robert A. Simon. Whether or not the audience got the majority of the words, it did seem pleased with the colorful, often gorgeous costumes and the beauty of some of the voices, notably the soprano of Angelica Lozada, the Count Ory of John McCollum; the fine base of Ronald Nolgate and mezzo soprano Doris Okerson.

The music is true Rossini, bright, embellished and always tuneful. Even the basso is required to trill. Mr. McCollum, for most of the evening, sang sturdily, often resorting to falsetto at the top of his range. A lighter voice could have handled this music more easily. Angelica Lozada, in the leading feminine role was able to encompass the taxing vocal range and the voice was flexible enough to handle the embellishments. Ronald Holkate, as tutor to Count Ory, is a huge man with a big voice. As always with a Goldovsky production, the action was natural and the stage movement fluid.

Elmer Nagy, who was responsible for the scenery, told the audience that he had studied the project for some 20 years and expressed his thanks to those who made it possible for him to use these ideas in this performance. Further refined, this multiproduction system may well have an important place in American theater.

Leo Van Witsen was responsible for the colorful, attractive costumes. The opera will be repeated tomorrow night.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4[illegible]

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 60,734

AUG 5 1958

Music: 'Count Ory' Featured At Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — Stunning and dramatic backgrounds, framing a ribald comedy, was Rossini's two-act opera, "Count Ory" that received the first of two performances last night in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood.

It was a presentation by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, Boris Goldovsky, director. A student orchestra of 46 was conducted by Wyn Morris.

Settings and lighting were designed by Elmer Nagy, and costumes by Leo Van Witsen.

Experimental Project

In his inevitable curtain spech, Goldovsky identified the project as a "first" in the musical theater. It is an important experiment that was started here last summer. Namely, this innovation in backgrounds is intended to do away with bulky scenery which is difficult to handle and expensive to transport.

Specifically, a wide fiberglass panel is in the rear of the stage, and three narrower panels on either side. Behind the panels are 15 projectors which produce the different effects needed.

Startling Effect

The effect is startling, to say the least. In a matter of seconds what was a castle in the background becomes a series of abstractions — then the castle's interior.

We can't say that the medium is a novelty, because it does have a practical side. But the illusions are only partly fulfilled. There was a bit too much business with projectors last night. At the start, the castle scene appears in sections which seemed to have no special significance other than to emphasize that it was done with lights.

Nagy joined Goldovsky in the curtain speech-making and went on to some length explaining that this method went back to the 17th century, and that he felt it would revolutionize operatic production.

Many Other Innovations

The center opera department has distinguished itself time and again, with all manner of innovations — first American productions of foreign and domestic works, English translations, and sparkling visual masterpieces.

"Count Ory" chalks up another. It isn't the best of Rossiniana and is frequently reminiscent of better things, but it has the typical zest. The English translation is tastily and smartly done by Robert A. Simon, except for a few obvious plays on words and some incongruous contemporary references.

The story itself is a potpourri of bed-ridden gimmicks of the 18th century — wholesale impersonations with a little Boccaccio seasoning.

First Presented 1828

Briefly, the yarn rotates around Count Ory and the Countess Fourmontiers. It's in France at the time of the Crusades. In 1828, when "Ory" was first produced, Paris audiences were very susceptible to women who vowed chastity and they found it quite plausible that an enamoured male should enter a ladies' home disguised as a nun.

The count loves the countess. She has sworn off men until her brother returns from the Crusades. So she loads up her castle with virtuous wives who are awaiting their husbands' return. The opera has the inevitable page with whom the countess falls in love.

Ory tries to crash the inner sanctum in the disguise of a hermit and later as a lady pilgrim. So do 14 other men. A good time is had by all until the husbands' return, whereupon, the visiting "gentlemen" beat a hasty retreat through the wine cellar.

Tenor Wasted

John McCollum was Count Ory. This was not his "Cup of Tea" although he did remarkably well with the role. His fine tenor voice was all but scrapped. He virtually falsettoed his way through the hermit score and the female impersonation.

It wouldn't be Rossini without a subterranean bass. In this production he's Ronald Holgate who sings the role of Ory's tutor. He is given superfluous action but it was largely compensated for with a thoroughly attractive vocal performance.

Coloratura Spotty

Angelica Lozada was an ornamental Countess Fourmoutiers. It's a difficult coloratura score which she sang with fluency and beautiful tone, if a bit insecurely in spots.

Other roles were taken by David Smith, Gertrude Pepin, Doris okerson, Nancy Williams (the page) in which she projected a pleasing voice but was pretty consistently behind the baton, and George Tsandikos.

The chorus of 22 was exuberant, vocally brilliant, and gorgeously attired.

"Count Ory" was a brave attempt and inspired. The new medium of producing illusion has immense possibilities. and no doubt will realize them when it is perfected — which seems a certainty.

[192]

auspices of the American Symphony Orchestra League from June 29 to July 13. Conductors and musicians from community orchestras throughout the United States assembled to play in 25 rehearsal periods under the supervision of Richard Lert, director of the Pasadena Symphony. Erno Daniel, conductor of the Wichita Falls Symphony, served as assistant supervisor.

A number of contemporary composers, among them Wallingford Riegger, Henry Cowell, Ernst Krenek, Walter Aschaffenburg, Peter Phillips, and George Burt, were present to make comments and suggestions about their music. The workshop was made possible through the contribution of time and services on the part of the musicians, and a grant to the League by the Rockefeller Foundation.

Buffalo Summer Pops Concludes Season

Buffalo.—The Summer Pops series of the Buffalo Philharmonic ended on Aug. 19, with a "Rodgers & Hammer-

---

Théâtre des Charles X had life-time con-perfect sample of dients: the short, ed in crescendo, nzas, his various he string accompaniment. And as always in perament of a hack genius of irresistiis sung in an English prepared by Robert A. ally written by Scribe Poirson, the plot follows th of disguises, misinterpretations, rivalries, and slapstick situations

Experimental Scenery

The scenery, designed by Elemer Nagy of the Hartt College of Music, consisted of a fibreglass shell on which a number of projectors, placed behind the panels, produced the different effects and pictures needed. This new device, still in its experimental stage, is chiefly designed to help smaller opera companies to travel without the expense and bother of having to carry heavy stage props with them. For this purpose the solution seems to be quite ideal, since fast scene changes can be handled by a minimum of stage hands, who have little else to do but exchange the slides in the projectors. Naturally, the efficiency of this new system is achieved at the expense of its effectiveness. The projections remain stylized "pictures", and the illusion of the setting is largely a matter of the spectator's imagination. (An innocent mosquito crawling over one of the lenses created something of a "Dracula" effect, not to speak of the hand trying to catch it.) Nevertheless, the delicate color schemes of the slides, combined with some atmospheric lighting produced, especially in the second act, moments of fanciful stage conception.

The singers were headed by John McCollum, who sang the title role. Encompassing extremely difficult fioriture passages, this part calls actually for an extinct vocal type, the tenor da grazia. Mr. McCollum negotiated his agile lines with conscientious artistry, although his well-shaped voice was not always completely able to master the physical demands of the part. Angelica Lozada sang the role of Countess Fourmoutiers commendably, save for a slight unsteadiness in attack and breath control. Nancy Williams was a light-hearted and secure-voiced page, Isolier, and Ronald Holgate gave a histrionically and vocally pleasing account of the Count's tutor.

Boris Goldovsky's staging had spirit and style, which could not be always said about Wyn Morris' conducting.

Lenox, Mass.—The final Tanglewood week-end, which closed Aug. 10, was under the direction of Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux.

On Aug. 8, Charles Munch conducted a program consisting of Honegger's "Prelude, Fugue, and Postlude," Beethoven's Symphony No. 4, and Piano Concerto No. 3. Eugene Istomin was the soloist.

On Aug. 9, Pierre Monteux led the Boston Symphony in Beethoven's "Prometheus" Overture, Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione," and Beethoven's "Lenore" Overture No. 3. Berl Senofsky was the soloist in Beethoven's Violin Concerto.

The concluding concert on Aug. 10 featured the Johannesburg Festival Overture by Walton, and the Ninth Symphony by Beethoven.

The week-end also marked the conclusion of the six American composer profiles, presented under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation. The series featured works by Charles Ives, Roger Sessions, Elliott Carter, Milton Babbitt, Marc Blitzstein, Leon Kirchner, Lukas Foss, and Aaron Copland. The works were performed by the Fromm Fellowship Players.

GHKEEPSIE, N.Y
YORKER
7,000 S. 28,943
AUG 4 1958

rkshire Concer
ram Listed

Ory' Sung by Students at Tanglewood

Aug. 4—Champagne must have run in Rossini's veins when he wrote the sparkling comic opera "The Count Ory," which the students of the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department performed tonight in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood.

Four extremely gifted student stars sang the difficult florid roles, which recall some of the livelier coloratura passages of Rossini's "Barber of Seville." In addition, the tenor John McCollum, formerly a student here at the Berkshire Music Center, returned as an "alumnus" to sing the demanding title role.

The opera was sung in an English adaptation by Robert A. Simon of the original French text of Eugene Scribe and Delestre-Poirson. The adaptation was commissioned by the Opera Department of the Juilliard School in New York, which released it for its first performance here. The Juilliard School has not yet presented the opera because of the difficulty of casting the high florid tenor part of the title role. Present plans call for a production of "The Count Ory" by the school next year.

Although the opera has been almost unknown to present-day American opera-goers, it was given in New York 127 years ago, only three years after its Paris première. It was the first of Rossini's two French-language operas, the second being his "Guillaume Tell," and it was an instant success. Oddly enough, two-thirds of the score of "The Count Ory" had been a complete failure when it was first heard in Rossini's Italian-language opera buffa "Il Viaggio a Reims," produced in Paris in 1825. Rossini simply added a dozen new numbers and a libretto in the language his audience understood and he had a hit on his hands.

John McCollum

Modern revivals of this charming work began in Paris in 1926. Since then it has been done in Italy and at the Glyndebourne Festival and it has been recorded.

In addition to presenting a little-known work, tonight's performance was the first to use settings consisting chiefly of colored slides projected on a series of translucent, lightweight panels devised by Elmer Nagy of the Hart School in Hartford. The practical execution of Mr. Nagy's device here at the Berkshire Center was made possible by a grant from the Ford Foundation.

Both Mr. Nagy and Boris Goldovsky, head of the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department, emphasized the experimental character of this first performance. Four days ago, Mr. Goldovsky said, they still had not been sure the panels would work. They did tonight and were obviously valuable for the instant changes of scene they made possible as well as for their suitability for small operatic touring companies with limited transportation.

Their chief drawback is that the stage cannot really be brilliantly lighted without somewhat dulling of colors of the slides, which are projected on the panels from behind. In addition they are obviously projected "pictures" and hence force the stage designer to use stylized rather than realistic sets.

One was amazed that the student singers, who included Angelica Lozada as the countess, Nancy Williams as the page of Count Ory, Ronald Holgate as the count's tutor, and David Smith as the count's friend, Raimbaud, coped as fluently as they did with Rossini's swift coloratura and patter songs. In a sense their task was made a little easier by the often slow tempi of the conductor, Wyn Morris. On the other hand these very tempi robbed the performance of much of the vertiginous zest and glitter, as well as the elegance that are inherent in the music.

Miss Lozada came perhaps nearest to a true Rossinian brilliance, but Miss Williams excelled in the lyricism and grace, that are so essential to the style. Mr. Smith and Mr. Holgate were engaging mimes as well as singers, and Mr. McCollum's bright and agile voice was a main support of the performance. Despite the inevitable limitations of the occasion, it was a thoroughly enjoyable evening.

OPERA PROGRAM AT TANGLEWOOD EXCITING EVENT

New Scenery Technique Also Feature of Music Center Attraction

By WILLARD M. CLARK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox — The opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, Boris Goldovsky, director, can always be depended on to do something exciting and so it was Monday night when Rossini's seldom heard opera "Count Ory" was staged and sung by members of the department.

Projected Settings

Equally exciting was the first appearance of the Nagy Multiproduction System scenery. It consisted of seven blank panels upon which designs were thrown by 15 projectors back of them. The results reminded one of huge picture postcards. The advantage, of course, is the speed with which scenes may be changed and the easy method of transportation.

Rossini's opera has enough melodies in it to furnish a half dozen operas. There are some stunning ensemble numbers, duets and solo arias. The plot is slim and the opera was sung in an English translation by Robert A. Simon. Whether or not the audience got the majority of the words, it did seem pleased with the colorful, often gorgeous costumes and the beauty of some of the voices, notably the soprano of Angelica Lozada, the Count Ory of John McCollum; the fine base of Ronald Nolgate and mezzo soprano Doris Okerson.

The music is true Rossini, bright, embellished and always tuneful. Even the basso is required to trill. Mr. McCollum, for most of the evening, sang sturdily, often resorting to falsetto at the top of his range. A lighter voice could have handled this music more easily. Angelica Lozada, in the leading feminine role was able to encompass the taxing vocal range and the voice was flexible enough to handle the embellishments. Ronald Holkate, as tutor to Count Ory, is a huge man with a big voice. As always with a Goldovsky production, the action was natural and the stage movement fluid.

Elmer Nagy, who was responsible for the scenery, told the audience that he had studied the project for some 20 years and expressed his thanks to those who made it possible for him to use these ideas in this performance. Further refined, this multiproduction system may well have an important place in American theater.

Leo Van Witsen was responsible for the colorful, attractive costumes. The opera will be repeated tomorrow night.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 60,734

AUG 5 1958

Music: 'Count Ory' Featured At Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — Stunning and dramatic backgrounds, framing a ribald comedy, was Rossini's two-act opera, "Count Ory" that received the first of two performances last night in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood.

It was a presentation by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, Boris Goldovsky, director. A student orchestra of 46 was conducted by Wyn Morris.

Settings and lighting were designed by Elmer Nagy, and costumes by Leo Van Witsen.

Experimental Project

In his inevitable curtain spech, Goldovsky identified the project as a "first" in the musical theater. It is an important experiment that was started here last summer. Namely, this innovation in backgrounds is intended to do away with bulky scenery which is difficult to handle and expensive to transport.

Specifically, a wide fiberglass panel is in the rear of the stage, and three narrower panels on either side. Behind the panels are 15 projectors which produce the different effects needed.

Startling Effect

The effect is startling, to say the least. In a matter of seconds what was a castle in the background becomes a series of abstractions — then the castle's interior.

We can't say that the medium is a novelty, because it does have a practical side. But the illusions are only partly fulfilled. There was a bit too much business with projectors last night. At the start, the castle scene appears in sections which seemed to have no special significance other than to emphasize that it was done with lights.

Nagy joined Goldovsky in the curtain speech-making and went on to some length explaining that this method went back to the 17th century, and that he felt it would revolutionize operatic production.

Many Other Innovations

The center opera department has distinguished itself time and again, with all manner of innovations — first American productions of foreign and domestic works, English translations, and sparkling visual masterpieces.

"Count Ory" chalks up another. It isn't the best of Rossiniana and is frequently reminiscent of better things, but it has the typical zest. The English translation is tastily and smartly done by Robert A. Simon, except for a few obvious plays on words and some incongruous contemporary references.

The story itself is a potpourri of bed-ridden gimmicks of the 18th century — wholesale impersonations with a little Boccaccio seasoning.

First Presented 1828

Briefly, the yarn rotates around Count Ory and the Countess Fourmontiers. It's in France at the time of the Crusades. In 1828, when "Ory" was first produced, Paris audiences were very susceptible to women who vowed chastity and they found it quite plausible that an enamoured male should enter a ladies' home disguised as a nun.

The count loves the countess. She has sworn off men until her brother returns from the Crusades. So she loads up her castle with virtuous wives who are awaiting their husbands' return. The opera has the inevitable page with whom the countess falls in love.

Ory tries to crash the inner sanctum in the disguise of a hermit and later as a lady pilgrim. So do 14 other men. A good time is had by all until the husbands' return, whereupon, the visiting "gentlemen" beat a hasty retreat through the wine cellar.

Tenor Wasted

John McCollum was Count Ory. This was not his "Cup of Tea" although he did remarkably well with the role. His fine tenor voice was all but scrapped. He virtually falsettoed his way through the hermit score and the female impersonation.

It wouldn't be Rossini without a subterranean bass. In this production he's Ronald Holgate who sings the role of Ory's tutor. He is given superfluous action but it was largely compensated for with a thoroughly attractive vocal performance.

Coloratura Spotty

Angelica Lozada was an ornamental Countess Fourmoutiers. It's a difficult coloratura score which she sang with fluency and beautiful tone, if a bit insecurely in spots.

Other roles were taken by David Smith, Gertrude Pepin, Doris okerson, Nancy Williams (the page) in which she projected a pleasing voice but was pretty consistently behind the baton, and George Tsandikos.

The chorus of 22 was exuberant, vocally brilliant, and gorgeously attired.

"Count Ory" was a brave attempt and inspired. The new medium of producing illusion has immense possibilities. and no doubt will realize them when it is perfected — which seems a certainty.

[193]

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 361,379 - S. 576,176

AUG 6 1958

Tanglewood Opera Sings Rarely-Heard 'Count Ory'

By Francis D. Perkins

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 5.—The Berkshire Music Center's opera department, which usually offers unfamiliar works, followed this custom last night when it gave Rossini's "Count Ory" in the first of two performances in Tanglewood's Theater Concert Hall under the stage direction of Boris Goldovsky and the conductorship of Wyn Morris, a young musician from Wales.

Although its first New York performance was in 1833, this humorous work has gone unheard in America for many decades. For today's re-introduction to this country the cast of young professional and advanced student singers used Robert A. Simon's English version of the original French libretto. This translation was commissioned by the Juilliard Opera Theater, which plans to present "Count Ory" in New York next March.

John McCollum sang the title role of the disguised, designing and eventually thwarted count. The major contributors to his defeat were Angelica Lozada as Countess Fourmoutiers and Nancy Williams as Isolier, and Ronald Holgate as the tutor, with David Smith as Raimbaud, Gertrude Pepin as Alice, Doris Okerson as Ragonda and George Tzandikos as an anonymous nobleman.

Both the music and the story of Count Ory, which was first sung in Paris in 1828, have features which have marked comic operas both of earlier and later dates. The plot of the libretto by Scribe and Delestre Poirson is set in an undefined region of France and at no time in particular. It includes a familiar array of schemes, rivalries, disguises and misunderstood identities, particularly in the second act, where the count and his followers appear under the guise of women pilgrims. Not important nor more complicated than usual, it serves its purpose. Mr. Simons' English text, which has some Gilbertian moments, is fluently singable and preserves the original atmosphere with prevailing success. Most if not all of it reached its hearers' ears with very commendable intelligibility.

Any Rossini score is generous in its supply of ingratiating melodies, and that of "Count Ory" is no exception. It also has a liberal distribution of airs which illustrate the principal singers' vocal prowess and of neatly wrought concerted music. Mainly typical of its composer, the score offers occasional recollection of earlier Rossini works, with some glances further back towards Mozart, while it also has foretastes of Donizetti and others of Rossini's successors in the field of Italian opera. The pace is unhurried in the first part of the first act, while it later gains momentum. This is not all first class music, but it has quite enough musical value to merit revival.

The general vocal standard was praiseworthy, even if all the singing was not of the same tonal level. Miss Lozada's singing was especially appealing in its color and texture. The florid passages in her major first act aria were sung with well phrased fluency. Miss Williams, representing an operatic page of the line which extends from Cherubino to Oscar, sang with freshness and bouyancy. Mr. McCollum sang with a well focussed tone and authority of style in a dramatically persuasive impersonation, and Mr. Holgate was effective as the tutor. The student orchestra under Mr. Morris gave the singers well unified and balanced support.

The sets and lighting designed by Dr. Elemer Nagy represented an interesting and forward looking experiment in providing lightweight scenic equipment which can be set up and transported inexpensively. Its main feature consists of projections on several panels of a translucent shell. While the panels sometimes gave a sense of scenic division rather than of continuity, they usually suggested the character and atmophere of the locale. The development of this experiment should be well worth watching. The costumes designed by Leo Van Witsen were appropriate, and the stage action had a smooth and unflurried course.

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 158,729
AUG 6 - 1958

Rossini's 'Count Ory' at Tanglewoo

4-58

Goldovsky Directs Opera At Berkshire Music Cen

By Walter P. Sheppard

Lenox, Mass.

"What you are seeing," said Boris Goldovsky to the audience in Tanglewood's Theater-Concert Hall Monday evening, "is so simple it bewilders you." We are seeing Rossini's comic opera "Count Ory," the major production this summer by the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department.

To be sure, the essentials of the plot are simple enough: the Countess Fourmoutiers' brother has led his knights to the Crusades, and the Countess has vowed not to marry until they return. She has taken the knights' wives into her castle, from which all men are excluded. The amorous Count Ory arrives bent on adding another conquest.

Here complications contrived by master plotter Eugène Scribe with C. G. Delestre-Poiron enter to bewilder the spectator: Ory's disguises as a hermit and as the leader of a band of "female" pilgrims to gain entrance o the castle; his page, in love with the Countess and determined to spoil his master's plans; Ory's tutor, sent by the young man's father to bring him home; plus the imminent return f the knights. It was a hilariusly befuddling concoction.

* * *

It is good Scribe and late and uperior Rossini, the musical deail in the orchestra rich and revarding. The vocal line, melodious and winning, is of a difficulty and floridity that must have caused anguish even in an ge in which coloratura was as customary from basses as from sopranos. While it might be pleasurable to hear it executed with easy insouciance, one wonders if there might not be some sacrificing of the intelligence, bubbling fun, high spirits, and comic inflections of voice and posture achieved by Mr. Goldovsky's cast of young professionals and talented students.

Heading the cast was John McCollum, a Tanglewood alumnus, whose abilities as a tenor are well known. David Smith, baritone, as Ory's friend, and Ronald Holgate, bass, as Ory's tutor, both big- and warm-voiced newcomers, displayed a stage presence and stylistic flair for the comic that confirmed an initial impression gaine weeks ago from a perfor of Donizetti's "Don Pas Nancy Williams was a attractive, if not very mas page, and Angelica Lozad the Countess's music well

Staged by Mr. Goldovs using Robert A. Simon's version, the performan conducted by Wyn Mor year's winner of the vitzky Memorial Scho The Berkshire Music Cen chestra played well un direction, but the bala tween stage and pit left be desired in most clima in some places the music when it should have bub

* * *

The settings were des Elemer Nagy. He proje colorful and appropria grounds onto a "sceni made of corrugated fib Dubbed experimental, M projection system diff some seen before in acting area of the stag lighted without fading ors in the projections. this area that more needed, as some part stage were still too dim

The bright costume Van Witsen were, as eminently suitable.

A final fillip, which ly went unnoted by so audience, was the a on stage of Mr. Goldov Wolfes, Arthur Sch other members of the partment faculty as th ing knights.

The production was repeated last night, and the opera is on the bill for this year's New England Opera Theater season in Boston.

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION
Circ. D. 61,009 - S. 119,412

AUG 5 1958

AROUND THE TOWN:

Here's Final Call For Tanglewood

Last call for Tanglewood! With the stirring orchestral and vocal effects of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony bringing to a close the season of a most glorious music festival, Sunday afternoon practically in our own backyard, there is no excuse for anyone to sheepishly admit that he or she has not taken advantage of the opportunity to hear great music by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Dr. Charles Munch's inspired direction in a magnificent physical setting draws music lovers from every state in the Union, Canada and Mexico as the assorted license plates on the thousands of parked cars will attest.

MUSIC FOR ALL

Here's a suggestion if any members of the family think they are allergic to the classics, as represented by the "Three Bs," Bach, Beethoven and Brahms. We assure one and all that, as the late Walter Damrosch so truthfully said: "Popular music is merely familiar music." Proper and continuous exposure to the "long haired" composers, unlike the Chinese torture punishment of having a drop of ter fall on the confined head of an unfortunate prisoner until he loses his reason, will break down sales resistance. Perhaps the inexorable beat of rock 'n' roll is responsible for the deviation from the norm of some of our modern youngsters. The suggestion is that the family attend the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" at the music center, Thursday when the "full strength of the company" will be reviewed.

Many visitors bring along a lunch, some blankets and folding chairs, and dine—and listen al fresco, under one of the many trees which adorn the beautiful series of green-carpeted lawns. Seats in the Big Shed are available, and will entitle holders to rub elbows with "The Proper Bostonians."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292

AUG 7 1958

Grace Notes

TANGLEWOOD, AUGUST 4
Count Ory
By J. W. H.

Everyone, on stage and off, had a good time at Monday night's performance of Count Ory by Rossini. It was a happy, colorful creation filled with melodious music and sung with verve and humor by the fresh young voices of the students at the Berkshire Music Center.

The experimental stage setting devised by Dr. Elemer Nagy and called The Scenic Shell and Multi-Projection Stage had its first public appearance at this performance. It opens a vast area of possibilities for instantaneous scene changes and convenience in transportation for operatic companies. While it is an effective device there are still "bugs" which need to be worked out. In fact a bug seems to have gotten into one of the projectors last night and two gigantic fingers could be seen removing it. The plastic flats through which the projection is seen give to each scene an opalescent appearance reminiscent of Louis Tiffany's stained glass which I prefer to forget.

There were several out-standing voices in the performance. Ronald Holgate, singing the Tutor, has a luscious bass, rich as chocolate frosting and decorative as a birthday cake; Angelica Lozada, the Countess Fourmoutier, while a bit husky in the lower register, produced lovely sounds in her coloratury passages; John McCollum, as the Count Ory, seemed to have difficulty singing through the beard he wore in the first act but lived up to his Berkshire Center training when he discarded it for the second; and for sheer charm Nancy Wililams, as a page boy, should be awarded the gold Goldovsky.

This is precisely the kind of opera which Gilbert and Sullivan loved to poke fun at, and the English translation does more for G. and S. than for the original lebrettists. The oboes for both performances on Monday and Tuesday were played by Dorothy E. Kidney and F. Rheta Roundabush.

KROLL QU
AT TANGL
AS SERIES

Haydn, Bartok, Bee
Works Close Cha
Music Offerin

WILLARD

NOX — The et made its
of the Wednesday
very fine and to a close.
er-Concert Hall here were many

Kroll quartet
m Kroll, er, violin;
viola; and cello.

program n's "Quartet 4, No. 3." The k's "Quartet N concert concluded ance of Beethov
A Minor, Op. style of the ins the same,
-workmanlike sensitivity gets the feeling played the
and may possibly ired of it. One hea ance which is appro larly fashion by are musical and e delic Haydn was given a communica formance, particularly ond movement large.

opus than night, it became exhibition piece, movement taken speed. It was skillful a little remote.

Beethoven's
Minor, Op. 132" at their most rewa the feeling that they found something sonal to communicate spacious, finely proporti formance and it met ence approval, far gre that given the Bartok

The chamber music excellent. It ope
Budapest String was followed by Trio of New York, was followed by Pro Musica.
recital by Adele Ad
, and the two he Kroll quart

---

ngland Newsclip
8, Boston 6 • RI

kshire Eagle
TSFIELD,
Independent
Circ. 28,354

6 - 1958

Final Concert
Of Chamber Gro
In Theater Tonig

TANGLEWOOD — The l series of Wednesday evenin ber Music Concerts will sented here tonight at 8 theater concert hall.
Quartet will present consisting of Haydn's Qua minor, Op. 74 No. 3, tet No. 2 Op. 17; Beethove
tet No. 15 in A minor,
Members of the Kroll
William Kroll and Loui violins; David Mande and Leon

Proceeds from the Wednesday Evening Ch sic concerts are don
Tanglewood
Fund of the Berkshire
ter. Other artists on have included the tet, the York, the and Ade

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 158,729

AUG 6 - 1958

Rossini's 'Count Ory' at Tanglewood

4-58

Goldovsky Directs Opera At Berkshire Music Center

By Walter P. Sheppard

Lenox, Mass.

"What you are seeing," said Boris Goldovsky to the audience in Tanglewood's Theater-Concert Hall Monday evening, "is so simple it bewilders you." We are seeing Rossini's comic opera "Count Ory," the major production this summer by the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department.

To be sure, the essentials of the plot are simple enough: the Countess Fourmoutiers' brother has led his knights to the Crusades, and the Countess has vowed not to marry until they return. She has taken the knights' wives into her castle, from which all men are excluded. The amorous Count Ory arrives bent on adding another conquest.

Here complications contrived by master plotter Eugène Scribe with C. G. Delestre-Poiron enter to bewilder the spectator: Ory's disguises as a hermit and as the leader of a band of "female" pilgrims to gain entrance to the castle; his page, in love with the Countess and determined to spoil his master's plans; Ory's tutor, sent by the young man's father to bring him home; plus the imminent return of the knights. It was a hilariously befuddling concoction.

* * *

It is good Scribe and late and superior Rossini, the musical detail in the orchestra rich and rewarding. The vocal line, melodious and winning, is of a difficulty and floridity that must have caused anguish even in an age in which coloratura was as customary from basses as from sopranos. While it might be pleasurable to hear it executed with easy insouciance, one wonders if there might not be some sacrificing of the intelligence, bubbling fun, high spirits, and comic inflections of voice and posture achieved by Mr. Goldovsky's cast of young professionals and talented students.

Heading the cast was John McCollum, a Tanglewood alumnus, whose abilities as a tenor are well known. David Smith, baritone, as Ory's friend, and Ronald Holgate, bass, as Ory's tutor, both big- and warm-voiced newcomers, displayed a stage presence and stylistic flair for the comic that confirmed an initial impression gained two weeks ago from a performance of Donizetti's "Don Pasquale." Nancy Williams was a vocally attractive, if not very masculine, page, and Angelica Lozada sang the Countess's music well.

Staged by Mr. Goldovsky and using Robert A. Simon's English version, the performance was conducted by Wyn Morris, last year's winner of the Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship. The Berkshire Music Center Orchestra played well under his direction, but the balance between stage and pit left much to be desired in most climaxes, and in some places the music gurgled when it should have bubbled.

* * *

The settings were designed by Elemer Nagy. He projected his colorful and appropriate backgrounds onto a "scenic shell" made of corrugated fiber glass. Dubbed experimental, Mr. Nagy's projection system differs from some seen before in that the acting area of the stage can be lighted without fading the colors in the projections. It is in this area that more work is needed, as some parts of the stage were still too dim.

The bright costumes of Leo Van Witsen were, as always, eminently suitable.

A final fillip, which apparently went unnoted by some in the audience, was the appearance on stage of Mr. Goldovsky, Felix Wolfes, Arthur Schoep, and other members of the Opera Department faculty as the returning knights.

The production was repeated last night, and the opera is on the bill for this year's New England Opera Theater season in Boston.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 361,379 - S. 576,176

AUG 6 1958

Tanglewood Opera Sings Rarely-Heard 'Count Ory'

By Francis D. Perkins

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 5.—The Berkshire Music Center's opera department, which usually offers unfamiliar works, followed this custom last night when it gave Rossini's "Count Ory" in the first of two performances in Tanglewood's Theater Concert Hall under the stage direction of Boris Goldovsky and the conductorship of Wyn Morris, a young musician from Wales.

Although its first New York performance was in 1833, this humorous work has gone unheard in America for many decades. For today's re-introduction to this country the cast of young professional and advanced student singers used Robert A. Simon's English version of the original French libretto. This translation was commissioned by the Juilliard Opera Theater, which plans to present "Count Ory" in New York next March.

John McCollum sang the title role of the disguised, designing and eventually thwarted count. The major contributors to his defeat were Angelica Lozada as Countess Fourmoutiers and Nancy Williams as Isolier, and Ronald Holgate as the tutor, with David Smith as Raimbaud, Gertrude Pepin as Alice, Doris Okerson as Ragonda and George Tzandikos as an anonymous nobleman.

Both the music and the story of Count Ory, which was first sung in Paris in 1828, have features which have marked comic operas both of earlier and later dates. The plot of the libretto by Scribe and Delestre Poirson is set in an undefined region of France and at no time in particular. It includes a familiar array of schemes, rivalries, disguises and misunderstood identities, particularly in the second act, where the count and his followers appear under the guise of women pilgrims. Not important nor more complicated than usual, it serves its purpose. Mr. Simons' English text, which has some Gilbertian moments, is fluently singable and preserves the original atmosphere with prevailing success. Most if not all of it reached its hearers' ears with very commendable intelligibility.

Any Rossini score is generous in its supply of ingratiating melodies, and that of "Count Ory" is no exception. It also has a liberal distribution of airs which illustrate the principal singers' vocal prowess and of neatly wrought concerted music. Mainly typical of its composer, the score offers occasional recollection of earlier Rossini works, with some glances further back towards Mozart, while it also has foretastes of Donizetti and others of Rossini's successors in the field of Italian opera. The pace is unhurried in the first part of the first act, while it later gains momentum. This is not all first class music, but it has quite enough musical value to merit revival.

The general vocal standard was praiseworthy, even if all the singing was not of the same tonal level. Miss Lozada's singing was especially appealing in its color and texture. The florid passages in her major first act aria were sung with well phrased fluency. Miss Williams, representing an operatic page of the line which extends from Cherubino to Oscar, sang with freshness and bouyancy. Mr. McCollum sang with a well focussed tone and authority of style in a dramatically persuasive impersonation, and Mr. Holgate was effective as the tutor. The student orchestra under Mr. Morris gave the singers well unified and balanced support.

The sets and lighting designed by Dr. Elemer Nagy represented an interesting and forward looking experiment in providing lightweight scenic equipment which can be set up and transported inexpensively. Its main feature consists of projections on several panels of a translucent shell. While the panels sometimes gave a sense of scenic division rather than of continuity, they usually suggested the character and atmophere of the locale. The development of this experiment should be well worth watching. The costumes designed by Leo Van Witsen were appropriate, and the stage action had a smooth and unflurried course.

NY, N. Y.
-UNION
09 - S. 119,412

5 1958

THE TOWN:

e's Final Call Tanglewood

'or Tanglewood! With the stirring vocal effects of Beethoven's Ninth ng to a close the season of a most stival, Sunday afternoon practically ard, there is no excuse for anyone it that he or she has not taken adortunity to hear great music by the Orchestra.

on Parade" at the music center, Thursday when the "full strength of the company" will be reviewed.

Many visitors bring along a lunch, some blankets and folding chairs, and dine—and listen—al fresco, under one of the many trees which adorn the beautiful series of green-carpeted lawns. Seats in the Big Shed are available, and will entitle holders to rub elbows with "The Proper Bostonians."

rohibited.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292

AUG 7 1958

Grace Notes

TANGLEWOOD, AUGUST 4
Count Ory

By J. W. H.

Everyone, on stage and off, had a good time at Monday night's performance of Count Ory by Rossini. It was a happy, colorful creation filled with melodious music and sung with verve and humor by the fresh young voices of the students at the Berkshire Music Center.

The experimental stage setting devised by Dr. Elemer Nagy and called The Scenic Shell and Multi-Projection Stage had its first public appearance at this performance. It opens a vast area of possibilities for instantaneous scene changes and convenience in transportation for operatic companies. While it is an effective device there are still "bugs" which need to be worked out. In fact a bug seems to have gotten into one of the projectors last night and two gigantic fingers could be seen removing it. The plastic flats through which the projection is seen give to each scene an opalescent appearance reminiscent of Louis Tiffany's stained glass which I prefer to forget.

There were several out-standing voices in the performance. Ronald Holgate, singing the Tutor, has a luscious bass, rich as chocolate frosting and decorative as a birthday cake; Angelica Lozada, the Countess Fourmoutier, while a bit husky in the lower register, produced lovely sounds in her coloratury passages; John McCollum, as the Count Ory, seemed to have difficulty singing through the beard he wore in the first act but lived up to his Berkshire Center training when he discarded it for the second; and for sheer charm Nancy Wililams, as a page boy, should be awarded the gold Goldovsky.

This is precisely the kind of opera which Gilbert and Sullivan loved to poke fun at, and the English translation does more for G. and S. than for the original lebrettists. The oboes for both performances on Monday and Tuesday were played by Dorothy E. Kidney and F. Rheta Roundabush.

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 158,729
AUG 6 - 1958

Rossini's 'Count Ory' at Tanglewood

Goldovsky Directs Opera At Berkshire Music Center

By Walter P. Sheppard

Lenox, Mass.

"What you are seeing," said Boris Goldovsky to the audience in Tanglewood's Theater-Concert Hall Monday evening, "is so simple it bewilders you." We are seeing Rossini's comic opera "Count Ory," the major production this summer by the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department.

To be sure, the essentials of the plot are simple enough: the Countess Fourmoutiers' brother has led his knights to the Crusades, and the Countess has vowed not to marry until they return. She has taken the knights' wives into her castle, from which all men are excluded. The amorous Count Ory arrives bent on adding another conquest.

Here complications contrived by master plotter Eugène Scribe with C. G. Delestre-Poiron enter to bewilder the spectator: Ory's disguises as a hermit and as the leader of a band of "female" pilgrims to gain entrance to the castle; his page, in love with the Countess and determined to spoil his master's plans; Ory's tutor, sent by the young man's father to bring him home; plus the imminent return of the knights. It was a hilariously befuddling concoction.

* * *

It is good Scribe and late and superior Rossini, the musical detail in the orchestra rich and rewarding. The vocal line, melodious and winning, is of a difficulty and floridity that must have caused anguish even in an age in which coloratura was as customary from basses as from sopranos. While it might be pleasurable to hear it executed with easy insouciance, one wonders if there might not be some sacrificing of the intelligence, bubbling fun, high spirits, and comic inflections of voice and posture achieved by Mr. Goldovsky's cast of young professionals and talented students.

Heading the cast was John McCollum, a Tanglewood alumnus, whose abilities as a tenor are well known. David Smith, baritone, as Ory's friend, and Ronald Holgate, bass, as Ory's tutor, both big and warm-voiced newcomers, displayed a stage presence and stylistic flair for the comic that confirmed an initial impression gained two weeks ago from a performance of Donizetti's "Don Pasquale." Nancy Williams was a vocally attractive, if not very masculine, page, and Angelica Lozada sang the Countess's music well.

Staged by Mr. Goldovsky and using Robert A. Simon's English version, the performance was conducted by Wyn Morris, last year's winner of the Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship. The Berkshire Music Center Orchestra played well under his direction, but the balance between stage and pit left much to be desired in most climaxes, and in some places the music gurgled when it should have bubbled.

* * *

The settings were designed by Elemer Nagy. He projected his colorful and appropriate backgrounds onto a "scenic shell" made of corrugated fiber glass. Dubbed experimental, Mr. Nagy's projection system differs from some seen before in that the acting area of the stage can be lighted without fading the colors in the projections. It is in this area that more work is needed, as some parts of the stage were still too dim.

The bright costumes of Leo Van Witsen were, as always, eminently suitable.

A final fillip, which apparently went unnoted by some in the audience, was the appearance on stage of Mr. Goldovsky, Felix Wolfes, Arthur Schoep, and other members of the Opera Department faculty as the returning knights.

The production was repeated last night and the opera is on the bill for this year's New England Opera Theater season in Boston.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 361,379 - S. 576,176
AUG 6 1958

Tanglewood Opera Sings Rarely-Heard 'Count Ory'

By Francis D. Perkins

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 5.—The Berkshire Music Center's opera department, which usually offers unfamiliar works, followed this custom last night when it gave Rossini's "Count Ory" in the first of two performances in Tanglewood's Theater Concert Hall under the stage direction of Boris Goldovsky and the conductorship of Wyn Morris, a young musician from Wales.

Although its first New York performance was in 1833, this humorous work has gone unheard in America for many decades. For today's re-introduction to this country the cast of young professional and advanced student singers used Robert A. Simon's English version of the original French libretto. This translation was commissioned by the Juilliard Opera Theater, which plans to present "Count Ory" in New York next March.

John McCollum sang the title role of the disguised, designing and eventually thwarted count. The major contributors to his defeat were Angelica Lozada as Countess Fourmoutiers and Nancy Williams as Isolier, and Ronald Holgate as the tutor, with David Smith as Raimbaud, Gertrude Pepin as Alice, Doris Okerson as Ragonda and George Tzandikos as an anonymous nobleman.

Both the music and the story of Count Ory, which was first sung in Paris in 1828, have features which have marked comic operas both of earlier and later dates. The plot of the libretto by Scribe and Delestre Poirson is set in an undefined region of France and at no time in particular. It includes a familiar array of schemes, rivalries, disguises and misunderstood identities, particularly in the second act, where the count and his followers appear under the guise of women pilgrims. Not important nor more complicated than usual, it serves its purpose. Mr. Simons' English text, which has some Gilbertian moments, is fluently singable and preserves the original atmosphere with prevailing success. Most if not all of it reached its hearers' ears with very commendable intelligibility.

Any Rossini score is generous in its supply of ingratiating melodies, and that of "Count Ory" is no exception. It also has a liberal distribution of airs which illustrate the principal singers' vocal prowess and of neatly wrought concerted music. Mainly typical of its composer, the score offers occasional recollection of earlier Rossini works, with some glances further back towards Mozart, while it also has foretastes of Donizetti and others of Rossini's successors in the field of Italian opera. The pace is unhurried in the first part of the first act, while it later gains momentum. This is not all first class music, but it has quite enough musical value to merit revival.

The general vocal standard was praiseworthy, even if all the singing was not of the same tonal level. Miss Lozada's singing was especially appealing in its color and texture. The florid passages in her major first act aria were sung with well phrased fluency. Miss Williams, representing an operatic page of the line which extends from Cherubino to Oscar, sang with freshness and bouyancy. Mr. McCollum sang with a well focussed tone and authority of style in a dramatically persuasive impersonation, and Mr. Holgate was effective as the tutor. The student orchestra under Mr. Morris gave the singers well unified and balanced support.

The sets and lighting designed by Dr. Elemer Nagy represented an interesting and forward looking experiment in providing lightweight scenic equipment which can be set up and transported inexpensively. Its main feature consists of projections on several panels of a translucent shell. While the panels sometimes gave a sense of scenic division rather than of continuity, they usually suggested the character and atmophere of the locale. The development of this experiment should be well worth watching. The costumes designed by Leo Van Witsen were appropriate, and the stage action had a smooth and unflurried course.

NY, N. Y.
-UNION
09 - S. 119,412
5 1958

THE TOWN:

e's Final Call Tanglewood

or Tanglewood! With the stirring vocal effects of Beethoven's Ninth ng to a close the season of a most stival, Sunday afternoon practically ard, there is no excuse for anyone it that he or she has not taken adortunity to hear great music by the Orchestra.

on Parade" at the music center, Thursday when the "full strength of the company" will be reviewed.

Many visitors bring along a lunch, some blankets and folding chairs, and dine—and listen—al fresco, under one of the many trees which adorn the beautiful series of green-carpeted lawns. Seats in the Big Shed are available, and will entitle holders to rub elbows with "The Proper Bostonians."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292
AUG 7 1958

Grace Notes

TANGLEWOOD, AUGUST 4
Count Ory

By J. W. H.

Everyone, on stage and off, had a good time at Monday night's performance of Count Ory by Rossini. It was a happy, colorful creation filled with melodious music and sung with verve and humor by the fresh young voices of the students at the Berkshire Music Center.

The experimental stage setting devised by Dr. Elemer Nagy and called The Scenic Shell and Multi-Projection Stage had its first public appearance at this performance. It opens a vast area of possibilities for instantaneous scene changes and convenience in transportation for operatic companies. While it is an effective device there are still "bugs" which need to be worked out. In fact a bug seems to have gotten into one of the projectors last night and two gigantic fingers could be seen removing it. The plastic flats through which the projection is seen give to each scene an opalescent appearance reminiscent of Louis Tiffany's stained glass which I prefer to forget.

There were several out-standing voices in the performance. Ronald Holgate, singing the Tutor, has a luscious bass, rich as chocolate frosting and decorative as a birthday cake; Angelica Lozada, the Countess Fourmoutier, while a bit husky in the lower register, produced lovely sounds in her coloratury passages; John McCollum, as the Count Ory, seemed to have difficulty singing through the beard he wore in the first act but lived up to his Berkshire Center training when he discarded it for the second; and for sheer charm Nancy Wililams, as a page boy, should be awarded the gold Goldovsky.

This is precisely the kind of opera which Gilbert and Sullivan loved to poke fun at, and the English translation does more for G. and S. than for the original lebrettists. The oboes for both performances on Monday and Tuesday were played by Dorothy E. Kidney and F. Rheta Roundabush.

[194]

S Union - Aug 7

KROLL QUARTET AT TANGLEWOOD AS SERIES ENDS

Haydn, Bartok, Beethoven Works Close Chamber Music Offerings

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX—The Kroll String Quartet made its second appearance of the chamber music series Wednesday night, bringing this very fine and well-liked series to a close. As usual the Theater-Concert Hall was filled and there were many sitting outside.

The Kroll quartet consists of William Kroll, violin; Louis Graeler, violin; David Mankovitz, viola; and Avron Twerdowsky, cello.

The program opened with Haydn's "Quartet in G Minor, Op. 74, No. 3." Then came Bela Bartok's "Quartet No. 2, Op. 17." The concert concluded with a performance of Beethoven's "Quartet in A Minor, Op. 132."

The style of the Kroll quartet remains the same. They do a good, workmanlike job, without much sensitivity or imagination. One gets the feeling that they have played the music many times and may possibly be a little tired of it. One hears a performance which is approached in scholarly fashion by four men who are musical and experienced.

The delicious Haydn quartet was given a communicative performance, particularly the second movement largo. The Bartok opus is a work which needs more than a single hearing. Wednesday night, it became something of an exhibition piece, with the allegro movement taken at whirlwind speed. It was skillful playing, but a little remote.

Beethoven's "Quartet in A Minor, Op. 132" found the quartet at their most rewarding. One had the feeling that in this music they found something very personal to communicate. It was a spacious, finely proportioned performance and it met with audience approval, far greater than that given the Bartok quartet.

The chamber music season has been excellent. It opened with the Budapest String Quartet. This was followed by the Beaux Arts Trio of New York, which in turn was followed by the New York Pro Musica.

A recital by Adele Addison, soprano, and the two appearances by the Kroll quartet completed the series. Some 10,000 people heard these six concerts.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,138

AUG 7 1958

Kroll Quartet In Last Chamber Music Concert at Festival

The sixth and final chamber music concert of the 1958 Berkshire Music Festival was held at the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood last night, with the Kroll String Quartet making its second appearance. Works of Haydn, Bela Bartok and Beethoven were heard.

The hall was filled for the concert last night and attendance at the six programs this year was around 10,000.

Tonight the annual Tanglewood on Parade program will be held, starting at 5.45 o'clock. That will include performances by the various Berkshire Music Center departments, a lawn party and, at 8.15 o'clock, a concert featuring both the Boston Symphony and the Boston Pops Orchestras in the big shed.

The final weekend series of concerts by the Boston Symphony will be staged on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

AUG 7- 1958

Music Review

Kroll Quartet at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FINAL chamber music concert of the Tanglewood season was played in the Theater-Concert Hall last night by the Kroll String Quartet, the only organization to be invited to appear twice this year.

Their program displayed, so far as one short evening permitted, the whole span of string qartet writing, and, at the same time, the culmination of artistic quartet playing.

Starting with one of the most ingratiating of quartets of "Papa" Haydn, the originator of the string quartet, they came as far as Bartok, conceded in many quartets to be one of the composers who has carried quartet writing to its farthest advance; and they stopped en route at one of the Himalayan peaks, if not the Mt. Everest of quartets, one of the late Beethovens.

* * *

THE HAYDN was the Opus 74, No. 3, sometimes designated as the "Rider," a name the composer never knew and which may have been suggested by the galloping or prancing figure at the start. There had been no quartets before Haydn (Bach and Handel wrote none), and if four viols played ensemble, it was vocal music adapted for strings. But Haydn scarcely even had to experiment, and even today, except for their transparency, no compromise or tolerance is necessary to enjoy his quartets.

The Krolls played him with the greatness of simplicity. The first movement was conspicuously comfortable; only in the wonderful final movement did they let loose a rugged brilliance from their great store of resources. It was the slow movement, however, that showed best their eminence. Their tone was drawn in long, melodic lines which were not affected by the length of their inexhaustible bows.

* * *

THE SECOND Bartok dates from 40 years ago. No composer's career was more bound up in his personal background and the events of his life than was Bartok's. His research into the folk music of his native Hungary furnished much material, but, by no sense of the word, is his music localized, and even the more exciting episodes are not of the barbaric and embroidered gypsy idioms commonly associated with that segment of his people.

Bartok was of the same year as Picasso. Each in his own way went his idividual way. There was no relationship whatsoever, but it serves to place the artistic and creative thinking of the era. The "execrated" dissonances of Bartok which first strike the ear give way on closer acqaintance to the intense feeling and sincerity he writes into his music and which needs such an ensemble as the Krolls to reveal. His emancipation from the tyranny of the major and minor system and the model forms of scales he employs offer new melodic prospects. Their daring is admittedly not easy to take, but those whose perceptions are receptive to his music find its emotional depth alternating with almost elementary naivete.

* * *

BEETHOVEN'S A minor quartet, Opus 132, raised the significance of chamber music, scarcely a decade after Haydn has passed away, to artistic heights till then unexplored and since then never excelled. The late quartets take their place in music as do the plays of Shakespeare in literature. The A minor contains some of the most ethereal as well as some of the most dramatic music written for quartet.

It may be of interest to note, however, that in 1845 in London, a society was formed "to make known some of the most perfect of musical compositions which have long been left comparatively unnoticed and to remove some unhappy prejudices relative to the later works of Beethoven." Among the musicians participating in this effort was Heinrich Ernst, known for his magnificent interpretations of the late Beethovens and whose Stradivarius William Kroll played last night.

The other members of the quartet are Louis Graeler, violin, David Mankovitz, viola, and Avron Twerdowsky, cello.

* * *

BEETHOVEN had too much to express at the close of his life to be restricted by any limitations of form such as those set up by Haydn. He begins with a solemn, short introduction which leads quickly into a movement which is essentially a narrative. The scherzo has a pastoral trio which recalls the last echo of a wandering musician's bagpipe. The intracacies of the writing are all dispelled by the Krolls' apparently effortless playing.

The slow movement is probably the most famous of all. Beethoven wrote, in French, that this was an offering of gratitude to the Divinity by a convalescent. For his song [illegible] he employs the Lydian mode in which his profund humility was enhanced by the Krolls' abstention in some instances from the use of a vibrato so that, by contrast, other episodes rose in plaintive distinction.

* * *

A SHORT march brings us abruptly back to earth after which a recitative, which Kroll made only lacking in words, gives wings to the finale. Such an exposition of music and its relevation will not be forgotten. The Krolls, at last week, were recalled time after time and finally added a short encore, a galvanic display of virtuosity, the last movement of the Ravel quartet.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 42,039

AUG 6 1958

Rossini Opera in English Impresses at Tanglewood

By D. E. RITZ
Gazette Music Editor

A new opera is always a thrill, and when it is one by Rossini, written for the Paris Opera and first performed in 1828, it has special significance in its first performance in English.

* * *

"COUNT ORY," a comic opera in two acts, was the major offering of the season of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood on Monday and last evening in the Theatre-Concert Hall under the direction of Boris Goldovsky.

John McCollum, tenor, was featured in the highly humorous title role as the ardent admirer of women, Countess Fourmoutiers in particular.

The English version of the A. E. Scribe and C. G. Delestre-Poirson text was made by Robert A. Simon on commission from the Juilliard Opera Theater and released to the Berkshire Music Center for the Tanglewood performance. It is witty and full of fine lines, a very clever modern interpretation of the humor inherent in an almost male-less France at the time of the Crusades.

* * *

THE MUSIC is Rossini and demanding in the extreme. A 46-piece student orchestra from the center furnished the intricate accompaniment for the magnificent solo voices. The cast requires nine first caliber solo voices and 22 in the choral roles of peasants, courtiers, noblewomen and knights.

Costuming was particularly elegant and the new "scenic shell and multi-projection" stage was most adequate, though to our taste not nearly as interesting as the "romantic" scenery to which theater-goers are accustomed.

* * *

THE SHELL and multi-projection stage were designed and developed by Dr. Elemer Nagy, and according to Goldovsky it was "not known for sure that it would work until four days" before the Monday evening opening. Dr. Goldovsky hails the accomplishment as one of the first steps in the development of "a portable theater" in which producers will be able "to travel with a satchel full of slides" and in which "stagehands will be dressed in white ties."

The plot of "Count Ory" was described aptly by Goldovsky as "so simple it bewilders you."

* * *

WE ALSO FIND opera in English quite as bewildering as opera in French, German or what-have-you. When three or more or even two excellent singers express their innermost emotions and thoughts in asides with coloratura as the medium, the language matters little. The music is the thing and that of Rossini could not be improved on we are sure.

Featured soloists in the Tanglewood production were, in addition to McCollum, David Smith, Gertrude Pepin, Doris Okerson, Ronald Holgate, Nancy Williams, Angelica Lozada and George Tsandikos. Wyn Morris of Llanelly, South Wales, conducted.

* * *

THE OPERA was revived in Paris in 1926 and performed in Turin in Italian in 1930. It has recently been performed by the Glyndebourne Opera Company in England.

The Opera Department at Tanglewood was supported this summer by the leadership training program of the New England Opera Theater with the addition of a Ford Foundation grant.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

AUG 6 - 1958

Final Concert Of Chamber Group In Theater Tonight

TANGLEWOOD — The last of the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music Concerts will be presented here tonight at 8:30 in the theater concert hall. The Kroll Quartet will present a program consisting of Haydn's Quartet in B minor, Op. 74 No. 3, Bartok's Quartet No. 2 Op. 17; Beethoven's Quartet No. 15 in A minor, Op. 132. Members of the Kroll Quartet are William Kroll and Louis Graeler, violins; David Mandovitz, viola; and Leon Twerdowsky, cello.

Proceeds from the series of Wednesday Evening Chamber Music concerts are donated to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center. Other artists on the 1958 series have included the Budapest Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio of New York, the New York Pro Musica, and Adele Addison, soprano.

S Union - Aug 6

Kroll Quartet At Tanglewood

LENOX—The last of the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music Concerts at Tanglewood will be presented tonight at 8.30 in the Theater-Concert Hall.

The Kroll Quartet will present a program consisting of Haydn's Quartet in G minor, Op. 74 No. 3, Bartok's Quartet No. 2 Op. 17; Beethoven's Quartet No. 15 in A minor, Op. 132. Members of the Kroll Quartet are William Kroll and Louis Graeler, violins; David Mandovitz, viola; and Leon Twerdowsky, cello.

Proceeds from the series of Wednesday Evening Chamber Music concerts are donated to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center. Other artists on the 1958 series have included the Budapest Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio of New York, the New York Pro Musica, and Adele Addison, soprano.

Chamber Music At Tanglewood

The last of the Wednesday evening Chamber Music Concerts at Tanglewood will be presented tonight at 8:30 in the Theatre Concert Hall. The Kroll Quartet will perform Haydn's Quartet in G minor, Op. 74 No. 3, Bartok's Quartet No. 2 Op. 17; Beethoven's Quartet No. 15 in A minor, Op. 132. Members of the Kroll Quartet are William Kroll and Louis Graeler, violins; David Mandovitz, viola; and Leon Twerdowsky, cello.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 118,644

AUG 6 - 1958

Tanglewood Concerts

The last of the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music Concerts at Tanglewood will be presented tonight at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall. The Kroll Quartet will present a program consisting of Haydn's Quartet in B minor, Op 74 No. 3, Bartok's Quartet No. 2 Op. 17; Beethoven's Quartet No. 15 in A minor, Op. 132. Members of the Kroll Quartet are William Kroll and Louis Graeler, violins; David Mandovitz, viola, and Leon Twerdowsky, cello.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 17,740

AUG 6 - 1958

What's Doing Hereabouts

The last of a series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts at Tanglewood will be presented tonight at 8:30 o'clock in the Theatre-Concert hall. The Kroll Quartet will be heard in a program by Haydn, Bartok and Beethoven.

[195]

Tanglewood Parade E. Eagle - Aug 5

Carvalho on Podium Thursday To Open BSO Concert in Shed

Whitestone

Eleazar de Carvalho

TANGLEWOOD — Eleazer de Carvalho, head of the department of orchestral conducting at the Berkshire Music Center, will open the Tanglewood on Parade program Thursday night in the Music Shed. He will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Gomes' overture to "Il Guarany" and Fall's "El Amor Brujo." Mr. Carvalho began his association with Tanglewood as a conducting student of the late Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, founder of the Music Center and musical director of the BSO for 25 years.

Big Crowd Expected

The Tanglewood on Parade program this year, held annually for the benefit of the Music Center, promises to be one of the biggest events in years at Tanglewood—if the weatherman cooperates. All of the boxes have been sold and there has been a brisk demand for reserved seat tickets in the Shed. Tanglewood officials reported this morning that more and more people are forming picnic groups every year for the Parade and a special concert is being arranged by the Tanglewood choir to entertain the picnicking crowds on the

and

h is build-will bisin,

first trumpet of the BSO, will lead a group of students, studying brass instruments, in a performance on the lawn in the rear of the Shed.

Demonstrations at 6

At 6, the Berkshire Music Center students will fan out to their respective concert halls to give demonstrations of their talents. Simultaneous sessions will be held with the orchestra in the Shed; compositions in the chamber music hall and opera in the theater concert hall.

The lawn party will formally open at 7 when members of the choir will assemble on the porch of the main house to entertain the thousands who are expected to cover the spacious lawns of the Tanglewood property.

Burgin and Copland

The "gala concert" will open in the Shed at 8:15. Carvalho will conduct the first part of the first half session and then Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the BSO will take the podium and conduct the orchestra in Copland's piano concerto, with the composer, Aaron Copland, performing the work in his first public appearance with a symphony orchestra in 31 years.

At intermission door prizes will be awarded and then the Boston Pops Orchestra with the popular Arthur Fiedler conducting, will present a program with a promise of encores.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

AUG 6 - 1958

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

AUG 7 - 1958

Box-holders Are Announced For Tanglewood-on-Parade

TANGLEWOOD — Box-holders have been announced for the benefit concert in the Music Shed at tonight's Tanglewood-on-Parade.

The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Box-holders will be Mrs. John L. Senior, Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Sanborn, Mr. and Mrs. Stefan Lorant, Mr. and Mrs. David Huxley, Miss Constance de C. Parrish, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar B. Stern, Col. and Mrs. H. George Wilde, the Rev. and Mrs. Robert L. Curry and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas D. Perry Jr., all of Lenox; Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Beecher Stowe of Glendale.

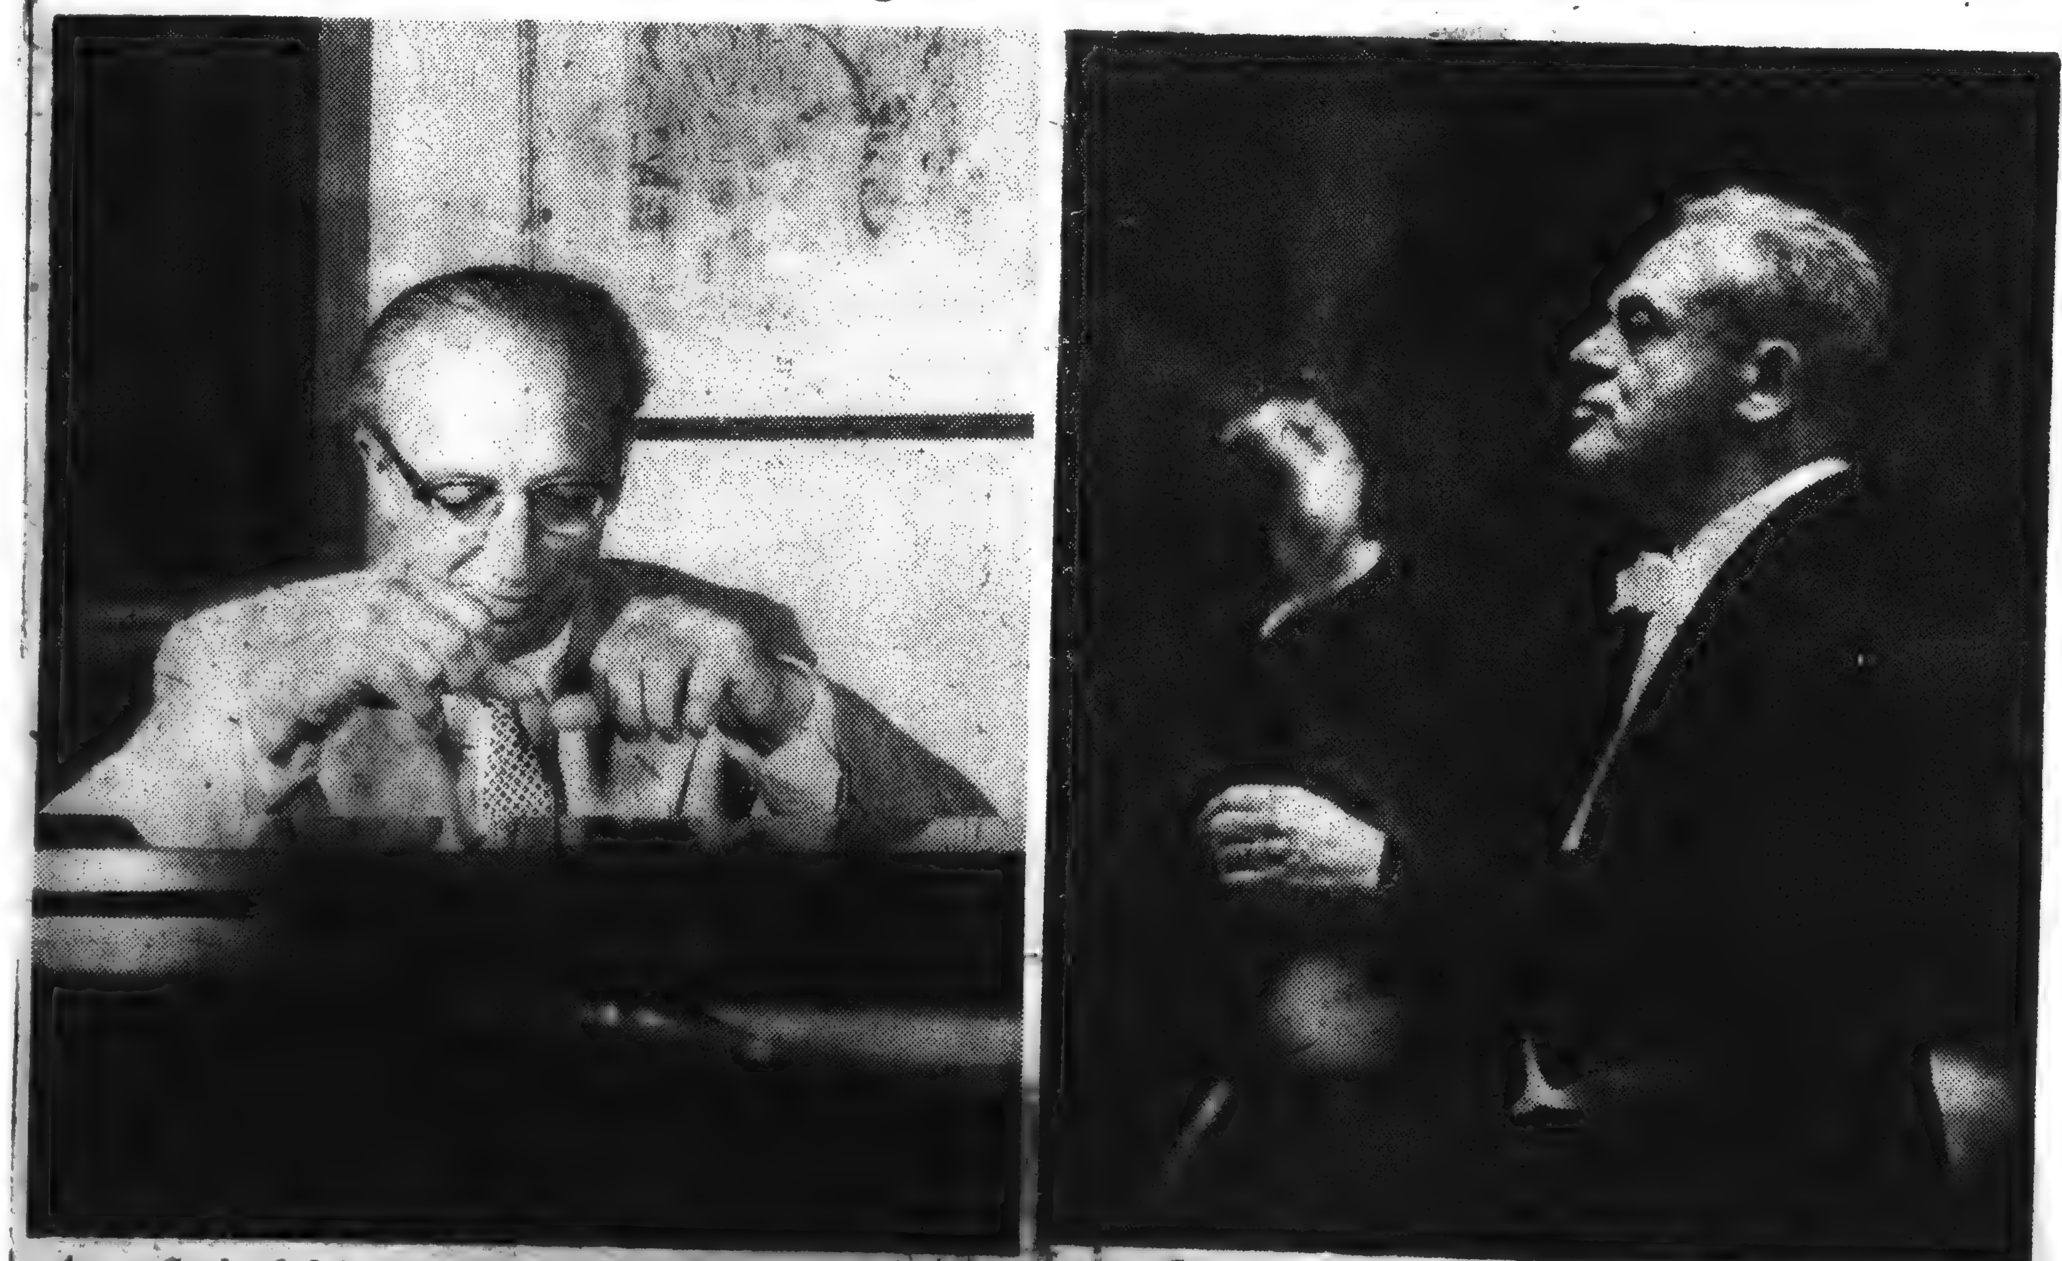
Also, Mr. and Mrs. David B. Karrick, Mr. and Mrs. Fritz Kreisler, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Percival, Mrs. Rodney Procter and Mr. and Mrs. Girard L. Spencer of Stockbridge; Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Jackson of Interlaken, Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Hatch of Sharon, Conn., Mr. and Mrs. Zino Francescatti of Monterey, and Michael T. Kelleher of Boston.

Others Are Named

Others are Mr. and Mrs. Shaun Kelly and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Holton Jones of Richmond, George Sokolsky of Otis, Mr. and Mrs. Alan J. Blau, Mr. and Mrs. Leon Podolsky, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence K. Miller, Mrs. Donald F. McPherson, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Gibson, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Downing and Mr. and Mrs. Alvin G. Fox, of Pittsfield, Howard Bessette of Sheffield.

Also, Mrs. Scoville Firuski of Lakeville, Conn., Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Beinecke, Frederic H. Brandi and Mr. and Mrs. Robert K. Wheeler of Great Barrington, Paul Hahn of New York, Mr. and Mrs. James Deeley of Lee, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wells McCabe of Albany, N.Y., Mrs. G. Hinman Barrett of Monroe, N.Y., Mr. and Mrs. Julian Sprague of Williamstown, Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Pierce of North Adams, Mrs. Alan N. Kobalkin of Passaic, N.J., and Mr. and Mrs. George E. Judd of Cannonsville, N.Y.

Principals at Tanglewood on Parade Tomorrow



Aaron Copland, left, will play his piano concerto with the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the first time in 31 years tomorrow night at 8:15 during the second portion of the first half of program in the Music Shed at Tanglewood on Parade. Richard Burgin, concertmaster of BSO, will be the conductor. Arthur Fiedler and Boston Pops Orchestra will close evening program.

Press (e)
BRISTOL, Conn.
Independent Republican
Circ. 13,480

AUG 6 - 1958

Music For Everybody

By SIGMUND SPAETH

While radio and television are still treating good music as a stepchild, apparently unaware of its actual and potential audience, the record manufacturers continue to combine education and entertainment for the benefit of Americas' music-loving public which is constantly growing, largely through such stimulation.

Most gratifying is the fact that record buyers today seem more interested in the music itself than in the artists concerned. This trend may mean a gradual emancipation from the deadly "star system" which has held back our musical development by at least 50 years and created a snobbery and intolerance of menacing proportions.

It is encouraging to find people now buying records of the so-called "orphan" type, in which the identity of the performers is kept a secret. Such records are sold today in supermarkets and other places off the beaten track of the music business, naturally at most attractive prices, since no artists' royalties are involved.

The buyers no longer ask for the names of the interpreters. They are interested only in the works themselves and their composers, with an extra critical ear for the standard of the performance and the quality of the recording.

Important Development

The development of high fidelity has undoubtedly played an important part in this improvement of taste, and the rapid advance of stereophonic sound should add still more to the new atttiude toward recorded music.

There are now numerous sets of "orphan" records on the market, with no mention whatever of the performing artists, but with considerable emphasis on the quality of the performance and its reproduction, as well as enlightening program notes and occasionally even some spoken comments.

The pioneer series of this type was made some years ago by Columbia, under the title of "Music You Enjoy," with this columnist selecting the music, beautifully but anonymously recorded by the Columbia Broadcasting symphony orchestra, conducted by Howard Barlow. The records were distributed chiefly by newspapers, as circulation-builders, and the total ran well into the millions.

Today there is a "Basic Library of the World's Greatest Music," which pays a small royalty to the National Committee for the Musical Arts, enabling this active organization to contribute financially to the support of various musical causes in selected cities.

Rochester and Syracuse have already profited by this practical arrangement, and several other musical centers are soon to be similarly aided. It is an excellent plan, since the sale of the records at low prices through chain stores automatically creates interest in local homes which is then expressed in support of musical activities in the community as a whole. Alec Templeton is chairman of this national committee, with Quaintance Eaton as its efficient Executive Secretary.

Through such distribution of established classics it is becoming more and more evident that music itself is of greater importance than any of its interpreters. The gradual substitution of "What?" for "Who?" in the approach to great music marks an enormous step forward in the musical culture of America.

* * *

The annual gala concert in aid of the Berkshire Music Center, takes place at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on the evening of August 7, with Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops Orchestra for half of the program. Among the other artists will be Aaron Copland, playing his own Piano Concerto, with Richar Burgin conducting.

* * *

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independen
Circ. 2,292

AUG 7 1958

HIGHLIGHTS TANGLEWOO

The gala Tanglewood on P ade concert in the Music Sh
t Tanglewood by the Bos
Symphony Orchestra and
Boston Pops Orchestra un
Arthur Fiedler will climax annual benefit for the Berksh Music Center on Thursday e
ning, August 7, at 8:15.

Eleazar de Carvalho, who open the program conduc
Gomes' Overture to Il Gua
and Falla's El Amor Bru
the head of the Departmen
Orchestral Conducting at Berkshire Music Center and been affiliated with the s for many years. Mr. Car began his association
Tanglewood as a condu student of Serge Koussevit

Aaron Copland will appe soloist in his own Piano
certo for the first time wit
Orchestra in thirty-one
Richard Burgin will condu

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
ESS CLIPPING BUREAU
Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 361,379 - S. 576,176

AUG 8 1958

ecord Crowd t Tanglewood

ENOX, Mass., Aug. 7.—Early
rnoon thundershowers in Berkshires did not deter a ord crowd of 14,588 that at-
ded Tanglewood-on-Parade,
annual benefit for the Berk-
re Music Center, the Boston
mphony Orchestra's summer
ool of music, tonight. They re rewarded by clearing es, a pleasant summer eve-ng and music of all kinds.
ter performances by the stunt orchestra, the opera dertment and works by student mposers, visitors enjoyed pic-c suppers on the Tanglewood wn to the accompaniment of choral concert.

Eleazar de Carvalho, Brazil-
n conductor, opened the gala
ncert by the Boston Symhony Orchestra in Tangle-
ood's 6,000-seat music shed ith the overture to "Il Gua-ny" by Gomez and Falla's
ite from "El Amor Brujo." A ghlight of the evening was e performance by Aaron Cop-nd of the solo part in his ano concerto. Richard Burgin nducted the orchestra, and e noted American composer s warmly received.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston
ps Orchestra took over the cond half of the program with rks by Offenbach, Ginastera, rnstein, an arrangement of pular dance tunes arranged
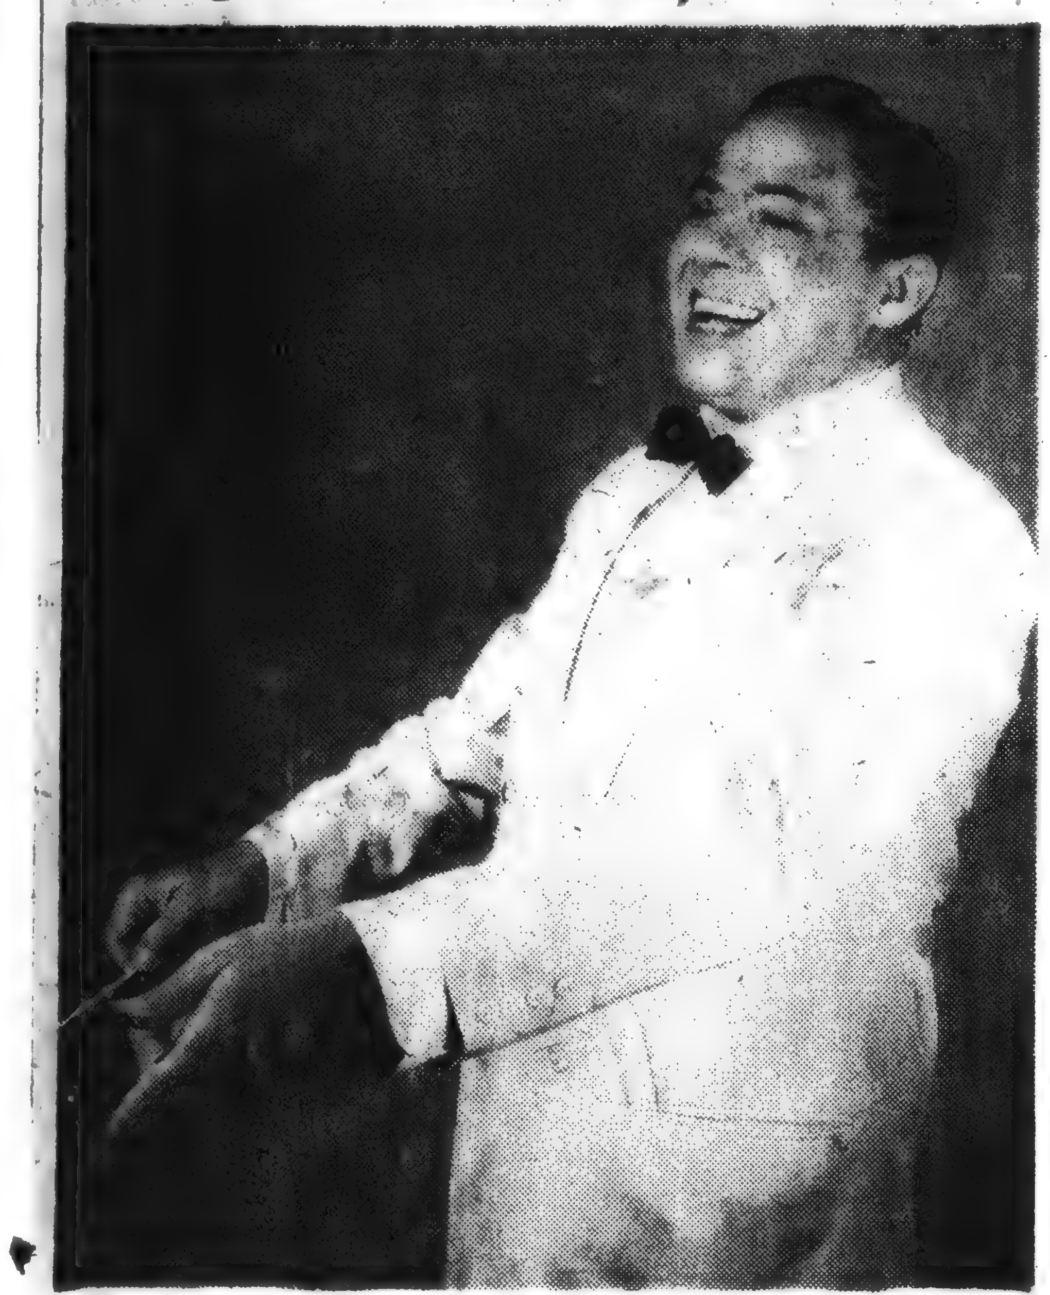
Richard Hayman called

[195]

Tanglewood Parade E. Eagle - Aug 5

Carvalho on Podium Thursday To Open BSO Concert in Shed



Whitestone

Eleazar de Carvalho

TANGLEWOOD — Eleazer de Carvalho, head of the department of orchestral conducting at the Berkshire Music Center, will open the Tanglewood on Parade program Thursday night in the Music Shed. He will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Gomes' overture to "Il Guarany" and Fall's "El Amor Brujo." Mr. Carvalho began his association with Tanglewood as a conducting student of the late Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, founder of the Music Center and musical director of the BSO for 25 years.

Big Crowd Expected

The Tanglewood on Parade program this year, held annually for the benefit of the Music Center, promises to be one of the biggest events in years at Tanglewood—if the weatherman cooperates. All of the boxes have been sold and there has been a brisk demand for reserved seat tickets in the Shed. Tanglewood officials reported this morning that more and more people are forming picnic groups every year for the Parade and a special concert is being arranged by the Tanglewood choir to entertain the picnicking crowds on the lawns between the Music Shed and the Tanglewood house, which is used as an administration building.

The fanfare and welcome will open at 5:45 when Roger Voisin, first trumpet of the BSO, will lead a group of students, studying brass instruments, in a performance on the lawn in the rear of the Shed.

Demonstrations at 6

At 6, the Berkshire Music Center students will fan out to their respective concert halls to give demonstrations of their talents. Simultaneous sessions will be held with the orchestra in the Shed; compositions in the chamber music hall and opera in the theater concert hall.

The lawn party will formally open at 7 when members of the choir will assemble on the porch of the main house to entertain the thousands who are expected to cover the spacious lawns of the Tanglewood property.

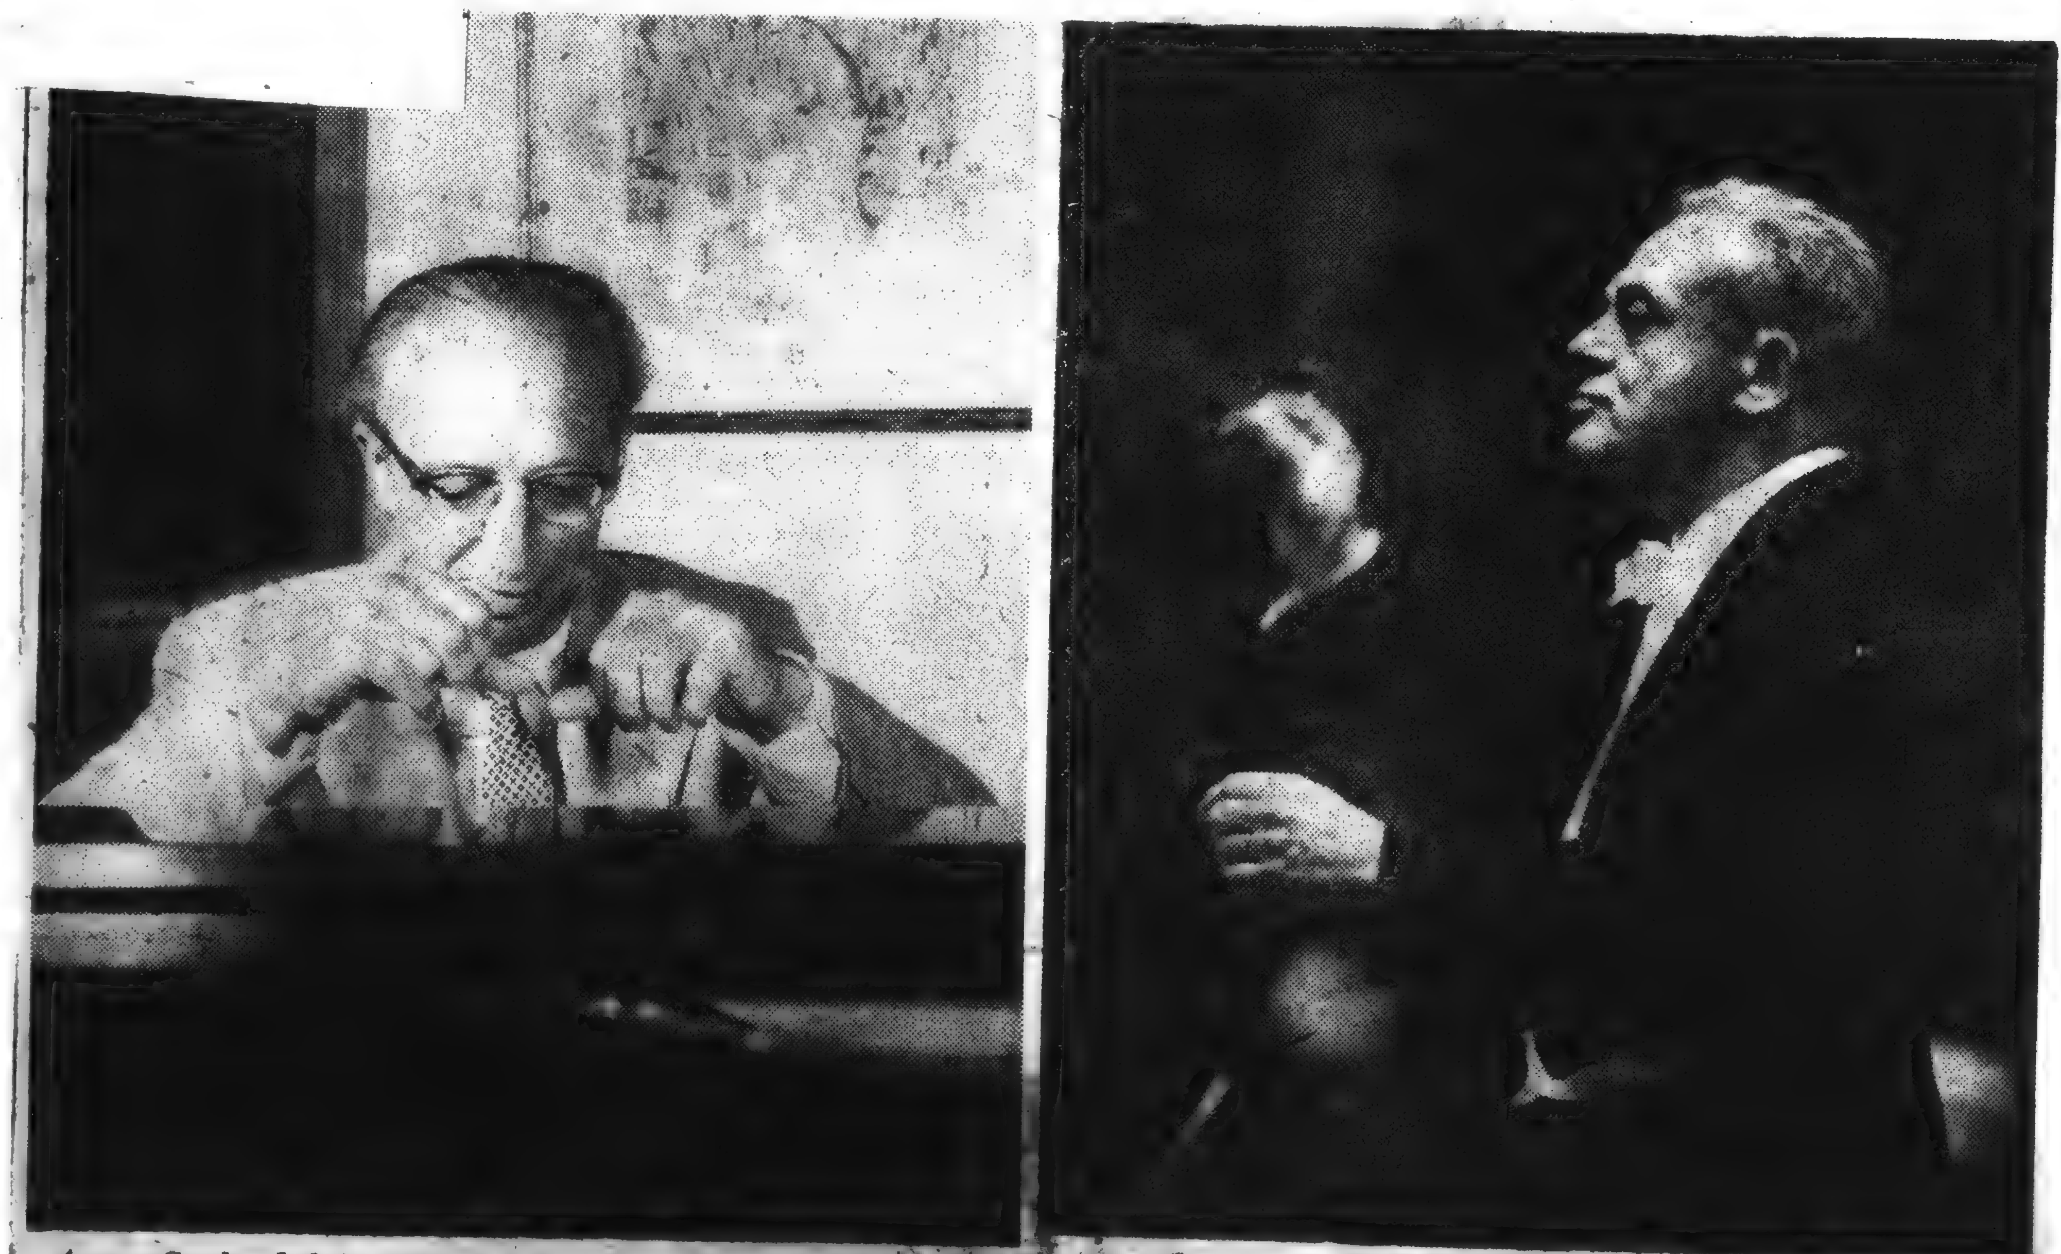
Burgin and Copland

The "gala concert" will open in the Shed at 8:15. Carvalho will conduct the first part of the first half session and then Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the BSO will take the podium and conduct the orchestra in Copland's piano concerto, with the composer, Aaron Copland, performing the work in his first public appearance with a symphony orchestra in 31 years.

At intermission door prizes will be awarded and then the Boston Pops Orchestra with the popular Arthur Fiedler conducting, will present a program with a promise of encores.

---

pals at Tanglewood on Parade Tomorrow



Aaron Copland, left, will play his piano concerto with the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the first time in 31 years tomorrow night at 8:15 during the second portion of the first half of program in the Music Shed at Tanglewood on Parade. Richard Burgin, concertmaster of BSO, will be the conductor. Arthur Fiedler and Boston Pops Orchestra will close evening program.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

AUG 7 - 1958

Box-holders Are Announced For Tanglewood-on-Parade

TANGLEWOOD — Box-holders have been announced for the benefit concert in the Music Shed at tonight's Tanglewood-on-Parade.

The concert is the climax of the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Box-holders will be Mrs. John L. Senior, Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Sanborn, Mr. and Mrs. Stefan Lorant, Mr. and Mrs. David Huxley, Miss Constance de C. Parrish, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar B. Stern, Col. and Mrs. H. George Wilde, the Rev. and Mrs. Robert L. Curry and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas D. Perry Jr., all of Lenox; Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Beecher Stowe of Glendale.

Also, Mr. and Mrs. David B. Karrick, Mr. and Mrs. Fritz Kreisler, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Percival, Mrs. Rodney Procter and Mr. and Mrs. Girard L. Spencer of Stockbridge; Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Jackson of Interlaken, Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Hatch of Sharon, Conn., Mr. and Mrs. Zino Francescatti of Monterey, and Michael T. Kelleher of Boston.

Others Are Named

Others are Mr. and Mrs. Shaun Kelly and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Holton Jones of Richmond, George Sokolsky of Otis, Mr. and Mrs. Alan J. Blau, Mr. and Mrs. Leon Podolsky, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence K. Miller, Mrs. Donald F. McPherson, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Gibson, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Downing and Mr. and Mrs. Alvin G. Fox, of Pittsfield, Howard Bessette of Sheffield.

Also, Mrs. Scoville Firuski of Lakeville, Conn., Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Beinecke, Frederic H. Brandi and Mr. and Mrs. Robert K. Wheeler of Great Barrington, Paul Hahn of New York, Mr. and Mrs. James Deeley of Lee, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wells McCabe of Albany, N.Y., Mrs. G. Hinman Barrett of Monroe, N.Y., Mr. and Mrs. Julian Sprague of Williamstown, Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Pierce of North Adams, Mrs. Alan N. Kobalkin of Passaic, N.J., and Mr. and Mrs. George E. Judd of Cannonsville, N.Y.

Press (e)
BRISTOL, Conn.
Independent Republican
Circ. 13,480
AUG 6 - 1958

Music For Everybody

By SIGMUND SPAETH

While radio and television are still treating good music as a stepchild, apparently unaware of its actual and potential audience, the record manufacturers continue to combine education and entertainment for the benefit of Americas' music-loving public which is constantly growing largely through such stimulation.

Most gratifying is the fact that record buyers today seem more interested in the music itself than in the artists concerned. This trend may mean a gradual emancipation from the deadly "star system" which has held back our musical development by at least 50 years and created a snobbery and intolerance of menacing proportions.

It is encouraging to find people now buying records of the so-called "orphan" type, in which the identity of the performers is kept a secret. Such records are sold today in supermarkets and other places off the beaten track of the music business, naturally at most attractive prices, since no artists' royalties are involved.

The buyers no longer ask for the names of the interpreters. They are interested only in the works themselves and their composers, with an extra critical ear for the standard of the performance and the quality of the recording.

Important Development

The development of high fidelity has undoubtedly played an important part in this improvement of taste, and the rapid advance of stereophonic sound should add still more to the new attitude toward recorded music.

There are now numerous sets of "orphan" records on the market, with no mention whatever of the performing artists, but with considerable emphasis on the quality of the performance and its reproduction, as well as enlightening program notes and occasionally even some spoken comments.

The pioneer series of this type was made some years ago by Columbia, under the title of "Music You Enjoy," with this columnist selecting the music, beautifully but anonymously recorded by the Columbia Broadcasting symphony orchestra, conducted by Howard Barlow. The records were distributed chiefly by newspapers, as circulation-builders, and the total ran well into the millions.

Today there is a "Basic Library of the World's Greatest Music," which pays a small royalty to the National Committee for the Musical Arts, enabling that active organization to contribute financially to the support of various musical causes in selected cities.

Rochester and Syracuse have already profited by this practical arrangement, and several other musical centers are soon to be similarly aided. It is an excellent plan, since the sale of the records at low prices through chain stores automatically creates interest in local homes which is then expressed in support of musical activities in the community as a whole. Alec Templeton is chairman of this national committee, with Quaintance Eaton as its efficient Executive Secretary.

Through such distribution of established classics it is becoming more and more evident that music itself is of greater importance than any of its interpreters. The gradual substitution of "What?" for "Who?" in the approach to great music marks an enormous step forward in the musical culture of America.

* * *

The annual gala concert in aid of the Berkshire Music Center, takes place at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on the evening of August 7, with Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops Orchestra for half of the program. Among the other artists will be Aaron Copland, playing his own Piano Concerto, with Richard Burgin conducting.

* * *

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independen
Circ. 2,292

AUG 7 1958

HIGHLIGHTS
TANGLEWO

The gala Tanglewood on rade concert in the Music S at Tanglewood by the Bos
Symphony Orchestra and
Boston Pops Orchestra un
Arthur Fiedler will climax annual benefit for the Berks Music Center on Thursday
ning, August 7, at 8:15.

Eleazar de Carvalho, who open the program condu
Gomes' Overture to Il Gua
and Falla's El Amor Bru
the head of the Departme
Orchestral Conducting at Berkshire Music Center an been affiliated with the
for many years. Mr. Car
began his association
Tanglewood as a cond student of Serge Koussevi

Aaron Copland will app
soloist in his own Piano
certo for the first time wi
Orchestra in thirty-one
Richard Burgin will cond

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
ESS CLIPPING BUREAU
Church Street - New Yo

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 361,379 - S. 576,176
AUG 8 1958

ecord Crowd
t Tanglewood

ENOX, Mass., Aug. 7.—Early
rnoon thundershowers in Berkshires did not deter a ord crowd of 14,588 that at-
ded Tanglewood-on-Parade,
annual benefit for the Berk-
re Music Center, the Boston
mphony Orchestra's summer
ool of music, tonight. They re rewarded by clearing
es, a pleasant summer eve-
g and music of all kinds.
er performances by the stunt orchestra, the opera dertment and works by student mposers, visitors enjoyed pic-supper on the Tanglewood wn to the accompaniment of choral concert.

Eleazar de Carvalho, Brazil-
n conductor, opened the gala
ncert by the Boston Sym-
hony Orchestra in Tangle-
ood's 6,000-seat music shed
th the overture to "Il Gua-ny" by Gomez and Falla's te from "El Amor Brujo." A hlight of the evening was performance by Aaron Copd of the solo part in his no concerto. Richard Burgin ducted the orchestra, and noted American composer warmly received.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston
s Orchestra took over the ond half of the program with ks by Offenbach, Ginastera, nstein, an arrangement of ular dance tunes arranged
Richard Hayman called

[196]

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292

AUG 7 1958

HIGHLIGHTS OF ANNUAL TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE

performance. Mr. Copland last performed the work with the Boston Symphony under Serge Koussevitzky's direction in 1927. When the Concerto (sometimes called the Jazz Concerto) was first performed in 1927 it was the subject of some controversy. After a recent performance of the Concerto in Boston, Rudolph Elie wrote "The . . . Concerto is both a milestone and a masterpiece . . . the critics of 1927 did not see it that way, nor could they have, the true creative artist is always ahead of his time." The Musical Quarterly has written of the work ". . . a period piece of the best kind . . . evoking the atmosphere of the 'twenties perhaps more effectively than any other work of 'serious' American music."

Arthur Fiedler, who will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra

(Continued on Page 14)

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

AUG 7- 1958

Carvalho in Brazil Politics For Purely Musical Purpose

Eleazar de Carvalho, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra tonight at Tanglewood on Parade, wil exchange the musical podium for the political stump when he return to his native Brazil Monday.

Mr. Carvalho is running for the Deputado Federal—the equivalent of the U.S. Senate from the state of Rio de Janiero. He thinks he's the first musician to run for such a high public office in Brazil.

Music is the reason for Mr. Carvalho's decision to run as a deputy representative for a four-year term in the Senate and music plays a big part in his campaign plans.

Needs $40 Million

He needs 40 million dollars for a national university for the arts he hopes to start in Brazil. His chief ambition in life is to duplicate Tanglewood in South America—specifically, Brazil. The money must come from the government, he said, and the only way to get it "is to become a congressman."

Koussevitzky Dream

The man who gave him his first "break" in the United States, Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, musical director of the BSO for 25 years and founder of the Berkshire Music Center, had similar thoughts. Until the time of his death in 1951, Koussevitzky waged a campaign to have the United States government create in the Cabinet of the President "a secretary of arts" to help promote cultural life in this country. He made the proposal to former President Harry Truman but nothing was done about it.

Displays Confidence

The project in Brazil, says Carvalho, "is big and needs a lot of money. It needs good laws which mean a good congressman." And like a typical Boston politician, he added, "That good congressman is right here in the person of Eleaza de Carvalho."

Some politicians in Brazil work for other projects, Carvalho added, "but I am going to work for music."

His method of campaigning will be to book open air concerts in the village squares on Sunday afternoons. During the intermission, he plans to make a political address to the people.

Mr. Carvalho said he will tell the people "It's not right for only small groups to be able to listen to an orchestra because it costs too much." He will call for state aid for the arts.

'Music' Trucks

Before the concerts, Mr. Carvalho plans to have sound trucks advertise the concert in the town. The truck will not blast a political message, he added, " but will emphasize the importance of music." However, he agreed, the square will be covered with political posters advocating his election.

Some friends in Brazil, he volunteered, suggested he start further down the political ladder, but Mr. Carvalho decided "I'll shoot for the works and run for the Senate. If, as they tell me, I have popularity, I will go for the big one right now."

Carvalho will leave the Berkshires on Monday for South America. He plans to start "poilitcal activity" Aug. 15. If elected, he makes only one promise:

"We'll have some new laws on music in Brazil."

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354
AUG 7- 1958

Tanglewood Goes on Parade With Fiedler as 'Marshal'

Biggest Crowd in Festival History Expected Tonight—Carvalho, Copland, Burgin Featured Before Pops Concert

TANGLEWOOD — Tonight's the night for the season's only benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, but the weekend promises to be even more spectacular as Dr. Charles Munch, musical director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra presents three concerts, featuring the works of Beethoven.

If the weatherman continues to cooperate, the attendance at tonight's Tanglewood on Parade is expected to exceed the all-time high of 15,000, and the Beethoven weekend, climaxed on Sunday afternoon with a performance of the composer's Ninth Symphony, may break all weekend records in the 24 years of the Berkshire Festival.

Eleazar de Carvalho, the Brazilian conductor, who got his start in this country in 1946 from Dr. Serge Koussevitzky and ended up as head of the department of orchestral conducting, will lead the Boston Symphony in the first portion of the Shed concert, beginning at 8:15.

When he finishes, Aaron Copland will appear as soloist in his own piano concerto for the first time with the BSO in 31 years, with Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the BSO, conducting. Mr. Copland last performed the work with the Boston orchestra under Koussevitzky in 1927. When the concerto, sometimes called the "Jazz Concerto" was first performed, it was the subject of some controversy.

Arthur Fiedler, who arrived last night from California and who will return there tomorrow after the benefit performance, will conduct his famous Boston Pops Orchestra in a group of Pops favorites in the second half of the program. He came here from San Francisco, where he has been conducting nine concerts with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra. After returning to the West Coast, he will conduct late in August the Louisville Symphony Orchestra at the French Lick (Ind.) Music Festival. He will then return to San Francisco until Sept. 7. Concertmaster of the Pops orchestra is Alfred Krips, a familiar figure with the BSO, who shares the first violin desk with Concertmaster Burgin at the regular BSO concerts.

Big Lawn Crowd

Tanglewood officials reported this morning reserved seat tickets this year went faster than ever, but the "lawn crowd" seems to be on the increase, willing to take their chances on the weather.

At intermission there will be a drawing of door prizes.

Two preliminary events will take place at 4 this afternoon when holders of box and reserved seats attended a special opera performance in the formal gardens of Tanglewood.

At 5:45 this afternoon everyone with a ticket to Tanglewood on Parade will be admitted to the grounds. Roger Voisin, first trumpet of the BSO and a member of the Music Center faculty, will lead a brass fanfare by students of the school, followed by a welcome from Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the center. Simultaneous performances by different school departments will start at 6, summarizing the work of the students during the six-week session.

At 7, while visitors are enjoying a picnic supper on the grounds, the Tanglewood choir will present a choral program on the porch of the main Tanglewood house, overlooking Stockbridge Bowl.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,937

AUG 8 - 1958

14,588 Persons At Tanglewood Hear Boston Pops

The grounds at Tanglewood were literally covered with listeners for the Tanglewood-on-Parade program Thursday with 14,588 persons listening to the final event of the evening featuring the Boston Pops Orchestra.

The popular orchestra shone with bright rhythms and smoothness as the audience reacted with ovations. The program opened with Eleazar de Carvalho conducting Gomes' "Il Guarany" Overture and Falla's "El Amor Brujo."

Aaron Coplan was piano soloist for his own composition, "Piano Concerto" conducted by Richard Burgin. The varied syncopations of the work were brought out in fine style.

For the second half of the program, Arthur Fiedler conducted his own orchestra. He moved from Offenbach's "Gaite Parsienne" Suite to Ginastera's "Dance of the Wheat" and Malambo from "Estancia" and selection from Bernstein's "West Side Story" with characteristic finesse. He ended with a rousing "76 Trombone" from "The Music Man" and several encores.

Many other events were scheduled for the Tanglewood-On-Parade program at 4 p. m.

One of the 10 door prizes awarded went to E. Peltier of 215 Pine St. who received a donkey and elephant, symbols of the Democratic and Republican parties.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 361,379 - S. 576,176

AUG 8

Record Crowd At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 7.—Early afternoon thundershowers in the Berkshires did not deter a record crowd of 14,588 that attended Tanglewood-on-Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, tonight. They were rewarded by clearing skies, a pleasant summer evening and music of all kinds. After performances by the student orchestra, the opera department and works by student composers, visitors enjoyed picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn to the accompaniment of a choral concert.

Eleazar de Carvalho, Brazilian conductor, opened the gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Tanglewood's 6,000-seat music shed with the overture to "Il Guarany" by Gomez and Falla's suite from "El Amor Brujo." A highlight of the evening was the performance by Aaron Copland of the solo part in his piano concerto. Richard Burgin conducted the orchestra, and the noted American composer was warmly received.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra took over the second half of the program with works by Offenbach, Ginastera, Bernstein, an arrangement of popular dance tunes arranged by Richard Hayman called "Dancing Through the Years" and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredits Willson. Mr. Fiedler also conducted a number of traditional pops encores climaxed by "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159

AUG 8 1958

The program for the final week at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., is scheduled as follows: Thursday, Tanglewood on Parade, with Arthur Feidler and the Boston Pops Orchestra; Friday, at 8:30 p.m., Charles Munch conducting Honegger's Prelude Fugue and Postlude, Beethoven's 7th Symphony, and Piano Concerto No. 5, the "Emperor," with Eugene Istomin as soloist; Saturday at 8:30 p.m., Pierre Monteux conducting Beethoven's Violin Concerto, with Berl Senofsky, soloist, and music from "Prometheus," Hindemith's Noblissima Visione, and Beethoven's Leonore Overture No 3; Sunday at 2:30 p.m., Munch conducts the Johannesburg Festival Overture, Walton; 9th Symphony, Beethoven, with Adele Addision, Blake Stern, Florence Kopleff, Donald Gramm and the Festival chorus.

Janna Dawson will be the assisting artist with the Berkshire Quartet in this Sunday's chamber music concert at Music Mountain, Falls Village, at 4 p.m. The program will include the Quartet, Opus 18, No. 6 by Beethoven; Sonata for Violin and Piano by Franck; Piano Quartet in G minor by Mozart.

B

[196]

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292

AUG 7 1958

HIGHLIGHTS OF ANNUAL TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE

The gala Tanglewood on Parade concert [illegible] Music Shed at Tanglewood [illegible] the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra under Arthur Fiedler will climax the annual benefit [illegible] the Berkshire Music Center Thursday evening, August [illegible] at 8:15.

Eleazar de Carvalho, who will open the program conducting Gomes' Overture to Il Guarany and Falla's El Amor Brujo is the head of the Department of Orchestral Conducting at the Berkshire Music Center and has been affiliated with the school for many years. Mr. Carvalho began his association with Tanglewood as a conducting student of Serge Koussevitzky.

Aaron Copland will appear as soloist in his own Piano Concerto for the first time with this Orchestra in thirty-one years. Richard Burgin will conduct the performance. Mr. Copland last performed the work with the Boston Symphony under Serge Koussevitzky's direction in 1927. When the Concerto (sometimes called the Jazz Concerto) was first performed in 1927 it was the subject of some controversy. After a recent performance of the Concerto in Boston, Rudolph Elie wrote "The . . . Concerto is both a milestone and a masterpiece . . . the critics of 1927 did not see it that way, nor could they have, the true creative artist is always ahead of his time." The Musical Quarterly has written of the work ". . . a period piece of the best kind . . . evoking the atmosphere of the 'twenties perhaps more effectively than any other work of 'serious' American music."

Arthur Fiedler, who will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra

(Continued on Page 14)

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

AUG 7- 1958

Carvalho in Brazil Politics For Purely Musical Purpose

Eleazar de Carvalho, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra tonight at Tanglewood on Parade, will exchange the musical podium for the political stump when he return to his native Brazil Monday.

Mr. Carvalho is running for the Deputado Federal—the equivalent of the U.S. Senate from the state of Rio de Janiero. He thinks he's the first musician to run for such a high public office in Brazil.

Music is the reason for Mr. Carvalho's decision to run as a deputy representative for a four-year term in the Senate and music plays a big part in his campaign plans.

Needs $40 Million

He needs 40 million dollars for a national university for the arts he hopes to start in Brazil. His chief ambition in life is to duplicate Tanglewood in South America—specifically, Brazil. The money must come from the government, he said, and the only way to get it "is to become a congressman."

Koussevitzky Dream

The man who gave him his first "break" in the United States, Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, musical director of the BSO for 25 years and founder of the Berkshire Music Center, had similar thoughts. Until the time of his death in 1951, Koussevitzky waged a campaign to have the United States government create in the Cabinet of the President "a secretary of arts" to help promote cultural life in this country. He made the proposal to former President Harry Truman but nothing was done about it.

Displays Confidence

The project in Brazil, says Carvalho, "is big and needs a lot of money. It needs good laws which mean a good congressman," and like a typical Boston politician he added, "That good congressman is right here in the person of Eleazar de Carvalho."

Some politicians in Brazil work for other projects, Carvalho added, "but I am going to work for music."

His method of campaigning will be to book open air concerts in the village squares on Sunday afternoons. During the intermission, he plans to make a political address to the people.

Mr. Carvalho said he will tell the people "It's not right for only small groups to be able to listen to an orchestra because it costs too much." He will call for state aid for the arts.

'Music' Trucks

Before the concerts, Mr. Carvalho plans to have sound trucks advertise the concert in the town. The truck will not blast a political message, he added, " but will emphasize the importance of music." However, he agreed, the square will be covered with political posters advocating his election.

Some friends in Brazil, he volunteered, suggested he start further down the political ladder, but Mr. Carvalho decided "I'll shoot for the works and run for the Senate. If, as they tell me, I have popularity, I will go for the big one right now."

Carvalho will leave the Berkshires on Monday for South America. He plans to start "poilitcal activity" Aug. 15. If elected, he makes only one promise:

"We'll have some new laws on music in Brazil."

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 361,379 - S. 576,176

AUG 8 1958

Record Crowd At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 7.—Early afternoon thundershowers in the Berkshires did not deter a record crowd of 14,588 that attended Tanglewood-on-Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, tonight. They were rewarded by clearing skies, a pleasant summer evening and music of all kinds. After performances by the student orchestra, the opera department and works by student composers, visitors enjoyed picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn to the accompaniment of a choral concert.

Eleazar de Carvalho, Brazilian conductor, opened the gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Tanglewood's 6,000-seat music shed with the overture to "Il Guarany" by Gomez and Falla's suite from "El Amor Brujo." A highlight of the evening was the performance by Aaron Copland of the solo part in his piano concerto. Richard Burgin conducted the orchestra, and the noted American composer was warmly received.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra took over the second half of the program with works by Offenbach, Ginastera, Bernstein, an arrangement of popular dance tunes arranged by Richard Hayman called "Dancing Through the Years" and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Willson. Mr. Fiedler also conducted a number of traditional pops encores climaxed by "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,937

AUG 8 - 1958

14,588 Persons At Tanglewood Hear Boston Pops

The grounds at Tanglewood were literally covered with listeners for the Tanglewood-on-Parade program Thursday with 14,588 persons listening to the final event of the evening featuring the Boston Pops Orchestra.

The popular orchestra shone with bright rhythms and smoothness as the audience reacted with ovations. The program opened with Eleazar de Carvalho conducting Gomes' "Il Guarany" Overture and Falla's "El Amor Brujo."

Aaron Copland was piano soloist for his own composition, "Piano Concerto" conducted by Richard Burgin. The varied syncopations of the work were brought out in fine style.

For the second half of the program, Arthur Fiedler conducted his own orchestra. He moved from Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne" Suite to Ginastera's "Dance of the Wheat" and Malambo from "Estancia" and selection from Bernstein's "West Side Story" with characteristic finesse. He ended with a rousing "76 Trombone" from "The Music Man" and several encores.

Many other events were scheduled for the Tanglewood-On-Parade program at 4 p. m.

One of the 10 door prizes awarded went to E. Peltier of 215 Pine St. who received a donkey and elephant, symbols of the Democratic and Republican parties.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

AUG 7- 1958

Tanglewood Goes on Parade With Fiedler as 'Marshal'

Biggest Crowd in Festival History Expected Tonight—Carvalho, Copland, Burgin Featured Before Pops Concert

TANGLEWOOD — Tonight's the night for the season's only benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, but the weekend promises to be even more spectacular as Dr. Charles Munch, musical director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra presents three concerts, featuring the works of Beethoven.

If the weatherman continues to cooperate, the attendance at tonight's Tanglewood on Parade is expected to exceed the all-time high of 15,000, and the Beethoven weekend, climaxed on Sunday afternoon with a performance of the composer's Ninth Symphony, may break all weekend records in the 24 years of the Berkshire Festival.

Eleazar de Carvalho, the Brazilian conductor, who got his start in this country in 1946 from Dr. Serge Koussevitzky and ended up as head of the department of orchestral conducting, will lead the Boston Symphony in the first portion of the Shed concert, beginning at 8:15.

When he finishes, Aaron Copland will appear as soloist in his own piano concerto for the first time with the BSO in 31 years, with Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the BSO, conducting. Mr. Copland last performed the work with the Boston orchestra under Koussevitzky in 1927. When the concerto, sometimes called the "Jazz Concerto" was first performed, it was the subject of some controversy.

Arthur Fiedler, who arrived last night from California and who will return there tomorrow after the benefit performance, will conduct his famous Boston Pops Orchestra in a group of Pops favorites in the second half of the program. He came here from San Francisco, where he has been conducting nine concerts with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra. After returning to the West Coast, he will conduct late in August the Louisville Symphony Orchestra at the French Lick (Ind.) Music Festival. He will then return to San Francisco until Sept. 7. Concertmaster of the Pops orchestra is Alfred Krips, a familiar figure with the BSO, who shares the first violin desk with Concertmaster Burgin at the regular BSO concerts.

Big Lawn Crowd

Tanglewood officials reported this morning reserved seat tickets this year went faster than ever, but the "lawn crowd" seems to be on the increase, willing to take their chances on the weather.

At intermission there will be a drawing of door prizes.

Two preliminary events will take place at 4 this afternoon when holders of box and reserved seats attended a special opera performance in the formal gardens of Tanglewood.

At 5:45 this afternoon everyone with a ticket to Tanglewood on Parade will be admitted to the grounds. Roger Voisin, first trumpet of the BSO and a member of the Music Center faculty, will lead a brass fanfare by students of the school, followed by a welcome from Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the center. Simultaneous performances by different school departments will start at 6, summarizing the work of the students during the six-week session.

At 7, while visitors are enjoying a picnic supper on the grounds, the Tanglewood choir will present a choral program on the porch of the main Tanglewood house, overlooking Stockbridge Bowl.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159

AUG 8 1958

The program for the final week at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., is scheduled as follows: Thursday, Tanglewood on Parade, with Arthur Feidler and the Boston Pops Orchestra; Friday, at 8:30 p.m., Charles Munch conducting Honegger's Prelude Fugue and Postlude, Beethoven's 7th Symphony, and Piano Concerto No. 5, the "Emperor," with Eugene Istomin as soloist; Saturday at 8:30 p.m., Pierre Monteux conducting Beethoven's Violin Concerto, with Berl Senofsky, soloist, and music from "Prometheus," Hindemith's Noblissima Visione, and Beethoven's Leonore Overture No 3; Sunday at 2:30 p.m., Munch conducts the Johannesburg Festival Overture, Walton; 9th Symphony, Beethoven, with Adele Addision, Blake Stern, Florence Kopleff, Donald Gramm and the Festival chorus.

Janna Dawson will be the assisting artist with the Berkshire Quartet in this Sunday's chamber music concert at Music Mountain, Falls Village, at 4 p.m. The program will include the Quartet, Opus 18, No. [illegible] by Beethoven; Sonata for Violin and Piano by Franck; Piano Quartet in G minor by Mozart.

Weekend ...

(Continued from Page 5)

Festival Overture, which was written for the 70th Anniversary of the city of Johannesburg in South Africa and first performed there in 1956. The Boston Symphony Orchestra presented the United States premiere of the Overture during the 1956/57 season.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's rehearsal on Saturday morning, August 9, at 10 o'clock will be open to the public for the benefit of the Pension Fund.

Aaron Copland will be heard in the final session of the Seminar in Contemporary Music on Friday afternoon, August 8, at 3:15. He will discuss his own music and there will be performances of his Four Songs from Twelve Poems of Emily Dickinson and the Piano Fantasy, with guest soloist Noel Lee.

---

[196]

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

AUG 7- 1958

Carvalho in Brazil Politics For Purely Musical Purpose

Eleazar de Carvalho, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra tonight at Tanglewood on Parade, wil exchange the musical podium for the political stump when he return to his native Brazil Monday.

Mr. Carvalho is running for the Deputado Federal—the equivalent of the U.S. Senate from the state of Rio de Janiero. He thinks he's the first musician to run for such a high public office in Brazil.

Music is the reason for Mr. Carvalho's decision to run as a deputy representative for a four-year term in the Senate and music plays a big part in his campaign plans.

Needs $40 Million

He needs 40 million dollars for a national university for the arts he hopes to start in Brazil. His chief ambition in life is to duplicate Tanglewood in South America—specifically, Brazil. The money must come from the government, he said, and the only way to get it "is to become a congressman."

Koussevitzky Dream

The man who gave him his first "break" in the United States, Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, musical director of the BSO for 25 years and founder of the Berkshire Music Center, had similar thoughts. Until the time of his death in 1951, Koussevitzky waged a campaign to have the United States government create in the Cabinet of the President "a secretary of arts" to help promote cultural life in this country. He made the proposal to former President Harry Truman but nothing was done about it.

Displays Confidence

The project in Brazil, says Carvalho, "is big and needs a lot of money. It needs good laws which mean a good congressman." And like a typical Boston politician, he added, "That good congressman is right here in the person of Eleazar de Carvalho."

Some politicians in Brazil work for other projects, Carvalho added, "but I am going to work for music."

His method of campaigning will be to book open air concerts in the village squares on Sunday afternoons. During the intermission, he plans to make a political address to the people.

Mr. Carvalho said he will tell the people "It's not right for only small groups to be able to listen to an orchestra because it costs too much." He will call for state aid for the arts.

'Music' Trucks

Before the concerts, Mr. Carvalho plans to have sound trucks advertise the concert in the town. The truck will not blast a political message, he added, "but will emphasize the importance of music." However, he agreed, the square will be covered with political posters advocating his election.

Some friends in Brazil, he volunteered, suggested he start further down the political ladder, but Mr. Carvalho decided "I'll shoot for the works and run for the Senate. If, as they tell me, I have popularity, I will go for the big one right now."

Carvalho will leave the Berkshires on Monday for South America. He plans to start "poilitcal activity" Aug. 15. If elected, he makes only one promise:

"We'll have some new laws on music in Brazil."

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

AUG 7- 1958

Tanglewood Goes on Parade With Fiedler as 'Marshal'

Biggest Crowd in Festival History Expected Tonight—Carvalho, Copland, Burgin Featured Before Pops Concert

TANGLEWOOD — Tonight's the night for the season's only benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, but the weekend promises to be even more spectacular as Dr. Charles Munch, musical director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra presents three concerts, featuring the works of Beethoven.

If the weatherman continues to cooperate, the attendance at tonight's Tanglewood on Parade is expected to exceed the all-time high of 15,000, and the Beethoven weekend, climaxed on Sunday afternoon with a performance of the composer's Ninth Symphony, may break all weekend records in the 24 years of the Berkshire Festival.

Eleazar de Carvalho, the Brazilian conductor, who got his start in this country in 1946 from Dr. Serge Koussevitzky and ended up as head of the department of orchestral conducting, will lead the Boston Symphony in the first portion of the Shed concert, beginning at 8:15.

When he finishes, Aaron Copland will appear as soloist in his own piano concerto for the first time with the BSO in 31 years, with Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the BSO, conducting. Mr. Copland last performed the work with the Boston orchestra under Koussevitzky in 1927. When the concerto, sometimes called the "Jazz Concerto" was first performed, it was the subject of some controversy.

Arthur Fiedler, who arrived last night from California and who will return there tomorrow after the benefit performance, will conduct his famous Boston Pops Orchestra in a group of Pops favorites in the second half of the program. He came here from San Francisco, where he has been conducting nine concerts with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra. After returning to the West Coast, he will conduct late in August the Louisville Symphony Orchestra at the French Lick (Ind.) Music Festival. He will then return to San Francisco until Sept. 7. Concertmaster of the Pops orchestra is Alfred Krips, a familiar figure with the BSO, who shares the first violin desk with Concertmaster Burgin at the regular BSO concerts.

Big Lawn Crowd

Tanglewood officials reported this morning reserved seat tickets this year went faster than ever, but the "lawn crowd" seems to be on the increase, willing to take their chances on the weather.

At intermission there will be a drawing of door prizes.

Two preliminary events will take place at 4 this afternoon when holders of box and reserved seats attended a special opera performance in the formal gardens of Tanglewood.

At 5:45 this afternoon everyone with a ticket to Tanglewood on Parade will be admitted to the grounds. Roger Voisin, first trumpet of the BSO and a member of the Music Center faculty, will lead a brass fanfare by students of the school, followed by a welcome from Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the center. Simultaneous performances by different school departments will start at 6, summarizing the work of the students during the six-week session.

At 7, while visitors are enjoying a picnic supper on the grounds, the Tanglewood choir will present a choral program on the porch of the main Tanglewood house, overlooking Stockbridge Bowl.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,937

AUG 8 - 1958

14,588 Persons At Tanglewood Hear Boston Pops

The grounds at Tanglewood were literally covered with listeners for the Tanglewood-on-Parade program Thursday with 14,588 persons listening to the final event of the evening featuring the Boston Pops Orchestra.

The popular orchestra shone with bright rhythms and smoothness as the audience reacted with ovations. The program opened with Eleazar de Carvalho conducting Gomes' "Il Guarany" Overture and Falla's "El Amor Brujo."

Aaron Coplan was piano soloist for his own composition, "Piano Concerto" conducted by Richard Burgin. The varied syncopations of the work were brought out in fine style.

For the second half of the program, Arthur Fiedler conducted his own orchestra. He moved from Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne" Suite to Ginastera's "Dance of the Wheat" and Malambo from "Estancia" and selection from Bernstein's "West Side Story" with characteristic finesse. He ended with a rousing "76 Trombone" from "The Music Man" and several encores.

Many other events were scheduled for the Tanglewood-On-Parade program at 4 p. m.

One of the 10 door prizes awarded went to E. Peltier of 215 Pine St. who received a donkey and elephant, symbols of the Democratic and Republican parties.

Buffrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
5 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 361,379 - S. 576,176

AUG 8 1958

Record Crowd At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 7.—Early afternoon thundershowers in the Berkshires did not deter a record crowd of 14,588 that attended Tanglewood-on-Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, tonight. They were rewarded by clearing skies, a pleasant summer evening and music of all kinds. After performances by the student orchestra, the opera department and works by student composers, visitors enjoyed picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn to the accompaniment of a choral concert.

Eleazar de Carvalho, Brazilian conductor, opened the gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Tanglewood's 6,000-seat music shed with the overture to "Il Guarany" by Gomez and Falla's suite from "El Amor Brujo." A highlight of the evening was the performance by Aaron Copland of the solo part in his piano concerto. Richard Burgin conducted the orchestra, and the noted American composer was warmly received.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra took over the second half of the program with works by Offenbach, Ginastera, Bernstein, an arrangement of popular dance tunes arranged by Richard Hayman called "Dancing Through the Years" and "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man" by Meredith Willson. Mr. Fiedler also conducted a number of traditional pops encores climaxed by "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159

AUG 8 1958

The program for the final week at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., is scheduled as follows: Thursday, Tanglewood on Parade, with Arthur Feidler and the Boston Pops Orchestra; Friday, at 8:30 p.m., Charles Munch conducting Honegger's Prelude Fugue and Postlude, Beethoven's 7th Symphony, and Piano Concerto No. 5, the "Emperor," with Eugene Istomin as soloist; Saturday at 8:30 p.m., Pierre Monteux conducting Beethoven's Violin Concerto, with Berl Senofsky, soloist, and music from "Prometheus," Hindemith's Noblissima Visione, and Beethoven's Leonore Overture No 3; Sunday at 2:30 p.m., Munch conducts the Johannesburg Festival Overture, Walton; 9th Symphony, Beethoven, with Adele Addision, Blake Stern, Florence Kopleff, Donald Gramm and the Festival chorus.

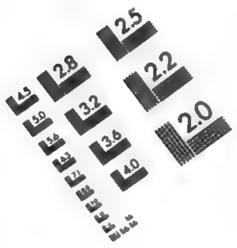
Janna Dawson will be the assisting artist with the Berkshire Quartet in this Sunday's chamber music concert at Music Mountain, Falls Village, at 4 p.m. The program will include the Quartet, Opus 18, No. 6 by Beethoven; Sonata for Violin and Piano by Franck; Piano Quartet in G minor by Mozart.

REDUCTION
RATIO
20x

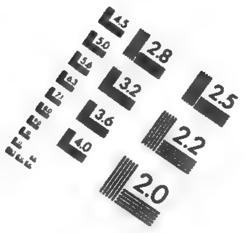
2.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

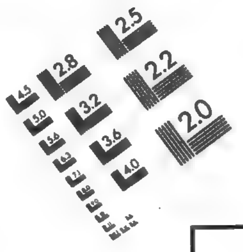


2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
3.6
2.0
4.0

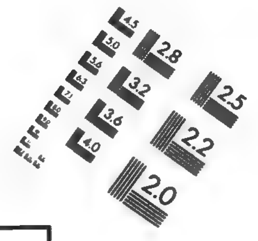


2.8
2.5
3.2
3.6
2.2
4.0
2.0

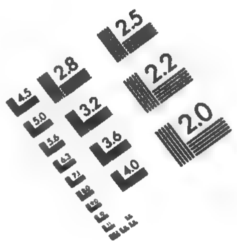
PM-MGP 13"x18"
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



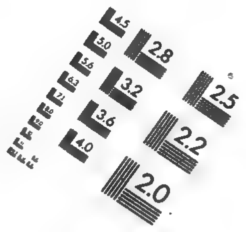
2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0



2.8
3.2
2.5
3.6
2.2
4.0
2.0



2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0

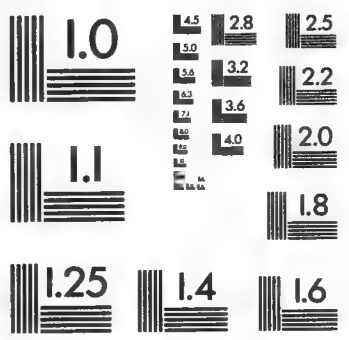


2.8
3.2
2.5
3.6
2.2
4.0
2.0

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm



1.0
2.8
2.5
3.2
2.2
3.6
2.0
4.0
1.1
1.8
1.25
1.4
1.6

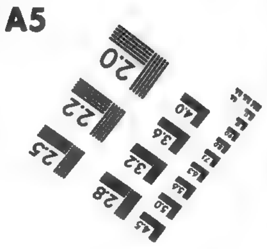
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
1.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
1.5 mm

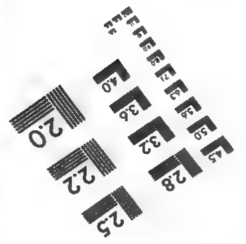
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890
2.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890
2.5 mm

A5



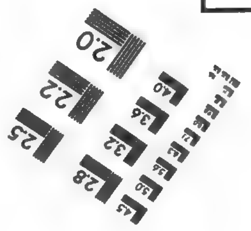
2.0
2.2
4.0
3.6
2.5
3.2
2.8



4.0
2.0
3.6
3.2
2.2
2.8
2.5

A4

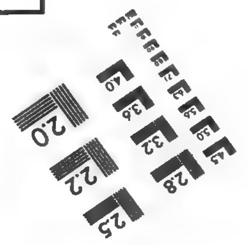
A3



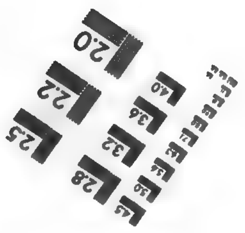
2.0
2.2
4.0
3.6
2.5
3.2
2.8

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119



4.0
2.0
3.6
3.2
2.2
2.8
2.5



2.0
2.2
4.0
3.6
2.5
3.2
2.8

4.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

4.0
2.0
3.6
3.2
2.2
2.8
2.5

3.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 60,734

Music: 'Tanglewood on Parade' At Berkshire Festival

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — About seven hours of music making, climaxed by the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestra was yesterday's "Tanglewod On Parade," the annual spectacular of the Berkshire Music Festival.

First part of the Boston Symphony's program was conducted by Eleazar De Carvalho of Brazil. Aaron Copland was soloist with the Boston Symphony in his piano concerto. The conductor was Richard Burgin, concert master of the orchestra.

The Boston Pops played a program of light classics under the direction of Arthur Fiedler.

At four in the afternoon, ticket holders were invited to demonstrations by the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center and the Tanglewood Study Group of instrumentalists and choristers.

Audience Welcomed

Public events began at 5:45 with a fanfare (eight brasses and drums) by Berkshire Center students, directed by Roger Voisin, first trumpet with the Boston Symphony. The large audience, assembled on the grounds before the shed, were welcomed by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the center.

From six o'clock until the evening's concert by the two big orchestras, various departments of the center gave simultaneous performances. The student orchestra performed in the shed — opera was in the Theater-Concert Hall — Composition was in the Chamber Music Hall — and the Tanglewood choir on the Main House porch.

We were much taken with the calm, efficient baton of Wonsik Lim from Seoul, Korea, as he conducted the student orchestra in Weber's "Der Freitschutz" Overture.

The brasses were in excellent form, and a fine sense of proportion was achieved between the despondent opening of the overture and its agitated developments.

Strauss "Don Juan" Played

Zubin Mehta of Bombay, India, was a more bombastic type of director for Richard Strauss' tone-poem, "Don Juan." He brought out a multitude of individual balances in a most serious and persuasive manner.

The strings sang out the lush melodies with beautiful tone, and the brasses were ringing and accurate in pitch.

Boris Goldovsky of the opera department would seem to have elected Menotti's "The Telephone" and scenes from Puccini's "La Boheme" as Tanglewood specialties.

Fibreglass Setting

"The Telephone" was distinguished this time only by the new fiberglass setting with projectors that has been developed here this summer. Pictorial effects are produced on a series of panels giving the required illusions.

The role of Ben was sung in part, and otherwise recited, by Lucien Olivier of Roxbury, His "Dont You Cry" was attractively sung. As a whole, the production dragged, missing much of the humor. Gertrude Pepin of Woonsocket, R.I. was rather colorless in the role of Lucy — and vocally unsteady. Her most rewarding effort was "It All Began On Sunday."

By the evening concert, 14,588 persons jammed the Music Shed and surrounding terrain.

De Carvalho got Gomes' "Il Guarany" overture off to a noisy, almost belligerent start. Brasses blared and timpani pummeled. The overture is filled with capricious little whimsies that De Carvalho developed into dramatic items.

He's a picturesque conductor. As one of our neighbors said: "He may do a samba." He snarled, exhorted, and did everything but push-ups. It wound up as a real whiz-bang.

There was naturally a quality of convincing authenticity in De Carvalho's interpretations of extracts from De Falla's "El Amor Brujo." He gave an ultra-romantic concept of the "Pantomime," in which solos were lusciously played by Samuel Mayes, cellist, and concert-master Alfred Krips.

"Dance of Terror" was brought to great agitation, and the "Magic Circle" was the last word in solaceful sound. For some curious reason, several things went wrong in the "Ritual Fire Dance." There was confusion over one of the important oboe solos, added notes where they didn't belong and in spots pretty bad intonation.

Fair Pianist

The Copland concerto is either too old or too young to raise anything but consternation ever what vintage of jazz it's supposed to be. Copland played with the same orchestra 31 years ago.

He's a pretty fair pianist — at least he was last night, in this work. The men of the Boston Symphony were admirably obedient to the scattered notes and vitriolic rhythms that the composer stirred up in the name of jazz.

The audience appeared fitfull, whispering, and very polite in its applause. Copland smiled through most of his concerto as if he were pleased as punch.

Directed by the popular Fiedler, the Boston Pops gave scintillating performances of an easy-to-take program. These included Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne." the Dance of the Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia" by Ginastera, selections from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story," and a potpourri of popular tunes called "Dancing Through the Years," and 76 trombones from "The Music Man" by Willson.

It was a big day for everyone concerned, especially the Berkshire Music Center, to which it brought benefits of $33,000.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 - S. 1,189,293

AUG 8 1958

Annual Tanglewood on Parade Attracts Record Crowd of 14,588

By HAROLD C. SCHONBERG
Special to The New York Times

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 7—The annual midsummer revel known as Tanglewood on Parade was celebrated here today, all day.

This is the traditional event that takes place the Thursday preceding the final week-end of concerts of the Berkshire Music Festival. It is the day when everybody's hair is let down, when the students of the Berkshire Music Center take over a good portion of the proceedings, when the public throngs the grounds, eating picnic lunches and when a succession of conductors mounts the podium to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

There were some anxious moments before the revels got under way. About 2:30 in the afternoon the rain came down; and there's nothing like rain to wash away outdoor festivities. But after the sprinkle came the sun, and also busload upon busload of squealing young girls from every summer camp within miles and miles. Adults came, too. By the time all heads were counted, it turned into a Tanglewood on Parade record—an audience of 14,588.

The students filled most of the afternoon sessions. The opera workshop was represented by talented young singers from Long Beach, Calif. (Miss Mary Bradley) to Woonsocket, R. I. (Miss Gertrude Pepin). This large geographical spread was exceeded by the composition students, who ranged from Rolv Yttrehus of Duluth, Minn., to Ilhan Usmanbas of Ankara, Turkey.

But the student conductors had that beat, with David J. Zinman of New York through Zubin Mehta of Bombay, India, through Wonsik Lim of Seoul, Korea. There also was, as one of the performing musicians, Aaron Copland, originally from Brooklyn.

Mr. Copland was soloist at the evening concert with his own Piano Concerto. Of recent years, he has not been too active as a pianist. He has not played the work in public since 1927, the year it was composed.

The Concerto was conducted by Richard Burgin, and it was a strange piece of music to go on a program that contained popular works of a "pop" nature conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho and Arthur Fiedler. At least a good section of the audience found it so. Puzzlement was evident in some quarters, and an operative in the rear of the Shed reported some boos.

It is not often that the Concerto is heard any more. For it is a rather dated work, with its echoes of Gershwin and jazz of the Nineteen Twenties, both treated in a highly stylized and dissonant idiom. It also is difficult and complicated. Mr. Copland played it with brilliance. He was, and is, a more than merely competent pianist. And Mr. Burgin supported him solidly.

As for the rest of the program, Mr. de Carvalho was quite the virtuoso conductor, and quite a showman, too. The orchestra obviously enjoyed playing for him the "Guarany" Overture and sections from "El Amor Brujo" by Falla.

Mr. Fiedler conducted Offenbach, Ginastera, Bernstein, Hayman and Willson, and also numerous encores. He went about his work with high good spirits and very fast tempos. The Boston Symphony never sounded better or more spirited.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,541

AUG 8 - 1958

Tanglewood 'Parades' For Crowd of 14,588

Boston Symphony, Pops Share Program With Students, Choir; Copland, Carvalho Appear

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX — The Tanglewood-on-Parade program drew 14,588 persons to the spacious grounds Thursday afternoon and evening. As usual, there was something doing every minute following the traditional fanfare and welcoming address.

Opera Concert

However, before that, there was a special opera concert for holders of reserved seat tickets. It was to have been held in the gardens.

We were fortunate in hearing Menotti's "The Telephone." It has been a prime favorite at Tanglewood over the years, perhaps because it takes only two singers and a telephone. It was not particularly well sung by soprano Gertrude Pein, but it was

See TANGLEWOOD
Page Six

[illegible]

A bit later, we listened to the student orchestra. It is one of the best we have heard here for several seasons. We were there in time to watch the young Swiss student-conductor Gustave Meier from Zurich, direct an arresting performance of the Angelic Concert from Hindemith's "Mathis Der Maler," and to watch David J. Zinman of New York conduct a perceptive performance of Schuman's "New England Triptych" (after William Billings).

Choir Is Heard

The Tanglewood choir, which seems to not have as good vocal material as in former years, has learned a lot of music during the past six weeks. This evening, in front of the main house, it was heard in a variety of compositions conducted by student and professional directors.

We were particularly impressed with a set of psalms, set by Lukas Foss. They were tricky and difficult, but very impressive. Vocal soloists Doralene McNelly, soprano, and Richard Gilley, tenor, were ably assisted by pianists Lukas Foss and Robert Miller. Another fine work was Pinkham's "Christmas Cantata," admirably conducted by Lorna Cooke DeVaron, a member of the faculty.

The evening concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra turned out to be a huge success. Eleazar Carvalho, the Brazilian conductor who is so respected by the student conductors whom he coaches here, conducted the Boston Symphony players in the overture, "Il Guarany" by Gomes, and in three movements from "El Amor Brujo" by De Falla. Mr. Carvalho is one of those conductors one wishes might share the podium with Charles Munch during the festival season. He has great sensitivity and a splendid rhythmic sense.

Copland at Keyboard

Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was the conductor for Aaron Copland's piano concerto and the composer was soloist in it. Mr. Copland is better known as a composer than as a pianist, but one may assume that with him as soloist in his own work, we heard a definitive performance.

Mr. Burgin worked valiantly to put the work across and the or[illegible]

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER,
Independent
Circ. 102,8

AUG 8 - 19

14,588 Atte "Tanglewo On Parade

By JOHN F.

LENOX — "Tan Parade" presented the benefit of B Center, drew a reco night and grossed
All artists and group
their services.

Many of the 400 st
Center took part in demonstrations, pre of opera, concerts o chamber music, a l orchestra under tale conductors, and a original compositions

In an interesting i Boston Symphony an ego, the Boston "Po tra, gave a gala pro to excite and amus how full of fun th members of these g be. So the young wer grown-up, and the old joyously young for a and everyone had time.

Every seat in the 6
music shed was sold the concert, and the sands listened from lawns.

Conducts Sym

Eleazar de Carval
the department of or ducting, led the Bosto with Albert Kripe master, in Gomes'
Guarany" Overture
sodes of Falla's "El A Carvalho used fluid
tures to draw from an elastic, dancing
"Pantomime." The Terror" was not was able and in Magic Circle" wa building music, in c climactic, well-known Dance." Bernard Zi
the important piano

Aaron Copland, h
partment of compo
in his own Piano C Richard Burgin con land played this 31-y
under Koussevitzky,
performed in it wit
Symphony since.

Beginning in a
rious modern mood
launches suddenly idiom, and weav
themes of its own strongly suggesting known jazz scores are gorgeous and tingling. The jazzy
the woodwinds is f

"Pops" Ens

Arthur Fiedler an ensemble played eig Offenbach's "Gaite
with tremendous saucily insinuating
Dance of the Wheat
tera's "Estancia," itself, and the Mala stirring, rhythmic,
climax.

Selections from L
stein's "West Side
fresh and appealing
"Dancing Through
took the cheering aud way from cakewalks
Charleston and other up to a roof-shaking rock and roll.

Three Leroy Anders
featured expert work
ters Ghitalla, Mogel Come in "Bugler's Holi by Charles Smith, pe
in "The Typewriter."
zicato" for strings w
ful.

Other encores were
Bogey March," "Look
Sharp" and "The S
Stripes Forever."

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

AUG 9 - 1958

Berkshire Week in Review

The Poisoned Well

TOWN MEETINGS are a wellspring of American democracy, but sometimes the well gets poisoned with paralyzing results. This was demonstrated in Great Barrington again Monday night when an acrimonious special town meeting left the community more bitterly divided than ever over what to do about its chronic school housing problem.

Up for reconsideration at the meeting was the [illegible] School Committee proposal for construction of a $744,000 intermediate school to meet an acute overcrowding problem which is forcing the town into a double-session system. Amid boos, catcalls and loud recriminations, the proposal was finally slapped down by a vote of 595 to 311, a much worse defeat than it suffered when first proposed four months ago. Because a bond issue is involved, two-thirds approval would have been needed to make the school a reality.

Behind the thumping "No" vote, which repudiated virtually all local school officials and contradicted a long parade of surveys and statistics on the overcrowding problem, was the relentless anti-school campaigning of Earl S. Jones, head and lungs of Great Barrington's unaffiliated Taxpayers' Assn. But the acidity of the fight indicated on the part of small taxpayers who feel pinched by the town's contracting economy and have been persuaded that they are being pushed around by the proschool forces. Compounding the problem is an increasing reluctance on the part of many of the town's abler citizens to get enmeshed in the vendettas of local politics.

But whatever the causes, the main effects of the meeting were obvious. The local schism was more pronounced than ever, and the school problem was further than ever from solution. According to Dr. John E. Hassett, chairman of the School Committee, the entire high school and five grammar school grades will be condemned to a system of double sessions within the next three years.

Although it played second fiddle to the school issue, the original reason for the Great Barrington special meeting was the petition of Solomon Nager for a zoning change to permit him to establish bowling alleys and a recreation area on Route 7 across from the Monument Mountain reservation — a petition which was rejected by a vote of 473 to 435 on the grounds that the town's residential and scenic areas should be protected from "the corrosion of commercialism." The meeting also voted 575 to 204 to make the town's Finance Committee elective rather than appointive.

Wilson Park Tragedy

FOR THE PAST seven months, Michael N. Slosky, a 28-year-old Pittsfield sailor stationed in Charleston, S.C., had been receiving reports that his wife was having an affair back home with Marine Sgt. Henry Gripenberg, a clerk at the local reserve center on Onota Lake Boulevard. Last Saturday Slosky obtained a weekend pass, bought a .25 caliber automatic pistol, and came home to find out for himself.

According to the police report, Slosky took a plane to New York City, a train to Albany, and hitchhiked to Pittsfield, arriving at his Wilson Park home at about 4 a.m. Sunday. Having no key, he stacked two garbage cans behind the house, climbed in through a kitchen window, and went upstairs where he found his wife and Gripenberg asleep in bed. He woke them up and, after five minutes of conversation, fired five shots at Gripenberg, who was killed almost instantly when a bullet penetrated his heart and liver. Then Slosky called the police and waited for them to take him away.

In District Court next morning Slosky, whom police termed a cooperative prisoner, only spoke when asked to spell his name. After the mandatory not-guilty plea was entered to the charge of first degree murder, he was taken to the county House of Correction to await a preliminary hearing. Gripenberg's body, accompanied by a Marine guard, was flown from Westover Field to his home in Earlhab, Iowa, for burial.

Not at home when the shooting occurred were the Sloskys' two children, Michael Allen, 4, and Susan Ann, 5. Mrs. Slosky, who had been married to the electrician's mate, first class, for about seven years, had filed for divorce in Probate Court here a month ago on grounds of cruel and abusive treatment.

Other Headlines

A CROWD of 14,588 [illegible] tourists, campers and [illegible]-seekers plus a sprinkling of music-lovers, swarmed over the Tanglewood grounds Thursday night at the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities. Both the attendance and the box office gross of $33,000 (which goes to the Berkshire Music Center) set all-time records.

* * *

Police Chief William J. Collins of Stockbridge died in the line of duty last Tuesday afternoon when he suffered a heart attack while chasing two young Shirley Industrial School escapees who were racing through Stockbridge in a stolen car at speeds of up to 100 m.p.h. Chief Collins, 52-year-old veteran of a dozen years on the force, crashed into a guard rail on Route 183 just north of the Garden Center, after the attack occurred. The escapees were caught by State Police and committed to the Youth Service Board.

* * *

[illegible] negotiations [illegible] GE and IUE [illegible] Councilman [illegible] a Democratic candidate for state Senate in the Berkshire District, said he will fight against efforts to place the City Council on record in support of IUE's demands, which he termed none of the city government's business. This puts him in the opposite corner from Ward 7 Councilman John F. Fraser, who is running for the Democratic nomination as state representative in the Berkshire Third District and has called for a special Council meeting to back the union.

* * *

Contending that the land is fully utilized for farming operations and may be needed for a new Courthouse, the County Commissioners unanimously declined to consider selling a portion of the County House of Correction grounds to Pittsfield as the site of a proposed public housing project for the elderly. Mayor Haughey acidly replied that he wouldn't have bothered to ask if he had known that "the production of onions and a few other vegetables was of such extreme importance to the county commissioners."

* * *

While the State Racing Commission held off its decision on what to do with the controversial petition requesting a hearing on this year's Barrington Fair racing dates, Pittsfield's Yellow Cab Co. announced that it will run special busses for more charitably inclined gamblers who want to go over the mountain to play beano in New Lebanon, N.Y., where it has been legalized under a new local option law. Beano was banned in Massachusetts some years ago after being infiltrated by racketeers.

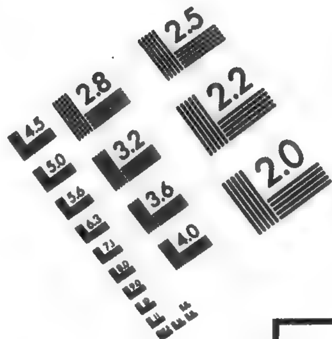
Obituaries

Dr. Ira J. Schilling, 68, of Pittsfield, founded Junior League's dental clinic, life member Western District Dental Society, provided service for Berkshire Industrial Farm . . . William J. Collins, 52, of Stockbridge, chief of police in 1952, '57 and '58, Stockbridge civil defense head, member National Police Chiefs' Association . . . Other deaths:

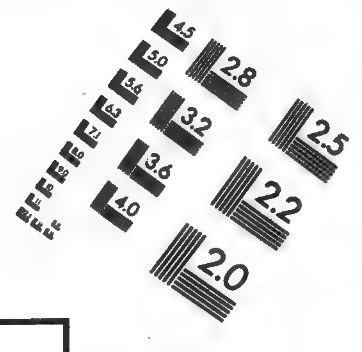
Athearn, Mrs. Laura ex-Dalton.
Conroy, John F. (88) Pittsfield.
Crennan, Ronald E. (46) Housatonic.
Ford, Mrs. Bertha E. (80) Pittsfield.
Johnson, Mrs. Nettie (82) ex-Clayton.
Kelsey, Harlan P. (86) Dalton.
Morin, Edward H. (57) North Adams.
Murray, Walter L. (72) Pittsfield.
O'Neil, Patrick J. (89) Pittsfield.
Rausch, Mrs. Frank (57) Pittsfield.
Savery, Mrs. William (80) Dalton.
Stevens, Mrs. Lydia (86) Pittsfield.
Tyer, George H. (75) Lee.
Williams, Mrs. Anna (76) Gt. Barrington.
Wixsom, Charles F. (64) Pittsfield.

REDUCTION
RATIO
14x

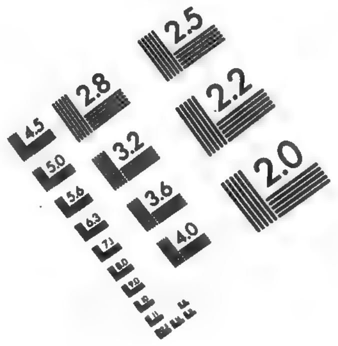
PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



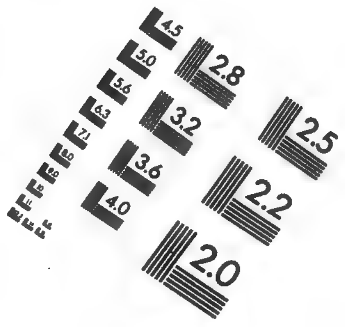
2.5
2.8
2.2
4.5
5.0
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0



4.5
5.0
2.8
3.2
2.5
3.6
2.2
4.0
2.0



2.5
2.8
2.2
4.5
5.0
3.2
2.0
5.6
3.6
4.0

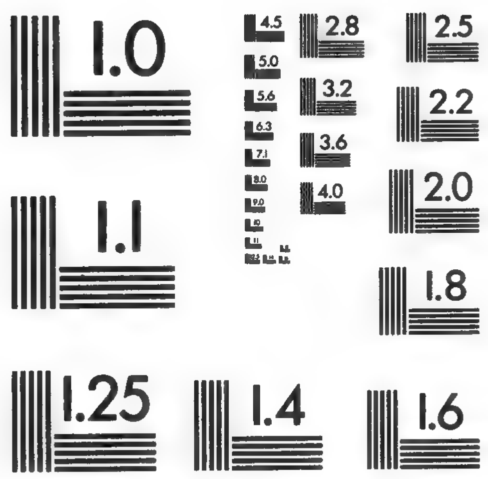


4.5
5.0
2.8
3.2
2.5
3.6
2.2
4.0
2.0

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm



1.0
4.5
2.8
2.5
5.0
5.6
3.2
2.2
6.3
3.6
7.1
8.0
4.0
2.0
9.0
1.1
1.8
1.25
1.4
1.6

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

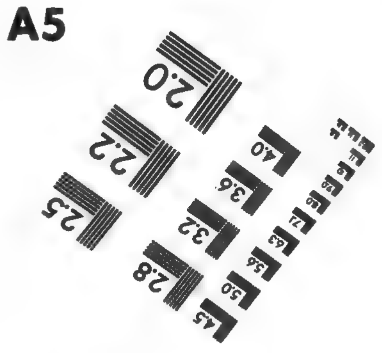
1.0 mm

1.5 mm

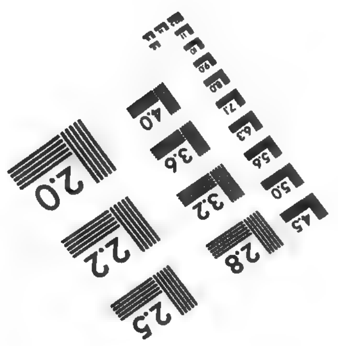
2.0 mm

2.5 mm

A5



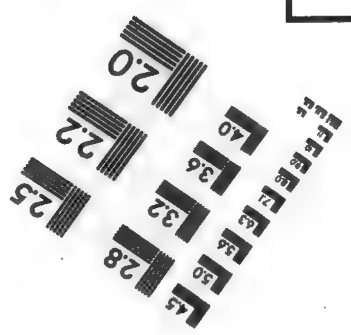
2.0
2.2
4.0
3.6
2.5
3.2
2.8
4.5



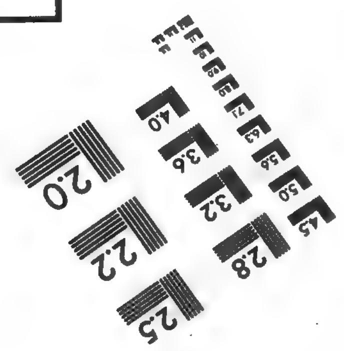
2.0
4.0
3.6
2.2
3.2
4.5
2.5
2.8

A4

A3



2.0
2.2
4.0
3.6
2.5
3.2
2.8
5.0
4.5



2.0
4.0
3.6
2.2
3.2
5.0
4.5
2.5
2.8

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 60,734

Music: 'Tanglewood on Parade' At Berkshire Festival

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — About seven hours of music making, climaxed by the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestra was yesterday's "Tanglewod On Parade," the annual spectacular of the Berkshire Music Festival.

First part of the Boston Symphony's program was conducted by Eleazar De Carvalho of Brazil. Aaron Copland was soloist with the Boston Symphony in his piano concerto. The conductor was Richard Burgin, concert master of the orchestra.

The Boston Pops played a program of light classics under the direction of Arthur Fiedler.

At four in the afternoon, ticket holders were invited to demonstrations by the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center and the Tanglewood Study Group of instrumentalists and choristers.

Audience Welcomed

Public events began at 5:45 with a fanfare (eight brasses and drums) by Berkshire Center students, directed by Roger Voisin, first trumpet with the Boston Symphony. The large audience, assembled on the grounds before the shed, were welcomed by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the center.

From six o'clock until the evening's concert by the two big orchestras, various departments of the center gave simultaneous performances. The student orchestra performed in the shed — opera was in the Theater-Concert Hall — Composition was in the Chamber Music Hall — and the Tanglewood choir on the Main House porch.

We were much taken with the calm, efficient baton of Wonsik Lim from Seoul, Korea, as he conducted the student orchestra in Weber's "Der Freitschutz" Overture.

The brasses were in excellent form, and a fine sense of proportion was achieved between the despondent opening of the overture and its agitated developments.

Strauss "Don Juan" Played

Zubin Mehta of Bombay, India, was a more bombastic type of director for Richard Strauss' tone-poem, "Don Juan." He brought out a multitude of individual balances in a most serious and persuasive manner.

The strings sang out the lush melodies with beautiful tone, and the brasses were ringing and accurate in pitch.

Boris Goldovsky of the opera department would seem to have elected Menotti's "The Telephone" and scenes from Puccini's "La Boheme" as Tanglewood specialties.

Fibreglass Setting

"The Telephone" was distinguished this time only by the new fiberglass setting with projectors that has been developed here this summer. Pictorial effects are produced on a series of panels giving the required illusions.

The role of Ben was sung in part, and otherwise recited, by Lucien Olivier of Roxbury, His "Dont You Cry" was attractively sung. As a whole, the production dragged, missing much of the humor. Gertrude Pepin of Woonsocket, R.I. was rather colorless in the role of Lucy — and vocally unsteady. Her most rewarding effort was "It All Began On Sunday."

By the evening concert, 14,588 persons jammed the Music Shed and surrounding terrain.

De Carvalho got Gomes' "Il Guarany" overture off to a noisy, almost belligerent start. Brasses blared and timpani pummeled. The overture is filled with capricious little whimsies that De Carvalho developed into dramatic items.

He's a picturesque conductor. As one of our neighbors said: "He may do a samba." He snarled, exhorted, and did everything but push-ups. It wound up as a real whiz-bang.

There was naturally a quality of convincing authenticity in De Carvalho's interpretations of extracts from De Falla's "El Amor Brujo." He gave an ultra-romantic concept of the "Pantomime," in which solos were lusciously played by Samuel Mayes, cellist, and concert-master Alfred Krips.

"Dance of Terror" was brought to great agitation, and the "Magic Circle" was the last word in solaceful sound. For some curious reason, several things went wrong in the "Ritual Fire Dance." There was confusion over one of the important oboe solos, added notes where they didn't belong and in spots pretty bad intonation.

Fair Pianist

The Copland concerto is either too old or too young to raise anything but consternation ever what vintage of jazz it's supposed to be. Copland played with the same orchestra 31 years ago.

He's a pretty fair pianist — at least he was last night, in this work. The men of the Boston Symphony were admirably obedient to the scattered notes and vitriolic rhythms that the composer stirred up in the name of jazz.

The audience appeared fitfull, whispering, and very polite in its applause. Copland smiled through most of his concerto as if he were pleased as punch.

Directed by the popular Fiedler, the Boston Pops gave scintillating performances of an easy-to-take program. These included Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne." the Dance of the Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia" by Ginastera, selections from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story," and a potpourri of popular tunes called "Dancing Through the Years," and 76 trombones from "The Music Man" by Willson.

It was a big day for everyone concerned, especially the Berkshire Music Center, to which it brought benefits of $33,000.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 - S. 1,189,293

AUG 8 1958

Annual Tanglewood on Parade Attracts Record Crowd of 14,588

By HAROLD C. SCHONBERG
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 7—The annual midsummer revel known as Tanglewood on Parade was celebrated here today, all day.

This is the traditional event that takes place the Thursday preceding the final week-end of concerts of the Berkshire Music Festival. It is the day when everybody's hair is let down, when the students of the Berkshire Music Center take over a good portion of the proceedings, when the public throngs the grounds, eating picnic lunches and when a succession of conductors mounts the podium to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

There were some anxious moments before the revels got under way. About 2:30 in the afternoon the rain came down; and there's nothing like rain to wash away outdoor festivities. But after the sprinkle came the sun, and also busload upon busload of squealing young girls from every summer camp within miles and miles. Adults came, too. By the time all heads were counted, it turned into a Tanglewood on Parade record—an audience of 14,588.

The students filled most of the afternoon sessions. The opera workshop was represented by talented young singers from Long Beach, Calif. (Miss Mary Bradley) to Woonsocket, R. I. (Miss Gertrude Pepin). This large geographical spread was exceeded by the composition students, who ranged from Rolv Yttrehus of Duluth, Minn., to Ilhan Usmanbas of Ankara, Turkey.

But the student conductors had that beat, with David J. Zinman of New York through Zubin Mehta of Bombay, India, through Wonsik Lim of Seoul, Korea. There also was, as one of the performing musicians, Aaron Copland, originally from Brooklyn.

Mr. Copland was soloist at the evening concert with his own Piano Concerto. Of recent years, he has not been too active as a pianist. He has not played the work in public since 1927, the year it was composed.

The Concerto was conducted by Richard Burgin, and it was a strange piece of music to go on a program that contained popular works of a "pop" nature conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho and Arthur Fiedler. At least a good section of the audience found it so. Puzzlement was evident in some quarters, and an operative in the rear of the Shed reported some boos.

It is not often that the Concerto is heard any more. For it is a rather dated work, with its echoes of Gershwin and jazz of the Nineteen Twenties, both treated in a highly stylized and dissonant idiom. It also is difficult and complicated. Mr. Copland played it with brilliance. He was, and is, a more than merely competent pianist. And Mr. Burgin supported him solidly.

As for the rest of the program, Mr. de Carvalho was quite the virtuoso conductor, and quite a showman, too. The orchestra obviously enjoyed playing for him the "Guarany" Overture and sections from "El Amor Brujo" by Falla.

Mr. Fiedler conducted Offenbach, Ginastera, Bernstein, Hayman and Willson, and also numerous encores. He went about his work with high good spirits and very fast tempos. The Boston Symphony never sounded better or more spirited.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,541

AUG 8 - 1958

Tanglewood 'Parades' For Crowd of 14,588

Boston Symphony, Pops Share Program With Students, Choir; Copland, Carvalho Appear

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX — The Tanglewood-on-Parade program drew 14,588 persons to the spacious grounds Thursday afternoon and evening. As usual, there was something doing every minute following the traditional fanfare and welcoming address.

Opera Concert

However, before that, there was a special opera concert for holders of reserved seat tickets. It was to have been held in the gardens.

We were fortunate in hearing Menotti's "The Telephone." It has been a prime favorite at Tanglewood over the years, perhaps because it takes only two singers and a telephone. It was not particularly well sung by soprano Gertrude Pein. but it was

See TANGLEWOOD
Page Six

was any great

A bit later, we listened to the student orchestra. It is one of the best we have heard here for several seasons. We were there in time to watch the young Swiss student-conductor Gustave Meier, from Zurich, direct an arresting performance of the Angelic Concert from Hindemith's "Mathis Der Maler," and to watch David J. Zinman of New York conduct a perceptive performance of Schuman's "New England Triptych" (after William Billings).

Choir Is Heard

The Tanglewood choir, which seems to not have as good vocal material as in former years, has learned a lot of music during the past six weeks. This evening, in front of the main house, it was heard in a variety of compositions conducted by student and professional directors.

We were particularly impressed with a set of psalms, set by Lukas Foss. They were tricky and difficult, but very impressive. Vocal soloists Doralene McNelly, soprano, and Richard Gilley, tenor, were ably assisted by pianists Lukas Foss and Robert Miller. Another fine work was Pinkham's "Christmas Cantata," admirably conducted by Lorna Cooke DeVaron, a member of the faculty.

The evening concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra turned out to be a huge success. Eleazar Carvalho, the Brazilian conductor who is so respected by the student conductors whom he coaches here, conducted the Boston Symphony players in the overture, "Il Guarany" by Gomes, and in three movements from "El Amor Brujo" by De Falla. Mr. Carvalho is one of those conductors one wishes might share the podium with Charles Munch during the festival season. He has great sensitivity and a splendid rhythmic sense.

Copland at Keyboard

Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was the conductor for Aaron Copland's piano concerto and the composer was soloist in it. Mr. Copland is better known as a composer than as a pianist, but one may assume that with as soloist in his own work, heard a definitive performan

Mr. Burgin worked put the work

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

AUG 9 - 1958

Berkshire Week in Review

The Poisoned Well

TOWN MEETINGS are a wellspring of American democracy, but sometimes the well gets poisoned with paralyzing results. This was demonstrated in Great Barrington again Monday night when an acrimonious special town meeting left the community more bitterly divided than ever over what to do about its chronic school housing problem.

Up for reconsideration at the meeting was the [illegible] School Committee proposal for construction of a $714,000 intermediate school to meet an acute overcrowding problem which is forcing the town into a double-session system. Amid boos, catcalls and loud recriminations, the proposal was finally slapped down by a vote of 595 to 311, a much worse defeat than it suffered when first proposed four months ago. Because a bond issue is involved, two-thirds approval would have been needed to make the school a reality.

Behind the thumping "No" vote, which repudiated virtually all local school officials and contradicted a long parade of surveys and statistics on the overcrowding problem, was the relentless anti-school campaigning of Earl S. Jones, head and lungs of Great Barrington's unaffiliated Taxpayers' Assn. But the acidity of the fight indicated on the part of small taxpayers who feel pinched by the town's contracting economy and have been persuaded that they are being pushed around by the proschool forces. Compounding the problem is an increasing reluctance on the part of many of the town's abler citizens to get enmeshed in the vendettas of local politics.

Obituaries

Dr. Ira J. Schilling, 68, of Pittsfield, founded Junior League's dental clinic, life member Western District Dental Society, provided service for Berkshire Industrial Farm . . . William J. Collins, 52, of Stockbridge, chief of police in 1952, '57 and '58, Stockbridge civil defense head, member National Police Chiefs' Association . . . Other deaths:

Athearn, Mrs. Laura ex-Dalton.
Conroy, John F. (88) Pittsfield.
Crennan, Ronald E. (46) Housatonic.
Ford, Mrs. Bertha E. (80) Pittsfield.
Johnson, Mrs. Nettie (82) ex-Clayton.
Kelsey, Harlan P. (86) Dalton.
Morin, Edward H. (57) North Adams.
Murray, Walter L. (72) Pittsfield.
O'Neil, Patrick J. (89) Pittsfield.
Rausch, Mrs. Frank (57) Pittsfield.
Savery, Mrs. William (80) Dalton.
Stevens, Mrs. Lydia (86) Pittsfield.
Tyer, George H. (75) Lee.
Williams, Mrs. Anna (76) Gt. Barrington.
Wixsom, Charles F. (64) Pittsfield.

government's business. This puts him in the opposite corner from Ward 7 Councilman John F. Fraser, who is running for the Democratic nomination as state representative in the Berkshire Third District and has called for a special Council meeting to back the union.

Gazette
WORCESTE
Indepe
Circ. 10

AUG 8

14,588 A
"Tangle
On Para

By JOHN

LENOX — Parade," prese
the benefit of Center, drew a night and gross
All artists and
their services.
Many of the 4
Center took par demonstrations, of opera, concer
chamber music,
orchestra under conductors, and original composi
In an interesti
Boston Symphony
ago, the Boston
tra, gave a gala
to excite and how full of fun
members of the
be. So the young grown-up, and the joyously young and everyone h
time.
Every seat in music shed was the concert, and stands listened fr
lawns.
Conducts
Eleazar de Ca
the department of ducting, led the B with Albert Kri master, in Gome Guarany" Overtur codes of Falla's " Carvalho used to draw fr an elastic, danc
"Pantomime." Terror" was not
was able and Magic Circle"
building music, in climactic, well-kno Dance." Bernard
the important pi
Aaron Copland,
partment of com
in his own Piano
Richard Burgin and played this under Koussevitzk performed in it
Symphony since.
Beginning in a
rious modern mo
launches suddenly idiom, and wea themes of its ow strongly suggesti known jazz score
are gorgeous and tingling. The jaz
the woodwinds is
"Pops" E
Arthur Fiedler
ensemble played e Offenbach's "Gai
with tremendous saucily insinuatin
Dance of the Whea
tera's "Estancia,"
itself, and the M stirring, rhythmic
climax.
Selections fro stein's "West Sid fresh and appeali
"Dancing Through
took the cheering way from cakewal
Charleston and othe up to a roof-shaki
rock and roll.
Three Leroy And
featured expert wo
ters Ghitalla, Me Come in "
by Charles Smith,
in "The Typewrite for strings
ful.
Other encores w
Bogey March," "Lo
Sharp" and "The Stripes Forever."

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 60,734

Music: 'Tanglewood on Parade' At Berkshire Festival

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — About seven hours of music making, climaxed by the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestra was yesterday's "Tanglewod On Parade," the annual spectacular of the Berkshire Music Festival.

First part of the Boston Symphony's program was conducted by Eleazar De Carvalho of Brazil. Aaron Copland was soloist with the Boston Symphony in his piano concerto. The conductor was Richard Burgin, concert master of the orchestra.

The Boston Pops played a program of light classics under the direction of Arthur Fiedler.

At four in the afternoon, ticket holders were invited to demonstrations by the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center and the Tanglewood Study Group of instrumentalists and choristers.

Audience Welcomed

Public events began at 5:45 with a fanfare (eight brasses and drums) by Berkshire Center students, directed by Roger Voisin, first trumpet with the Boston Symphony. The large audience, assembled on the grounds before the shed, were welcomed by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the center.

From six o'clock until the evening's concert by the two big orchestras, various departments of the center gave simultaneous performances. The student orchestra performed in the shed — opera was in the Theater-Concert Hall — Composition was in the Chamber Music Hall — and the Tanglewood choir on the Main House porch.

We were much taken with the calm, efficient baton of Wonsik Lim from Seoul, Korea, as he conducted the student orchestra in Weber's "Der Freitschutz" Overture.

The brasses were in excellent form, and a fine sense of proportion was achieved between the despondent opening of the overture and its agitated developments.

Strauss "Don Juan" Played

Zubin Mehta of Bombay, India, was a more bombastic type of director for Richard Strauss' tone-poem, "Don Juan." He brought out a multitude of individual balances in a most serious and persuasive manner.

The strings sang out the lush melodies with beautiful tone, and the brasses were ringing and accurate in pitch.

Boris Goldovsky of the opera department would seem to have elected Menotti's "The Telephone" and scenes from Puccini's "La Boheme" as Tanglewood specialties.

Fibreglass Setting

"The Telephone" was distinguished this time only by the new fiberglass setting with projectors that has been developed here this summer. Pictorial effects are produced on a series of panels giving the required illusions.

The role of Ben was sung in part, and otherwise recited, by Lucien Olivier of Roxbury. His "Dont You Cry" was attractively sung. As a whole, the production dragged, missing much of the humor. Gertrude Pepin of Woonsocket, R.I. was rather colorless in the role of Lucy — and vocally unsteady. Her most rewarding effort was "It All Began On Sunday."

By the evening concert, 14,588 persons jammed the Music Shed and surrounding terrain.

De Carvalho got Gomes' "Il Guarany" overture off to a noisy, almost belligerent start. Brasses blared and timpani pummeled. The overture is filled with capricious little whimsies that De Carvalho developed into dramatic items.

He's a picturesque conductor. As one of our neighbors said: "He may do a samba." He snarled, exhorted, and did everything but push-ups. It wound up as a real whiz-bang.

There was naturally a quality of convincing authenticity in De Carvalho's interpretations of extracts from De Falla's "El Amor Brujo." He gave an ultra-romantic concept of the "Pantomime," in which solos were lusciously played by Samuel Mayes, cellist, and concert-master Alfred Krips.

"Dance of Terror" was brought to great agitation, and the "Magic Circle" was the last word in solaceful sound. For some curious reason, several things went wrong in the "Ritual Fire Dance." There was confusion over one of the important oboe solos, added notes where they didn't belong and in spots pretty bad intonation.

Fair Pianist

The Copland concerto is either too old or too young to raise anything but consternation ever what vintage of jazz it's supposed to be. Copland played with the same orchestra 31 years ago.

He's a pretty fair pianist — at least he was last night, in this work. The men of the Boston Symphony were admirably obedient to the scattered notes and vitriolic rhythms that the composer stirred up in the name of jazz.

The audience appeared fitfull, whispering, and very polite in its applause. Copland smiled through most of his concerto as if he were pleased as punch.

Directed by the popular Fiedler, the Boston Pops gave scintillating performances of an easy-to-take program. These included Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne." the Dance of the Wheat and Malambo from "Estancia" by Ginastera, selections from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story," and a potpourri of popular tunes called "Dancing Through the Years," and 76 trombones from "The Music Man" by Willson.

It was a big day for everyone concerned, especially the Berkshire Music Center, to which it brought benefits of $33,000.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 - S. 1,189,293

AUG 8 1958

Annual Tanglewood on Parade Attracts Record Crowd of 14,588

By HAROLD C. SCHONBERG
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 7—The annual midsummer revel known as Tanglewood on Parade was celebrated here today, all day.

This is the traditional event that takes place the Thursday preceding the final week-end of concerts of the Berkshire Music Festival. It is the day when everybody's hair is let down, when the students of the Berkshire Music Center take over ...rtion of the proceed- ...public throngs ... picnic withi... came, too. ... heads were cou... into a Tanglewood on P... record—an audience of 14,588.

The students filled most of the afternoon sessions. The opera workshop was represented by talented young singers from Long Beach, Calif. (Miss Mary Bradley) to Woonsocket, R. I. (Miss Gertrude Pepin). This large geographical spread was exceeded by the composition students, who ranged from Rolv Yttrehus of Duluth, Minn., to Ilhan Usmanbas of Ankara, Turkey.

But the student conductors had that beat, with David J. Zinman of New York through Zubin Mehta of Bombay, India, through Wonsik Lim of Seoul, Korea. There also was, as one of the performing musicians, Aaron Copland, originally from Brooklyn.

Mr. Copland was soloist at the evening concert with his own Piano Concerto. Of recent years, he has not been too active as a pianist. He has not played the work in public since 1927, the year it was composed.

The Concerto was conducted by Richard Burgin, and it was a strange piece of music to go on a program that contained popular works of a "pop" nature conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho and Arthur Fiedler. At least a good section of the audience found it so. Puzzlement was evident in some quarters, and an operative in the rear of the Shed reported some boos.

It is not often that the Concerto is heard any more. For it is a rather dated work, with its echoes of Gershwin and jazz of the Nineteen Twenties, both treated in a highly stylized and dissonant idiom. It also is difficult and complicated. Mr. Copland played it with brilliance. He was, and is, a more than merely competent pianist. And Mr. Burgin supported him solidly.

As for the rest of the program, Mr. de Carvalho was quite the virtuoso conductor, and quite a showman, too. The ...estra obviously enjoyed ... him the "Guarany" ...ions from "El

---

GALA O

SHELLY:
Entente cordiale? Quit me. You're right thou saw a more cordial pla than THE ROGER SMIT

Just 2 Short Drive via West Springfield or Chicopee Falls
CLOSED MONDAYS

AAA
X COCKTAIL
Holyoke

nglewood

Continued From Page 1

well sung by baritone Lucien Olivier. We could not note that the special scenery which has been devised here at Tanglewood was any great help.

A bit later, we listened to the student orchestra. It is one of the best we have heard here for several seasons. We were there in time to watch the young Swiss student-conductor Gustave Meier, from Zurich, direct an arresting performance of the Angelic Concert from Hindemith's "Mathis Der Maler," and to watch David J. Zinman of New York conduct a perceptive performance of Schuman's "New England Triptych" (after William Billings).

Choir Is Heard

The Tanglewood choir, which seems to not have as good vocal material as in former years, has learned a lot of music during the past six weeks. This evening, in front of the main house, it was heard in a variety of compositions conducted by student and professional directors.

We were particularly impressed with a set of psalms, set by Lukas Foss. They were tricky and difficult, but very impressive. Vocal soloists Doralene McNelly, soprano, and Richard Gilley, tenor, were ably assisted by pianists Lukas Foss and Robert Miller. Another fine work was Pinkham's "Christmas Cantata," admirably conducted by Lorna Cooke DeVaron, a member of the faculty.

The evening concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra turned out to be a huge success. Eleazar Carvalho, the Brazilian conductor who is so respected by the student conductors whom he coaches here, conducted the Boston Symphony players in the overture, "Il Guarany" by Gomes, and in three movements from "El Amor Brujo" by De Falla. Mr. Carvalho is one of those conductors one wishes might share the podium with Charles Munch during the festival season. He has great sensitivity and a splendid rhythmic sense.

Copland at Keyboard

Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was the conductor for Aaron Copland's piano concerto and the composer was soloist in it. Mr. Copland is better known as a composer than as a pianist, but one may assume that with him as soloist in his own work, one heard a definitive performance.

Mr. Burgin worked valiantly to put the work across and the orchestra gave its all. The work was written in the early 20s and created quite a furor when it was premiered in Paris.

At that time the jazz idiom was fairly new and Mr. Copland was experimenting with it. Thursday night, it sounded pleasantly familiar, but hardly a work one wants or need expect to hear often.

Fiedler Applauded

The usual pandemonium ensued when Arthur Fiedler came on stage. Few conductors enjoy the loyalty of the masses as Mr. Fiedler.

He gives them what they want in highly polished, exciting dosage. Thursday night was no exception.

One hears a vivacious performance of Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne" suite; a brilliant performance of selections from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story"; a nostalgic array of dances plucked through the years; and as a final tour de force the "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man."

Then there were the usual encores which have made the Boston Pops Orchestra so famous through the years. There were several of them, each greeted with prolonged applause. In fact, this was an evening of music for everybody, and everybody seemed to enjoy it.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

AUG 9 - 1958

Berkshire Week in Review

The Poisoned Well

TOWN MEETINGS are a wellspring of American democracy, but sometimes the well gets poisoned with paralyzing results. This was demonstrated in Great Barrington again Monday night when an acrimonious special town meeting left the community more bitterly divided than ever over what to do about its chronic school housing problem.

Up for reconsideration at the meeting was the once-defeated School Committee proposal for construction of a $744,000 intermediate school to meet an acute overcrowding problem which is forcing the town into a double-session system. Amid boos, catcalls and loud recriminations, the proposal was finally slapped down by a vote of 595 to 311, a much worse defeat than it suffered when first proposed four months ago. Because a bond issue is involved, two-thirds approval would have been needed to make the school a reality.

Behind the thumping "No" vote, which repudiated virtually all local school officials and contradicted a long parade of surveys and statistics on the overcrowding problem, was the relentless anti-school campaigning of Earl S. Jones, head and lungs of Great Barrington's unaffiliated Taxpayers' Assn. But the acidity of the fight indicated on the part of small taxpayers who feel pinched by the town's contracting economy and have been persuaded that they are being pushed around by the proschool forces. Compounding the problem is an increasing reluctance on the part of many of the town's abler citizens to get enmeshed in the vendettas of local politics.

Obituaries

Dr. Ira J. Schilling, 68, of Pittsfield, founded Junior League's dental clinic, life member Western District Dental Society, provided service for Berkshire Industrial Farm . . . William J. Collins, 52, of Stockbridge, chief of police in 1952, '57 and '58, Stockbridge civil defense head, member National Police Chiefs' Association . . . Other deaths:

Athearn, Mrs. Laura ex-Dalton.
Conroy, John F. (88) Pittsfield.
Crennan, Ronald E. (46) Housatonic.
Ford, Mrs. Bertha E. (80) Pittsfield.
Johnson, Mrs. Nettie (82) ex-Clayton.
Kelsey, Harlan P. (86) Dalton.
Morin, Edward H. (57) North Adams.
Murray, Walter L. (72) Pittsfield.
O'Neil, Patrick J. (89) Pittsfield.
Rausch, Mrs. Frank (57) Pittsfield.
Savery, Mrs. William (80) Dalton.
Stevens, Mrs. Lydia (86) Pittsfield.
Tyer, George H. (75) Lee.
Williams, Mrs. Anna (76) Gt. Barrington.
Wixsom, Charles F. (64) Pittsfield.

government's business. This puts him in the opposite corner from Ward 7 Councilman John F. Fraser, who is running for the Democratic nomination as state representative in the Berkshire Third District and has called for a special Council meeting to back the union.

Gazette
WORCESTE
Indepen
Circ. 10

AUG 8-

14,588 A
"Tangle
On Para

By JOHN

LENOX — Parade," presen
the benefit of Center, drew a r night and grosse
All artists and g
their services.

Many of the 400
Center took part demonstrations,
of opera, concert chamber music,
orchestra under conductors, and original compositi

In an interesting
Boston Symphony
ago, the Boston "
tra, gave a gala
to excite and am how full of fun
members of these
be. So the young
grown-up, and the joyously young fo
and everyone ha
time.

Every seat in th music shed was s
the concert, and t sands listened fro
lawns.

Conducts Sy

Eleazar de Car
the department of ducting, led the Bo with Albert Krip
master, in Gomes
Guarany" Overture
sodes of Falla's "El Carvalho used flu
tures to draw fro an elastic, danci
"Pantomime." T Terror" was not
was able and Magic Circle" w building music, in climactic, well-know Dance." Bernard
the important pia

Aaron Copland, h
partment of comp
in his own Piano
Richard Burgin co land played this 31
under Koussevitzky
performed in it w
Symphony since.

Beginning in a
rious modern mood
launches suddenly
idiom, and weav
themes of its own strongly suggestin known jazz score
are gorgeous and tingling. The jazzy
the woodwinds is

"Pops" En

Arthur Fiedler an ensemble played ei Offenbach's "Gaite
with tremendous saucily insinuating
Dance of the Wheat
tera's "Estancia,"
itself, and the M
stirring, rhythmic,
climax.

Selections from L
stein's "West Side
fresh and appealin
"Dancing Through
took the cheering au way from cakewalk
Charleston and other up to a roof-shakin
rock and roll.

Three Leroy Ande
featured expert wor
ters Ghitalla, Mo
Come in "Bugler's H
by Charles Smith,
in "The Typewriter.
zicato" for strings
ful.

Other encores we
Bogey March," "Lo
Sharp" and "The
Stripes Forever."

"Dont You Cry" was attractively sung. As a whole, the production dragged, missing much of the humor. Gertrude Pepin of Woonsocket, R.I. was rather colorless in the role of Lucy — and vocally unsteady. Her most rewarding ef-

Farm . . . William J. Collins, 52, of Stockbridge, chief of police in 1952, '57 and '58, Stockbridge civil defense head, member National Police Chiefs' Association . . . Other deaths:

Athearn, Mrs. Laura ex-Dalton.
Conroy, John F. (88) Pittsfield.
Crennan, Ronald E. (46) Housatonic.
Ford, Mrs. Bertha E. (80) Pittsfield.
Johnson, Mrs. Nettie (82) ex-Clayton.
Kelsey, Harlan P. (86) Dalton.
Morin, Edward H. (57) North Adams.
Murray, Walter L. (72) Pittsfield.
O'Neil, Patrick J. (89) Pittsfield.
Rausch, Mrs. Frank (57) Pittsfield.
Savery, Mrs. William (80) Dalton.
Stevens, Mrs. Lydia (86) Pittsfield.
Tyer, George H. (75) Lee.
Williams, Mrs. Anna (76) Gt. Barrington.
Wixsom, Charles F. (64) Pittsfield.

---

and loud recriminations, the proposal was finally slapped down by a vote of 595 to 311, a much worse defeat than it suffered when first proposed four months ago. Because a bond issue is involved, two-thirds approval would have been needed to make the school a reality.

Behind the thumping "No" vote, which repudiated virtually all local school officials and contradicted a long parade of surveys and statistics on the overcrowding problem, was the relentless anti-school campaigning of Earl S. Jones, head and lungs of Great Barrington's unaffiliated Taxpayers' Assn. But the acidity of the fight indicated on the part of small taxpayers who feel pinched by the town's contracting economy and have been persuaded that they are being pushed around by the proschool forces. Compounding the problem is an increasing reluctance on the part of many of the town's abler citizens to get enmeshed in the vendettas of local politics.

But whatever the causes, the main effects of the meeting were obvious. The local schism was more pronounced than ever, and the school problem was further than ever from solution. According to Dr. John E. Hassett, chairman of the School Committee, the entire high school and five grammar school grades will be condemned to a system of double sessions within the next three years.

Although it played second fiddle to the school issue, the original reason for the Great Barrington special meeting was the petition of Solomon Nager for a zoning change to permit him to establish bowling alleys and a recreation area on Route 7 across from the Monument Mountain reservation — a petition which was rejected by a vote of 473 to 435 on the grounds that the town's residential and scenic areas should be protected from "the corrosion of commercialism." The meeting also voted 575 to 204 to make the town's Finance Committee elective rather than appointive.

Wilson Park Tragedy

FOR THE PAST seven months, Michael N. Slosky, a [illegible]-year-old Pittsfield sailor stationed in Charleston, S.C., had been receiving reports that his wife was having an affair back home with Marine Sgt. Henry Gripenberg, a clerk at the local reserve center on Onota Lake Boulevard. Last Saturday Slosky obtained a weekend pass, bought a .25 caliber automatic pistol, and came home to find out for himself.

According to the police report, Slosky took a plane to New York City, a train to Albany, and hitchhiked to Pittsfield, arriving at his Wilson Park home at about 4 a.m. Sunday. Having no key, he stacked two garbage cans behind the house, climbed in through a kitchen windaw, and went upstairs where he found his wife and Gripenberg asleep in bed. He woke them up and, after five minutes of conversation, fired five shots at Gripenberg, who was killed almost instantly when a bullet penetrated his heart and liver. Then Slosky called the police and waited for them to take him away.

In District Court next morning Slosky, whom police termed a cooperative prisoner, only spoke when asked to spell his name. After the mandatory not-guilty plea was entered to the charge of first degree murder, he was taken to the county House of Correction to await a preliminary hearing. Gripenberg's body, accompanied by a Marine guard, was flown from Westover Field to his home in Earlhab, Iowa, for burial.

Not at home when the shooting occurred were the Sloskys' two children, Michael Allen, 4, and Susan Ann, 5. Mrs. Slosky, who had been married to the electrician's mate, first class, for about seven years, had filed for divorce in Probate Court here a month ago on grounds of cruel and abusive treatment.

Other Headlines

A CROWD of 14,588 natives, tourists, campers, and curiosity-seekers, plus a sprinkling of music-lovers, swarmed over the Tanglewood grounds Thursday night at the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities. Both the attendance and the box office gross of $33,000 (which goes to the Berkshire Music Center) set all-time records.

* * *

Police Chief William J. Collins of Stockbridge died in the line of duty late Thursday afternoon when he suffered a heart attack while chasing two young Shirley Industrial School escapees who were racing through Stockbridge in a stolen car at speeds of up to 100 m.p.h. Chief Collins, 52-year-old veteran of a dozen years on the force, crashed into a guard rail on Route 183, just north of the Garden Center, after the attack occurred. The escapees were caught by State Police and committed to the Youth Service Board.

* * *

Forthcoming contract negotiations between GE and IUE became an issue in another local campaign this week as Pittsfield Councilman Anthony D. Tagliente, a Democratic candidate for state Senate in the Berkshire District, said he will fight against efforts to place the City Council on record in support of IUE's demands, which he termed none of the city government's business. This puts him in the opposite corner from Ward 7 Councilman John F. Fraser, who is running for the Democratic nomination as state representative in the Berkshire Third District and has called for a special Council meeting to back the union.

* * *

Contending that the land is fully utilized for farming operations and may be needed for a new Courthouse, the County Commissioners unanimously declined to consider selling a portion of the County House of Correction grounds to Pittsfield as the site of a proposed public housing project for the elderly. Mayor Haughey acidly replied that he wouldn't have bothered to ask if he had known that "the production of onions and a few other vegetables was of such extreme importance to the county commissioners."

* * *

While the State Racing Commission held off its decision on what to do with the controversial petition requesting a hearing on this year's Barrington Fair racing dates, Pittsfield's Yellow Cab Co. announced that it will run special busses for more charitably inclined gamblers who want to go over the mountain to play beano in New Lebanon, N.Y., where it has been legalized under a new local option law. Beano was banned in Massachusetts some years ago after being infiltrated by racketeers.

---

composer, was soloist in it. Mr. Copland is better known as a composer than as a pianist, but

---

up to a roo
rock and roll
Three Leroy featured exper ters Ghitalla Come in "Bug
by Charles Sm in "The Type sicale" for st
ful.
Other encor
Bogey March," Sharp" and
Stripes Forever

C198

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 102,839

AUG 8-

14,588 Attend "Tanglewood On Parade"

By JOHN F. KYES

LENOX — "Tanglewood on Parade," presented annually for the benefit of Berkshire Music Center, drew a record 14,588 last night and grossed about $33,000. All artists and groups contributed their services.

Many of the 400 students of the Center took part in preliminary demonstrations, presenting bits of opera, concerts of choral and chamber music, a large student orchestra under talented student conductors, and a program of original compositions.

In an interesting inversion, the Boston Symphony and their alter ego, the Boston "Pops" Orchestra, gave a gala program aimed to excite and amuse, revealing how full of fun the respected members of these groups could be. So the young were admirably grown-up, and the older musicians joyously young for a few hours, and everyone had a wonderful time.

Every seat in the 6,000-capacity music shed was sold long before the concert, and the other thousands listened from the spacious lawns.

Conducts Symphony

Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the department of orchestral conducting, led the Boston Symphony, with Albert Krips as concert master, in Gomes' dashing "Il Guarany" Overture and four episodes of Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Carvalho used fluid, poetic gestures to draw from the players an elastic, dancing rhythm in "Pantomime." The "Dance of Terror" was not so chilling as it was able and intricate. "The Magic Circle" was quiet, spell-building music, in contrast to the climactic, well-known "Ritual Fire Dance." Bernard Zighera played the important piano parts.

Aaron Copland, head of the department of composition, soloed in his own Piano Concerto, with Richard Burgin conducting. Copland played this 31-year-old work under Koussevitzky, but has never performed in it with the Boston Symphony since.

Beginning in a somewhat serious modern mood, the concerto launches suddenly into the jazz idiom, and weaves numerous themes of its own, as well as strongly suggesting other well-known jazz scores. The effects are gorgeous and the climaxes tingling. The jazzy dialogue in the woodwinds is fascinating.

"Pops" Ensemble

Arthur Fiedler and his "Pops" ensemble played eight episodes of Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne" with tremendous verve and a saucily insinuating quality. The Dance of the Wheat, from Ginastera's "Estancia," was softness itself, and the Malambo was soul-stirring, rhythmic, with a terrific climax.

Selections from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story" were fresh and appealing. Hayman's "Dancing Through the Years" took the cheering audience all the way from cakewalks through the Charleston and other old favorites up to a roof-shaking version of rock and roll.

Three Leroy Anderson encores featured expert work by trumpeters Ghitalla, Mogelnicki and Come in "Bugler's Holiday," also by Charles Smith, percussionist, in "The Typewriter." "Jazz Pizzicato" for strings was delightful.

Other encores were "Colonel Bogey March," "Look Sharp, Be Sharp" and "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

AUG 8 - 1958

Mitchell

THEY WERE EVERYWHERE last night as 14,588 persons turned up at Tanglewood for the annual "Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center. Crowds such as this one were scattered over the spacious lawns, to enjoy demonstrations by all of the departments of the school, prior to the big concert in the Shed by the BSO and the Boston Pops Orchestra.

by David Broudo and two camera portraits by Whitestone Studios.

Mrs. Richard Sullivan of South Hadley Falls won the main prize an RCA Victor Hi Fi record player. Mrs. Sullivan's ticket was the third picked as the first two holders didn't identify themselves.

Nets $33,000

'Parade' Pulls 14,588 To Break All Records

By STUART C. AUERBACH

TANGLEWOOD—The most successful Tanglewood on Parade in its 12-year history was held yesterday, thanks to clearing skies in the late afternoon.

New records were set for attendance and gross receipts. The Berksrire Music Center will benefit to the tune of about $33,000 as 14,588 persons poured through the gates. The previous records, set last year, were an attendance of 12,493 persons and the gross of $31,000.

Sun Geets Opening

Reserved seats were sold out by yesterday but general admission tickets went slower with yesterday afternoon's uncertain weather.

The sun burst through a cloud just as the fanfare, beginning the main part of the program, sounded at 5:45. Roger Voisin conducted BMC students in the horn salute. Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the BMC, welcomed the audience.

From then on, the grounds were a combination of a clambake and a three-ring circus.

The theater concert hall was packed for a program of opera scenes by the opera department and the Chamber Music Hall was almost full for a program of original compositions by BMC students.

Most of the crowd, though, was gathered by the main Shed where the student orchestra was performing. In the front section of the Shed people were listening to the music, in the rear they were eating, reading and resting.

Action on the Lawn

It was on the lawn where all the action was taking place. Campers by the score, most wearing the identifying uniform of their camp, fought over tuna fish and peanut butter and jelly sandwiches.

One camp, expecting a large crowd, sent scouts ahead to reserve a choice spot, front and center on the lawn. They erected a tepee and hoisted the Sisson Lake Camp banner. A ring of empty blankets kept outsiders away as a lone counselor sat in the center as a guard.

On other sections of the lawn, parties were partaking of light refreshments. Some people ate box lunches bought at the cafeteria, which did about $6,000 worth of business. This was done without the sale of beer, which was left off the menu for the first time in many years.

Other persons had more elaborate meals—ranging from beer and sandwiches to martinis, hors d'oeuvres and fried chicken.

While all this activity was going on, the student orchestra was playing and an usher was walking across the front of the lawn holding aloft a sign saying "Silence Please! The Concert Has Started."

A number of local politicians, taking a rest from election year activities, were scattered throughout the crowd.

Special Opera Program

A pall was cast over the opening of Tanglewood on Parade when news of the death of Stockbridge Police Chief William J. Collins reached the grounds. Chief Collins had been active on traffic control duty here for many years.

Tanglewood on Parade
Continued on Page 12

CAIRO, N. Y.
HERALD
Circ. W. 415

AUG 7 1958

This Is The Final Week At Tanglewood

Thursday, August 7, 8:15 Music Shed "Tanglewood-On-Parade", Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler, Conductor.

Friday, August 8, 8:30 Music Shed Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Conductor. Honegger, Prelude, Fugue and Postlude; Beethoven, Symphony No. 7. Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor")

Saturday, August 9, 8:30 Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux, Conductor. Beethoven Music from "Prometheus"; Hindemith, Nobilissima Visione; Beethoven Leonore Overture No. 3

Sunday, August 10 2:30 Music Shed Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Conductor.

Walton, Johannesburg Festival Beethoven Ninth Symphony

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,138

AUG 8 - 1958

Tanglewood Parade Program Attended By 14,588 Persons

The annual Tanglewood-on-Parade program was given yesterday afternoon and evening with a crowd of 14,588 persons attending the event in Lenox.

The program, which started with opera at 4 o'clock, was varied to include something to please everyone. The Berkshire Music Center student orchestra gave a concert later in the afternoon, and during the picnic supper held on the lawn the Tanglewood choir sang.

The Shed Concert with both the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra playing, was held in the evening. The first part of the program was given by the Boston Symphony under the direction of Eleazar Carvalho, and Aaron Copland played his Piano Concerto under the direction of Richard Burgin, concertmaster for the orchestra.

The second part was left to the Pops under the direction of Arthur Fiedler. They played the Gaite Parisien Suite by Offenbach, Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story," a medley of dances including the "Beer Barrel Polka" and the "Charleston" and finally "76 Trombones." The usual encores for which the Pops are famous followed the scheduled program.

The event was attended by many Northern Berkshire music lovers. Among the box-holders at the conecrt were Mr. and Mrs. Julian Sprague of Williamstown, Mr. and Mrs. Richard E. Pierce of 145 Marion Ave., and Mr. and Mrs. Leon Podolsky of Pittsfield. Mr. Podolsky is assistant to the president of Sprague Electric Co

C1957

Gazette
WORCESTER,
Independent
Circ. 102,839

AUG 8

14,588 Attend "Tanglewood On Parade"

By JOHN F. KYES

LENOX — "Tanglewood-on Parade," presented annually for the benefit of Berkshire Music Center, drew a record 14,588 last night and grossed about $33,000. All artists and groups contributed their services.

Many of the 400 students of the Center took part in preliminary demonstrations, presenting bits of opera, concerts of choral and chamber music, a large student orchestra under talented student conductors, and a program of original compositions.

In an interesting inversion, the Boston Symphony and their alter ego, the Boston "Pops" Orchestra, gave a gala program aimed to excite and amuse, revealing how full of fun the respected members of these groups could be. So the young were admirably grown-up, and the older musicians joyously young for a few hours, and everyone had a wonderful time.

Every seat in the 6,000-capacity music shed was sold long before the concert, and the other thousands listened from the spacious lawns.

Conducts Symphony

Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the department of orchestral conducting, led the Boston Symphony, with Albert Krips as concert master, in Gomes' dashing "Il Guarany" Overture and four episodes of Falla's "El Amor Brujo." Carvalho used fluid, poetic gestures to draw from the players an elastic, dancing rhythm in "Pantomime." The "Dance of Terror" was not so chilling as it was able and intricate. "The Magic Circle" was quiet, spell-building music, in contrast to the climactic, well-known "Ritual Fire Dance." Bernard Zighera played the important piano parts.

Aaron Copland, head of the department of composition, soloed in his own Piano Concerto, with Richard Burgin conducting. Copland played this 31-year-old work under Koussevitzky, but has never performed in it with the Boston Symphony since.

Beginning in a somewhat serious modern mood, the concerto launches suddenly into the jazz idiom, and weaves numerous themes of its own, as well as strongly suggesting other well-known jazz scores. The effects are gorgeous and the climaxes tingling. The jazzy dialogue in the woodwinds is fascinating.

"Pops" Ensemble

Arthur Fiedler and his "Pops" ensemble played eight episodes of Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne" with tremendous verve and a saucily insinuating quality. The Dance of the Wheat, from Ginastera's "Estancia," was softness itself, and the Malambo was soul-stirring, rhythmic, with a terrific climax.

Selections from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story" were fresh and appealing. Hayman's "Dancing Through the Years" took the cheering audience all the way from cakewalks through the Charleston and other old favorites up to a roof-shaking version of rock and roll.

Three Leroy Anderson encores featured expert work by trumpeters Ghitalla, Mogelnicki and Come in "Bugler's Holiday," also by Charles Smith, percussionist, in "The Typewriter." "Jazz Pizzicato" for strings was delightful.

Other encores were "Colonel Bogey March," "Look Sharp, Be Sharp" and "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

Tanglewood on Parade

Continued From First Page

The musical day started at 4 p.m. with a special program by the Opera Department in the theater concert hall for reserved seat and box holders. At the same time, the Tanglewood Study Group entertained in the barn.

The main event began at 8 with the buzz of conversation still filling the lawn. A loud chord, heavy in the brass section, informed many present that the Boston Symphony had begun to play.

The Boston Pops Orchestra, playing music for everyone, from classical to rock and roll, drew the loudest applause of the night. A new number in its repertoire, "Dancing Through the Years," didn't provide any dancing in the aisles but it did start a good deal of toe tapping.

The playing of the Mexican Hat Dance drew audience participation as rhythmic claps filled the Shed. Big applause winners in the dance selection were Charleston, Turkey in the Straw, Beer Barrel Polka and Tequila.

The usual encores were played.

Prize Winners

Only three county residents were able to walk away with one of the 11 door prizes. Included was a special, unannounced award given by Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky.

One of the county residents—Mrs. Kenneth Fuller of East Street, Lenox—won a "Weekend in the Berkshires." Mrs. Fuller can move from her house to Festival House for a weekend. There she will get a pastel portrait by Anthony Toney, a piece of pottery by David Broudo and two camera portraits by Whitestone Studios.

Mrs. Richard Sullivan of South Hadley Falls won the main prize, an RCA Victor Hi Fi record player. Mrs. Sullivan's ticket was the third picked as the first two holders didn't identify themselves.

A pair of season tickets for all Shed concerts here next year went to the Rev. Richard Sherer of Goshen, Conn. The mother of a Tanglewood guide, Mrs. Arthur Murphy of Belmont, won a color woodcut by Ralph Berkowitz.

Miss Mary Weber of Stockbridge won a child's red tractor. Tickets for two at five local entertainment centers were given to Mrs. Arnold Strauss of Norfolk, Va. Another member of her party, Miss Nancy Ruffin, won a set of six RCA records from the Tanglewood Music Store.

Other prize winners were Charles Kusik of Richmond, five-year subscriptions to Time, Life and Sports Illustrated magazines; John F. Endler Jr. of Torrington, Conn., action photos of Charles Munch by Constantine Manos; Mrs. George August of Northampton, a General Electric table radio; and Earl C. Peltier of Holyoke, the special gift of stuffed political symbols.

And after it was all over and the Tanglewood parking lots were emptied, the rains came.

CAIRO, N. Y.
HERALD
Circ. W. 415

AUG 7 1958

This Is The Final Week At Tanglewood

Thursday, August 7, 8:15 Music Shed "Tanglewood-On-Parade", Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler, Conductor.

Friday, August 8, 8:30 Music Shed Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Conductor. Honegger, Prelude, Fugue and Postlude; Beethoven, Symphony No. 7. Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor")

Saturday, August 9, 8:30 Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux, Conductor. Beethoven Music from "Prometheus"; Hindemith, Nobilissima Visione; Beethoven Leoeenore Overture No. 3

Sunday, August 10 2:30 Music Shed Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Conductor.

Walton, Johannesburg Festival Beethoven Ninth Symphony

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,138

AUG 8 - 1958

Tanglewood Parade Program Attended By 14,588 Persons

The annual Tanglewood-on-Parade program was given yesterday afternoon and evening with a crowd of 14,588 persons attending the event in Lenox.

The program, which started with opera at 4 o'clock, was varied to include something to please everyone. The Berkshire Music Center student orchestra gave a concert later in the afternoon, and during the picnic supper held on the lawn the Tanglewood choir sang.

The Shed Concert with both the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra playing, was held in the evening. The first part of the program was given by the Boston Symphony under the direction of Eleazar Carvalho, and Aaron Copland played his Piano Concerto under the direction of Richard Burgin, concertmaster for the orchestra.

The second part was left to the Pops under the direction of Arthur Fiedler. They played the Gaite Parisien Suite by Offenbach, Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story," a medley of dances including the "Beer Barrel Polka" and the "Charleston" and finally "76 Trombones." The usual encores for which the Pops are famous followed the scheduled program.

The event was attended by many Northern Berkshire music lovers. Among the box-holders at the conecrt were Mr. and Mrs. Julian Sprague of Williamstown, Mr. and Mrs. Richard E. Pierce of 145 Marion Ave., and Mr. and Mrs. Leon Podolsky of Pittsfield. Mr. Podolsky is assistant to the president of Sprague Electric Co

[199]

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

AUG 8 - 1958

Music Review

Pops Goes the Orchestra

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

TANGLEWOOD-on-Parade is good for you.

The first three parts were sheer fun. What may have come after the parts played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Eleazar de Carvalho and Richard Burgin and the Boston Pops orchestra under Arthur Fiedler, we cannot attest to first hand, but we can vouch for the entertainment provided by the program which only seemed long on the printed page.

A crowd larger than had ever assembled before for this particular event shouted with pure joy as the Pops orchestra played some of the old favorites and some novelties, of which "the Typewriter concerto" was undiluted bliss. The preceding part of the program which was intended to be on the more serious side had evoked a degree of approval not far below that of the Pops.

* * *

THE CARNIVAL that is Tanglewood-on-Parade does something to the corpuscles in one's blood. There was a therapeutic value to the evening. The stimulation relieved anyone who may have arrived on the lot with any sort of inhibition or minor concern, and sent him home possibly tired out but certainly happy and exhilarated.

Carvalho lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a pleasant overture "Il Guarany" of Joao Gomes de Araujo, a fellow Brazilian of a previous generation who taught at the conservatory of Sao Paulo, and a selection of the episodes from "Wedded by Witchcraft" of de Falla, the Spaniard who spent his last few years in South America. Carvalho directed with insinuating grace, and, in turn, plangent vigor.

* * *

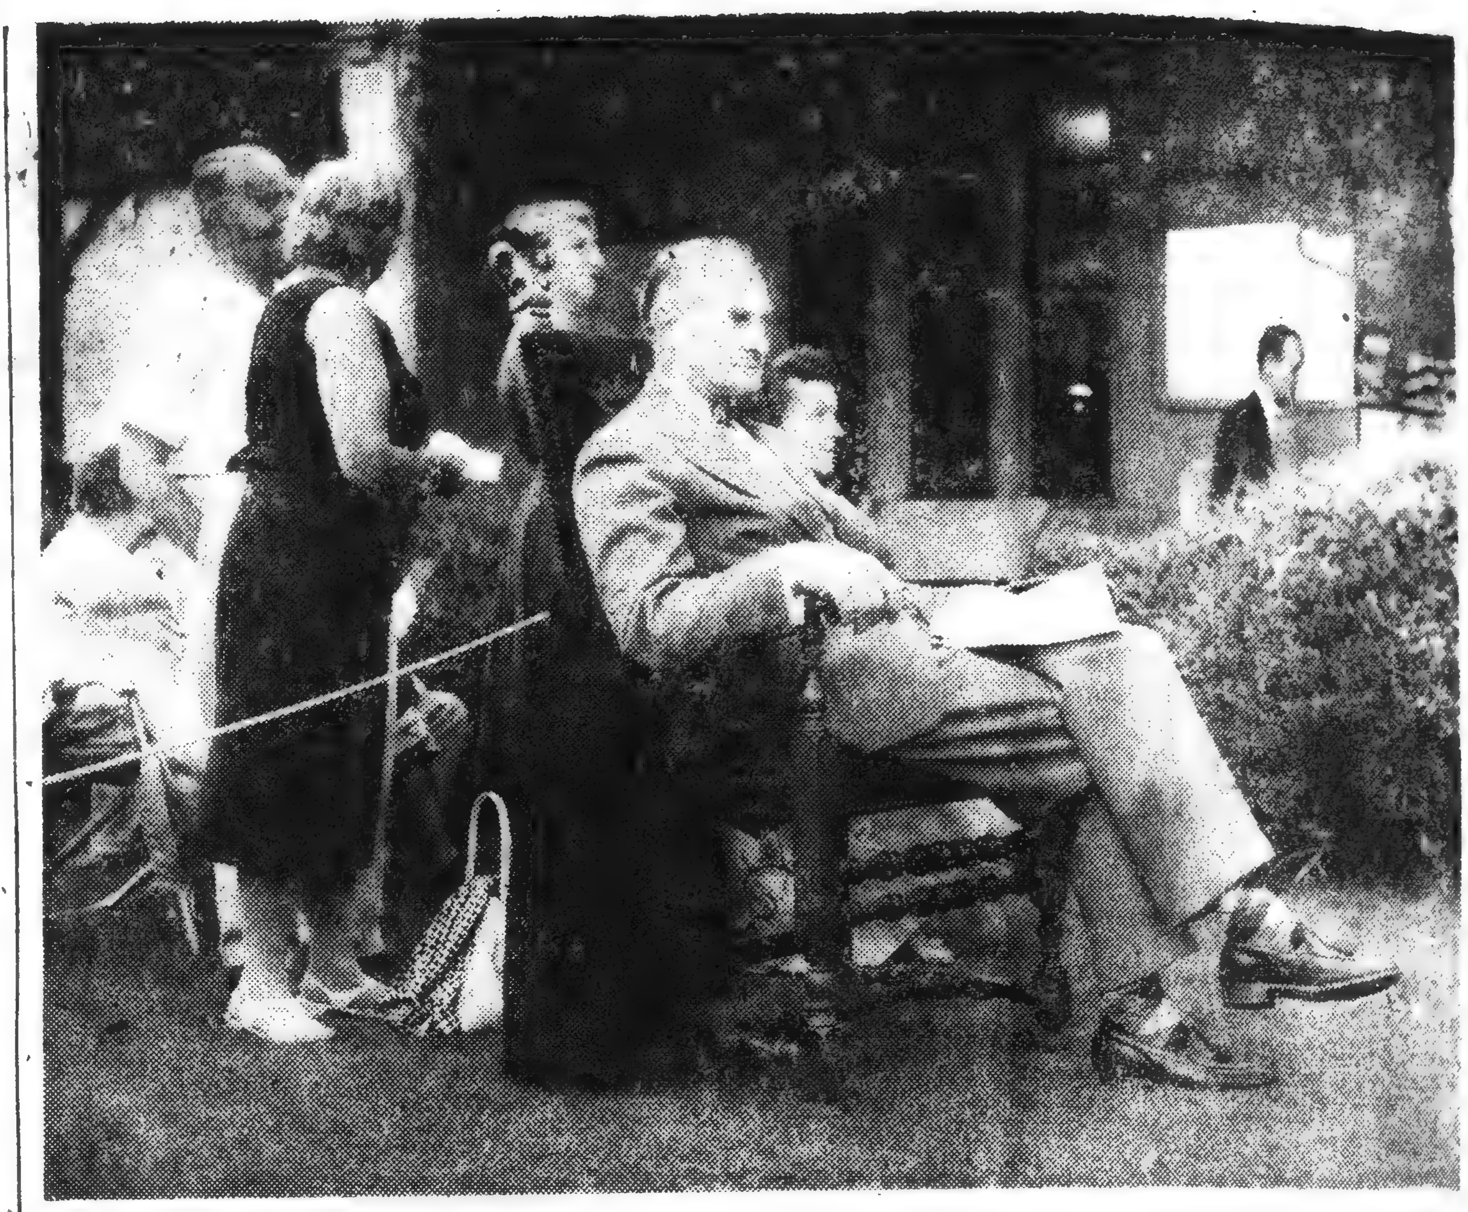
RICHARD BURGIN, concertmaster and assistant conductor of the Boston Symphony, directed the orchestra for the accompaniment of Aaron Copland playing his own piano concerto, a composition of 1926, in which he attempted to adapt the technics of jazz to his own use. There are contrasting periods of reposeful folk music, but the main burden is loud and percussive. But if he was attempting to prove that vulgarity can be fun, he was reasonably successful. Copland's piano playing was concerned with the goal and not with the details, an example which might well be studied by some younger performers. The rhythmic intricacies were conquered by power and luck, and they represent an era in which Copland was carried along in the Gershwin stream.

* * *

E. B. WHITE wrote:

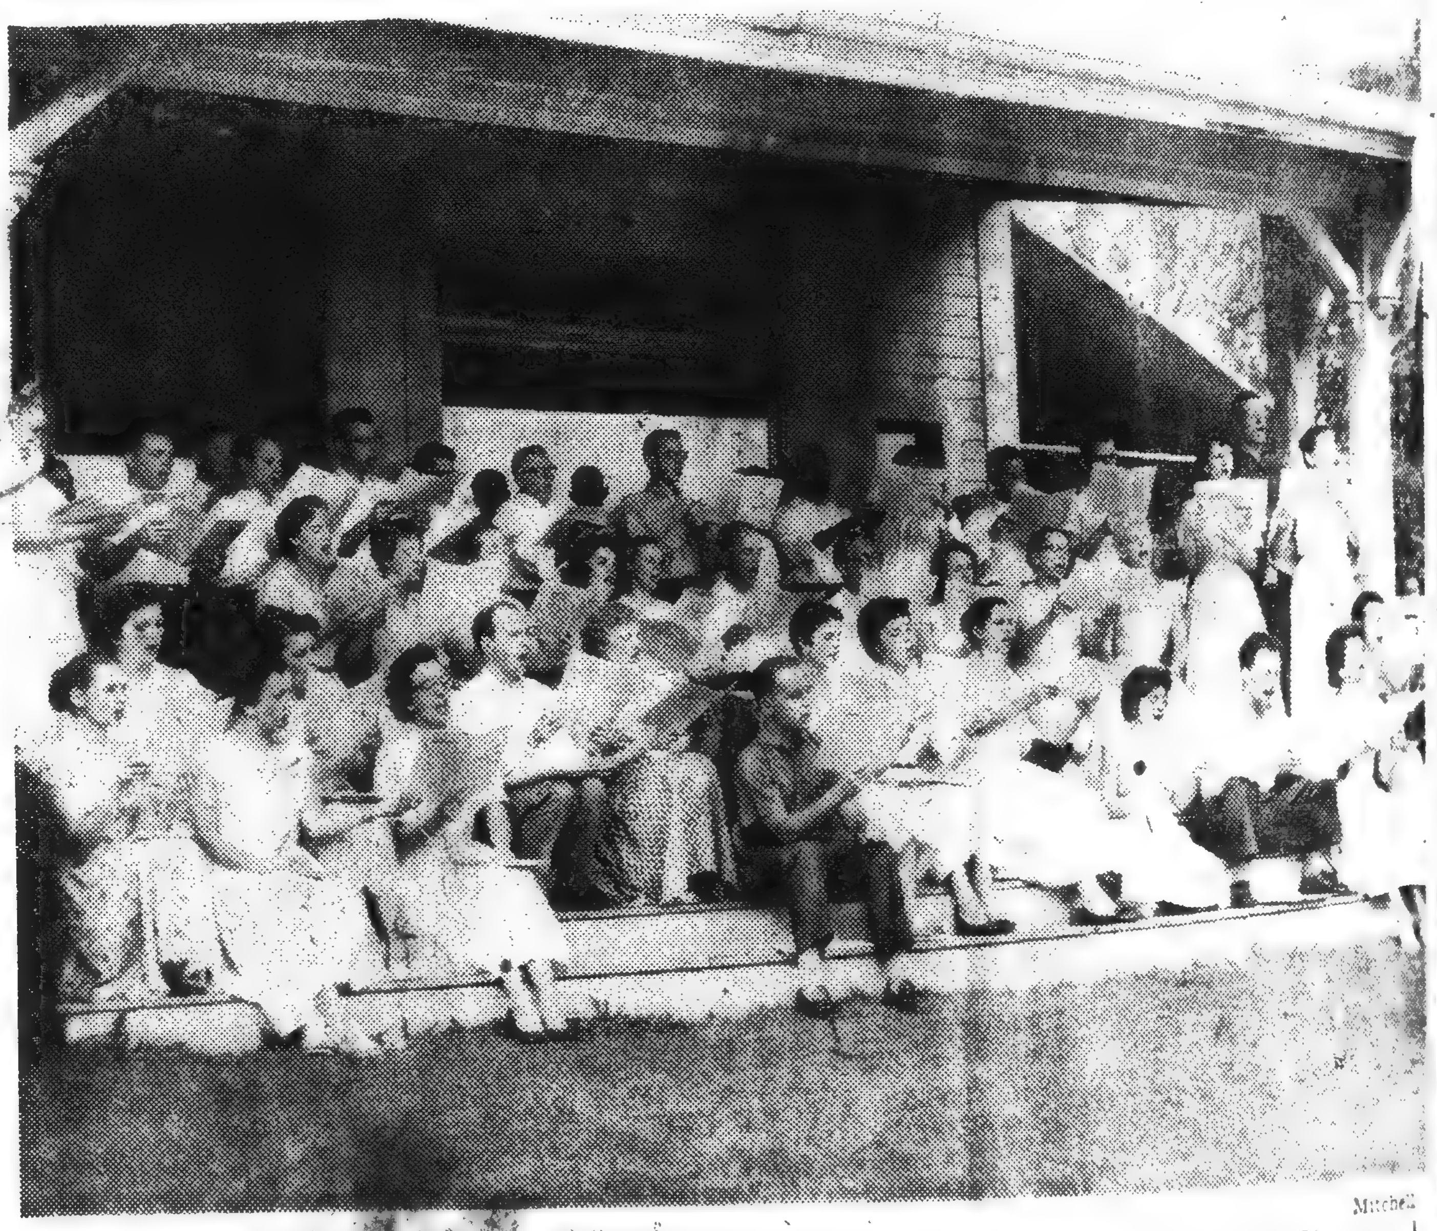
"The critic leaves at curtain fall
To find, in starting to review it,
He scarcely saw the play at all
For watching his reaction to it."

Let this be a public expression of the thanks of this listener to Fiedler for a short hour of gay music which he enjoyed fully as much as anyone on the lot and which, happily, he will not attempt to report, from any viewpoint. Just where anyone who was not present last night would find space, assuming he would like to go next year (and also assuming that everyone there will be on hand again) is not quite clear and, anyway, is not the function of this department. But we genuinely believe that Tanglewood-on-Parade is good for you.



Mitchell

LISTENING to his students of the Music Center's choral department entertain the picnickers at the Tanglewood on Parade benefit last night is Hugh Ross, head of the department, outside the main house. Choir offered nine selections before main concert in Music Shed.



Mitchell

TANGLEWOOD CHOIR, trained by Hugh Ross, assisted by Lorna Cooke de Varon and Alfred Nash Patterson, sings on the porch of the Tanglewood house during the picnic hour. They presented several works, including those by Bach, Haydn, Brahms, Foss, Alexander, Orff, Serebrier, Pinkham and Kastle. Many of the students will be heard Sunday afternoon with Festival chorus and BSO in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, which will close 1958 season.

CATSKILL, N. Y.
Examiner Recorder
Circ. W. 2,245

AUG 7 1958

Tanglewood

The music of Beethoven will be featured by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the final weekend of the Berkshire Festival concert. Charles Munch, music director, will conduct the concerts Friday evening and Sunday afternoon. The concert Saturday evening will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux. Soloists will include Eugene Istomin, pianist, on Friday, and Berl Senofsky, violinist, Saturday evening.

Dr. Munch will follow his regular custom of closing the Berkshire Festival season with a performance of Beethoven's Nineth Symphony on Sunday afternoon. The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johannesburg Festival Overture.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Post
WALLINGFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 3,408

AUG 7 1958

Final Tanglewood Concerts Feature Beethoven Music

The final weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will feature music of Beethoven. Charles Munch, music director, will conduct the concerts of Friday evening, Aug. 8 at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 10, at 2:30. The concert on Saturday evening, Aug. 9, at 8:30, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux. Soloists will include Eugene Istomin, pianist (Aug. 8) and Berl Senofsky, violinist (Aug. 9).

Dr. Munch will open Friday evening's concert with Honegger's Prelude, Fugue and Post-Symphony No. 7. Eugene Istomin will be soloist in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5 "Emperor." Mr. Istomin is the sixth of the outstanding young American pianists who have appeared at Tanglewood during the current season, others being Lukas Foss, Seymour Lipkin, Leon Fleisher, Byron Janis and Leonard Pennario. Mr. Istomin last appeared at Tanglewood in 1955.

The concert on Saturday conducted by Pierre Monteux will open with music from "Prometheus" by Beethoven. Berl Senofsky will be soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto. Mr. Senofsky was the winner of the 1955 Brussels Competition.

Dr. Munch will follow his regular custom of closing the Berkshire Festival season with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on Sunday afternoon. Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD,
Democratic
Circ. 95,535

AUG 7 19

Berkshire
Season

Concerts for Fina
Of Beethove
peror' Conce

The concerts of the end of the Berkshire F morrow, Saturday and the Music Shed at Ta
Lenox, will feature
Beethoven. Charles M sic director, will co
Boston Symphony Or
the concerts tomorro and Sunday afternoon
Saturday evening conce
under the direction
Monteux.
Dr. Munch's progra row evening, at 8.30
clude Honegger's Pre and Postlude and B
Seventh Symphony. T
American pianist, Eu min, will be soloist i ven's "Emperor" Conc Saturday Conce
Pierre Monteux will program on Saturday 8.30 with Beethoven from "Prometheus." B sky, violinist, will mak Tanglewood appearan loist in Beethoven's V certo. The second h program includes
"Nobilissima Visione" thoven's Leonore Over
For the final Festiv on Sunday afternoon a Munch will present a ance of Beethoven's N phony, with the Festiv and soloists Adele
soprano; Florence K
Blake Stern, tenor, a Gramm, bass. The pr open with Sir William Johannesburg Festival
The Boston Sympho

Journal
LAKEVILLE,
Weekly Inde
Circ. 2,29

AUG 7 195

inal
Festival

The final weekend
shire Festival concer
Boston Symphony Or
the Music Shed at T will feature the mus
thoven. Charles Mu
Director, will conduc
certs of Friday eveni
8, at 8:30 and Sund noon, August 10, at

EUGENE
American form
Conc
Tang

[20

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 95,535

Berkshire Music Festival Season Closes on Sunday

Concerts for Final Week End Will Feature Music Of Beethoven; Pianist Eugene Istomin in 'Emperor' Concerto Tomorrow Night

[illegible] the final week end of the Berkshire Festival tomorrow, Saturday and Sunday in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, will feature music of Beethoven. Charles Munch, music director, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the concerts tomorrow evening and Sunday afternoon, and the Saturday evening concert will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux.

Dr. Munch's program tomorrow evening, at 8.30 will include Honegger's Prelude Fuge and Postlude and Beethoven's Seventh Symphony. The young American pianist, Eugene Istomin, will be soloist in Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto.

Saturday Concert

Pierre Monteux will open his program on Saturday evening at 8.30 with Beethoven's Music from "Prometheus." Berl Senofsky, violinist, will make his first Tanglewood appearance as soloist in Beethoven's Violin Concerto. The second half of the program includes Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" and Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3.

For the final Festival concert on Sunday afternoon at 2.30, Dr. Munch will present a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, with the Festival Chorus and soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johannesburg Festival Overture.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's final rehearsal for the week end concerts on Saturday morning at 10 a. m. will be open to the public for the benefit of the Pension Fund. Unreserved general admission tickets for all three week end concerts are available two hours before each performance.

Week End Events

Other events of the final week end which are open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center include opera scenes in the theater at 1.15 p. m. tomorrow and the final seminar in contemporary music on Friday at 3.15 in the Chamber Music Hall. Aaron Copland will speak on his own music and Fromm Fellowship players will perform the Four Songs from Twelve Poems of Emily Dickinson, written in 1950. Guest soloist Noel Lee will be heard in Mr. Copland's Piano Fantasy.

At 3 on Saturday afternoon in the Shed, the Berkshire Music Center student orchestra will present its final concert of the season. The program will include Strauss' Overture to "Fledermaus" (conducted by Seymour Lipkin); the first movement of Brahms Violin Concerto (soloist: Beverly Somach, violin; conducted by Joseph Kreiner); dances from "The Three Cornered Hat" by Manuel de Falla (conducted by Zubin Mehta); Tchaikovsky's Overture-Fantasia "Romeo and Juliet" (conducted by Gustav Meier) and Eleazar de Carvalho's "Cancao Nupcial" conducted by the composer, who is the head of the Department of Orchestral Conducting at the Berkshire Music Center. Prizes will be awarded at the intermission of the concert.

All-Stravinsky

The Sunday morning Chamber Music Concert at 10 in the theater-concert hall will be an all-Stravinsky program. It will include the Octet, conducted by Louis Speyer, English horn, of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty; the Duo Concertante performed by Ronald Knudsen and Jo Evelyn Boatright; Three Shakespeare Songs performed by Shirley Sudoick, mezzo-soprano, Dent Williamson, flute, Homer Lee, clarinet, and Arthur Lewis, viola. The final work on the program will be Dumbarton Oaks, for 15 instruments, conducted by Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and co-head of the department of Orchestral Playing and Chamber Music.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,286

AUG 8 - 1958

Final Weekend At Tanglewood Opens Tonight

end of the Berkshire Festival on Aug. 8-9-10 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, will feature music of Beethoven. Charles Munch, music director, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the concerts of this evening and Sunday afternoon, and the Saturday evening concert will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux.

Dr. Munch's program on Friday evening at 8:30 will include Honnegger's Prelude Fugue and Postlude and Beethoven's Seventh Symphony. The young American pianist, Eugene Istomin, will be soloist in Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto.

Pierre Monteux will open his program on Saturday evening at 8:30 with Beethoven's Music from "Prometheus." Berl Senofsky, violinist, will make his first Tanglewood appearance as soloist in Beethoven's Violin Concerto. The second half of the program includes Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" and Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3.

For the final Festival concert on Sunday afternoon at 2:30, Dr. Munch will present a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, with the Festival Chorus and soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johannesburg Festival Overture.

RIVERDALE, N.Y.
PRESS
W. 8 472

AUG 7 1958

Beethoven Weekend to Close 1958 Tanglewood Festival

By DAVID A. SPECTOR

Through the years a popular weekend vacation spot for Riverdalians has been the Tanglewood Music Festival in the Berkshire Mountains. This coming weekend closes the 21st season, and a fitting program is planned.

On Friday evening of this Beethoven weekend, the Seventh Symphony and the "Emperor" Piano Concerto No. 5 with Eugene Istomin as pianist will be presented. Saturday evening will feature the Violin Concerto with Ben Senofsky as soloist, and Sunday afternoon will bring the weekend to a close with Beethoven's majestic Ninth Symphony, the "Choral."

Fine Accomodations

Lenox, Mass., the site of the concerts, and the surrounding country-side, have become the center of fine guest houses and inns. The larger inns and hotels are on American Plan for the summer months, but rates for twin-bed rooms in the plainer homes run from about $6.

Should the visitor arrive late, the information center in Lenox has a comprehensive listing of up-to-the-minute accomodations. The hearty may even rent tents and campsites for sleeping in the open.

Trip Takes 3½ Hours

The best way to reach the Tanglewood Festival by auto is via the toll-free Taconic State Parkway to the end, then on route 23 to Great Barrington where the motorist picks up route 7 through Lenox. Ample free parking is provided, and the 145 mile drive can be done in an easy 3½ hours. There are bus, train and plane connections to nearby Pittsfield if you don't wish to drive.

Other neighboring attractions are historic museums, the Berkshire Playhouse at Stockbridge featuring, this week, "The Constant Wife," and the Williamstown Theatre showing "Cat on A Hot Tin Roof."

Photographers' Field Day

Photographers will find marvelous views from Mount Greylock, the highest peak in the state, and there are beautiful lakes for boating and swimming, as well as pictures. Horsebackriding and golf are available to fill the pre-concert hours.

The Tanglewood Festival is located in an area of formal gardens and sweeping lawns boasting fine examples of contemporary sculpture. Seats in the world-famous Shed run from $3.50 and up, but most prefer to bring along a blanket and enjoy the music from the lawn. Lawn admission for the concerts is $2. Refreshments and box lunches may be purchased on the grounds, and music books and records are sold from booths right at the concert.

MILLBROOK, N. Y.
ROUND TABLE
Circ. W. 673

AUG 7 1958

Berkshire Festival Enters Final Weekend

The final week end of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will feature music of Beethoven. Charles Munch, Music Director, will conduct the concerts of Friday evening, August 8 at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon, August 10, at 2:30. The concert on Saturday evening, August 9, at 8:30, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux.

Friday evening's concert will open with Honegger's Prelude, Fugue and Postlude, followed by Beethoven's Syhphony No. 7. Eugene Istomin will be soloist in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5 "Emperor".

The concert on Saturday will commence with music from "Prometheus" by Beethoven. Berl Senofsky wil be soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto. In the second half of the program Mr. Monteux will present Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" and Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3.

Dr. Munch will follow his regular custom of closing the Berkshire Festival season with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on Sunday afternoon. Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson. The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johnnesberg Festival Overture.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's rehearsal on Saturday morning, August 9, at 10 o'clock will be open to the public for the benefit of the Pension Fund.

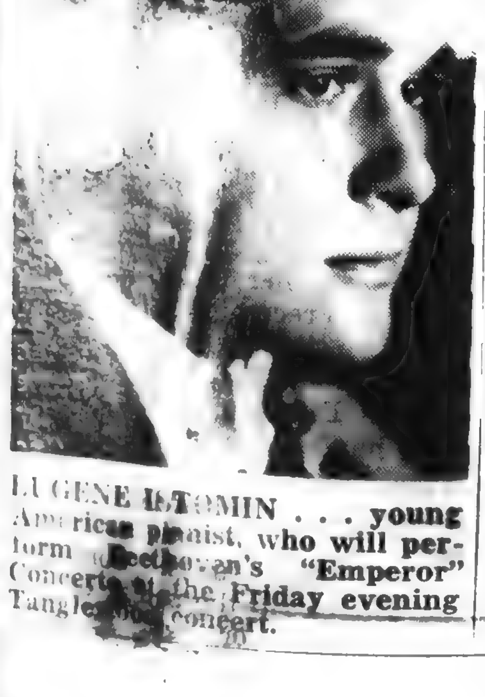
• • •

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292

AUG [illegible]

Final Weekend Of Berkshire Festival To Feature Beethoven

The [illegible] weekend of Berkshire [illegible] concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood w[illegible] music of Beethoven. [illegible] Munch, Music [illegible] conduct the con[illegible] evening, August [illegible] Sunday after[illegible] at 2:30. The concert on Saturday evening, August 9, at 8:30, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux. Soloists will include Eugene Istomin, pianist (Friday) and Berl Senofsky, violinist (Saturday).



EUGENE ISTOMIN . . . young American pianist, who will perform Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto at the Friday evening Tanglewood concert.

Dr. Munch will open Friday evening's concert with Honegger's Prelude, Fugue and Postlude, followed by Beethoven's Symphony No. 7. Eugene Istomin will be soloist in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5 "Emperor". Mr. Istomin is the sixth of the outstanding young American pianists to appear at Tanglewood during the current season. He last appeared at Tanglewood in 1955.

The concert on Saturday conducted by Pierre Monteux will open with music from Prometheus by Beethoven. Berl Senofsky will be soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto. Mr. Senofsky was the winner of the 1955 Brussels Competition and has appeared with many of the outstanding American orchestras since his United States debut in 1956. This will be his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In the second half of the program, Mr. Monteux will present Hindemith's Nobilissima Visione and Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3.

Dr. Munch will follow his regular custom of closing the Berkshire Festival season with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on Sunday afternoon. Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson. The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johannesburg

(Continued on Page 16)

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 95,535

AUG 7 1958

Berkshire Music Festival Season Closes on Sunday

Concerts for Final Week End Will Feature Music Of Beethoven; Pianist Eugene Istomin in 'Emperor' Concerto Tomorrow Night

The concerts of the final week end of the Berkshire Festival tomorrow, Saturday and Sunday in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, will feature music of Beethoven. Charles Munch, music director, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the concerts tomorrow evening and Sunday afternoon, and the Saturday evening concert will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux.

Dr. Munch's program tomorrow evening, at 8.30 will include Honegger's Prelude Fuge and Postlude and Beethoven's Seventh Symphony. The young American pianist, Eugene Istomin, will be soloist in Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto.

Saturday Concert

Pierre Monteux will open his program on Saturday evening at 8.30 with Beethoven's Music from "Prometheus." Berl Senofsky, violinist, will make his first Tanglewood appearance as soloist in Beethoven's Violin Concerto. The second half of the program includes Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" and Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3.

For the final Festival concert on Sunday afternoon at 2.30, Dr. Munch will present a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, with the Festival Chorus and soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johannesburg Festival Overture.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's final rehearsal for the week end concerts on Saturday morning at 10 a. m. will be open to the public for the benefit of the Pension Fund. Unreserved general admission tickets for all three week end concerts are available two hours before each performance.

Week End Events

Other events of the final week end which are open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center include opera scenes in the theater at 1.15 p. m. tomorrow and the final seminar in contemporary music on Friday at 3.15 in the Chamber Music Hall. Aaron Copland will speak on his own music and Fromm Fellowship players will perform the Four Songs from Twelve Poems of Emily Dickinson, written in 1950. Guest soloist Noel Lee will be heard in Mr. Copland's Piano Fantasy.

At 3 on Saturday afternoon in the Shed, the Berkshire Music Center student orchestra will present its final concert of the season. The program will include Strauss' Overture to "Fledermaus" (conducted by Seymour Lipkin); the first movement of Brahms Violin Concerto (soloist: Beverly Somach, violin; conducted by Joseph Kreiner); dances from "The Three Cornered Hat" by Manuel de Falla (conducted by Zubin Mehta): Tchaikovsky's Overture-Fantasia "Romeo and Juliet" (conducted by Gustav Meier) and Eleazar de Carvalho's "Cancao Nupcial" conducted by the composer, who is the head of the Department of Orchestral Conducting at the Berkshire Music Center. Prizes will be awarded at the intermission of the concert.

All-Stravinsky

The Sunday morning Chamber Music Concert at 10 in the theater-concert hall will be an all-Stravinsky program. It will include the Octet, conducted by Louis Speyer, English horn, of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty; the Duo Concertante performed by Ronald Knudsen and Jo Evelyn Boatright; Three Shakespeare Songs performed by Shirley Sudoick, mezzo-soprano, Dent Williamson, flute, Homer Lee, clarinet, and Arthur Lewis, viola. The final work on the program will be Dumbarton Oaks, for 15 instruments, conducted by Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and co-head of the department of Orchestral Playing and Chamber Music.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,286

AUG 8 - 1958

Final Weekend At Tanglewood Opens Tonight

end of the Berkshire Festival on Aug. 8-9-10 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, will feature music of Beethoven. Charles Munch, music director, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the concerts of this evening and Sunday afternoon, and the Saturday evening concert will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux.

Dr. Munch's program on Friday evening at 8:30 will include Honnegger's Prelude Fugue and Postlude and Beethoven's Seventh Symphony. The young American pianist, Eugene Istomin, will be soloist in Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto.

Pierre Monteux will open his program on Saturday evening at 8:30 with Beethoven's Music from "Prometheus." Berl Senofsky, violinist, will make his first Tanglewood appearance as soloist in Beethoven's Violin Concerto. The second half of the program includes Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" and Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3.

For the final Festival concert on Sunday afternoon at 2:30, Dr. Munch will present a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, with the Festival Chorus and soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johannesburg Festival Overture.

RIVERDALE, N.Y.
PRESS
W. 8,472

AUG 7 1958

Beethoven Weekend to Close 1958 Tanglewood Festival

By DAVID A. SPECTOR

Through the years a popular weekend vacation spot for Riverdalians has been the Tanglewood Music Festival in the Berkshire Mountains. This coming weekend closes the 21st season, and a fitting program is planned.

On Friday evening of this Beethoven weekend, the Seventh Symphony and the "Emperor" Piano Concerto No. 5 with Eugene Istomin as pianist will be presented. Saturday evening will feature the Violin Concerto with Ben Senofsky as soloist, and Sunday afternoon will bring the weekend to a close with Beethoven's majestic Ninth Symphony, the "Choral."

Fine Accomodations

Lenox, Mass., the site of the concerts, and the surrounding country-side, have become the center of fine guest houses and inns. The larger inns and hotels are on American Plan for the summer months, but rates for twin-bed rooms in the plainer homes run from about $6.

Should the visitor arrive late, the information center in Lenox has a comprehensive listing of up-to-the-minute accomodations. The hearty may even rent tents and campsites for sleeping in the open.

Trip Takes 3½ Hours

The best way to reach the Tanglewood Festival by auto is via the toll-free Taconic State Parkway to the end, then on route 23 to Great Barrington where the motorist picks up route 7 through Lenox. Ample free parking is provided, and the 145 mile drive can be done in an easy 3½ hours. There are bus, train and plane connections to nearby Pittsfield if you don't wish to drive.

Other neighboring attractions are historic museums, the Berkshire Playhouse at Stockbridge featuring, this week, "The Constant Wife," and the Williamstown Theatre showing "Cat on A Hot Tin Roof."

Photographers' Field Day

Photographers will find marvelous views from Mount Greylock, the highest peak in the state, and there are beautiful lakes for boating and swimming, as well as pictures. Horsebackriding and golf are available to fill the pre-concert hours.

The Tanglewood Festival is located in an area of formal gardens and sweeping lawns boasting fine examples of contemporary sculpture. Seats in the world-famous Shed run from $3.50 and up, but most prefer to bring along a blanket and enjoy the music from the lawn. Lawn admission for the concerts is $2. Refreshments and box lunches may be purchased on the grounds, and music books and records are sold from booths right at the concert.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292

AUG 7 1958

Final Weekend Of Berkshire Festival To Feature Beethoven

The final weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood will feature the music of Beethoven. Charles Munch, Music Director, will conduct the concerts of Friday evening, August 8, at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon, August 10, at 2:30. The concert on Saturday evening, August 9, at 8:30, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux. Soloists will include Eugene Istomin, pianist (Friday) and Berl Senofsky, violinist (Saturday).

EUGENE [illegible]OMIN . . . young American pianist, who will perform [illegible] "Emperor" Concert[illegible] Friday evening Tangl[illegible]

Dr. Munch will open Friday evening's concert with Honegger's Prelude, Fugue and Postlude, followed by Beethoven's Symphony No. 7. Eugene Istomin will be soloist in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5 "Emperor". Mr. Istomin is the sixth of the outstanding young American pianists to appear at Tanglewood during the current season. He last appeared at Tanglewood in 1955.

The concert on Saturday conducted by Pierre Monteux will open with music from Prometheus by Beethoven. Berl Senofsky will be soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto. Mr. Senofsky was the winner of the 1955 Brussels Competition and has appeared with many of the outstanding American orchestras since his United States debut in 1956. This will be his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In the second half of the program, Mr. Monteux will present Hindemith's Nobilissima Visione and Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3.

Dr. Munch will follow his regular custom of closing the Berkshire Festival season with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on Sunday afternoon. Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson. The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johannesburg

(Continued on Page 16)

[illegible], N. Y.
ROUND TABLE
Circ. W. [illegible]

AUG 7 1958

Berkshire Festival Enters Final Weekend

The final week end of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will feature music of Beethoven. Charles Munch, Music Director, will conduct the concerts of Friday evening, August 8 at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon, August 10, at 2:30. The concert on Saturday evening, August 9, at 8:30, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux.

Friday evening's concert will open with Honegger's Prelude, Fugue and Postlude, followed by Beethoven's Syhphony No. 7. Eugene Istomin will be soloist in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5 "Emperor".

The concert on Saturday will commence with music from "Prometheus" by Beethoven. Berl Senofsky wil be soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto. In the second half of the program Mr. Monteux will present Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" and Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3.

Dr. Munch will follow his regular custom of closing the Berkshire Festival season with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on Sunday afternoon. Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson. The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johnnesberg Festival Overture.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's rehearsal on Saturday morning, August 9, at 10 o'clock will be open to the public for the benefit of the Pension Fund.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 40,429

AUG 7 1958

Beethoven Featured At Berkshire Festival

The final weekend of Berkshire festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will feature the music of Beethoven. Charles Munch, music director, will conduct the concerts of Friday evening and Sunday afternoon and Pierre Monteux will conduct the Saturday evening program.

* * *

THE PROGRAMS will be presented in the shed on the Tanglewood grounds near Lenox, Mass., with evening concerts at 8:30 o'clock and afternoon concerts at 2:30 o'clock.

Eugene Istomin will be soloist in Beethoven's piano concerto number 5, "Emperor," on Friday evening. Istomin last appeared at Tanglewood in 1955.

Other numbers to be conducted by Dr. Munch on Friday evening are Honegger's Prelude, Fugue and Postlude; and the Beethoven Symaphony number 7.

Berl Senofsky will be soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto on Saturday evening. This will be his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Senofsky, who played last season as soloist with the Schenectady Symphony, was the winner of the 1955 Brussels competition.

* * *

ALSO ON THE Saturday evening program will be music from "Prometheus," Beethoven; Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione," and the Beethoven "Leonore" overture number 3.

Dr. Munch will close the Berkshire festival Sunday afternoon with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopeleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass; with the festival chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson.

The Sunday afternoon program will open with Sir William Walton's "Johannesburg Festival Overture," written for the 70th anniversary of the city of Johannesburg in South Africa and first performed there in 1956.

The Saturday morning rehearsal, at 10 a.m. in the shed, will be open to the public for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

* * *

TANGLEWOOD on parade will be held today between 6 and 11 p.m. The program will include concerts by the various departments of the Berkshire music center school and will feature a gala concert at 8:15 p.m. in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra. Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct works of Gomes and Falla, followed by Aaron Copland performing the piano part of his own piano concerto. Richard Burgin will direct the orchestra. Arthur Fiedler will direct the Boston Pops Orchestra in a program of favorites.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,286

AUG 8 - 1958

Tanglewood On Parade Attracts Nearly 15,000

Once again Tanglewood was on Parade to a record and happy throng of 14,588, with youngsters from many camps and various youth organizations among the well-behaved crowd.

Although the gracious and spacious grounds were dampened at 4:00 when reserved seat and box holders were invited to a garden performance of Menotti's "The Medium" Act III from Puccini's "La Boheme," held indoors, enthusiasm and people ran rampant from 6 on, as simultaneous performances by the students of opera, orchestra, composition departments and Study Group held sway in the various concert-halls.

The professionally adept From Fellowship Players demonstrated works by student composers. among them a harmonically dissonant but engaging study for piano by William Smith from Decatur, Ga., who also performed his composition. An intriguing and ingenious group of three poems with Music were freely sung by the composer's wife, Atifet Usmanbas; she and her husband, Ilhan are from Ankara, Turkey. Mr. Usmanbas has attended the Bennington Composers and Chamber Music Conference, where many of his fine compositions were heard.

A delightful excerpt from Act II of Strauss' opera "Arabella" charmingly staged, was well sung and nicely portrayed by Annabelle Bernard and Ronald Holgate in the theatre-concert hall among other scenes from various operas, including The Marriage of Figaro, The Bartered Bride and Carmen.

In the big shed, this reviewer was greatly impressed by the professional elan and projection of the student orchestra, this year a particularly cohesive organization. The Angelic Concert from "Mathis der Mahler" was smoothly played and conducted by the competent young Gustav Zurich from Switzerland; the "New England Triptych of the contemporary Schuman was delivered with stirring and sympathetic insight by the orchestra and David J. Zinman from New York City.

The Tanglewood Choir, its male section of very fine calibre, entertained on the Main House porch while many gathered on the lawns to enjoy their picnic suppers. Conducted by student leaders, and Hugh Ross and his assistant, Lorna Cooke de Varon, the highly varied program had many commendable moments; it ended with a full-voiced and moving composition by [illegible] Foss, "Psalms," the composer assisting Robert Miller as accompanists.

The energetic Eleazar de Carvalho opened the evening's contribution to the gala parade with the Gomes' "Il Guarany" Overture and the stunning "El Amor Brujo," moving the audience to loud cheers. Aaron Copland then performed his Piano Concerto, its "appeal" motive introducing the crescent aspects of the twenties, evoking the charleston, "hot licks" of the jazz trumpeters, and ending with an "appeal" the motive very dominant now, for understanding. Richard Burgin was the noticeably emathic conductor, the audience recalling both Mr. Copland and Mr. Burgin many times.

As usual, Arthur Fiedler and his Boston Pops orchestra were the most enkindling portion of the program. Mr. Fiedler chooses his selections well, with an eye to audience response, and they didn't fail him, especially with The Mexican Hat Dance. The orchestra was definitely in the mood, also one of the fiddlers holding and playing his instrument like a guitar in the Jazz Pizzicato, one of the many expected encores.

Certainly the enormous crowds of music lovers were not in the least disappointed with any section of this year's Tanglewood On Parade, their rioutous enthusiasm almost overpowering the crashing rousing sounds of the gayly spirited orchestra. A wonderfully amusing rendition of "The Typewritter" had everyone laughing as the "soloist" on the pre-war typewriter was given front-stage position. With the foot-tapping medley, of Sousa Marches the audience almost quietly accepted the end of a contagiously communicative program.

This evening's concert of the last weekend of the Berkshire Festival will feature Eugene Istomin, pianist, in Beethoven's "Emperor" concerto.—M.deB. B.

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 186,306
AUG 8 - 1958

TANGLEWOOD ENDS

The concerts to the final weekend of the Berkshire Festival tonight, tomorrow and Sunday at Tanglewood, Lenox, will feature music of Beethoven.

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the concerts of Friday night and Sunday afternoon. The Saturday night concert will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,541

AUG 8 - 1958

Final Concerts At Tanglewood

LENOX—The concerts of the final week end of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood will feature the music of Beethoven. Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the concerts Friday evening and Sunday afternoon. The Saturday evening concert will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux.

The season's final program Sunday afternoon will feature Beethoven's Ninth Symphony with soloists Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, Blake Stern and Donald Gramm.

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 411, 971

AUG 8 - 1958

FINAL TANGLEWOOD CONCERT

The concerts of the final weekend of the Berkshire Festival on August 8-9-10 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, will feature music of Beethoven. Charles Munch, music director, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the concerts of Friday evening and Sunday afternoon. The Saturday evening concert will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux.

American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 176,318

AUG 8 - 1958

Munch, Monteux to Lead Beethoven Program

The concerts of this final weekend of the Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, will feature music of Beethoven. Charles Munch, music director, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra tonight and Sunday afternoon. The Saturday evening concert will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux.

Dr. Munch's program tonight at 8:30 will include Honegger's Prelude Fugue and Postlude and Beethoven's Seventh Symphony. The young American pianist, Eugene Istomin, will be soloist in Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto.

Pierre Monteaux will open his program tomorrow night at 8:30 with Beethoven's Music from "Prometheus." Berl Senofsky, violinist, will make his first Tanglewood appearance as soloist in Beethoven's Violin Concerto. The second half of the program includes Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" and Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3.

For the final Festival concert on Sunday at 2:30 p. m., Dr. Munch will present a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, with the Festival Chorus and soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johannesburg Festival Overture.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's final rehearsal for the weekend concerts tomorrow at 10 a. m. will be open to the public for the benefit of the Pension Fund. Admission is $1. Unreserved general admission tickets for all three weekend concerts are available two hours before each performance.

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 26,550

AUG 7 - 1958

Final Tanglewood Week To Feature Beethoven

The final weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, will feature the music of Beethoven. Charles Munch, music director, will conduct the concerts of Friday evening, Aug. 8, at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 10, at 2:30. The concert on Saturday evening, Aug. 9, at 8:30, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux. Soloists will include Eugene Istomin, pianist (Aug. 8), and Berl Senofsky, violinist (Aug. 9).

Dr. Munch will open Friday evening's concert with Honegger's Prelude, Fugue and Postlude, followed by Beethoven's Symphony No. 7. Eugene Istomin will be soloist in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5, "Emperor."

The concert on Saturday conducted by Pierre Monteux will open with music from "Prometheus" by Beethoven. Berl Senofsky will be soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto. Mr. Senofsky was the winner of the 1955 Brussels Competition and has appeared with many of the outstanding American orchestras since his United States debut in 1956. This will be his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In the second half of the program Mr. Monteux will present Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" and Beetroven's Leonore Overture No. 3.

Dr. Munch will follow his regular custom of closing the Berkshire Festival season with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on Sunday afternoon. Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson. The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johannesburg Festival Overture, which was written for the 70th anniversary of the city of Johannesburg in South Africa and first performed there in 1956.

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON,
Mass.
Weekly Independent
Cir. 2,498

AUG 7 1958

21st Music Festival to Close on Sunday

Week-end Concerts Feature Music of Beethoven

Tanglewood-on-Parade This Evening Will See Eleazar de Carvalho Conducting Orchestra and Copland Playing Concerto.—Arthur Fiedler to Conduct Boston Pops.

The final week-end of the 21st season of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood in Lenox will feature music of Beethoven. Charles Munch, music director, will conduct the concerts of Friday evening, August 8, at 8:30, and Sunday afternoon, August 10, at 2:30. The concert on Saturday evening, August 9, at 8:30, will be under the direction if Pierre Monteux. Soloists will include Eugene Istomin, pianist (August 8) and Berl Senofsky, violinist (August 9).

Dr. Munch will open Friday evening's concert with Honegger's Prelude, Fugue and Postlude, followed by Beethoven's Symphony No. 7. Eugene Istomin will be soloist in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5 "Emperor." Mr. Istomin is the sixth of the

Tanglewood Turn to tenth page

Overture, which was written for the 70th anniversary of the city of Johannesburg in South Africa and first performed there in 1956. The Boston Symphony Orchestra presented the United States premiere of the overture during the 1956-57 season.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's rehearsal on Saturday morning, August 9, at 10 o'clock will be open to the public for the benefit of the Pension Fund.

Tanglewood-on-Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will be held this evening, beginning at 6:00. Concerts by the various departments of the school, including orchestra, opera, chamber music and choir, will be followed by picnic suppers on the lawn and a gala concert at 8:15 in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Boston Pops Orchestra. Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct works of Gomes and Falla, followed by Aaron Copland performing the piano part of his own Piano Concerto. The orchestra will be under the direction of Richard Burgin. Following the drawing of door prizes, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites.

Mr. Copland will also be heard in the final session of the Seminar in Contemporary music on Friday afterfinal session of the Seminar in Contemporary Music on Friday afternoon, August 8, at 3:15. He will discuss his own music and there will be performaínces of his Four Songs from Twelve Poems of Emily Dickinson and the Piano Fantasy, with guest soloist Noel Lee.

The final concert of the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra will be given on Saturday afternoon, August 9, at 3:00 in the Music Shed. Various prizes will be awarded to the students at this concert. The final student chamber music concert on Sunday morning at 10:00 o'clock will be held in the Theatre-Concert Hall. The last three events are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Herald (e)
NEW BRITAIN,
Independent
Circ. 29,250

AUG 9 - 1958

So

Grace

THE marriage
but if this pattern, there second half of first half. Years
was the first six pattern seems to time is especially as in times gone

Early vacati back into the travelers are holiday.

The Berkshi
Symphony Orch
close this weeken
close the festiva formance of Bee

The America
College, New Lo
close tomorrow
Limon & Co. wi and many other

For those
the second phase
"Cracker Barrel
Lake Tarleton
ing until August

New England Newsclip Agen
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond

Sunday Republica
WATERBURY, Co
Independent
Circ. 46,025

AUG 1 0 1958

Beethoven Concert At Tanglewoo

The concerts of week end of the Berksh
tival ending today in
Shed at Tanglewood
Mass., featuring mu
thoven. Charles Mu
director, will conduc
ton Symphony Orch
final festival conce
ernoon at 2:30. Dr.
present a performan
thoven's Ninth Symp
the Festival Chorus
Adele Addison, sopra ence Kopleff, alto; B tenor, and Donald bass. The program with Sir William W hannesburg Festival

[201]

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 40,429

AUG 7 1958

Beethoven Featured At Berkshire Festival

The final weekend of Berkshire festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will feature the music of Beethoven. Charles Munch, music director, will conduct the concerts of Friday evening and Sunday afternoon and Pierre Monteux will conduct the Saturday evening program.

* * *

THE PROGRAMS will be presented in the shed on the Tanglewood grounds near Lenox, Mass., with evening concerts at 8:30 o'clock and afternoon concerts at 2:30 o'clock.

Eugene Istomin will be soloist in Beethoven's piano concerto number 5, "Emperor," on Friday evening. Istomin last appeared at Tanglewood in 1955.

Other numbers to be conducted by Dr. Munch on Friday evening are Honegger's Prelude, Fugue and Postlude; and the Beethoven Symaphony number 7.

Berl Senofsky will be soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto on Saturday evening. This will be his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Senofsky, who played last season as soloist with the Schenectady Symphony, was the winner of the 1955 Brussels competition.

* * *

ALSO ON THE Saturday evening program will be music from "Prometheus," Beethoven; Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione," and the Beethoven "Leonore" overture number 3.

Dr. Munch will close the Berkshire festival Sunday afternoon with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopeleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass; with the festival chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson.

The Sunday afternoon program will open with Sir William Walton's "Johannesburg Festival Overture," written for the 70th anniversary of the city of Johannesburg in South Africa and first performed there in 1956.

The Saturday morning rehearsal, at 10 a.m. in the shed, will be open to the public for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

* * *

TANGLEWOOD on parade will be held today between 6 and 11 p.m. The program will include concerts by the various departments of the Berkshire music center school and will feature a gala concert at 8:15 p.m. in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra. Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct works of Gomes and Falla, followed by Aaron Copland performing the piano part of his own piano concerto. Richard Burgin will direct the orchestra. Arthur Fiedler will direct the Boston Pops Orchestra in a program of favorites.

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 186,306
AUG 8 - 1958

TANGLEWOOD ENDS

The concerts to the final weekend of the Berkshire Festival tonight, tomorrow and Sunday at Tanglewood, Lenox, will feature music of Beethoven.

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the concerts of Friday night and Sunday afternoon. The Saturday night concert will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican -
Circ. 81,541

AUG 8 - 1958

Final Concerts At Tanglewood

LENOX—The concerts of the final week end of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood will feature the music of Beethoven. Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the concerts Friday evening and Sunday afternoon. The Saturday evening concert will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux.

The season's final program Sunday afternoon will feature Beethoven's Ninth Symphony with soloists Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, Blake Stern and Donald Gramm.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,286

AUG 8 - 1958

Tanglewood On Parade Attracts Nearly 15,000

Once again Tanglewood was on Parade to a record and happy throng of 14,588, with youngsters from many camps and various youth organizations among the well-behaved crowd.

Although the gracious and spacious grounds were dampened at 4:00 when reserved seat and box holders were invited to a garden performance of Menotti's "The Medium" Act III from Puccini's "La Boheme," held indoors, enthusiasm and people ran rampant from 6 on, as simultaneous performances by the students of opera, orchestra, composition departments and Study Group held sway in the various concert-halls.

The professionally adept From Fellowship Players demonstrated works by student composers, among them a harmonically dissonant but engaging study for piano by William Smith from Decatur, Ga., who also performed his composition. An intriguing and ingenious group of three poems with Music were freely sung by the composer's wife, Atifet Usmanbas; she and her husband, Ilhan are from Ankara, Turkey. Mr. Usmanbas has attended the Bennington Composers and Chamber Music Conference, where many of his fine compositions were heard.

A delightful excerpt from Act II of Strauss' opera "Arabella" charmingly staged, was well sung and nicely portrayed by Annabelle Bernard and Ronald Holgate in the theatre-concert hall among other scenes from various operas, including The Marriage of Figaro, The Bartered Bride and Carmen.

In the big shed, this reviewer was greatly impressed by the professional elan and projection of the student orchestra, this year a particularly cohesive organization. The Angelic Concert from "Mathis der Mahler" was smoothly played and conducted by the competent young Gustav Zurich from Switzerland; the "New England Triptych of the contemporary Schuman was delivered with stirring and sympathetic insight by the orchestra and David J. Zinman from New York City.

The Tanglewood Choir, its male section of very fine calibre, entertained on the Main House porch while many gathered on the lawns to enjoy their picnic suppers. Conducted by student leaders, and Hugh Ross and his assistant, Lorna Cooke de Varon, the highly varied program had many commendable moments; it ended with a full-voiced and moving composition by Lukas Foss, "Psalms," the composer assisting Robert Miller as accompanists.

The energetic Eleazar de Carvalho opened the evening's contribution to the gala parade with the Gomes' "Il Guarany" Overture and the stunning "El Amor Brujo," moving the audience to loud cheers. Aaron Copland then performed his Piano Concerto, its "appeal" motive introducing the crescent aspects of the twenties, evoking the charleston, "hot licks" of the jazz trumpeters, and ending with an "appeal" the motive very dominant now, for understanding. Richard Burgin was the noticeably emathic conductor, the audience recalling both Mr. Copland and Mr. Burgin many times.

As usual, Arthur Fiedler and his Boston Pops orchestra were the most enkindling portion of the program. Mr. Fiedler chooses his selections well, with an eye to audience response, and they didn't fail him, especially with The Mexican Hat Dance. The orchestra was definitely in the mood, also one of the fiddlers holding and playing his instrument like a guitar in the Jazz Pizzicato, one of the many expected encores.

Certainly the enormous crowds of music lovers were not in the least disappointed with any section of this year's Tanglewood On Parade, their rioutous enthusiasm almost overpowering the crashing rousing sounds of the gayly spirited orchestra. A wonderfully amusing rendition of "The Typewriter" had everyone laughing as the "sololst" on the pre-war typewriter was given front-stage position. With the foot-tapping medley, of Sousa Marches the audience almost quietly accepted the end of a contagiously communicative program.

This evening's concert of the last weekend of the Berkshire Festival will feature Eugene Istomin, pianist, in Beethoven's "Emperor" concerto.—M.dêB. B.

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 411, 971

AUG 8 - 1958

FINAL TANGLEWOOD CONCERT

The concerts of the final weekend of the Berkshire Festival on August 8-9-10 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, will feature music of Beethoven. Charles Munch, music director, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the concerts of Friday evening and Sunday afternoon. The Saturday evening concert will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux.

American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 176,318

AUG 8 - 1958

Munch, Monteux to Lead Beethoven Program

The concerts of this final Festival in the Music Shed a feature music of Beethoven. rector, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra tonight and Sunday afternoon. The Saturday evening concert will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux.

Dr. Munch's program tonight at 8:30 will include Honegger's Prelude Fugue and Postlude and Beethoven's Seventh Symphony. The young American pianist, Eugene Istomin, will be soloist in Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto.

Pierre Monteaux will open his program tomorrow night at 8:30 with Beethoven's Music from "Prometheus." Berl Senofsky, violinist, will make his first Tanglewood appearance as soloist in Beethoven's Violin Concerto. The second half of the program includes Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" and Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3.

For the final Festival concert on Sunday at 2:30 p. m., Dr. Munch will present a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, with the Festival Chorus and soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johannesburg Festival Overture.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's final rehearsal for the weekend concerts tomorrow at outstanding American pianists who have appeared at Tanglewood during the current season, others being Lukas Foss, Seymour Lipkin, Leon Fleisher, Byron Janis and Leonard Pennario. Mr. Istomin last appeared at Tanglewood in 1955.

The concert on Saturday conducted by Pierre Monteux will open with music from "Prometheus" by Beethoven. Berl Senofsky will be soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto. Mr. Senofsky was the winner of the 1955 Brussels competition and has appeared with many of the outstanding American orchestras since his United States debut in 1956. This will be his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In the second half of the program Mr. Monteux will present Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" and Beethoven's Lenore Overture No. 3.

Dr. Munch will follow his regular custom of closing the Berkshire Festival season with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on Sunday afternoon. Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff contralto; Blake Stern, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass, with the festival chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson. The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johannesburg Festival Overture, which was written for the 70th anniversary of the city of Johannesburg in South Africa and first performed there in 1956. The Boston Symphony Orchestra presented the United States premiere of the overture during the 1956-57 season.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's rehearsal on Saturday morning, August 9, at 10 o'clock will be open to the public for the benefit of the Pension Fund.

Tanglewood-on-Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will be held this evening, beginning at 6:00. Concerts by the various departments of the school, including orchestra, opera, chamber music and choir, will be followed by picnic suppers on the lawn and a gala concert at 8:15 in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Boston Pops Orchestra. Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct works of Gomes and Falla, followed by Aaron Copland performing the piano part of his own Piano Concerto. The orchestra will be under the direction of Richard Burgin. Following the drawing of door prizes, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a program of Pops favorites.

Mr. Copland will also be heard in the final session of the Seminar in Contemporary music on Friday afternoon, final session of the Seminar in Contemporary Music on Friday afternoon, August 8, at 3:15. He will discuss his own music and there will be performaínces of his Four Songs from Twelve Poems of Emily Dickinson and the Piano Fantasy, with guest soloist Noel Lee.

The final concert of the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra will be given on Saturday afternoon, August 9, at 3:00 in the Music Shed. Various prizes will be awarded to the students at this concert. The final student chamber music concert on Sunday morning at 10:00 o'clock will be held in the Theatre-Concert Hall. The last three events are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 26,550

AUG 7 - 1958

Final Tanglewood Week To Feature Beethoven

The final weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, will feature the music of Beethoven. Charles Munch, music director, will conduct the concerts of Friday evening, Aug. 8, at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 10, at 2:30. The concert on Saturday evening, Aug. 9, at 8:30, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux. Soloists will include Eugene Istomin, pianist (Aug. 8), and Berl Senofsky, violinist (Aug. 9).

Dr. Munch will open Friday evening's concert with Honegger's Prelude, Fugue and Postlude, followed by Beethoven's Symphony No. 7. Eugene Istomin will be soloist in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5, "Emperor."

The concert on Saturday conducted by Pierre Monteux will open with music from "Prometheus" by Beethoven. Berl Senofsky will be soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto. Mr. Senofsky was the winner of the 1955 Brussels Competition and has appeared with many of the outstanding American orchestras since his United States debut in 1956. This will be his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In the second half of the program Mr. Monteux will present Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" and Beetroven's Leonore Overture No. 3.

Dr. Munch will follow his regular custom of closing the Berkshire Festival season with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on Sunday afternoon. Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson. The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johannesburg Festival Overture, which was written for the 70th anniversary of the city of Johannesburg in South Africa and first performed there in 1956.

Herald (e)
NEW BRITAIN
Independ
Circ. 29,2

AUG 9 - 195

So

Grace C

THE marriage
but if this yea pattern, there will second half of 19
first half. Years
was the first six pattern seems to
time is especially as in times gone b

Early vacatio
back into the travelers are ma
holiday.

The Berkshire
Symphony Orche
close this weeken
close the festival formance of Beet

The America
College, New Lo
close tomorrow
Limon & Co. w
and many other

For those t
the second phase
"Cracker Barrel
Lake Tarleton C
ing until August

New England Newsclip
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richm

Sunday Republica
WATERBURY, C
Independent
Circ. 46,025

AUG 10 1958

Beethoven Concert At Tanglewoo

The concerts week end of the Berks
tival ending today in
Shed at Tangl
Mass., featuring thoven. Charles M director, will condu
ton Symphony Orch
final festival conce
ernoon at 2:30. Dr.
present a performa
thoven's Ninth Symp
the Festival Chorus
Adele Addison, sop
ence Kopleff, alto;
tenor, and Donal
bass. The program with Sir William hannesburg Festival

[202]

Herald (e)
NEW BRITAIN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 29,250

AUG 9 - 1958

Social News

Grace C. Lee, Social Editor

THE marriage mart is at low ebb this month, but if this year's weddings follow last year's pattern, there will be more marriages during the second half of 1958 than there were during the first half. Years ago the preference for marriages was the first six months of the year but now the pattern seems to be the opposite and Christmas-time is especially popular in place of the New Year as in times gone by.

Early vacationers are now trying hard to get back into the work groove, while the August travelers are making the most of their summer holiday.

The Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Mass., will close this weekend. Charles Munch, director, will close the festival season on Sunday with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

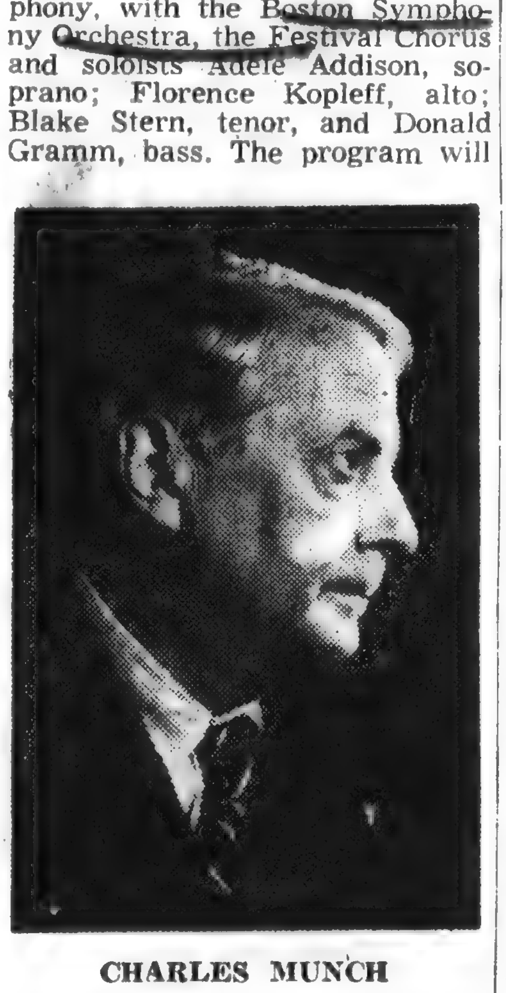
The American Dance Festival at Connecticut College, New London, opened Thursday and will close tomorrow at 3 p.m. Featured will be Jose Limon & Co. with Pauline Koner & Lucas Hoving and many other well-known modern dance artists.

For those traveling to the White Mountains, the second phase of the Festival of the Seven Arts "Cracker Barrel Americana" will be held at the Lake Tarleton Club starting Wednesday and lasting until August 27.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 113,886
AUG 10 1958

Beethoven Ninth To End Festival At Tanglewood

As the climax of the annual Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, this afternoon at 2.30. Dr. Charles Munch will present a performance of Beethoven's ninth symphony, with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Festival Chorus and soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. The program will open with Sir William Walton's "Johannesburg Festival" Overture.



CHARLES MUNCH

The Sunday morning chamber music concert at 10 in the Theater-Concert Hall will be an all-Stravinsky program. It will include the Octet, conducted by Louis Speyer, English horn of the Boston Symphony and member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty; the "Duo Concertante" performed by Ronald Knudsen and Jo Evelyn Boatright; "Three Shakespeare Songs" performed by Shirley Sudock, mezzo-soprano, Dent Williamson, flute, Homer Lee, clarinet, and Arthur Lewis, viola.

The final work on the program will be "Dumbarton Oaks," for 15 instruments, conducted by Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony and cohead of the department of orchestral playing and chamber music.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Republican
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 46,025

1958

Beethoven Concert At Tanglewood

The concerts of the final week end of the Berkshire Festival ending today in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., featuring music of Beethoven. Charles Munch, music director, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the final festival concert this afternoon at 2:30. Dr. Munch will present a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, with the Festival Chorus and soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johannesburg Festival Overture.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159

AUG 8 1958

Final Weekend Opens Friday In Tanglewood

Beethoven Will Be Featured In Festival Concerts

The concerts of the final week end of the Berkshire Festival on August 8-9-10 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will feature music of Beethoven. Charles Munch, music director, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the concerts of Friday evening and Sunday afternoon, and the Saturday evening concert will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux.

Dr Munch's program on Friday evening, August 8 at 6:30, will include Honegger's Prelude Fugue and Postlude and Beethoven's Seventh Symphony. The young American pianist, Eugene Istomin, will be soloist in Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto.

Pierre Monteux will open his program on Saturday evening, August 9 at 8:30 with Beethoven's Music from "Prometheus". Berl Senofsky, violinist, will make his first Tanglewood appearance as soloist in Beethoven's Violin Concerto. The second half of the program includes Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" and Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3

For the final Festival concert on Sunday afternoon at 2:30, Dr Munch will present a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, with the Festival Chorus and soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johannesburg Festival Overture.

Final Rehearsal

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's final rehearsal for the week end concerts on Saturday morning, August 9, at 10 a.m. will be open to the public for the benefit of the Pension Fund. Admission is $1. Unreserved general admission tickets for all three week end concerts are available two hours before each performance.

Other events of the final week end, which are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, include opera scenes in the Theatre at 1:15 p.m. on Friday, August 8, and the final seminar in contemporary music on Friday at 3:15 in the Chamber Music Hall. Aaron Copland will speak on his own music and Fromm Fellowship players will perform the Four Songs from Twelve Poems of Emily Dickinson, written in 1950. Guest soloist Noel Lee will be heard in Mr Copland's Piano Fantasy.

At 3 o'clock on Saturday afternoon in the Shed, the Berkshire Music Center student orchestra will present its final concert of the season. The program will include Strauss' Overture to "Fledermaus" (conducted by Seymour Lipkin); the first movement of Brahms Violin Concerto (soloist: Beverly Somach, violin; conducted by Joseph Kreiner); Dances from "The Three Cornered Hat" by Manuel de Falla (conducted by Zubin Mehta): Tschaikovsky's Overture-Fantasia "Romeo and Juliet" (Conductor Gustave Meier) and Eleazar de Carvalho's "Cancao Nupcial" conducted by the composer, who is head of the Departmeit of Orchestral Conducting at the Berkshire Music Center. Prizes will be awarded at the intermission of the concert.

The Sunday morning Chamber at Music Concert at 10 o'clock in the Theatre Concert Hall will be an all Stravinsky program. It will include the Octet, conducted by Louis Speyer, English horn, of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty; the Duo Concertante performed by Ronald Knudsen and Jo Evelyn Boatright; Three Shakespeare Songs performed by Shirley Sudock, mezzo-soprano, Dent Williamson, flute, Homer Lee, clarinet, and Arthur Lewis, viola. The final work on the program will be Dumbarton Oaks, for 15 instruments, conducted by Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and co-head of the department of Orchestral Playing and Chamber Music.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

AUG 8 - 1958

BERL SENOFSKY, who will appear as violin soloist tomorrow night in the Music Shed with the BSO, Pierre Monteux conducting, talks things over with his son, Greg, who is the godson of the Dowager Queen Elisabeth of Belgium. Mr. Senofsky is a former winner of the Queen Elisabeth of Belgium international music competition, considered the greatest music prize in the world. The concert starts at 8:30.

Festival Closes This Weekend With All-Beethoven Concerts

TANGLEWOOD—The closing concerts of the 1958 Berkshire Festival season will be held this weekend featuring the works of Beethoven.

Tonight's concert at 8:30 in the Music Shed will be conducted by Dr. Charles Munch, musical director of the BSO, with the young American pianist, Eugene Istomin, as soloist in Beethoven's "Emperor" concerto. The first half of the program will include Honegger's prelude fugue and postlude and Beethoven's Seventh Symphony.

First Appearance Here

Pierre Monteux will open tomorrow night's program with Beethoven's music from "Prometheus." Berl Senofsky, violinist, will make his first Tanglewood appearance as soloist in Beethoven's violin concerto. The second half of the program includes Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione," and Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3.

For the final Festival concert on Sunday afternoon at 2:30, Dr. Munch will present a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, with the Festival Chorus and soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johannesburg Festival Overture.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's final rehearsal for the weekend concerts tomorrow morning at 10 will be open to the public for the benefit of the pension fund. Admission is $1. Unreserved general admission tickets for all three weekend concerts are available two hours before each performance.

Other events of the final weekend open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center included opera scenes in the theater this afternoon, and the final seminar in contemporary music in the Chamber Music Hall. Aaron Copland spoke on his own music and Fromm Fellowship players performed the Four Songs from Twelve Poems of Emily Dickinson, written in 1950. Guest soloist Noel Lee was heard in Mr. Copland's Piano Fantasy.

At 3 tomorrow afternoon in the Shed, the Berkshire Music Center student orchestra will present its final concert of the season. The program will include Strauss' Overture to "Fledermaus" (conducted by Seymour Lipkin); the first movement of Brahms Violin Concerto (soloist: Beverly Somach, violin; conducted by Joseph Kreiner); Dances from "The Three Cornered Hat" by Manuel de Falla (conducted by Zubin Mehta); Tchaikovsky's Overture-Fantasia "Romeo and Juliet" (conducted by Gustav Meier) and Eleazer de Carvalho's "Cancao Nupcial" conducted by the composer, who is the head of the department of orchestral conducting at the Berkshire Music Center. Prizes will be awarded at the intermission of the concert.

The Sunday morning chamber music concert at 10 in the theater-concert hall will be an all-Stravinsky program. It will include the octet, conducted by Louis Speyer, English horn, of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty; the Duo Concertante performed by Ronald Knudsen and Jo Evelyn Boatright; Three Shakespeare Songs performed by Shirley Sudock, mezzo-soprano, Dent Williamson, flute, Homer Lee, clarinet, and Arthur Lewis, viola. The final work on the program will be Dumbarton Oaks, for 15 instruments, conducted by Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and co-head of the department of orchestral playing and chamber music.

[203]

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 53,178

AUG 9 1958

On the Cover

Not Only Modern Dance at Pillow

Ted Shawn, who himself is the old man of modern dance, nevertheless admits freely that there are other schools of thought. His Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, near Lee, Mass., is about equally divided among classic ballet, modern dance and ethnic dance.

The program next week is typical. Two classic stars, Irina Bowrowska of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo and Kenneth Johnson of Ruth Page's Chicago Opera Ballet, will dance pas de deux (although their repertory is taken from dances based on modern compositions, by Debussy, Lehar and Grieg).

Daniel Nagrin, who has done most of his dancing in the movies and on Broadway, will perform four of his best-known modern solos.

And Carola Goya and Matteo, Spaniards who are resident teachers at the festival's dance school, will dance ethnic cameos (one Scottish and the rest Spanish, with lots of castanets).

As is traditional at the festival, the week begins to shorten in mid-August. Instead of the usual seven performances a week, there'll be five—one on Thursday, two on Friday and Saturday.

tended. The last of the five concerts is tonight, and it will inculde works by composers at the meeting.

Elsewhere, though, the season still waxes. The Berkshire Music Barn, the tent of which encloses jazz, folk and other unclassifiable music, still goes strong, with the sounds mainly modern. The George Shearing Quintet (Shearing plays piano) gives its first concert at the Barn tomorrow night. On Tuesday it's the Four Freshmen, who not only accompany themselves but try to sing as if they were five voices.

The New Art Wind Quintet, one of the country's leading chamber - music ensembles, gives the weekly concert at the Maverick Hall in Woodstock tomorrow afternoon. It's an unusual group; the instruments are flute, clarinet, oboe, bassoon and French horn.

Tonight at the Southern

TANGLEWOOD TRIO—Charles Munch, who will conduct Beethoven's Ninth Symphony tomorrow, poses with contralto Florence Kopleff and soprano Adele Addison, who will sing in it.

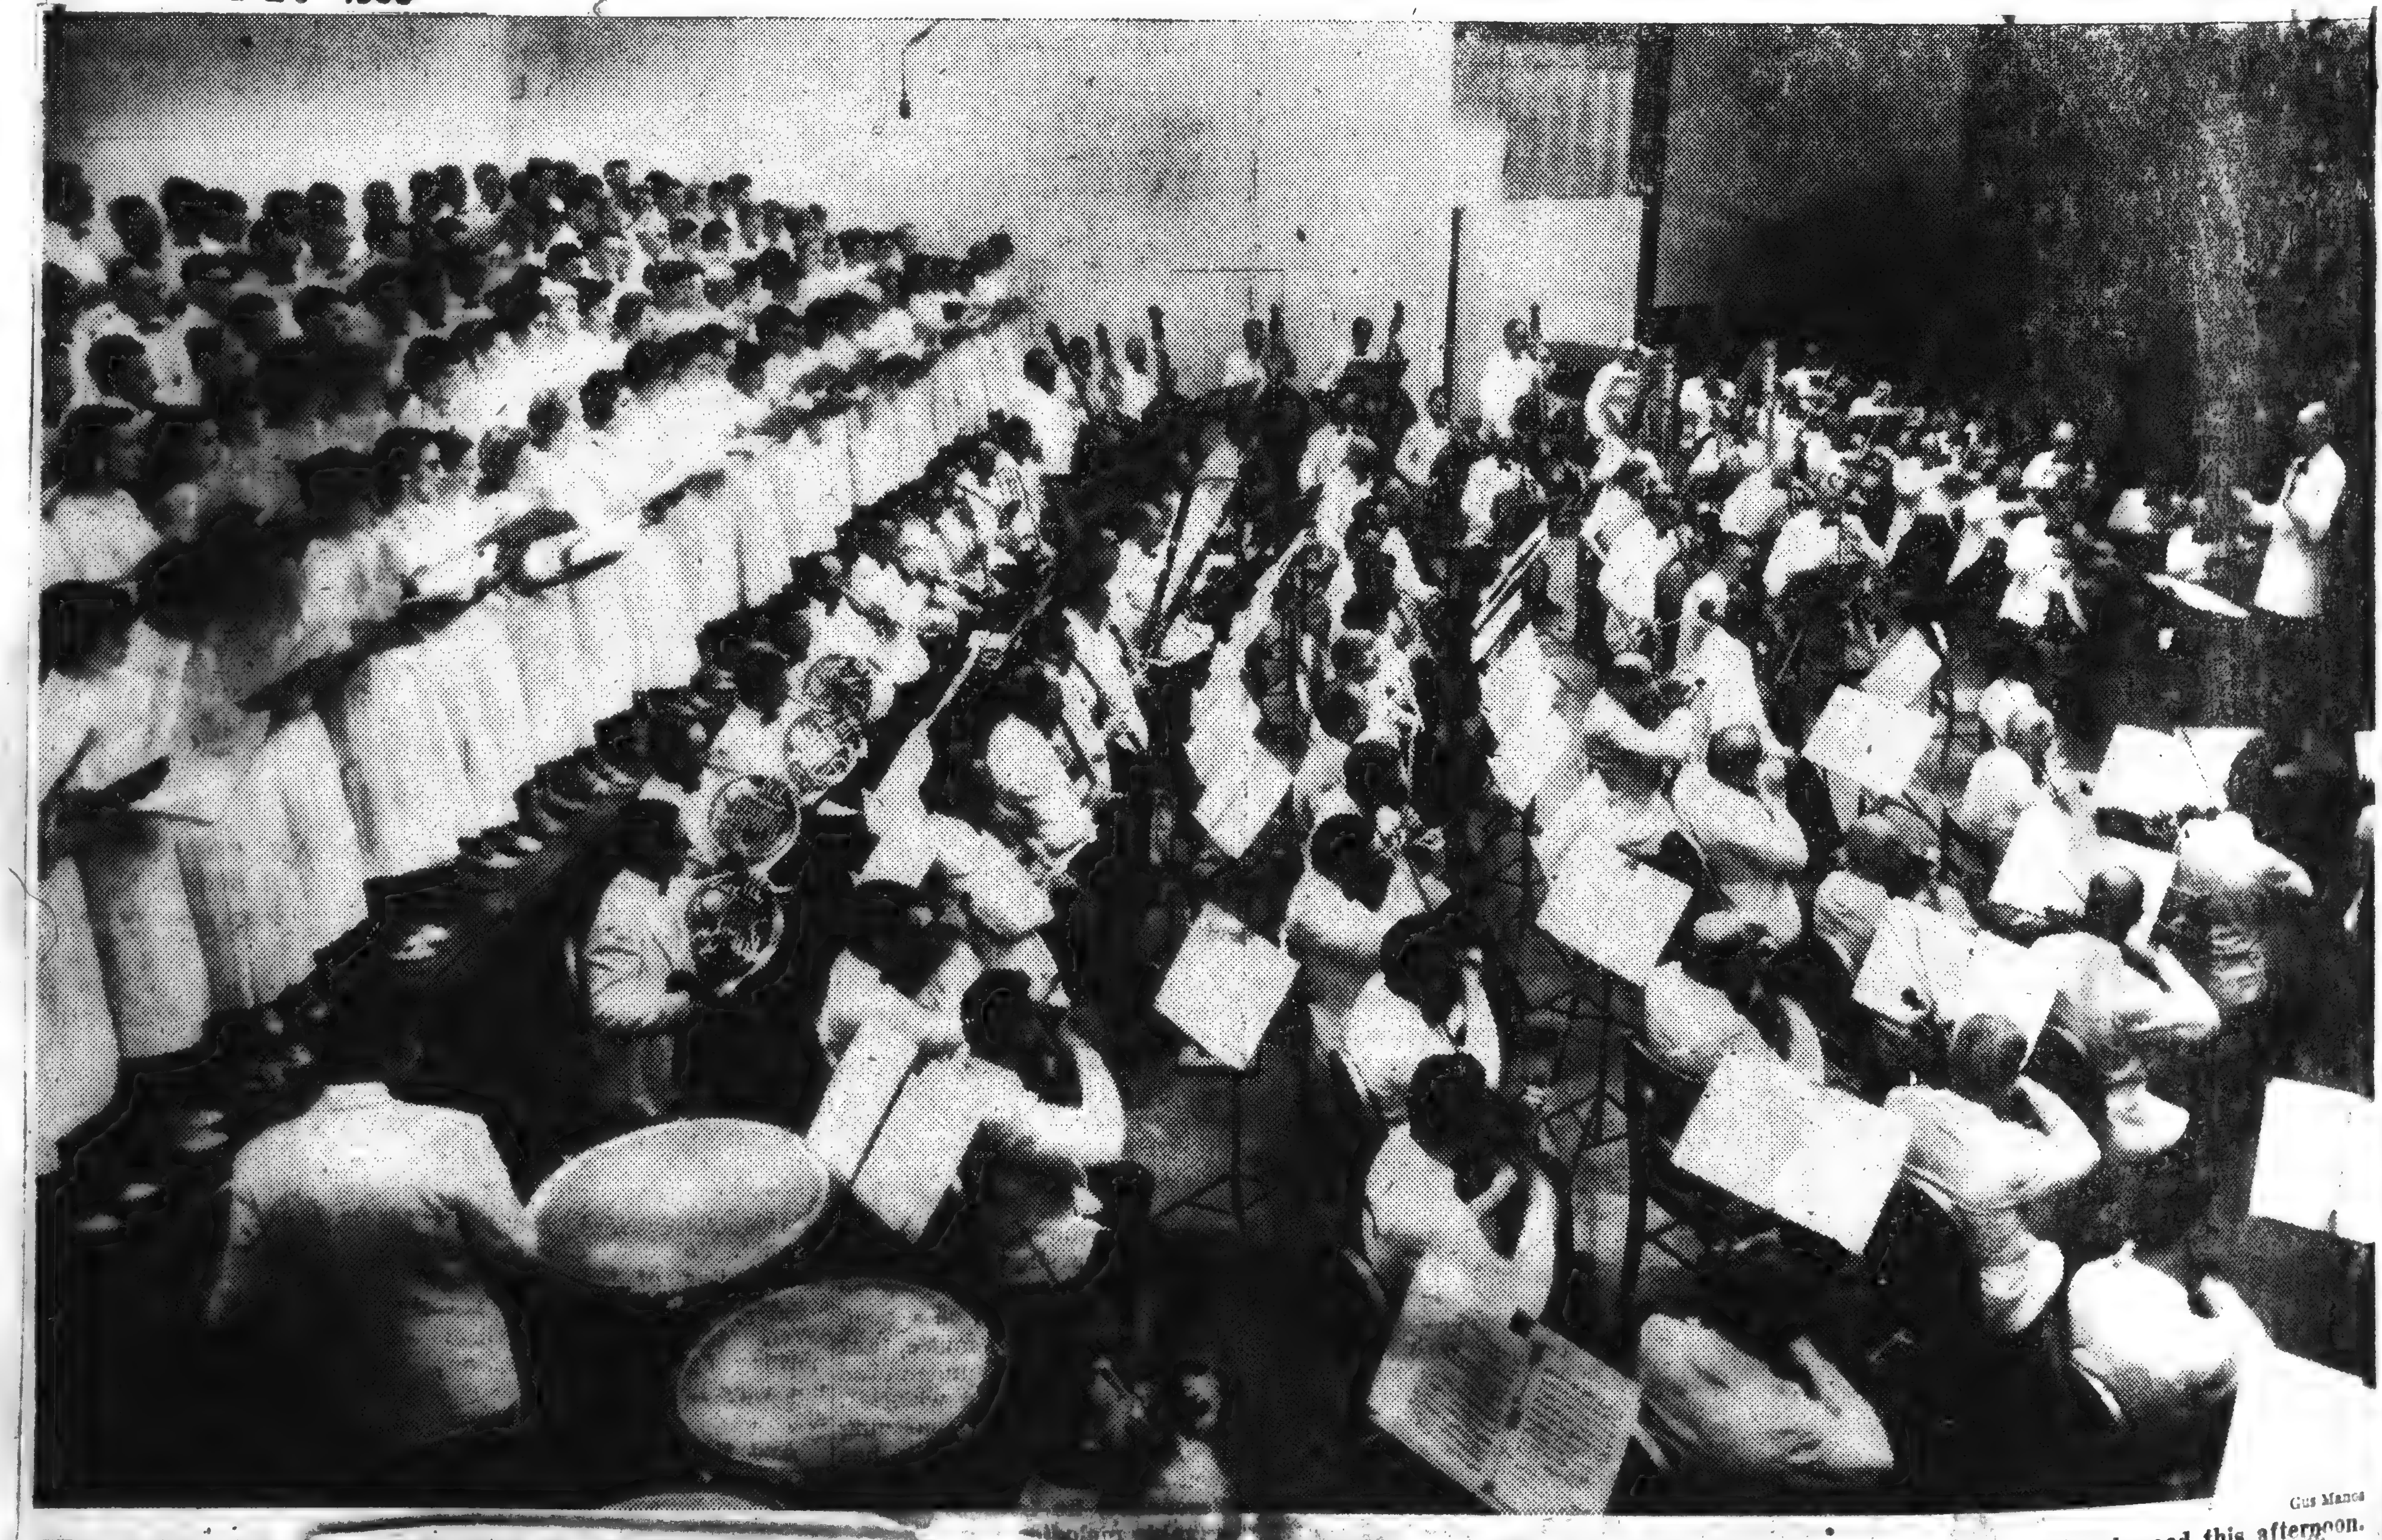
Blaeserquintet (Op. 88, No. 2) .. Anton Reicha

TUESDAY

BERKSHIRE MUSIC BARN, 8:30. The Four Freshmen: Bob Flanigan, trombone and bass; Don Barbour, guitar; Ross Barbour, drums and trumpet; Ken Albers, trumpet and mellophone.
TURNAU OPERA PLAYERS, 8:30.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 - S. 1,189,293

AUG 10 1958



Gus Manos

GRAND FINALE—Charles Munch leads the Boston Symphony and the Festival Chorus in the Beethoven Ninth as the Berkshire season closes at Tanglewood this afternoon.

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 53,178

AUG 9 1958

THIS IS the last weekend of the 1958 Berkshire Festival. Beethoven is the composer of the week. Tonight Pierre Bonteux conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in three of his works, and Berl Senofsky solos in the Violin Concerto.

Tomorrow afternoon the festival closes in the big Music Shed at Tanglewood, with Charles Munch conducting the annual closing number, Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. For added spice there'll be the Johannesburg Festival Overture by William Walton.

★ ★ ★

OTHER MUSIC EVENTS:

Another series ending this weekend is the 13th annual Chamber Music Center and Composers' Conference at Bennington College, which more than 100 musicians at- Vermont Art Center a barbershop quartet called the Home Town Quartet (could be anybody's hometown) sings.

The Turnau Opera Players in Woodstock will perform a double bill (Massenet's "Portrait of Manon" and Ravel's "L'Heure Espagnole") Tuesday and Wednesday, Rossini's "Cinderella" Friday and Mozart's "Abduction From the Seraglio" next Saturday. Tonight the opera is Mozart's "Cosi fan tutte."

The South Mountain Temple, Pittsfield, Mass., will get off to a late start a week from tomorrow with the first of five chamber-music concerts.

Also due later this month is the abbreviated (four days) Empire State Music Festival. More about that later.

CAROLA GOYA AND MATTEO—They'll perform dances of other lands at the Jacob's Pillow Festival next week.

Week Ahead in Music and Dance

TONIGHT

BENNINGTON CHAMBER MUSIC CENTER AND COMPOSERS' CONFERENCE, Bennington College, Bennington, Vt., 8:15. Chamber and classical music and original compositions of attending composers; directed by Alan Carter. (Final concert of the season.)

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., 8:30, Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Pierre Monteux.
Music from "Prometheus"; Violin Concerto (Berl Senofsky, soloists); Leonore Overture No. 3......Beethoven
"Noblissima Visione"........Hindemith

JACOB'S PILLOW DANCE FESTIVAL, Lee, Mass., 4, 9. Nina Novak, prima ballerina, and George Zoritch, both of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, in classic pas de deux.
"Afternoon of a Fawn"......Nijinsky-Debussy
"Girl and the Birds"......E. Novak-Wieniawski
"Don Quixote"............Petipa-Minkus

Irina Kovalska and Edmund Novak, of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, in character dances.
"Dawn"..............E. Novak-Delibes
"Paganini"........S. Miszczyk-Paganini
"Polish Lowicki Dance"...M. Korinski-E. Novak

Myra Kinch and company, with Jean Cebron, guest dancer: Jeanne Parsons, Gunnar Spencer, Maggie Newman, Shirley Jensen, Herbert Kummel, Ruth Alexander; Manuel Galea, musical director.
"The Angels of Punc".....Kinch-Galea
"Giselle's Revenge".......Kinch-Adam
"Beautiful Dreamer".......Kinch-Foster
"The Flowring Branch"... Kinch-Galea

SOUTHERN VERMONT ART CENTER, Manchester, Vt., 8:30. Program by the Home Town Quartet, a champion barbershop quartet group.

TURNAU OPEHRA PLAYERS, Byrdcliffe Theater, Woodstock, 8:30. Mozart's "Cosi fan tutte."

TOMORROW

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL, 10, Theater-Concert Hall. Chamber music played by students of the Berkshire Music Center.
2:30, Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch; Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass; Festival Chorus. (Final concert of the season.)
Johannesburg Festival Overture Walton
Symphony No. 9 ....Beethoven

BERKSHIRE MUSIC BARN, Lenox, Mass., 8:30. George Shearing Quintet, in a jazz program.

JACOB'S PILLOW, 8:30. Special Events Series, with Ted Shawn speaking on "Pan tomime and Dramatic Dance."

MAVERICK CONCERTS, Maverick Hall, Woodstock, 4. Chamber-music program by the New Art Wind Quintet: Martin Orenstein, flute; Charles Russo, clarinet; Melvin Kaplan, oboe; Morris Newman, bassoon; Robert Cecil, French horn.
Divertimento in B-Flat Major...Mozart
"Kleine Kammermusik" (Op. 24, No. 2) ....Hindemith
Qintette a Vent ....Jean Francais
Pastorale for Quintet of Winds ....Vincent Persichetti
Blaeserquintet (Op. 88, No. 2)..Anton Reicha

TUESDAY

BERKSHIRE MUSIC BARN, 8:30. The Four Freshmen: Bob Flanigan, trombone and bass; Don Barbour, guitar; Ross Barbour, drums and trumpet; Ken Albers, trumpet and mellophone.

TURNAU OPERA PLAYERS, 8:30. Massenet's "Portrait of Manon" and Ravel's "L'Heure Espagnole."

WEDNESDAY

TURNEU OPERA PLAYERS, 8:30. Massenet's "Portrait of Manon" and Ravel's "L'Heure Espagnole."

THURSDAY

JACOB'S PILLOW, 4. Irina Borowska, prima ballerina of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, and Kenneth Johnson, premier danseur of the Chicago Opera Ballet ,in classic pas de deux.
"La Plus Que Lente," pas de deux from "Nocturne".. Bockman-Debussy
"Vilia," pas de deux from 'The Merry Widow" ....Ruth Page-Lehar
"Concerto"..............M. Maule-Grieg

Daniel Nagrin, in modern dances choreographed by himself.
"With My Eye and With My Hand" Herbert Harris-Michael Colgrass
"Indeterminate Figure". Robert Starer
"Strange Herö".........Kenton-Rugulo
"Man of Action".......... John McCoy

Carola Goya and Matteo, Spanish dancers, in ethnic cameos.
"En la Pista" (On the Bridal Path) Larregla
"Perfidia" (Treachery) Flamenco dance
"La Malaguenay ele Torero" Spanish traditional "Land of the Thistle" Scottish medley
"Castanuelas" .... de Falla
"Mateixa .... Mallorca traditional
"Escena Gitanesca" .... Nin and traditional

SARATOGA ART FAIR, Canfield Casino, Saratoga Springs, 8. All-Chopin piano recital by Edward Hausman.

FRIDAY

JACOB'S PILLOW, 4, 9. Same as Thursday's program.

TURNAU OPERA PLAYERS, 8:30. Rossini's "Cinderella."

SATURDAY, AUG. 16

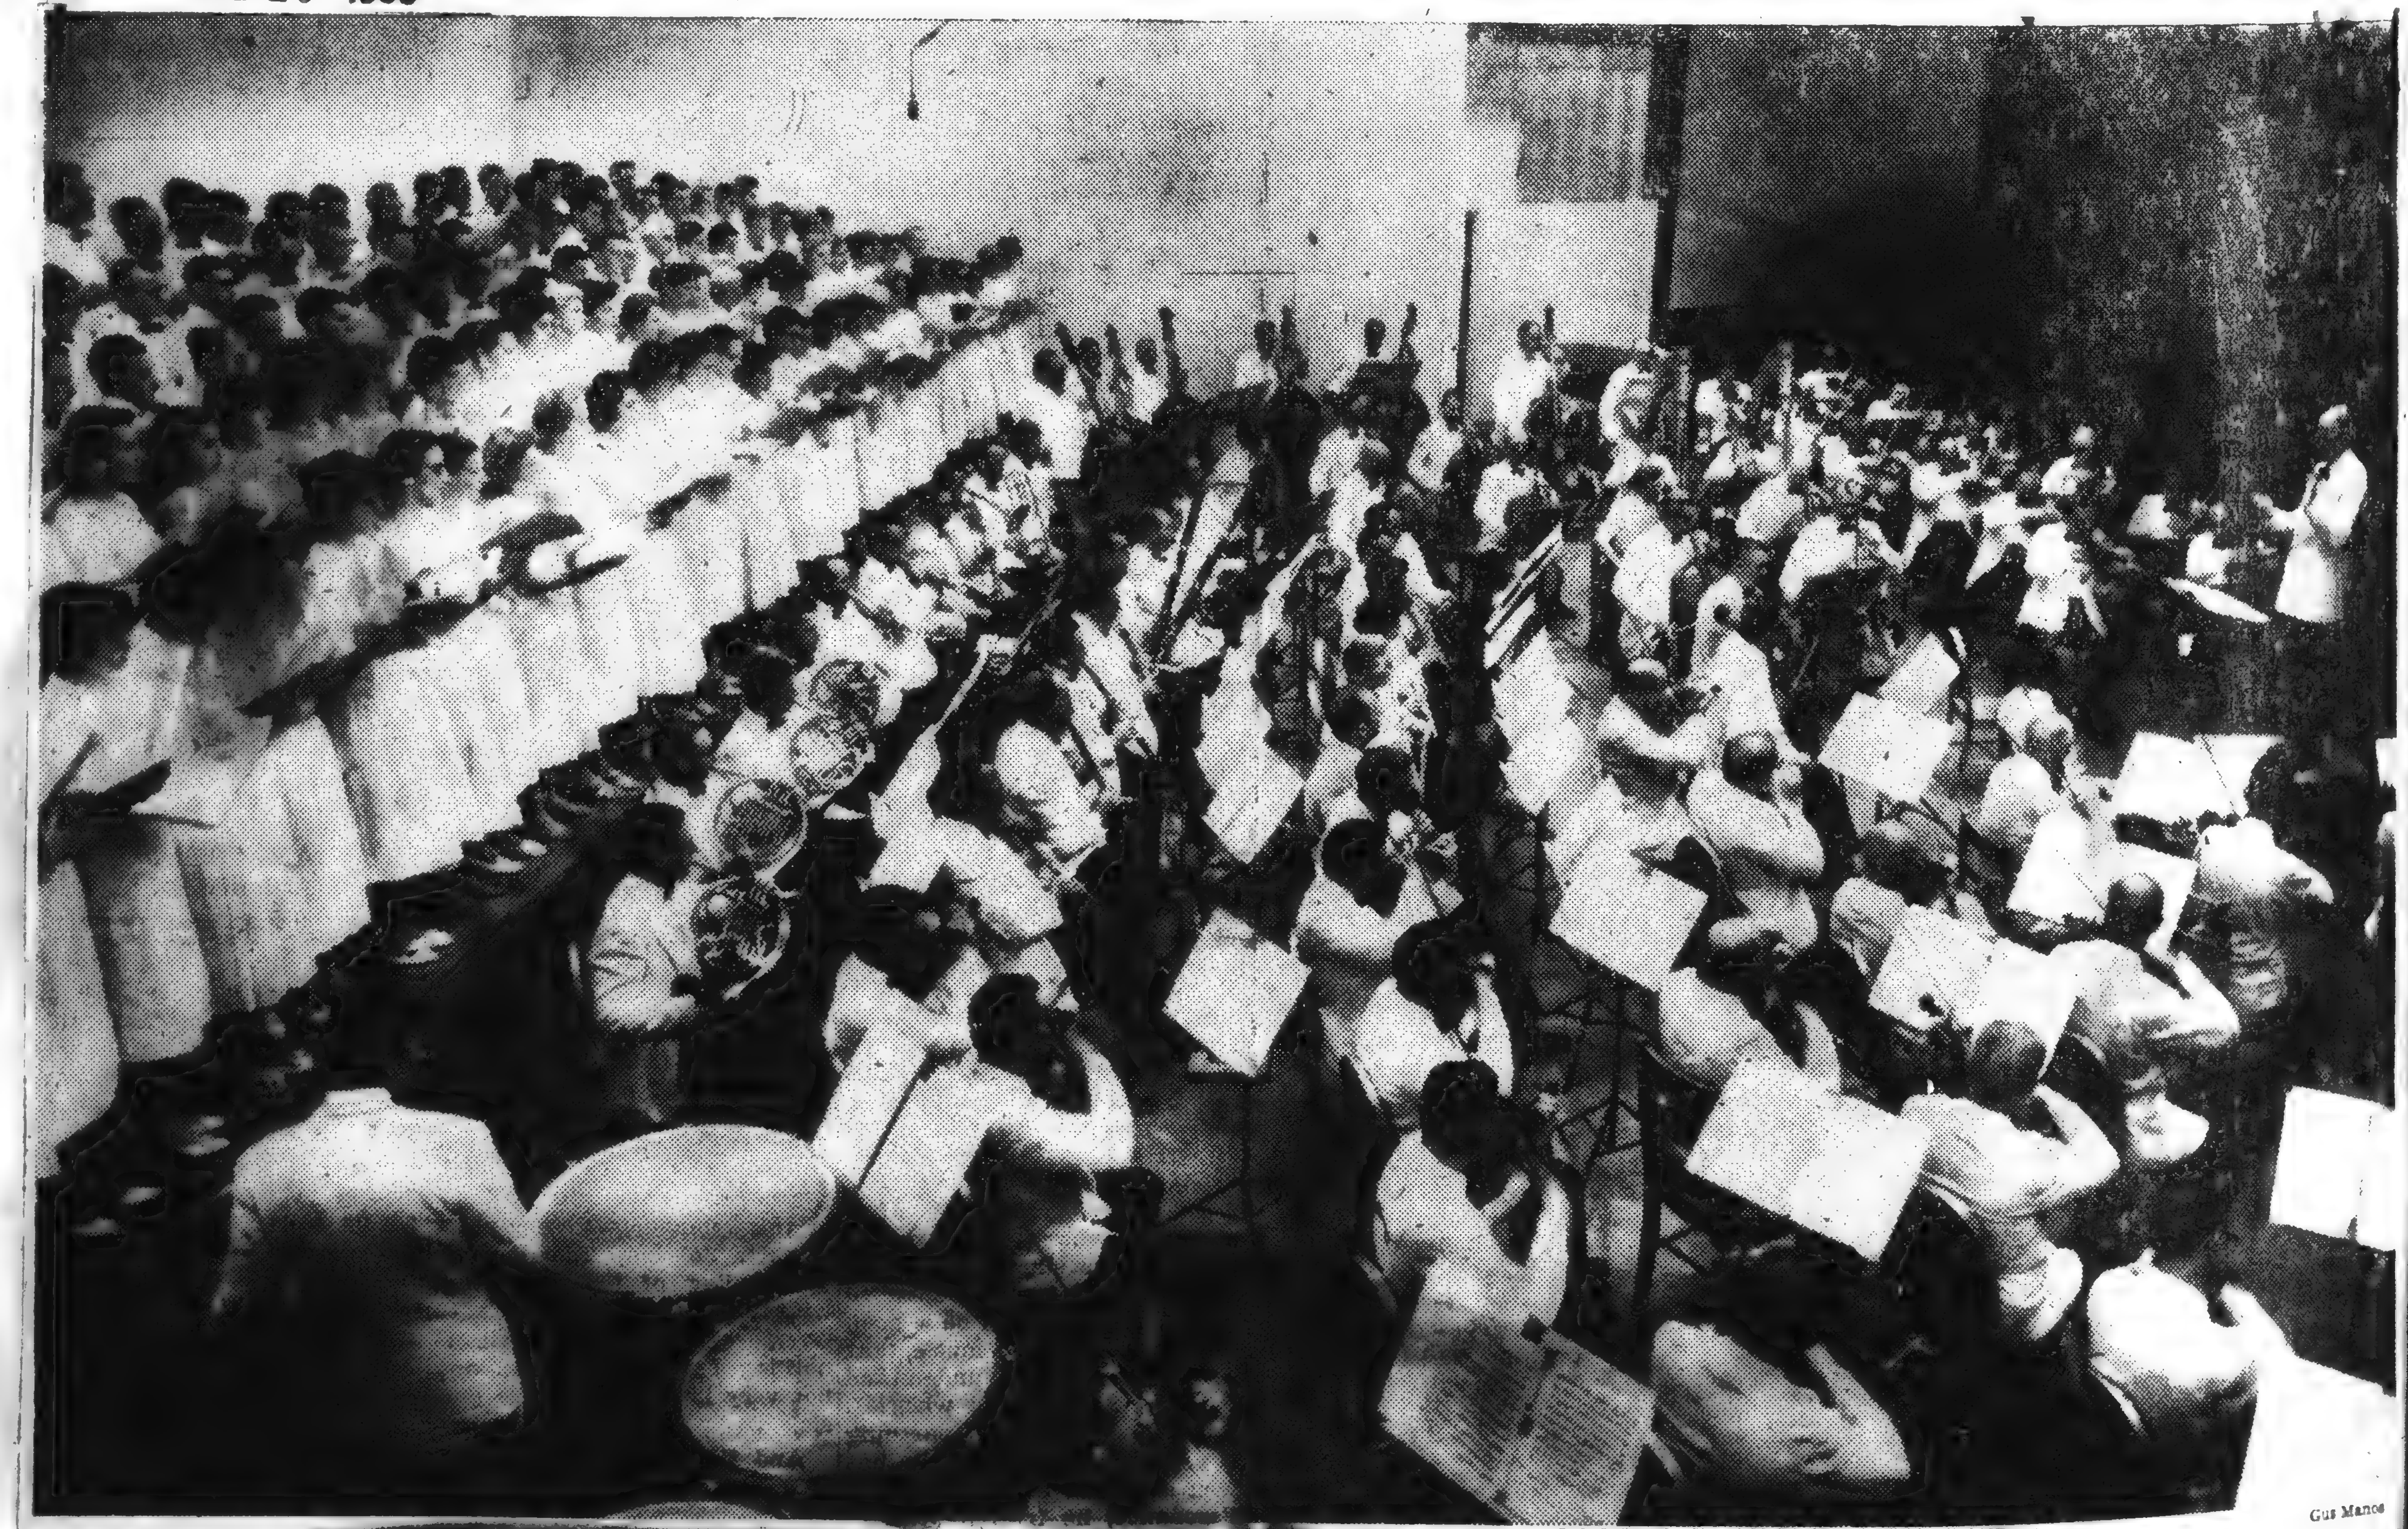
JACOB'S PILLOW, 4, 9. Same as Thursday's program.

TURNAU OPERA PLAYERS, 8:30. Mozart'5s "Abduction From the Seraglio."

TANGLEWOOD TRIO—Charles Munch, who will conduct Beethoven's Ninth Symphony tomorrow, poses with contralto Florence Kopleff and soprane Adele Addison, who will sing in it.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 - S. 1,189,293

AUG 10 1958



Gus Manos

GRAND FINALE—Charles Munch leads the Boston Symphony and the Festival Chorus in the Beethoven Ninth as the Berkshire season closes at Tanglewood this afternoon.

Sun (e)
LOWELL, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 41,960

AU [illegible] 958

Music

Berkshire Festival in Season Finale Tomorrow

By ALFRED W. BURKE

LOWELL—This year's session of the Berkshire Festival will close on a brilliant note when the final program will be presented tomorrow. At 2.30 p. m., Dr. Charles Munch will direct the Beethoven "Ninth Symphony." The guest soloists who will join the orchestra and Festival chorus include Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass.

There were many highlights during the season. Most of these, however, were limited to the outstanding instrumentalists that appeared from time to time.

The most outstanding of the entire list was the eminent violinist, Zino Francescatti. His performance ranked with the finest ever recorded at this world famous musical center.

There was one note of lesser standard. This was recorded in the opera workshop series, a program list that does not too completely influence the overall picture of the Festival.

Though the basic idea of such a venture has tremendous value, there are certain demands, both artistic and physical, that must be met. Included are those elements that provide not only young singers who are naturally gifted, but qualified to meet the requirements of whatever type of music they essay.

MUCH OF this responsibility rests within the judgment of the director. No concert goers will ever challenge the formal musical education or abilities of Boris Goldovsky, but it definitely seems that he overlooks the physical qualification of many of his singers.

When eminent minds and voices of the first decree that years of training and experience should pass before singers are introduced to the rigors of dramatic singing, a director shoud take heed.

For some strange reason the greatest musical minds seem to concern themelves with music, either as theory or in regards to a man made instrument. One thing that they should concern themselves with is that the human voice is nature's own gift and not just another piano or brass instrument.

Let us hope that the day will come when the world centers of music will be a point of inspiration for talented young voices. Each individual who has a voice in the conducting of a music festival should make sure that the student voices as well as the concert going public are protected in every way possible.

It's another banner week at Kennebunkport, Maine, where the Arundel Theatre is holding court. Menotti's "The Medium" and Moore's "Gallantry" is brightening the boards. Morse and Haithwaite have done it again. A fine and enthusiastic cast is responsible. Next week Cole Porter's "Kiss Me Kate" will be in session.

There will be concerts at the Andover Organ Institute all next week. Monday through Saturday will find an imposing list of young and talented organists appearing. This series, conducted in the Memorial Music hall in Methuen, is experiencing one of it's most successful season.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,286

AUG 9 - 1958

Munch, Orchestra Honor Beethoven

For the final weekend of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewod Dr. Munch chose to honor the incomparable Beethoven, including one contemporary composer, according to the pattern followed with little exception through the current series.

Friday evening's program opened with Honegger's "Prelude Fugue, and Postlude." An interesting mixture of modern and classic, simple in construction and exposition, its interest lies not in rhythmic diversity, but in its linear structure, and colorful instrumentation. Dr. Munch and the orchestra gave it a wonderfully austere and dynamic reading.

Beethoven's Seventh Symphony, controversial when first performed as to programmatic intent, Wagner referring to it as "the apotheosis of the dance," and D'Ibdy saying it was "purely pastoral," the rhythm suggesting nothing but "the song of a bird," became as lucid in its projection by the orchestra and Dr. Munch as the rain-washed atmosphere. No score to divert his attention, Dr. Munch, in his usual vibrant and intent manner, drew every variation of tonal color, rhymatic ideas and developmental structure with a firmly sensitive estures, to which this incomparable orchestra responded with practised, yet emphatic virtuosity.

For the completion of the evening's program, Eugene Istomin, concert pianist, performed with delicacy and sensitivity Beethoven's "Emporor" conerto. His particular aptitude for chamber music playing, showed in the lack of power and brilliance one expects with this majestic concerto; his musicianship was evident but restrained; the orchestra naturally over-balanced Mr. Istomin's refined interpretation, but the beauty of the music was not dulled. The audience of 8,353 were most appreciative of the whole evening's performance.

Tonight's program will include Beethoven's Suite from "Die Geschop des Prometheus" Ballet, Op. 43 his violin concerto in D major, played by Berl Senofsky, the Leonore Overture, No. 3. and Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione," directed by Pierre Monteux. — Mde.B. B.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 103,521

AUG 9 - 1958

Beethoven Featured At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. (Special) — The twenty first Berkshire Music Festival came into the stretch here Friday night. From this point on, through Sunday's Ninth Symphony, it will be pretty much Beethoven all the way.

Had one been called upon to make book at the outset of the festival four weeks ago on which of the composers, Brahms, Tschaikowsky, Wagner or Beethoven, would prove the popular favorite, not many would probably have put their money on Beethoven. Wagner was new on the list here this festival, and he looked like the odds-on winner. But from the looks of things Friday night, Beethoven will finish ahead. On Fridays to date, the average attendance has been about 6,000. This evening, the gate was 8,353, or a Music Shedful plus 2,000 lawn sitters.

Popular Works

Two of the master's greatest and most popular works were offered by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony on this occasion. They were the Seventh Symphony and the "Emperor" Concerto, with Eugene Istomin as pianist.

The performance of the Seventh Symphony drew some of the loudest cheers of the season. It certainly was done the way the people liked it, full of drive, frenetic climaxes and a last movement taken at a speed that must have set a record for the track. As always, Mr. Munch exhibited the highly contrasted tempi and dynamics so characteristic of his approach to most music. As a result, there was an amount of blurred or buried detail throughout the playing. But what was new in the reading was a romantic spirit with which Mr. Munch pervaded the score. If it was not so lucid as one might wish, this interpretation was more Viennese at heart. It was not so lofty and arching as it was in time. The last movement had a scarcely concealed gaiety about it. In any event it took the audience by storm, and after all, who pays the salaries of Mr. Munch and the boys and gals from Boston?

The performance of the "Emperor" concerto was splendid. Mr. Munch set it out with joyous elan. The orchestra played it with particular brightness and eloquence. And Mr. Istomin offered the piano part with the clarity, coolness and vigor of a Berkshire mountain stream. His playing was particularly clean and beautifully articulated. He invested the music with a fine poetry without at any time overcoloring either the ianism or the sentiment. And the contributions of both pianist and orchestra were completely integrated in performance and temper.

The evenings program had opened with a suite which Arthur Honegger rest from his original stage piece on the legend of amphion. Unfortunately, despite all the sound it used, it had little to say that was engaging dramatically or musically. Mr. Munch had it on his list but it wouldn't have been missed, it surely wouldn't have been missed.

T.H.P.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292

[illegible] 14 1958

TANGLEWOOD
Friday, August 8
By C. D.

The Friday night program at Tanglewood conducted by Charles Munch opened with a Prelude, Fugue, and Postlude by Honegger. This was a concert version of certain sections of a stage piece written in the twenties and revised in 1948. While not an epoch making work it proved one of the best of the modern works Dr. Munch has introduced to Tanglewood audiences this summer with an exciting fugue and a broad flowing postlude.

Then followed the Beethoven Seventh Symphony. This was played with an unyielding pounding rhythm that was dynamically powerful if not beautiful and seemed to elate the audience.

(Continued on Page 18)

, 1958

Bleu, served in snifters, was the perfect finishing touch for a memorable meal.

After the brandy, the ebullient Mr. Hack took us for a tour through the two shining spotless kitchens and introduced us to Mrs. Eraclito, Joe's mother, who is in charge of the "cold" kitchen and responsible for the appetizers, saalds and deserts. Then through the great walk-in refrigerators, the store-room, with shelves lined with quality foods, and the wine cellar, its cob-web free bins stacked with fine wines.

Although records have been lost, the inn, built as a private home, is known to have been completed in 1760. Remodeled into hideous Victorian style in 1848, it was again remodeled in the Georgian manner in 1909, and in 1915 assumed its present appearance. It has dignity and friendliness, and the interior is gracious and welcoming. The service is quietly deft, and prices are moderate, from $2.90 to $5.75 for a complete dinner. Luncheons are also served, from $2.10 to $3.50, and either dinner or luncheon can be ordered a la carte if preferred.

Printed at the bottom of the Westleigh menu is a quotation from Goldoni that seems to touch the right note, "The world is a book and he who stays at home reads only one page."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,541

AUG 9 - 1958

BEETHOVEN'S MUSIC HEARD AT FESTIVAL

Eugene Istomin Appears As Piano Soloist at Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX—The music of Beethoven predominates on these final three concerts in the Tanglewood Shed. Friday night Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony Orchestra through Honegger's "Prelude, Fugue and Postlude;" Beethoven's Symphony No. 7 in A Major; and, with Eugene Istomin at the piano, in Beethoven's Concerto for Pianoforte, No. 5 the "Emperor." An audience of 8353 was on hand and in a highly appreciative mood.

Breadth and Depth

The Honegger work is one of his finest. It has breadth, depth and surface brilliance. Mr. Munch has a feeling for this music and he read it with splendid attention to detail and spaciousness.

Beethoven's seventh symphony never looks backward. It is always forward looking. The exorable mood of the allegretto was finely achieved and the pace was just. The presto achieved real excitement and the finale, taken at a breathless pace, worked up to a storm. The impact on the audience was great. It was a splendid performance of great music.

Eugene Istomin is a pianist of discernment and sensitivity. I have never heard him digress from the artistic. He lacks some of the brilliance and flair of some of his colleagues, but listening to him, one feels that with him, the music is paramount.

Sweep and Brilliance

Friday night he played the "Emperor" concerto with rare insight. His collaboration with Mr. Munch and the orchestra was happy. The numerous embellishments and trills were handled expertly and in cantabile passages his tone was beautifully matched with the orchestra. The performance was large-scaled, with all the necessary sweep and brilliance.

Tonight Pierre Monteux will make his final appearance. Berl Senofsky, violinist, will make his first appearance at Tanglewood, playing the Beethoven violin concerto. The program will open with the suite from Beethoven's "Prometheus" and will close with the overture to "Leonora" No. 3. Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" will also be played.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,937

AUG 9 - 1958

Week-End At Tanglewood Beethoven

This is Beethoven week-end at Tanglewood as another great musical festival comes to a close. Last evening, a crowd of 8,353, listened with wonder as Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony thru Symphony No. 7 in A Major and Concerto for Pianoforte No. 5, the "Emperor." The program opened with Prelude, Fugue and Postlude by Honneger, which gave a welcomed contrast of the contemporary.

The second portion of the concert, Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto had Eugene Istomin accompanying at the piano. It was an electrifying performance he gave and the audience response was electrifying.

Tonight and tomorrow afternoon, Beethoven music will dominate the performances.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,138

AUG 9 - 1958

Audience of 8,353 At Tanglewood As Final Series Opens

In this final weekend of Shed concerts at Tanglewood the music of Beethoven is being featured.

Last night Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Honegger's "Prelude, Fugue, and Postlude;" Beethoven's Symphony No. 7 in A Major; and in Beethoven's Concerto for the Piano-forte, No. 5, the Emperor, before an audience of 8,353.

Tonight Pierre Monteux will conduct, making his final appearance. The program will include Beethoven's "Prometheus" and "Leonora" No. 3. and Hindemith's "Nobilissima."

Sunday afternoon's Shed concert will be conducted by Charles Munch and the program will be Walton's "Johannesburg Festival Overture" and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Sun (e)
LOWELL, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 41,960

AUG 9 - 1958

Music

Berkshire Festival in Season Finale Tomorrow

By ALFRED W. BURKE

LOWELL—This year's session of the Berkshire Festival will close on a brilliant note when the final program will be presented tomorrow. At 2.30 p. m., Dr. Charles Munch will direct the Beethoven "Ninth Symphony." The guest soloists who will join the orchestra and Festival chorus include Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass.

There were many highlights during the season. Most of these, however, were limited to the outstanding instrumentalists that appeared from time to time.

The most outstanding of the entire list was the eminent violinist, Zino Francescatti. His performance ranked with the finest ever recorded at this world famous musical center.

There was one note of lesser standard. This was recorded in the opera workshop series, a program list that does not too completely influence the overall picture of the Festival.

Though the basic idea of such a venture has tremendous value, there are certain demands, both artistic and physical, that must be met. Included are those elements that provide not only young singers who are naturally gifted, but qualified to meet the requirements of whatever type of music they essay.

MUCH OF this responsibility rests within the judgment of the director. No concert goers will ever challenge the formal musical education or abilities of Boris Goldovsky, but it definitely seems that he overlooks the physical qualification of many of his singers.

When eminent minds and voices of the first decree that years of training and experience should pass before singers are introduced to the rigors of dramatic singing, a director shoud take heed.

For some strange reason the greatest musical minds seem to concern themelves with music, either as theory or in regards to a man made instrument. One thing that they should concern themselves with is that the human voice is nature's own gift and not just another piano or brass instrument.

Let us hope that the day will come when the world centers of music will be a point of inspiration for talented young voices. Each individual who has a voice in the conducting of a music festival should make sure that the student voices as well as the concert going public are protected in every way possible.

It's another banner week at Kennebunkport, Maine, where the Arundel Theatre is holding court. Menotti's "The Medium" and Moore's "Gallantry" is brightening the boards. Morse and Haithwaite have done it again. A fine and enthusiastic cast is responsible. Next week Cole Porter's "Kiss Me Kate" will be in session.

There will be concerts at the Andover Organ Institute all next week. Monday through Saturday will find an imposing list of young and talented organists appearing. This series, conducted in the Memorial Music hall in Methuen, is experiencing one of it's most successful season.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,286

AUG 9 - 1958

Munch, Orchestra Honor Beethoven

For the final weekend of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewod Dr. Munch chose to honor the incomparable Beethoven, including one contemporary composer, according to the pattern followed with little exception through the current series.

Friday evening's program opened with Honegger's "Prelude Fugue, and Postlude." An interesting mixture of modern and classic, simple in construction and exposition, its interest lies not in rhythmic diversity, but in its linear structure, and colorful instrumentation. Dr. Munch and the orchestra gave it a wonderfully austere and dynamic reading.

Beethoven's Seventh Symphony, controversial when first performed as to programmatic intent, Wagner referring to it as "the apotheosis of the dance," and D'Ibdy saying it was "purely pastoral," the rhythm suggesting nothing but "the song of a bird," became as lucid in its projection by the orchestra and Dr. Munch as the rain-washed atmosphere. No score to divert his attention, Dr. Munch, in his usual vibrant and intent manner, drew every variation of tonal color, rhymatic ideas and developmental structure with a firmly sensitive estures, to which this incomparable orchestra responded with practised, yet emphatic virtuosity.

For the completion of the evening's program, Eugene Istomin, concert pianist, performed with delicacy and sensitivity Beethoven's "Emporor" conerto. His particular aptitude for chamber music playing, showed in the lack of power and brilliance one expects with this majestic concerto; his musicianship was evident but restrained; the orchestra naturally over-balanced Mr. Istomin's refined interpretation, but the beauty of the music was not dulled. The audience of 8,353 were most appreciative of the whole evening's performance.

Tonight's program will include Beethoven's Suite from "Die Geschop des Prometheus" Ballet, Op. 43 his violin concerto in D major, played by Berl Senofsky, the Leonore Overture, No. 3, and Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione," directed by Pierre Monteux. —Mde.B. B.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 103,521

AUG 9 - 1958

Beethoven Featured At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. (Special) — The twenty first Berkshire Music Festival came into the stretch here Friday night. From this point on, through Sunday's Ninth Symphony, it will be pretty much Beethoven all the way.

Had one been called upon to make book at the outset of the festival four weeks ago on which of the composers, Brahms, Tschaikowsky, Wagner or Beethoven, would prove the popular favorite, not many would probably have put their money on Beethoven. Wagner was new on the list here this festival, and he looked like the odds-on winner. But from the looks of things Friday night, Beethoven will finish ahead. On Fridays to date, the average attendance has been about 6,000. This evening, the gate was 8,353, or a Music Shedful plus 2,000 lawn sitters.

Popular Works

Two of the master's greatest and most popular works were offered by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony on this occasion. They were the Seventh Symphony and the "Emperor" Concerto, with Eugene Istomin as pianist.

The performance of the Seventh Symphony drew some of the loudest cheers of the season. It certainly was done the way the people liked it, full of drive, frenetic climaxes and a last movement taken at a speed that must have set a record for the track. As always, Mr. Munch exhibited the highly contrasted tempi and dynamics so characteristic of his approach to most music. As a result, there was an amount of blurred or buried detail throughout the playing. But what was new in the reading was a romantic spirit with which Mr. Munch pervaded the score. If it was not so lucid as one might wish, this interpretation was more Viennese at heart. It was not so lofty and arching as it was in time. The last movement had a scarcely concealed gaiety about it. In any event it took the audience by storm, and after all, who pays the salaries of Mr. Munch and the boys and gals from Boston?

The performance of the "Emperor" concerto was splendid. Mr. Munch set it out with joyous elan. The orchestra played it with particular brightness and eloquence. And Mr. Istomin offered the piano part with the clarity, coolness and vigor of a Berkshire mountain stream. His playing was particularly clean and beautifully articulated. He invested the music with a fine poetry without at any time overcoloring either the lanism or the sentiment. And the contributions of both pianist and orchestra were completely integrated in performance and temper.

The evenings program had opened with a suite which Arthur Honegger rest from his original stage piece on the legend of amphion. Unfortunately, despite all the sound it used, it had little to say that was engaging dramatically or musically. Mr. Munch had it on his list but it wouldn't have been missed, it surely wouldn't have been missed.

T.H.P.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292

AUG 14 1958

TANGLEWOOD
Friday, August 8
By C. D.

The Friday night program at Tanglewood conducted by Charles Munch opened with a Prelude, Fugue, and Postlude by Honegger. This was a concert version of certain sections of a stage piece written in the twenties and revised in 1948. While not an epoch making work it proved one of the best of the modern works Dr. Munch has introduced to Tanglewood audiences this summer with an exciting fugue and a broad flowing postlude.

Then followed the Beethoven Seventh Symphony. This was played with an unyielding pounding rhythm that was dynamically powerful if not beautiful and seemed to elate the audience.

(Continued on Page 18)

, 1958

Bleu, served in snifters, was the perfect finishing touch for a memorable meal.

After the brandy, the ebullient Mr. Hack took us for a tour through the two shining spotless kitchens and introduced us to Mrs. Eraclito, Joe's mother, who is in charge of the "cold" kitchen and responsible for the appetizers, saalds and deserts. Then through the great walk-in refrigerators, the store-room, with shelves lined with quality foods, and the wine cellar, its cob-web free bins stacked with fine wines.

Although records have been lost, the inn, built as a private home, is known to have been completed in 1760. Remodeled into hideous Victorian style in 1848, it was again remodeled in the Georgian manner in 1909, and in 1915 assumed its present appearance. It has dignity and friendliness, and the interior is gracious and welcoming. The service is quietly deft, and prices are moderate, from $2.90 to $5.75 for a complete dinner. Luncheons are also served, from $2.10 to $3.50, and either dinner or luncheon can be ordered a la carte if preferred.

Printed at the bottom of the Westleigh menu is a quotation from Goldoni that seems to touch the right note, "The world is a book and he who stays at home reads only one page."

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,937

AUG 9 - 1958

Week-End At Tanglewood Beethoven

This is Beethoven week-end at Tanglewood as another great musical festival comes to a close. Last evening, a crowd of 8,353, listened with wonder as Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony thru Symphony No. 7 in A Major and Concerto for Pianoforte No. 5, the "Emperor." The program opened with Prelude, Fugue and Postlude by Henneger, which gave a welcomed contrast of the contemporary.

The second portion of the concert, Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto had Eugene Istomin accompanying at the piano. It was an electrifying performance he gave and the audience response was electrifying.

Tonight and tomorrow afternoon, Beethoven music will dominate the performances.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,541

AUG 9 - 1958

BEETHOVEN'S MUSIC HEARD AT FESTIVAL

Eugene Istomin Appears As Piano Soloist at Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX—The music of Beethoven predominates on these final three concerts in the Tanglewood Shed. Friday night Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony Orchestra through Honegger's "Prelude, Fugue and Postlude;" Beethoven's Symphony No. 7 in A Major; and, with Eugene Istomin at the piano, in Beethoven's Concerto for Pianoforte, No. 5 the "Emperor." An audience of 8353 was on hand and in a highly appreciative mood.

Breadth and Depth

The Honegger work is one of his finest. It has breadth, depth and surface brilliance. Mr. Munch has a feeling for this music and he read it with splendid attention to detail and spaciousness.

Beethoven's seventh symphony never looks backward. It is always forward looking. The exorable mood of the allegretto was finely achieved and the pace was just. The presto achieved real excitement and the finale, taken at a breathless pace, worked up to a storm. The impact on the audience was great. It was a splendid performance of great music.

Eugene Istomin is a pianist of discernment and sensitivity. I have never heard him digress from the artistic. He lacks some of the brilliance and flair of some of his colleagues, but listening to him, one feels that with him, the music is paramount.

Sweep and Brilliance

Friday night he played the "Emperor" concerto with rare insight. His collaboration with Mr. Munch and the orchestra was happy. The numerous embellishments and trills were handled expertly and in cantabile passages his tone was beautifully matched with the orchestra. The performance was large-scaled, with all the necessary sweep and brilliance.

Tonight Pierre Monteux will make his final appearance. Berl Senofsky, violinist, will make his first appearance at Tanglewood, playing the Beethoven violin concerto. The program will open with the suite from Beethoven's "Prometheus" and will close with the overture to "Leonora" No. 3. Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" will also be played.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,138

AUG 9 - 1958

Audience of 8,353 At Tanglewood As Final Series Opens

In this final weekend of Shed concerts at Tanglewood the music of Beethoven is being featured.

Last night Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Honegger's "Prelude, Fugue, and Postlude;" Beethoven's Symphony No. 7 in A Major; and in Beethoven's Concerto for the Pianoforte, No. 5, the Emperor, before an audience of 8,353.

Tonight Pierre Monteux will conduct, making his final appearance. The program will include Beethoven's "Prometheus" and "Leonora" No. 3, and Hindemith's "Nobilissima."

Sunday afternoon's Shed concert will be conducted by Charles Munch and the program will be Walton's "Johannesburg Festival Overture" and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

[204]

Sun (e)
LOWELL, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 41,960

AUG 9 - 1958

Music

Berkshire Festival in Season Finale Tomorrow

By ALFRED W. BURKE

LOWELL—This year's session of the Berkshire Festival will close on a brilliant note when the final program will be presented tomorrow. At 2.30 p. m., Dr. Charles Munch will direct the Beethoven Ninth Symphony." The guest soloists who will join the orchestra and Festival chorus include Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass.

There were many highlights during the season. Most of these, however, were limited to the outstanding instrumentalists that appeared from time to time.

The most outstanding of the entire list was the eminent violinist, Zino Francescatti. His performance ranked with the finest ever recorded at this world famous musical center.

There was one note of lesser standard. This was recorded in the opera workshop series, a program list that does not too completely influence the overall picture of the Festival.

Though the basic idea of such a venture has tremendous value, there are certain demands, both artistic and physical, that must be met. Included are those elements that provide not only young singers who are naturally gifted but qualified to meet the requirements of whatever type of music they essay.

MUCH OF this responsibility rests within the judgment of the director. No concert goers will ever challenge the formal musical education or abilities of Boris Goldovsky, but it definitely seems that he overlooks the physical qualification of many of his singers.

When eminent minds and voices of the first decree that years of training and experience should pass before singers are introduced to the rigors of dramatic singing, a director shoud take heed.

For some strange reason the greatest musical minds seem to concern themelves with music, either as theory or in regards to a man made instrument. One thing that they should concern themselves with is that the human voice is nature's own gift and not just another piano or brass instrument.

Let us hope that the day will come when the world centers of music will be a point of inspiration for talented young voices. Each individual who has a voice in the conducting of a music festival should make sure that the student voices as well as the concert going public are protected in every way possible.

It's another banner week at Kennebunkport, Maine, where the Arundel Theatre is holding court. Menotti's "The Medium" and Moore's "Gallantry" is brightening the boards. Morse and Haithwaite have done it again. A fine and enthusiastic cast is responsible. Next week Cole Porter's "Kiss Me Kate" will be in session.

There will be concerts at the Andover Organ Institute all next week. Monday through Saturday will find an imposing list of young and talented organists appearing. This series, conducted in the Memorial Music hall in Methuen, is experiencing one of it's most successful season.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,286

AUG 9 - 1958

Munch, Orchestra Honor Beethoven

For the final weekend of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewod Dr. Munch chose to honor the incomparable Beethoven, including one contemporary composer, according to the pattern followed with little exception through the current series.

Friday evening's program opened with Honegger's "Prelude Fugue, and Postlude." An interesting mixture of modern and classic, simple in construction and exposition, its interest lies not in rhythmic diversity, but in its linear structure, and colorful instrumentation. Dr. Munch and the orchestra gave it a wonderfully austere and dynamic reading.

Beethoven's Seventh Symphony, controversial when first performed as to programmatic intent, Wagner referring to it as "the apotheosis of the dance," and D'Ibdy saying it was "purely pastoral," the rhythm suggesting nothing but "the song of a bird," became as lucid in its projection by the orchestra and Dr. Munch as the rain-washed atmosphere. No score to divert his attention, Dr. Munch, in his usual vibrant and intent manner, drew every variation of tonal color, rhymatic ideas and developmental structure with a firmly sensitive estures, to which this incomparable orchestra responded with practised, yet emphatic virtuosity.

For the completion of the evening's program, Eugene Istomin, concert pianist, performed with delicacy and sensitivity Beethoven's "Emporor" conerto. His particular aptitude for chamber music playing, showed in the lack of power and brilliance one expects with this majestic concerto; his musicianship was evident but restrained; the orchestra naturally over-balanced Mr. Istomin's refined interpretation, but the beauty of the music was not dulled. The audience of 8,353 were most appreciative of the whole evening's performance.

Tonight's program will include Beethoven's Suite from "Die Geschop des Prometheus" Ballet, Op. 43 his violin concerto in D major, played by Berl Senofsky, the Leonore Overture, No. 3, and Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione," directed by Pierre Monteux. —Mde.B. B.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 103,521

AUG 9 - 1958

Beethoven Featured At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. (Special) — The twenty first Berkshire Music Festival came into the stretch here Friday night. From this point on, through Sunday's Ninth Symphony, it will be pretty much Beethoven all the way.

Had one been called upon to make book at the outset of the festival four weeks ago on which of the composers, Brahms, Tschaikowsky, Wagner or Beethoven, would prove the popular favorite, not many would probably have put their money on Beethoven. Wagner was new on the list here this festival, and he looked like the odds-on winner. But from the looks of things Friday night, Beethoven will finish ahead. On Fridays to date, the average attendance has been about 6,000. This evening, the gate was 8,353, or a Music Shedful plus 2,000 lawn sitters.

Popular Works

Two of the master's greatest and most popular works were offered by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony on this occasion. They were the Seventh Symphony and the "Emperor" Concerto, with Eugene Istomin as pianist.

The performance of the Seventh Symphony drew some of the loudest cheers of the season. It certainly was done the way the people liked it, full of drive, frenetic climaxes and a last movement taken at a speed that must have set a record for the track. As always, Mr. Munch exhibited the highly contrasted tempi and dynamics so characteristic of his approach to most music. As a result, there was an amount of blurred or buried detail throughout the playing. But what was new in the reading was a romantic spirit with which Mr. Munch pervaded the score. If it was not so lucid as one might wish, this interpretation was more Viennese at heart. It was not so lofty and arching as it was in time. The last movement had a scarcely concealed gaiety about it. In any event it took the audience by storm, and after all, who pays the salaries of Mr. Munch and the boys and gals from Boston?

The performance of the "Emperor" concerto was splendid. Mr. Munch set it out with joyous elan. The orchestra played it with particular brightness and eloquence. And Mr. Istomin offered the piano part with the clarity, coolness and vigor of a Berkshire mountain stream. His playing was particularly clean and beautifully articulated. He invested the music with a fine poetry without at any time overcoloring either the ianism or the sentiment. And the contributions of both pianist and orchestra were completely integrated in performance and temper.

The evenings program had opened with a suite which Arthur Honegger rest from his original stage piece on the legend of amphion. Unfortunately, despite all the sound it used, it had little to say that was engaging dramatically or musically. Mr. Munch had it on his list but it wouldn't have been missed, it surely wouldn't have been missed.

T.H.P.

THE

Antique

The following dealers will exhibit:

Russell Carrell of Salisbury who deals principally in American primitives will display as feature articles a small 18th century hutch table in original condition, several old trade signs, and a most interesting group of iron and wooden wares, all early. Mrs. J. C. Johnston of Millerton has a general line of furniture, glass and china and will display as a feature early kerosene lamps. Kenneth B. Way of Morris, Conn., has an interesting line of early American pattern glass with some in color and some bric-a-brac, lamps, sugar bowls, creamers, goblets and egg cups. He will feature two dozen signed Tiffany and rich. This, created by the inn for a special occasion, combines lobster, scallops and mushrooms, with a hint of cheese in the sauce. Served with Zucchini provencale, creamy whipped potatoes and a crisp green salad with avocado dressing, it was an utterly satisfying meal. But it was still possible to eye with envy the blinis stuffed with king crabmeat being served across the way. For dessert, our waiter suggested the Ice Cream Puff Au Chocolate, which sounded too good to resist and was just right with our after dinner coffee.

(Continued on Page 17)

Table For Two...

(Continued from Page 3)

As the proprietors of this elegant eatery, Frank Eraclito and Joseph Hack, were away, a brother, Danny Hack, acted as host and invited us to join him in a brandy. Martell's Cordon Bleu, served in snifters, was the perfect finishing touch for a memorable meal.

After the brandy, the ebullient Mr. Hack took us for a tour through the two shining spotless kitchens and introduced us to Mrs. Eraclito, Joe's mother, who is in charge of the "cold" kitchen and responsible for the appetizers, saalds and deserts. Then through the great walk-in refrigerators, the store-room, with shelves lined with quality foods, and the wine cellar, its cob-web free bins stacked with fine wines.

Although records have been lost, the inn, built as a private home, is known to have been completed in 1760. Remodeled into hideous Victorian style in 1848, it was again remodeled in the Georgian manner in 1909, and in 1915 assumed its present appearance. It has dignity and friendliness, and the interior is gracious and welcoming. The service is quietly deft, and prices are moderate, from $2.90 to $5.75 for a complete dinner. Luncheons are also served, from $2.10 to $3.50, and either dinner or luncheon can be ordered a la carte if preferred.

Printed at the bottom of the Westleigh menu is a quotation from Goldoni that seems to touch the right note, "The world is a book and he who stays at home reads only one page."

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,937

AUG 9 - 1958

Week-End At Tanglewood Beethoven

This is Beethoven week-end at Tanglewood as another great musical festival comes to a close. Last evening, a crowd of 8,353, listened with wonder as Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony thru Symphony No. 7 in A Major and Concerto for Pianoforte No. 5, the "Emperor." The program opened with Prelude, Fugue and Postlude by Henneger, which gave a welcomed contrast of the contemporary.

The second portion of the concert, Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto had Eugene Istomin accompanying at the piano. It was an electrifying performance he gave and the audience response was electrifying.

Tonight and tomorrow afternoon, Beethoven music will dominate the performances.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,541

AUG 9 - 1958

BEETHOVEN'S MUSIC HEARD AT FESTIVAL

Eugene Istomin Appears As Piano Soloist at Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX—The music of Beethoven predominates on these final three concerts in the Tanglewood Shed. Friday night Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony Orchestra through Honegger's "Prelude, Fugue and Postlude;" Beethoven's Symphony No. 7 in A Major; and, with Eugene Istomin at the piano, in Beethoven's Concerto for Pianoforte, No. 5 the "Emperor." An audience of 8353 was on hand and in a highly appreciative mood.

Breadth and Depth

The Honegger work is one of his finest. It has breadth, depth and surface brilliance. Mr. Munch has a feeling for this music and he read it with splendid attention to detail and spaciousness.

Beethoven's seventh symphony never looks backward. It is always forward looking. The exorable mood of the allegretto was finely achieved and the pace was just. The presto achieved real excitement and the finale, taken at a breathless pace, worked up to a storm. The impact on the audience was great. It was a splendid performance of great music.

Eugene Istomin is a pianist of discernment and sensitivity. I have never heard him digress from the artistic. He lacks some of the brilliance and flair of some of his colleagues, but listening to him, one feels that with him, the music is paramount.

Sweep and Brilliance

Friday night he played the "Emperor" concerto with rare insight. His collaboration with Mr. Munch and the orchestra was happy. The numerous embellishments and trills were handled expertly and in cantabile passages his tone was beautifully matched with the orchestra. The performance was large-scaled, with all the necessary sweep and brilliance.

Tonight Pierre Monteux will make his final appearance. Berl Senofsky, violinist, will make his first appearance at Tanglewood, playing the Beethoven violin concerto. The program will open with the suite from Beethoven's "Prometheus" and will close with the overture to "Leonora" No. 3. Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" will also be played.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,138

AUG 9 - 1958

Audience of 8,353 At Tanglewood As Final Series Opens

In this final weekend of Shed concerts at Tanglewood the music of Beethoven is being featured.

Last night Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Honegger's "Prelude, Fugue, and Postlude;" Beethoven's Symphony No. 7 in A Major; and in Beethoven's Concerto for the Piano-forte, No. 5, the Emperor, before an audience of 8,353.

Tonight Pierre Monteux will conduct, making his final appearance. The program will include Beethoven's "Prometheus" and "Leonora" No. 3, and Hindemith's "Nobilissima."

Sunday afternoon's Shed concert will be conducted by Charles Munch and the program will be Walton's "Johannesburg Festival Overture" and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

[205]

NEW YORK, N. Y. TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 S. 1,189,293

AUG 10 1958

Music: Final Tanglewood Week-End

Works by Beethoven, Honegger Heard

By HAROLD C. SCHONBERG
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 8—The final week-end of the Berkshire Music Festival started Friday under a clear and cool sky. An audience of 8,353 was attracted to the Tanglewood concert, with its program of two tried-and-true Beethoven favorites—the Seventh Symphony and the "Emperor" Concerto.

Eugene Istomin was the pianist in the "Emperor." The only departure from program orthodoxy was the piece that Charles Munch selected to open the program—Honegger's powerful and impressive Prelude, Fugue and Postlude.

•

Thus the evening held few program surprises, and there were few surprises in the performances themselves. Mr. Munch was a close friend of the late Arthur Honegger, and he conducts his music with an air of religious dedication. His interpretation sounded natural, intense and completely idiomatic.

The Beethoven was anything but that. At least two things, however, could be said of this particular performance: it was noisy, and it was fast. The percussionist whaled away with great strokes, the winds puffed for all they were worth and the general idea was that everybody was out to shatter the decibel record.

As for the tempos, Mr. Munch took the opening of the finale at a pace that not even the Boston strings could articulate clearly. Indeed, as Mr. Munch became carried away, the movement, which is marked "allegro con brio," ended at a faster clip than the previous movement, which is marked "presto" (a speedier indication).

Eugene Istomin

A Profile of Copland Given in Afternoon

Fortunately the "Emperor" pursued a more sedate course. Mr. Istomin played the solo part with plenty of assurance, and liaison with the orchestra was, for the most part, excellent.

Friday also marked the conclusion of the six American composer profiles presented under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation. The event took place here in the afternoon, with Aaron Copland delivering a lecture on his development as a composer, and with two of his works being played.

These works were five songs from "Twelve Poems of Emily Dickinson" and the Piano Fantasy. Mr. Copland himself accompanied Corrinne Curry, the talented soprano of the Fromm Fellowship Players.

The long and problematical Fantasy was played by Noel Lee, who had committed the work to memory and played it as only a youngster with a big technique and a thorough knowledge of advanced music of the twentieth century could.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 60,734

AUG 9 - 1958

Music: Tanglewood Festival In Its Final Week

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — The Berkshire Music Festival's final wekend of concerts, concentrating on the music of Bethoven, began last night in the music shed at Tanglewood before an audience of 8,353.

Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Beethoven's Symphony No. 7 in A major and "Prelude, Fugue, and Postlude" by Honegger. Eugene Istomin was piano soloist in Bethoven's "Emperor" Concerto.

Honegger Work

The Honegger work was an excellent argument for the inclusion of contemporary works on these programs. Published in 1958, it is based on the story of Amphion, son of Jupiter and Antiope.

It opens with huge harmonically-scattered chords, establishing a mystical atmosphere. The melodies of the prelude make beautiful solos for strings and woodwinds. Climaxes are frequent and agitated, involving heavy brass solos and frantic tempos.

The subject of the fugue is a masculine theme, opening in double basses (with help from percussion) and travels promptly through the orchestra. The sounds are forced and strident, strengthened with shattering cymbals.

A rhapsodic theme is the basis for the postlude, which dwindles to a whisper.

It was obvious that the audience enjoyed the Honegger throughly, indicating that its reactions to such as Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" and the Copland piano concerto does not prove it anti-modern.

Seventh Symphony

Beethoven's Seventh Symphony received an uneven performance in which the assets far outshone the liabilities.

The opening movement wasn't as steady as it might have been, in string passages and intonation of the brasses. In addition, the speed was sluggish, despoiling some of the movement's nobility. Dance portions were alert and alive, with sharp contrasts drawn in volumes and adroit phrasing.

The insistent reiterations that close the movement had fine momentum.

A quality of grave stealth permeated the march movement. Dynamics ranged from the merest sound to huge chordal blocks. The scherzo was taken at a vigorous speed—too fast. It was brilliant performance by the orchestra, particularly the trio in winds, pure and impeccably toned.

The finale moved along at a precipitous speed. This did not, however, obscure a clear picture of its folkish material or penetrating phrases in brass.

In short, the Seventh by Beethoven received a brilliant, vibrant, and exciting performance with reservations according to the particular concepts of the listener.

Istomin

We've rarely heard a more coordinated performance of Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto than that of Istomin with the Boston Symphony and Munch.

Most significant perhaps was the importance placed on its simple, straightforward, lyrical themes, to which technique and filigree were made incidental.

The pianist was sure-fingered, dexterous, and forceful in his performance. Runs, trills, octaves were totally accurate and delivered with a musicianly application of dynamics and accents.

Many of the same qualities were apparent, and others added to the excellent performance. s to min gave of the Beethoven Third here a couple of summers ago.

Tonight's Program

Tonight's program will include the Beethoven violin concerto with Berl Senofsky as soloist. Pierre Monteux will conduct the Boston Symphony in Beethoven's Prometheus music, and the third Leonore overture. Balance of the program is Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione."

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 295,512

AUG 10 1958

Boston Symphony Beethoven Series

Record Tanglewood Crowds At Final Weekend Concerts

By ELINOR HUGHES

LENOX—Under cloudless blue skies, blazing with more stars than you would have believed possible, the Boston Symphony Orchestra began Friday evening the final series of week end concerts, which will be devoted to the work of Beethoven.

Charles Munch directed it Friday night and will direct it again Sunday afternoon. Saturday night Pierre Monteux conducted.

Record Attendance

This year's Tanglewood on Parade, which featured Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra, took place Thursday, and despite a shower or two, established an all-time record attendance of 14,885. And despite cloudy, cool, and rainy weather, attendance throughout the season has been excellent, and this weekend promises to exceed last year's very handsome total.

The program Friday night began with Honegger's Prelude, Fugue and Postlude, continued with Beethoven's Symphony No. 7 and concluded with Beethoven's piano concerto No. 5 and (Emperor) with Eugene Istomin as soloist. The Shed was filled and several thousand persons braved the cool night and sat on the grass.

The selections, if they broke no records for novelty, were received with a great deal of enthusiasm, the concerto in particular winning an ovation. Honneger's Prelude, Fugue and Postlude, first performed 10 years ago by the orchestra de la Suisse Romande under the direction of Ernest Ansermet, is a reworking of a stage piece first given in 1938. This deals with the legend of Amphion, whose musical gift was so remarkable that he brought stone to life and built Thebes an dthe Temple of Apollo by playing on his lyre. The music is vigorous and interesting and needs no explicit programming to make it enjoyable.

Glowing Performance

The Symphony No. 7, whether or not you agree with Wagner's description of it as "the dance in its highest condition; the happiest realization of the movement of the body in an ideal form," is a refreshment of the spirit and a delight to the ear. Mr. Munch and the orchestra gave it a glowing performance to the obvious pleasure of the listeners.

Concluding the concert, Eugene Istomin played the solo part of "The Emperor" in a manner to win himself great applause. He is a young pianist of great confidence, who, for all that he displays notable vigor in his attack, seems considerably happier in the more lyrical passages than in those requiring a depth of interpretive skill and understanding. He would be more satisfying if he concentrated upon exploring the meaning of the music rather than introducing the stunning effects of which he is capable.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

AUG 9 - 1958

Music Review

Beethoven at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

The concert at Tanglewood last night was the start of the final weekend of the Berkshire Festival season. The three programs will be devoted mainly to the music of Beethoven.

In the opening concert, one of his symphonies and one of the piano concerti were interrupted by only one short work: The "Prelude, Fugue and Postlude" of Honegger.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra was not heard to its best advantage last night. It was allowed —or rather, the individual members were allowed, and even urged—to play at the limit of the capacities of their respective instruments, which are not at all equal, and the result was not a concordant blend. It was analogous with the street vendor who mixed his sandwich ingredients 50-50, one rabbit to one horse.

In addition, Charles Munch, the conductor, immediately wrested the record from Australian miler Herb Elliott, and achieved one of something like 3:53 in the Seventh Symphony.

* * *

THE HONEGGER suite is drawn from his own melodrama "Amphion" of 30 years ago. The sonorities of the prelude are rich and full but in the Fugue the brasses were allowed to blow as though unaware that the strings were trying to disclose and develop a statement of bold bowstrokes. The result was an imbalance to entirely distort and obfuscate the intent of the composer and even the more mellifluous passages of the Postlude could not regain the audience's attention and perception.

The Seventh Symphony of Beethoven begins with a long, slow introduction in which the orchestra was asked to explode the first chord of each figure beyond Beethoven's intentions. The dolce oboe solo that ties these phrases together led into recurring uncalled-for blasts, quite distant from the stately dignity and tenderness that can be extracted from this section of the symphony.

* * *

THIS EXCESSIVE violence continued in those areas permitting the slightest wedge of speed and noise, even after the quieter contrasting passages had been perused. The audience was left either shocked or outraged.

It was a magnificent gesture for the Boston Symphony to invite a half-dozen of the most promising pianists of the younger generation to appear with them, one each weekend. The sixth and last to appear was Eugene Istomin, who played "The Emporer" last night to close the concert. He played Beethoven Fourth three years ago.

* * *

THIS YOUNG artist has developed and matured between visits and now plays with both command and poise. The three grand flourishes that are ushered in by orchestral chords early showed his grasp of the instrument and of his present task, and each succeeding detail, once the exceptionally long introduction was past, was played with confident boldness, but without too clearly discernible shape or plan. The slow movement did not move onward, and as it proceeded into the Rondo the rhythm was not established to everyone's satisfaction. Nor was the orchestral accompaniment one either to abet or lend assurance to a soloist. Istomin was recalled many times.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 102,839

AUG 11 1958

Final Concert At Tanglewood Is Masterpiece

By JOHN F. KYES

LENOX — The final concert of the Berkshire Music Festival drew 13,771 to Tanglewood yesterday afternoon. Had rain not threatened, a hazard which became a reality during the playing of the Beethoven Ninth Symphony, it is probable that the attendance record of 15,300 in 1957 would have been exceeded.

All in all, this 1958 Festival conceded nothing to a "recession" year. Attendance at major concerts was held within one per cent of 1957, and "Tanglewood on Parade" and miscelaneous concerts registered substantial increases. The grand total for 1958 is 168,773 (not including student concerts) as against 162,936 in 1957, 140,985 in 1956 and 151,659 in 1955.

'Johannesburg Overture'

Charles Munch offered one appetizer before concentrating on the principal task of the afternoon. The "Johannesburg Festival Overture," composed by Sir William Walton of England for the 70th anniversary of the South African city in 1956, is a spirited piece, requiring continual deftness in the strings and winds, and featuring odd rhythms in a variety of percussion instruments. It seemed strange, however, to be taking an intermission after only a few minutes of music.

In a weekend which had emphasized Beethoven, the performance of the Ninth Symphony was a splendid and fitting climax. Orchestral virtuosity under such leadership and with such an ensemble is of course to be expected but one always waits with interest to see how the soloists and chorus tackle this most formidable of problems.

From the baritone solo through the fervent quartet passages, I found little to cavil at in the work of Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, Blake Stern and Donald Gramm. They projected the necessary volume well without losing richness of tone. If they were giving their last ounce of effort, they managed not to show it.

Praises Chorus

The chorus deserves high credit, and its mentors, Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson, should have only praise for mastering such a stern assignment in a limited time, From my listening-point the chorus developed some moments of great sonority and appealing tone, and many passages in which the German words were muffled and the impact of the music was partially lost. I would doubt, even with the marvelous acoustics of the Tanglewood shell, if 125 singers are enough to project this immense music.

Munch unfolded the symphony with loving care. Its long and well-sustained opening movement flowed like a mighty stream, and borne on it one could float continually into the enjoyment of new vistas and arresting beauties.

The second scherzo-like movement was delightful in its rapid triple rhythms and its varying themes, tossed off with only a few minor casualties in the winds. The composer's sudden full stops and abrupt phrasings also posed one or two hazards.

The slow third movement was a masterpiece of direction and playing, full of repose and tender beauty.

The excitement of the last movement was built up adroitly to the voicing of the Schiller "Ode to Joy." Munch kept the chorus moving alertly with the orchestra, and it was only in some of the final passages that I felt a certain sameness of beat creeping in, to betoken some preoccupation with the problems of dovetailing the various factors in the tremendous climax of the symphony.

BRONXVILLE, N. Y.
Review Press & Reporter
Circ. W. 3,628

AUG 7 1958

at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman

BERL SENOFSKY
BERKSHIRE SOLOIST

OF MUSIC AND DANCE

When the Empire Music Festival in upper New York State curtailed its program of symphonies and experimental dance work it was necessary for devotees of those arts to again turn their full attention to the firmly established BERKSIRE FESTIVAL, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. and to the JACOB'S PILLOW DANCE FESTIVAL at Lee, Mass.

And there they have been having their full-blown respective seasons, which through the years have satisfied the most demanding patrons. In our land which recently has been more conscious of "culture" (we use that word advisedly) due to the contest in the arts between the East and West it is nice to know that the managements of these Festivals have (without state subsidy,) been holding fast to top standards.

* * *

Now the final week-end at Berkshire looms hard upon the famed annual Benefit TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE (Aug. 7th). Starting at 5:45 on Thursday their will be sessions of Orchestrations in the Shed, Compositions in the Chamber Music Hall and Opera in the Theatre—Concert Hall. A lawn party picnic occurs at 7 and a Gala Concert at 8:15.

Nifty goings on, these. And the music has full range and change from serious to pops. They even have Arthur Fiedler's group swinging out the brass in "76 Trombones" from THE MUSIC MAN. Aaron Copland will be one of the soloists, he in his own Piano Concerto. The weekend will be singular, with Charles Munch, Music Director, conducting, followed by Pierre Monteux. Then Dr. Munch winds up the batoning at the final session.

The Daily Times, Mamaroneck, N.Y., Tues., Aug. 5,

The Standard-Star, New Rochelle, N.Y., Tues., Aug. 5,

Herald Statesman, Yonkers, N. Y., Tuesday, Aug. 5, 1958

The Daily Item, Port Chester, N.Y., Tue., August 5,

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 104,590

AUG 10 1958

Music: Pierre Monteux At Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — The second of three final concerts of the Berkshire Music Festival was given last night at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Pierre Monteux with Berl Senofsky as violin soloist. There was an audience of 12,680.

The program; suite from "The Creatures of Prometheus" ballet by Beethoven; Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" concert suite from the ballet, "Saint Francis," Beethoven's overture to "Leonore," No. 3, Opus 72. Senofsky was heard in the Beethoven violin concerto.

Senofsky was the winner of the 1955 Brussels competition. Although he has appeared with many outstanding American orchestras since his United States debut in 1956, this was his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Senofsky is a fine musician. His concept of the Beethoven concerto was highly individual. He made excessive use of rubato, or free rhythm, to which Monteux adjusted the orchestra with fine efficiency.

A Poetic Rendition

There was much poetry in the violinist's playing, giving the concerto an almost romantic atmosphere. He didn't disregard the Beethoven formalities, but one felt that whatever personal aspects he interjected were carefully planned estimates and not results of the moment.

The violinist has a healthy technique, good tone, and gave the concerto highly personal implications.

Monteux gave the Prometheus music fine classic lines. It was an almost Rossini impression in swift-moving string passages, ending in strong cadences. The conductor was admirably explicit in denoting abrupt and decisive changes of dynamics and sharp accents.

The fragile second section (adagio from the original ballet) was fascinating in timbre. All did not go well with soloists, however. Bernard Zighera's harp phrases were beautifully transcribed. So was the tone quality from the flute of Doriot Anthony Dwyer and Samuel Mayes' cello. Two of the phrases were faulty between flute and cello, which wouldn't have been so damaging had they not been so exposed. To performers of such caliber, it comes under the heading of tragedy.

From the Rehearsal

Comments concerning the balance of the program were gathered at the public rehearsal yesterday morning. Listening to their performance last evening was vetoed by our deadline.

The Hindemith score received two rehearsals. The first was a pretty thorough dissection, in which Monteux had many phrases repeated many times. This is not always the case. At the conclusion of the first reading, it was apparent that he was willing to let it be—but repeated at the request of the orchestra.

In the second non-stop performance, the sturdily-cushioned chords of the introduction had a deep-rooted quality. Much logic in style was derived from the care with which the conductor projected melodies and suppressed backgrounds to them.

Changes of meter were so well-defined that they caused no jar in continuity. The introduction's meditative character relaxed into a whimsical rondo, representing the "Marriage with Poverty" portion of the ballet about St. Francis. It isn't jubilant but represents an unworldly cheer with which guests participate in the meager wedding feast.

A fine sturdiness was focused in the March.

A Gleaming Quality

The pastoral made delightfully fragile sounds in strings and woodwinds. There was a gleaming quality in the passacaglia, the variations of which were beautifully dovetailed, notably those of ponderous theme in brasses.

Monteux delineated the Leonore overture in crystal-clear patterns, beginning with the regal melody that is the main theme. Trumpet fanfares were splendidly played by Roger Voisin. Woodwinds excelled in their capricious by-play, and running passages in strings, full-speed, were dashingly played—a fierce test in synchronization.

The overall effect of the Leonore was elan mixed with warmth and expressiveness.

William Walton's Johannesburg Festival Overture, and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony will close the festival this afternoon. Soloists for the Beethoven are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass. The festival chorus and Boston symphony will be conducted by Charles Munch.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 361,379 - S. 576,176

AUG 10 1958

Tanglewood Music Festival Enters Its Final Week End

Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting; soloist, Eugene Istomin, pianist. The program:
Prelude, Fugue and Postlude......Honegger
Symphony No. 7, in A major.....Beethoven
Piano Concerto No. 5, in E flat major ("Emperor")..................Beethoven

By Jay S. Harrison

Eugene Istomin

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 9.—The first concert in the final week end of the Berkshire Music Festival, given last night at Tanglewood, was, to say the least, an unsettling affair. What gave it this quality was its unevenness, its lack of focus, its want of any interpretative point of view. And nowhere were these failings so clearly detailed as in the closing selection, Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto, featuring Eugene Istomin as the piano soloist and the Boston Symphony Orchestra directed by Charles Munch.

First off, one is obliged to report the following: There were moments throughout the performance which Mr. Istomin has not previously equalled, to my knowledge, during the course of his mature career. During the slow movement especially, and in every measure of the work's treble figuration, his tone took on a golden glow, a loveliness and limpidity I do not recall hearing from him before. Further, he played the concerto mostly for its warmth, its deep, burrowing inner warmth, with the very practical result that the piece emerged as far more than the usual series of virtuoso skirmishes.

Here, however, the bounties of the reading came to an abrupt end, since, unless I am horribly mistaken, the concerto as conceived by Mr. Istomin and Mr. Munch is two totally different things. At any rate, there was a glaring lack of rapport between the pianist and his conductor, so much so, indeed, that at times it seemed Mr. Istomin was playing one piece and Mr. Munch quite another. Where Mr. Istomin strove for mellowness and sobriety, Mr. Munch reached for fire and thunderbolts. Where Mr. Istomin bowed to the realization that the was dealing with Beethoven, Mr. Munch whipped up his men into a frenzy of Tchaikovskian enthusiasm.

Thus, as a final consequence, the "Emperor" was neither fish nor fowl, and this imbalance had the further effect of rattling both leading participants to the point that they were not at every instant safely together.

As a matter of fact, the hysteria Mr. Munch introduced into the Concerto he had only a short while before introduced into Beethoven's Seventh Symphony. The work was set forth as though every member of the orchestra were angry at it or at least in some sort of panic concerning the way to get it right. Granted, the symphony is full of excitement and vigor, but Mr. Munch's demands for excessive energy turned the ensemble's sonority raucous and thumpy and mottled. It was, in sum, a frantic, violent reading from which all sense of expressive proportion was banished.

The evening's opening work, Honegger's "Prelude, Fugue and Postlude," on the other hand does not balk at vehemence, and Mr. Munch seized the opportunityto give the amply-scored, ringing number its full-dress of orchestral color. The work itself I do not find of more than passing academic interest, but it was delivered ripely and in high style.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 102,839

AUG 11 1958

Final Concert At Tanglewood Is Masterpiece

By JOHN F. KYES

LENOX — The final concert of the Berkshire Music Festival drew 13,771 to Tanglewood yesterday afternoon. Had ~~rain not~~ threatened, a hazard which became a reality during the playing of the Beethoven Ninth Symphony, it is probable that the attendance record of 15,300 in 1957 would have been exceeded.

All in all, this 1958 Festival conceded nothing to a "recession" year. Attendance at major concerts was held within one per cent of 1957, and "Tanglewood on Parade" and miscelaneous concerts registered substantial increases. The grand total for 1958 is 168,773 (not including student concerts) as against 162,936 in 1957, 140,985 in 1956 and 151,659 in 1955.

'Johannesburg Overture'

Charles Munch offered one appetizer before concentrating on the principal task of the afternoon. The "Johannesburg Festival Overture," composed by Sir William Walton of England for the 70th anniversary of the South African city in 1956, is a spirited piece, requiring continual deftness in the strings and winds, and featuring odd rhythms in a variety of percussion instruments. It seemed strange, however, to be taking an intermission after only a few minutes of music.

In a weekend which had emphasized Beethoven, the performance of the Ninth Symphony was a splendid and fitting climax. Orchestral virtuosity under such leadership and with such an ensemble is of course to be expected but one always waits with interest to see how the soloists and chorus tackle this most formidable of problems.

From the baritone solo through the fervent quartet passages, I found little to cavil at in the work of Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, Blake Stern and Donald Gramm. They projected the necessary volume well without losing richness of tone. If they were giving their last ounce of effort, they managed not to show it.

Praises Chorus

The chorus deserves high credit, and its mentors, Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson, should have only praise for mastering such a stern assignment in a limited time. From my listening-point the chorus developed some moments of great sonority and appealing tone, and many passages in which the German words were muffled and the impact of the music was partially lost. I would doubt, even with the marvelous acoustics of the Tanglewood shell, if 125 singers are enough to project this immense music.

Munch unfolded the symphony with loving care. Its long and well-sustained opening movement flowed like a mighty stream, and borne on it one could float continually into the enjoyment of new vistas and arresting beauties.

The second scherzo-like movement was delightful in its rapid triple rhythms and its varying themes, tossed off with only a few minor casualties in the winds. The composer's sudden full stops and abrupt phrasings also posed one or two hazards.

The slow third movement was a masterpiece of direction and playing, full of repose and tender beauty.

The excitement of the last movement was built up adroitly to the voicing of the Schiller "Ode to Joy." Munch kept the chorus moving alertly with the orchestra, and it was only in some of the final passages that I felt a certain sameness of beat creeping in, to betoken some preoccupation with the problems of dovetailing the various factors in the tremendous climax of the symphony.

BRONXVILLE, N. Y.
Review Press & Reporter
Circ. W. 3,628

C206

AUG 7 1958

at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman

BERL SENOFSKY
BERKSHIRE SOLOIST

OF MUSIC AND DANCE

When the Empire Music Festival in upper New York State curtailed its program of symphonies and experimental dance work it was necessary for devotees of those arts to again turn their full attention to the firmly established BERKSIRE FESTIVAL, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. and to the JACOB'S PILLOW DANCE FESTIVAL at Lee, Mass.

And there they have been having their full-blown respective seasons, which through the years have satisfied the most demanding patrons. In our land which recently has been more conscious of "culture" (we use that word advisedly) due to the contest in the arts between the East and West it is nice to know that the managements of these Festivals have (without state subsidy,) been holding fast to top standards.

* * *

Now the final week-end at Berkshire looms hard upon the famed annual Benefit TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE (Aug. 7th). Starting at 5:45 on Thursday their will be sessions of Orchestrations in the Shed, Compositions in the Chamber Music Hall and Opera in the Theatre—Concert Hall. A lawn party picnic occurs at 7 and a Gala Concert at 8:15.

Nifty goings on, these. And the music has full range and change from serious to pops. They even have Arthur Fiedler's group swinging out the brass in "76 Trombones" from THE MUSIC MAN. Aaron Copland will be one of the soloists, he in his own Piano Concerto. The weekend will be singular. with Charles Munch, Music Director, conducting, followed by Pierre Monteux. Then Dr. Munch winds up the batoning at the final session.

The Daily Times, Mamaroneck, N.Y., Tues., Aug. 5,
The Standard-Star, New Rochelle, N.Y., Tues., Aug. 5,
Herald Statesman, Yonkers, N. Y., Tuesday, Aug. 5, 1958
The Daily Item, Port Chester, N.Y., Tue., August 5,

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 104,590

AUG 10 1958

Music: Pierre Monteux At Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — The second of three final concerts of the Berkshire Music Festival was given last night at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Pierre Monteux with Berl Senofsky as violin soloist. There was an audience of 12,680.

The program; suite from "The Creatures of Prometheus" ballet by Beethoven; Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" concert suite from the ballet, "Saint Francis," Beethoven's overture to "Leonore," No. 3, Opus 72. Senofsky was heard in the Beethoven violin concerto.

Senofsky was the winner of the 1955 Brussels competition. Although he has appeared with many outstanding American orchestras since his United States debut in 1956, this was his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Senofsky is a fine musician. His concept of the Beethoven concerto was highly individual. He made excessive use of rubato, or free rhythm, to which Monteux adjusted the orchestra with fine efficiency.

A Poetic Rendition

There was much poetry in the violinist's playing, giving the concerto an almost romantic atmosphere. He didn't disregard the Beethoven formalities, but one felt that whatever personal aspects he interjected were carefully planned estimates and not results of the moment.

The violinist has a healthy technique, good tone, and gave the concerto highly personal implications.

Monteux gave the Prometheus music fine classic lines. It was an almost Rossini impression in swift-moving string passages, ending in strong cadences. The conductor was admirably explicit in denoting abrupt and decisive changes of dynamics and sharp accents.

The fragile second section (adagio from the original ballet) was fascinating in timbre. All did not go well with soloists, however. Bernard Zighera's harp phrases were beautifully transcribed. So was the tone quality from the flute of Doriot Anthony Dwyer and Samuel Mayes' cello. Two of the phrases were faulty between flute and cello, which wouldn't have been so damaging had they not been so exposed. To performers of such caliber, it comes under the heading of tragedy.

From the Rehearsal

Comments concerning the balance of the program were gathered at the public rehearsal yesterday morning. Listening to their performance last evening was vetoed by our deadline.

The Hindemith score received two rehearsals. The first was a pretty thorough dissection, in which Monteux had many phrases repeated many times. This is not always the case. At the conclusion of the first reading, it was apparent that he was willing to let it be—but repeated at the request of the orchestra.

In the second non-stop performance, the sturdily-cushioned chords of the introduction had a deep-rooted quality. Much logic in style was derived from the care with which the conductor projected melodies and suppressed backgrounds to them.

Changes of meter were so well-defined that they caused no jar in continuity. The introduction's meditative character relaxed into a whimsical rondo, representing the "Marriage with Poverty" portion of the ballet about St. Francis. It isn't jubilant but represents an unwordly cheer with which guests participate in the meager wedding feast.

A fine sturdiness was focused in the March.

A Gleaming Quality

The pastoral made delightfully fragile sounds in strings and woodwinds. There was a gleaming quality in the passacaglia, the variations of which were beautifully dovetailed, notably those of ponderous theme in brasses.

Monteux delineated the Leonore overture in crystal-clear patterns, beginning with the regal melody that is the main theme. Trumpet fanfares were splendidly played by Roger Voisin. Woodwinds excelled in their capricious by-play, and running passages in strings, full-speed, were dashingly played—a fierce test in synchronization.

The overall effect of the Leonore was elan mixed with warmth and expressiveness.

William Walton's Johannesburg Festival Overture, and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony will close the festival this afternoon. Soloists for the Beethoven are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass. The festival chorus and Boston symphony will be conducted by Charles Munch.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 361,379 - S. 576,176

AUG 10 1958

Tanglewood Music Festival Enters Its Final Week End

Eugene Istomin

Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting; soloist, Eugene Istomin, pianist. The program:
Prelude, Fugue and Postlude......Honegger
Symphony No. 7, in A major.....Beethoven
Piano Concerto No. 5, in E flat major ("Emperor") ....Beethoven

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 9.—The first concert in the final week end of the Berkshire Music Festival, given last night at Tanglewood, was, to say the least, an unsettling affair. What gave it this quality was its unevenness, its lack of focus, its want of any interpretative point of view. And nowhere were these failings so clearly detailed as in the closing selection, Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto, featuring Eugene Istomin as the piano soloist and the Boston Symphony Orchestra directed by Charles Munch.

First off, one is obliged to report the following: There were moments throughout the performance which Mr. Istomin has not previously equalled, to my knowledge, during the course of his mature career. During the slow movement especially, and in every measure of the work's treble figuration, his tone took on a golden glow, a loveliness and limpidity I do not recall hearing from him before. Further, he played the concerto mostly for its warmth, its deep, burrowing inner warmth, with the very practical result that the piece emerged as far more than the usual series of virtuoso skirmishes.

Here, however, the bounties of the reading came to an abrupt end, since, unless I am horribly mistaken, the concerto as conceived by Mr. Istomin and Mr. Munch is two totally different things. At any rate, there was a glaring lack of rapport between the pianist and his conductor, so much so, indeed, that at times it seemed Mr. Istomin was playing one piece and Mr. Munch quite another. Where Mr. Istomin strove for mellowness and sobriety, Mr. Munch reached for fire and thunderbolts. Where Mr. Istomin bowed to the realization that the was dealing with Beethoven, Mr. Munch whipped up his men into a frenzy of Tchaikovskian enthusiasm.

Thus, as a final consequence, the "Emperor" was neither fish nor fowl, and this imbalance had the further effect of rattling both leading participants to the point that they were not at every instant safely together.

As a matter of fact, the hysteria Mr. Munch introduced into the Concerto he had only a short while before introduced into Beethoven's Seventh Symphony. The work was set forth as though every member of the orchestra were angry at it or at least in some sort of panic concerning the way to get it right. Granted, the symphony is full of excitement and vigor, but Mr. Munch's demands for excessive energy turned the ensemble's sonority raucous and thumpy and mottled. It was, in sum, a frantic, violent reading from which all sense of expressive proportion was banished.

The evening's opening work, Honegger's "Prelude, Fugue and Postlude," on the other hand does not balk at vehemence, and Mr. Munch seized the opportunityto give the amply-scored, ringing number its full-dress of orchestral color. The work itself I do not find of more than passing academic interest, but it was delivered ripely and in high style.

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,566

AUG 11 1958

Final Tanglewood Concerts

Beethoven Featured On The Programs

By Jules Wolffers

Lenox, Mass.

Beethoven, Charles Munch, Pierre Monteux, fine soloists, and good weather were the loadstones that attracted large audiences to the final weekend of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

One has had frequent cause to admire Dr. Munch's way with Beethoven, but his interpretation of the Seventh Symphony for Friday evening's concert showed that there are no limits to excellence. The conductor has sometimes been charged with unorthodoxy in his Beethoven interpretations, and this is true to the extent that he often does leave the traditional treatment that the years have imposed on the German composer.

But what can be more compelling than to see novel vistas of old, well-loved scenes? What can be more charming than to come on new beauties hidden away in familiar terrain?

Safe in the knowledge that nearly all of his hearers know the contours of the work, Dr. Munch concentrated on inner voices and on sharp, percussive punctuation effects by the brass. Yet the over-all shape of the masterpiece was enhanced rather than distorted, and the conductor's flexible rhythms added urgency to the climaxes and repose to the quieter sections. Thus he brought about one of the most stirring Sevenths in the memory of this reviewer, an opinion apparently shared by the audience.

* * *

If the hearers' reaction to Honegger's Prelude, Fugue and Postlude was somewhat more restrained, this must be laid more to the unfamiliarity of the music rather than to any accurate judgment of its worth and performance. The work has logic, good construction, interesting contrasts, and stimulating timbres. There is a beautiful passage for saxophone which deserves to be cited in all text books on orchestration as an example of the effectiveness of this instrument when properly used.

The after-intermission piece was the "Emperor" Concerto, Beethoven's fifth, final, and greatest essay in the piano concerto form. Eugene Istomin was a refined and musicianly soloist in a work which, however, calls rather more for bigness and grandeur of style.

Soloists in the Shed's vast reaches must understand that a certain exaggeration of tone and effect is needed if the proper balance between orchestra and instrument is to be maintained. Nor does the "Emperor" lend itself too readily to sudden accelerating impulses, particularly if these have the effect of catching conductor and players by surprise. But there was much of beauty and understanding in the interpretation, and it found high favor with the audience.

Pierre Monteux forms a link for present-day audiences with the past generation of conductors, and his frequent appearances with the Boston Symphony Orchestra find him unfailingly greeted with that mingling of respect and affection occasioned by his long, distinguished career and by his genial personality.

A near all-Beethoven list usually includes a symphony, but Mr. Monteux instead presented the Violin Concerto; the Overture with an excerpt from the ballet, "The Creatures of Prometheus"; and the Overture to "Leonore," No. 3, here placed at the end rather than in its customary beginning position. For 20th-century contrast the conductor included Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione," a concert suite from the ballet, "Saint Francis."

* * *

Chief interest in the program was attached to the appearance of Berl Senofsky as soloist in the concerto. American - born and American - trained, the violinist has achieved high reputation on both sides of the Atlantic. His platform manner is quiet, undemonstrative, and assured, just as his violinism is skilled, impeccable, and controlled.

Mr. Senofsky does not bid for easy excitement or dazzling virtuosity. His interpretation stressed the innermost qualities of the concerto with a restrained style that verged on deliberate understatement.

This was a thought-provoking performance — aristocratic, serene, judicious, and noble. The conductor more than met the soloist halfway in this approach, which perhaps was a mistake as more animation from the orchestra would have provided just the contrast to avoid any hint of over-sobriety.

As has become a Tanglewood custom, Dr. Munch returned Sunday afternoon to bring the Festival to a close with Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. The Festival Chorus was prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson. Soloists were Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass.

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE

MONDAY, AUGUST 11, 1958 GAZETTE PHONE FR 4-4141

Berkshire Series Ends With Beethoven

By D. E. RITZ
Gazette Music Editor

A program of Beethoven and Hindemith under the baton of Pierre Monteux and with Berl Senofsky as soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto concluded the Saturday evening programs in the Tanglewood Berkshire Festival series of this year.

* * *

PRESENTED in the huge Shed on the grounds near Lenox, Mass., it drew an audience that filled the Shed, overflowed to the grounds and taxed the parking spaces of the area.

The high point of the program for this reviewer was a re-hearing of Senofsky in the violin concerto, which he played in Schenectady last fall with the Schenectady Symphony under Anthony Stefan.

With Senofsky, a brilliant performer and an artist in every bow stroke, the Beethoven glowed, shimmered and held the huge audience spellbound. The orchestra was superb under Monteux and the liquid trills of the performer and the tracery of the solo melodic line were a joy; while the cadenzas left one completely speechless.

* * *

AN AMAZING ovation, even for Tanglewood, followed both the first movement and the finale. Throughout, Senofsky remained the same calm and pleasant mannered young man that he was with the local orchestra.

The relative merits of performance of Senofsky and Zino Francescatti were the subject of a vigorous sectional audience commentary heard by the reviewer.

Being one of those people who hears each performer as an individual artist we will not enter in.

* * *

MONTEUX HAD chosen two highly contrasting concert suites from ballets by Beethoven and Hindemith for the opening numbers of the two sections of the program.

Both were new to us and both of extreme interest. Soloists Samuel Mayes, cello; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; and Bernard Zighera, harp, were featured in the Beethoven. The Hindemith is written with a strange but compelling beauty and we were fascinated.

The program concluded with a spirited performance of the "Overture to Lenore number 3" and an ovation for Monteux.

* * *

MONTEUX, who shared bows with the orchestra, particularly following the Hindemith, is a most unusual conductor in many ways. With an apparently effortless technique he accomplishes the most amazing results and holds the deep affection of the men of the orchestra.

The Berkshire festival series closed with a program yesterday afternoon including William Walton's "Johannesburg Festival Overture" and the Beethoven "Choral Symphony." Charles Munch conducted.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 118,644

AUG 11 1958

Monteux Conducts Boston In Final Saturday Concert

By GEORGE W. STOWE

Lenox, Mass. — By a happy coincidence the atmospheric conditions were perfect and the playing of the Boston Symphony under Pierre Monteux was on the most exalted level for the final Saturday night concert at Tanglewood.

The octogenarian conductor, looking as ageless and inscrutable as ever, remains a paragon of musical virtues. Despite an economy of gesture that might be mistaken for indifference, he invariably inspires a performance of glowing intensity—and this was particularly true of the Beethoven program Saturday night.

In a departure from tradition he gave us more than the usual sampling of Beethoven's "Prometheus" music. Those who know only the overture were treated to a bonus—the Adagio, which featured Samuel Mayes' cello, Doriot Anthony Dwyer's flute and Bernard Zighera's harp. This unfamiliar excerpt from the ballet score had something of Schubertian lyricism about it and was exquisitely performed.

* * *

ONCE AGAIN the Beethoven Violin Concerto was on the musical agenda — but seldom has it received a more rewarding, a more beautifully controlled performance. Berl Senofsky was the soloist, a violinist in complete command of the technical and interpretative resources of his instrument.

Mr. Senofsky was the winner of the Brussels Violin Competition in 1955, the equivalent of the Tchaikowsky Piano Competition which Van Cliburn won. Yet this superb violinist has received nothing like the acclaim accorded Van Cliburn.

There is something of Francescatti's warmth to his playing and one was always conscious that musical values are much more important to him than technical bravura. He did not give the impression that he had technique to burn but in the cadenzas it was immediately apparent that there were no insurmountable problems for him.

For the sake of variety Mr. Monteux conducted the concert suite from Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione", which has had only an indifferent success as a ballet score. It is a little difficult to understand from these excerpts, for they have both a strong metre and undeniable melodism. The ballet itself deals with the life of St. Francis.

* * *

ROSSINI WROTE one overture for four operas but the conscience of Beethoven did not rest until he had written four overtures to his "Fidelio". And Saturday night Monteux gave us the Leonore No. 3, which Wagner once called a music drama in itself.

In the majestic and unhurried performance under the French conductor this music achieved a momentous strength, rose to a Parnassian height, and glowed with an inner fire that beggared description. This was Monteux' finest moment, and one of the finest in any season.

The audience Saturday night was officially listed at 12,680.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D. 633,106 S. 1,291,134

AUG 11 1958

Music: Lenox Finale

Beethoven's Ninth Is Traditional Feature

By HAROLD C. SCHONBERG
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 10 — The twenty-first season of the Berkshire Music Festival ended this afternoon in rain with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Rain or not, an audience of 13,773 attended. The significance of that figure was the boost it gave toward establishing a high for the entire season. According to the official count, the six weeks of the season drew a total of 168,773.

●

It would appear that Beethoven's Ninth is beginning to be a tradition here. It closed the 1955 season and also was the concluding work last summer. It was one of two works on today's program, the other being Sir William Walton's "Johannesburg Festival" Overture.

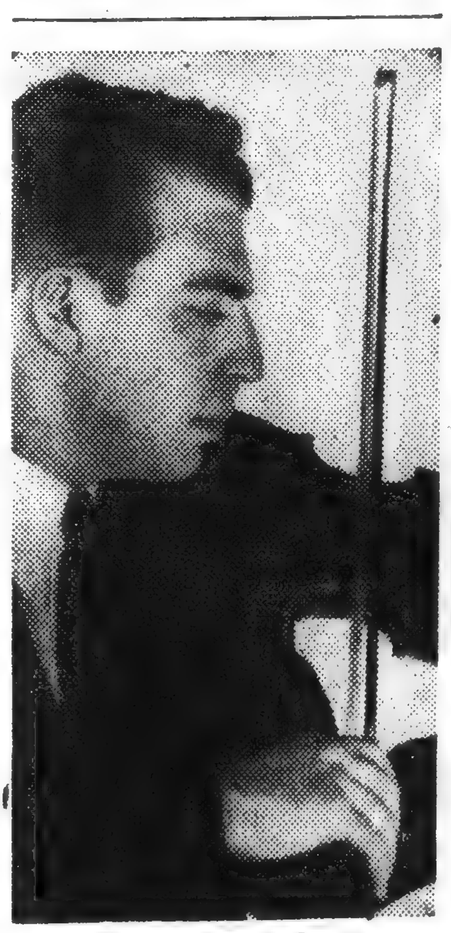
The juxtaposition of the Walton against the Ninth was unfortunate, and it was reflective of the thoughtless and even cynical programs that in recent years have marred the festival. The "Johannesburg Festival" Overture is a pleasant but essentially frivolous pièce d'occasion. It has as much business being placed next to the Ninth as a Maxfield Parrish has against a Cimabue crucifixion.

Previously this year the Festival Chorus, which took part in the presentation of the Ninth, had sung several wonderful, and short, choral pieces by Mozart. Why not have included one of those as a preface to the Ninth?

●

Several familiar soloists were heard this afternoon. They were Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. They sang with the Festival Chorus, and sang very well, their clear voices taking on the cruel tessitura with no apparent strain. Charles Munch conducted the symphony as he has in the past—with considerable speed, omitting all repeats in the second movement, and whipping up to a loud conclusion.

Last evening's concert was directed by Pierre Monteux, and the soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto was Berl Senofsky. This violinist, who has not been too active on the New York scene, was the winner in 1955 of the Queen Elisabeth of Belgium International Competition.



Berl Senofsky

One could see that Mr. Senofsky was determined to avoid a flashy reading of the Beethoven. He played in a thoughtful, lyric manner, with a beautiful tone, quite slow tempos and some exquisite pianissimo bowings. In the Kreisler cadenzas he showed considerable virtuosity, suggesting that he could take on anything in the repertory.

But there were some flaws in his equipment. In higher positions, his intonation was insecure, and his vibrato sometimes sounded excessive. His basic musical conception could not be disputed. One did hope, however, for just a shade more temperament.

Mr. Monteux also led the Boston Symphony in the overture and one other movement from Beethoven's "Creatures of Prometheus," the same composer's "Leonore" Overture No. 3 and Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione."

●

He and the orchestra were in grand form. Mr. Monteux conducts without any surplus motion these days, and his music emerges without excess fat or trimmings of any kind. Everything he directed was an enthralling musical experience. If there was a high spot, it was the beautifully organized Hindemith suite, which the Boston Symphony played with unlimited color and virtuosity.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 57,006

AUG 11 1958

Music: Beethoven Ninth Closes Festival

By RAYMOND MORIN

Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — A massive, at the ame time eloquent performance of Beethoven's Symphony No. 9 n D Minor closed the 21st Berkshire music festival yesterday fternoon at Tanglewood.

Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Soloists were Adele Addison, Soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass. The mixed chorus of 130 voices (students at the Berkshire Music Center) were prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson.

Following the policy of includng contemporary music on almost all programs, Munch conducted the orchestra in William Walton's "Johannesburg Festival Overture," premiered in 1956.

There was audience of 13,771, naking a total of 34,804 for the Beethoven weekend and 168,773 or the six weeks beginning July nd.

An Intriguing Opener

While it was absolutely no rapport with the Beethoven Ninth, Walton's "Johannesburg" overure was an intriguing concert pener yesterday afternoon. It noves along at track speed, vithout relenting, sporting virtual all the appurtenances of the ercussion section including marcas and rumba sticks. In fact, uses everything but the proerbial kitchen sink with shades Prokofievd and Honegger added or good measure.

It was good fun, with Munch ot whipping up climaxes but leadg the orchestra into them.

The Beethoven Ninth received n ovation.

From its gently bucolic start the thunderous passages of the Ode to Joy" for chorus, orchesa and soloists, it was tremendus performance. The impressiveess began with the dictatorial, sistent chords of the first movenent. To this was added ironad accents and perpetual drive. The scherzo raced full-steam. e doubt if it can humanly be ayed faster.

"Beyond Logic"

rchestral virtuosity, a trifle be- This was an open effort at ond logic. The trio in wind inruments was a marvel of veocity, if not totally accurate in rasses.

In the slow movement, Munch laced great emphasis on beauty f tone and elasticity of phrase. hat could have resulted in lapes of continuity did not, even in he veiled woodwind solos with lucked string backgrounds.

The opening, rebellious phrases f the finale had tremendous impact, marred only by a premaure entrance by a single cello hat couldn't have escaped notice.

The initial appearance of the "Ode" theme was richly intoned in cellos and magnificently amplified by the remaining strings.

Chorus and soloists gave fullest participation. One young lady, in particular, sang as if her life depended on it. She practically exploded with the excitement.

The voices of the soloists were not a perfect blend, although each sounded well by itself. Miss Addison had a particularly beautiful quality in her high notes — as Gramm had in his low range. Tenor Stern was a bit bombastic in his approach but vocally rewarding.

Some Random Thoughts

Now, some random thoughts about the total festival. . .

Except for Debussy and Ravel, which are now considered modern from technical aspects only, 10 contemporary works have been played in the last four weeks.

The composers were Copeland, Stravinsky, Milhaud, Vaughan Williams Honegger, Hindemith, Bernstein and Walton. We are also exclusing delightful trivia played by the Boston Pops at last Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade."

These works received mixed receptions. All audiences were at least politely responsive, in all cases.

It is important, even necessary that contemporary music be heard at Tanglewwod. Also, the planning is shrewd in coupling debatable, untried works with "sure-fire" music of now-great composers.

There were three errors in judgment. Copeland's presence on the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center did not justify the performancs of his "Variations for Orchestra" or his piano concerto, even with his distinguished participation at the solo instrument.

It is earnestly hoped that future festivals will give Copeland's music a well-earned and welcome rest and replace them with products of equally, if not more gifted composers.

The other error was the repetition of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum", which didn't mitigate the offensive impression it made last season on a good segment of the listeners.

In the majority, the choices of soloists were most fortunate.

Pianists ranged from the efficient but uneventful playing of Liszi's E Flat concerto by Leonard Pennario to a Bravura Rachmanioff Third Piano Concerto by Byron Janis.

Margaret Harshaw, Soprano, made a good impression during the week of Wagner. She is reported to have complained that the orchestra "drowned her out" -and there is no debate her personal demeanor had little warmth. Last year it was the Berlioz weekend that brought comparatively light attendance. This time it was Wagner. Most festivals have barren spots, no matter what is offered. That may be the explanation.

This festival has seen five conductors at work. Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin and Arthur Fiedler had small roles. Charles Munch conducted the most concerts. Whatever one may think of his interpretations- his enthusiasm, clear thought, and decisive podium style distinguished every score that he undertook.

We confess to a prejudice on behalf of Pierre Monteux, as a personality. But this need not cloud the fact that his musical concepts are inundated in wisdom and he achieves the most results with the minimum visual effort.

It has been a great festival, inspite of subjects of controversy without which little of lasting values is achieved in music.

4—The Berkshire Eagle, Monday, Aug. 11, 1958

Music Review

Finale at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE BERKSHIRE Festival closed its 1958 season yesterday afternoon with a performance of the Beethoven Ninth Symphony by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch which attracted an audience of 13,771. On Saturday, the preceding evening, an audience of 12,680 heard a program, again predominantly Beethoven, directed by Pierre Monteux. The two audiences totaled more than any other two consecutive concerts ever held at Tanglewood.

This is the third time in the last four years that Munch has directed the Ninth as the closing work of a Tanglewood festival, and there is no apparent reason, given all the attributes which contributed to yesterday's performance, why the custom should not be observed every year.

* * *

MUNCH HAD begun his program with a short, light overture by William Walton, the contemporary Englishman, entitled a "Johannesburg Festival Overture," a work commissioned as part of a festival celebrating the 70th anniversary of that city, and which for its pleasant and joyous spirit might as well be "an overture to drink champagne to."

Even when audiences are small, there are always a certain number who arrive late. When audiences are larger and traffic consequently heavier, the number of late arrivals increases as the delays magnify. It thus becomes necessary either to schedule a short preliminary work after which late-comers can be seated, or, in the case of a larger work, to halt at the end of the first movement to permit the ushers to seat those who have been late in arriving at the barriers for any of a number of reasons. This can be very disturbing to the mood of the music as occurred several times during this festival. The Walton served its purposes well yesterday afternoon so that the Beethoven final symphony could proceed uninterrupted and without distractions.

* * *

MUNCH CAUGHT the breadth of conception of this massive symphony and held the orchestra and the Festival chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson, in control with ease and poise. The soloists were Adele Addison, soprano, Florence Kopleff, contralto, Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. It is to the latter that the dramatic proclamation falls as the voices are added in the last movement. Gramm was eminently suited for his grateful opportunity as were the others for their smaller tasks.

The heroic proportions of this great canvas were kept in view while the details were developed. Munch let his audience see how Beethoven wove and expanded his thematic material, and showed that it was not repetition by any means which gives this symphony its more than usual length. This symphony employed not only the full maturity of Beethoven's genius, but showed the steady widening of his spiritual horizon. His vision embraced a scope far beyond that of any other musical seer. The task Munch achieved yesterday was to convey that grandeur graphically to the audience.

* * *

IT WAS evidently Beethoven's original intention to make this ninth, as all the preceding symphonies, entirely orchestral, but at some time in the process he was impelled to carry out a project he had long cherished: To set Schiller's "Ode to Joy" to music. In this symphony he uses only parts, and it was sung yesterday in an English translation.

Berl Serofsky

Beethoven was not especially considerate of voices here. He makes demands to make them fit into the colossal scope of his imposing structure. Their response was fitting to the occasion, and they watched the conductor with undiverted attention, reflecting his slightest request.

* * *

SATURDAY NIGHT Pierre Monteux completed his share of his Tanglewood assignment when he conducted the orchestra in Beethoven's Overture No. 3 to "Leonore," the overture and one of the incidental 'excerpts from the same composer's "Prometheus," Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" and the accompaniment to the Beethoven concerto with the young American violinist Berl Senofsky as soloist.

Hindemith's music is extracted from a longer suite he wrote for ballet and of which he made the significant statement himself to the effect that "this suite consists of those sections of the ballet score which are self-sufficient and comprehensible as concert music and which do not depend on supplementary stage action." This reveals the composer as a man of more than ordinary comprehension himself and points up the unreasonable expectation of so many others who use music intended for stage purposes without the added explanatory element of choreography.

* * *

HINDEMITH'S talents include one which is not always so conspicuous in other contemporaries. He writes with a sense of the instruments. For instance, he gives a lovely contrapuntal weaving to the strings at the beginning of the introduction, with the violins playing solely on the G string. He refrains from complicating this situation and only writes additionally for clarinets here, thus avoiding the overshadowing of one section by the other. His cognizance of this factor is again emphasized in the March and Pastorale. In the Passacaglia he lets the brass proclaim the opening statement alone until the violins state a fugal sentence by which time the powerful winds have subsided and thus the bassoons and celli, and, in turn, the oboes and violas, are easily able to make their views heard without effort. It must be stated that Monteux was meticulous in his attention to these tonal balances and doubled the inherent lucidity of the work.

* * *

THE MAJOR work of the evening was the violin concerto and the first appearance at Tanglewood of the winner of the 1955 Queen Elisabeth violin competition in Brussels. Senofsky had played in Pittsfield when, as a very young man, he had been assistant concertmaster of the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra. He retired from the orchestra to devote himself to solo work, and the succeeding steps of his career have been almost as spectacular as those of the winner of the recent Russian contest.

The deepest impression Senofsky made was his sensitivity. His playing of those passages which permitted him to express his very deeply-felt emotions pulled at one's heart-strings, and yet his playing was extremely classical and unsentimental. The difficulties of the concerto were as nothing in his easy command of the instrument and the Kreisler cadenzas were played with as rich and full tone as he produced in every part of his instrument. The warmth and clarity and strength of his tone did not even diminish in the highest reaches of the fingerboard, and his avoidance of slides and other devices was both effective and exemplary.

* * *

IN THE FINAL movement his intonation was not as reliable as it had been in the preceding two movements. The tempo lacked a little excitement and was a fraction of a letdown from the level he had established in the major parts of the concerto. It was highly intelligent playing, however, and the orchestra under Monteux gave him an accompaniment which reached the same high level.

The coming crop of piano soloists is exceptionally abundant, as evidenced by the brilliant selection heard this season in this festival. The number of violinists is much more restricted and Senofsky stands out as a major and potential aspirant for the select circle of stars. He has all the equipment fingers can provide. He has a bursting heart as proven in so many instances in the first two movements of the concerto he played. He has excellent taste. The final hurdles are small, but in the top altitudes the air is rarer and one's capacity to exert oneself becomes weaker. The difference between command and poise and full, mature mastery is a very fine line. Senofsky has that short distance still to go.. The element which separates confidence from authority is intangible, but once possessed it can be discerned at once.

* * *

FESTIVALS of music cannot be measured by figures as in big league baseball where a percentage of .655 is the speed of champions. Thus while there are spectacular days, there are also days when the box score is not so imposing. This festival has provided a full share of outstanding events, and in the matter of programs there has been a reasonable injection of new material, a justifiable revival of older and neglected ones and not too great a serving of the tried-and-true but more familiar works. Let's recognize a difficult job well done.

[209]

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 53,178

AUG 11 1958

Summer Circuit

Tanglewood Hails Senofsky Technique

A warm full-toned rendition of the Beethoven violin concerto was among several outstanding features at Tanglewood over the weekend as the Berkshire Music Festival ended its 21st season.

Performing the concerto with the Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturday night was Berl Senofsky. He drew a standing ovation after demonstrating a brilliant and phenominally accurate technique with warm tone and thorough understanding of the work.

The weekend's programs included many familiar Beethoven works, and concluded the season with the composer's Ninth Symphony. Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, occupied the podium Friday night and yesterday afternoon, while Pierre Monteux conducted Saturday night.

★ ★ ★

THE COLORFUL Mr. Monteux, with a half century or more of conducting behind him, is always a delight to watch. Pudgy, and standing only about five feet tall, with huge walrus mustache and red hair, he has been described as a Frernch version of President William Howard Taft.

He is not an arm waver, nor does he stab mosquitoes with the end of his baton. Rarely do his arms rise above his shoulders as he conducts.

Yet he brought to Friday night's concert understanding and love to the familiar Beethoven music. It was as though he were merely reassuring the musicians. Through the maze of difficult Beethoven phrasings, his baton led with surety and conviction.

★ ★ ★

SATURDAY NIGHT'S concert opened with two selections from the Beethoven ballet suite "Die Gaschopfe des Prometheus," in which solo anad small ensemble passages for cello, flute, bassoon, and harp appear. In these ensembles, the performers seemed a bit unsure about cues, as though perhaps one more rehearsal was needed for precision.

The violin concerto concluded the first half. A noisy audience delayed the start of the second movement for several minutes, while Mr. Senofsky and Mr. Monteux waited impatiently. But the same audience stood without hesitation to applaud Mr. Senofsky's breathtaking tempo, deadly accuracy, and sprightly feeling in the finale.

The Hindemith concert suite "Nobilissima Visione" opened the second half of the concert. First performed in 1937, the work displays the uncertainty of tonality for which Hindemith is known. But its movements are colorful, and gave the huge orchestra a good workout, especially in the final movement, titled "Passacaglia."

Concluding the concert was the familiar Overture to "Leonore" No. 3, of Beethoven. The orchestra's strings zipped through the rapid ascending and descending passages with ease, and Mr. Monteux' clear clear phrasing gave the work its full power. (The off-stage trumpet calls were played from behind a partition at the left of the stage.)

★ ★ ★

OTHER BEETHOVEN works on the weekend's programs included the Seventh Symphony and "Emperor" Concerto with Eugene Istomin as soloist on Friday night. The Honneger Prelude, Fugue and Postlude opened Friday's program, and the Walton "Johannesburg Festival Overture" was performed yesterday.

Their year now concluded, musicians of the Boston orchestra are taking a brief vacation before beginning rehearsals for the Symphony Hall series of concerts Oct. 3 and a road tour as far west as Michigan and as far south as Washington during the winter —WRE.

Tanglewood Season Ends With Record

8-11-58
Waterbury "American

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 11—The 21st season of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival at Tanglewood ended yesterday with the performance of Beethoven's "Symphony No. 9, in D Minor" before an audience of 13,771 for a record - breaking total festival attendance of 168,773 during the six weeks.

Charles Munch led the orchestra and festival chorus with soloists in such a splendid performance that not even the light drizzle which began just as the baritone recitative started could dampen the ardor and "bravos" which brought this season to its glorious end.

The singing lyricism of the adagio molto e cantible third movement was so haunting in its beauty that one felt like exclaiming "Thank You, God, for this beauty." It was a memorable performance by Boston Symphony Orchestra, festival chorus, and soloists of what has come to be the traditional close to the Berkshire Festival season.

The elements threatened throughout the afternoon first with showers, then clearing and finally just as the soloists and chorus began to sing the drizzle came and people raised their umbrellas for the final minutes. None was in a hurry to go. The audience stayed and applauded, trying to savour these precious minutes and memories of the performance and of the season. Munch had set them off to a good start with the dancing tunes and musical jests of Walton's "Johannesburg Festival Overture" in which the percussion instruments had a field day

Four Soloists

Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson prepared the Festival Chorus which did an admirable piece of singing and the soloists were Adele Addison, soprano Florence Kopleff, contralto, Blake Stern, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass. Miss Addison and Gramm were outstanding in their singing of the difficult roles of Shiller's "Ode to Joy."

The Berkshire season just concluded which saw the Tanglewood Festival reach its majority brought an unusual number of young soloists. There were young pianists and violinists and some of them are sure to be heard throughout the nation. This is not the place for a resume of the season but it was an unusual one in many ways adding much to the glory long since attained by the Boston Symphony and its conductors and the soloists who have appeared as guests with it.

Monteux Conducts

Pierre Monteux conducted the orchestra Saturday night in another of the fine concerts he has led this summer. Berl Senofsky, young violinist appeared in the Beethoven "Violin Concerto in D. Major" and followed in the tradition set this season by the many other young musicians who had preceded him. Beethoven's "Overture to Leonore No. 3" concluded the fine concert heard by 12.680. Hindemith's Concert Suite from the Ballet, "Saint Francis" afforded variety.

Charles Munch led the orchestra on Friday night in Beethoven's "Symphony No. 7, in A Major" and in a fine performance of his "Concerto for Pianoforte, No. 5, in E-flat Major," with the young pianist Eugene Istomin appearing in the "Emperor." There were 8.353 in the audience and on Saturday morning at the open rehearsal 4,625 paid admission for the benefit of the Musicians' pension fund.

S.M.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 204,395

AUG 11 1958

MONDAY, AUG. 11, 1958

All-Beethoven Weekend Concludes Berkshire Festival

By ELINOR HUGHES

The answer to those who wondered how the Berkshire Festival would fare with an all-Beethoven week-end to conclude the sixth and final week of its 21st season, can be found in the excellent attendance at the three final concerts, despite weather that except for Saturday night was uncertain, coy and given to sudden showers. Friday night's attendance was 8353, this on top of a heavy thunderstorm; the Saturday morning rehearsal (a benefit for the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund) drew 4625, the Saturday night crowd came to 12,680 and the crowd at the Sunday afternoon program was estimated at 10,000 but might easily have been more.

Beethoven, it would seem, is still boffo, or in non-Variety English, good box-office.

Pierre Monteux conducted the Saturday night program which featured three Beethoven works: the Suite from "Die Geschopfe des Prometheus," a ballet; the Violin Concerto in D Major, with Berl Sanofsky as soloist; and the "Leonore Overture No. 3, with Hindemith's "Noblissima Visione" Concert Suite from the ballet, "Saint Francis," completing the bill.

The piece de resistance was, naturally, the violin concerto, which was received with great acclaim for the soloist—who received a standing ovation—and for the musicians. For some reason, the first movement of the work was taken at a very leisurely pace, but the slow tempo proved, without any doubt, that young Mr. Sanofsky is a careful well schooled musician, desirous of proving his musicianship without pyrotechnics. His performance of the Kreisler cadenza was outstanding, and his platform manners were impeccable. The audience responded warmly to the beauty of his tone and his obvious attempt to let the great music speak through him, rather than the other way round.

Mr. Monteux and the orchestra were especially happy with two selections from the "Prometheus" ballet suite, and the solo work of Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Samuel Mayes and Bernard Zighera was enchanting Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione," a concert suite arranged from that lovely and seldom seen ballet, "Saint Francis," was beautifully performed, and to the "Leonore" No. 3, conductor and musicians brought a freshness of spirit that was invigorating.

For the final concert yesterday day afternoon, Charles Munch conducted Beethoven's Symphony No. 9, with Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, Blake Stern and Donald Gramm as soloists, and the Festival Chorus. This was preceded by a spirited performance of William Walton's spirited Johannesburg Festival Overture, which makes striking use of percussive effects to suggest the native rhythms of Africa.

Either you think the Symphony No. 9 is Beethoven's greatest work or you find it too long and cannot understand why the choral finale. I don't think it's simply that I incline to the former persuasian that made me feel that this was an unusually fine traversal of this massive work. Mr. Munch conducted with loving care and authority, the musicians outdid themselves with their tonal qualities, and the chorus of 120 youthful voices sounded as fresh and joyful as Schiller and Beethoven could have wished. The soloists were all admirable in their exacting and ungrateful assignments, and it is undoubtedly captious to express the wish that it would be nice if the "Ode to Joy" could be sung in English —it was so sung, no longer ago than Koussevitsky's era, and, captious or not, I like it that way.

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 411, 971

AUG 11 1958

Tanglewood Season Ends

LENOX—The curtain fell on the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 21st season of Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon with an attendance of 13,771. The season's record-breaking attendance was 168,773.

Last year attended 162,936.

Ticket sales for this season's festival totalled $376,117.50 compared to $366,943 last year.

Dr. Charles Munch, musical director and conductor of the symphony, left for Paris, France. He will remain there until the Symphony resumes its Symphony Hall program in October.

[210]

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 361,379 - S. 576,176

AUG 11 1958

Beethoven's 9th Symphony Ends Tanglewood Festival

Donald Gramm

Saturday night: Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducting; soloist, Berl Senofsky, violinist. The program:
Music from "Prometheus" ...... Beethoven
Violin Concerto in D major..... Beethoven
Nobilissima Visione .... Hindemith
Overture to "Leonore" No. 3....Beethoven
Sunday afternoon: Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. The program:
Johannesburg Festival Overture....Walton
Symphony No. 9 in D minor....Beethoven
Berkshire Festival Chorus. Soloists, Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 10.—The twenty-first season of the Berkshire Festival, which during its six weeks' run broke all previous attendance records by playing to more than 168,000, came to an end this afternoon at Tanglewood as Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Festival Chorus in a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

The work, which certainly was not designed for the purpose, has taken its place, through tradition, as the perfect valedictory piece; and in this instance, as before, it served to send the audience home with their ears ringing and their spirits nourished.

Mr. Munch sees the symphony as a big, booming vehicle for his men. Fine. Their slashing attacks, quick articulation and tornadoes of tone are all warranted by the score; and if, as it happens, the conductor chooses to sacrifice detail for momentum, clarity for power, that is certainly his business and no one else's.

What you will not find in Mr. Munch's rendition, however, is more than modicum of the work's brooding and introspection. Having accepted the conditions that the Ninth is meant for barnstorming, he barnstorms. The brasses roar, the strings make swirls of sound, the woodwinds cackle. And the tympani, which in Beethoven are normally a means for diverse punctuation, are used by Mr. Munch only as an exclamation point. That is the maestro's way; there may be other and better ones; there are none nearly as energetic.

But this is not news. Mr. Munch's Beethoven habits have been dwelt on before — and at length. Yesterday there was no change to his attitude. He wished to make the Ninth shout a great shout, and it did. Since no outcry can be shaded with supreme refinement, it is no wonder that the performance was rather a study in vigor than an essay in the kind of drama that is built on dynamic tensions and textural contrasts.

The symphony, whose admirable quartet of soloists included Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, Blake Stern and Donald Gramm, was preceded by William Walton's "Johannesburg Festival Overture," a bit of British orchestral hokus-pocus based on sham French models. It is all very lively and rollicking, but its ultimate significance as music is scarcely more than minimal.

Last night's concert, conducted by Pierre Monteux, was to these ears the happiest event of the week end. Played before an audience of more than 12,000, the largest of the season, the concert included Beethoven's Violin Concerto, with Berl Senofsky as soloist, the same composer's "Leonore Overture No. 3" and excerpts from the ballet, "The Creatures of Prometheus," and Paul Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione." It was all mightily cheered, and the demonstrations had their roots in sound judgment.

Mr. Senofsky, who in 1955 took first prize in the Queen Elizabeth of Belgium International Music Competition and who has since then not received nearly the acclaim he deserves, is a really fine violinist. He may not be—and was not on this occasion—a demon-driven virtuoso or a high-powered prophet of bravura, but he makes music with great agility and that quality which, for want of a better name, is simply called "heat." As he played the Beethoven, there was no rush to him, no harassment, no monkey shines; it was all sturdy and sane and affecting.

Technically, too, despite a flicker or so of intonation trouble, his work was palpably expert and his tone, especially on the "G" and "D" strings, was of a high color and a deep luminosity. There was, as I have indicated, no exceptional intensity to his reading, nor did it give reflection of an overwhelming musical personality, but for all that Mr. Senofsky offered us first-class Beethoven and much fine-grained fiddling. It was a pleasure to hear him.

And an equivalent pleasure as well was Mr. Monteux's beautifully molded accompaniment to the concerto. By keeping his left hand up throughout most of the performance, rather in the manner of a police officer halting traffic, he held the orchestra's sonority to a minimum, thereby allowing Mr. Senofsky to be heard at all times without making it necessary for him to sacrifice the loveliness of his tone through enlarging it. Nor was Mr. Monteux's habitual mastery less noticeable in the pallid "Prometheus" ballet or the "Leonore" Overture. The latter, for all its repetitions, remains one of the chief rousers in the repertoire and the conductor, quite frankly, gave it the works. The results were stunning.

Paul Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" is not frequently performed, which is a loss, as the piece, based on a ballet concerning St. Francis, is vintage Hindemith. As opposed to many works by the composer, it is nowhere dr. or sapless; touching it is and full of thematic juice. There are, I think, episodes in it that rank with works and, given a performance works and given a performance as noble and hale as that provided by Mr. Monteux, the piece glows with a wondrous inner light.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,541

AUG 11 1958

ATTENDANCE UP AS TANGLEWOOD SEASON CLOSES

Festival Has 168,773 Visitors; Beethoven's Ninth Presented

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX — I know of no place where the brotherhood of man is more fully exemplified than at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood where thousands of people gather each year to hear great music played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Therefore it seemed eminently appropriate that conductor Charles Munch chose to close this 21st Berkshire Festival Sunday with Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony" with its triumphant ode to joy.

Increase in Visitors

The total number of visitors to this 1958 festival was approximately 168,773. Last year's total was 162,936. In addition 41 student and other concerts opened to the friends of the Berkshire Music Center were attended by 25,235 persons. Total ticket sales this season amounted to $376,117.50. In 1957 sales amounted to $366,943 and in 1956 to $297,956.

The "Ninth Symphony" was sung by the Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson, and four soloists, Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass. Four fine voices and four fine musicians.

It was one of the finest performances we have heard under Charles Munch's direction. True, the final movement was a bit on the hysterical side and we hope never again to hear it taken so ship grants [illegible] sales, thus making a total for the season of $28,847.50. Approximately $14,000 of this amount is matched by a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund.

See ATTENDANCE UP
Page Two

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 95,535

AUG 12 1958

Culture Report

The report that there has been a noticeable drop in the handle at some race tracks, and the simultaneous report that the Berkshire Festival again increased its ticket sale, will be subjected to varying interpretations.

Those interested in the cultural pursuits are certain to hail the news that, while other forms of entertainment are having trouble in attracting an audience, the Boston Symphony Orchestra is drawing 168,773 visitors to Tanglewood in Lenox. These visitors paid $376,117.50 for tickets, an increase of about $10,000 over last year's total. Last week, all records were shattered when 14,588 people paid $35,190.50 to attend Tanglewood-on-Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center. Last year, attendance was 12,493 and the ticket sale was $32,414.

Those who take a more mundane view of the world will note that the recession is reflected at the betting windows, but that those who want to sit in the shed or lawn at Tanglewood and listen to symphonies are ready to pay out more than a third of a million dollars to do it. Those who are concerned largely with the tax picture will point out that the state loses when legitimate, at-the-track betting declines. Massachusetts gets a percentage of the handle at a race track. It is the federal government which stands to gain when admission ticket sales increase.

However, those who take a broader view may see it as a wholesome sign that Tanglewood is not feeling the pinch of the mild recession which is having some effect at the race tracks. Perhaps, this is the beginning of a trend. It may be that the Springfield Symphony will soon be filling the Auditorium, whereas the wrestlers will grunt and groan before empty seats.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,937

AUG 12 1958

Munch And Boston Symphony Thrilling In Tanglewood Finale

A thrilling performance of Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony" with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra, brought the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox to an impressive end Sunday.

A large audience of 13,771 persons applauded the performance to ovation proportions. The soloists, Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass, and mixed chorus of 130 voices, prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson, were eloquent in the Final Chorus on Schiller's Ode to Joy, Op. 125.

The majesty of the first movement was developed and moved to the repetitive rhythms of the second movement with the orchestra lashed to some rapid playing by Munch. Silken threads of tone were woven into the third movement which shone for its beautiful melodies, underscored by Munch.

The finale opened with some stormy bars, followed by the rich, deep intonations of the cellos which announced the theme. In the baritone recitative, Mr. Gramm sang clearly and richly, particularly in the lower registers. In his tenor solo, Mr. Stern was drowned out by the percussion instruments to a degree. Miss Addison's voice, familiar to area audiences, was lucid and Miss Kopleff's contralto blended in well.

The enthusiasm of the chorus in providing a backdrop for the soloists brought the performance to an exciting height.

The Beethoven performance was in contrast to Walton's "Johannesburg Festival Overture" which opened the concert. The modern work which had its premiere in 1956 was lively with its vibrant and varied syncopations using instruments which ranged from maracas and rumba sticks to castanets and tambourines.

Total attendance for the past weekend was 34,894, while attendance for the entire 1958 Berkshire Festival for the six weeks beginning July 2 was 168,773, compared to last year's total of 162,936. There were an additional 41 students concerts and other concerts opened to the friends of the Berkshire Music Center attended by 25,235 persons.

Sales for the 1958 season totaled $376,117.50, compared to $366,943 $376,117.50, compared to $366,943 in 1957 and $297,056 in 1956. — Irene K. Michalek.

[210]

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 361,379 - S. 576,176

AUG 11 1958

Beethoven's 9th Symphony Ends Tanglewood Festival

Saturday night: Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducting; soloist, Berl Senofsky, violinist. The program:
Music from "Prometheus" ...... Beethoven
Violin Concerto in D major.....Beethoven
Nobilissima Visione .... Hindemith
Overture, Leonore No. 3 ...Beethoven
Sunday afternoon: Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. The program:
Johannesburg Festival Overture....Walton
Symphony No. 9 in D minor....Beethoven
Berkshire Festival Chorus. Soloists, Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

By Jay S. Harrison

Donald Gramm

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 10.—The twenty-first season of the Berkshire Festival, which during its six weeks' run broke all previous attendance records by playing to more than 168,000, came to an end this afternoon at Tanglewood as Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Festival Chorus in a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

The work, which certainly was not designed for the purpose, has taken its place, through tradition, as the perfect valedictory piece; and in this instance, as before, it served to send the audience home with their ears ringing and their spirits nourished.

Mr. Munch sees the symphony as a big, booming vehicle for his men. Fine. Their slashing attacks, quick articulation and tornadoes of tone are all warranted by the score; and if, as it happens, the conductor chooses to sacrifice detail for momentum, clarity for power, that is certainly his business and no one else's.

What you will not find in Mr. Munch's rendition, however, is more than modicum of the work's brooding and introspection. Having accepted the conditions that the Ninth is meant for barnstorming, he barnstorms. The brasses roar, the strings make swirls of sound, the woodwinds cackle. And the tympani, which in Beethoven are normally a means for diverse punctuation, are used by Mr. Munch only as an exclamation point. That is the maestro's way; there may be other and better ones; there are none nearly as energetic.

But this is not news. Mr. Munch's Beethoven habits have been dwelt on before — and at length. Yesterday there was no change to his attitude. He wished to make the Ninth shout a great shout, and it did. Since no outcry can be shaded with supreme refinement, it is no wonder that the performance was rather a study in vigor than an essay in the kind of drama that is built on dynamic tensions and textural contrasts.

The symphony, whose admirable quartet of soloists included Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, Blake Stern and Donald Gramm, was preceded by William Walton's "Johannesburg Festival Overture," a bit of British orchestral hokus-pocus based on sham French models. It is all very lively and rollicking, but its ultimate significance as music is scarcely more than minimal.

Last night's concert, conducted by Pierre Monteux, was to these ears the happiest event of the week end. Played before an audience of more than 12,000, the largest of the season, the concert included Beethoven's Violin Concerto, with Berl Senofsky as soloist, the same composer's "Leonore Overture No. 3" and excerpts from the ballet, "The Creatures of Prometheus," and Paul Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione." It was all mightily cheered, and the demonstrations had their roots in sound judgment.

Mr. Senofsky, who in 1955 took first prize in the Queen Elizabeth of Belgium International Music Competition and who has since then not received nearly the acclaim he deserves, is a really fine violinist. He may not be—and was not on this occasion—a demon-driven virtuoso or a high-powered prophet of bravura, but he makes music with great agility and that quality which, for want of a better name, is simply called "heat." As he played the Beethoven, there was no rush to him, no harassment, no monkey shines; it was all sturdy and sane and affecting.

Technically, too, despite a flicker or so of intonation trouble, his work was palpably expert and his tone, especially on the "G" and "D" strings, was of a high color and a deep luminosity. There was, as I have indicated, no exceptional intensity to his reading, nor did it give reflection of an overwhelming musical personality, but for all that Mr. Senofsky offered us first-class Beethoven and much fine-grained fiddling. It was a pleasure to hear him.

And an equivalent pleasure as well was Mr. Monteux's beautifully molded accompaniment to the concerto. By keeping his left hand up throughout most of the performance, rather in the manner of a police officer halting traffic, he held the orchestra's sonority to a minimum, thereby allowing Mr. Senofsky to be heard at all times without making it necessary for him to sacrifice the loveliness of his tone through enlarging it. Nor was Mr. Monteux's habitual mastery less noticeable in the pallid "Prometheus" ballet or the "Leonore" Overture. The latter, for all its repetitions, remains one of the chief rousers in the repertoire and the conductor, quite frankly, gave it the works. The results were stunning.

Paul Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" is not frequently performed, which is a loss, as the piece, based on a ballet concerning St. Francis, is vintage Hindemith. As opposed to many works by the composer, it is nowhere dr. or sapless; touching it is and full of thematic juice. There are, I think, episodes in it that rank with works and, given a performance works and given a performance as noble and hale as that provided by Mr. Monteux, the piece glows with a wondrous inner light.

Attendance Up

Continued From Page 1

fast, but for the most part, Mr. Munch had himself and his instrumental and vocal resources under control, particularly in the lovely adagio movement. There was a taut line throughout the first two movements which just missed bursting into an explosion. The audience was as tense as the interpretation and burst into a roar at the conclusion. It was a real ovation and one richly deserved.

Stunning Performance

The program opened with a stunning performance of Sir William Walton's "Johannesburg Festival Overture." Mr. Munch really went to town during this extremely percussive, boisterous piece which is, nevertheless, extremely effective.

While many people come for the sessions of chamber music, student concerts and the Saturday morning rehearsals, it is the shed concerts which draw the largest throngs. Thus the four week ends of concerts by the full orchestra in the music shed drew a total audience of 86,045.

The chamber music concerts, six in number on Wednesday nights given for the benefit of Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, were attended by 8168 and the gross ticket sale was $11,100.

16,002 at Rehearsals

The six Saturday morning rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, open to the public for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund drew a total attendance of 16,002 and a gross income from tickets amounting to $14,223.50. Total attendance during the 1957 season was 13,869.

Forty-one concerts were offered in 1958 by students open to the friends of Berkshire Music Center, whose contributions help in the support of the school. The total number of friends is 6100 and their contributions total $20,402.50. Added to this total are scholarship grants and ticket resales, thus making a total for the season of $28,847.50. Approximately $14,000 of this amount is matched by a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 95,535

AUG 12 1958

Culture Report

The report that there has been a noticeable drop in the handle at some race tracks, and the simultaneous report that the Berkshire Festival again increased its ticket sale, will be subjected to varying interpretations.

Those interested in the cultural pursuits are certain to hail the news that, while other forms of entertainment are having trouble in attracting an audience, the Boston Symphony Orchestra is drawing 168,773 visitors to Tanglewood in Lenox. These visitors paid $376,117.50 for tickets, an increase of about $10,000 over last year's total. Last week, all records were shattered when 14,588 people paid $35,190.50 to attend Tanglewood-on-Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center. Last year, attendance was 12,493 and the ticket sale was $32,414.

Those who take a more mundane view of the world will note that the recession is reflected at the betting windows, but that those who want to sit in the shed or lawn at Tanglewood and listen to symphonies are ready to pay out more than a third of a million dollars to do it. Those who are concerned largely with the tax picture will point out that the state loses when legitimate, at-the-track betting declines. Massachusetts gets a percentage of the handle at a race track. It is the federal government which stands to gain when admission ticket sales increase.

However, those who take a broader view may see it as a wholesome sign that Tanglewood is not feeling the pinch of the mild recession which is having some effect at the race tracks. Perhaps, this is the beginning of a trend. It may be that the Springfield Symphony will soon be filling the Auditorium, whereas the wrestlers will grunt and groan before empty seats.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,937

AUG 12 1958

Munch And Boston Symphony Thrilling In Tanglewood Finale

A thrilling performance of Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony" with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra, brought the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox to an impressive end Sunday.

A large audience of 13,771 persons applauded the performance to ovation proportions. The soloists, Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass, and mixed chorus of 130 voices, prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson, were eloquent in the Final Chorus on Schiller's Ode to Joy, Op. 125.

The majesty of the first movement was developed and moved to the repetitive rhythms of the second movement with the orchestra lashed to some rapid playing by Munch. Silken threads of tone were woven into the third movement which shone for its beautiful melodies, underscored by Munch.

The finale opened with some stormy bars, followed by the rich, deep intonations of the cellos which announced the theme. In the baritone recitative, Mr. Gramm sang clearly and richly, particularly in the lower registers. In his tenor solo, Mr. Stern was drowned out by the percussion instruments to a degree. Miss Addison's voice, familiar to area audiences, was lucid and Miss Kopleff's contralto blended in well.

The enthusiasm of the chorus in providing a backdrop for the soloists brought the performance to an exciting height.

The Beethoven performance was in contrast to Walton's "Johannesburg Festival Overture" which opened the concert. The modern work which had its premiere in 1956 was lively with its vibrant and varied syncopations using instruments which ranged from maracas and rumba sticks to castanets and tambourines.

Total attendance for the past weekend was 34,894, while attendance for the entire 1958 Berkshire Festival for the six weeks beginning July 2 was 168,773, compared to last year's total of 162,936. There were an additional 41 students concerts and other concerts opened to the friends of the Berkshire Music Center attended by 25,235 persons.

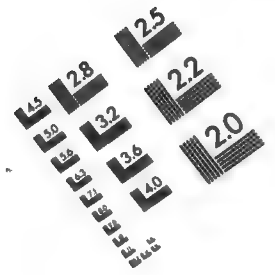
Sales for the 1958 season totaled $376,117.50, compared to $366,943 $376,117.50, compared to $366,943 in 1957 and $297,056 in 1956. — Irene K. Michalek.

REDUCTION
RATIO
18x

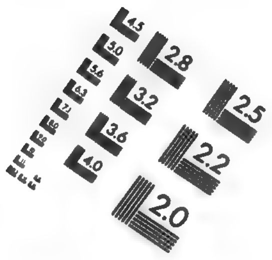
2.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

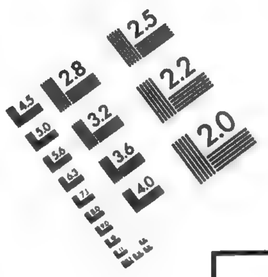


2.5
2.8
2.2
4.5
3.2
5.0
5.6
3.6
2.0
4.0

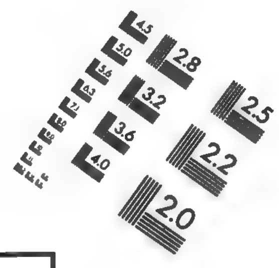


4.5
2.8
5.0
3.2
2.5
5.6
3.6
2.2
4.0
2.0

PM-MGP 13"x18"
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



2.5
2.8
2.2
4.5
3.2
5.0
3.6
2.0
4.0

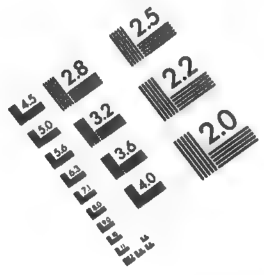


2.8
3.2
2.5
3.6
2.2
4.0
2.0

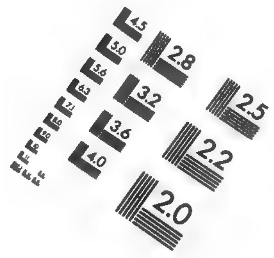
200 mm

150 mm

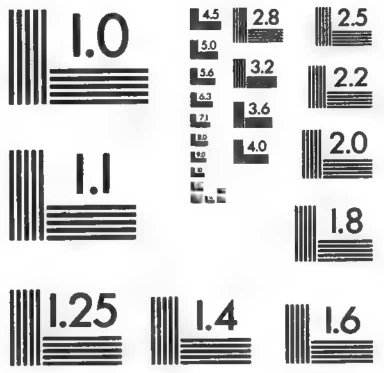
100 mm



2.5
2.8
2.2
4.5
3.2
5.0
3.6
2.0
4.0



2.8
3.2
2.5
3.6
2.2
4.0
2.0



1.0
4.5
2.8
2.5
5.0
3.2
2.2
5.6
3.6
4.0
2.0
1.1
1.8
1.25
1.4
1.6

1.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

2.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

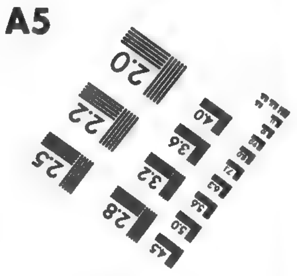
A5

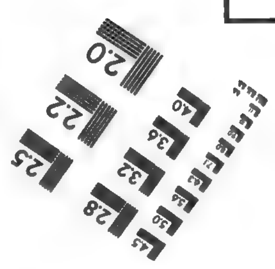


2.0
2.2
4.0
2.5
3.6
3.2
2.8

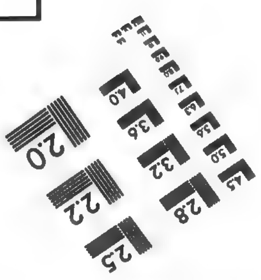
4.0
3.6
2.0
3.2
2.2
2.8
2.5

A4

A3



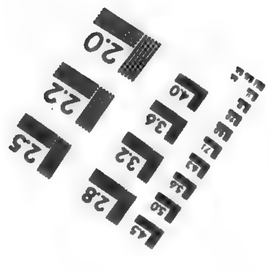
2.0
2.2
4.0
3.6
2.5
3.2
2.8
4.5



4.0
3.6
2.0
3.2
2.2
2.8
2.5

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119



2.0
2.2
4.0
3.6
2.5
3.2
2.8

4.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

4.0
3.6
2.0
3.2
2.2
2.8
2.5

3.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,290

14 1958

Beethoven Ninth Is Worthy Ending For Berkshire Festival

The Bershire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., wound up in first class style Sunday with a scintillating performance of the Beethoven Ninth Symphony, the traditional closing offering of Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

~~All concerned~~ with the performance pitched in with a will and came up with a beautiful and extremely entertaining presentation of the great "Chorale" Symphony. Nearly 14,000 were present at Tanglewood for the concluding performance, which marked the end of the twenty-first season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

Soloists who blended their voices with each other, the Chorus and the Orchestra in singing the classic paean included Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass. Miss Addison and Mr. Gramm should be cited as particularly outstanding performers in the difficult roles presented in the score of this work.

The work of the Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson, was accurate, finely disciplined and filled with the beauty of the stirring masterwork.

Maestro Munch conducted with his usual high degree of skill and seemed to become quite emotionally identified with the music by the time the Chorale movement was presented, much to the edification of the large audience.

A resounding ovation was the reward of the performers as the final bars brought to an end the 21st Berkshire Festival. It was a fine season, and we'll wait eagerly for our next opportunity to watch and hear this excellent Symphony Orchestra and Mr. Munch in action again.

On Early Departure

One sore point in our mind at these concerts has been the numerous individuals who get up and leave while the final movement is still in progress, indeed, sometimes at the beginning of the final movement. If we grant that a Symphony, any symphony, is a musical entity as a whole, we cannot deliberately eliminate one of those parts and still honestly say to ourselves and others that "we have heard a symphony." We have heard only a part of one, and, perhaps we have not fully assimilated the musical idea of feeling which was intended by the composer. The loss, to be sure, is primarily that of the early departee, but the rest of the audience suffers through the distraction offered by a few thoughtless persons hurrying to be the first out of the huge parking lot instead of waiting their turn, as most of the patrons do.

In all honesty, we must admit that last - movement departures during the Beethoven Ninth were so rare as to be remarkable, but there were a few, believe it or not. In our opinion, leaving in the midst of the Chorale movement of the "Ninth" is somewhat comparable to ordering a tenderloin steak dinner in a first-class restaurant and then only eating the carrots and peas. We pity them. Perhaps they'll never know what they missed.

As an appetizer for the main course to follow, Charles Munch and the orchestra offered Walton's "Johannesburg Overture" as the first programmed work Sunday. This lively work with its melodic themes and primitive rythms was "done to a turn" by the able musicianship of the Boston Symphonists and their conductor. Its dynamic color and rhythmic craftsmanship did a superb job of getting the concert-goers into a state of receptiveness toward the work which followed it, as if that were needed!

It was reported that a record breaking 168,773 persons attended the Festival Concerts during the six week season.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

AUG 1 1 1958

Tanglewood Records Set In Attendance, Receipts

Hall. He spent the summer in Richmond at the home of Donald B. Miller on Rossiter Street and plans to return there next season.

Dr. Munch conducted 13 of the major concerts in the Shed this season. G. Wallace Woodworth conducted a performance of Bach's B Minor Mass July 6 with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and Hugh Ross conducted the second part of the concert July 13, performing choral works of Mozart.

Pierre Monteux conducted one concert on each of the four weekends in the Shed.

Berkshire Nights

There was a marked increase in the Friday night Shed concerts this year, due principally to the successful drive of the Berkshire Nights Committee, which resulted in a 40 per cent increase in area ticket sales. These tickets entitled holders to the four Friday night BSO Shed programs at a price equivalent to a weekend series of three. The drive was headed by Mrs. John G. W. Mahanna of Pittsfield.

Dr. Munch highlighted his programs this year with the appearance of six young American pianists, Lukas Foss, Seymour Lipkin, Leon Fleisher, Byron Janis, Leonard Pennario and Eugene Istomin. Three violinists, Zino Francescatti, Berl Senofsky and Ruth Posselt, as well as violist Joseph de Pasquale, also were heard. Top vocal soloists heard this season were Hilde Gueden, Margaret Harshaw, Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts, Donald Gramm, Florence Kopleff and Blake Stern.

332 Students

The 332 students enrolled in the Berkshire Music Center during the summer offered 41 events to the Friends of the Music Center, headed by Miss Margo Miller of Pittsfield, who reported today that 6,10 Friends contributed a total of $20,402.50 to the group. Added to this total are scholarship grants and ticket resales of $197, making a total for the season of $28,847.50. About $14,000 of this amount is matched by a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation to the Tanglewood revolving scholarship fund.

Still to be broken for a single concert is the 15,800 crowd which turned out in 1951 when Dr. Munch made his debut with the BSO, following the death of Serge Koussevitzky, and the 15,624 attendance in 1955 when the noted pianist, Rudolf Serkin, appeared as soloist with the orchestra, Dr. Munch conducting.

Beethoven Weekend Is Climax

Patronage Is 168,773, Income $376,117

TANGLEWOOD — Ludwig van Beethoven helped to push the Berkshire Festival up to a new record over the weekend, when 34,804 persons turned out to boost the season's attendance to 168,773 and total ticket sales to $376,117.50. Previous all-time highs were set last year with an attendance for the six-week season of 162,936 and ticket sales of $366,943.

13,771 Yesterday

The works of the great German composer were the most popular of the entire season, climaxed yesterday afternoon when the Boston Symphony, with Dr. Charles Munch conducting, performed Beethoven's Ninth Symphony with the Festival chorus and four soloists before a crowd of 13,771—the highest single attendance of the summer.

With uncertain weather hovering around the Berkshires yesterday, Tanglewood officials began to fear that last year's record would not be broken, but when the sun peeked out periodically through the cloudy skies, thousands of music lovers headed for Tanglewood, and by concert time last year's record had been exceeded by 5,857.

Rain Boosts Sales

The threat of rain before many of the summer concerts boosted ticket sales at the box office. The advance sales — dating back to last winter when the 1958 Festival programs were announced — gave Festival officials an early indication that the Beethoven weekend would lead those devoted to the works of Brahms, Wagner, Debussy, Ravel and Tchaikovsky.

The first BSO weekend concert in the Shed, featuring the works of Brahms, drew 23,776; the second, works by Debussy, Ravel and Tchaikovsky, 26,552; the third, Wagner, 21,946, and the fourth, Beethoven, 34,804.

The first two weekends of concerts in the theater concert hall, when the works of Bach and Mozart were performed by BSO musicians, drew 22,937, an increase of 885 over last year's figures for the same period. Total ticket sales amounted to $56,390. Last year's total was $52,662. One concert of each weekend was scheduled for the Music Shed but on two occasions the concerts were shifted from the theater to the Shed, either because of threatening weather or rain.

Shed Attendance Down

Attendance at the four weekend concerts in the Music Shed by the full orchestra was 419 below last year. This season's total was 107,078, while last year's was 107,479. Ticket sales for the Shed concerts by the full BSO amounted to $315,603.50, compared to $311,400 in 1957.

There was a small increase in the Wednesday evening series of six chamber music concerts in the theater for the benefit of the Tanglewood revolving scholarship fund. This season 8,168 persons attended the Wednesday concerts, compared to 7,025 last year. Gross ticket sales for the chamber music concerts amounted to $11,100.

The Saturday morning rehearsals of the Boston Symphony proved more popular than ever this season. These rehearsals, held for the benefit of the pension fund of the orchestra, were attended by 16,002 this year, an increase of 2,133 over last year. The gross income from the sale of tickets was $14,223.50.

Although yesterday afternoon's crowd was the largest for a regular concert by the BSO, the record for a single event at Tanglewood this season was set Thursday night when 14,588 showed up for the annual Tanglewood on Parade benefit, which grossed $35,190.50 for the Berkshire Music Center, the school at Tanglewood which is operated by the Boston Symphony.

Friends Draw 25,235

In addition to the 168,773 visitors to the Festival events, 25,235 persons attended the 41 events open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Dr. Munch, who went directly from Tanglewood to Boston last night to pick up his visa for his return to France, left Logan Airport this morning for Idlewild Airport in New York, where he boarded an Air France plane for Paris.

During his stay in Europe, Dr.

Tanglewood
Continued on Second Page

1X

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,937

AUG 12 1958

The Oracle

BY SPIRIT

If you would know all things,
All things He does reveal,
You must free yourself from
error,
And no sinful vice conceal
If you would understand,
In spirit's wisdom share,
You must stand with justice,
And to every man be fair.
If you would truly live,
And life eternal know,
You must fill your heart with
love,
And let its bright light glow.
ROBERT J. NORTON.

✿ ✿

Coming out parties in abundance are planned for early September before Boston debutantes head for college. Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Billings of Beacon St. in Boston are giving a dinner dance for their niece, Betty Jean Billings, at the Algonquin Club on Saturday evening, Sept. 13. Betty was graduated from the Winsor School and is coming up to Mount Holyoke. She's the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marland Pratt Billings of Wellesley.

✿ ✿

Irish Culdee monks or a wandering tribe of Eskimos might have originated Mystery Hill Caves, a unique tourist attraction in North Salem, N. H., the New England Council tells us. The 12-acre area of stone ruins, which include animal carvings and a huge stone "sacrificial table," has raised considerable controversy among archeologists. In addition to the monk and Eskimo origin theories, some authorities believe the caves were a hideout for Colonial era smugglers, an Indian shelter, or the home of an eccentric early settler.

✿ ✿

If Former Mayor and Clerk of Courts Gregory Scanlon is missing from his usual haunts in the near future it would be reasonable to suppose that he has taken off for New York to do a bit of electioneering for an old pupil in the days before he chose to switch into the legal business. District Attorney Frank S. Hogan, the fifth Empire State citizen to aspire for the Democratic nomination for Senator in the coming primaries, is a native of Waterbury, Conn., and it was while the former Holyoke mayor was a teacher of history at the Waterbury High school that the District-Attorney came under his educational wing. They have kept a firm friendship through the years.

✿ ✿

Our apologies to Donald R. Taber of this city. The other day the Oracle told about a young man by the name of Donald Taber being elected mayor of Lebanon, N. H., and said he's a namesake of our Mr. Taber but no relative. The following letter comes to the Oracle's desk from Holyoke's Donald Taber from Little Compton, R. I., where the Tabers are enjoying a holiday; "The item in the Oracle of Friday, August 8, is fine except the Mayor of Lebanon is very much a relative of mine. He is my nephew and is the son of Elwyn L. Taber, who now resides in Conway but who lived in Holyoke until his retirement three years ago."

✿ ✿

A Jesuit sociologist has given one of the more penetrating analyses of what's wrong with love and marriage in the United States. Speaking in Buffalo, N. Y., to a group of sociologists the Rev. Lucius Cervantes, S.J., of Regis College, said the trouble with American youth was that it suffered from schizophrenic romanticism. They brush off such things as personality, similarity of background, ideals and mutual interests and pin their hopes on romantic love as "a magic solution to all of life's problems." Father Cervantes pointed out that a recent poll of 20-year-old women showed their "ideal husband prototypes" to be culled exclusively from what one might call the exhibitionistic careers; stage, screen, politics. There was not a single scientist, professor, teacher, or college president in the group— Hartford Courant.

✿ ✿

The sweetness and light of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox is shattered for many motorists as they leave the grounds. The inspiring level of the concert and the hearty response of the audience is quite a contrast to the way some members of the audience behave once they get behind the wheel of an automobile. The joy of brotherhood is the theme of Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony" which ended the Berkshire Festival concerts Sunday, but the joy evidently lasted only until the end of the performance. Impatient autoists trying to inch each other out of line, some forming quadruple lines only to find a passageway for one car at the end of the line lead one to believe that a "music lover" is not necessarily a lover of one's fellow man.

✿ ✿

One of the fitting memorials left the T-T by John Healy of Dublin was his personal account of a pilgrimage to Croagh Patrick, Ireland's holy mountain, which he is presently covering for his newspaper, the Irish Press. Now it seems that rain fell in virtually every other part of Ireland, but Croagh Patrick was drenched in sunshine for the ascent to the summit yesterday. An estimated 70,000 persons, old and young, came from all parts of the country for the stony, three-mile ascent of the 2,500-foot peak in County Mayo, where tradition has it that St. Patrick retired in the year 441 to refresh his soul in solitude. In a tiny oratory atop "the Sinai of Ireland," forty masses were celebrated and thousands of pilgrims received holy communion. Many of the climbers made the journey over jagged, sliding stones in their bare feet. Atty. John S. Begley expressed the sentiment of most Holyokers who have traveled to the Green Isle when he commented: "I've seen it. It was too rugged for me."

✿ ✿

The story of Henry M. Burt's founding the unique daily newspaper "Among the Clouds," published atop Mt. Washington is told by his grandson, Prof. F. Allen Burt of Boston in a series he is running on the history of the mountain in the Boston Globe. Henry Burt was co-owner the Holyoke Transcript back in the early 1870's along with E. L. Kirtland, who later was superintendent of schools of Holyoke. The Transcript was a weekly newspaper at that time. Burt left the Transcript to establish his paper on Mt. Washington. His grandson has the following to say about this accomplishment; "Burt made his first ascent of the mountain on horseback in 1866 and at once became enamored of the clear air, the sense of spaciousness and almost other-worldliness of the summit. One day in the summer of 1874 while storm-bound at the summit house, Burt pondered the fact that the mountain boasted a railway and carriage road, a first-rate hotel and both a post-office and a telegraph office. He remarked: 'There ought to be a newspaper here for those who have to wait for the clouds to lift.' That remark was father to the deed. Three years later in 1877 the first edition of a daily summer newspaper, Among the Clouds, was published. A cylinder press turned by hand was set up in the front room of the old Tip-Top House, which had become the business and editorial quarters as well as composing room and pressroom. The fact that virtually everyone, either openly or secretly, likes to see his name in print, decided Burt on catering to this basic form of harmless human vanity. The many visitors to the mountain top, each wanting his name in print, soon forced the publishing of two editions a day. It was during that first season in the Tip-Top House that Burt and his staff greeted President Rutherford B. Hayes and his wife and party on their visit to New England's high point. Eventually a system of correspondents covering the entire White Mountain vacation region was set up by the paper and many a college student found an interesting and gainful way of spending a Summer holiday. Among the reporters for the summit paper were Channing H. Cox, governor of Massachusetts from 1921 to 1925; his brother, Louis S. Cox, justice of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts; John H. Bartlett, later governor of New Hampshire, and John Scammon, later a justice of the Supreme Court of New Hampshire. For 22 years Burt edited and published his newspaper and then it was taken over by his son Frank H. Burt, father of the author, following the death of the founder in 1899. For 31 Summers, 'Among the Clouds' carried the news of the summit and of the nearby White Mountain resorts to the outside world. Then came the great fire of 1908 that, in a spectacular blaze, wiped out the printing office. After a lapse of two summers publication was resumed, not at the summit, but at the base station. For eight seasons it continued to flourish from its more practical, [illegible] location. But during the first world war, like so many other institutions, [illegible] unable to weather it. The war also forced suspension [illegible] way. America turned [illegible] away from summer [illegible] and, consequently, perhaps the most unusual newspaper ever published in New England also ended."

HARTFORD
TIMES

Tanglewo
Highest

NEW YO
JOURNAL
Circ. D. 70

Best

By MILES

MORE people attending Festival mer. With proximately most 6,000 year were in the fin

VAR
NEW

TAN UP

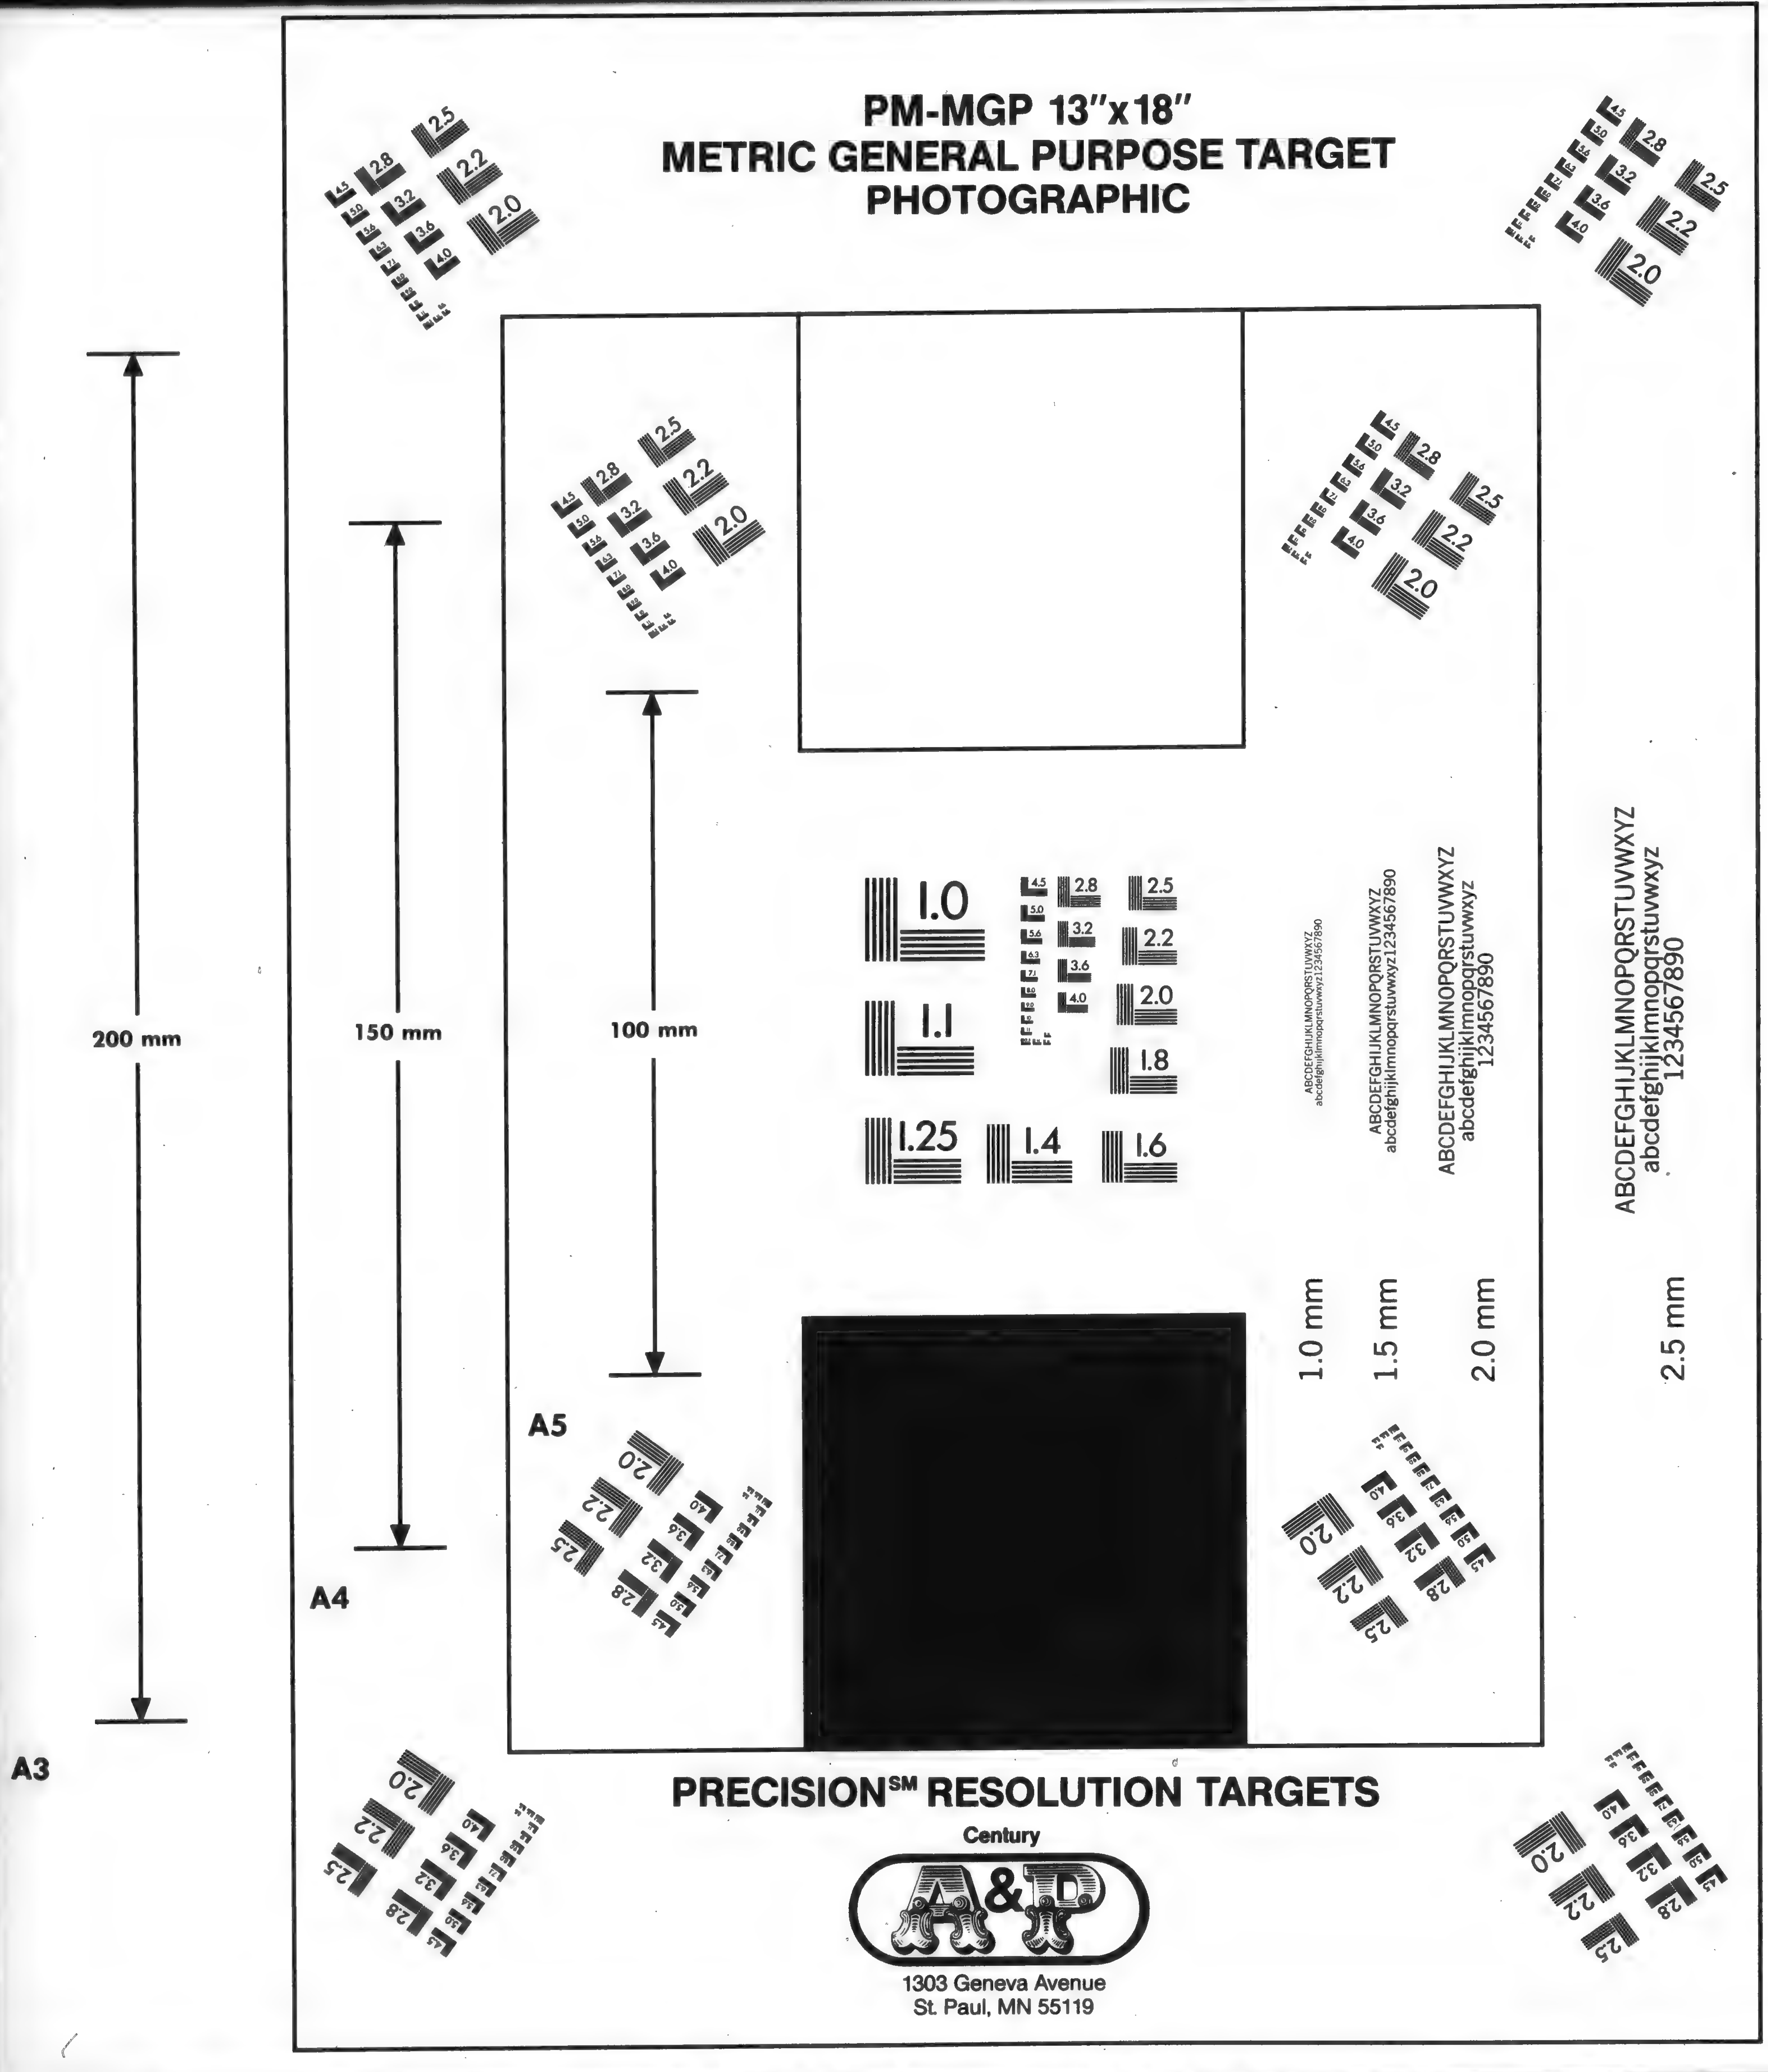
REDUCTION

RATIO

14x

PM-MGP 13″x18″

METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET PHOTOGRAPHIC



200 mm
150 mm
100 mm
A3
A4
A5
1.0
1.1
1.25
1.4
1.6
1.8
2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0
5.6
6.3
7.1
8.0
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890
1.0 mm
1.5 mm
2.0 mm
2.5 mm

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

[211]

Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,290

AUG 14 1958

Beethoven Ninth Is Worthy Ending For Berkshire Festival

The Bershire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., wound up in first class style Sunday with a scintillating performance of the Beethoven Ninth Symphony, the traditional closing offering of Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

~~All concerned~~ with the performance pitched in with a will and came up with a beautiful and extremely entertaining presentation of the great "Chorale" Symphony. Nearly 14,000 were present at Tanglewood for the concluding performance, which marked the end of the twenty-first season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

Soloists who blended their voices with each other, the Chorus and the Orchestra in singing the classic paean included Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass. Miss Addison and Mr. Gramm should be cited as particularly outstanding performers in the difficult roles presented in the score of this work.

The work of the Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson, was accurate, finely disciplined and filled with the beauty of the stirring masterwork.

Maestro Munch conducted with his usual high degree of skill and seemed to become quite emotionally identified with the music by the time the Chorale movement was presented, much to the edification of the large audience.

A resounding ovation was the reward of the performers as the final bars brought to an end the 21st Berkshire Festival. It was a fine season, and we'll wait eagerly for our next opportunity to watch and hear this excellent Symphony Orchestra and Mr. Munch in action again.

On Early Departure

One sore point in our mind at these concerts has been the numerous individuals who get up and leave while the final movement is still in progress, indeed, sometimes at the beginning of the final movement. If we grant that a Symphony, any symphony, is a musical entity as a whole, we cannot deliberately eliminate one of those parts and still honestly say to ourselves and others that "we have heard a symphony." We have heard only a part of one, and, perhaps we have not fully assimilated the musical idea of feeling which was intended by the composer. The loss, to be sure, is primarily that of the early departee, but the rest of the audience suffers through the distraction offered by a few thoughtless persons hurrying to be the first out of the huge parking lot instead of waiting their turn, as most of the patrons do.

In all honesty, we must admit that last - movement departures during the Beethoven Ninth were so rare as to be remarkable, but there were a few, believe it or not. In our opinion, leaving in the midst of the Chorale movement of the "Ninth" is somewhat comparable to ordering a tenderloin steak dinner in a first-class restaurant and then only eating the carrots and peas. We pity them. Perhaps they'll never know what they missed.

As an appetizer for the main course to follow, Charles Munch and the orchestra offered Walton's "Johannesburg Overture" as the first programmed work Sunday. This lively work with its melodic themes and primitive rythms was "done to a turn" by the able musicianship of the Boston Symphonists and their conductor. Its dynamic color and rhythmic craftsmanship did a superb job of getting the concert-goers into state of receptiveness toward the work which followed it, as if that were needed!

It was reported that a record breaking 168,773 persons attended the Festival Concerts during the six week season.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354
AUG 11 1958

Tanglewood Records Set In Attendance, Receipts

Beethoven Weekend Is Climax

Patronage Is 168,773, Income $376,117

TANGLEWOOD — Ludwig van Beethoven helped to push the Berkshire Festival up to a new record over the weekend, when 34,804 persons turned out to boost the season's attendance to 168,773 and total ticket sales to $376,117.50. Previous all-time highs were set last year with an attendance for the six-week season of 162,936 and ticket sales of $366,943.

13,771 Yesterday

The works of the great German composer were the most popular of the entire season, climaxed yesterday afternoon when the Boston Symphony, with Dr. Charles Munch conducting, performed Beethoven's Ninth Symphony with the Festival chorus and four soloists before a crowd of 13,771—the highest single attendance of the summer.

With uncertain weather hovering around the Berkshires yesterday, Tanglewood officials began to fear that last year's record would not be broken, but when the sun peeked out periodically through the cloudy skies, thousands of music lovers headed for Tanglewood, and by concert time last year's record had been exceeded by 5,857.

Rain Boosts Sales

The threat of rain before many of the summer concerts boosted ticket sales at the box office. The advance sales — dating back to last winter when the 1958 Festival programs were announced — gave Festival officials an early indication that the Beethoven weekend would lead those devoted to the works of Brahms, Wagner, Debussy, Ravel and Tchaikovsky.

The first BSO weekend concert in the Shed, featuring the works of Brahms, drew 23,776; the second, works by Debussy, Ravel and Tchaikovsky, 26.552; the third, Wagner, 21,946, and the fourth, Beethoven, 34,804.

The first two weekends of concerts in the theater concert hall, when the works of Bach and Mozart were performed by BSO musicians, drew 22,937, an increase of 885 over last year's figures for the same period. Total ticket sales amounted to $56,390. Last year's total was $52,662. One concert of each weekend was scheduled for the Music Shed but on two occasions the concerts were shifted from the theater to the Shed, either because of threatening weather or rain.

Shed Attendance Down

Attendance at the four weekend concerts in the Music Shed by the full orchestra was 419 below last year. This season's total was 107,078, while last year's was 107,479. Ticket sales for the Shed concerts by the full BSO amounted to $315,603.50, compared to $311,400 in 1957.

There was a small increase in the Wednesday evening series of six chamber music concerts in the theater for the benefit of the Tanglewood revolving scholarship fund. This season 8,168 persons attended the Wednesday concerts, compared to 7,025 last year. Gross ticket sales for the chamber music concerts amounted to $11,100.

The Saturday morning rehearsals of the Boston Symphony proved more popular than ever this season. These rehearsals, held for the benefit of the pension fund of the orchestra, were attended by 16,002 this year, an increase of 2, 133 over last year. The gross income from the sale of tickets was $14,223.50.

Although yesterday afternoon's crowd was the largest for a regular concert by the BSO, the record for a single event at Tanglewood this season was set Thursday night when 14,588 showed up for the annual Tanglewood on Parade benefit, which grossed $35,190.50 for the Berkshire Music Center, the school at Tanglewood which is operated by the Boston Symphony.

season Oct. 5 at Symphony Hall. He spent the summer in Richmond at the home of Donald B. Miller on Rossiter Street and plans to return there next season.

Dr. Munch conducted 13 of the major concerts in the Shed this season. G. Wallace Woodworth conducted a performance of Bach's B Minor Mass July 6 with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and Hugh Ross conducted the second part of the concert July 13, performing choral works of Mozart.

Pierre Monteux conducted one concert on each of the four weekends in the Shed.

Berkshire Nights

There was a marked increase in the Friday night Shed concerts this year, due principally to the successful drive of the Berkshire Nights Committee, which resulted in a 40 per cent increase in area ticket sales. These tickets entitled holders to the four Friday night BSO Shed programs at a price equivalent to a weekend series of three. The drive was headed by Mrs. John G. W. Mahanna of Pittsfield.

Dr. Munch highlighted his programs this year with the appearance of six young American pianists, Lukas Foss, Seymour Lipkin, Leon Fleisher, Byron Janis, Leonard Pennario and Eugene Istomin. Three violinists, Zino Francescatti, Berl Senofsky and Ruth Posselt, as well as violist Joseph de Pasquale, also were heard. Top vocal soloists heard this season were Hilde Gueden, Margaret Harshaw, Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts, Donald Gramm, Florence Kopleff and Blake Stern.

332 Students

The 332 students enrolled in the Berkshire Music Center during the summer offered 41 events to the Friends of the Music Center, headed by Miss Margo Miller of Pittsfield, who reported today that 6,10 Friends contributed a total of $20,402.50 to the group. Added to this total are scholarship grants and ticket resales of $197, making a total for the season of $28,847.50 About $14,000 of this amount is matched by a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation to the Tanglewood revolving scholarship fund.

Still to be broken for a single concert is the 15,800 crowd which turned out in 1951 when Dr. Munch made his debut with the BSO, following the death of Serge Koussevitzky, and the 15,624 attendance i 1955 when the noted pianist, Rudol Serkin, appeared as soloist with th orchestra, Dr. Munch conducting.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,937

AUG 12 1958

The Oracle

BY SPIRIT

If you would know all things,
All things He does reveal,
You must free yourself from
error,
And no sinful vice conceal
If you would understand,
In spirit's wisdom share,
You must stand with justice,
And to every man be fair.
If you would truly live,
And life eternal know,
You must fill your heart with
love,
And let its bright light glow.
ROBERT J. NORTON.

✿ ✿

Coming out parties in abundance are planned for early September before Boston debutantes head for college. Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Billings of Beacon St. in Boston are giving a dinner dance for their niece, Betty Jean Billings, at the Algonquin Club on Saturday evening, Sept. 13. Betty was graduated from the Winsor School and is coming up to Mount Holyoke. She's the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marland Pratt Billings of Wellesley.

✿ ✿

Irish Culdee monks or a wandering tribe of Eskimos might have originated Mystery Hill Caves, a unique tourist attraction in North Salem, N. H., the New England Council tells us. The 12-acre area of stone ruins, which include animal carvings and a huge stone "sacrificial table," has raised considerable controversy among archeologists. In addition to the monk and Eskimo origin theories, some authorities believe the caves were a hideout for Colonial era smugglers, an Indian shelter, or the home of an eccentric early settler.

✿ ✿

If Former Mayor and Clerk of Courts Gregory Scanlon is missing from his usual haunts in the near future it would be reasonable to suppose that he has taken off for New York to do a bit of electioneering for an old pupil in the days before he chose to switch into the legal business. District Attorney Frank S. Hogan, the fifth Empire State citizen to aspire for the Democratic nomination for Senator in the coming primaries ,is a native of Waterbury, Conn., and it was while the former Holyoke mayor each other out of line, some forming quadruple lines only to find a passageway for one car at the end of the line lead one to believe that a "music lover" is not necessarily a lover of one's fellow man.

✿ ✿

One of the fitting memorials left the T-T by John Healy of Dublin was his personal account of a pilgrimage to Croagh Patrick, Ireland's holy mountain, which he is presently covering for his newspaper, the Irish Press. Now it seems that rain fell in virtually every other part of Ireland, but Croagh Patrick was drenched in sunshine for the ascent to the summit yesterday. An estimated 70,000 persons, old and young, came from all parts of the country for the stony, three-mile ascent of the 2,500-foot peak in County Mayo, where tradition has it that St. Patrick retired in the year 441 to refresh his soul in solitude. In a tiny oratory atop "the Sinai of Ireland," forty masses were celebrated and thousands of pilgrims received holy communion. Many of the climbers made the journey over jagged, sliding stones in their bare feet. Atty. John S. Begley expressed the sentiment of most Holyokers who have traveled to the Green Isle when he commented: "I've seen it. It was too rugged for me."

✿ ✿

The story of Henry M. Burt's founding the unique daily newspaper "Among the Clouds," published atop Mt. Washington is told by his grandson, Prof. F. Allen Burt of Boston in a series he is running on the history of the mountain in the Boston Globe. Henry Burt was co-owner the Holyoke Transcript back in the early 1870's along with E. L. Kirtland, who later was superintendent of schools of Holyoke. The Transcript was a weekly newspaper at that time. Burt left the Transcript to establish his paper on Mt. Washington. His grandson has the following to say about this accomplishment: "Burt made his first ascent of the mountain on horseback in 1866 and at once became enamored of the clear air, the sense of spaciousness and almost

---

HARTFOR
TIMES
D. 118 84

Tanglew
Highest

Lenox,
number o
Berkshire
Tanglewoo
168,773. L
162,936. student open to shire M tended
The t year's f in 1957
$297,95

NEW JOURNA
Circ. D.

Be

By MILES

MORE peop attending Festival
mer. Wit proximat most 6,00
year wer in the fi
This n shed ful viously not prev
from co
One of about the Wagner smallest this indic in interes

[211]

Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,290

14 1958

Beethoven Ninth Is Worthy Ending For Berkshire Festival

The Bershire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., wound up in first class style Sunday with a scintillating performance of the Beethoven Ninth Symphony, the traditional closing offering of Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

~~All concerned~~ with the performance pitched in with a will and came up with a beautiful and extremely entertaining presentation of the great "Chorale" Symphony. Nearly 14,000 were present at Tanglewood for the concluding performance, which marked the end of the twenty-first season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

Soloists who blended their voices with each other, the Chorus and the Orchestra in singing the classic paean included Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass. Miss Addison and Mr. Gramm should be cited as particularly outstanding performers in the difficult roles presented in the score of this work.

The work of the Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson, was accurate, finely disciplined and filled with the beauty of the stirring masterwork.

Maestro Munch conducted with his usual high degree of skill and seemed to become quite emotionally identified with the music by the time the Chorale movement was presented, much to the edification of the large audience.

A resounding ovation was the reward of the performers as the final bars brought to an end the 21st Berkshire Festival. It was a fine season, and we'll wait eagerly for our next opportunity to watch and hear this excellent Symphony Orchestra and Mr. Munch in action again.

On Early Departure

One sore point in our mind at these concerts has been the numerous individuals who get up and leave while the final movement is still in progress, indeed, sometimes at the beginning of the final movement. If we grant that a Symphony, any symphony, is a musical entity as a whole, we cannot deliberately eliminate one of those parts and still honestly say to ourselves and others that "we have heard a symphony." We have heard only a part of one, and, perhaps we have not fully assimilated the musical idea of feeling which was intended by the composer. The loss, to be sure, is primarily that of the early departee, but the rest of the audience suffers through the distraction offered by a few thoughtless persons hurrying to be the first out of the huge parking lot instead of waiting their turn, as most of the patrons do.

In all honesty, we must admit that last - movement departures during the Beethoven Ninth were so rare as to be remarkable, but there were a few, believe it or not. In our opinion, leaving in the midst of the Chorale movement of the "Ninth" is somewhat comparable to ordering a tenderloin steak dinner in a first-class restaurant and then only eating the carrots and peas. We pity them. Perhaps they'll never know what they missed.

As an appetizer for the mai course to follow, Charles Munc and the orchestra offered Walton' "Johannesburg Overture" as th first programmed work Sunday This lively work with its melodi themes and primitive rythms wa "done to a turn" by the able mu sicianship of the Boston Symphor ists and their conductor. Its dy namic color and rhythm i craftsmanship did a superb job getting the concert-goers into state of receptiveness toward t work which followed it, as if th were needed!

It was reported that a recor breaking 168,773 persons attend the Festival Concerts during t six week season.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354
AUG 1 1 1958

d Records Set ceipts

Beethoven Weekend Is Climax

Patronage Is 168,773, Income $376,117

TANGLEWOOD — Ludwig van Beethoven helped to push the Berkshire Festival up to a new record over the weekend, when 34,804 persons turned out to boost the season's attendance to 168,773 and total ticket sales to $376,117.50. Previous all-time highs were set last year with an attendance for the six-week season of 162,936 and ticket sales of $366,943.

13,771 Yesterday

The works of the great German composer were the most popular of the entire season, climaxed yesterday afternoon when the Boston Symphony, with Dr. Charles Munch conducting, performed Beethoven's Ninth Symphony with the Festival chorus and four soloists before a crowd of 13,771—the highest single attendance of the summer.

With uncertain weather hovering around the Berkshires yesterday, Tanglewood officials began to fear that last year's record would not be broken, but when the sun peeked out periodically through the cloudy skies, thousands of music lovers headed for Tanglewood, and by concert time last year's record had been exceeded by 5,857.

Rain Boosts Sales

The threat of rain before many of the summer concerts boosted ticket sales at the box office. The advance sales — dating back to last winter when the 1958 Festival programs were announced — gave Festival officials an early indication that the Beethoven weekend would lead those devoted to the works of Brahms, Wagner, Debussy, Ravel and Tchaikovsky.

The first BSO weekend concert in the Shed, featuring the works of Brahms, drew 23,776; the second, works by Debussy, Ravel and Tchaikovsky, 26.552; the third, Wagner, 21.946, and the fourth, Beethoven, 34,804.

The first two weekends of concerts in the theater concert hall, when the works of Bach and Mozart were performed by BSO musicians, drew 22,937, an increase of 885 over last year's figures for the same period. Total ticket sales amounted to $56,390. Last year's total was $52,662. One concert of each weekend was scheduled for the Music Shed but on two occasions the concerts were shifted from the theater to the Shed, either because of threatening weather or rain.

Shed Attendance Down

Attendance at the four weekend concerts in the Music Shed by the full orchestra was 419 below last year. This season's total was 107,078, while last year's was 107,479. Ticket sales for the Shed concerts by the full BSO amounted to $315,603.50, compared to $311,400 in 1957.

There was a small increase in the Wednesday evening series of six chamber music concerts in the theater for the benefit of the Tanglewood revolving scholarship fund. This season 8,168 persons attended the Wednesday concerts, compared to 7,025 last year. Gross ticket sales for the chamber music concerts amounted to $11,100.

The Saturday morning rehearsals of the Boston Symphony proved more popular than ever this season. These rehearsals, held for the benefit of the pension fund of the orchestra, were attended by 16,002 this year, an increase of 2, 133 over last year. The gross income from the sale of tickets was $14,223.50.

Although yesterday afternoon's crowd was the largest for a regular concert by the BSO, the record for a single event at Tanglewood this season was set Thursday night when 14,588 showed up for the annual Tanglewood on Parade benefit, which grossed $35,190.50 for the Berkshire Music Center, the school at Tanglewood which is operated by the Boston Symphony.

25,235

Munch will be a guest conductor at concerts in Schenening, Holland, and will then rest for a few weeks before returning to Boston to open the orchestra's fall and winter season Oct. 3 at Symphony Hall. He spent the summer in Richmond at the home of Donald B. Miller on Rossiter Street and plans to return there next season.

Dr. Munch conducted 13 of the major concerts in the Shed this season. G. Wallace Woodworth conducted a performance of Bach's B Minor Mass July 6 with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and Hugh Ross conducted the second part of the concert July 13, performing choral works of Mozart.

Pierre Monteux conducted one concert on each of the four weekends in the Shed.

Berkshire Nights

There was a marked increase in the Friday night Shed concerts this year, due principally to the successful drive of the Berkshire Nights Committee, which resulted in a 40 per cent increase in area ticket sales. These tickets entitled holders to the four Friday night BSO Shed programs at a price equivalent to a weekend series of three. The drive was headed by Mrs. John G. W. Mahanna of Pittsfield.

Dr. Munch highlighted his programs this year with the appearance of six young American pianists, Lukas Foss, Seymour Lipkin, Leon Fleisher, Byron Janis, Leonard Pennario and Eugene Istomin. Three violinists, Zino Francescatti, Berl Senofsky and Ruth Posselt, as well as violist Joseph de Pasquale, also were heard. Top vocal soloists heard this season were Hilde Gueden, Margaret Harshaw, Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts, Donald Gramm, Florence Kopleff and Blake Stern.

332 Students

The 332 students enrolled in the Berkshire Music Center during the summer offered 41 events to the Friends of the Music Center, headed by Miss Margo Miller of Pittsfield, who reported today that 6,10 Friends contributed a total of $20,402.50 to the group. Added to this total are scholarship grants and ticket resales of $197, making a total for the season of $28,847.50 About $14,000 of this amount is matched by a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation to the Tanglewood revolving scholarship fund.

Still to be broken for a single concert is the 15,800 crowd which turned out in 1951 when Dr. Munc made his debut with the BSO, following the death of Serge Koussevitzky, and the 15,624 attendance i 1955 when the noted pianist, Rudol Serkin, appeared as soloist with th orchestra, Dr. Munch conducting.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,937

AUG 12 1958

The Oracle

BY SPIRIT

If you would know all things,
All things He does reveal,
You must free yourself from
error,
And no sinful vice conceal
If you would understand,
In spirit's wisdom share,
You must stand with justice,
And to every man be fair.
If you would truly live,
And life eternal know,
You must fill your heart with
love,
And let its bright light glow.
ROBERT J. NORTON.

✿ ✿

Coming out parties in abundance are planned for early September before Boston debutantes head for college. Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Billings of Beacon St. in Boston are giving a dinner dance for their niece, Betty Jean Billings, at the Algonquin Club on Saturday evening, Sept. 13. Betty was graduated from the Winsor School and is coming up to Mount Holyoke. She's the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marland Pratt Billings of Wellesley.

✿ ✿

Irish Culdee monks or a wandering tribe of Eskimos might have originated Mystery Hill Caves, a unique tourist attraction in North Salem, N. H., the New England Council tells us. The 12-acre area of stone ruins, which include animal carvings and a huge stone "sacrificial table," has raised considerable controversy among archeologists. In addition to the monk and Eskimo origin theories, some authorities believe the caves were a hideout for Colonial era smugglers, an Indian shelter, or the home of an eccentric early settler.

✿ ✿

If Former Mayor and Clerk of Courts Gregory Scanlon is missing from his usual haunts in the near future it would be reasonable to suppose that he has taken off for New York to do a bit of electioneering for an old pupil in the days before he chose to switch into the legal business. District Attorney Frank S. Hogan, the fifth Empire State citizen to aspire for the Democratic nomination for Senator in the coming primaries ,is a native of Waterbury, Conn., and it was while the former Holyoke mayor each other out of line, some forming quadruple lines only to find a passageway for one car at the end of the line lead one to believe that a "music lover" is not necessarily a lover of one's fellow man.

✿ ✿

One of the fitting memorials left the T-T by John Healy of Dublin was his personal account of a pilgrimage to Croagh Patrick, Ireland's holy mountain, which he is presently covering for his newspaper, the Irish Press. Now it seems that rain fell in virtually every other part of Ireland, but Croagh Patrick was drenched in sunshine for the ascent to the summit yesterday. An estimated 70,000 persons, old and young, came from all parts of the country for the stony, three-mile ascent of the 2,500-foot peak in County Mayo, where tradition has it that St. Patrick retired in the year 441 to refresh his soul in solitude. In a tiny oratory atop "the Sinai of Ireland," forty masses were celebrated and thousands of pilgrims received holy communion. Many of the climbers made the journey over jagged, sliding stones in their bare feet. Atty. John S. Begley expressed the sentiment of most Holyokers who have traveled to the Green Isle when he commented: "I've seen it. It was too rugged for me."

✿ ✿

The story of Henry M. Burt's founding the unique daily newspaper "Among the Clouds," published atop Mt. Washington is told by his grandson, Prof. F. Allen Burt of Boston in a series he is running on the history of the mountain in the Boston Globe. Henry Burt was co-owner the Holyoke Transcript back in the early 1870's along with E. L. Kirtland, who later was superintendent of schools of Holyoke. The Transcript was a weekly newspaper at that time. Burt left the Transcript to establish his paper on Mt. Washington. His grandson has the following to say about this accomplishment: "Burt made his first ascent of the mountain on horseback in 1866 and at once became enamored of the clear air, the sense of spaciousness and almost and, perhaps we have not fully assimilated the musical idea of feeling which was intended by the composer. The loss, to be sure, is primarily that of the early departee, but the rest of the audience suffers through the distraction offered by a few thoughtless persons hurrying to be the first out of the huge parking lot instead of waiting their turn, as most of the patrons do.

In all honesty, we must admit that last - movement departures during the Beethoven Ninth were so rare as to be remarkable, but there were a few, believe it or not. In our opinion, leaving in the midst of the Chorale movement of the "Ninth" is somewhat comparable to ordering a tenderloin steak dinner in a first-class restaurant and then only eating the carrots and peas. We pity them. Perhaps they'll never know what they missed.

As an appetizer for the main course to follow, Charles Munch and the orchestra offered Walton's "Johannesburg Overture" as the first programmed work Sunday This lively work with its melodi themes and primitive rythms wa "done to a turn" by the able musicianship of the Boston Symphonists and their conductor. Its dynamic color and rhythm i craftsmanship did a superb job getting the concert-goers into state of receptiveness toward th work which followed it, as if th were needed!

It was reported that a recor breaking 168,773 persons attend the Festival Concerts during t six week season.

If you would know all things,
All things He does reveal,
You must free yourself from
error,
And no sinful vice conceal
If you would understand,
In spirit's wisdom share,
You must stand with justice,
And to every man be fair.
If you would truly live,
And life eternal know,
You must fill your heart with
love,
And let its bright light glow.

ROBERT J. NORTON.

✿ ✿

Coming out parties in abundance are planned for early September before Boston debutantes head for college. Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Billings of Beacon St. in Boston are giving a dinner dance for their niece, Betty Jean Billings, at the Algonquin Club on Saturday evening, Sept. 13. Betty was graduated from the Winsor School and is coming up to Mount Holyoke. She's the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marland Pratt Billings of Wellesley.

✿ ✿

Irish Culdee monks or a wandering tribe of Eskimos might have originated Mystery Hill Caves, a unique tourist attraction in North Salem, N. H., the New England Council tells us. The 12-acre area of stone ruins, which include animal carvings and a huge stone "sacrificial table," has raised considerable controversy among archeologists. In addition to the monk and Eskimo origin theories, some authorities believe the caves were a hideout for Colonial era smugglers, an Indian shelter, or the home of an eccentric early settler.

✿ ✿

If Former Mayor and Clerk of Courts Gregory Scanlon is missing from his usual haunts in the near future it would be reasonable to suppose that he has taken off for New York to do a bit of electioneering for an old pupil in the days before he chose to switch into the legal business. District Attorney Frank S. Hogan, the fifth Empire State citizen to aspire for the Democratic nomination for Senator in the coming primaries ,is a native of Waterbury, Conn., and it was while the former Holyoke mayor was a teacher of history at the Waterbury High school that the District-Attorney came under his educational wing. They have kept a firm friendship through the years.

✿ ✿

Our apologies to Donald R. Taber of this city. The other day the Oracle told about a young man by the name of Donald Taber being elected mayor of Lebanon, N. H., and said he's a namesake of our Mr. Taber but no relative. The following letter comes to the Oracle's desk from Holyoke's Donald Taber from Little Compton, R. I., where the Tabers are enjoying a holiday; "The item in the Oracle of Friday, August 8, is fine except the Mayor of Lebanon is very much a relative of mine. He is my nephew and is the son of Elwyn L. Taber, who now resides in Conway but who lived in Holyoke until his retirement three years ago."

✿ ✿

A Jesuit sociologist has given one of the more penetrating analyses of what's wrong with love and marriage in the United States. Speaking in Buffalo, N. Y., to a group of sociologists the Rev. Lucius Cervantes, S.J., of Regis College, said the trouble with American youth was that it suffered from schizophrenic romanticism. They brush off such things as personality, similarity of background, ideals and mutual interests and pin their hopes on romantic love as "a magic solution to all of life's problems." Father Cervantes pointed out that a recent poll of 20-year-old women showed their "ideal husband prototypes" to be culled exclusively from what one might call the exhibitionistic careers; stage, screen, politics. There was not a single scientist, professor, teacher, or college president in the group— Hartford Courant.

✿ ✿

The sweetness and light of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox is shattered ~~for many~~ motorists as they leave the grounds. The inspiring level of the concert and the hearty response of the audience is quite a contrast to the way some members of the audience behave once they get behind the wheel of an automobile. The joy of brotherhood is the theme of Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony" which ended the Berkshire Festival concerts Sunday, but the joy evidently lasted only until the end of the performance. Impatient autoists trying to inch believe that not necessarily a lover of one's fellow man."

✿ ✿

One of the fitting memorials left the T-T by John Healy of Dublin was his personal account of a pilgrimage to Croagh Patrick, Ireland's holy mountain, which he is presently covering for his newspaper, the Irish Press. Now it seems that rain fell in virtually every other part of Ireland, but Croagh Patrick was drenched in sunshine for the ascent to the summit yesterday. An estimated 70,000 persons, old and young, came from all parts of the country for the stony, three-mile ascent of the 2,500-foot peak in County Mayo, where tradition has it that St. Patrick retired in the year 441 to refresh his soul in solitude. In a tiny oratory atop "the Sinai of Ireland," forty masses were celebrated and thousands of pilgrims received holy communion. Many of the climbers made the journey over jagged, sliding stones in their bare feet. Atty. John S. Begley expressed the sentiment of most Holyokers who have traveled to the Green Isle when he commented: "I've seen it. It was too rugged for me."

✿ ✿

The story of Henry M. Burt's founding the unique daily newspaper "Among the Clouds," published atop Mt. Washington is told by his grandson, Prof. F. Allen Burt of Boston in a series he is running on the history of the mountain in the Boston Globe. Henry Burt was co-owner the Holyoke Transcript back in the early 1870's along with E. L. Kirtland, who later was superintendent of schools of Holyoke. The Transcript was a weekly newspaper at that time. Burt left the Transcript to establish his paper on Mt. Washington. His grandson has the following to say about this accomplishment; "Burt made his first ascent of the mountain on horseback in 1866 and at once became enamored of the clear air, the sense of spaciousness and almost other-worldliness of the summit. One day in the summer of 1874 while storm-bound at the summit house, Burt pondered the fact that the mountain boasted a railway and carriage road, a first-rate hotel and both a post-office and a telegraph office. He remarked: 'There ought to be a newspaper here for those who have to wait for the clouds to lift.' That remark was father to the deed. Three years later in 1877 the first edition of a daily summer newspaper, Among the Clouds, was published. A cylinder press turned by hand was set up in the front room of the old Tip-Top House, which had become the business and editorial quarters as well as composing room and pressroom. The fact that virtually everyone, either openly or secretly, likes to see his name in print, decided Burt on catering to this basic form of harmless human vanity. The many visitors to the mountain top, each wanting his name in print, soon forced the publishing of two editions a day. It was during that first season in the Tip-Top House that Burt and his staff greeted President Rutherford B. Hayes and his wife and party on their visit to New England's high point. Eventually a system of correspondents covering the entire White Mountain vacation region was set up by the paper and many a college student found an interesting and gainful way of spending a Summer holiday. Among the reporters for the summit paper were Channing H. Cox, governor of Massachusetts from 1921 to 1925; his brother, Louis S. Cox, justice of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts; John H. Bartlett, later governor of New Hampshire, and John Scammon, later a justice of the Supreme Court of New Hampshire. For 22 years Burt edited and published his newspaper and then it was taken over by his son Frank H. Burt, father of the author, following the death of the founder in 1899. For 31 Summers, 'Among the Clouds' carried the news of the summit and of the nearby White Mountain resorts to the outside world. Then came the great fire of 1908 that, in a spectacular blaze, wiped out the printing office. After a lapse of two summers publication was resumed, not at the summit, but at the base station. For eight seasons it continued to flourish from its more practical, if less exotic location. But during the first world war, like so many other institutions, the paper was unable to weather it. The war also forced suspension of the railway. America turned its mind away from summer resorts and, consequently, perhaps the most unusual newspaper ever published in New England also ended."

would lead those devoted to the works of Brahms, Wagner, Debussy, Ravel and Tchaikovsky.

The first BSO weekend concert in the Shed, featuring the works of Brahms, drew 23,776; the second, works by Debussy, Ravel and Tchaikovsky, 26,552; the third, Wagner, 21,946, and the fourth, Beethoven, 34,804.

The first two weekends of concerts in the theater concert hall, when the works of Bach and Mozart were performed by BSO musicians, drew 22,937, an increase of 885 over last year's figures for the same period. Total ticket sales amounted to $56,390. Last year's total was $52,662. One concert of each weekend was scheduled for the Music Shed but on two occasions the concerts were shifted from the theater to the Shed, either because of threatening weather or rain.

Shed Attendance Down

Attendance at the four weekend concerts in the Music Shed by the full orchestra was 419 below last year. This season's total was 107,078, while last year's was 107,479. Ticket sales for the Shed concerts by the full BSO amounted to $315,603.50, compared to $311,400 in 1957.

There was a small increase in the Wednesday evening series of six chamber music concerts in the theater for the benefit of the Tanglewood revolving scholarship fund. This season 8,168 persons attended the Wednesday concerts, compared to 7,025 last year. Gross ticket sales for the chamber music concerts amounted to $11,100.

The Saturday morning rehearsals of the Boston Symphony proved more popular than ever this season. These rehearsals, held for the benefit of the pension fund of the orchestra, were attended by 16,002 this year, an increase of 2, 133 over last year. The gross income from the sale of tickets was $14,223.50.

Although yesterday afternoon's crowd was the largest for a regular concert by the BSO, the record for a single event at Tanglewood this season was set Thursday night when 14,588 showed up for the annual Tanglewood on Parade benefit, which grossed $35,190.50 for the Berkshire Music Center, the school at Tanglewood which is operated by the Boston Symphony.

Friends Draw 25,235

In addition to the 168,773 visitors to the Festival events, 25,235 persons attended the 41 events open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Dr. Munch, who went directly from Tanglewood to Boston last night to pick up his visa for his return to France, left Logan Airport this morning for Idlewild Airport in New York, where he boarded an Air France plane for Paris.

During his stay in Europe, Dr.

Tanglewood
Continued on Second Page

1 X

HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
D [illegible]44

AUG 16 1958

Tanglewood Receipts Highest on Record

Lenox, Mass. — The total number of visitors to 1958 Berkshire Festival events at Tanglewood was approximately 168,773. Last year's total was 162,936. In addition forty-one student and other concerts open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center were attended by 25,235 people.

The ticket sale total for this year's festival was $376,117.50; in 1957, $366,943; in 1956, $297,9[illegible]

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292

AUG 14 1958

TANGLEWOOD
Saturday, August 9

By A. C. S.

What a joy it must be for the members of the Boston Symphony to play under Pierre Monteux. No flashy effects for him; no distortion of tempi or poorly balanced ensembles. To make beautiful music from the the score at hand seems to be his credo and he succeeds admirably. He was the star of the evening at Saturday's concert. With a minimum of physical effort but maximum control, he brought forth the finest playing from each member of the orchestra. The result was memorable.

Beethoven's Suite from "Creatures of Prometheus" opened the evening, and the Leonore Overtrue No. 3 brought it to a dramatic close. Between them came the Beethoven Violin Concerto and the Nobilissima Visione by Hindemith. Berl Senofsky, 1955 winner of the Queen Elizabeth of Belgium International Music Competition was soloist in the concerto. He exhibited firm control of the tonal resources of the instrument and a sure technique. His approach to the work seemed cautious at first. There were even moments in the first movement which came close to dullness, but this concept seemed perfectly logical by the conclusion of the rondo. One might have wished he had selected cadenzas more in keeping with his leisurely interpretation than those by Kreisler. The total effect was nonetheless satisfying.

Mr. Monteux gave the finest reading of the Hindemith suite we have heard. The tempi were right, the details in focus, and the rather rambling passacaglia was made intelligible. The evening was a personal triumph for this wonderful conductor and both audience and orchestra rose for a final ovation.

TANGLEWOOD
Sunday, August 10
By C. D.

The final concert of the Tanglewood season was conducted by Dr. Munch and devoted to the Ninth Symphony of Beethoven. There was an Overture written by William Walton two years ago in honor of the 70th anniversary of the founding of Johannesburg, South Africa. The overture was capricious and gay and abounding in loud climaxes that came quite often and with no apparent reason.

However, the important business of the afternoon was the Ninth Symphony. The capable soloists were Adele Addison, Soprano, Florence Kopleff, contralto, Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. The large and excellently trained festival chorus was prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson. Dr. Munch has closed the Tanglewood season for some years now with Beethoven's Choral Symphony and his interpretation is well known. As always, he achieved his results with a dynamic rhythmic drive at the expense of finesse. In the case of the Ninth there is no doubt that a cumulative power is achieved by this almost brutal holding to the beat and at the end of the performance there was a rousing ovation for Dr. Munch, the Orchestra, the Chorus, and the soloists.

TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE
Thursday, August 7

By L. F.

Tanglewood On Parade! The annual "showpiece" of the Berkshire Festival season and certainly one of the musical highlights of the summer for both residents of and visitors to the Berkshire area.

This year was no exception, as over 14,000 persons were treated to a little of everything Tanglewood has to offer, and an added bonus of a visit by Arthur Fiedler and his world-famous Boston Pops Orchestra.

The program opened with choral and opera concerts at 4 p.m. in the Barn and Theatre-Concert Hall presented by the Tanglewood Study Group and the Opera Department. These were followed by a fanfare, conducted by Roger Voisin, first trumpet of the Boston Symphony, and a welcome to the huge crowd by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center.

The hours from 6 to 7:30 were taken up by concerts by the student orchestra, opera department, composition department and Tanglewood Choir. Following this, many of the huge throng took advantage of the hour prior to the main concert in the shed to picnic on the huge, rolling lawns of the beautiful estate.

The Boston Symphony opened its half of the program with the Il Guarany Overture by Gomes and the Pantomine, Dance of Terror, The Magic Circle and Ritual Dance of Fire from Falla's El Amor Brujo. These were exceptionally well-conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho, who gave them a grace and styling which brought out all the romantic beauty of the Spanish music.

Aaron Copland then played his own Piano Concerto, with the Orchestra conducted by concertmaster Richard Burgin. Though this modern work was very well performed, I disagree with its being chosen as a Tanglewood On Parade selection, as the large majority of the crowd came to hear lighter and less-confusing music and were not very appreciative of Mr. Copland's dissonances.

But they got what they came for when Mr. Fiedler took over, for the Pops, if this is possible, get better and better every year. Opening with Offenbach's' spirited "Gaite Parisienne" Suite and moving through traditional Pops numbers, the highlight of which was a cleverly arranged selection, Dancing Through The Years, which included everything from the Charleston to rock-and-roll, they supposedly closed with 76 Trombones, from Meredith Willson's The Music Man. This was complete with a Stars and Stripes counter melody and from the drive and gusto with which it was played one would have thought that there really were "76 trombones and 110 cornets" somewhere in the shed.

This was not the end, however, for Mr. Fiedler was called back by the receptive audience to perform six encores, and the lights in the huge shed finally had to be turned on so that the concert could end. For many would gladly have stayed and listened to this wonderful orchestra half the night.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN
Circ. D. 703,449 - S. 882,925

AUG 17 1958

Best Berkshire Season

By MILES KASTENDIECK

MORE AND MORE people have been attending the Berkshire Festival events this Summer. With the total approximately 168,773 almost 6,000 more than last year were accounted for in the final summing up.

This number is a whole shed full in itself. Obviously the weather did not prevent the crowds from coming.

One of the interesting facts about the figures is that the Wagner weekend drew the smallest number. Whether this indicates a positive dip in interest in Wagner or a lack of enthusiasm for the kind of programs offered remains debatable. It is quite probable that the selection of large units from the operas would be more alluring fare.

In the light of attendance records, the Great Composer idea as a focal point for the second year must be considered successful. The Brahms, Debussy-Ravel, Wagner, and Beethoven weekends did not offer much beyond standard repertory.

Worth Hearing

The sprinkling of contemporary works that punctuated each concert brought only three that were unfamiliar: Copland's Orchestral Variations, Piston's Viola Concerto, and Vaughan Williams' Eighth Symphony, all worth hearing to be sure.

If this policy continues, then a more expensive point of view should be taken. The time has come for contemporary entries. Two great composers like Sibelius and Prokofieff certainly deserve inclusion.

Inevitably Handel should be selected for his anniversary year with perhaps more choral participation than ever before, just as long as "Messiah" is not one of the works selected.

As a variant on the composer weekends, the programs might be built around nationalism in music. German, French and Russian weekends would be logical. Perhaps an American weekend might be worked out.

Devise Program

It is again time for taking stock of American composers. A most interesting series of programs could be devised that would make the public aware that native talent can hold its own in any lineup.

Though 13,771 people came to hear the Beethoven Ninth at the end of the Festival, a record-breaking crowd of 14,568 attended Tanglewood-on-Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center.

The main attraction was Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra. Perhaps this was just a time to let down hair otherwise so properly cared for in regular concerts of the full Boston Symphony.

The playing of the orchestra is still the chief lure of the Berkshire Festival. Performing as it does in a perfect setting, however, makes a trip to Tanglewood the more memorable.

What festival in the world has more beautiful natural surroundings?

VARIETY
NEW YORK, N.Y.
W

AUG 20 1958

TANGLEWOOD CONCERTS UP GROSS TO $366,943

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 19.

An increase of 5,837 in attendance, to 168,773, and of $9,174 in gross, to $366,943, marked the 21st season of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox. A record-breaking crowd of 14,588 attended Tanglewood-on-Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center. Gross ticket sale amounted to $35,190.

In addition to concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, 25,235 people were present at 41 student and other concerts open to Friends of the Center. Four weekend series of concerts by the full orchestra drew 86,045; grossed $315,603.

Post
WALLINGFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 3,408

AUG 14 1958

Excellent Season Comes To Close At Tanglewood

The 21st season of the Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., closed Sunday with the now traditional performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. The huge crowd, though dampened by a sudden rainstorm that began just as conductor Charles Munch raised his baton for the start of the finale and impressive choral movement of the major symphonic work, gave the orchestra, soloists and Festival Chorus rousing ovation as the last note of the season was played.

The total number of visitors to the Festival this summer was approximately 168,773. Last year's total was 162,936. In addition 41 student and other concerts open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center were attended by 25,235. Total ticket sales for this year's Festival was $376,117.50, about $10,000 more than last year and over $75,000 more than two years ago.

The total attendance for the four weekend concerts by the full orchestra in the Music Shed attracted 86,045 with the Beethoven weekend, the last one, attracting the largest throng, almost 35,000.

Saturday evening concert goers were treated to a spirited presentation of the Beethoven "Violin Voncerto in D" with Berl Senofsky as soloist. Under the technically perfect direction of Pierre Monteux the orchestra performed admirably two other Beethoven works, "Suite from the Prometheus Ballet" and the "Leonore Overture" as well as the difficult Saint Francis ballet music by Hindemith.

Dr. Munch's most alive baton put the fine Boston Symphony through dynamic if not always refined paces on Sunday afternoon in William Walton's "Johannesburg Festival Overture" and the Beethoven Ninth. It was a fine Tanglewood season, indeed, with only the continuing traffic problems exerting the slightest negative influence.

—H.K.

HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
D. 118 644

AUG 16 1958

Tanglewood Receipts Highest on Record

Lenox, Mass. — The total number of visitors to 1958 Berkshire Festival events at Tanglewood was approximately 168,773. Last year's total was 162,936. In addition forty-one student and other concerts open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center were attended by 25,235 people.

The ticket sale total for this year's festival was $376,117.50; in 1957, $366,943; in 1956, $297,956.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292

AUG 14 1958

TANGLEWOOD
Saturday, August 9

By A. C. S.

What a joy it must be for the members of the Boston Symphony to play under Pierre Monteux. No flashy effects for him, no distortion of tempi or poorly balanced ensembles. To make beautiful music from the the score at hand seems to be his credo and he succeeds admirably. He was the star of the evening at Saturday's concert. With a minimum of physical effort but maximum control, he brought forth the finest playing from each member of the orchestra. The result was memorable.

Beethoven's Suite from "Creatures of Prometheus" opened the evening, and the Leonore Overtrue No. 3 brought it to a dramatic close. Between them came the Beethoven Violin Concerto and the Nobilissima Visione by Hindemith. Berl Senofsky, 1955 winner of the Queen Elizabeth of Belgium International Music Competition was soloist in the concerto. He exhibited firm control of the tonal resources of the instrument and a sure technique. His approach to the work seemed cautious at first. There were even moments in the first movement which came close to dullness, but this concept seemed perfectly logical by the conclusion of the rondo. One might have wished he had selected cadenzas more in keeping with his leisurely interpretation than those by Kreisler. The total effect was nonetheless satisfying.

Mr. Monteux gave the finest reading of the Hindemith suite we have heard. The tempi were right, the details in focus, and the rather rambling passacaglia was made intelligible. The evening was a personal triumph for this wonderful conductor and both audience and orchestra rose for a final ovation.

TANGLEWOOD
Sunday, August 10
By C. D.

The final concert of the Tanglewood season was conducted by Dr. Munch and devoted to the Ninth Symphony of Beethoven. There was an Overture written by William Walton two years ago in honor of the 70th anniversary of the founding of Johannesburg, South Africa. The overture was capricious and gay and abounding in loud climaxes that came quite often and with no apparent reason.

However, the important business of the afternoon was the Ninth Symphony. The capable soloists were Adele Addison, Soprano, Florence Kopleff, contralto, Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. The large and excellently trained festival chorus was prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson. Dr. Munch has closed the Tanglewood season for some years now with Beethoven's Choral Symphony and his interpretation is well known. As always, he achieved his results with a dynamic rhythmic drive at the expense of finesse. In the case of the Ninth there is no doubt that a cumulative power is achieved by this almost brutal holding to the beat and at the end of the performance there was a rousing ovation for Dr. Munch, the Orchestra, the Chorus, and the soloists.

TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE
Thursday, August 7

By L. F.

Tanglewood On Parade! The annual "showpiece" of the Berkshire Festival season and certainly one of the musical highlights of the summer for both residents of and visitors to the Berkshire area.

This year was no exception, as over 14,000 persons were treated to a little of everything Tanglewood has to offer, and an added bonus of a visit by Arthur Fiedler and his world-famous Boston Pops Orchestra.

The program opened with choral and opera concerts at 4 p.m. in the Barn and Theatre-Concert Hall presented by the Tanglewood Study Group and the Opera Department. These were followed by a fanfare, conducted by Roger Voisin, first trumpet of the Boston Symphony, and a welcome to the huge crowd by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center.

The hours from 6 to 7:30 were taken up by concerts by the student orchestra, opera department, composition department and Tanglewood Choir. Following this, many of the huge throng took advantage of the hour prior to the main concert in the shed to picnic on the huge, rolling lawns of the beautiful estate.

The Boston Symphony opened its half of the program with the Il Guarany Overture by Gomes and the Pantomine, Dance of Terror, The Magic Circle and Ritual Dance of Fire from Falla's El Amor Brujo. These were exceptionally well-conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho, who gave them a grace and styling which brought out all the romantic beauty of the Spanish music.

Aaron Copland then played his own Piano Concerto, with the Orchestra conducted by concertmaster Richard Burgin. Though this modern work was very well performed, I disagree with its being chosen as a Tanglewood On Parade selection, as the large majority of the crowd came to hear lighter and less-confusing music and were not very appreciative of Mr. Copland's dissonances.

But they got what they came for when Mr. Fiedler took over, for the Pops, if this is possible, get better and better every year. Opening with Offenbach's' spirited "Gaite Parisienne" Suite and moving through traditional Pops numbers, the highlight of which was a cleverly arranged selection, Dancing Through The Years, which included everything from the Charleston to rock-and-roll, they supposedly closed with 76 Trombones, from Meredith Willson's The Music Man. This was complete with a Stars and Stripes counter melody and from the drive and gusto with which it was played one would have thought that there really were "76 trombones and 110 cornets" somewhere in the shed.

This was not the end, however, for Mr. Fiedler was called back by the receptive audience to perform six encores, and the lights in the huge shed finally had to be turned on so that the concert could end. For many would gladly have stayed and listened to this wonderful orchestra half the night.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN
Circ. D. 703,449 - S. 882,925

AUG 17 1958

Best Berkshire Season

By MILES KASTENDIECK

MORE AND MORE people have been attending the Berkshire Festival events this Summer. With the total approximately 168,773 almost 6,000 more than last year were accounted for in the final summing up.

This number is a whole shed full in itself. Obviously the weather did not prevent the crowds from coming.

One of the interesting facts about the figures is that the Wagner weekend drew the smallest number. Whether this indicates a positive dip in interest in Wagner or a lack of enthusiasm for the kind of programs offered remains debatable. It is quite probable that the selection of large units from the operas would be more alluring fare.

In the light of attendance records, the Great Composer idea as a focal point for the second year must be considered successful. The Brahms, Debussy-Ravel, Wagner, and Beethoven weekends did not offer much beyond standard repertory.

Worth Hearing

The sprinkling of contemporary works that punctuated each concert brought only three that were unfamiliar: Copland's Orchestral Variations, Piston's Viola Concerto, and Vaughan Williams' Eighth Symphony, all worth hearing to be sure.

If this policy continues, then a more expensive point of view should be taken. The time has come for contemporary entries. Two great composers like Sibelius and Prokofieff certainly deserve inclusion.

Inevitably Handel should be selected for his anniversary year with perhaps more choral participation than ever before, just as long as "Messiah" is not one of the works selected.

As a variant on the composer weekends, the programs might be built around nationalism in music. German, French and Russian weekends would be logical. Perhaps an American weekend might be worked out.

Devise Program

It is again time for taking stock of American composers. A most interesting series of programs could be devised that would make the public aware that native talent can hold its own in any lineup.

Though 13,771 people came to hear the Beethoven Ninth at the end of the Festival, a record-breaking crowd of 14,588 attended Tanglewood-on-Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center.

The main attraction was Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra. Perhaps this was just a time to let down hair otherwise so properly cared for in regular concerts of the full Boston Symphony.

The playing of the orchestra is still the chief lure of the Berkshire Festival. Performing as it does in a perfect setting, however, makes a trip to Tanglewood the more memorable.

What festival in the world has more beautiful natural surroundings?

VARIETY
NEW YORK, N.Y.
W.

AUG 20 1958

TANGLEWOOD CONCERTS UP GROSS TO $366,943

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 19.

An increase of 5,837 in attendance, to 168,773, and of $9,174 in gross, to $366,943, marked the 21st season of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox. A record-breaking crowd of 14,588 attended Tanglewood-on-Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center. Gross ticket sale amounted to $35,190.

In addition to concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, 25,235 people were present at 41 student and other concerts open to Friends of the Center. Four weekend series of concerts by the full orchestra drew 86,045; grossed $315,603.

Post
WALLINGFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 3,408

AUG 14 1958

Excellent Season Comes To Close At Tanglewood

The 21st season of the Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., closed Sunday with the now traditional performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. The huge crowd, though dampened by a sudden rainstorm that began just as conductor Charles Munch raised his baton for the start of the finale and impressive choral movement of the major symphonic work, gave the orchestra, soloists and Festival Chorus rousing ovation as the last note of the season was played.

The total number of visitors to the Festival this summer was approximately 168,773. Last year's total was 162,936. In addition 41 student and other concerts open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center were attended by 25,235. Total ticket sales for this year's Festival was $376,117.50, about $10,000 more than last year and over $75,000 more than two years ago.

The total attendance for the four weekend concerts by the full orchestra in the Music Shed attracted 86,045 with the Beethoven weekend, the last one, attracting the largest throng, almost 35,000.

Saturday evening concert goers were treated to a spirited presentation of the Beethoven "Violin Voncerto in D" with Berl Senofsky as soloist. Under the technically perfect direction of Pierre Monteux the orchestra performed admirably two other Beethoven works, "Suite from the Prometheus Ballet" and the "Leonore Overture" as well as the difficult Saint Francis ballet music by Hindemith.

Dr. Munch's most alive baton put the fine Boston Symphony through dynamic if not always refined paces on Sunday afternoon in William Walton's "Johannesburg Festival Overture" and the Beethoven Ninth. It was a fine Tanglewood season, indeed, with only the continuing traffic problems exerting the slightest negative influence.

—H.K.

[213]

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 113,886

AUG 17 1958

Second Thoughts On Music

Tanglewood's 21st Season Ends On Triumphant Note

Beethoven's Works Predominate in Final Concerts By Boston Symphony Orchestra

By WILLARD M. CLARK

The 21st season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, concluded last Sunday with a triumphant performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony conducted by Charles Munch. The Brotherhood of Man is nowhere better exemplified than at Tanglewood where thousands meet each week to listen to great music played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, so it was eminently appropriate that the great "Ode to Joy" should conclude the season.

Draws Large Audiences

Beethoven's music predominated during the final week end concerts by the full orchestra in the Music Shed and Beethoven's music drew the largest audiences. Of course, fair weather, the little we had of it, was on hand for the final week end concerts.

Among the high lights of these final concerts was a stunning performance of Honegger's "Prelude, Fugue and Postlude" under the direction of Charles Munch. Then there was a good performance of Beethoven's Seventh Symphony, marred by the whirlwind pace which Mr. Munch takes these days, especially when he gets excited. That fine, dependable pianist Eugene Istomin displayed his sensitivity and musicianship in a glowing performance of the "Emperor" concerto.

Rewarding Performance

Pierre Monteux took over and offered a rewarding performance of a suite from the ballet, "The Creatures of Prometheus," aided greatly by those fine soloists Samuel Mayes, cello; Doriot Dwyer Anthony, flute, and Bernard Zighera, harp. It is a lovely work, one which should be heard in Springfield.

Berl Senofsky, a young violinist and a winner of the Queen Elizabeth of Belgium contest, made his first appearance at the Festival playing Beethoven's violin concerto. He appeared nervous, but gave a finely detailed and balanced performance, revealing adequate technique and a tone which was on the small side, but very pure and which had good projection. Mr. Monteaux gave sympathetic, beautifully balanced collaboration.

Excerpts From Ballet

Like Mr. Munch, the French conductor chose to leaven the music of Beethoven with a contemporary work and chose to present a suite from the ballet "Saint Francis" by Hindemith. Titled "Nobilissima Visione," the suite was made up of excerpts from the ballet which were effective without the need of visualization. It felt strange on the ears after Beethoven. This concert concluded with a fine performance of the overture to "Leonora" No. 3.

The final program last Sunday was directed by Charles Munch and it opened with Sir William Walton's "Johannesburg Festival" overture. This is a lusty work which bore well the heavy handed performance Mr. Munch put forth.

Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, with its choral "Ode to Joy" as a final movement provided opportunity for a quartet of excellent singers, Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor and Donald Gramm, bass, along with the Festival Chorus which had been prepared by Hugh Ross, and Alfred Nash Patterson. Beethoven makes tremendous demands upon his singers and they were adequately met by the chorus and more than adequately met by the quartet. Again, Mr. Munch almost ruined the finale of the symphony because of the breakneck speed he chose, a speed almost too great for even the virtuosi of the orchestra.

Sets Attendance Record

In spite of the weather, final figures show the 1958 season ahead of last year. A total of 168,773 visitors attended the Festival events, as compared with 162,936 last season. In addition, 41 student and other concerts open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center were attended by 25,235 people.

The total ticket sales for this season was $376,117.50 as compared with $366,943 in 1957 and $297,956 in 1956.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 - S. 1,189,293

AUG 31 1958

A VISITING CRITIC GOES FESTIVAL-HOPPING

By ARTHUR JACOBS

THAT music is international, and that the British and Americans inherit a common culture and a common language—what half-truths! In fact, a visiting British music critic finds this a New World in musical as well as other respects. Economic and social differences, as well as differences in artistic taste, make it so.

The word "festival," now international, is of English provenance in its musical sense. But nowhere in Britain—and, I think, nowhere in Europe—can one find a parallel to the combined festivals and music schools at Tanglewood and Aspen. To envisage Tanglewood in English terms one must imagine the Hallé Orchestra with a permanent summer site in, say, the Malvern Hills, with audiences of up to 15,000. Even to write the words induces in an Englishman a sense of wishful absurdity.

Festival Towns

As for a British equivalent of Aspen, it would hardly be conceivable to transport two dozen leading concert artists to some such tiny town as Mallaig near the Isle of Skye, and to provide them with performances and pupils sufficient to justify a nine-week summer stay.

What distinguishes Tanglewood to the British eye is the involvement of one of the world's major orchestras, the Boston Symphony, with the teaching faculty of a summer school. What distinguishes it also is the willingness of New Yorkers and Bostonians to drive close on 150 miles (a dauntingly long distance in Britain) for a Tanglewood week-end. But it is perhaps the necessity of attracting these visitors that keeps the musical programs somewhat conventional.

At Aspen, however, about seven hours' drive in two buses from Denver, it was put to me that "no one can commute to us, so we don't have to be popular." America is so easily identified in Europe with the commercialization of the arts that Aspen deserves to be better known. Here, nearly 8,000 feet up in the Rockies, must surely be as uncommercial a festival as any in the world.

Since the box office is apparently of small financial importance (compared with private donations and income from the school) it was surprising to find little exploration of the rich though unpopular fields of medieval and Renaissance music. Yet to me Aspen's charm was irresistible—a small town bathed in music-making, with the captivating improbability of the Juilliard String Quartet magnificently playing Schubert and Bartók in a circus tent with a backdrop of spruce-covered mountains.

Jazz was excluded from official participation in the Aspen Festival, and controversy has been in progress on this point. It seems relevant to recall that at the Vancouver Festival (which I had seen inaugurated with a commendable degree of success) jazz concerts were included, but were among the worst attended of all festival events.

It was strange at Vancouver to attend "Don Giovanni" and to realize that this capably managed production was the city's first professionally-produced Mozart opera. Yet, on the other hand, Vancouver provided the opportunity to hear Glenn Gould, who has attained the status of a young celebrity in the United States and in his native Canada but who has yet to display his gifts as a pianist in London.

Concert Atmosphere

The Hollywood Bowl provided a surprise—not in its size, which is familiar by repute in Europe, but in its agreeable concert atmosphere. A friend's gloomy warning that Moura Lympany's playing of Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 2 would be disturbed by popcorn and active small boys proved unnecessary; and the amplification, from loudspeakers only on the platform and not distributed about the amphitheatre, was discreet. Only the continuous high chirping of an all-Californian rally of crickets disturbed Rachmaninoff.

An open-air concert in the much smaller Stern Grove of San Francisco, on the other hand, was crudely amplified. At least, however, Kurt Herbert Adler's conducting gave the opportunity of hearing Mendelssohn's "Reformation" Symphony, a rarity at home.

To pass through New York in mid-August and find the Lewisohn Stadium concerts ended was to evoke a contrast with London, where the Promenade Concerts organized by the B. B. C. occupy the Albert Hall every evening except Sunday from mid-July to mid-September. London has no closed summer season for music; but then, it might be cynically said that London has no summer.

---

hristian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 158,729

AUG 23 1958

nother Tang

By J

Lenox, Mas

High level of performa erican soloists, and gener r weather were the dis shing characteristics of weeks of Berkshire Fes
certs presented by the Symphony Orchestra
nglewood this summer.
Even the worst weather prevent what would lly be considered large dance for the events. W son attendance at cha sic concerts in most ually may be numbered i ndreds, while major ony orchestra concerts tricted by the seating c of the auditoriums, B nglewood an average of 4,000 persons attended the six programs of cha chestra music, presente st two weekends. Twelve rts by the full orchest succeeding four wee eraged more than 7,000
for each.

n Draws Listeners

Only reasonably good w needed to swell Tangl tendance to astonishing hen the sun shines, th arers in the Shed bec nority, with the surro wns filled by happy an nted listeners who do n e inside hearers in the t—in fact, quite the many occasions. Thus e weather relented f nal weekend, close to rsons attended the thre rts, with the season's dience reserved for th ncert which Charles rought to a close with t aditional performance eethoven Ninth Symph
ug. 10.

In one respect, Tang mphasis on mass a ight have been carried he first two weeks of mate chamber music
elong in the smalle
Concert Hall and not in Shed. In the past these ave been among the ghtful and fascinati ented by this or any chestra. And so they ear, except when the or the management's changed the locale to th

It was not that the varied. All three prog the opening Bach series Mozart programs the week were beautifu formed. But the effe was not the same in Perhaps an exception made for the Bach M minor, presented by the Glee Club and Radcliff Society with G. Walla

[214]

OPPING

Stadium concerts end- evoke a contrast with where the Promenade organized by the the Albert Hall except Sunday to mid-Septem- has no closed sum- for music; but then be cynically said that has no summer.

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 158,729
AUG 23 [illegible]

Another Tanglewood Summer

By Jules Wolffers

Lenox, Mass.

High level of performance, American soloists, and generally poor weather were the distinguishing characteristics of the six weeks of Berkshire Festival concerts presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this summer.

Even the worst weather cannot prevent what would normally be considered large attendance for the events. Winter season attendance at chamber music concerts in most cities usually may be numbered in the hundreds, while major symphony orchestra concerts are restricted by the seating capacity of the auditoriums. But at Tanglewood an average of close to 4,000 persons attended each of the six programs of chamber orchestra music, presented the first two weekends. Twelve concerts by the full orchestra in the succeeding four weekends averaged more than 7,000 listeners for each.

Sun Draws Listeners

Only reasonably good weather is needed to swell Tanglewood attendance to astonishing totals. When the sun shines, the 6,000 hearers in the Shed become a minority, with the surrounding lawns filled by happy and contented listeners who do not envy the inside hearers in the slightest—in fact, quite the reverse on many occasions. Thus, when the weather relented for the final weekend, close to 35,000 persons attended the three concerts, with the season's largest audience reserved for the final concert which Charles Munch brought to a close with the now traditional performance of the Beethoven Ninth Symphony on Aug. 10.

In one respect, Tanglewood's emphasis on mass audiences might have been carried too far. The first two weeks of more intimate chamber music concerts belong in the smaller Theater-Concert Hall and not in the vast Shed. In the past these programs have been among the most delightful and fascinating presented by this or any other orchestra. And so they were this year, except when the weather or the management's schedule changed the locale to the Shed. It was not that the quality suffered. All three programs on the opening Bach series and the Mozart programs the following week were beautifully performed. But the effect simply was not the same in the Shed. Perhaps an exception should be made for the Bach Mass in B minor, presented by the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society with G. Wallace Woodworth conducting, but even here the point may be made that a smaller hall would make the music still more significant.

From the opening program of the four Bach orchestral suites to the end of the festival Dr. Munch provided nothing less than inspired and inspiring leadership. Conducting 13 of the 18 regular concerts, he added a new power of insight to his proven skill, knowledge, and experience for results that brought the hearers to enthusiasm time after time.

Master of the Week

In the main, Dr. Munch followed the excellent pattern established last year with each week devoted to an established master but with a judicious admixture of contemporary music to bring variety and added interest. In addition to Bach and Mozart the list included Brahms, Wagner, and Beethoven, with one set of programs devoted principally to Debussy, Ravel, and Tchaikovsky.

Of the performances heard by this reviewer, two, particularly, stand out in memory — Dr. Munch's original and revealing interpretation of the Beethoven Seventh and the superb playing of Byron Janis as soloist in the Rachmaninov Piano Concerto No. 3. Aided by the conductor's completely sympathetic collaboration, Mr. Janis brought the audience to its feet in a long and tumultuous ovation for the fervency of his expression and the sheer excitement of his brilliant pianism.

It must have been more than accident that motivated the choice of so many American performers for the solo assignments. Besides Mr. Janis, appreciative audiences heard the pianists Leon Fleisher, Leonard Pennario, Eugene Istomin, and Seymour Lipkin. If Lukas Foss was not born on these shores, he came here as a young boy and has been here since as student, pianist, composer, and conductor.

With the exception of Zino Francescatti, the string soloists also were American, with Berl Senofsky giving a musicianly and controlled performance of the Beethoven Violin Concerto for his first appearance with the orchestra. Ruth Posselt joined Joseph de Pasquale, the orchestra's first violist, in the Mozart Sinfonia Concertante for Violin and Viola. Mr. de Pasquale also performed the new Piston Viola Concerto, which the orchestra has performed 12 times this past season.

American Soloists

Margaret Harshaw was the featured soloist during the Wagner weekend, and with the exception of Hilde Gueden all the other vocal soloists—Adele Addison, Blake Stern, Eunice Alberts, Florence Kopleff, and Blake Stern — were like Miss Harshaw native to these shores.

This parade of American talent quite made its point, but perhaps it might be better in future years to keep an even balance between foreign and native soloists. In any event, with the exception of Mr. Woodworth's appearance and half a concert conducted by Hugh Ross, the four guest conducting assignments, one for each of the last four weekends, fell to the capable and experienced hands of Pierre Monteux.

While it is always a privilege and pleasure to have Mr. Monteux conduct the orchestra, here perhaps is where other conductors might be given an opportunity to share the guest appearances. But for the orchestra's gala "Tanglewood on Parade" three conductors were heard — Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin, and Arthur Fiedler. On this occasion Aaron Copland was soloist in his own Piano Concerto and a record crowd of 14,588 was made happy by these and other activities.

Stravinsky and Honegger have been very prominent on Boston Symphony programs in recent years. Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" was played again this summer, as it was last year, and his "Petrouchka" also was heard. Honegger's Prelude, Fugue and Postlude opened the Beethoven weekend, and other contemporary works included Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione"; Walton's Johannesburg Festival Overture; the Prelude to Act III from "Les Euménides" by Milhaud; the Bartók Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta; the aforementioned Piston Viola Concerto; the Symphony No. 8 by Vaughan Williams; and the Copland Orchestral Variations.

Charles Munch, musical director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as seen in action at Tanglewood by Constantine Manos, photographer. Dr. Munch conducted 13 of the 18 regular concerts this summer at the Berkshire Music Festival in Massachusetts. Pierre Monteux shared the podium as guest conductor. The programs consisted mainly of music by Bach, Mozart, Brahms, Wagner, Beethoven, Debussy, Ravel, and Tchaikovsky. Dr. Munch is also the director of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school operated at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra concurrently with the festival. Aaron Copland is the dean of this school.

[215]

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 113,886

AUG 24 1958

Second Thoughts On Music

Interest of Young People Increases at Tanglewood

Shed Concerts and Student Activities Show Growing Appeal for Youth; Boston Symphony Necessarily Plays Works Within Its Repertory

By WILLARD M. CLARK

During the past six weeks we have tried to bring you a comprehensive review of the happenings at the Berkshire Music Festival and Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox. Of course, you can't please everyone and that is a question the ~~Boston~~ Symphony Orchestra, its manage~~ment and its con~~ductor Charles Munch face every year.

Personally, we feel it is wrong to criticize the festival, as a whole, without some concrete suggestions as to changes. We have none. It seems to us that the Berkshire Festival is one place where people may hear the best music finely played. If they want the exotic or esoteric, let them go elsewhere. There are always complaints about the programs.

Within Repertory

We believe that, due to the scarcity of rehearsal time, the orchestra must play works within its repertory. There is no time to learn new works. Indeed, if they did, and played them at Tanglewood, the majority of the listeners would feel that they were cheated. Better a Tchaikowsky fourth than a Copland first, say they. So, if you want to hear a fine repertory played as only the virtuosi of the Boston Symphony Orchestra can play it, come to Tanglewood.

One suggestion might not be amiss. With all respect for the eminent 83-year old Pierre Monteux, whose readings are more communicative each year, might it not be possible to invite some of our younger conductors, even American conductors, to share the podium with Charles Munch? The Berkshire Festival is becoming traditional within its lifetime. Pupils of the Berkshire Center, composers of the Berkshire Center and the numerous faculty members within the Center are sure of having their works played, or appearing before the audiences in some capacity.

It gets rather tiring listening to works by the same composers year after year. This past season Aaron Copland had a real time, with several works being played and he personally appearing as pianist in his piano concerto, a dated work of the early jazz era. Lukas Foss remains as one of the most significant of American composers and one of the best interpreters of the piano music of Bach and Mozart.

Young Pianists

Young American artists did get a chance this season. Fine pianist's like Byron Janis, Leon Fleischer, Eugene Istomin and Leonard Pennario, along with Seymour Lipkin, who also doubled as conductor-instuctor, had their chance to play with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Janis making a terrific impression playing Rachmaninoff's third piano concert. Fleischer played less well than when we heard him last. Pennario was a good routine pianist in the first piano conerto by Liszt and Istomin was his estimable self in the Beethoven "Emperior" piano concerto.

At this time, Seymour Lipkin, fine pianist, and Lukus Foss also were heard in Bach and Mozart works. The young violinist, Berl Senofsky was heard in the Beethoven violin concerto and one realized why he won the coveted Queen Elisabeth of Belgium contest. A fine young violinist, who just escapes being great.

There are many other activities at Tanglewood than the Boston orchestra. This season the student orchestra was particularly good and a half dozen student conductors certainly put it through its paces. It was in these concerts you heard contemporary works. I remember particularly two works, "Music for Brasses, Piano and Two Harps" by Hindemith and "Music For a Group Instruments" by Schoenberg. Fine music, vividly interpreted by the youthful conductors.

Composers' Forums

Then there is the composers' forum, held once a week. The composition pupils get an opportunity to hear their works played and also to hear critical comments upon them after performance. We attended one such forum. The youthful works had to things in common. Each was lengthy. Each eschewed any melody. These young people write music that is cerebral and mathematical. However, don't dispair, we have heard recent works from student composers of a decade ago which show signs of melody and understandable rhythms.

To our mind, the great thing about the Berkshire Music Center is not what is accomplished during one six-week period, but the fact that several hundred young people from all over the world can get together and work and talk about the things in which they are most interested. There is always an endless flow of ideas. As one student said to us, "I have to go home and correlate al I've heard and done here."

Whatever the complaints, the past season was far ahead in attendance and gross intake of last season. What impresses us most is the fact that the audiences seem to be getting younger. There are literally hundreds of young people to be seen at the Shed concerts and the many concerts open to the Friends. This is as it should be. Just remember, the Berkshire Festival means great music played as only the Boston Symphony Orchestra can play it.

STAATS HEROLD 24 August 1958

Berkshire Musikfest: Abschluss der 21. Saison in Tanglewood

Wie alljährlich krönte auch diesmal die Krone aller Kompositionen — Beethovens Neunte Symphonie — die Flut der musikalischen Veranstaltungen. Charles Munch dirigierte das Boston Symphonie-Orchester, zu welchem sich der ausgezeichnet trainierte und geführte Festical Chorus gesellte, sowie die Solisten Helene Addison, Florence Kopleff, Blake Stern und Donald Gramm. Eröffnet wurde das Programm mit der Johannesburg Festival Ouverture von Walton. — Insgesamt wurden während des Sommerfestes von 1958 168,773 Besucher gezählt, womit die vorjährige Ziffer um mehr als 6000 Personen überboten erscheint. Auch die Einnahme aus den Eintrittskarten weist statistisch eine Erhöhung auf, die ins Gewicht fällt: 1956 wurden rund $280,000 eingenommen, 1957 $367,000, dieses Jahr $376,117.50.

Die ersten beiden Wochenendkonzerte in der Theater-Konzert-Halle erregten nicht weniger Interesse als die vier Wochenend-Konzertgruppen im "Music Shed". Ebenso starke Anteilnahme fanden die sechs Kammermusikkonzerte an den Mittwochabenden und die Samstag-Vormittagproben des Boston-Orchesters, die zugunsten des Pensionsfonds stattfanden, erbrachten $16,000. Die Tanglewood-Parade zugunsten des Berkshire Music Center am 7. August hatte einen Rekordbesuch aufzuweisen.

*

Dreizehn Konzerte dirigierte Dr. Munnh. Bachs B-Moll-Messe unter Mitwirkung des Harvard Glee Clubs und der Radclie Choral Society stand unter der Stabführung von G. Wallace. Hugh Ross leitete ein Mozartkonzert. Altmeister Pierre Monteux übernahm je ein Konzert in der gewaltigen Musik-"Scheune". Sechs junge amerikanische Pianisten traten als Solisten auf, Lukas Foss, Seymour Lipkin, Leon Fleisher, Byron Janis, Leonard Pennario und Eugene Istomin. Aus der Reihe der gastierenden Geigenvirtuosen sei nur Zino Francescatti herausgehoben.

Unter den Sängerinnen befanden sich weltberühmte Künstlerinnen vom Podium und von der Bühne, darunter Margaret Harshaw, Hilde Guedèn, Eunice Alberts. Aaron Copland spielte den Klavierpart in seinem "Piano Concerto" unter Leitung von Richard Burgin. Arthur Fiedler übernahm die volkstümlichen Konzerte (das Boston Pops Orchestra) in der zweiten Hälfte des Programms.

Die Fromm Foundation — Präsident Paul Fromm, Chicago — veranstaltete ein Konzert moderner Kammermusik und förderte nebstdem das Seminar für zeitgenössische Musik. In diesem Rahmen betätigten sich als Redner und Vortragende u. a. Mare Blitzstein, Roger Sessions, Lukas Foss und Aaron Copland.

*

Im Berkshire Music Center, der Sommerschule des Bostoner Symphonie-Orchesters, waren 332 Studierende inskribiert. Die Opernabteilung der Schule brachte unter Boris Goldovsky die Erstaufführung einer neuen englischen Übertragung von Rossinis "Count Ory". Dabei wurde ein neues Verfahren des Bühnenbildes ausprobiert: eine Schale (Rundhorizont) aus Fiberglas, bespielt mit Projektoren.

Für die Gesellschaft der Freunde des Berkshire Music Center wurden 41 Konzerte durch Studenten geboten. Die Anzahl der "Freunde" beträgt jetzt 6100 und ihre Beiträge belaufen sich auf $20,402.50. Auch die Rockefeller Foundation leistete einen erheblichen Beitrag für die Aufrechterhaltung und zur Förderung des Gedeihens dieser musikalischen Bildungsstätte, einem amerikanischen Mekka berufener Pädagogen und Schüler, welche zu ihrem Lebenszweck und Beruf die Musik erwählten. R. P.

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK, N. Y.

AUG 1958

Berkshire Festival Returns To Traditional Patterns

Lenox, Mass.—That "Bach madness" of the 'twenties and 'thirties persists in the first weekend concerts of the Berkshire Festival. Charles Munch opened the 21st season on July 4 following tradition closely. For a time he had deviated from the Bach pattern established by Serge Koussevitzky in ranging through 18th Century music. Having set up the Great Composers plan again this year, he found it logical to begin wtih Bach.

The first program concentrated on the four orchestral suites, played in numerical order. This brought Suite No. 2 before the intermission and provided a soloist in Doriot Anthony Dwyer, who has made this work a specialty. The concert gained momentum progressively from suite to suite so that Nos. 3 and 4 fared better than Nos. 1 and 2. Mr. Munch's highly vigorous way with Bach sometimes leads him to drive too hard early in the evening. More relaxed after intermission, he achieved better artistic balances and the Boston Symphony chamber group played more precisely and more musically.

"Art of Fugue" in Second Program

The "Art of Fugue" became the focal point of the second program. Mr. Munch's highly energized account of this, quite untraditional in most performances, kept the audience much more absorbed than is customary with this "theoretical" craftsmanship. The concert included the Piano Concerto in D Minor with Lukas Foss as soloist. As on the night before, rain cut the size of the audience to just below 3,000.

G. Wallace Woodworth, conductor of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, conducted the performance of the B Minor Mass in the Music Shed on July 6. The occasion was his retirement after 25 years in this position. The choruses were also observing their 100th anniversary. It was a sentimental occasion for them and their alumni. Some 4,200 people attended.

About a third of the Mass had been cut. Mr. Woodworth's approach was choral in the glee club sense. He achieved brilliant singing when the score allowed him to capitalize on youthful exuberance and radiant voices. He did not probe the depths of feeling elsewhere. The soloists included Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts, Blake Stern, and Donald Gramm. Miss Addison and Mr. Gramm made the most satisfying contributions.

Three Mozart Programs

Of the three Mozart programs that characterized the following weekend, the last received the most rewarding treatment. Again, Mr. Munch's conducting can become problematical, but he appeared happily adjusted to the "Haffner" Symphony and the Piano Concerto K. 467 with Seymour Lipkin as soloist. Mr. Lipkin proved himself a fine musician not only in his interpretation of the work but also in his own cadenzas. His fastidious playing, however, did not always communicate personality.

Hugh Ross conducted the second half of the concert, given over to such choral works as the Kyrie, K. 341, the "Graduale ad Festum Beatae Mariae Virginis", K. 273, and the "Coronation" Mass K. 317. These were a great treat both in content and in performance because of Mr. Ross's interpretative gifts and the Festival Chorus's generally excellent singing, to say nothing of their infrequent appearances on concert programs. Sarah Fleming, Doris Okerson, Richard Gilley and Lawrence Chelsi made a fine quartet of soloists.

(Continued on page 9)

drive but not with all the clarity or architectural splendor required. "La Mer" contended with rain, lightning, and thunder more or less properly in pitch and mood.

Mr. Munch's famous interpretation of Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite took care of the great-composer element in the Sunday program. Bartok's Music for Strings, Percussion, and Celesta became the contemporary entry. Zino Francescatti played the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto in his usually elegant manner. This concert attracted the largest crowd to date. 10,379, making a total of 26,552 for the weekend in spite of overcast and precipitate skies.

—Miles Kastendieck

BUFFALO, N. Y.
COURIER EXPRESS
Circ. D. 168,672 - S. 308,605

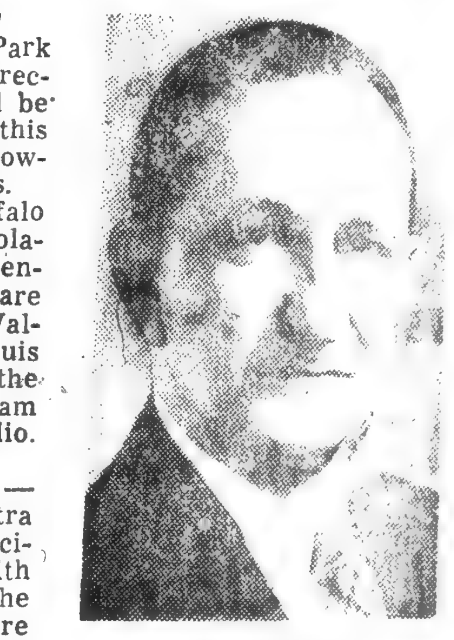
AUG 24 1958

In the Realm of Music – By Kenneth Gill

Soloists to Share Spotligh

By KENNETH GILL

SOLO SHOWCASE — Park concerts, all under the direction of Jan Wolanek, will be given at three locations this week. Each will be a showcase for the guest artists.



Jan Wolanek

make their final appearance of the season under the direction of Cecil Stewart

This afternoon the Buffalo Civic Orchestra, with Wolanek conducting, plays at Hennepin Park. The soloists are Sue Siracuse, soprano; Walter Cazmark, baritone; Louis Podgorski, violinist, and the Modern Jazz Dance Team from Ferrara's Ballet Studio.

MUSEUM CONCERT — This evening the orchestra moves to the Museum of Science at Humboldt Park with the concert starting at 9. The soloists at this event are Mary Grace Muffoletto, soprano; James Davis, tenor; violinist Podgorski and the Kaloff Concert Ballet Ensemble.

Albright Art Gallery in Delaware Park will have its usual concert Wednesday night at 9. Soloists will include Glenna McCluskey, coloratura; Zora Sigl, song stylist; Raymond Peters, baritone; Podgorski, and the Kaloff Ensemble.

A special section of the program will feature Karl Koch as pianist for Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue."

GOOD NEIGHBOR POLICY — Two weeks ago, the American Ballet was to open at the American Theatre in Brussels. Disaster struck in the form of fire which completely burned out a truck containing scenery and costumes, music scores and personal wardrobe.. Good neighbors quickly came to the rescue.

From Great Britain's Royal Ballet came costumes for a Tschaikowsky work; Anton Dolin's "London Festival Ballet sent other costumes; the Royal Danish Ballet provided garb for "Les Sylphides" and music scores came from the Rambert Ballet and from a Brussels theatre.

Tutus for the soloists came from French ballerina, Claude Bessy, and the French dancer, Pierre Le Cote. Others such as Mme. Repeto, Capezio, Max Factor and Elizabeth Arden, provided shoes, makeup and tights.

BERKSHIRE DATA — The Berkshire Festival closed its 21st season with accounting figures well above those of last season.

Concerts presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Conductor Charles Munch continued to increase in popularity. Proof of this is in the fact that the total number of visitors this season was 168,773 as against last year's total of 162,936.

Persons attending the Chamber Concerts numbered 22,937. Last year the total was 22,052. Four weekends of concerts in the Music Shed brought a total attendance of 86,045. This is a drop from 1957 figures of 107,497.

For its Tanglewood on Parade, the annual Berkshire benefit, the ticket sale was subscribed to by a record-breaking total of 14,588 patrons.

[215]

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 113,886
AUG 24 1958

Second Thoughts On Music

Interest of Young People Increases at Tanglewood

Shed Concerts and Student Activities Show Growing Appeal for Youth; Boston Symphony Necessarily Plays Works Within Its Repertory

By WILLARD M. CLARK

During the past six weeks we have tried to bring you a comprehensive review of the happenings at the Berkshire Music Festival and Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox. Of course, you can't please everyone and that is a question the Boston Symphony Orchestra, its management and its conductor Charles Munch face every year.

Personally, we feel it is wrong to criticize the festival, as a whole, without some concrete suggestions as to changes. We have none. It seems to us that the Berkshire Festival is one place where people may hear the best music finely played. If they want the exotic or esoteric, let them go elsewhere. There are always complaints about the programs.

Within Repertory

We believe that, due to the scarcity of rehearsal time, the orchestra must play works within its repertory. There is no time to learn new works. Indeed, if they did, and played them at Tanglewood, the majority of the listeners would feel that they were cheated. Better a Tchaikowsky fourth than a Copland first, say they. So, if you want to hear a fine repertory played as only the virtuosi of the Boston Symphony Orchestra can play it, come to Tanglewood.

One suggestion might not be amiss. With all respect for the eminent 83-year old Pierre Monteux, whose readings are more communicative each year, might it not be possible to invite some of our younger conductors, even American conductors, to share the podium with Charles Munch? The Berkshire Festival is becoming traditional within its lifetime. Pupils of the Berkshire Center, composers of the Berkshire Center and the numerous faculty members within the Center are sure of having their works played or appearing before the audiences in some capacity.

It gets rather tiring listening to works by the same composers year after year. This past season Aaron Copland had a real time, with several works being played and he personally appearing as pianist in his piano concerto, a dated work of the early jazz era. Lukas Foss remains as one of the most significant of American composers and one of the best interpreters of the piano music of Bach and Mozart.

Young Pianists

Young American artists did get a chance this season. Fine pianist's like Byron Janis, Leon Fleischer, Eugene Istomin and Leonard Pennario, along with Seymour Lipkin, who also doubled as conductor-instuctor, had their chance to play with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Janis making a terrific impression playing Rachmaninoff's third piano concert. Fleischer played less well than when we heard him last. Pennario was a good routine pianist in the first piano conerto by Liszt and Istomin was his estimable self in the Beethoven "Emperior" piano concerto.

At this time, Seymour Lipkin, fine pianist, and Lukus Foss also were heard in Bach and Mozart works. The young violinist, Berl Senofsky was heard in the Beethoven violin concerto and one realized why he won the coveted Queen Elisabeth of Belgium contest. A fine young violinist, who just escapes being great.

There are many other activities at Tanglewood than the Boston orchestra. This season the student orchestra was particularly good and a half dozen student conductors certainly put it through its paces. It was in these concerts you heard contemporary works. I remember particularly two works, "Music for Brasses, Piano and Two Harps" by Hindemith and "Music For a Group Instruments" by Schoenberg. Fine music, vividly interpreted by the youthful conductors.

Composers' Forums

Then there is the composers' forum, held once a week. The composition pupils get an opportunity to hear their works played and also to hear critical comments upon them after performance. We attended one such forum. The youthful works had to things in common. Each was lengthy. Each eschewed any melody. These young people write music that is cerebral and mathematical. However, don't dispair, we have heard recent works from student composers of a decade ago which show signs of melody and understandable rhythms.

To our mind, the great thing about the Berkshire Music Center is not what is accomplished during one six-week period, but the fact that several hundred young people from all over the world can get together and work and talk about the things in which they are most interested. There is always an endless flow of ideas. As one student said to us, "I have to go home and correlate al I've heard and done here."

Whatever the complaints, the past season was far ahead in attendance and gross intake of last season. What impresses us most is the fact that the audiences seem to be getting younger. There are literally hundreds of young people to be seen at the Shed concerts and the many concerts open to the Friends. This is as it should be. Just remember, the Berkshire Festival means great music played as only the Boston Symphony Orchestra can play it.

STAATS HEROLD 24 August 1958

Berkshire Musikfest: Abschluss der 21. Saison in Tanglewood

Wie alljährlich krönte auch diesmal die Krone aller Kompositionen — Beethovens Neunte Symphonie — die Flut der musikalischen Veranstaltungen. Charles Munch dirigierte das Boston Symphonie-Orchester, zu welchem sich der ausgezeichnet trainierte und geführte Festical Chorus gesellte, sowie die Solisten Helene Addison, Florence Kopleff, Blake Stern und Donald Gramm. Eröffnet wurde das Programm mit der Johannesburg Festival Ouverture von Walton. — Insgesamt wurden während des Sommerfestes von 1958 168,773 Besucher gezählt, womit die vorjährige Ziffer um mehr als 6000 Personen überboten erscheint. Auch die Einnahme aus den Eintrittskarten weist statistisch eine Erhöhung auf, die ins Gewicht fällt: 1956 wurden rund $280,000 eingenommen, 1957 $367,000, dieses Jahr $376,117.50.

Die ersten beiden Wochenendkonzerte in der Theater-Konzert-Halle erregten nicht weniger Interesse als die vier Wochenend-Konzertgruppen im "Music Shed". Ebenso starke Anteilnahme fanden die sechs Kammermusikkonzerte an den Mittwochabenden und die Samstag-Vormittagproben des Boston-Orchesters, die zugunsten des Pensionsfonds stattfanden, erbrachten $16,000. Die Tanglewood-Parade zugunsten des Berkshire Music Center am 7. August hatte einen Rekordbesuch aufzuweisen.

•

Dreizehn Konzerte dirigierte Dr. Munnh. Bachs B-Moll-Messe unter Mitwirkung des Harvard Glee Clubs und der Radclie Choral Society stand unter der Stabführung von G. Wallace. Hugh Ross leitete ein Mozartkonzert. Altmeister Pierre Monteux übernahm je ein Konzert in der gewaltigen Musik-"Scheune". Sechs junge amerikanische Pianisten traten als Solisten auf, Lukas Foss, Seymour Lipkin, Leon Fleisher, Byron Janis, Leonard Pennario und Eugene Istomin. Aus der Reihe der gastierenden Geigenvirtuosen sei nur Zino Francescatti herausgehoben.

Unter den Sängerinnen befanden sich weltberühmte Künstlerinnen vom Podium und von der Bühne, darunter Margaret Harshaw, Hilde Guedèn, Eunice Alberts. Aaron Copland spielte den Klavierpart in seinem "Piano Concerto" unter Leitung von Richard Burgin. Arthur Fiedler übernahm die volkstümlichen Konzerte (das Boston Pops Orchestra) in der zweiten Hälfte des Programms.

Die Fromm Foundation — Präsident Paul Fromm, Chicago — veranstaltete ein Konzert moderner Kammermusik und förderte nebstdem das Seminar für zeitgenössische Musik. In diesem Rahmen betätigten sich als Redner und Vortragende u. a. Marc Blitzstein, Roger Sessions, Lukas Foss und Aaron Copland.

•

Im Berkshire Music Center, der Sommerschule des Bostoner Symphonie-Orchesters, waren 332 Studierende inskribiert. Die Opernabteilung der Schule brachte unter Boris Goldovsky die Erstaufführung einer neuen englischen Übertragung von Rossinis "Count Ory". Dabei wurde ein neues Verfahren des Bühnenbildes ausprobiert: eine Schale (Rundhorizont) aus Fiberglas, bespielt mit Projektoren.

Für die Gesellschaft der Freunde des Berkshire Music Center wurden 41 Konzerte durch Studenten geboten. Die Anzahl der "Freunde" beträgt jetzt 6100 und ihre Beiträge belaufen sich auf $20,402.50. Auch die Rockefeller Foundation leistete einen erheblichen Beitrag für die Aufrechterhaltung und zur Förderung des Gedeihens dieser musikalischen Bildungsstätte, einem amerikanischen Mekka berufener Pädagogen und Schüler, welche zu ihrem Lebenswerk und Beruf die Musik erwählten. R. P.

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK, N. Y.
AUG 1958

Berkshire Festival Returns To Traditional Patterns

Lenox, Mass.—That "Bach madness" of the 'twenties and 'thirties persists in the first weekend concerts of the Berkshire Festival. Charles Munch opened the 21st season on July 4 following tradition closely. For a time he had deviated from the Bach pattern established by Serge Koussevitzky in ranging through 18th Century music. Having set up the Great Composers plan again this year, he found it logical to begin wtih Bach.

The first program concentrated on the four orchestral suites, played in numerical order. This brought Suite No. 2 before the intermission and provided a soloist in Doriot Anthony Dwyer, who has made this work a specialty. The concert gained momentum progressively from suite to suite so that Nos. 3 and 4 fared better than Nos. 1 and 2. Mr. Munch's highly vigorous way with Bach sometimes leads him to drive too hard early in the evening. More relaxed after intermission, he achieved better artistic balances and the Boston Symphony chamber group played more precisely and more musically.

"Art of Fugue" in Second Program

The "Art of Fugue" became the focal point of the second program. Mr. Munch's highly energized account of this, quite untraditional in most performances, kept the audience much more absorbed than is customary with this "theoretical" craftsmanship. The concert included the Piano Concerto in D Minor with Lukas Foss as soloist. As on the night before, rain cut the size of the audience to just below 3,000.

G. Wallace Woodworth, conductor of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, conducted the performance of the B Minor Mass in the Music Shed on July 6. The occasion was his retirement after 25 years in this position. The choruses were also observing their 100th anniversary. It was a sentimental occasion for them and their alumni. Some 4,200 people attended.

About a third of the Mass had been cut. Mr. Woodworth's approach was choral in the glee club sense. He achieved brilliant singing when the score allowed him to capitalize on youthful exuberance and radiant voices. He did not probe the depths of feeling elsewhere. The soloists included Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts, Blake Stern, and Donald Gramm. Miss Addison and Mr. Gramm made the most satisfying contributions.

Three Mozart Programs

Of the three Mozart programs that characterized the following weekend, the last received the most rewarding treatment. Again, Mr. Munch's conducting can become problematical, but he appeared happily adjusted to the "Haffner" Symphony and the Piano Concerto K. 467 with Seymour Lipkin as soloist. Mr. Lipkin proved himself a fine musician not only in his interpretation of the work but also in his own cadenzas. His fastidious playing, however, did not always communicate personality.

Hugh Ross conducted the second half of the concert, given over to such choral works as the Kyrie, K. 341, the "Graduale ad Festum Beatae Mariae Virginis", K. 273, and the "Coronation" Mass K. 317. These were a great treat both in content and in performance because of Mr. Ross's interpretative gifts and the Festival Chorus's generally excellent singing, to say nothing of their infrequent appearances on concert programs. Sarah Fleming, Doris Okerson, Richard Gilley and Lawrence Chelsi made a fine quartet of soloists.

(Continued on page 9)

drive but not with all the clarity or architectural splendor required. "La Mer" contended with rain, lightning, and thunder more or less properly in pitch and mood.

Mr. Munch's famous interpretation of Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite took care of the great-composer element in the Sunday program. Bartok's Music for Strings, Percussion, and Celesta became the contemporary entry. Zino Francescatti played the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto in his usually elegant manner. This concert attracted the largest crowd to date, 10,379, making a total of 26,552 for the weekend in spite of overcast and precipitate skies.

—Miles Kastendieck

BUFFALO, N. Y.
COURIER EXPRESS
Circ. D. 168,672 - S. 308,605
AUG 24 1958

In the Realm of Music — By Kenneth Gill

Soloists to Share Spotligh

By KENNETH GILL

SOLO SHOWCASE — Park concerts, all under the direction of Jan Wolanek, will be given at three locations this week. Each will be a showcase for the guest artists.

This afternoon the Buffalo Civic Orchestra, with Wolanek conducting, plays at Hennepin Park. The soloists are Sue Siracuse, soprano; Walter Cazmark, baritone; Louis Podgorski, violinist, and the Modern Jazz Dance Team from Ferrara's Ballet Studio.

MUSEUM CONCERT — This evening the orchestra moves to the Museum of Science at Humboldt Park with the concert starting at 9. The soloists at this event are Mary Grace Muffoletto, soprano; James Davis, tenor; violinist Podgorski and the Kaloff Concert Ballet Ensemble.

Albright Art Gallery in Delaware Park will have its usual concert Wednesday night at 9. Soloists will include Glenna McCluskey, coloratura; Zora Sigl, song stylist; Raymond Peters, baritone; Podgorski, and the Kaloff Ensemble.

A special section of the program will feature Karl Koch as pianist for Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue."

GOOD NEIGHBOR POLICY — Two weeks ago, the American Ballet was to open at the American Theatre in Brussels. Disaster struck in the form of fire which completely burned out a truck containing scenery and costumes, music scores and personal wardrobe.. Good neighbors quickly came to the rescue.

From Great Britain's Royal Ballet came costumes for a Tschaikowsky work; Anton Dolin's "London Festival Ballet sent other costumes; the Royal Danish Ballet provided garb for "Les Sylphides" and music scores came from the Rambert Ballet and from a Brussels theatre.

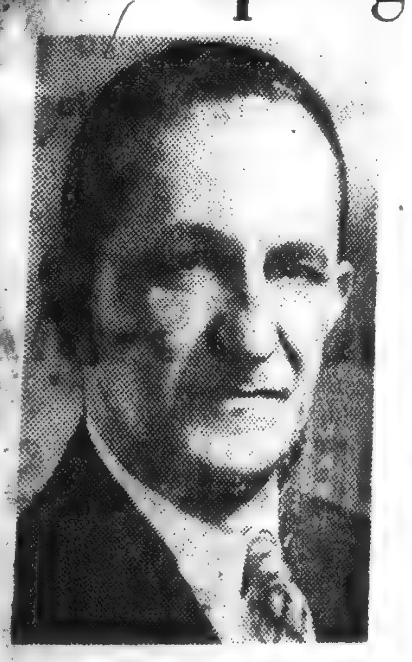
Tutus for the soloists came from French ballerina, Claude Bessy, and the French dancer, Pierre Le Cote. Others such as Mme. Repeto, Capezio, Max Factor and Elizabeth Arden, provided shoes, makeup and tights.

BERKSHIRE DATA — The Berkshire Festival closed its 21st season with accounting figures well above those of last season.

Concerts presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Conductor Charles Munch continued to increase in popularity. Proof of this is in the fact that the total number of visitors this season was 168,773 as against last year's total of 162,936.

Persons attending the Chamber Concerts numbered 22,937. Last year the total was 22,052. Four weekends of concerts in the Music Shed brought a total attendance of 86,045. This is a drop from 1957 figures of 107,497.

For its Tanglewood on Parade, the annual Berkshire benefit, the ticket sale was subscribed to by a record-breaking total of 14,588 patrons.



Jan Wolanek

make their final appearance of the season under the direction of Cecil Stewart.

[215]

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 113,886
AUG 24 1958

Second Thoughts On Music

Interest of Young People Increases a

Shed Concerts and Stude ing Appeal for Y Necessarily Plays W

By WILLARD M. CLARK

During the past six weeks we have tried to bring you a comprehensive review of the happenings at the Berkshire Music Festival and Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox. Of course, you can't please everyone and that is a question the Boston Symphony Orchestra, its management and its conductor Charles Munch face every year.

Personally, we feel it is wrong to criticize the festival, as a whole, without some concrete suggestions as to changes. We have none. It seems to us that the Berkshire Festival is one place where people may hear the best music finely played. If they want the exotic or esoteric, let them go elsewhere. There are always complaints about the programs.

Within Repertory

We believe that, due to the scarcity of rehearsal time, the orchestra must play works within its repertory. There is no time to learn new works. Indeed, if they did, and played them at Tanglewood, the majority of the listeners would feel that they were cheated. Better a Tchaikowsky fourth than a Copland first, say they. So, if you want to hear a fine repertory played as only the virtuosi of the Boston Symphony Orchestra can play it, come to Tanglewood.

One suggestion might not be amiss. With all respect for the eminent 83-year old Pierre Monteux, whose readings are more communicative each year, might it not be possible to invite some of our younger conductors, even American conductors, to share the podium with Charles Munch? The Berkshire Festival is becoming traditional within its lifetime. Pupils of the Berkshire Center, composers of the Berkshire Center and the numerous faculty members within the Center are sure of having their works played, or appearing before the audience in some capacity.

It gets rather tiring listening to works by the same composers year after year. This past season Aaron Copland had a real time, with several works being played and he personally appearing as pianist in his piano concerto, a dated work of the early jazz era. Lukas Foss remains as one of the most significant of American composers and one of the best interpreters of the piano music of Bach and Mozart.

Young Pianists

Young American artists did get a chance this season. Fine pianist's like Byron Janis, Leon Fleischer, Eugene Istomin and Leonard Pennario along with Seymour Lipkin, who also doubled as conductor-instuctor, had their chance to play with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Janis making a terrific impression playing Rachmaninoff's third piano concert. Fleischer played less well than when we heard him last. Pennario was a good routine pianist in the first piano conerto by Liszt and Istomin was his estimable self in the Beethoven "Emperior" piano concerto.

At this time, Seymour Lipkin, fine pianist, and Lukus Foss also were heard in Bach and Mozart works. The young violinist, Berl Senofsky was heard in the Beethoven violin concerto and one realized why he won the coveted Queen Elisabeth of Belgium contest. A fine young violinist, who just escapes being great.

There are many other activities at Tanglewood than the Boston orchestra. This season the student orchestra was particularly good and a half dozen student conductors certainly put it through its paces. It was in these concerts you heard contemporary works. I remember particularly two works, "Music for Brasses, Piano and Two Harps" by Hindemith and "Music For a Group Instruments" by Schoenberg. Fine music, vividly interpreted by the youthful conductors.

Composers' Forums

Then there is the composers' forum, held once a week. The composition pupils get an opportunity to hear their works played and also to hear critical comments upon them after performance. We attended one such forum. The youthful works had to things in common. Each was lengthy. Each eschewed any melody. These young people write music that is cerebral and mathematical. However, don't dispair, we have heard recent works from student composers of a decade ago which show signs of melody and understandable rhythms.

To our mind, the great thing about the Berkshire Music Cen

Right: The Beaux Arts Trio of New York enjoys a visit with Pablo Casals at his home in Puerto Rico (left to right) Daniel Guilet, Menahem Pressler, Mr. Casals, and Bernard Greenhouse

Left: One of Argentina's leading composers, Alberto Ginastera, congratulates the pianist Ruth Slenczynska after her debut recital in the Teatro Colon in Buenos Aires

Jess W
II of F
tenary

Giorgio Polacco (left), Giulietta Simionato, and Arturo Basilo at a reception given by the syndicate of the Olmo Theatre in Como

---

STAATS HEROLD 24 August 1958

Berkshire Musikfest: Abschluss der 21. Saison in Tanglewood

Wie alljährlich krönte auch diesmal die Krone aller Kompositionen — Beethovens Neunte Symphonie — die Flut der musikalischen Veranstaltungen. Charles Munch dirigierte das Boston Symphonie-Orchester, zu welchem sich der ausgezeichnet trainierte und geführte Festical Chorus gesellte, sowie die Solisten Helene Addison, Florence rn und Do-ffnet wurde der Johan-verture von mt wurden rfestes von her gezählt.

Ziffer um onen überch die Ein-trittskarten Erhöhung
fällt: 1956
000 einge-
000, dieses

n Wochen-r Theater-ten nicht
s die vier gruppen im enso starke die sechs
e an den
d die Sams-n des Bozugunsten stattfanden.
Die Tangle-unsten des nter am 7.
Rekordbedirigierte

-Moll-Messe
s Harvard er Radclie unter der
. Wallace. in Mozart-ierre Mon-ein Konen Musikunge ametraten als oss, Sey-Fleisher,

Byron Janis, Leonard Pennario und Eugene Istomin. Aus der Reihe der gastierenden Geigenvirtuosen sei nur Zino Francescatti herausgehoben.

Unter den Sängerinnen befanden sich weltberühmte Künstlerinnen vom Podium und von der Bühne, darunter Margaret Harshaw, Hilde Guedèn, Eunice Alberts. Aaron Copland spielte den Klavierpart in seinem "Piano Concerto" unter Leitung von Richard Burgin. Arthur Fiedler übernahm die volkstümlichen Konzerte (das Boston Pops Orchestra) in der zweiten Hälfte des Programms.

Die Fromm Foundation — Präsident Paul Fromm, Chicago — veranstaltete ein Konzert moderner Kammermusik und förderte nebstdem das Seminar für zeitgenössische Musik. In diesem Rahmen betätigten sich als Redner und Vortragende u. a. Marc Blitzstein, Roger Sessions, Lukas Foss und Aaron Copland.

•

Im Berkshire Music Center, der Sommerschule des Bostoner Symphonie-Orchesters, waren 332 Studierende inskribiert. Die Opernabteilung der Schule brachte unter Boris Goldovsky die Erstaufführung einer neuen englischen Übertragung von Rossinis "Count Ory". Dabei wurde ein neues Verfahren des Bühnenbildes ausprobiert: eine Schale (Rundhorizont) aus Fiberglas, bespielt mit Projektoren.

Für die Gesellschaft der Freunde des Berkshire Music Center wurden 41 Konzerte durch Studenten geboten. Die Anzahl der "Freunde" beträgt jetzt 6100 und ihre Beiträge belaufen sich auf $20,402.50. Auch die Rockefeller Foundation leistete einen erheblichen Beitrag für die Aufrechterhaltung und zur Förderung des Gedeihens dieser musikalischen Bildungsstätte, einem amerikanischen Mekka berufener Pädagogen und Schüler, welche zu ihrem Lebenszweck und Beruf die Musik erwählten. R. P.

Tanglewood

(Continued from page 7)

The other concerts offered less satisfying moments with Mr. Munch not quite in the vein as he was for the Sunday program. The weekend began with "A Musical Joke", the Sinfonia Concertante for violin and viola in which Joseph De Pasquale played the viola with far more distinction than Ruth Posselt the violin, and the "Linz" Symphony. The Saturday program included "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik", the two-piano Concerto K. 365, the Serenade in B flat for 13 Winds, K. 361, and the G Minor Symphony. Mr. Lipkin and Mr. Foss played the concerto with some discrepancy in the polish of their performances. Mr. Lipkin was the better adjusted.

An overall attendance of 12,771 people did not necessarily suggest that Mozarteans wax more enthusiastic than Bachites, but audiences for these Mozart concerts have been increasing in size yearly.

Munch Conducts Brahms Weekend

Moving into the Music Shed for the Brahms weekend, Mr. Munch and the full Boston Symphony turned their attention to the Serenade No. 1 Op. 11 and the Fourth Symphony, Op. 98. Hearing these works in juxtaposition revealed the seeds of greatness in the youthful one and their fruition in the symphony. The focal point of the concert, however, was the first performance here of Copland's Orchestral Variations, an old-new work since he has orchestrated his Piano Variations of 1930. The orchestral dress so preoccupies the attention, however, that the music sounds different, at least on a first hearing. It has been done boldly with generally stimulating results. The audience followed it alertly.

For the annual concert in memory of Koussevitzky, Mr. Munch conducted the Brahms Requiem with Hilde Gueden, Mr. Gramm and the Festival Chorus. His vitalized approach quite fascinated all but some traditionalists who pointed out that the work called for less colorful treatment. There were many interesting departures from "tradition".

Pierre Monteux made his regular appearance at Tanglewood in the Sunday program. The Brahms works included the "Academic Festival" Overture and the D Minor Piano Concerto with Leon Fleisher as soloist. Since he appeared somewhat driven in his playing, the performance acquired no distinction. Mr. Monteux's notable interpretation of Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" injected the contemporary element which always enters the programs of each weekend.

Debussy and Ravel in Fourth Week

The hyphenation of Debussy-Ravel created a unique great composer for the Festival's fourth weekend. On the first program highlighting their music, Mr. Monteux played Glinka, Tchaikovsky (the Fourth Symphony), and Milhaud. Then came Debussy's Nocturnes, with "Sirenes" included since the Festival Chorus was available, and Ravel's "La Valse". All this was interpreted in the Monteux "tradition."

Only Debussy's "La Mer" centered the Saturday program. Mr. Munch began with a repeat performance of Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" from last year, though why remained the speculation of many in the audience of 9, 736. Mr. Stern and Mr. Gramm were the soloists. The Festival Chorus participated. The work does not gain strength on further acquaintance except as a piece of antiquarianism grown more historic. Byron Janis played the Rachmaninoff Third Piano Concerto with technical brilliance and drive but not with all the clarity or architectural splendor required. "La Mer" contended with rain, lightning, and thunder more or less properly in pitch and mood.

Mr. Munch's famous interpretation of Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite took care of the great-composer element in the Sunday program. Bartok's Music for Strings, Percussion, and Celesta became the contemporary entry. Zino Francescatti played the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto in his usually elegant manner. This concert attracted the largest crowd to date, 10,379, making a total of 26,552 for the weekend in spite of overcast and precipitate skies.

—Miles Kastendieck

BUFFALO, N. Y.
COURIER EXPRESS
Circ. D. 168,672 - S. 308,605
AUG 24 1958

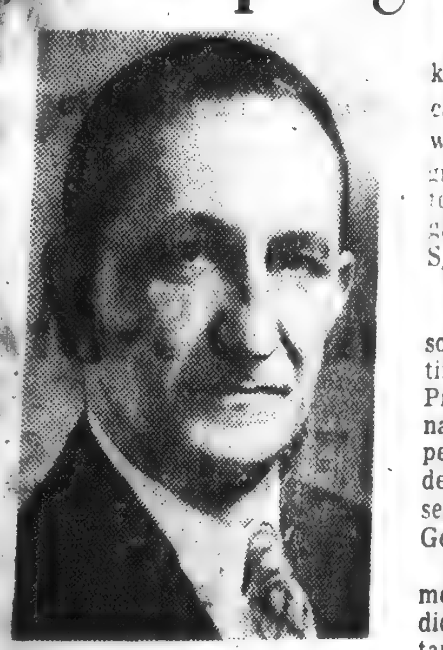
In the Realm of Music—By Kenneth Gill

Soloists to Share Spotlight

By KENNETH GILL

SOLO SHOWCASE — Park concerts, all under the direction of Jan Wolanek, will be given at three locations this week. Each will be a showcase for the guest artists.

This afternoon the Buffalo Civic Orchestra, with Wolanek conducting, plays at Hennepin Park. The soloists are Sue Siracuse, soprano; Walter Cazmark, baritone; Louis Podgorski, violinist, and the Modern Jazz Dance Team from Ferrara's Ballet Studio.



Jan Wolanek

MUSEUM CONCERT — This evening the orchestra moves to the Museum of Science at Humboldt Park with the concert starting at 9. The soloists at this event are Mary Grace Muffoletto, soprano; James Davis, tenor; violinist Podgorski and the Kaloff Concert Ballet Ensemble.

Albright Art Gallery in Delaware Park will have its usual concert Wednesday night at 9. Soloists will include Glenna McCluskey, coloratura; Zora Sigl, song stylist; Raymond Peters, baritone; Podgorski, and the Kaloff Ensemble.

A special section of the program will feature Karl Koch as pianist for Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue."

GOOD NEIGHBOR POLICY — Two weeks ago, the American Ballet was to open at the American Theatre in Brussels. Disaster struck in the form of fire which completely burned out a truck containing scenery and costumes, music scores and personal wardrobe.. Good neighbors quickly came to the rescue.

From Great Britain's Royal Ballet came costumes for a Tschaikowsky work; Anton Dolin's "London Festival Ballet sent other costumes; the Royal Danish Ballet provided garb for "Les Sylphides" and music scores came from the Rambert Ballet and from a Brussels theatre.

Tutus for the soloists came from French ballerina, Claude Bessy, and the French dancer, Pierre Le Cote. Others such as Mme. Repeto, Capezio, Max Factor and Elizabeth Arden, provided shoes, makeup and tights.

BERKSHIRE DATA — The Berkshire Festival closed its 21st season with accounting figures well above those of last season.

Concerts presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Conductor Charles Munch continued to increase in popularity. Proof of this is in the fact that the total number of visitors this season was 168,773 as against last year's total of 162,936.

Persons attending the Chamber Concerts numbered 22,937. Last year the total was 22,052. Four weekends of concerts in the Music Shed brought a total attendance of 86,045. This is a drop from 1957 figures of 107,497.

For its Tanglewood on Parade, the annual Berkshire benefit, the ticket sale was subscribed to by a record-breaking total of 14,588 patrons.

make their final appearance of the season under the direction of Cecil Stewart.

[216]

TOLEDO, OHIO
TIMES
Circ. D. 43,919
AUG 27 1958

Weather, Economics Hurt Music In New England

By FREDERICK J. KOUNTZ

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Aug. 24—The weather and certain economic developments have contrived apparently to produce a mildly discouraging season for those who live to satisfy summer vacationists. In addition, because the autumn season appears to have set in before summer properly declared itself, the number of travelers has diminished notably earlier in the season than is normal.

On the trip toward this section of the country it was apparent that the summer music season is pretty well resolved. Tanglewood, which, from the point of size of the total audience, had an amazingly successful summer, was tight-shuttered. The Castle Hill concerts in Ipswich, of which I have spoken in previous summers, have been washed up and assigned to the realm of lightly remembered things. The audience for Duke Ellington, who came in for the July 4 weekend, was big. Such artists as cellists Leonard Rose, Adele Addison, and Lubeshutz and Nemenoff did

---

NATION
NEW YORK, N.Y.
W. 26.601

SEP 20 1958

acting upon and within people for whom the West's endowment from nature is the essential of life on earth — these and a host of other elements give us sufficient notice that an important writer is among us. Welcome to William Eastlake.

Human Patriot

THE LAST YEAR OF THOMAS MANN. By Erika Mann. Farrar, Straus & Cudahy. 119 pp. $3.50.

Manfred George

THIS IS a book of love, the love of a daughter for her father. But, more than that, it is the account of a loyal secretary and companion totally devoted to the work of a great writer and poet.

Although it covers only the last year in Thomas Mann's life, it comes as a joy because it gives us an insight into the inexhaustible creativeness of this octogenarian. His enormous power to concentrate on his work was coupled with an intense interest in everyday events. He had reached the peak of contemporary fame, and still remained full of creative plans for the future.

During the last few years Erika Mann, herself a person of high individuality and creativity, had stepped more and more into her father's shadow. Her memoir is a last labor of love, an act of almost ceremonial significance. She writes about the innumerable honors that were heaped upon her father, but most of all she talks about Thomas Mann the writer who, amid the political turmoil of his final years, constantly strove to master the literary themes closest to his heart. He wrote his grandiose monograph on Chekhov and his essay on Schiller, whose passion for freedom held a special meaning for Thomas Mann in a world which had become increasingly threatening.

Mann was in search of universal solidarity, and the comment quoted by his daughter reveals more about him than his friends and foes had known:

> Does not all one's love for one's fellow-men rest upon compassionate, fraternal recognition of the almost hopeless difficulties of life? Indeed, this feeling should be the basis of a kind of human patriotism. One loves one's fellow-men because their lot is hard and because one is oneself a man.

Mann meant to write a series of character sketches from the Reformation period, with essays on Hutten, Erasmus, Zwingli and others. But then all this was swept aside by the Luther play, "The Wedding," a subject matter "which Wagner had already planned (in place of Die Meistersinger) and which preoccupied the author to the end."

THIS posthumous lament, in which silent tears over the loss of an extraordinary human being mingle with the most methodical day-by-day entries teeming with well-known names, says much about Thomas Mann, his friends, his hobbies and particularly about the responsibility of this writer, who after the war became the elder statesman of German literature and whose position as mediator between West and East was so frequently misunderstood.

Mann was always acutely afraid that mankind might perish in an atomic war. In order to start some action, he had prepared a list of prominent persons—Pearl S. Buck, William Faulkner, Bertrand Russell, Albert Schweitzer and others—who, collectively, would call attention to the ever-rising danger. But then there came the summer in Noordwijk, and the day when suddenly the writer found it beyond his strength to walk up the sloping path from the beach to his hotel.

Robert Graves's translation is perhaps a little impersonal and cold, for this book of great love.

MANFRED GEORGE is the editor of Aufbau, German-language weekly published in New York.

September 20, 1958

LOOK played chestra am stru tism w orchestr val a b only to and Mc twelve c certs; n overwei
Some o
Tanglew
pose, be portions be giver
I do not question. year's fe details b aspect o
It is tr devoted obvious

"Against missile madness, for

SURV

The new, fighting weekly
America's far-flung peac
alysis of press-TV-radio

"All in favor of staying aliv

SURVIVAL, 175 Fif
Enter my subscriptio
☐ One Year—$4.
☐ Thirtee
(Tabloid form
☐ I enclose cash
☐ I will remit on
Name ....
(I Address ....
City ....

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 50,969

AUG 31 1958

A Look At the Arts

By E. J. D.

If September bookings are a reliable indication, Boston's legitimate theater season should be a busy one. Already five shows are scheduled for the first month of the Fall season.

Opening the Hub's 1958-59 drama activities will be a new comedy, "Howie," which arrives at the Wilbur Theater on Tuesday night for a stay of two weeks. "Howie" is directed by a 34-year-old Bostonian, John Gerstad, who already has made a name for himself as actor, producer and director. In fact, Mr. Gerstad directed the Broadway success, "The Seven Year Itch." In addition, his business acumen is evidenced by the fact that he was one of the founders of Theatrical Interests Plan, a band of angels organized to invest in likely plays. This enterprise has been an immense financial success.

E. J. DIAS

On Sept. 11, "The World of Susie Wong" will open at the Shubert for 10 days. This is a stage adaptation of the best-selling novel about an unusual Chinese prostitute and her odd romance with an Englishman.

Eugene O'Neill's "A Touch of the Poet" will be on view at the Colonial for two weeks beginning Sept. 15, with Helen Hayes. Then on Sept. 22, a new comedy, "Drink to Me Only," will be unveiled at the Wilbur for a two-week engagement. Finally, to end the month, Jean and Walter Kerr's musical, "Miss Goldilocks," will open at the Shubert for two weeks, beginning Sept. 23.

You will note the unpleasant fact that Boston now has only three legitimate theaters—the Wilbur, Colonial and Shubert. The Majestic, Copley and Plymouth, long active as legitimate theaters, have switched to films. And the venerable Boston Opera House, of course, has been demolished.

New Bedford Symphony Plans Expanded Season

This year the reorganized New Bedford Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Josef N. Corbert, who will also conduct the Plymouth Philharmonic, will begin its third season.

Throughout the Summer, the board of directors of the New Bedford Symphony Orchestra, Inc., a group of music-lovers whose purpose is to help support and maintain the orchestra, has met and made plans for the forthcoming season under the leadership of the group's president, Attorney Leo Schwartz.

It is expected that the orchestra will offer a series of at least three concerts during the year. In addition, the board of directors has been fashioning plans for a campaign in which Greater New Bedford residents will be invited to become members of the supporting group.

Plans also are under way for the expansion of the orchestra itself. An effort will be made to invite able Greater New Bedford musicians to join the orchestra and to participate in the important work of enabling the orchestra to play an increasingly-valuable role in the cultural life of the community.

As we have written many times before, a good symphony orchestra lends prestige to a community. It is an asset in attracting new industries to an area, for the cultural level of a community is always deemed important by executives who are considering that community as a possible site for an industrial enterprise.

Furthermore, a symphony orchestra, in addition to the indirect benefits it confers, can be a source of genuine pleasure and profit both for its musicians and its audiences. And, again, as we have noted many times, Greater New Bedford is large enough and musically-minded enough to support a symphony orchestra.

In Mr. Cobert, the community has a young, enthusiastic, well-trained conductor who already has proved his worth by the results he has obtained from his group of musicians. Certainly, he and his players deserve the support and encouragement of all serious-minded members of the community.

A Few Verbal Orchids for Hermione Gingold

The ability of gifted performers to rise above their material and by displays of theater technique and acting know-how to make an interesting two hours out of a play that without them would be a mere nothing is occasionally evidenced on the stage. Shirley Booth, for example, in her last several appearances, has enabled poor plays to achieve moderate runs only on the strength of her own talent for creating an absorbing character.

At Falmouth last week, Hermione Gingold, who must rank with Beatrice Lillie as one of the world's funniest women, appeared in a Noel Coward trifle called "Fallen Angles." This comedy, which first was played on Broadway in 1927, is early, third-rate Coward, distinguished neither by good dialogue nor a strong plot line.

But Miss Gingold, with a sort of straight-man support from attractive Carol Bruce, took charge of the proceedings. With a wealth of imaginative business drawn from her years of experience and sound training in the theater, she offered the most side-splitting performance of the medicore Summer season.

If you have watched Miss Gingold either on the stage or in her frequent TV appearances, you know that she is a gifted clown. She can make her voice perform a series of droll inflections, she can slink and meander about the stage with a comical gait that is reminiscent of Groucho Marx, she can exhibit a brand of visual comedy (manipulating a napkin, spilling champagne on her lanky arms, stabbing an apple with a knife, becoming entangled in a balky telephone cord) that is rare in these days when true clowns are at a premium. In addition, she commands a variety of facial expressions that would do credit to those two funny Frenchmen, Jacques Tati and Fernandel.

The result of all this is that Mr. Coward's play might better have been entitled "An Evening with Hermione Gingold"—for, as it turned out, this is just what the Falmouth outing was. What Miss Gingold offered was probably never in Mr. Coward's script. But this was a happy circumstance, since Mr. Coward's script was about as stimulating as a cup of lukewarm coffee.

Our thanks to Miss Gingold for ending the straw-hat season on so jolly and rollicking a note. She will, by the way, be on Broadway this season opposite Giselle MacKenzie in "A Beautiful Evening," a musical version of Jane Austen's "Pride and Prejudice." Miss Austen is in good hands.

HERE AND THERE—Brigitte Bardot's mother has written a book, "Brigitte Bardot, My Daughter," whose theme is that Brigitte is really just a serious young girl interested only in finding the man of her life . . . Paul Robeson will star in the title role of "Othello" at Stratford-on-Avon next February-November.

This season's Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood attracted 168,773 persons who left $366,943 at ~~the box office~~ . . . According to the latest Trendex ratings, TV's most popular shows are, in this order, Gunsmoke, I've Got a Secret, Alfred Hitchcock Presents, I Love Lucy and What's My Line? . . . Comedians Dan Rowan and Dick Martin probably will have a 30-minute TV program of their own this Fall.

Richard Burton, Claire Bloom, Edith Evans and Mary Ure will star in the film version of John Osborne's "Look Back in Anger" . . . "God's Little Acre" and "The Black Orchid" are the American entries at the Venice Film Festival . . . Spencer Tracy will play the Clarence Darrow role, which Paul Muni created on Broadway, in the screen version of "Inherit the Wind."

[216]

TOLEDO, OHIO
TIMES
Circ. D. 43,919

AUG 27 1958

Weather, Economics Hurt Music In New England

By FREDERICK J. KOUNTZ

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Aug. 24—The weather and certain economic developments have contrived apparently to produce a mildly discouraging season for those who live to satisfy summer vacationists. In addition, because the autumn season appears to have set in before summer properly declared itself, the number of travelers has diminished notably earlier in the season than is normal.

On the trip toward this section of the country it was apparent that the summer music season is pretty well resolved. Tanglewood, which, from the point of size of the total audience, had an amazingly successful summer, was tight-shuttered. The Castle Hill concerts in Ipswich, of which I have spoken in previous summers, have been washed up and assigned to the realm of lightly remembered things. The audience for Duke Ellington, who came in for the July weekend, was big. Such matters as cellists Leonard Rose, Adele Addison, and Lubeshutz and Nemenoff did not apparently draw so heavily.

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 50,969

AUG 31 1958

as it turned out, this is just what the Falmouth outing was. What Miss Gingold offered was probably never in Mr. Coward's script. But this was a happy circumstance, since Mr. Coward's script was about as stimulating as a cup of lukewarm coffee.

Our thanks to Miss Gingold for ending the straw-hat season on so jolly and rollicking a note. She will, by the way, be on Broadway this season opposite Giselle MacKenzie in "A Beautiful Evening," a musical version of Jane Austen's "Pride and Prejudice." Miss Austen is in good hands.

HERE AND THERE—Brigitte Bardot's mother has written a book, "Brigitte Bardot, My Daughter," whose theme is that Brigitte is really just a serious young girl interested only in finding the man of her life . . . Paul Robeson will star in the title role of "Othello" at Stratford-on-Avon next February-November.

This season's Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood attracted 168,773 persons who left $366,943 at the box office . . . According to the latest Trendex ratings, TV's most popular shows are, in this order, Gunsmoke, I've Got a Secret, Alfred Hitchcock Presents, I Love Lucy and What's My Line? . . . Comedians Dan Rowan and Dick Martin probably will have a 30-minute TV program of their own this Fall.

Richard Burton, Claire Bloom, Edith Evans and Mary Ure will star in the film version of John Osborne's "Look Back in Anger" . . . "God's Little Acre" and "The Black Orchid" are the American entries at the Venice Film Festival . . . Spencer Tracy will play the Clarence Darrow role, which Paul Muni created on Broadway, in the screen version of "Inherit the Wind."

NATION
NEW YORK, N.Y.
W. 26.601

SEP 20 1958

upon and within people for whom the West's endowment from nature is the essential of life on earth — these and a host of other elements give us sufficient notice that an important writer is among us. Welcome to William Eastlake.

Human Patriot

THE LAST YEAR OF THOMAS MANN. By Erika Mann. Farrar Straus & Cudahy. 119 pp. $3.50.

Manfred George

THIS IS a book of love, the love of a daughter for her father. But, more than that, it is the account of a loyal secretary and companion totally devoted to the work of a great writer and poet.

Although it covers only the last year in Thomas Mann's life, it comes as a joy because it gives us an insight into the inexhaustible creativeness of this octogenarian. His enormous power to concentrate on his work was coupled with an intense interest in everyday events. He had reached the peak of contemporary fame, and still remained full of creative plans for the future.

During the last few years Erika Mann, herself a person of high individuality and creativity, had stepped more and more into her father's shadow. Her memoir is a last labor of love, an act of almost ceremonial significance. She writes about the innumerable honors that were heaped upon her father, but most of all she talks about Thomas Mann the writer who, amid the political turmoil of his final years, constantly strove to master the literary themes closest to his heart. He wrote his grandiose monograph on Chekhov and his essay on Schiller, whose passion for freedom held a special meaning for Thomas Mann in a world which had become increasingly threatening.

Mann was in search of universal solidarity, and the comment quoted by his daughter reveals more about him than his friends and foes had known:

> Does not all one's love for one's fellow-men rest upon compassionate, fraternal recognition of the almost hopeless difficulties of life? Indeed, this feeling should be the basis of a kind of human patriotism. One loves one's fellow-men because their lot is hard and because one is oneself a man.

Mann meant to write a series of character sketches from the Reformation period, with essays on Hutten, Erasmus, Zwingli and others. But then all this was swept aside by the Luther play, "The Wedding," a subject matter "which Wagner had already planned (in place of Die Meistersinger) and which preoccupied the author to the end."

THIS posthumous lament, in which silent tears over the loss of an extraordinary human being mingle with the most methodical day-by-day entries teeming with well-known names, says much about Thomas Mann, his friends, his hobbies and particularly about the responsibility of this writer, who after the war became the elder statesman of German literature and whose position as mediator between West and East was so frequently misunderstood.

Mann was always acutely afraid that mankind might perish in an atomic war. In order to start some action, he had prepared a list of prominent persons—Pearl S. Buck, William Faulkner, Bertrand Russell, Albert Schweitzer and others—who, collectively, would call attention to the ever-rising danger. But then there came the summer in Noordwijk, and the day when suddenly the writer found it beyond his strength to walk up the sloping path from the beach to his hotel.

Robert Graves's translation is perhaps a little impersonal and cold, for this book of great love.

MANFRED GEORGE is the editor of Aufbau, German-language weekly published in New York.

September 20, 1958

"Against missile madness, for

SURV

The new, fighting weekl
America's far-flung peac
alysis of press-TV-radio

"All in favor of staying aliv

SURVIVAL, 175 Fif
Enter my subscriptio
☐ One Year—$4.
☐ Thirtee
(Tabloid forn
☐ I enclose cash
☐ I will remit on

Name ....
Address ....
City ....

over

MUSIC

Lester Trimble

LOOKING back over the programs played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this summer, I am struck again by the deep conservatism which seems to be affecting the orchestral part of the Berkshire Festival a bit more each season. I refer not only to the Bach, Beethoven, Brahms and Mozart series which accounted for twelve out of the eighteen week-end concerts; nor specifically to the programs overweighted with Wagnerian excerpts. Some of these series are part of the Tanglewood tradition and must, I suppose, be kept in order not to alienate portions of the audience. Why they need be given each year in the same way, I do not quite see, but that is another question. My disappointment with this year's festival planning was not with details but with the generally colorless aspect of the whole.

It is true that on most of the evenings devoted to one of the three B's, an obvious attempt was made to relieve

RUSSELL KIRK

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 40,429

SEP 2 1958

20th Century-Fox Plans Film About Tanglewood

20th Century-Fox will make a musical film, "A Tanglewood Story" next summer at Tanglewood near Lenox, Mass. Henry Ephron will produce the film which is based on an original screenplay by the late Pulitzer prize winner James Agee and Howard Taubman, music critic of the New York Times.

* * *

ARRANGEMENTS for the film were completed early last month between Buddy Adler, the Boston Symphony Orchestra and its celebrated conductor, Charles Munch. The picture will start shooting July 1 and continue all through the festival season.

Henry F. Cabot, president of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has said, "Dr. Munch and the trustees of the orchestra take pleasure in joining with 20th Century-Fox in bringing the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood to the public through the medium of motion pictures."

* * *

THE TOTAL number of visitors to this year's Berkshire festival events was approximately 168,773, according to final figures. Last year's total was 162,936. The total ticket sales for this year's festival was $376,117.50.

A total attendance of 86,045 marked the four weekends of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed.

A total of 16,002 persons attended the six Saturday morning rehearsals of the orchestra open to the public for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

A record-breaking crowd of 14,588 attended the Tanglewood-on-Parade program.

[217]

MUSICAL COURIER
NEW YORK, N. Y.

SEP 1958

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

■ Will music take the place of baseball as New England's spring and summer leisure-time activity? Taking the leading organization in each category, one arrives at some rather startling figures. If these figures may appear to be significant, it is not that we wish baseball ill but rather that we wish music well. The Boston Red Sox have not been doing too badly this season and, as of the date of this writing (Aug. 17), have had a good home attendance of 850,000. Now let us see what the Boston Symphony Orchestra has done in a considerably shorter season from Pops opening, May 1, to the Berkshire Festival closing at Tanglewood, Aug. 10.

Using round numbers and conservative estimates when exact figures are not available, we find the sell-out Pops season at Symphony Hall accounting for some 125,000 admissions. Then comes the Boston Symphony Esplanade Series of eighteen evening and three children's concerts split two weeks before Tanglewood and one week after. For these concerts, the total attendance is estimated at 200,000. Turning now to the Tanglewood season marked by some disastrous weather during most of the four final week-ends, total attendance for all Festival events together with figures for the BSO-sponsored Berkshire Music Center give a total this year of close to 200,000 admissions. A little addition now shows the grand total of admissions to concerts presented or sponsored by the orchestra during fourteen weeks come to 525,000, or let us call it a round half-million admissions!

■ These are staggering figures and this interest in music probably goes far to explain the marked progress made in recent years by more and more American composers and performers. This trend was particularly evident during the whole Berkshire Festival. All six of the piano soloists were American-born and largely American-trained. In each case excellent performances were turned in by Lukas Foss, Seymour Lipkin, Leon Fleisher, Byron Janis, Leonard Pennario and Eugene Istomin. As a matter of fact, Byron Janis received one of the lengthiest and most tumultuous ovations in Festival history for this remarkable performance of the Rachmaninoff Third Concerto on July 26.

Among the string soloists, only Zino Francescatti was not "made in America," so to speak. Berl Senofsky impressed with his sure artistry and poise in the Beethoven Violin Concerto, Aug. 9, and Joseph de Pasquale, first violist of the orchestra, scored again in the new Piston Viola Concerto. Ruth Posselt rounded out this quartet of fine soloists.

Among the vocal soloists, it was the same story, with the highly-esteemed Hilde Gueden the only non-American singer in a list that produces notable results from Margaret Harshaw, Donald Gramm, Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts, Florence Kopleff and Blake Stern.

■ But if all this recognition goes to our heads, and lest we become too chauvinistic, let us not forget the brilliant readings of Charles Munch who conducted thirteen concerts and the reliable assistance of Pierre Monteux, who relieved the Boston Symphony conductor for one concert in each of the final four week-ends. Other conductors were G. Wallace Woodworth, Hugh Ross and, for "Tanglewood on Parade," Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin and Arthur Fiedler.

To do full justice to all the events, including the fine chamber music concerts, the outstanding student events, and the activities of Boris Goldovsky's Opera Department, becomes an impossibility in a report of this kind. We must be content with the observation that rarely, if ever, has so much good music been performed in any six-week period. Dr. Munch seemed completely recovered from his mild heart attack. His Beethoven Seventh, particularly, stands out in memory, together with his wonderfully sympathetic accompaniment to Janis in the Rachmaninoff Concerto.

The custom of including a contemporary work on most of the programs must be applauded. These were: July 18, Copland's Orchestral Variations; July 20, Stravinsky's "Petrouchka"; July 25, Milhaud's Overture to "Les Eumenides"; July 26, Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum"; July 27, Bartok's Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta; Aug. 1, Piston's Viola Concerto; Aug. 2, the Williams Symphony No. 8; Aug. 8, Honneger's Prelude, Fugure and Postlude; Aug. 9, Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione"; and Aug. 10, Walton's "Johannesburg Festival" Overture.

JULES WOLFFERS

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

AUG 4 1958

In Brief . . .

Councilman John F. Fraser may pick up some votes by calling for a special City Council meeting to endorse IUE's contract demands from General Electric Company. But as Mayor Haughey pointed out when the issue was put up to him last June, an elected official who feels responsible to his constituents as a whole should steer clear of taking sides in a company-union dispute . . . Although the Boston & Albany's petition to remove four trains from service is sure to raise some hackles, it raises the old question in a different form: Who among the objectors takes the train when he can go faster and more conveniently by turnpike? . . . It's good to know that in Hal Hallock we have a professional diver ready to retrieve anything from false teeth to kitchen stoves. Now if he will just devise a way to keep people from diving in while wearing wristwatches.

The 23,500 at Tanglewood and similarly good weekend crowds at other spots throughout the county show that all we need this summer is a little sun. With help from the weather, the combination of "Tanglewood on Parade" and visiting day at the camps should fill up the area from Wednesday night through Sunday . . . For those who remember the old rooming house at 1307 North Street, the renovation job being completed there constitutes an admirable little urban renewal project all by itself . . .

MUSICAL LEADER September 1958

New York

N. Y. Editor and Critic: WALTER F. LOEB, 445 West 23rd Street, New York City 11. Tel: WAtkins 4-5386
Other Critics: Shirley Cecille Cash (Orchestras), Harry L. Fuchs, Sherman Gottesman

With The Orchestras

By Shirley Cecille Cash

Final Weeks at Tanglewood

Our annual journey to Tanglewood is far more than an experience in concert-going and reviewing. It is our renewal of acquaintance with the countryside, with the beautiful trees and shrubs and great expanses of lawn on this beautiful estate. As we sit in the Shed, listening to the music, our eyes often turn to the towering trees outdoors, and our pleasure in the music mingles with our joy in beholding the natural beauty of the setting.

The fifth week-end of the Boston Symphony's Berkshire Festival featured Wagner, with Piston, Liszt and Vaughan-Williams interspersed. The Aug. 1 concert included the Prelude to "Die Meistersinger," "A Siegfried Idyll," Prelude and Love-death from "Tristan und Isolde," Piston's Concerto for Viola and Orchestra and the Finale, "Immolation Scene," from "Die Götterdämmerung." Margaret Harshaw was the capable soloist in the "Tristan" and "Götterdämmerung" excerpts, and Joseph De Pasquale played the Piston Concerto in fine style . . . The concert, Aug. 2, included the Overture and Bacchanale from "Tannhäuser," Liszt's First Piano Concerto in E flat, with Leonard Pennario as soloist, Vaughan Williams' Eighth Symphony and "Daybreak" and Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Götterdämmerung." Mr. Pennario's playing of the Liszt Concerto was competent, but did not encompass the brilliance of the composer's essential style. The high point of the program was the beautiful performance of Ralph Vaughan Williams' Eighth Symphony. The memory of this affecting performance is more poignant because, as we write, we have just learned of the sudden death of the composer, on Aug. 26. (Vaughan Williams was 85 years old, still active in his work at the time of his death.) Charles Munch conducted both the Friday and Saturday night concerts . . . On Aug. 3, Pierre Monteux conducted an all-Wagner program devoted to preludes, overtures and excerpts from "Parsifal," "Lohengrin," "Rienzi," "The Flying Dutchman," "Siegfried," "Tannhäuser," and "Die Walküre." Margaret Harshaw was in very fine voice as she sang four Wagnerian excerpts, and brought forth a particularly warm response from the audience with her exquisite singing of Elsa's Dream from "Lohengrin." Monteux, always effective, achieved especially colorful imagery in the preludes to "Parsifal" and "Lohengrin."

The sixth week-end, a long one, opened with Tanglewood on Parade, Aug. 7. This is the annual potpourri for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. The various departments demonstrated some of the fruits of their season's work: opera, composition, orchestra. Picnickers ate their supper on the lawn while the Tanglewood Choir provided delightful entertainment. In the evening, there was the gala concert in the Music Shed. Eleazar de Carvalho conducted the Boston Symphony in "Il Guarany" Overture by Gomes and Falla's "Il Amor Brujo." The Falla work was particularly appealing, for the conductor projected the fiery rhythms with glowing fervor. Aaron Copland was then soloist in his own Piano Concerto, a work he has not played publicly since 1927, when it was composed. Richard Burgin conducted. As a pianist, Mr. Copland was excellent. The pièce de resistance of the entire day was the perfectly marvelous and precise playing of the Boston Pops (which is actually the Boston Symphony minus a few of the first desk men) under Arthur Fiedler. In one selection, "Dancing Through the Years," arranged by Hayman, the audience burst into spontaneous applause after almost every section, like the Charleston, Turkey in the Straw, Beer Barrel

(Continued on page 22)

Fox's most ambitious musical films. Tentatively titled "A Tanglewood Story," this picture will start shooting at Tanglewood on July 1, 1959. It will continue all through the Festival season and all the facilities of the Berkshire Music Center will be at the disposal of the studio. "The Tanglewood Story" is based on an original screenplay by the late Pulitzer Prize winner James Agee and Howard Taubman, Music Critic of the New York Times. It is a romantic story about young musicians.

[217]

MUSICAL COURIER
NEW YORK, N. Y.

SEP 1958

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

■ Will music take the place of baseball as New England's spring and summer leisure-time activity? Taking the leading organization in each category, one arrives at some rather startling figures. If these figures may appear to be significant, it is not that we wish baseball ill but rather that we wish music well. The Boston Red Sox have not been doing too badly this season and, as of the date of this writing (Aug. 17), have had a good home attendance of 850,000. Now let us see what the Boston Symphony Orchestra has done in a considerably shorter season from Pops opening, May 1, to the Berkshire Festival closing at Tanglewood, Aug. 10.

Using round numbers and conservative estimates when exact figures are not available, we find the sell-out Pops season at Symphony Hall accounting for some 125,000 admissions. Then comes the Boston Symphony Esplanade Series of eighteen evening and three children's concerts split two weeks before Tanglewood and one week after. For these concerts, the total attendance is estimated at 200,000. Turning now to the Tanglewood season marked by some disastrous weather during most of the four final weekends, total attendance for all Festival events together with figures for the BSO-sponsored Berkshire Music Center give a total this year of close to 200,000 admissions. A little addition now shows the grand total of admissions to concerts presented or sponsored by the orchestra during fourteen weeks come to 525,000, or let us call it a round half-million admissions!

■ These are staggering figures and this interest in music probably goes far to explain the marked progress made in recent years by more and more American composers and performers. This trend was particularly evident during the whole Berkshire Festival. All six of the piano soloists were American-born and largely American-trained. In each case excellent performances were turned in by Lukas Foss, Seymour Lipkin, Leon Fleisher, Byron Janis, Leonard Pennario and Eugene Istomin. As a matter of fact, Byron Janis received one of the lengthiest and most tumultuous ovations in Festival history for this remarkable performance of the Rachmaninoff Third Concerto on July 26.

Among the string soloists, only Zino Francescatti was not "made in America," so to speak. Berl Senofsky impressed with his sure artistry and poise in the Beethoven Violin Concerto, Aug. 9, and Joseph de Pasquale, first violist of the orchestra, scored again in the new Piston Viola Concerto. Ruth Posselt rounded out this quartet of fine soloists.

Among the vocal soloists, it was the same story, with the highly-esteemed Hilde Gueden the only non-American singer in a list that produces notable results from Margaret Harshaw, Donald Gramm, Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts, Florence Kopleff and Blake Stern.

■ But if all this recognition goes to our heads, and lest we become too chauvinistic, let us not forget the brilliant readings of Charles Munch who conducted thirteen concerts and the reliable assistance of Pierre Monteux, who relieved the Boston Symphony conductor for one concert in each of the final four week-ends. Other conductors were G. Wallace Woodworth, Hugh Ross and, for "Tanglewood on Parade," Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin and Arthur Fiedler.

To do full justice to all the events, including the fine chamber music concerts, the outstanding student events, and the activities of Boris Goldovsky's Opera Department, becomes an impossibility in a report of this kind. We must be content with the observation that rarely, if ever, has so much good music been performed in any six-week period. Dr. Munch seemed completely recovered from his mild heart attack. His Beethoven Seventh, particularly, stands out in memory, together with his wonderfully sympathetic accompaniment to Janis in the Rachmaninoff Concerto.

The custom of including a contemporary work on most of the programs must be applauded. These were: July 18, Copland's Orchestral Variations; July 20, Stravinsky's "Petrouchka"; July 25, Milhaud's Overture to "Les Eumenides"; July 26, Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum"; July 27, Bartok's Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta; Aug. 1, Piston's Viola Concerto; Aug. 2, the Williams Symphony No. 8; Aug. 8, Honneger's Prelude, Fugure and Postlude; Aug. 9, Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione"; and Aug. 10, Walton's "Johannesburg Festival" Overture.

JULES WOLFFERS

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

AUG 4 1958

In Brief . . .

Councilman John F. Fraser may pick up some votes by calling for a special City Council meeting to endorse IUE's contract demands from General Electric Company. But as Mayor Haughey pointed out when the issue was put up to him last June, an elected official who feels responsible to his constituents as a whole should steer clear of taking sides in a company-union dispute . . . Although the Boston & Albany's petition to remove four trains from service is sure to raise some hackles, it raises the old question in a different form: Who among the objectors takes the train when he can go faster and more conveniently by turnpike? . . . It's good to know that in Hal Hallock we have a professional diver ready to retrieve anything from false teeth to kitchen stoves. Now if he will just devise a way to keep people from diving in while wearing wristwatches.

The 23,500 at Tanglewood and similarly good weekend crowds at other spots throughout the county show that all we need this summer is a little sun. With help from the weather, the combination of "Tanglewood on Parade" and visiting day at the camps should fill up the area from Wednesday night through Sunday . . . For those who remember the old rooming house at 1307 North Street, the renovation job being completed there constitutes an admirable little urban renewal project all by itself . . .

MUSICAL LEADER September 1958

New York

N. Y. Editor and Critic: WALTER F. LOEB, 445 West 23rd Street, New York City 11. Tel: WAtkins 4-5386
Other Critics: Shirley Cecille Cash (Orchestras), Harry L. Fuchs, Sherman Gottesman

With The Orchestras

By Shirley Cecille Cash

Final Weeks at Tanglewood

Our annual journey to Tanglewood is far more than an experience in concert-going and reviewing. It is our renewal of acquaintance with the countryside, with the beautiful trees and shrubs and great expanses of lawn on this beautiful estate. As we sit in the Shed, listening to the music, our eyes often turn to the towering trees outdoors, and our pleasure in the music mingles with our joy in beholding the natural beauty of the setting.

The fifth week-end of the Boston Symphony's Berkshire Festival featured Wagner, with Piston, Liszt and Vaughan-Williams interspersed. The Aug. 1 concert included the Prelude to "Die Meistersinger," "A Siegfried Idyll," Prelude and Love-death from "Tristan und Isolde," Piston's Concerto for Viola and Orchestra and the Finale, "Immolation Scene," from "Die Götterdämmerung." Margaret Harshaw was the capable soloist in the "Tristan" and "Götterdämmerung" excerpts, and Joseph De Pasquale played the Piston Concerto in fine style . . . The concert, Aug. 2, included the Overture and Bacchanale from "Tannhäuser," Liszt's First Piano Concerto in E flat, with Leonard Pennario as soloist, Vaughan Williams' Eighth Symphony and "Daybreak" and Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Götterdämmerung." Mr. Pennario's playing of the Liszt Concerto was competent, but did not encompass the brilliance of the composer's essential style. The high point of the program was the beautiful performance of Ralph Vaughan Williams' Eighth Symphony. The memory of this affecting performance is more poignant because, as we write, we have just learned of the sudden death of the composer, on Aug. 26. (Vaughan Williams was 85 years old, still active in his work at the time of his death.) Charles Munch conducted both the Friday and Saturday night concerts . . . On Aug. 3, Pierre Monteux conducted an all-Wagner program devoted to preludes, overtures and excerpts from "Parsifal," "Lohengrin," "Rienzi," "The Flying Dutchman," "Siegfried," "Tannhäuser," and "Die Walküre." Margaret Harshaw was in very fine voice as she sang four Wagnerian excerpts, and brought forth a particularly warm response from the audience with her exquisite singing of Elsa's Dream from "Lohengrin." Monteux, always effective, achieved especially colorful imagery in the preludes to "Parsifal" and "Lohengrin."

The sixth week-end, a long one, opened with Tanglewood on Parade, Aug. 7. This is the annual potpourri for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. The various departments demonstrated some of the fruits of their season's work: opera, composition, orchestra. Picnickers ate their supper on the lawn while the Tanglewood Choir provided delightful entertainment. In the evening, there was the gala concert in the Music Shed. Eleazar de Carvalho conducted the Boston Symphony in "Il Guarany" Overture by Gomes and Falla's "Il Amor Brujo." The Falla work was particularly appealing, for the conductor projected the fiery rhythms with glowing fervor. Aaron Copland was then soloist in his own Piano Concerto, a work he has not played publicly since 1927, when it was composed. Richard Burgin conducted. As a pianist, Mr. Copland was excellent. The pièce de resistance of the entire day was the perfectly marvelous and precise playing of the Boston Pops (which is actually the Boston Symphony minus a few of the first desk men) under Arthur Fiedler. In one selection, "Dancing Through the Years," arranged by Hayman, the audience burst into spontaneous applause after almost every section, like the Charleston, Turkey in the Straw, Beer Barrel

(Continued on page 22)

Fox's most ambitious musical films. Tentatively titled "A Tanglewood Story," this picture will start shooting at Tanglewood on July 1, 1959. It will continue all through the Festival season and all the facilities of the Berkshire Music Center will be at the disposal of the studio. "The Tanglewood Story" is based on an original screenplay by the late Pulitzer Prize winner James Agee and Howard Taubman, Music Critic of the New York Times. It is a romantic story about young musicians.

[217]

Musical LEADER

SEPTEMBER 1958

New York

(Continued from page 2)

Polka, In the Mood. And the musical audience clapped perfectly in time to the Mexican Hat Dance. The final selection was "76 Trombones," from "The Music Man" by Willson, and you just never heard it played in such a jaunty manner. Earlier, there were selections by Offenbach, Ginastera and Bernstein. In all, a record crowd of 14,588 attended Tanglewood on Parade, and from what we could see, everyone had a wonderful time. . . . The balance of the week-end majored in Beethoven. Charles Munch, conducting on Aug. 8, opened with Honegger's Prelude, Fugue and Postlude in a serious and impressive fashion. The Beethoven Seventh Symphony, which followed, was a frothy whirl, played swiftly, hurriedly. The finest offering of the evening was the "Emperor" Concerto which was beautifully performed by Eugene Istomin, with sensitive support by Mr. Munch and the orchestra . . . Pierre Monteux was again in top form for the concert, Aug. 9, when he led the orchestra in Beethoven's Suite from "Die Geschöpfe des Prometheus," Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione," and Beethoven's Overture to "Leonore" No. 3. The program also included the Beethoven Violin Concerto with Berl Senofsky as soloist. Mr. Senofsky gave a careful reading, which revealed a well-trained musicianship, but which would have benefited by more temperament . . . The final concert of the Berkshire Festival, Aug. 10, was devoted to the Beethoven Ninth Symphony, which has become a traditional closer here. The aperitif was Walton's "Johannesburg Festival Overture." But Charles Munch got down to the real business of the afternoon after a short intermission. Assisted by soloists Adele Addison, soprano, Florence Kopleff, contralto, Blake Stern, tenor, Donald Gramm, bass, and the Berkshire Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson, the Boston Symphony gave a rousing performance of the Choral Symphony. It was nothing short of thrilling to hear orchestra and voices reverberating in the Shed in some of the grand climactic portions of the final movement.

The Berkshire Festival is the basis for one of 20th Century Fox's most ambitious musical films. Tentatively titled "A Tanglewood Story," this picture will start shooting at Tanglewood on July 1, 1959. It will continue all through the Festival season and all the facilities of the Berkshire Music Center will be at the disposal of the studio. "The Tanglewood Story" is based on an original screenplay by the late Pulitzer Prize winner James Agee and Howard Taubman, Music Critic of the New York Times. It is a romantic story about young musicians.

MUSICAL COURIER
NEW YORK, N. Y.

SEP 1958

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

■ Will music take the place of baseball as New England's spring and summer leisure-time activity? Taking the leading organization in each category, one arrives at some rather startling figures. If these figures may appear to be significant, it is not that we wish baseball ill but rather that we wish music well. The Boston Red Sox have not been doing too badly this season and, as of the date of this writing (Aug. 17), have had a good home attendance of 850,000. Now let us see what the Boston Symphony Orchestra has done in a considerably shorter season from Pops opening, May 1, to the Berkshire Festival closing at Tanglewood, Aug. 10.

Using round numbers and conservative estimates when exact figures are not available, we find the sell-out Pops season at Symphony Hall accounting for some 125,000 admissions. Then comes the Boston Symphony Esplanade Series of eighteen evening and three children's concerts split two weeks before Tanglewood and one week after. For these concerts, the total attendance is estimated at 200,000. Turning now to the Tanglewood season marked by some disastrous weather during most of the four final weekends, total attendance for all Festival events together with figures for the BSO-sponsored Berkshire Music Center give a total this year of close to 200,000 admissions. A little addition now shows the grand total of admissions to concerts presented or sponsored by the orchestra during fourteen weeks come to 525,000, or let us call it a round half-million admissions!

■ These are staggering figures and this interest in music probably goes far to explain the marked progress made in recent years by more and more American composers and performers. This trend was particularly evident during the whole Berkshire Festival. All six of the piano soloists were American-born and largely American-trained. In each case excellent performances were turned in by Lukas Foss, Seymour Lipkin, Leon Fleisher, Byron Janis, Leonard Pennario and Eugene Istomin. As a matter of fact, Byron Janis received one of the lengthiest and most tumultuous ovations in Festival history for this remarkable performance of the Rachmaninoff Third Concerto on July 26.

Among the string soloists, only Zino Francescatti was not "made in America," so to speak. Berl Senofsky impressed with his sure artistry and poise in the Beethoven Violin Concerto, Aug. 9, and Joseph de Pasquale, first violist of the orchestra, scored again in the new Piston Viola Concerto. Ruth Posselt rounded out this quartet of fine soloists.

Among the vocal soloists, it was the same story, with the highly-esteemed Hilde Gueden the only non-American singer in a list that produces notable results from Margaret Harshaw, Donald Gramm, Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts, Florence Kopleff and Blake Stern.

■ But if all this recognition goes to our heads, and lest we become too chauvinistic, let us not forget the brilliant readings of Charles Munch who conducted thirteen concerts and the reliable assistance of Pierre Monteux, who relieved the Boston Symphony conductor for one concert in each of the final four week-ends. Other conductors were G. Wallace Woodworth, Hugh Ross and, for "Tanglewood on Parade," Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin and Arthur Fiedler.

To do full justice to all the events, including the fine chamber music concerts, the outstanding student events, and the activities of Boris Goldovsky's Opera Department, becomes an impossibility in a report of this kind. We must be content with the observation that rarely, if ever, has so much good music been performed in any six-week period. Dr. Munch seemed completely recovered from his mild heart attack. His Beethoven Seventh, particularly, stands out in memory, together with his wonderfully sympathetic accompaniment to Janis in the Rachmaninoff Concerto.

The custom of including a contemporary work on most of the programs must be applauded. These were: July 18, Copland's Orchestral Variations; July 20, Stravinsky's "Petrouchka"; July 25, Milhaud's Overture to "Les Eumenides"; July 26, Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum"; July 27, Bartok's Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta; Aug. 1, Piston's Viola Concerto; Aug. 2, the Williams Symphony No. 8; Aug. 8, Honneger's Prelude, Fugure and Postlude; Aug. 9, Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione"; and Aug. 10, Walton's "Johannesburg Festival" Overture.

JULES WOLFFERS

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

AUG 4 1958

In Brief . . .

Councilman John F. Fraser may pick up some votes by calling for a special City Council meeting to endorse IUE's contract demands from General Electric Company. But as Mayor Haughey pointed out when the issue was put up to him last June, an elected official who feels responsible to his constituents as a whole should steer clear of taking sides in a company-union dispute . . . Although the Boston & Albany's petition to remove four trains from service is sure to raise some hackles, it raises the old question in a different form: Who among the objectors takes the train when he can go faster and more conveniently by turnpike? . . . It's good to know that in Hal Hallock we have a professional diver ready to retrieve anything from false teeth to kitchen stoves. Now if he will just devise a way to keep people from diving in while wearing wristwatches.

The 23,500 at Tanglewood and similarly good weekend crowds at other spots throughout the county show that all we need this summer is a little sun. With help from the weather, the combination of "Tanglewood on Parade" and visiting day at the camps should fill up the area from Wednesday night through Sunday . . . For those who remember the old rooming house at 1307 North Street, the renovation job being completed there constitutes an admirable little urban renewal project all by itself . . .

OCT 16 1958

The L

By Milton R.

[214]

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

The Lively Arts

By Milton R. Bass

[illegible] did not [illegible] any- [illegible] yammer [illegible] some [illegible] take up [illegible] in the [illegible] unrealistic [illegible]. You would [illegible] the only valid purpose [illegible] events is the filling [illegible] motels, rooming [illegible] restaurants and gasoline [illegible].

[illegible] competitions for [illegible] musicians, painters or [illegible] are not mentioned as [illegible] in the development or dis- [illegible] but only as a [illegible] of filling the gap between Tanglewood and skiing. The Berkshire Music Festival has become meaningless around here as a musical event; it is only the outsiders who care about the esthetic experience. All the local promoters seem interested in is money.

* * *

DON'T GET me wrong about [illegible] money business. As the management here will tell you, I fight for it with every breath of my wheezing body. But the dollar has nothing to do with the urge to write, and so it has little in common with esthetic ambitions.

Nobody was out to make a buck when the idea of bringing a symphony orchestra to this sylvan setting was first broached. Eventually much money was needed, and today it is a big business operation in addition to being a cultural attraction. But all this came afterwards. Any cultural attraction which starts on a money premise and then takes it from there is bound to fail. Because there isn't enough money in the world to give the necessary impetus to a project which requires inspiration from the indefinable regions.

* * *

IT WOULD be impossible for Berkshire County to reach an emotional and physical climax twice in one season. You can feel the collective effort every summer as Tanglewood starts its programs, the head of steam building with each succeeding week as the crowds grow and the emotional atmosphere becomes heavier and heavier.

You all must have experienced the feeling of relief which seems to come the day after the last Tanglewood concert. There is a weird feeling of spaciousness as you drive around the county with few cars or people to hinder your actions. There is also an emotional letdown, a relaxation as things slide back into their natural orbit and the summer season [illegible] into fall. There

IT WOULD be impossible for the community to gather itself together for another festival of some sort immediately afterwards, a gigantic affair which would once more involve the building of crowds and pressure over a period of weeks. A community is a collection of people, and the superhuman effort which would be needed is probably beyond our present capabilities. There can be only one Tanglewood to a customer.

The unique quality of the festival would be lost completely if the Boston Symphony allowed the site to be used for other purposes. TV comedians have found that overexposure is sure death, and familiarity breeds boredom. Each year there is a new awakening as you sit in the Shed or on the grass and listen to the music amidst the glory of nature. But a great deal of this would be lost if a series of events succeeded each other in this atmosphere.

* * *

IN THE SAME way the Music Barn in Lenox did not spring up overnight, but was the result of five years of roundtables, lectures and demonstrations. Even then there was much backbreaking work and capital risk before it assumed the stature it holds in the popular music field today. The festival at Ellenville, N.Y., and the musical tent at Latham. N.Y., found this past year that large population areas are not a guarantee of success. Even in this nuclear age the world can end with a whimper.

However, I am not ignorant of nor unconcerned about the post-summer plight of the tourist industry in this community, and I have evolved a plan whereby they can plug the seasonal gap in a most lucrative manner. You all saw the mob which descended on us recently to catch the height of the foliage. There were so many people that there wasn't room to bend over to pick up a stick to shake at them. We should get more than one weekend's take out of these trees who do nothing all year but drink our water and soak up our sunshine. Why should they get away with a couple of days' work and then shrug their leaves about the whole business?

* * *

THEREFORE, I suggest that we organize volunteer (and you better volunteer if you know what's good for you) work parties to go around during the week pasting the leaves back on the trees when they fall down. We should be able to fake it right into December. And we'll have a monopoly.

This makes a lot more sense than some of the crazy plans which have been suggested. And all I ask for my cut is one measly penny per leaf. I feel it's the least I can do for my county, right or wrong.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

South Berkshire Weekly

BERKSHIRE EAGLE August 30, 1958

The Post-Tanglewood Slump

By Frank V. Mccarthy

LENOX — There are two kinds of summer vacation establishments in the South Berkshire area — those which don't depend on Tanglewood and those which do.

Those which don't have been operating full tilt right up through this Labor Day weekend. Those which do depend on Tanglewood have had a shortage of customers since the Berkshire Festival in Lenox closed three weeks ago.

The vacation business devoted to serving the Tanglewood public faces the same problem each summer. Business is bad when the festival isn't running, and the festival only runs for six weeks.

It is recognized by most of those in the vacation business in the area that there are two approaches to solving the problem. One is to develop another cultural attraction which might act as a substitute for the drawing power of Tanglewood when the festival is closed. The other is to devote more effort to drawing customers to the Berkshires who are not interested in the so-called cultural attractions.

* * *

THE FIRST approach has been tried with varying degrees of success.

Four years ago, Avaloch Inn arranged for a series of post-Tanglewood concerts by Pro Musica Antiqua. The concerts were held the first year in the Lenox Town Hall and the second year in the Stockbridge Town Hall. The programs were attended by people who were already in the area, but as a season-stretcher, Pro Musica Antiqua didn't have the drawing power. The number of people who came to the Berkshires to attend the concerts was insignificant.

A similar effort has been initiated at Music Inn with more success. The inn established its series of jazz concerts to enhance the Tanglewood season and to continue through the Labor Day weekend. The post-Tanglewood season at Music Inn has been further bolstered by the School of Jazz, currently in session.

The jazz concerts and the school of jazz have not taken up all the slack which resulted at Music Inn following the closing of Tanglewood. But Music Inn is currently doing better than half the business it did during Tanglewood. That is progress.

If the jazz concerts and school continue to develop at the pace they have during the past two years, Music Inn will have filled out its season. The inn hopes an increasing drawing power of jazz concerts will have an impact on other vacation businesses in the area.

* * *

ANY FULLY effective late-season duplication of the drawing power of Tanglewood, however, will probably have to be of greater magnitude than the collective playhouses, music barns and even Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival—none of which have proved sufficient to come close to maintaining the momentum of vacation business after Tanglewood closes.

Any effective duplication of Tanglewood will have to be nearly as grandiose as Tanglewood. The affair would also probably have to be held on the Tanglewood grounds. Unfortunately, this would require the cooperation of the Boston Symphony Orchestra trustees.

The Tanglewood shed, the construction of which was largely financed with Berkshire money, was presented to the BSO in 1945 as a gift—giving the orchestra full control over the use of the grounds.

The BSO has indicated it is not interested in extending its own season here. The orchestra has also denied the use of the grounds for any other musical attraction. More music at Tanglewood, the BSO claims, would reduce the drawing power of the festival concerts.

Possibly the BSO would permit use of the grounds for a drama or arts festival or a series of talks by great religious or philosophical leaders. These are suggestions heard in the area just this week.

Such affairs might not have the customers lolling on the grass outside the shed. But if 34,000 people will turn out on a weekend to hear music at Tanglewood, possibly some other high-powered attraction would at least fill the shed.

* * *

THE OTHER solution for the short season induced by Tanglewood is for the vacation industry to simply become less oriented to serving the Tanglewood public. After all, the Poconos and the Catskills get along just fine without any Tanglewood at all. These areas aren't any more physically attractive than Berkshire but they do much more promoting.

The fact that at least one sector of the vacation industry in this area can operate quite independently of Tanglewood is further demonstrated by Eastover, Oak N' Spruce and Jug End Barn. These places are true resorts in the sense that they are self-contained vacation areas which provide all the attractions their guests desire.

Area inns, which on the other hand depend on outside activities to keep their guests amused, are tending to function more and more as resorts. Swimming pools, volley ball courts and archery ranges are appearing on what were formerly empty lawns. Art courses, folk dancing and other organized group activities are being provided to make the guests less dependent on what is going on, or isn't going on, off the grounds.

These activities have cushioned the post-Tanglewood drop in business, but they've by no means eliminated it. The fact remains that the clientele of the more sophisticated hostelries still favor the Tanglewood season when they consider the Berkshires. They will continue to do so until some other Berkshire season is made to appeal to them as much, or more.

* * *

POSSIBLY more promotion of the area's other assets would in time make the area's vacation business less dependent on Tanglewood. It is apparent in the travel pages of the metropolitan Sunday papers that the money used in promoting the Berkshires is but a spit in the ocean of travel advertising.

Some of those in the vacation business complain that they can neither advertise more heavily nor develop as rapidly as they would like to because a bank in this area won't loan money for the vacation business.

Yet, it's a big business. No one knows how much tourist money is spent in the Berkshires for meals, overnight accommodation supplies and odds and ends. But one figure is available to indicate the potential magnitude of the business. The largest resort in the area, Eastover, expects to pump $700,000 into the Berkshire economy this year. That's not including tips.

AUG 25 1958

Suggestion for Tanglewood

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

Last week's column, "Berkshire Week in Review" [Aug. 16] reports that Tanglewood rang down the curtain on another record-breaking season to the resounding strains of Beethoven's Ninth. Those of us who were there enjoyed the thrilling finale to the current season. When it was over, Conductor Munch left for Europe and his musicians, as well as the teachers and students, dispersed for well-earned vacations, probably elsewhere.

The excellent Tanglewood facilities remain closed, except for the Aug. 26 convocation of the Golden Age Clubs, and the Berkshire resorts face the perennial problem of limited post-Tanglewood business in the weeks from Aug. 10 through Labor Day.

Tanglewood has an international reputation for the quality of its music and the standing of its conductors, artists and teachers, but it is only in a limited sense an international musical center. It should expand its program by utilizing its facilities in the weeks from the concluding concert until Labor Day.

It can do this by undertaking to conduct an international competition for young artists, instrumental and voice, such as the Brussels and Moscow competitions, with the judges selected from the world's great artists in their respective fields.

The competition could take place during the three weeks before Labor Day, with the finalists performing during the Labor Day weekend, and mayhap the project can enlist the support of the United Nations (which, at its headquarters in New York, frequently sponsors musicales by world-renowned artists). This Tanglewood international competition could serve as a prelude to the annual General Assembly which meets in mid-September in New York. Undoubtedly many thousands from all over the world would avail themselves of the international competition at Tanglewood to come to the Berkshires, to fill out the lean weeks.

Will you act as the "Paul Revere"?

PAUL L. ROSS.

Long Pond Road,
Great Barrington.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

SEP 9 - 1958

Tanglewood Proposal

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

I read with great interest the letter [Aug. 25] from Mr. Paul L. Ross.

I heartily approve of his proposal to have an international musical competition at Tanglewood after the regular season.

Perhaps Madame Koussevitzky could be induced to be chairman of the sponsoring committee.

HENRY H. ABRAMS.

Box 71,
North Egremont.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
D. 28,354
SEP 11 1958

Matter for Trustees

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

While I read with interest Mr. Paul L. Ross' letter of Aug. 25 and appreciate the letter [Sept. 9] entitled "Tanglewood Proposal" by Mr. Henry H. Abrams, I should like to make one observation.

Tanglewood is the home of the Boston Symphony, its Festival and Music Center. If the ownership of this great institution is to be respected, the full consent of the trustees and director of the orchestra is primarily necessary for any plan, however stimulating and imaginative, in connection with Tanglewood. Otherwise I would regard it an invasion of the site and sanctuary of Tanglewood, which Serge Koussevitzky conceived as "a place of pilgrimage for the music world."

By this, I do not mean to discourage the idea. Rather, I feel that the Boston Symphony Trustees may concur with a proposal for an international musical competition in Tanglewood, if such a proposal could be worked out within the scope of vision of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and for the benefit of all concerned.

OLGA KOUSSEVITZKY.

Lenox.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

AUG 26 1958

In Brief . . .

Here's some consolation for those who fear the railroad will be successful in knocking off two daily trains to Boston and another pair to Albany: Three Boston and five Albany trains and seven Boston and 12 Albany buses remain. And buses leave within a half-hour of the four runs where the railroad wants out . . . When 100 motor vehicles can't find parking space at an event featuring an ox-drawing contest, well, it means the Cummington Fair has something the rest of this modern world doesn't . . . In honoring such a hard-working and effective sports promoter as Raymond Bertolino, the Benedict AC is following the commendable policy of touching all the bases. Its first two awards went to men with high school and Babe Ruth connections, and now it's a Little League choice . . .

The inspired suggestion of post-Festival use of Tanglewood for an international music competition is in line with others designed to combat the feast-famine aspect of Berkshire tourist business, but whether it jibes with a BSO policy of not diluting its most priceless asset, the Tanglewood name, with other musical events there is yet another question . . .

[218]

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

The Lively Arts

By Milton R. Bass

T[illegible] did not [illegible] from any[illegible] this yammer [illegible] in some [illegible] extravaganza to take up [illegible] summer slack in the [illegible] is as unrealistic [illegible] ridiculous. You would [illegible] the only valid purpose [illegible] cultural events is the filling [illegible] motels, rooming [illegible] restaurants and gasoline [illegible]

International competitions for young musicians, painters or sculptors are not mentioned as an aid in the development or discovery of talent, but only as a means of filling the gap between Tanglewood and skiing. The Berkshire Music Festival has become meaningless around here as a musical event; it is only the outsiders who care about the esthetic experience. All the local promoters seem interested in is money.

* * *

DON'T GET me wrong about this money business. As the management here will tell you, I fight for it with every breath of my wheezing body. But the dollar has nothing to do with the urge to write, and so it has little in common with esthetic ambitions.

Nobody was out to make a buck when the idea of bringing a symphony orchestra to this sylvan setting was first broached. Eventually much money was needed, and today it is a big business operation in addition to being a cultural attraction. But all this came afterwards. Any cultural attraction which starts on a money premise and then takes it from there is bound to fail. Because there isn't enough money in the world to give the necessary impetus to a project which requires inspiration from the indefinable regions.

* * *

IT WOULD be impossible for Berkshire County to reach an emotional and physical climax twice in one season. You can feel the collective effort every summer as Tanglewood starts its programs, the head of steam building with each succeeding week as the crowds grow and the emotional atmosphere becomes heavier and heavier.

You all must have experienced the feeling of relief which seems to come the day after the last Tanglewood concert. There is a weird feeling of spaciousness as you drive around the county with few cars or people to hinder your actions. There is also an emotional letdown, a relaxation as things slide back into their natural orbit and the summer season dies into fall. There seems more air to breathe, and muscles sag into the heat of the sun.

IT WOULD be impossible for the community to gather itself together for another festival of some sort immediately afterwards, a gigantic affair which would once more involve the building of crowds and pressure over a period of weeks. A community is a collection of people, and the superhuman effort which would be needed is probably beyond our present capabilities. There can be only one Tanglewood to a customer.

The unique quality of the festival would be lost completely if the Boston Symphony allowed the site to be used for other purposes. TV comedians have found that overexposure is sure death, and familiarity breeds boredom. Each year there is a new awakening as you sit in the Shed or on the grass and listen to the music amidst the glory of nature. But a great deal of this would be lost if a series of events succeeded each other in this atmosphere.

* * *

IN THE SAME way the Music Barn in Lenox did not spring up overnight, but was the result of five years of roundtables, lectures and demonstrations. Even then there was much backbreaking work and capital risk before it assumed the stature it holds in the popular music field today. The festival at Ellenville, N.Y., and the musical tent at Latham, N.Y., found this past year that large population areas are not a guarantee of success. Even in this nuclear age the world can end with a whimper.

However, I am not ignorant of nor unconcerned about the post-summer plight of the tourist industry in this community, and I have evolved a plan whereby they can plug the seasonal gap in a most lucrative manner. You all saw the mob which descended on us recently to catch the height of the foliage. There were so many people that there wasn't room to bend over to pick up a stick to shake at them. We should get more than one weekend's take out of these trees who do nothing all year but drink our water and soak up our sunshine. Why should they get away with a couple of days' work and then shrug their leaves about the whole business?

* * *

THEREFORE, I suggest that we organize volunteer (and you better volunteer if you know what's good for you) work parties to go around during the week pasting the leaves back on the trees when they fall down. We should be able to fake it right into December. And we'll have a monopoly.

This makes a lot more sense than some of the crazy plans which have been suggested. And all I ask for my cut is one measly penny per leaf. I feel it's the least I can do for my county, right or wrong.

South Berkshire Weekly — BERKSHIRE EAGLE August 30, 1958

The Post-Tanglewood Slump

By Frank V. Mccarthy

LENOX — There are two kinds of summer vacation establishments in the South Berkshire area — those which don't depend on Tanglewood and those which do.

Those which don't have been operating full tilt right up through this Labor Day weekend. Those which do depend on Tanglewood have had a shortage of customers since the Berkshire Festival in Lenox closed three weeks ago.

The vacation business devoted to serving the Tanglewood public faces the same problem each summer. Business is bad when the festival isn't running, and the festival only runs for six weeks.

It is recognized by most of those in the vacation business in the area that there are two approaches to solving the problem. One is to develop another cultural attraction which might act as a substitute for the drawing power of Tanglewood when the festival is closed. The other is to devote more effort to drawing customers to the Berkshires who are not interested in the so-called cultural attractions.

* * *

THE FIRST approach has been tried with varying degrees of success.

Four years ago, Avaloch Inn arranged for a series of post-Tanglewood concerts by Pro Musica Antiqua. The concerts were held the first year in the Lenox Town Hall and the second year in the Stockbridge Town Hall. The programs were attended by people who were already in the area, but as a season-stretcher, Pro Musica Antiqua didn't have the drawing power. The number of people who came to the Berkshires to attend the concerts was insignificant.

A similar effort has been initiated at Music Inn with more success. The inn established its series of jazz concerts to enhance the Tanglewood season and to continue through the Labor Day weekend. The post-Tanglewood season at Music Inn has been further bolstered by the School of Jazz, currently in session.

The jazz concerts and the school of jazz have not taken up all the slack which resulted at Music Inn following the closing of Tanglewood. But Music Inn is currently doing better than half the business it did during Tanglewood. That is progress.

If the jazz concerts and school continue to develop at the pace they have during the past two years, Music Inn will have filled out its season. The inn hopes an increasing drawing power of jazz concerts will have an impact on other vacation businesses in the area.

* * *

ANY FULLY effective late-season duplication of the drawing power of Tanglewood, however, will probably have to be of greater magnitude than the collective playhouses, music barns and even Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival—none of which have proved sufficient to come close to maintaining the momentum of vacation business after Tanglewood closes.

Any effective duplication of Tanglewood will have to be nearly as grandiose as Tanglewood. The affair would also probably have to be held on the Tanglewood grounds. Unfortunately, this would require the cooperation of the Boston Symphony Orchestra trustees.

The Tanglewood shed, the construction of which was largely financed with Berkshire money, was presented to the BSO in 1945 as a gift—giving the orchestra full control over the use of the grounds.

The BSO has indicated it is not interested in extending its own season here. The orchestra has also denied the use of the grounds for any other musical attraction. More music at Tanglewood, the BSO claims, would reduce the drawing power of the festival concerts.

Possibly the BSO would permit use of the grounds for a drama or arts festival or a series of talks by great religious or philosophical leaders. These are suggestions heard in the area just this week.

Such affairs might not have the customers lolling on the grass outside the shed. But if 34,000 people will turn out on a weekend to hear music at Tanglewood, possibly some other high-powered attraction would at least fill the shed.

* * *

THE OTHER solution for the short season induced by Tanglewood is for the vacation industry to simply become less oriented to serving the Tanglewood public. After all, the Poconos and the Catskills get along just fine without any Tanglewood at all. These areas aren't any more physically attractive than Berkshire but they do much more promoting.

The fact that at least one sector of the vacation industry in this area can operate quite independently of Tanglewood is further demonstrated by Eastover, Oak N' Spruce and Jug End Barn. These places are true resorts in the sense that they are self-contained vacation areas which provide all the attractions their guests desire.

Area inns, which on the other hand depend on outside activities to keep their guests amused, are tending to function more and more as resorts. Swimming pools, volley ball courts and archery ranges are appearing on what were formerly empty lawns. Art courses, folk dancing and other organized group activities are being provided to make the guests less dependent on what is going on, or isn't going on, off the grounds.

These activities have cushioned the post-Tanglewood drop in business, but they've by no means eliminated it. The fact remains that the clientele of the more sophisticated hostelries still favor the Tanglewood season when they consider the Berkshires. They will continue to do so until some other Berkshire season is made to appeal to them as much, or more.

* * *

POSSIBLY more promotion of the area's other assets would in time make the area's vacation business less dependent on Tanglewood. It is apparent in the travel pages of the metropolitan Sunday papers that the money used in promoting the Berkshires is but a spit in the ocean of travel advertising.

Some of those in the vacation business complain that they can neither advertise more heavily nor develop as rapidly as they would like to because a bank in this area won't loan money for the vacation business.

Yet, it's a big business. No one knows how much tourist money is spent in the Berkshires for meals, overnight accommodation supplies and odds and ends. But one figure is available to indicate the potential magnitude of the business. The largest resort in the area, Eastover, expects to pump $700,000 into the Berkshire economy this year. That's not including tips.

Suggestion for Tanglewood

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

Last week's column, "Berkshire Week in Review" [Aug. 16] reports that Tanglewood rang down the curtain on another record-breaking season to the resounding strains of Beethoven's Ninth. Those of us who were there enjoyed the thrilling finale to the current season. When it was over, Conductor Munch left for Europe and his musicians, as well as the teachers and students, dispersed for well-earned vacations, probably elsewhere.

The excellent Tanglewood facilities remain closed, except for the Aug. 26 convocation of the Golden Age Clubs, and the Berkshire resorts face the perennial problem of limited post-Tanglewood business in the weeks from Aug. 10 through Labor Day.

Tanglewood has an international reputation for the quality of its music and the standing of its conductors, artists and teachers, but it is only in a limited sense an international musical center. It should expand its program by utilizing its facilities in the weeks from the concluding concert until Labor Day.

It can do this by undertaking to conduct an international competition for young artists, instrumental and voice, such as the Brussels and Moscow competitions, with the judges selected from the world's great artists in their respective fields.

The competition could take place during the three weeks before Labor Day, with the finalists performing during the Labor Day weekend, and mayhap the project can enlist the support of the United Nations (which, at its headquarters in New York, frequently sponsors musicales by world-renowned artists). This Tanglewood international competition could serve as a prelude to the annual General Assembly which meets in mid-September in New York. Undoubtedly many thousands from all over the world would avail themselves of the international competition at Tanglewood to come to the Berkshires, to fill out the lean weeks.

Will you act as the "Paul Revere"?

PAUL L. ROSS.
Long Pond Road,
Great Barrington.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

SEP 9 - 1958

Tanglewood Proposal

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

I read with great interest the letter [Aug. 25] from Mr. Paul L. Ross.

I heartily approve of his proposal to have an international musical competition at Tanglewood after the regular season.

Perhaps Madame Koussevitzky could be induced to be chairman of the sponsoring committee.

HENRY H. ABRAMS.
Box 71,
North Egremont.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
D. 28,354
SEP 11 1958

Matter for Trustees

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

While I read with interest Mr. Paul L. Ross' letter of Aug. 25 and appreciate the letter [Sept. 9] entitled "Tanglewood Proposal" by Mr. Henry H. Abrams, I should like to make one observation.

Tanglewood is the home of the Boston Symphony, its Festival and Music Center. If the ownership of this great institution is to be respected, the full consent of the trustees and director of the orchestra is primarily necessary for any plan, however stimulating and imaginative, in connection with Tanglewood. Otherwise I would regard it an invasion of the site and sanctuary of Tanglewood, which Serge Koussevitzky conceived as "a place of pilgrimage for the music world."

By this, I do not mean to discourage the idea. Rather, I feel that the Boston Symphony Trustees may concur with a proposal for an international musical competition in Tanglewood, if such a proposal could be worked out within the scope of vision of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and for the benefit of all concerned.

OLGA KOUSSEVITZKY.
Lenox.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

AUG 26 1958

In Brief . . .

Here's some consolation for those who fear the railroad will be successful in knocking off two daily trains to Boston and another pair to Albany: Three Boston and five Albany trains and seven Boston and 12 Albany buses remain. And buses leave within a half-hour of the four runs where the railroad wants out . . . When 100 motor vehicles can't find parking space at an event featuring an ox-drawing contest, well, it means the Cummington Fair has something the rest of this modern world doesn't . . . In honoring such a hard-working and effective sports promoter as Raymond Bertolino, the Benedict AC is following the commendable policy of touching all the bases. Its first two awards went to men with high school and Babe Ruth connections, and now it's a Little League choice . . .

The inspired suggestion of post-Festival use of Tanglewood for an international music competition is in line with others designed to combat the feast-famine aspect of Berkshire tourist business, but whether it jibes with a BSO policy of not diluting its most priceless asset, the Tanglewood name, with other musical events there is yet another question . . .

REDUCTION

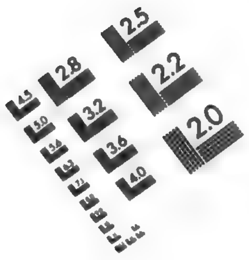
RATIO

19x

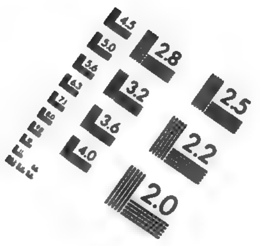
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890
2.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
2.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
1.5 mm

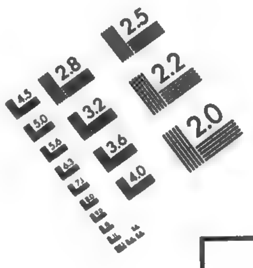


2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
3.6
2.0
4.0

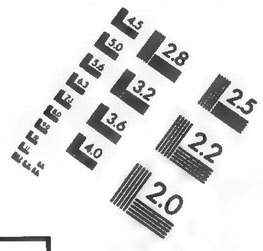


2.8
3.2
3.6
2.5
2.2
4.0
2.0

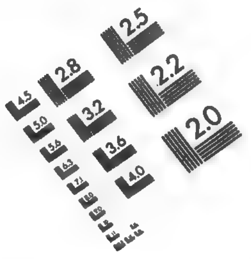
PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



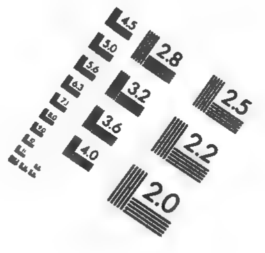
2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
3.6
2.0
4.0



2.8
3.2
2.5
3.6
2.2
4.0
2.0



2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
3.6
2.0
4.0

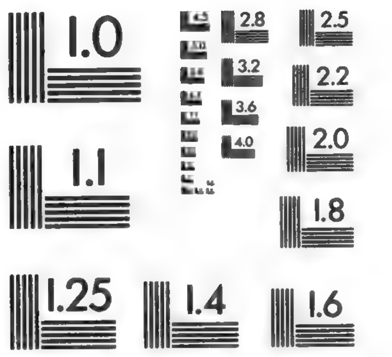


2.8
3.2
2.5
3.6
2.2
4.0
2.0

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm



1.0
2.8
2.5
3.2
2.2
3.6
4.0
2.0
1.1
1.8
1.25
1.4
1.6

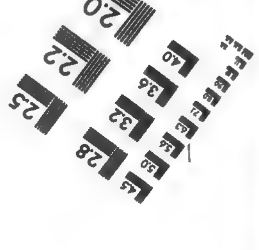
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
1.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
1.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890
2.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890
2.5 mm

A5

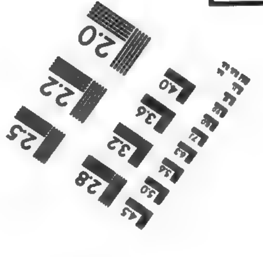


2.0
2.2
4.0
3.6
2.5
3.2
2.8

4.0
3.6
2.0
3.2
2.2
2.8
2.5

A4

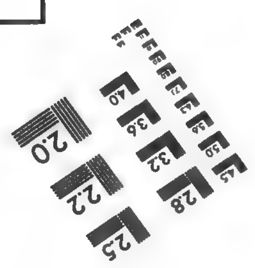
A3



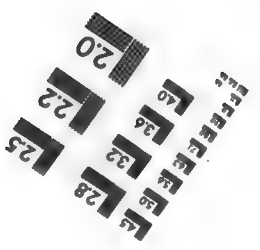
2.0
2.2
3.6
3.2
2.5
2.8

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119



4.0
3.6
2.0
3.2
2.2
2.8
2.5



2.0
4.0
2.2
3.6
3.2
2.5
2.8

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890
4.5 mm

4.0
3.6
2.0
3.2
2.2
2.8
2.5

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
3.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
3.0 mm

[illegible] News Albany, N.Y. Aug. 2, 1958

Fleisher adjusts his tie.

"Contests . . . are really anti-music."

"The real qualities are unmeasurable."

"A spiritual . . . thing."

"The jury might have a bellyache."

"Feeling of security"

"Music is bigger than men."

Music Contests: Are They Good or Bad?

It has become almost necessary for young American musicians to win contests. Two who have done so are pianists Leon Fleischer, 30, and Seymour Lipkin, 31, who also played at the Berkshire Festival this summer. Knickerbocker News staff writer Peter B. Taub asked them what they think about competitions, such as the one Van Cliburn won in Moscow.

MR. FLEISHER: The importance given to competition is, in a way, unfortunate. It sort of implies the "champ" aspect, which does not exist in music. The qualities of art are intangible, especially an art that passes as quickly as a performance of music.

MR. LIPKIN: I think that is true, and I think the reason why competitions have become so important is that the public is less and less willing to make up its own mind about an artist. It would rather have a jury made up of X, Y and Z make up its mind. It is a situation that feeds on itself.

MR. FLEISHER: The public and the concert managers should be ashamed that their own convictions count for so little. My chief kick about contests is that they are really anti-music. The intangible qualities of art are not measurable. People on the same artistic level may have different qualities.

MR. LIPKIN: No, I think X may be on a different level than Y. That is, somebody is a real artist while somebody else is not.

MR. TAUB: Why are contests not a reliable indication of an artist's talent or ability?

MR. FLEISHER: In the first place, there is the factor of chance. A contestant might have a bellyache that day—or the jury might have a bellyache.

MR. LIPKIN: For that reason, a contest is an artificial thing. An artist playing in a contest is not giving something to the public. He is simply trying to demonstrate his prowess. There are great pianists and singers who don't really get warmed up until their recital is half over. In a contest, they might do poorly.

MR. FLEISHER: The values in a contest, especially after a period of time, tend to become more and more false. You are judged for such things as speed, accuracy and loudness because the real qualities are unmeasurable.

MR. TAUB: What are these qualities?

MR. FLEISHER: They are qualities of artistry and inspiration.

MR. LIPKIN: And communication.

MR. FLEISHER: A performance is a spiritual, emotional thing. An artist has a feeling of fulfillment after a great performance which he does not have after a contest.

MR. LIPKIN: As contests multiply, the public becomes more and more dependent on them. And managers say, "We'll wait until so-and-so wins another contest." Then it is easy for them to "sell" that artist to the public.

MR. FLEISHER: It gives people a feeling of security. People don't have to risk their own judgement of somebody else.

MR. LIPKIN: That is the whole purpose of advertising in this country. Van Cliburn, who is a great talent, became a symbol of "we are better than the Russians." It is too bad he had to be accepted on that basis.

MR. FLEISHER: Contests have their value. At first, they provided an opportunity to young artists who were unable to finance a big-city recital. Winning a contest should be the start of one's career, but now it means one is at his peak.

MR. LIPKIN: Because two years from now, somebody else will have won a major contest. Art may have its commercial aspect, but it is not based on economic factors. If it were, we would have 20-piece orchestras instead of 90 or 100 pieces.

MR. FLEISHER: The United States is about the only country in the world where art is not subsidized by the federal government. In Germany, for instance, every city has its own symphony orchestra, subsidized by the government.

MR. LIPKIN: Well, up to now, you know, the intellectual or artist in this country has been considered a bit subversive.

MR. FLEISHER: Europeans regard music as their child. Since they do have this proprietary intesest, we should show what we can do in this field in order to win their respect.

MR. LIPKIN: But first we must win respect at home.

MR. TAUB: Do you think there is any real value at all in these contests?

MR. FLEISHER: The Moscow contest at least showed an awareness of United States talent, though possibly it was the wrong kind of awareness. It did show the world the importance of art in our lives. If the contest just persuaded more people to expose themselves to concerts, possibly it served a useful purpose.

MR. LIPKIN: I read recently that there has never been so much public interest in music—music of all kinds—as there is today. But this interest is just starting. It is a raw thing. I think the big foundations are beginning to take an interest, which is an encouraging sign.

MR. FLEISHER: Yes, that is the eventual answer. Foundations and big corporations.

MR. TAUB: When a pianist wins a big contest, does it build up his confidence so that he plays better after that?

MR. FLEISHER: Winning a contest is better for one's self-confidence than going to an analyst. At least, I imagine that to be true. Seriously, even when we win a contest, we know our music hasn't changed.

MR. LIPKIN: We welcome the acclaim, of course.

MR. FLEISHER: But the music is always there to knock us off our self-made pedestals. It reminds us that music is bigger than men.

MR. TAUB: Why do you think people are reluctant to decide for themselves whether or not they like a particular pianist?

MR. LIPKIN: The American public is being systematically trained not to decide for itself. We are supposed to trust the advertisements and not our individual judgement. This is really threatening to undermine our society. It is very bad business. Advertising deliberately tries to take advantage of the weaknesses of human nature.

Somebody once asked me why I play a Steinway piano. I told him I played it because I thought it was the best. But it took me 10 minutes to convince him the reason was not that the Steinway people were paying me to play their piano. He refused to believe me.

MR. TAUB: Do music critics have a role in judging young artists?

MR. FLEISHER: I am never sure whether a music critic is a musician in journalism or a journalist in music. I think the critics have been a bit tardy, but now they are facing up to their responsibility.

MR. TAUB: Without these contests, how would talented young pianists gain recognition?

MR. FLEISHER: There is no way for a gifted young professional to start a career unless he has money. It takes $2,000 for a New York City recital and even that is an unsure thing. You may not get the top critics, for one thing.

It is a terrible thing to put 15 or 20 years of hard work into one two-hour period and expect to do your best. The odds are against you.

MR. LIPKIN: A contest asks you to pack it into an even shorter period.

MR. TAUB: Then what is the solution?

MR. FLEISHER: I think managements should open a special department with a panel of their artists who happen to be in town. The panel would listen to young artists who want to audition. If the panel thinks someone shows promise, the manager should give him a chance for a career.

MR. LIPKIN: And if he is not quite ready for that, the older artists could help him in the intermediate stages. But I think you would need a wide representation of judges.

MR. FLEISHER: I don't think that presents such a problem. A person with an enormous talent will be recognized even though a judge might not appreciate his particular style.

Then, of course, the managers have the problem of selling their new talent to the public. Concert managers are not entirely altruistic. They want to make money, and it is easier for them to sell a pianist who has just won a major contest then one who is completely unknown.

MR. LIPKIN: But they should be responsible, too. People should exercise responsibility no matter what their job is.

MR. FLEISHER: Concert managers have a great deal of responsibility, but they don't always exercise it.

MR. LIPKIN: Yes, that's the trouble.

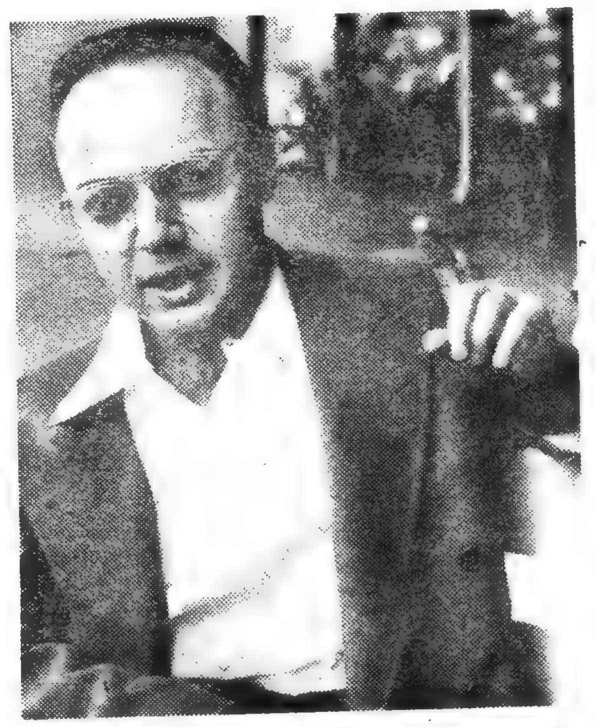
The Knickerbocker News Photos by Bob Paley

Lipkin: "We welcome the acclaim."

"We must win respect."

"A contest is an artificial thing."

"Public interest is just startng."



"Exercise responsibility."

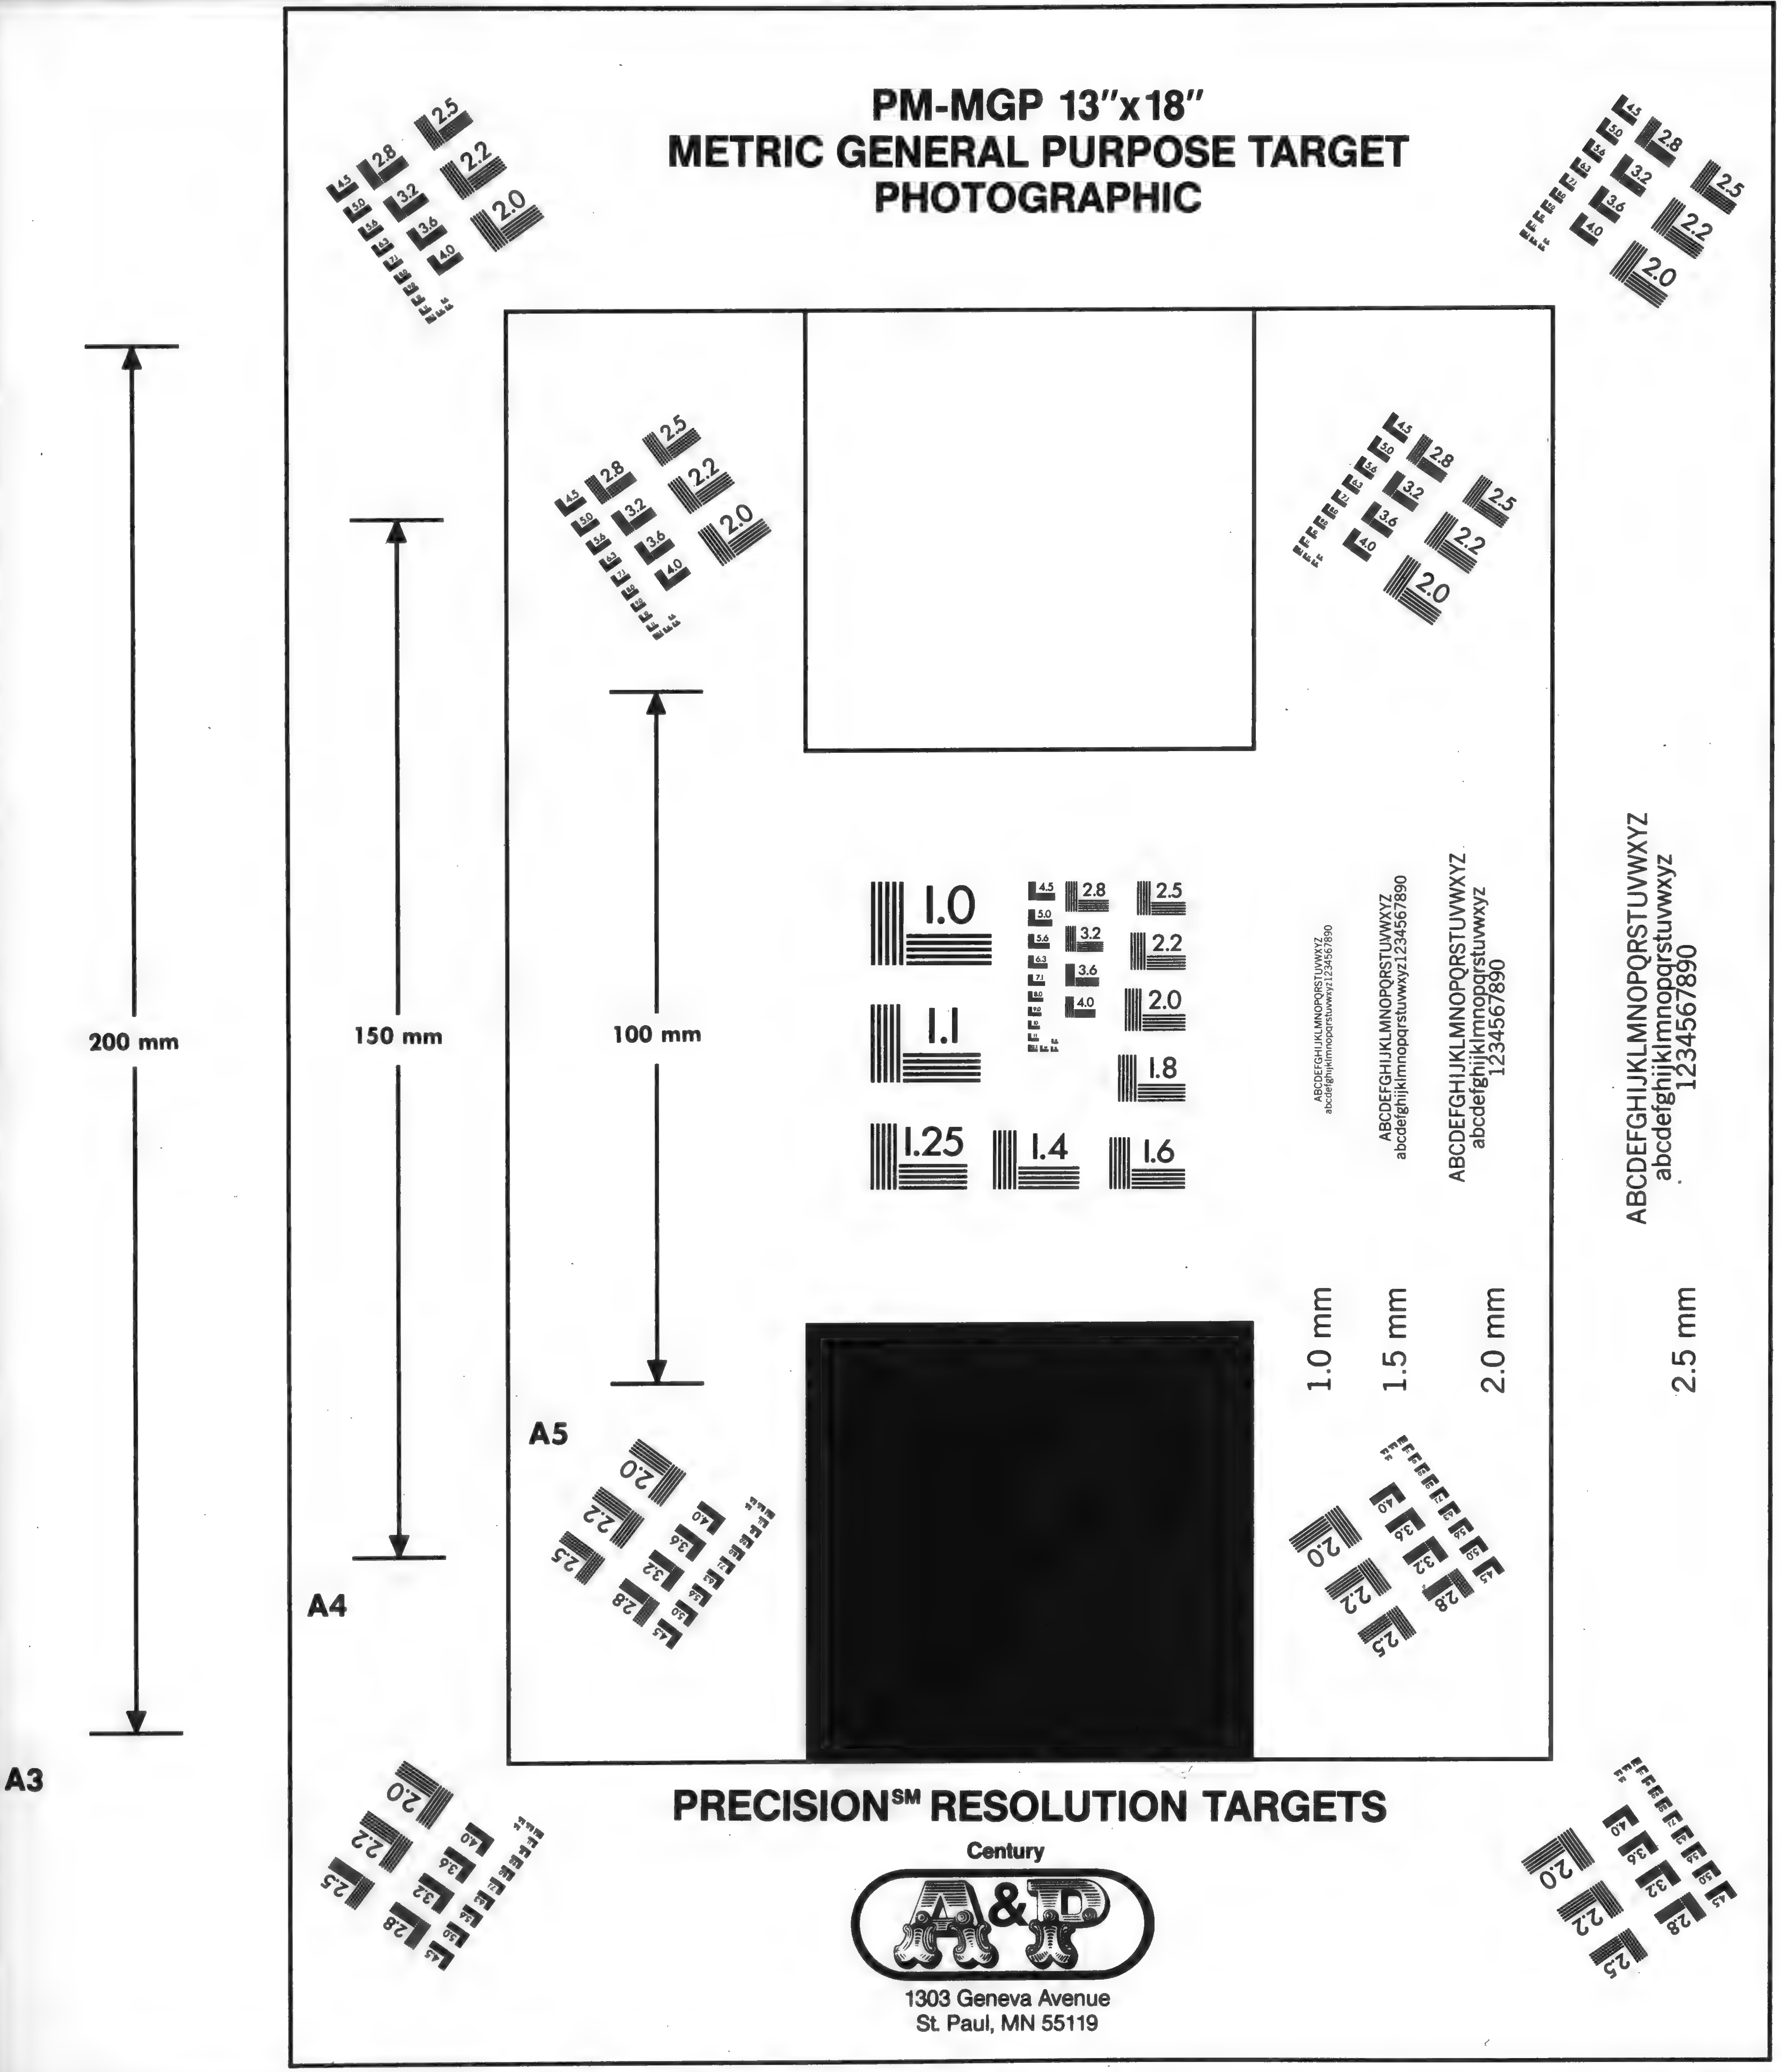
Van Cliburn rests during a practice session.

REDUCTION

RATIO

14x

PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



2.5
2.8
2.2
4.5
5.0
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0
200 mm
150 mm
100 mm
1.0
1.1
1.25
1.4
1.6
1.8
2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890
1.0 mm
1.5 mm
2.0 mm
2.5 mm
A5
A4
A3

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

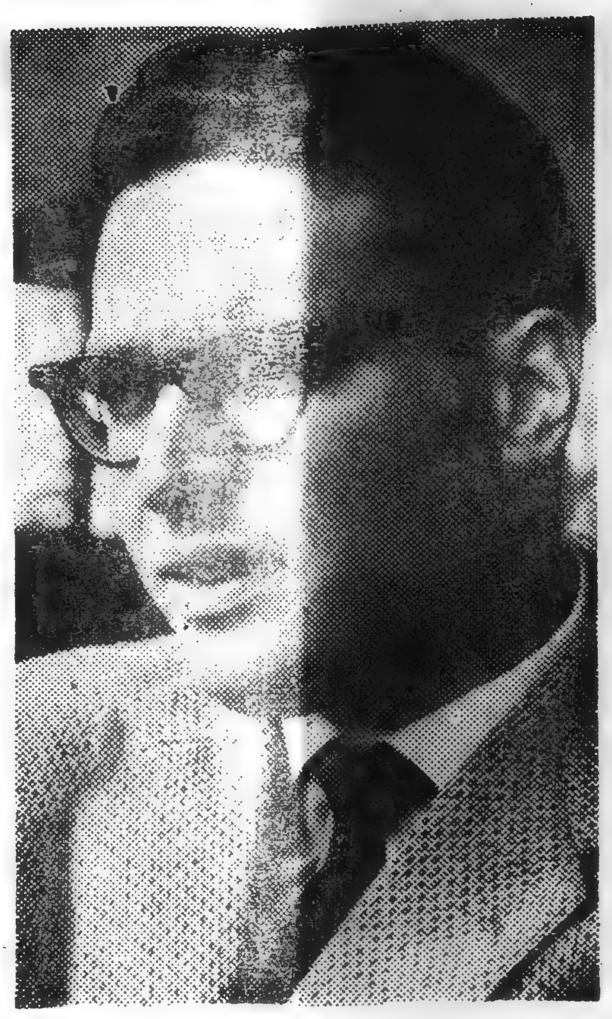
Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

Knickerbocker News — Albany, N.Y. Aug. 2, 1958

Fleisher adjusts his tie.

"Contests . . . are really anti-music."

"The real qualities are unmeasurable."



"A spiritual . . . thing."

"The j

Music Contests: Are They G

It has become almost necessary for young American musicians to win contests. Two who have done so are pianists Leon Fleischer, 30, and Seymour Lipkin, 31, who also played at the Berkshire Festival this summer. Knickerbocker News staff writer Peter B. Taub asked them what they think about competitions, such as the one Van Cliburn won in Moscow.

MR. FLEISHER: The importance given to competition is, in a way, unfortunate. It sort of implies the "champ" aspect, which does not exist in music. The qualities of art are intangible, especially an art that passes as quickly as a performance of music.

MR. LIPKIN: I think that is true, and I think the reason why competitions have become so important is that the public is less and less willing to make up its own mind about an artist. It would rather have a jury made up of X, Y and Z make up its mind. It is a situation that feeds on itself.

MR. FLEISHER: The public and the concert managers should be ashamed that their own convictions count for so little. My chief kick about contests is that they are really anti-music. The intangible qualities of art are not measurable. People on the same artistic level may have different qualities.

MR. LIPKIN: No, I think X may be on a different level than Y. That is, somebody is a real artist while somebody else is not.

MR. TAUB: Why are contests not a reliable indication of an artist's talent or ability?

MR. FLEISHER: In the first place, there is the factor of chance. A contestant might have a bellyache that day—or the jury might have a bellyache.

MR. LIPKIN: For that reason, a contest is an artificial thing. An artist playing in a contest is not giving something to the public. He is simply trying to demonstrate his prowess. There are great pianists and singers who don't really get warmed up until their recital is half over. In a contest, they might do poorly.

MR. FLEISHER: The values in a contest, especially after a period of time, tend to become more and more false. You are judged for such things as speed, accuracy and loudness because the real qualities are unmeasurable.

MR. TAUB: What are these qualities?

MR. FLEISHER: They are qualities of artistry and inspiration.

MR. LIPKIN: And communication.

MR. FLEISHER: A performance is a spiritual, emotional thing. An artist has a feeling of fulfillment after a great performance which he does not have after a contest.

MR. LIPKIN: As contests multiply, the public becomes more and more dependent on them. And managers say, "We'll wait until so-and-so wins another contest." Then it is easy for them to "sell" that artist to the public.

MR. FLEISHER: It gives people a feeling of security. People don't have to risk their own judgement of somebody else.

MR. LIPKIN: That is the whole purpose of advertising in this country. Van Cliburn, who is a great talent, became a symbol of "we are better than the Russians." It is too bad he had to be accepted on that basis.

MR. FLEISHER: Contests have their value. At first, they provided an opportunity to young artists who were unable to finance a big-city recital. Winning a contest should be the start of one's career, but now it means one is at his peak.

MR. LIPKIN: Because two years from now, somebody else will have won a major contest. Art may have its commercial aspect, but it is not based on economic factors. If it were, we would have 20-piece orchestras instead of 90 or 100 pieces.

MR. FLEISHER: The United States is about the only country in the world where art is not subsidized by the federal government. In Germany, for instance, every city has its own symphony orchestra, subsidized by the government.

MR. LIPKIN: Well, up to now, you know, the intellectual or artist in this country has been considered a bit subversive.

MR. FLEISHER: Europeans regard music as their child. Since they do have this proprietary intesest, we should show what we can do in this field in order to win their respect.

MR. LIPKIN: But first we must win respect at home.

MR. TAUB: Do you think there is any real value at all in these contests?

MR. FLEISHER: The Moscow contest at least showed an awareness of United States talent, though possibly it was the wrong kind of awareness. It did show the world the importance of art in our lives. If the contest just persuaded more people to expose themselves to concerts, possibly it served a useful purpose.

MR. LIPKIN: I read recently that there has never been so much public interest in music—music of all kinds—as there is today. But this interest is just starting. It is a raw thing. I think the big foundations are beginning to take an interest, which is an encouraging sign.

MR. FLEISHER: Yes, that is the eventual answer. Foundations and big corporations.

The Knickerbocker News Photos by Bob Paley

MR. TAUB: When a pianist wins a does it build up his confidence so that he after that?

MR. FLEISHER: Winning a contest one's self-confidence than going to an least, I imagine that to be true. Seriously we win a contest, we know our music has

MR. LIPKIN: We welcome the acclai

MR. FLEISHER: But the music is alw knock us off our self-made pedestals. It that music is bigger than men.

MR. TAUB: Why do you think people to decide for themselves whether or not particular pianist?

MR. LIPKIN: The American public is matically trained not to decide for itself.
posed to trust the advertisements and not ou judgement. This is really threatening to un society. It is very bad business. Advertising tries to take advantage of the weaknesse nature.

Somebody once asked me why I play piano. I told him I played it because I th the best. But it took me 10 minutes to c the reason was not that the Steinway paying me to play their piano. He refused to

MR. TAUB: Do music critics have a rol young artists?

MR. FLEISHER: I am never sure whe critic is a musician in journalism or a j music. I think the critics have been a bi now they are facing up to their responsibi

MR. TAUB: Without these contests, talented young pianists gain recognition?

MR. FLEISHER: There is no way young professional to start a career un

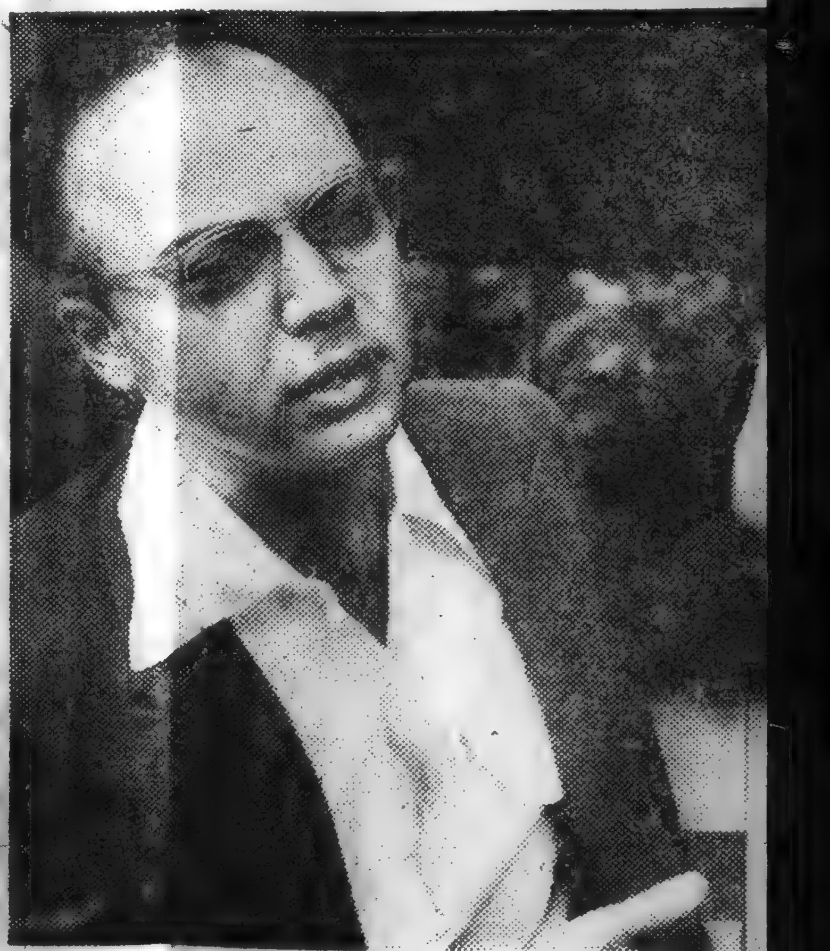
Lipkin: "We welcome the acclaim."

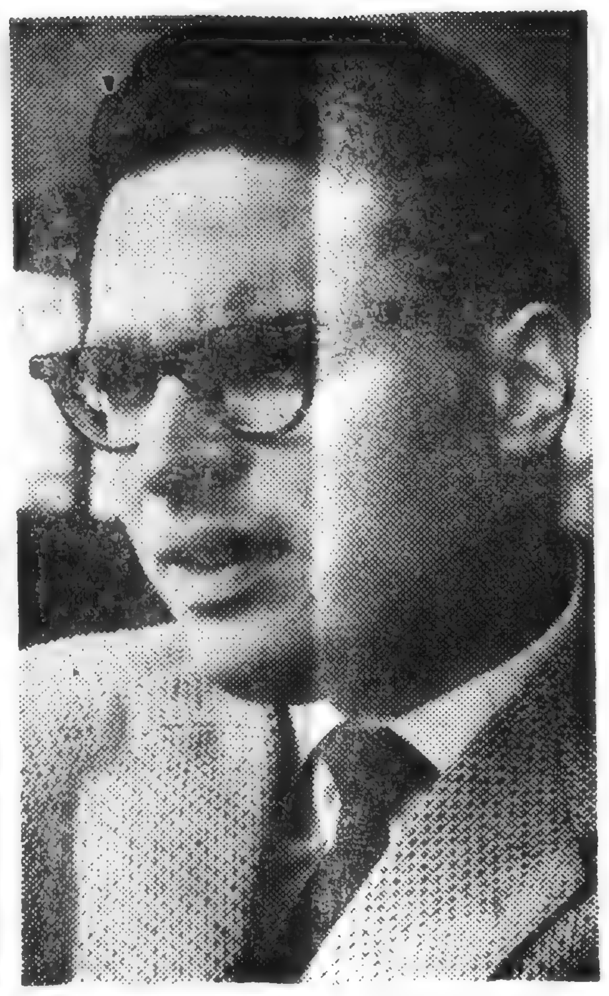
"We must win respect."

"A contest is an artificial thing."



"Public interest is just startng.

he real qualities are unmeasurable."



"A spiritual . . . thing."

"The jury might have a bellyache."

"Feeling of security"

"Music is bigger than men."

ontests: Are They Good or Bad?

l more curacy easura-

ry and ritual, llment

e after lic be-

And nother artist

ng of judgeof ad-great an the n that

e. At artists
Win-r, but somet may ed on economic factors. If it were, we would have 20-piece orchestras instead of 90 or 100 pieces.

MR. FLEISHER: The United States is about the only country in the world where art is not subsidized by the federal government. In Germany, for instance, every city has its own symphony orchestra, subsidized by the government.

MR. LIPKIN: Well, up to now, you know, the intellectual or artist in this country has been considered a bit subversive.

MR. FLEISHER: Europeans regard music as their child. Since they do have this proprietary intesest, we should show what we can do in this field in order to win their respect.

MR. LIPKIN: But first we must win respect at home.

MR. TAUB: Do you think there is any real value at all in these contests?

MR. FLEISHER: The Moscow contest at least showed an awareness of United States talent, though possibly it was the wrong kind of awareness. It did show the world the importance of art in our lives. If the contest just persuaded more people to expose themselves to concerts, possibly it served a useful purpose.

MR. LIPKIN: I read recently that there has never been so much public interest in music—music of all kinds—as there is today. But this interest is just starting. It is a raw thing. I think the big foundations are beginning to take an interest, which is an encouraging sign.

MR. FLEISHER: Yes, that is the eventual answer. Foundations and big corporations.

The Knickerbocker News Photos by Bob Paley

MR. TAUB: When a pianist wins a big contest, does it build up his confidence so that he plays better after that?

MR. FLEISHER: Winning a contest is better for one's self-confidence than going to an analyst. At least, I imagine that to be true. Seriously, even when we win a contest, we know our music hasn't changed.

MR. LIPKIN: We welcome the acclaim, of course.

MR. FLEISHER: But the music is always there to knock us off our self-made pedestals. It reminds us that music is bigger than men.

MR. TAUB: Why do you think people are reluctant to decide for themselves whether or not they like a particular pianist?

MR. LIPKIN: The American public is being systematically trained not to decide for itself. We are supposed to trust the advertisements and not our individual judgement. This is really threatening to undermine our society. It is very bad business. Advertising deliberately tries to take advantage of the weaknesses of human nature.

Somebody once asked me why I play a Steinway piano. I told him I played it because I thought it was the best. But it took me 10 minutes to convince him the reason was not that the Steinway people were paying me to play their piano. He refused to believe me.

MR. TAUB: Do music critics have a role in judging young artists?

MR. FLEISHER: I am never sure whether a music critic is a musician in journalism or a journalist in music. I think the critics have been a bit tardy, but now they are facing up to their responsibility.

MR. TAUB: Without these contests, how would talented young pianists gain recognition?

MR. FLEISHER: There is no way for a gifted young professional to start a career unless he has money. It takes $2,000 for a New York City recital and even that is an unsure thing. You may not get the top critics, for one thing.

It is a terrible thing to put 15 or 20 years of hard work into one two-hour period and expect to do your best. The odds are against you.

MR. LIPKIN: A contest asks you to pack it into an even shorter period.

MR. TAUB: Then what is the solution?

MR. FLEISHER: I think managements should open a special department with a panel of their artists who happen to be in town. The panel would listen to young artists who want to audition. If the panel thinks someone shows promise, the manager should give him a chance for a career.

MR. LIPKIN: And if he is not quite ready for that, the older artists could help him in the intermediate stages. But I think you would need a wide representation of judges.

MR. FLEISHER: I don't think that presents such a problem. A person with an enormous talent will be recognized even though a judge might not appreciate his particular style.

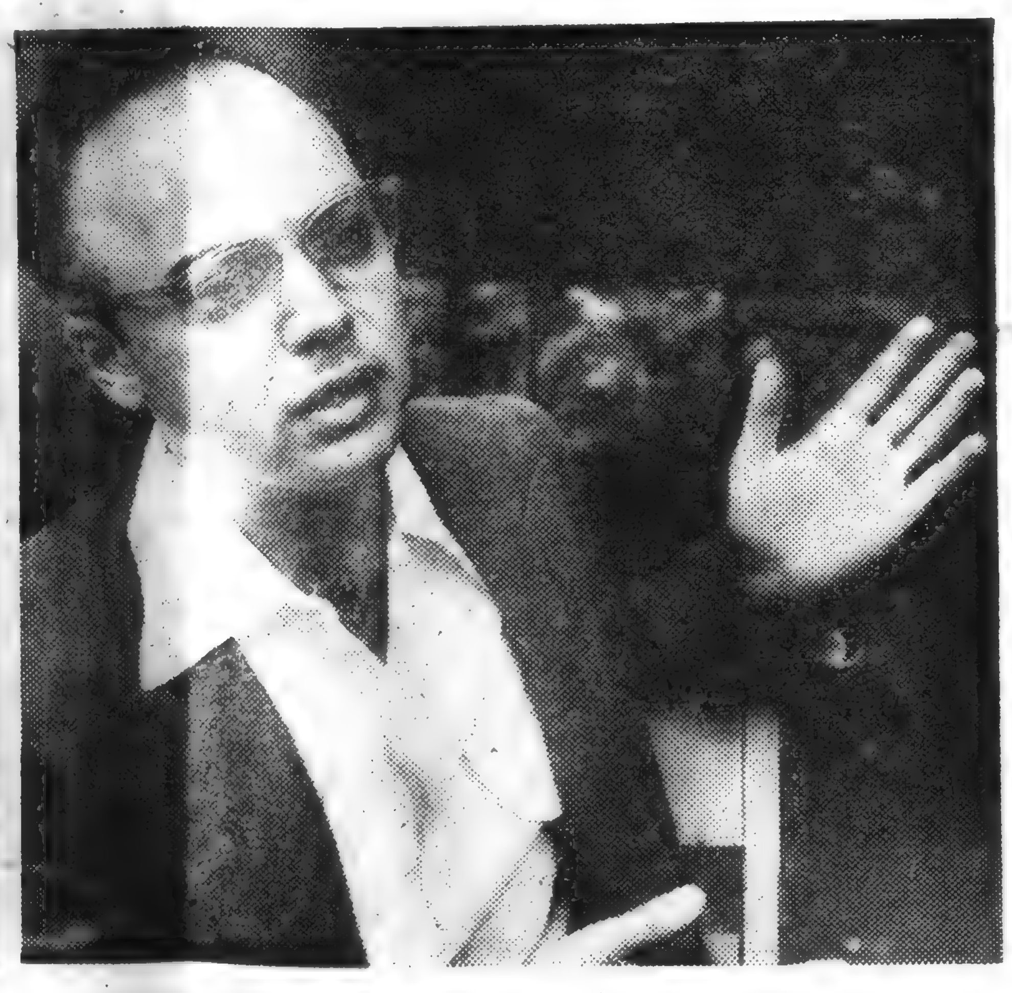
Then, of course, the managers have the problem of selling their new talent to the public. Concert managers are not entirely altruistic. They want to make money, and it is easier for them to sell a pianist who has just won a major contest then one who is completely unknown.

MR. LIPKIN: But they should be responsible, too. People should exercise responsibility no matter what their job is.

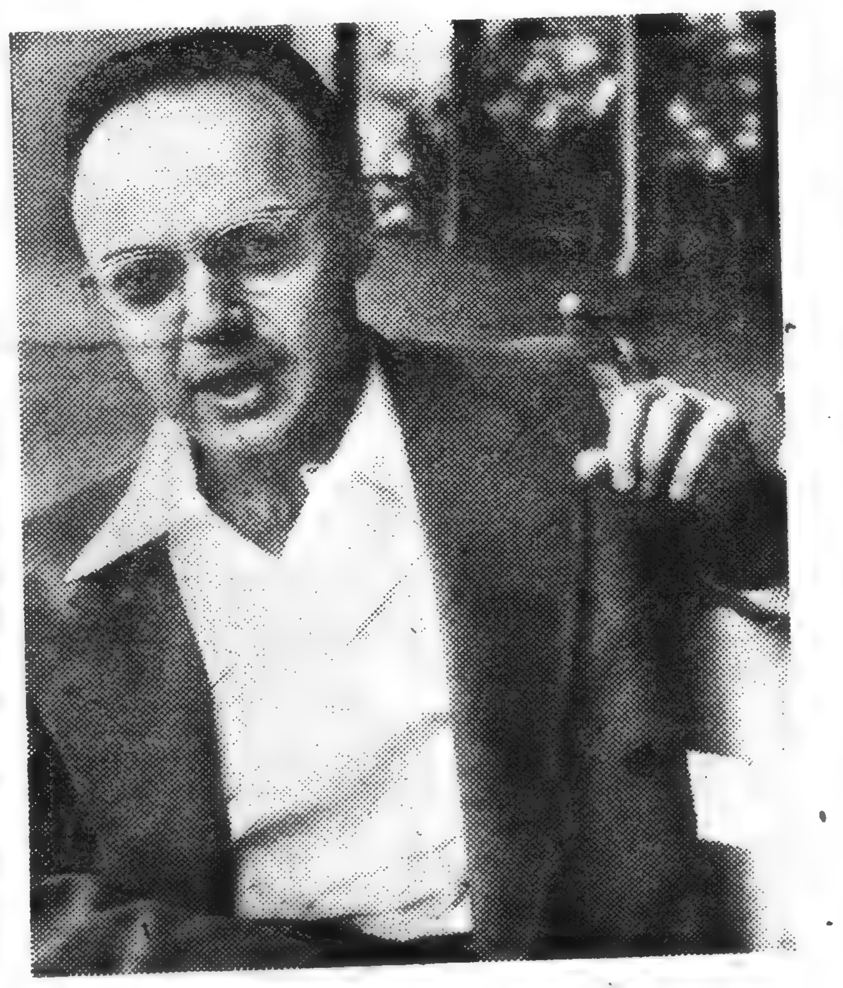
MR. FLEISHER: Concert managers have a great deal of responsibility, but they don't always exercise it.

MR. LIPKIN: Yes, that's the trouble.

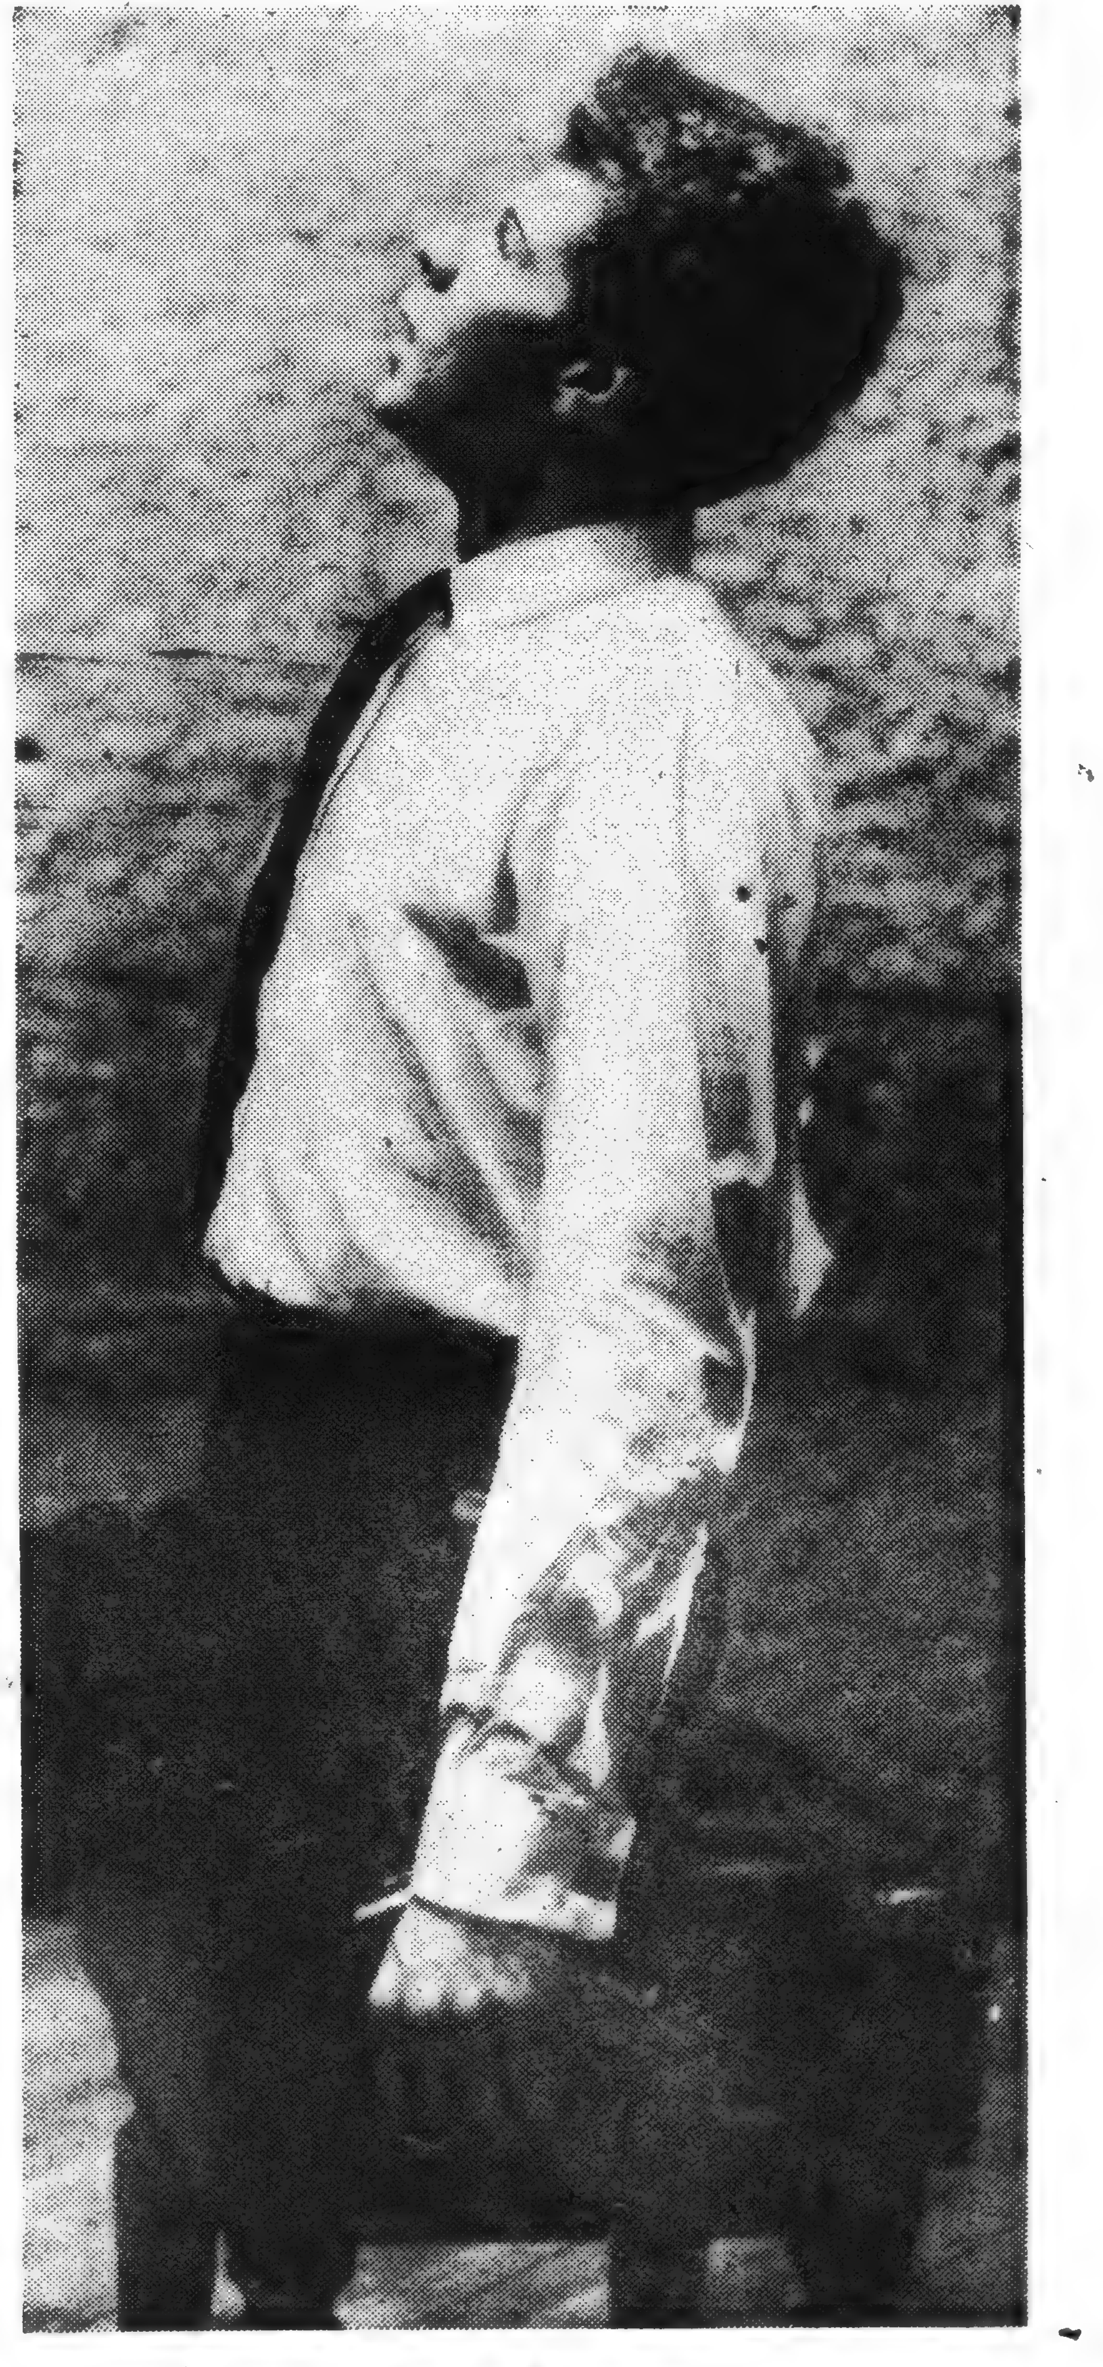
"A contest is an artificial thing."



"Public interest is just startng."



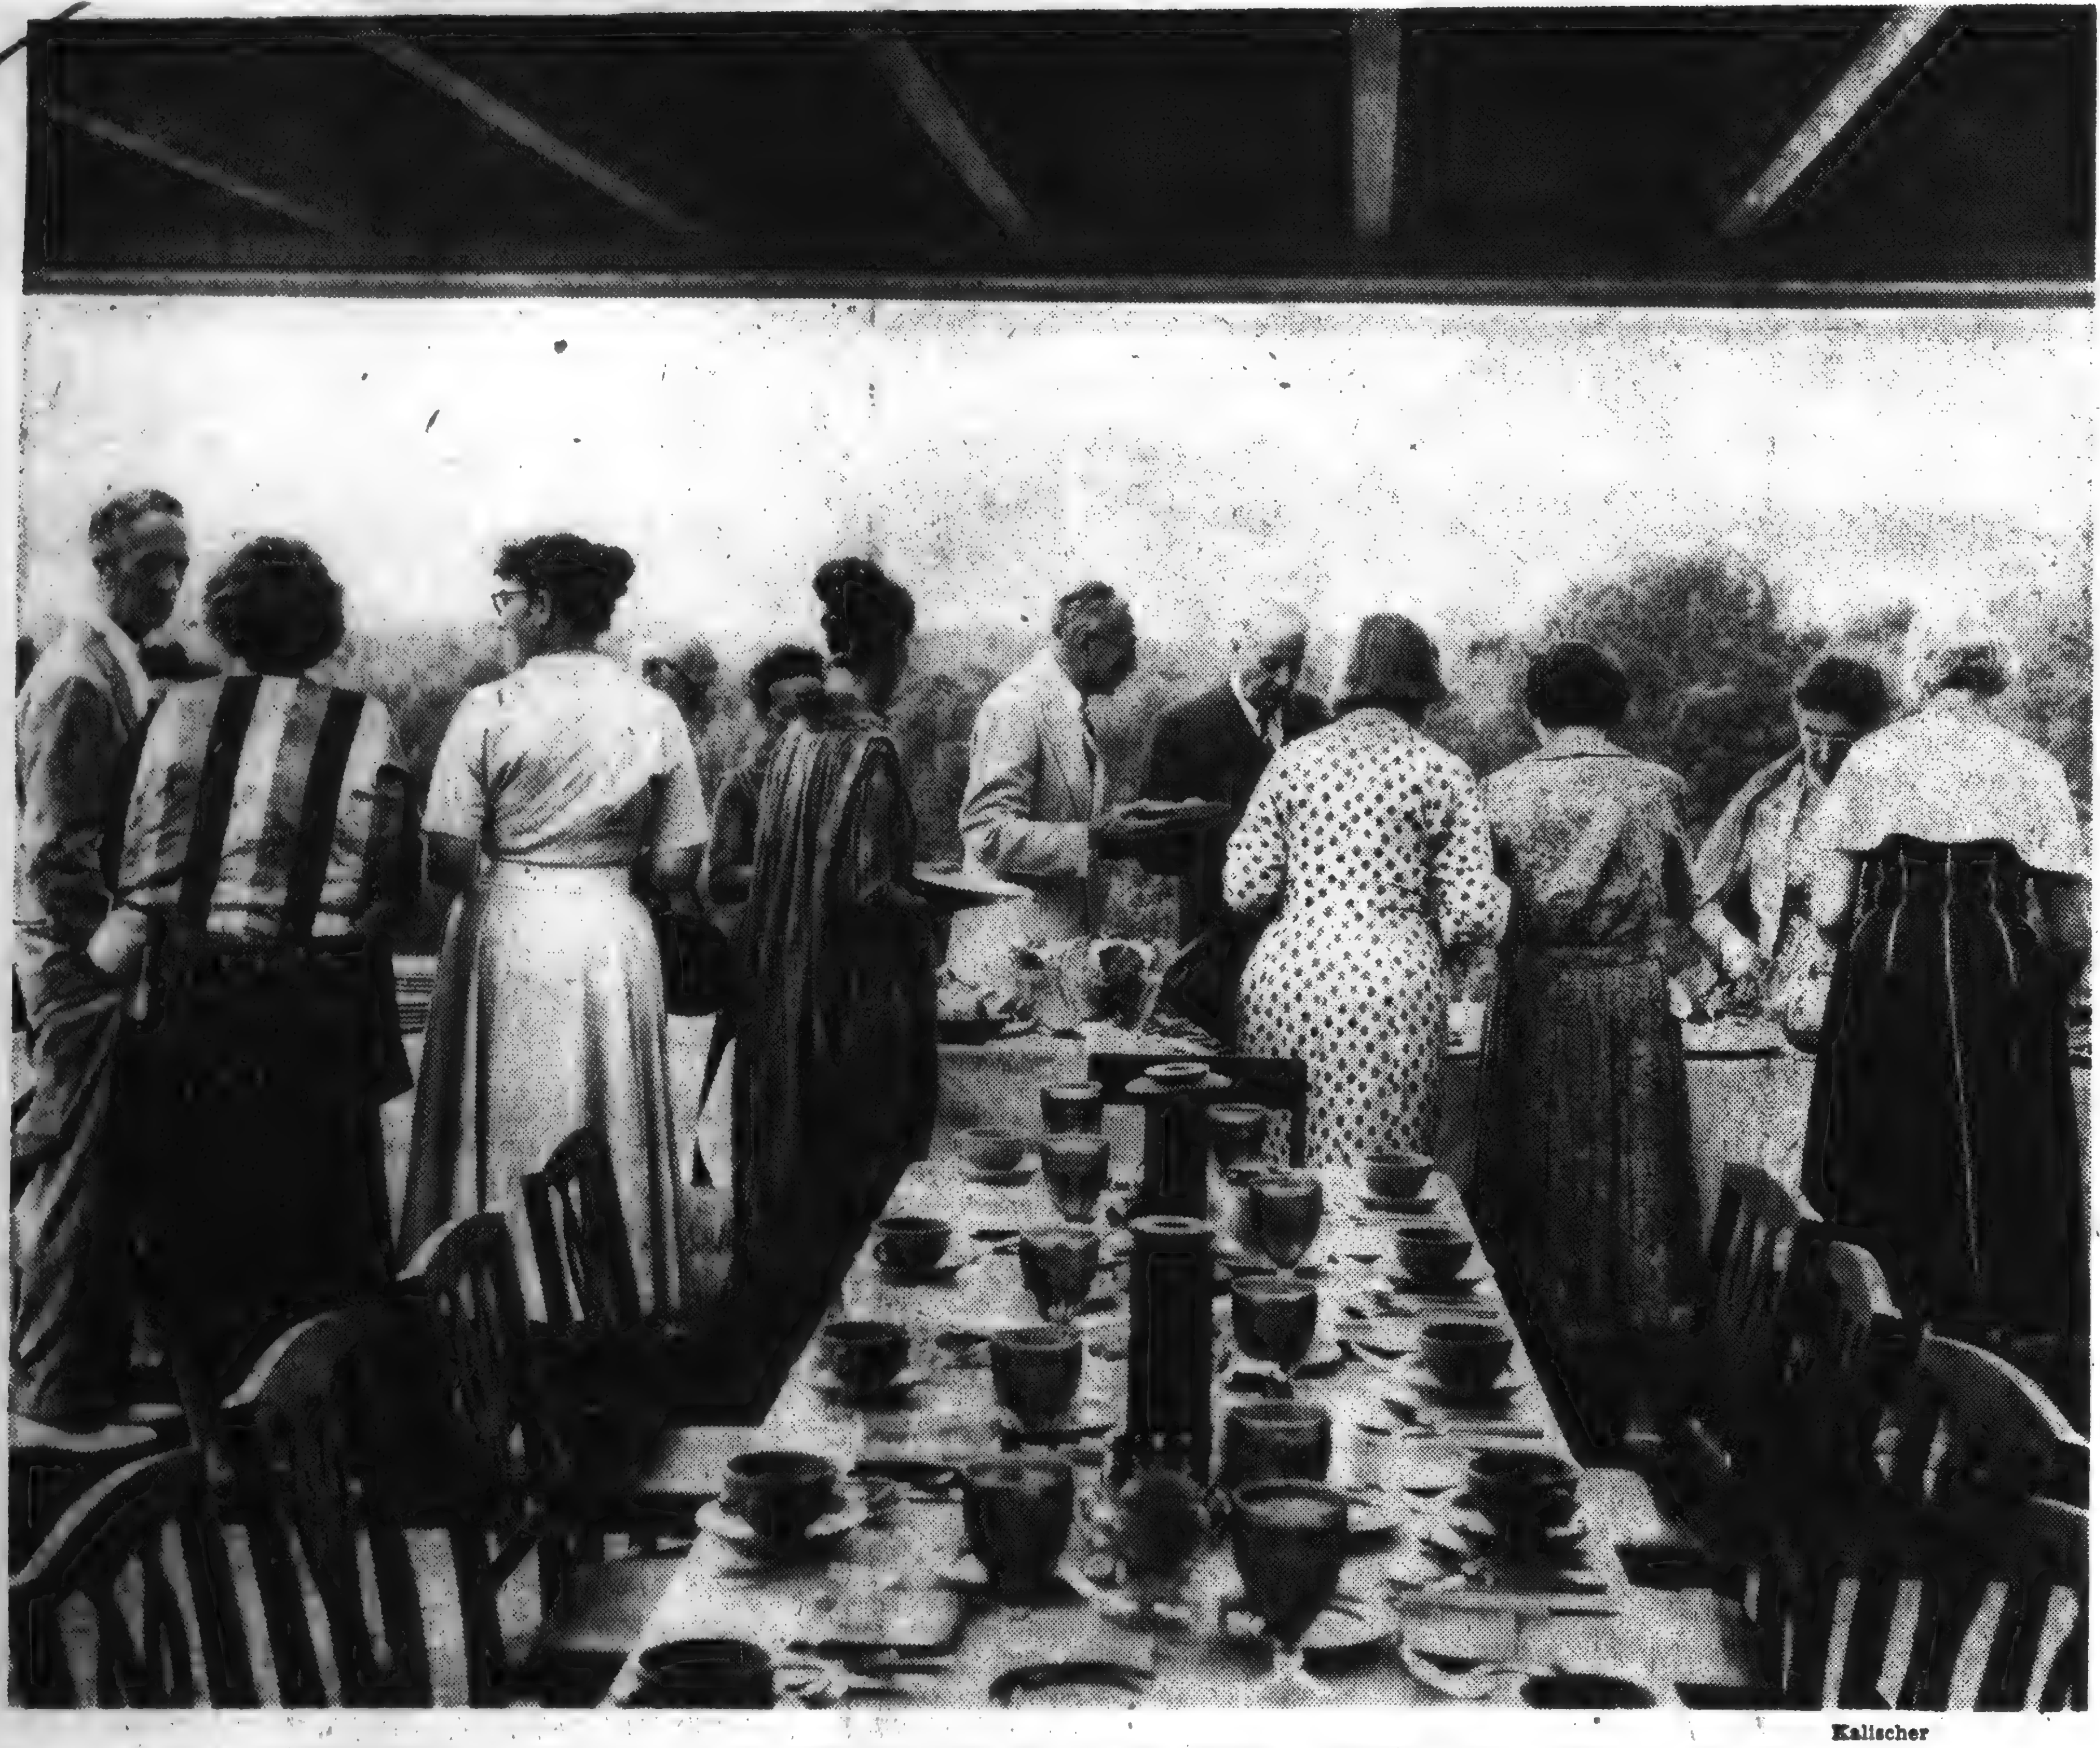
"Exercise responsibility."



Van Cliburn rests during a practice session.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,354

AUG 16 1958



Kalischer

Many people of prominence in the fields of music, art and the theater attended party given by Mr. and Mrs. Stefan Lorant at their home in Lenox. Visible in buffet line are Louis Speyer, English horn player in the Boston Symphony, and Charles Munch, conductor (center), and artist Norman Rockwell at left.

The Social Whirl

PATRONS OF THE ARTS dominate the invitation lists of Berkshire hostesses during the summer. Most of the cocktail parties, luncheons, suppers, receptions and garden socials are held either before or after the participants have been to Tanglewood, Jacob's Pillow, one of the summer theaters, or some other culture pit. Artists and performers of the theater and concert stage rub elbows with the county summer gentry. The dashing functions of 50 years ago, when multimillionaire summer residents dominated the social scene, have gone the way of the tallyho. Today guests arrive at a Berkshire party in a Jaguar or a Continental with a Tanglewood boxholder's card on the windshield.

ON THE COVER is four-year-old Laura-Beth Bentley, flower girl at the garden wedding of Marsha Reeves and Charles Snyder in June. Much too young for champagne, Laura-Beth is quaffing a glass of punch at the reception, held at the home of the bride's parents, Dr. and Mrs. E. Earl Reeves of 206 Dawes Ave.

Kalischer

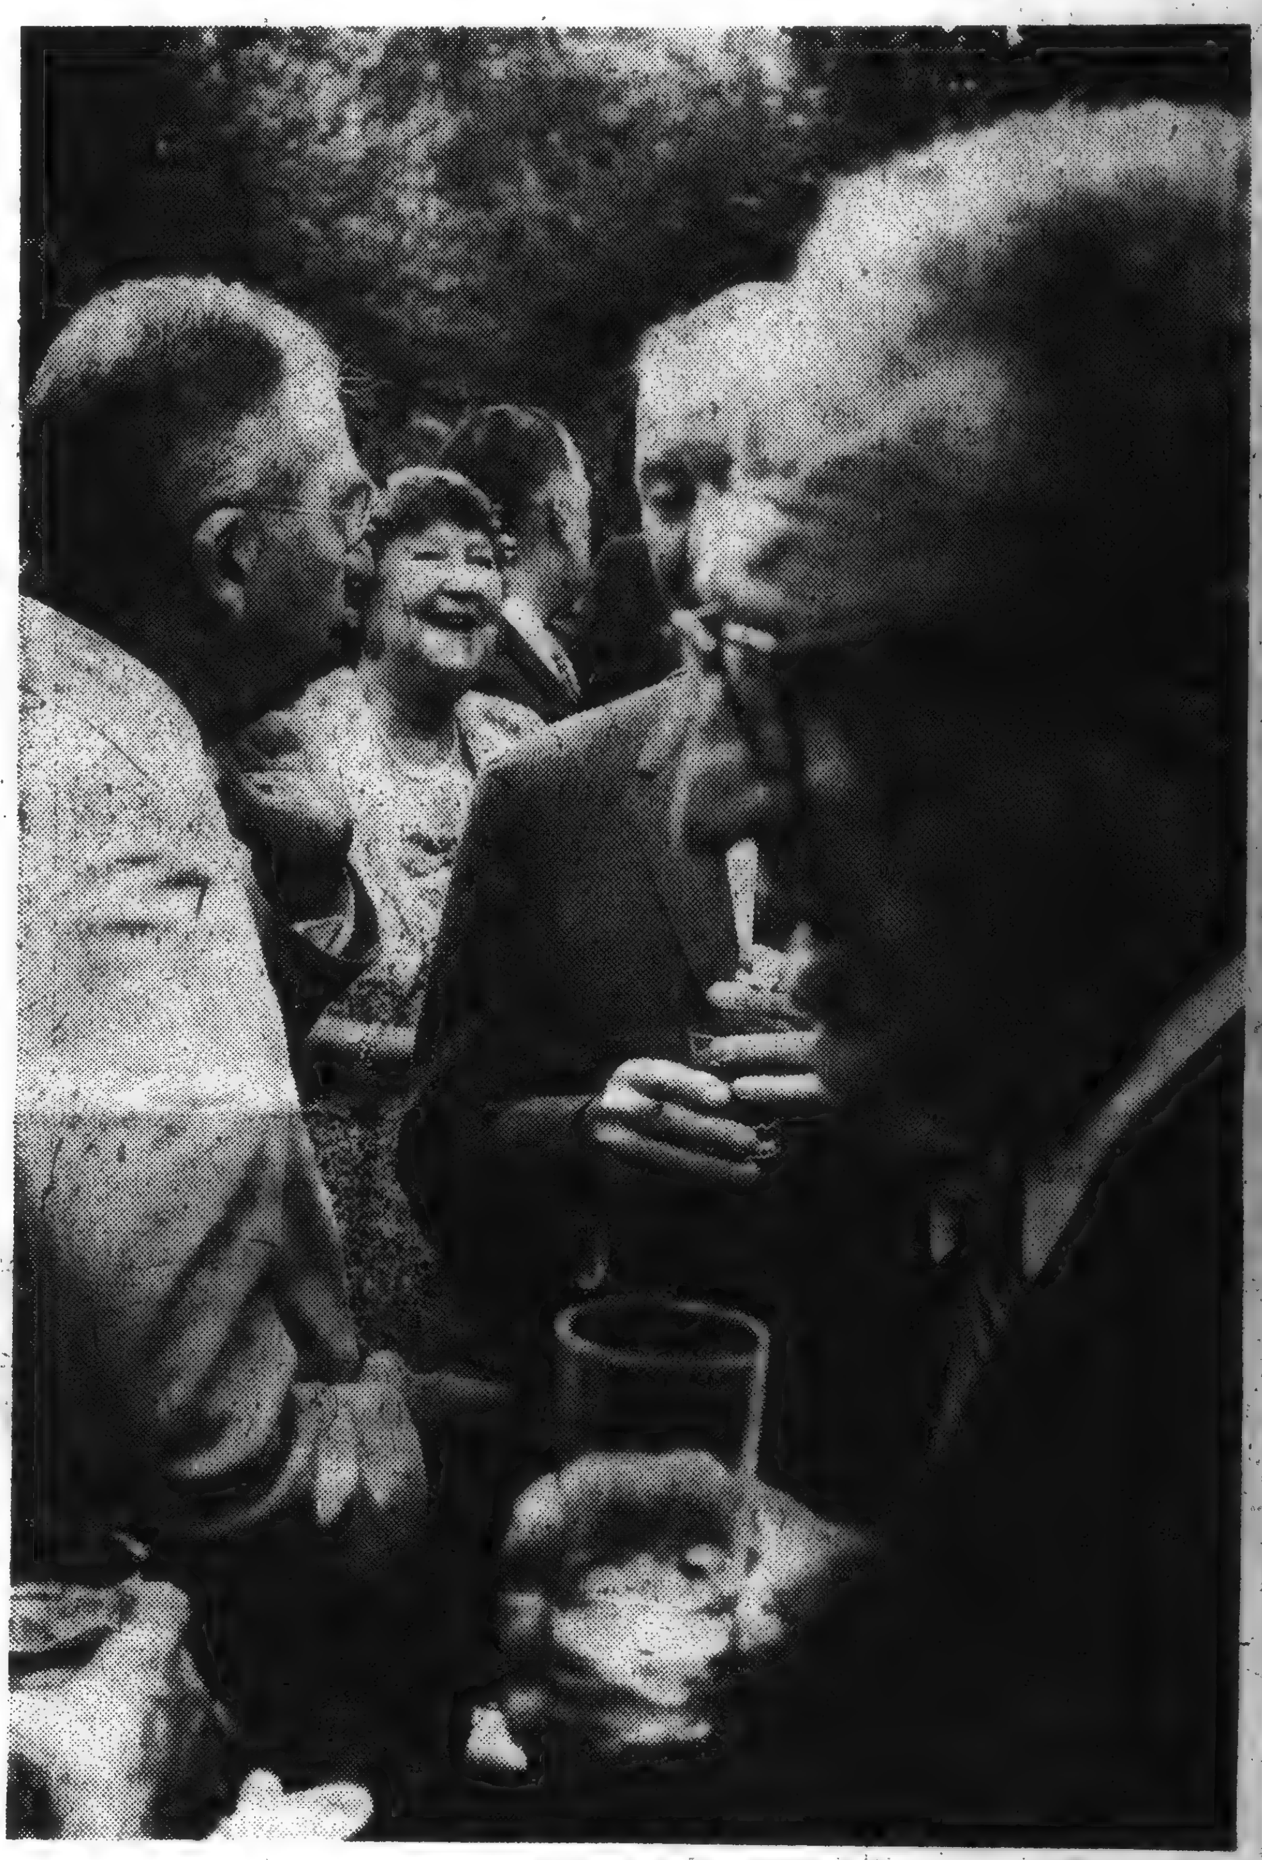
Author Stefan Lorant greets actress Anne Bancroft as playwright William Gibson lights cigarette, left. Miss Bancroft is leading lady in "Two for the Seesaw," a Broadway hit written by Mr. Gibson, who lives in Stockbridge. The Lorant party was a Lenox hit.

Opening of the Williamstown Summer Theater's fourth season was celebrated at a champagne party given for cast and theater friends by the Williams Inn. It was a gay, bubbling affair.

Tague

Kalischer

James Stagliano, right, Boston Symphony French hornist, gave party at his Lenox home for Eleazar deCarvalho, the Brazilian conductor, seated. Behind him are script writer Lian O'Brian and producer Henry Ephron, absorbing local color for use in a forthcoming 20th Century-Fox movie centering on Tanglewood.



Tague

A cocktail party was given by Mrs. Donald F. McPherson, 14 Paisley Ter., after last Tanglewood concert. Among the prominent guests were Robert W. McCracken, left, Mrs. William A. Whittlesey II, both of Pittsfield, Darwin Morse, Richmond, and Monroe B. England, Pittsfield.

The Berkshire Museum was the scene of reception in honor of artist Norman Rockwell, whose retrospective, one-man show there is biggest of his career. Cocktails were served.

Kalischer

B. Eagle - Aug 5

The Lively Arts

By Milton R. Bass

AN AUDIENCE is ostensibly an assembly of hearers, but you couldn't prove it at any of the musical events around here. Sometimes I get the feeling at Tanglewood that I have stumbled into a "Free Algeria" rally at which some dissident elements have just been discovered. And other times at the Music Barn I know I have.

What is there about these concerts that brings out the phonyness in people? Why do they feel they have to shout and yell and scream and holler and bounce around while banging their hands together in a most annoying and vulgar manner? You would think they had just watched people being thrown to lions (or purple people eaters in this day and age) instead of having just heard a musical concert.

* * *

IT IS ONE thing to show appreciation for a thing well done, to pat your shirtmaker's shoulder for the turn of the collar, to nod at your gardner for the bloom on a rose or to tickle the upstairs maid for a curve well rounded. But, as our Tanglewood critic Jay Rosenfeld has pointed out, it is quite another for these staid dowagers from Boston and Philadelphia to shout and scream in the big Shed housing the Boston Symphony. They are acting out of character. And since they are the last bulwark in this country against the "creeping tide of socialism," we can't afford to lose them.

* * *

IT SEEMS to me (and since I am never wrong about anything, it must be so) that these people are not applauding the music or the musicians so much as they are applauding themselves. "Look," they are telling their friends and the spectators around them, "I appreciate. These magnificent musicians have just played an acknowledged classic and you can see that I know these are magnificent musicians and an acknowledged classic." In every sense of the word, they are jumping on the bandwagon.

At the Music Barn the situation is not quite so abandoned as at Tanglewood because conditions are much more crowded and because the audience applauds for every single solo taken during the evening. This runs into quite a bit of applause. Therefore, at the end of the concert they content themselves with quiet pandemonium.

* * *

THERE IS nothing more aggravating than an undiscriminating audience which will applaud everything and anything. Somehow it has become usual procedure in jazz to clap for every solo, regardless of its merit. A guy with no ideas can stand up there and run the scales three or four times and draw an ovation. There have been groups who have played music fit only to bay at the moon by, and the audience has rewarded them with exactly the same enthusiasm it has given the superior performances.

The smart thing to do, I suppose, is to cheer God, country, motherhood, Brahms and Beethoven; and play it safe on statehood for Hawaii, birth control, Bartok and Stravinsky. I have never seen dogged antagonism rise out of an audience as at the Tanglewood concert which featured Copland's "Variations." They so resented the piece that they went compltely berserk in appreciation of the mediocre rendition of Brahms' Fourth which followed. The American public is happiest when it is inundated with the music of sturm und drang, romantic, dramatic, melodic effects which punch across the message in obvious terms.

* * *

BUT GIVE the general public something that is new and quite different, and they become sullen and stubborn. They don't even listen to it while they are listening to it. They close their ears along, with their minds, and shut out the sounds which might disturb the equilibrium.

Consequently, modern music and modern jazz are left entirely in the hands of coteries which go around screaming about how smart they are to be different. They not only antagonize the general public even more than before, they even antagonize the people who like modern music and modern jazz.

* * *

WELL, YOU ask, what can be done about the situation? What can we do to educate people, to inform them, open their eyes and ears to the universe around them and give them new sensations and insights? What can we do to give them new perspective and make them think?

Nothing, absolutely nothing!

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,138

AUG 11 1958

Tourists Fill Rooms in Area For Weekend

Despite showers Friday afternoon and again early yesterday, Northern Berkshire enjoyed its best tourist weekend of the summer.

The boom in business was aided by several factors. It was the final weekend of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood and the last weekend for visiting at some area camps. In addition, the weather forecast for the weekend on Friday was encouraging and Saturday itself was bright and clear.

Most overnight accommodations for tourists were filled relatively early on both Friday and Saturday nights, and by nighttime any space was hard to find.

Traffic was reported to have been moderately heavy to heavy by area police.

The total rainfall for the weekend, from Friday morning to this morning, was .50 of an inch. The precipitation yesterday was .10, according to the Notch Reservoir gauge. Temperatures for the weekend ranged between 58 and 74, and it is to be clear and cool tonight and tomorrow.

For the coming five days temperatures are to average near normal, with a warming trend on Wednesday and cooler air again Thursday or Friday. Precipitation is to be less than a quarter of an inch, with showers late Wednesday or Thursday.

Town Crier
WESTPORT, Conn.
Bi-Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,200

AUG 3 - 1958

Berkshire Finale . . .

The final weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will feature music of Beethoven. Charles Munch, music director, will conduct the concerts of Friday evening, Aug. 8 at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 10, at 2:30. The

(Continued on Page 15)

[illegible] with Honegger's Prelude, Fugue and Postlude, followed by Beethoven's Symphony No. 7. Eugene Istomin will be soloist in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5 "Emperor." Mr. Istomin is the sixth of the outstanding young American pianists who have appeared at Tanglewood during the current season, others being Lukas Foss, Seymour Lipkin, Leon Fleisher, Byron Janis and Leonard Pennario. Mr. Istomin last appeared at Tanglewood in 1955.

Herald
CHICOPEE, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,662

UL 31 1958

FADED TEXT

THE CHICOPEE HERALD

Final Weekend of Berkshire Festival Set

The final weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, will feature music of Beethoven. Charles Munch, Music Director, will conduct the concerts of Friday evening, August 8 at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon, August 10, at 2:30. The concert on Saturday evening, August 9, at 8:30, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux. Soloists will include Eugene Istomin, pianist (August 8) and Berl Senofsky, violinist (August 9).

Dr. Munch will open Friday evening's concert with Honegger's Prelude, Fugue and Postlude, followed by Beethoven's Symphony No. 7. Eugene Istomin will be soloist in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5 "Emperor." Mr. Istomin is the sixth of the outstanding young American pianists who have appeared at Tanglewood during the current season, others being Lukas Foss, Seymour Lipkin, Leon Fleisher, Byron Janis and Leonard Pennario. Mr. Istomin last appeared at Tanglewood in 1955.

The concert on Saturday conducted by Pierre Monteux will open with music from "Prometheus" by Beethoven. Berl Senofsky will be soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto. Mr. Senofsky was the winner of the 1955 Brussels Competition and has appeared with many of the outstanding American orchestras since his U. S debut in 1956. This will be his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In the second half of the program Mr. Monteux will present Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" and Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3.

Dr. Munch will follow his regular custom of closing the Berkshire Festival season with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on Sunday afternoon. Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson. The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johannesburg Festival Overture, which was written for the 70th Anniversary of the city of Johannesburg in South Africa first performed there in 1956. The Boston Symphony Orchestra presented the United States premiere of the Overture during the 1956/57 season.

Free Press
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Democrat
Circ. 7,100

AUG 2 1958

Final Weekend of Berkshire Festival Set

The final weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, will feature music of Beethoven.

The concert on Saturday conducted by Pierre Monteux will open with music from "Prometheus," by Beethoven. Berl Senofsky will be soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto. Mr. Senofsky was the winner of the 1955 Brussels Competition and has appeared with many of the outstanding American orchestras since his U. S debut in 1956. This will be his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In the second half of the program Mr. Monteux will present Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" and Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3.

Dr. Munch will follow his regular custom of closing the Berkshire Festival season with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on Sunday afternoon. Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson. The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johannesburg Festival Overture, which was written for the 70th Anniversary of the city of Johannesburg in South Africa first performed there in 1956. The Boston Symphony Orchestra presented the United States premiere of the Overture during the 1956/57 season.

Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 142,739

AUG 3 1958

Festival Ends At Tanglewood Next Weekend

The final weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will feature music of Beethoven. Charles Munch, Music Director, will conduct the concerts of Friday evening, August 8 at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon, August 10, at 2:30. The concert on Saturday evening, August 9, at 8:30, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux. Soloists will include Eugene Istomin, pianist (August 8) and Berl Senofsky, violinist (August 9).

Dr. Munch will open Friday evening's concert with Honegger's Prelude, Fugue and Postlude, followed by Beethoven's Symphony No. 7. Eugene Istomin will be soloist in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5 "Emperor." Istomin is the sixth of the outstanding young American pianists who have appeared at Tanglewood during the current season, others being Lukas Foss, Seymour Lipkin, Leon Fleisher, Byron Janis and Leonard Pennario. Istomin last appeared at Tanglewood in 1955.

The concert on Saturday conducted by Pierre Monteux will open with music from "Prometheus" by Beethoven. Berl Senofsky will be soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto. Senofsky was the winner of the 1955 Brussels Competition and has appeared with many of the outstanding American orchestras since his United States debut in 1956. This will be his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In the second half of the program Monteux will present Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" and Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3.

Dr. Munch will follow his regular custom of closing the Berkshire Festival season with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on Sunday afternoon. Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson. The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johannesbury Festival Overture, which was written for the 70th Anniversary of the city of Johannesburg in South Africa and first performed there in 1956. The Boston Symphony Orchestra presented the United States premiere of the Overture during the 1956-57 season.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,937

AUG 1 1958

Beethoven Works At Tanglewood Final Weekend

The final weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, will feature music by Beethoven. Charles Munch, music director, will conduct the concerts of August 8 and August 10. The concert on Saturday evening, August 9, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux. Soloists will include Eugene Istomin, pianist and Berl Senofsky, violinist.

Dr. Munch will open Friday's concert with Honegger's Prelude, Fugue and Postlude, followed by Beethoven's Symphony No. 7. Eguene Istomin will be soloist in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5 "Emperor."

The concert conducted by Pierre Monteux will open with music from 'Prometheus' by Beethoven. Berl Senofsky will be soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto. In the second half of the prgram Mr. Monteux will present Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" and Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3.

Dr. Munch will follow his custom of closing the Berkshire Festival season with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on Sunday afternoon. Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson. The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johannesburg Festival Overture, which was written for the 70th Anniversary of the city of Johannesburg in South Africa and first performed there in 1956.

[221]

B. Eagle - Aug 5

The Lively Arts

By Milton R. Bass

AN AUDIENCE is ostensibly an assembly of hearers, but you couldn't prove it at any of the musical events around here. Sometimes I get the feeling at Tanglewood that I have stumbled into a "Free Algeria" rally at which some dissident elements have just been discovered. And other times at the Music Barn I know I have.

What is there about these concerts that brings out the phonyness in people? Why do they feel they have to shout and yell and scream and holler and bounce around while banging their hands together in a most annoying and vulgar manner? You would think they had just watched people being thrown to lions (or purple people eaters in this day and age) instead of having just heard a musical concert.

* * *

IT IS ONE thing to show appreciation for a thing well done, to pat your shirtmaker's shoulder for the turn of the collar, to nod at your gardner for the bloom on a rose or to tickle the upstairs maid for a curve well rounded. But, as our Tanglewood critic Jay Rosenfeld has pointed out, it is quite another for these staid dowagers from Boston and Philadelphia to shout and scream in the big Shed housing the Boston Symphony. They are acting out of character. And since they are the last bulwark in this country against the "creeping tide of socialism," we can't afford to lose them.

* * *

IT SEEMS to me (and since I am never wrong about anything, it must be so) that these people are not applauding the music or the musicians so much as they are applauding themselves. "Look," they are telling their friends and the spectators around them, "I appreciate. These magnificent musicians have just played an acknowledged classic and you can see that I know these are magnificent musicians and an acknowledged classic." In every sense of the word, they are jumping on the bandwagon.

At the Music Barn the situation is not quite so abandoned as at Tanglewood because conditions are much more crowded and because the audience applauds for every single solo taken during the evening. This runs into quite a bit of applause. Therefore, at the end of the concert they content themselves with quiet pandemonium.

* * *

THERE IS nothing more aggravating than an undiscriminating audience which will applaud everything and anything. Somehow it has become usual procedure in jazz to clap for every solo, regardless of its merit. A guy with no ideas can stand up there and run the scales three or four times and draw an ovation. There have been groups who have played music fit only to bay at the moon by, and the audience has rewarded them with exactly the same enthusiasm it has given the superior performances.

The smart thing to do, I suppose, is to cheer God, country, motherhood, Brahms and Beethoven; and play it safe on statehood for Hawaii, birth control, Bartok and Stravinsky. I have never seen dogged antagonism rise out of an audience as at the Tanglewood concert which featured Copland's "Variations." They so resented the piece that they went compltely berserk in appreciation of the mediocre rendition of Brahms' Fourth which followed. The American public is happiest when it is inundated with the music of sturm und drang, romantic, dramatic, melodic effects which punch across the message in obvious terms.

* * *

BUT GIVE the general public something that is new and quite different, and they become sullen and stubborn. They don't even listen to it while they are listening to it. They close their ears along, with their minds, and shut out the sounds which might disturb the equilibrium.

Consequently, modern music and modern jazz are left entirely in the hands of coteries which go around screaming about how smart they are to be different. They not only antagonize the general public even more than before, they even antagonize the people who like modern music and modern jazz.

* * *

WELL, YOU ask, what can be done about the situation? What can we do to educate people, to inform them, open their eyes and ears to the universe around them and give them new sensations and insights? What can we do to give them new perspective and make them think?

Nothing, absolutely nothing!

Herald
CHICOPEE, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,662

UL 31 1958

FADED TEXT

Final Weekend of Berkshire Festival Set

The final weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, will feature music of Beethoven. Charles Munch, Music Director, will conduct the concerts of Friday evening, August 8 at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon, August 10, at 2:30. The concert on Saturday evening, August 9, at 8:30, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux. Soloists will include Eugene Istomin, pianist (August 8) and Berl Senofsky, violinist (August 9).

Dr. Munch will open Friday evening's concert with Honegger's Prelude, Fugue and Postlude, followed by Beethoven's Symphony No. 7. Eugene Istomin will be soloist in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5 "Emperor." Mr. Istomin is the sixth of the outstanding young American pianists who have appeared at Tanglewood during the current season, others being Lukas Foss, Seymour Lipkin, Leon Fleisher, Byron Janis and Leonard Pennario. Mr. Istomin last appeared at Tanglewood in 1955.

The concert on Saturday conducted by Pierre Monteux will open with music from "Prometheus" by Beethoven. Berl Senofsky will be soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto. Mr. Senofsky was the winner of the 1955 Brussels Competition and has appeared with many of the outstanding American orchestras since his U. S. debut in 1956. This will be his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In the second half of the program Mr. Monteux will present Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" and Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3.

Dr. Munch will follow his regular custom of closing the Berkshire Festival season with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on Sunday afternoon. Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson. The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johannesburg Festival Overture, which was written for the 70th Anniversary of the city of Johannesburg in South Africa first performed there in 1956. The Boston Symphony Orchestra presented the United States premiere of the Overture during the 1956/57 season.

Free Press
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Democrat
Circ. 7,100

AUG 2 1958

Final Weekend of Berkshire Festival Set

The final weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, will feature music of Beethoven.

The concert on Saturday conducted by Pierre Monteux will open with music from "Prometheus" by Beethoven. Berl Senofsky will be soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto. Mr. Senofsky was the winner of the 1955 Brussels Competition and has appeared with many of the outstanding American orchestras since his U. S. debut in 1956. This will be his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In the second half of the program Mr. Monteux will present Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" and Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3.

Dr. Munch will follow his regular custom of closing the Berkshire Festival season with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on Sunday afternoon. Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Blake Stern, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson. The program will open with Sir William Walton's Johannesburg Festival Overture, which was written for the 70th Anniversary of the city of Johannesburg in South Africa first performed there in 1956. The Boston Symphony Orchestra presented the United States premiere of the Overture during the 1956/57 season.

---

remarkable has contrived to combine an the sordidness of a murder trial in real life with the feeling of mystery and terror that belongs to the art of the good suspense novel. Grade A.

* * *

MAIDEN'S PRAYER, by Joan Fleming, Ives Washburn, $2.95. Maiden's mother had Miss

---

SPOTLIGHT

(Continued from Page 11)

concert on Saturday evening, Aug. 9, at 8:30, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux. Soloists will include Eugene Istomin, pianist (Aug. 8) and Berl Senofsky, violinist (Aug. 9).

Dr. Munch will open Friday evening's concert with Honegger's Prelude, Fugue and Postlude, followed by Beethoven's Symphony No. 7. Eugene Istomin will be soloist in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5 "Emperor." Mr. Istomin is the sixth of the outstanding young American pianists who have appeared at Tanglewood during the current season, others being Lukas Foss, Seymour Lipkin, Leon Fleisher, Byron Janis and Leonard Pennario. Mr. Istomin last appeared at Tanglewood in 1955.

[221]

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,138

AUG 11 1958

Tourists Fill Rooms in Area For Weekend

Despite showers Friday afternoon and again early yesterday, Northern Berkshire enjoyed its best tourist weekend of the summer.

The boom in business was aided by several factors. It was the final weekend of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood and the last weekend for visiting at some area camps. In addition, the weather forecast for the weekend on Friday was encouraging and Saturday itself was bright and clear.

Most overnight accommodations for tourists were filled relatively early on both Friday and Saturday nights, and by nighttime any space was hard to find.

Traffic was reported to have been moderately heavy to heavy by area police.

The total rainfall for the weekend, from Friday morning to this morning, was .50 of an inch. The precipitation yesterday was .10, according to the Notch Reservoir gauge. Temperatures for the weekend ranged between 58 and 74, and it is to be clear and cool tonight and tomorrow.

For the coming five days temperatures are to average near normal, with a warming trend on Wednesday and cooler air again Thursday or Friday. Precipitation is to be less than a quarter of an inch, with showers late Wednesday or Thursday.

Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 142,739

AUG 3 1958

Festival Ends At Tanglewood Next Weekend

The final weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will feature music of Beethoven. Charles Munch, Music Director, will conduct the concerts of Friday evening, August 8 at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon, August 10, at 2:30. The concert on Saturday evening, August 9, at 8:30, will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux. Soloists will include Eugene Istomin, pianist (August 8) and Berl Senofsky, violinist (August 9).

Dr. Munch will open Friday evening's concert with Honegger's Prelude, Fugue and Postlude, followed by Beethoven's Symphony No. 7. Eugene Istomin will be soloist in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5 "Emperor." Istomin is the sixth of the outstanding young American pianists who have appeared at Tanglewood during the current season, others being Lukas Foss, Seymour Lipkin, Leon Fleisher, Byron Janis and Leonard Pennario. Istomin last appeared at Tanglewood in 1955.

The concert on Saturday conducted by Pierre Monteux will open with music from "Prometheus" by Beethoven. Berl Senofsky will be soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto. Senofsky was the winner of the 1955 Brussels Competition and has appeared with many of the outstanding American orchestras since his United States debut in 1956. This will be his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In the second half of the program Monteux will present Hindemith's "Nobilissima Visione" and Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3.

